Now premising these, as I conceive them, important facts, I come to the clauses in the petition. The petition consists altogether of 28 clauses, 14 of them being aimed at Lord St. Lawrence, and 14 of them at Sir Rowland Blennerhassett. They consist of charges of bribery, of treating, of bribery by procuring employment for different voters, of charges of undue influence varied in every way, and finally they wind up with charges of undue influence exercised by means of the Roman Catholic clergy acting for and on behalf of the present sitting Members, who both by addresses from the altar during divine service, and by other means, threatened loss and damage, and in other manners practised intimidation upon the electors who were members of the Roman Catholic persuasion in order to induce them to vote, or to refrain from voting at the election. I at once reduce the whole of those 28 charges to two, that is to say technically to two, as against each of the Members, for the charges are identically the same, and therefore I reduce them to two for the purposes of my judgment. Of the two the first is bribery, and the second is intimidation and undue influence as practised by the Roman Catholic clergy, for of any other description of intimidation there is, as I conceive, no evidence whatsoever. The only other particle of evidence which is given on the subject of intimidation, other than that which I have mentioned as practised by the Roman Catholic clergy, is that piece of evidence upon which I do not think Mr. O'Flaherty himself laid much stress, when he described that wild scene in some room in the town of Galway, where he was attending to address his supporters with, I think, a gentleman of the name of Comerford in the chair, and when a rush, of what shall we call them? "Barbarians from the hills," came down upon them, and they were dispersed in the twinkling of a moment. If I were to rely upon that as evidence of intimidation and violence for the purpose of avoiding an election, I think it is not likely that any man would be able to hold his seat where there had been a contest.

Again, the absence of evidence as regards other intimidation is material, because I say it is creditable to the inhabitants of this town to have it to record now, after the termination of this protracted inquiry, that there has not been, with the exception of the gentleman who, in that mêlée which I have described, sprained his little finger, a particle of evidence of anyone having sustained the slightest injury to limb. Nay more, I have not been told, nor I believe could it have been proved, that a single pane of glass was broken during the whole progress of the election. Therefore, with a view of clearing off (and we have enough to contend with in the case) as many things as possible, I say that there is no evidence of any other intimidation than that alleged to have been practised by the Roman Catholic clergy of the borough. Now having only these two subjects to deal with, I shall go first to the question of bribery, and I shall take that up in detail, applying myself, in the first instance, to that of Lord St. Lawrence.

The case was closed in evidence the day before yesterday, but yesterday, taking up this white paper book, which I have now before me, Dr. Seeds in his very able address, proceeded to call attention to the names of various persons, electors, and others, which appeared in this document, there being inserted upon it altogether I think 133 names, and he proceeded to comment with great force and point, upon various entries in this book, which compelled me to recall the attention of Mr. Palles (who had already spoken with such energy, eloquence, and argument) to those remarks in order, that I might not be said hereafter to have formed any decision on this book without giving the learned counsel for the sitting Members a full opportunity of making observations upon it. I thought it desirable, throughout the whole progress of this case from first to last, that every opportunity should be given for investigating everything which could throw the slightest light upon the case. I gave, therefore, to the learned counsel for the Petitioner every opportunity. I told them that I would put in their hands the whole power of this court in order to compel the attendance of any number of witnesses. Nay more, I was even willing, if necessary, to adjourn this inquiry, and to return to this town again, if it could not be satisfactorily conducted without such an adjournment. I also gave the opportunity, as I have just stated, to the learned counsel for the sitting Members yesterday evening and on every other occasion, to recall witnesses to give every explanation they could of anything which had the slightest appearance of suspicion in the case. Then Mr. Palles, taken very suddenly, spoke with great point to the different names and entries in this book, and so too, on that point did Dr. Seeds reply with great force to the reasoning on the opposite side. I undertook to look through the whole of this book last night, and I have, as I had promised, read every word in it, and I have deliberately considered every entry in the book. In the first place the book itself is endorsed, "Galway Borough Election, 1868, general list of out agents, clerks, &c.," and then there is the name of the solicitor, Mr. Richard Macnamara. The heading is not unimportant to look at. It is said this was prepared before the election. That is impossible, no matter what may have been said or what may have slipped from Mr. Macnamara. This book was not prepared before the election, because it refers to a letter dated the 7th of December, and to various transactions that occurred long after the election, and therefore it is impossible that it could have been prepared before. It is headed "names of persons who have by letters made claims as agents, clerks, &c., for Lord St. Lawrence in reference to the Galway Borough Election, 1868." I lay stress upon that description, "persons who have made claims," and I have no doubt, whether this is the original document or copy of a rough draft, that it is a book containing the names of persons whose letters of original introduction were found amongst the papers connected with the election, or who did personally or by letter apply after the election in order to have their names inserted and their claims considered by the persons who were acting on behalf of Lord St. Lawrence. There are columns here for the age of individuals. There are columns which appear to me to be most suspicious in the first instance, namely for the names of relatives or friends on the register. Then there is the "qualification," and the "person by whom recommended" for appointments. In some instances there are no recommendations. There are the particulars of "demands," not of payments, but of claims or demands sent in. Then there is a column to show "how actually engaged," and the dates of engagement, the rates of payment, the amount to be paid, and the observations made upon each of these persons. In some instances I observe there is no figure, but an observation made, "no claim." How comes it then to be in the list of claimants? The way I read that (though I may be wrong), and the way in which I make my way out of this labyrinth, for such it is, is by assuming that those names found their way into this book and on to this list from original applications for employment, or perhaps letters of recommendation sent by gentlemen, recommending persons to be taken on as employed in order that they may take off a little of the finances of the candidate, and that is the character of the book which I have now before me. That being so, in the first place it is alleged that the names of voters being upon this list, and that voters having been engaged in these capacities (I think there was a list of 13 handed in in all) I should arrive at the conclusion, if I thought these persons had been employed, that thereby the election was invalidated. Now that is not so. In the first place, if a voter is employed for six months before the election, or at the election, his vote is a bad vote; but to invalidate an election is quite a different thing. For that purpose I must be impressed with the conviction, brought home to my mind by clear evidence, that the voter is employed in order to induce him to vote at the election, or in consequence of his having voted at the election.

In the first place, as regards the matter of fact, I believe that in several of the instances which were mentioned, the fact of the employment was not sustained. In one or two cases it turned out that the person was not a voter, but a person of the same name, and it was stated by Mr. Macnamara, and I believe truly stated, that in Galway there are families and various branches of families of persons of the same name. I know myself that in the olden time it was the habit that a man was called by his Christian or surname, and then there was a suffix of the Christian name of the person from whom he derived his birth. There was John Lynch Martin, there was Martin Lynch John. They gave different nicknames to distinguish them. There was a Lynch the Lamb I believe; I once heard there was even so distinguished a person as Lynch the Ram. There were all those different titles in the place, but it was from the very fact of families having grown up within a limited circumference, absolutely necessary to have those contrivances in order to distinguish them. It was therefore no wonder that persons looking at those lists should be led astray in employing a man, believing him not to be a voter, whereas he was a voter, or making a charge for employing him, whereas it turned out that he was not so employed. That is one class of cases on which it is sought to invalidate the election as to Lord St. Lawrence. I have no clear evidence before me upon this book itself, and no evidence outside this book that there were persons employed as voters in any number whatsoever; and lastly, I have not a particle of evidence to satisfy my mind that if the names of two or three persons found their way into this book as being voters, and as having been employed, that employment was given in order to have a corrupt effect upon the votes of the persons so employed. In every instance they were very small items; they were claims not yet discharged. I think one of them, of a man of the name of Griffin, is not yet discharged, but the result at which I have arrived is that there is no distinct or clear evidence of the fact, and that there is none at all of the object of the employment, even if the employment took place.

Then there remains a class of cases which, being read out here yesterday evening, appeared undoubtedly to be suspicious. However, I have very carefully examined them, and all the other cases on this book. The first one referred to is upon page 3; that is Thomas Derham, of Monneva, who claims, by letter of the 7th December, clearly showing that this could not have been filled up previous to the election. His claim is sent in. What is the remark afterwards? "Claims by letter of the 7th of December for nine days' assistance as agent; no amount mentioned; not a voter." What is the observation under the head of "Observations"? They are clearly in the handwriting of a clerk of Mr. Macnamara, and not in his own; but they bear internal evidence that they are taken by a clerk as short abstracts out of letters, in order to condense into observations the results of his examination of various letters and papers. "Letter endorsed by R. M.," that is Richard Macnamara. The clerk copying says, "Letter" (that is the letter of the 7th of December) "endorsed by R. M.; voted for B. and St. L.; cannot be paid." "Not employed" (is the memorandum made by Mr. Macnamara in pencil) "in any shape; was frequently pressing R. M. for employment." Those observations read as I have read them, so far from bringing home any culpability or any corruption to any parties concerned, entirely, as far as regards that particular name, dissipate anything of the kind.

The next case to which my attention was called, was that of Francis Gavan, Quay-street, Galway. "By letter of 8th December, out agent, amount not mentioned." Now what is the observation upon that? The clerk writes, "Says he was engaged by R. M. Nota bene.—A good man; query, if a voter?" The answer, in pencil, says "No." Then there is a long memorandum, and what is it? "This, the son of John Gavan, in Quay-street, one of the ablest supporters of the Liberal cause. This young man was nearly killed by a blow from a sling ball." (Which I have early recollections of having been in very common use in Galway.) "Sir R. gave him 5*l*." Now that was not read. Taken per se, it would raise a cloudy suspicion against Sir Rowland. Sir Rowland Blennerhasset gave this man a 5*l*. note. If he were a voter, it would be paying a voter; and even giving it to the son of a voter, would be a critical matter. But, read with its context, so far from my thinking that it tells in any way against Sir Rowland Blennerhasset, I think it shows merely his kindness of heart; that this young man was nearly killed by the blow of a sling ball, and that he gave him a 5*l*. note as compensation for the injury which he had sustained in his cause.

The next case to which I may refer is on page 14. That is the case of Patrick Campbell, of Prospect-hill. The names of his relatives are given as "John and James Campbell, both of them being freemen." He is recommended by Mr. Michael Macnamara, who is a respectable solicitor in this town, and the memorandum made about him is, "This boy was employed for four days, and could do but little, but his friends were staunch supporters of Lord St. Lawrence. John Campbell 5*l*, and James Campbell 6*l*, on freemen's list"; and then there is a remark made, "cannot be paid now." Much stress has been laid upon that word "now," and beyond a doubt it is a suspicious word, and it is susceptible of two meanings. It may mean that he is to be paid hereafter; that it is dangerous to pay him now. I do not want, in the least, to say that Mr. Macnamara intended to misrepresent matters to the court, but, beyond a doubt, he must bear the penalty of being told by the court that he was a wonderfully confused witness. He said that he thought it meant "until further examination." That was what he thought he meant by that word "now." Between those different explanations I am not prepared to say that I very clearly see my way; but let it stand in its most invidious sense, however it may gather suspicion about that case as to the employment of this boy, it is not anything like the degree of evidence which I should require in order to convince me, resting merely upon that entry in that book, that that young boy was employed, and was to be paid, for the purpose of influencing the votes of his relatives. Whether it was a father, or whether it was an uncle, does not appear; what they were is not stated, except that they were relatives. As to that word "now," with all that has been so properly addressed to me as regards that little monosyllable, I am not prepared at all to say that I have any evidence before me which would lead me to a conclusion adverse to the sitting Members, and calling upon me to declare this election a void election.

The same observation applies to the case of Greelish, which is mentioned at page 55, and then I come to pages 16 and 17, and that closes the whole of this book. Now the cases of pages 16 and 17 are, I think, those of Tarpy and Towrey, and of Lawrence Tyrrell. There is also the case of the Murrays; but as regards the Murrays, in the first place, there is no entry in the column of age, nor was there in any of the others till I came to page 15. As to the Murrays, there is no observation leading to any corrupt conclusion at all. "Query, relative to John Murray, 298, freeman." Mr. Macnamara pledges himself that the object of making that inquiry was lost by want of sufficient care, or by mistake he might be led into doing some one act which would compromise his client, Lord St. Lawrence. The entry opposite to "William Tarpey, Prospect-hill, Galway," is, that he is "16 years of age; not too young to be employed as an office clerk; he demands 10*s*. a day;" and the observation made opposite to him, instead of being a corrupt observation, is this, "Query, a young lad, son of a voter, cannot be paid." It is not "cannot be paid now." The next case is that of Michael Towry, 17 years of age. He too demands, I think, 5*l*. for being employed as a clerk for 10 days. And there is the like query, and the observation that it cannot be paid. Finally, there is the case of Lawrence Tyrrell, who is only 10 years of age, of Mayor's-park, Galway. He makes his demand, by letter of the 11th December, for services for Lord St. Lawrence, and the observation made upon that is, "A most absurd charge; was employed for one day only, the election day; his father was a freeman; voted for B. and St. L. Cannot be paid."

That takes me through the whole of that book, and I am bound to say that though it had from the very first day of the inquiry excited my keenest suspicions, yet upon fully investigating investigating it, and reading it by the light of the evidence which has been thrown upon it, I see nothing in it from first to last calculated in any way to displace the position which has been attained by the sitting Members.

I now come to another branch of the case, which is more difficult to deal with, and that is the transaction with Thomas Heavry. This case, which I shall call the Heavry and Whelan case, is the only remaining one of alleged bribery by those acting on behalf of Lord St. Lawrence. This Thomas Heavry appears to be one of those fellows who, the moment they find a nobleman or gentleman standing for a place with which they have any imaginable connection, swells in their own imagination; their proportions become distended; they have mighty power; any number of relatives; and they can carry the gentlemen at the head of the poll without the slightest difficulty if he will only repose confidence in them. He hears of Lord St. Lawrence being in Galway with Mr. Kane; Mr. Kane was not produced to give evidence, and I am sorry that he was not. I think it would have been better if he had been, because it would have left less to suspect in the case, more especially as in another branch of the case he had been spoken of in the letter of the Bishop of Galway as a person whom he, the bishop, then took a deep and warm interest in the welfare of Lord St. Lawrence. In another part of the evidence it is mentioned that Mr. Kane made repeated visits to Galway during the election. However, with the evidence which I have before me, I must deal with this case; I think this is the gist of the matter. Heavry goes to Mr. Kane at Howth, and he tells him what a great man he can be, and what he can do, and that he has not only influence below, but that he can search out the freemen, a great many of them being acquaintances and relatives, and that he will take them down to Galway, and that he does not want a farthing in the world. That is the way those fellows always begin. There is a profession of disinterestedness which almost takes you back to the primitive times of Spartan simplicity. I remark that he would not take even a glass of water. Mr. Kane sends him forward to Mr. Macnamara; Mr. Macnamara hands him over to Mr. Lynch, who is acting in his office; and I see no reason to doubt (and therefore as I have felt it necessary to make, perhaps, some sharp observations upon the witnesses as they were produced, I give them the benefit of my opinions when they are in their favour), that there was a belief existing in the minds of Mr. Macnamara, Mr. Kane, and the clerk of Mr. Macnamara, that this man Heavry was himself a voter, and that he had five other freemen resident in the city of Dublin, but freemen of Galway, whom he could take down to vote at that election. Mr. Macnamara commits the charge of this business, he being himself away, to Mr. Lynch, his assistant. I think that gentleman is the son of a solicitor in the county of Mayo. In the first place, let it be known, that the payment for the conveyance of voters in this borough of Galway is not illegal. It was, until the passing of the last Act of Parliament, illegal to pay any sum of money whatsoever in a borough constituency to any voter, or to any person for any voter, in order to bear the expense of his conveyance to the poll, but in this last Act of Parliament of the 31st and 32nd of the Queen, there is a special provision made that it shall be illegal to pay any money on account of the conveyance of any voter to the poll, either to the voter himself, or to any other person, save and except in the several boroughs of the county of the city of Cork, the county of the town of Galway, and the county of the city of Limerick. Those three cases are excepted, for the obvious and plain reason, that the radius of the borough of Galway extends out, as I believe I am correct in saying, for several miles, as in like manner it does in the city of Limerick, and in the city of Cork, embracing within the bounds of this borough a large rural constituency, perhaps in some degree conterminous with the Roman Catholic diocese of Galway; I do not know whether that is so or not, but it is not material. Then, in fact, of paying for the conveyance of voters to this city of Galway, there is nothing illegal. Therefore, the first inception of this transaction, which afterwards became so very questionable, is innocent, and does not suggest any guilty intention in the mind of the parties transacting it. Heavry, as I said before, is the very opposite of what he represents himself to be. In the first place he represents himself to be a voter, and he is not a voter. In the second place, he says he has six friends who are voters, and he has only two friends who are voters. In the third place, he represents himself as a most disinterested being, and he has proved his disinterestedness, doing everything in his power by lies, by fraud, and by peculation, to invalidate the election of the nobleman for whom he entertains such disinterested affection. He comes to Galway in the way that has been described, heaping misrepresentation on misrepresentation, and telling Mr. Lynch that the other two or three men are to arrive in some other way in Galway, that it is better not to send them their money (that would have been hard to do, seeing that they were non-existent), but that they were to come, and when they came he would take care of the matter, or something of that kind. He does arrive in Galway, and he has got his travelling expenses; and when the election is over he appears with four or five men, improvised for the occasion, and he demands from Mr. Macnamara their travelling expenses back, which it would have been perfectly legal to give them. Now, here clouds and darkness come around the case. The atmosphere becomes as uncertain as that of the place in which we are now sitting; one moment it is clear, and the next moment it is involved in almost Cimmerian darkness. Mr. Kane is the first witness who is put up, and really increasing years do not appear to have taught him much discretion. His engagements of commerce do not appear to have cleared his calculations, and for a man who keeps books, he has undoubtedly less knowledge of book-keeping than any man I ever met. He gave, beyond a doubt, an account of this transaction, which is not the truth. He was not present when the I O U's were prepared. No men were paid in his establishment. No I O U's were signed, to his knowledge; he let the men in at the back door merely to take the poor fellows out of the pelting of the pitiless storm; he is not aware to whom the 17*l.* was paid. The 17*l.* was ready a considerable time before the men asked to see Mr. Macnamara; he ordered it to be entered to Mr. Burke's account; he had no object but to protect them from the rain, and to allow them to retire when, what shall I call that description of shower, the golden shower, was over. He goes off the table, and immediately Mr. Guilfoyle comes upon the scene. He is the junior partner in the house; he is, beyond a doubt, an active agent of Lord St. Lawrence, made so by the conduct of his appointed agents. I always observe that when gentlemen who are not professional hear an individual spoken of as their agent, they almost start to their legs, thinking that there can be only one agent, whereas we lawyers know that out of one agent you can make a thousand. Mr. Guilfoyle is asked about the I O U's; he says he dictated the I O U's. Mr. Macnamara was not present when they were drawn up; he had left when they were drawn up. The I O U's were prepared in one room; the receipts were drawn up in another. Mr. Macnamara told him at that time not to pay any other money to those men except their travelling expenses. He gave him express authority to pay no other men. He gave him no authority to pay any other money save travelling expenses, and finally, Mr. Guilfoyle says that it was of himself, and out of his own head, that he paid the people the monies, and gave it on their I O U's. He had no directions from Mr. Macnamara to pay them money; the I O U's were drawn below stairs, and he was the person who asked Dr. Cronin to allow his name to be used. Now, all that is contrary to the fact; Dr. Cronin follows Mr. Guilfoyle; he is his brother-in-law. The very first thing he says is, that he believes Mr. Macnamara was present when the I O U's were drawn up; but all doubt upon the matter is dispelled by Mr. Macnamara himself admitting that he was present when the I O U's were drawn up, and by that prime old gentleman, Mr. O'Flaherty I think is his name, telling us that he wrote them to the dictation of Mr. Macnamara, who was there from the beginning to the end, and who remained in the room above stairs when Mr. Guilfoyle went down with his brother-in-law, Dr. Cronin, with the cash in their hands, to pay the 17*l.* to those five men. All I can say is, that without pressing the matter to the extent of wilful misrepresentation, all that is not very creditable to the accuracy of those Galway witnesses.

Though I have tried to put myself in the place of a Galway jury, and to imagine what they would think of such a transaction, with such contradictions as these, it has been to me the most embarrassing part of this case from first to last. I have tried to get at the truth, and I have a firm conviction that I have got at the truth; and if I had not that firm conviction, and if the conviction rested upon my mind that this was really a corrupt transaction in its inception, the inevitable result must have been that Lord St. Lawrence's seat must have been vacated; but I distinguished between misrepresentation in court and corruption out of court. I believe that Mr. Macnamara was practised on in the first instance. I believe that he foolishly kept fencing about here in court; and I believe that his witnesses tried to keep from the court the real facts of the case, whereas the best thing that could have been done was to make a clean breast of it, and tell from first to last what had taken place. As a matter of law, if there were six men, they were entitled to their railway fare from Lord St. Lawrence, without incurring any legal responsibility. If a man made a false representation to the agent of a candidate that he was accompanying down six voters, and if that agent believed it to be so, and in that light took from him receipts for the money to take down those persons, no man of sense could hold that the candidate or his agent should be held responsible for such a transaction as that. I believe, that so far, that was the nature of this transaction, that this man, for his own purposes, to magnify and glorify himself with the friends of Lord St. Lawrence, having connections in the town, did falsely represent to Mr. Macnamara, and those acting on his behalf, and that they did incautiously believe that he had those men to bring down; and I believe that the same imposition was continued down to the time when this money was received. That only applies to their travelling expenses, and does not include the payment which was given to each of them, on the representation that they had been kept in Galway, namely, 2*l.* a-piece. It was very silly of Mr. Macnamara to refuse to pay those expenses. He had appointed an election expense agent, but the election expense agent not being present in Galway, it would have been no act calculated to endanger the seat of his client to have paid the legal expenses of those men, for the statute is not mandatory upon that subject of the appointment of an election expense agent, and it is not a clause in the Act of Parliament which at all invalidates the seat of the sitting Member. Therefore he might have done so with safety, though not with strict propriety; but why, having declined to do it on the day week after the election, he should afterwards rush into this payment without any election expense agent at all being present, somewhat transcends my comprehension. However, he gives this explanation of it; that he had the receipt of the election expense agent in his possession. But that does not relieve him from the difficulty he is placed in as to these 2*l.* a-piece, which is, beyond a doubt, the greatest difficulty in the case.

Now, was that 2*l.* a-piece given in consideration of those men having voted at the election? The Act of Parliament is precise, and says that the payment of any money whatsoever, any valuable consideration whatsoever, any promise, any offer, any promise of any offer to or for any voter, or to or for any person for or on behalf of any voter, or to or for any other person, in order to induce a voter to vote, or to refrain from voting, is bribery. This does does not come within that category at all, because it is a payment after the election; but then the statute goes on to say, "or shall corruptly do any such act as aforesaid, on account of such voter having voted, or refrained from voting, at any election." This was the question, then, which I had to ask myself, and anxiously I considered it, and I am bound to say that my mind has fluctuated upon this question early in this inquiry, and I did not at once see my way to arrive at a conclusion favourable to the sitting Member. I have been much assisted by the learned counsel, and by the conflict of argument on both sides. I have weighed it in every possible manner in my own mind, and I have come to the conclusion that it was not corruptly done, and I give the benefit of that decision to the sitting Member on this head. I had to complain much of the way and the manner in which this evidence was given; and of one thing in particular I had to complain, that counsel were instructed to cross-examine Mr. Guilfoyle so as to elicit from him answers which were not the truth. I refer to the cross-examination of Mr. Guilfoyle, because, although it was nominally a cross-examination, it was really a direct examination, for although called for the petitioner, he was called the agent and friend of the sitting Member. He gave all the answers, as I have said, in reply to questions which were put, in such a manner as to elicit them from him, but notwithstanding all that, I see my way to a clear conclusion that those men were left heedlessly, or were believed to be left, for only two of them were left; but putting the two as representing the six, and dealing with the belief on the mind of the agent of the sitting Member, that he had six voters entitled to travelling expenses, I say that they were heedlessly left in Galway from the day they arrived, which was the 20th, until the 28th, which was the following Sunday week, Thursday being, I believe, the day of the polling. They were left nine days in the town, being artizans, or believed to be artizans, two of them being so. Then, supposing that the transaction was a clean and an innocent transaction, as I believe it to have been on the part of the sitting Member and his agents, though partially a fraud and a deception on the part of Thomas Heavyry, I so believe that they may claim for their expenses whilst so kept in the town, waiting for their expenses to which they were entitled, and that they received that sum ultimately as compensation for time and expenses while waiting for nine days in the town of Galway, in order to receive their travelling expenses back to the city of Dublin; and I am of opinion that it was not any exorbitant sum to give them on this account, in the way I represent, for a legitimate purpose, because we all know that in the very progress of this investigation we are paying men of that rank, who have been called here as witnesses, 5s. a-day as artizans, and 2s. 6d. for common labourers, and the sum for nine days would have been something like 4s. 6d. a-day for the whole time they were here.

I do therefore make the observation that the court was not fairly dealt with by all those witnesses. Mr. O'Flaherty told the whole truth from first to last. Whilst I was embarrassed and my mind placed in great difficulty by the shuffling testimony of that Mr. Guilfoyle, and by the wretched embarrassment in which Mr. Macnamara appeared to be placed, perhaps upon thinking of the extraordinary responsibility which he had taken upon himself, and the great danger which he had brought upon his clients, and that entire departure from all frank speaking which I intimated before as characterising the testimony of Mr. Kane, yet I arrive at the conclusion that this payment so made after the election as compensation to voters who were delayed in the town of Galway, not getting their legitimate travelling expenses to return to Dublin, cannot be held to be a corrupt payment in consideration of having voted at the last election for Lord St. Lawrence. That disposes of the evidence of the cases of bribery made against Lord St. Lawrence. Before the close of the inquiry I shall have, for another purpose, to refer to that transaction again.

Now I come to the case of Sir Rowland Blennerhassett. Upon the great and important constitutional question, for such I call it, of intimidation and undue influence—of which I will speak with the utmost freedom—the two representatives are almost, if not altogether, in pari materia, with a little distinction, to which I will call attention when I come to speak upon that branch of the case; but they are entirely distinct, as far as I can see, upon the evidence with reference to the question of bribery. I have now disposed of the charges of bribery against Lord St. Lawrence—first, as alleged to be indicated by that white book; secondly, as regards those I O U's which were passed for that money; and I now turn to the charges of bribery against Sir Rowland Blennerhassett. Those charges were very numerous, and they were stated very strongly against Sir Rowland Blennerhassett. His position is, to say the least of it, an unfortunate one. He has only been for three years one of the representatives of this borough. He has found himself before this in very bad hands, and he appears to have escaped the consequences of the acts of his former agents by what I would call a modern miracle. He was tried by a Committee of the House of Commons, and they seated him; but I am bound to say, from what appeared in evidence upon this trial, that they must have done so in consequence of not having even a glimmer of the disclosures which have been made before me. If elsewhere I had to observe that a man of large fortune, of unbounded wealth, gathered around him troops of followers whose object and ambition seemed to be to make his wealth entirely subsidiary to their avaricious appetites, I may say of Sir Rowland Blennerhassett that everybody appears to have desired to pluck him to the very bones, to exhaust every imaginable remuneration for every possible service, and when that was done, to enter on the regions of imagination, and to suppose claims which never had even a shadow of existence. However, with that election I have nothing to do. If we were investigating the case of the election of 1865, there could not be one moment's hesitation as to the result; but I have nothing to do with that—nay, more, I am precluded from allowing it to have the slightest weight upon my judgment in deciding the matter of this petition. (Of course, in the observations which I have made, I did not refer to the gentlemen now acting for Sir Rowland Blennerhassett; I am talking of past transactions. The gentleman now acting for Sir Rowland Blennerhassett is, to my knowledge, a most respectable gentleman.) This evidence as to the election of 1865 should have been shut out altogether, but for the statement of Mr. Heron, that from the peculiar way in which that election was managed and treated, and the subsequent transactions, it could be dovetailed, in fact that it could be cemented, into this election of 1868, and in that light I allowed the evidence to be given. There appeared upon the scene in that manner several persons who had received large sums of money from Sir Rowland Blennerhassett, with whom I will presently deal; but I will first eliminate from the inquiry the cases in which the evidence has failed altogether.

There is the case of Denis Kelly, who was one of the independent electors, whose disinterestedness cannot be questioned. He appears to have been a warm supporter of Mr. O'Flaherty, but that unhappy execution comes down upon his carts and horses, and Mr. O'Flaherty very properly declined to advance him the money to release the carts and horses; and thereupon he became an enthusiastic supporter of Mr. O'Flaherty's opponents; I have not a doubt in my mind that that is the true state of that transaction. He has, however, some road contracts in another name—not his own—and he is entitled to be paid for them; and he goes off to Mr. Reddington, who is the treasurer of the county, and who, getting the proper vouchers from the county surveyor (I suppose it is), would under ordinary circumstances immediately discharge that money. He tells the tale, and he gets the money, and he gets the receipts; but that is not a case which can in any way interfere with the validity of the election, and I am relieved from all difficulty about it by Mr. Carter's explanation.

The next case is that of Mr. Halliday, a gentleman connected with the county. When walking down the street with Mr. Reddington, the county treasurer, he is arrested on an execution for a small sum of 19*l*. He, not having the money about him, appeals to Mr. Reddington, and Mr. Reddington pays the debt. I am relieved from any difficulty on that point, because my friend Mr. Heron at once withdrew the case, and said, very properly, that he would have acted in the same way himself, as, of course, any man would.

The next case is one which is shown to be a mistake, but it was a mistake which it was very natural should have been made from the confused way in which all the documents had been brought together, and the scandalous neglect, in that respect, of the Act of Parliament. No accounts of election expenses were published, no vouchers were handed in; nothing was done until the very morning when this inquiry opened. I call attention to this now, because you may have other elections and other petitions, and if you have, after the warning voice which I send forth from this bench, it will not be in the mouth of any election expense agent to say that he was ignorant of his duty. There should not be one farthing paid at an election, except through the election expense agent; and I am not without a hope that the Legislature will see the wisdom of enacting that, if anyone pays anything before, during, or after the election, except through an election expense agent, and if the election expense agent does not send in his account, openly and publicly, circulating it in the newspapers, and once for all closing up the portals of possible corruption, the seat shall be declared void, and the Member whose agents neglect to comply with the Act of Parliament, shall be declared to have forfeited his place in Parliament. I do believe that, if that were done, it would have a powerful effect in putting an end to corruption. It would put it out of the power of men to seek payment for their votes, or the votes of others. All payments should be made through the agent of election expenses; all accounts should be made public, and then no man would trust himself to the tender mercies of, of course I will not say Galway freemen, but of any other freemen in any other place, who might come forward at any time, and, by proving the payment of a single shilling outside the published list, unseat the Member.

The next case, that of David Murdon, is one of mistake. David Murdon was supposed to have been employed, but he was sworn not to have been employed. The person who was employed was the brother, Edward Murdon; and it is certainly a most remarkable fact that Murdon having been so employed, and being of course ready to vote, if there was that exigency on the part of Sir Rowland Blennerhassett, to have resort to bribery in order to secure his return for this borough, Mr. Reddington expressly declined to allow Edward Murdon to vote for Sir Rowland Blennerhassett at the election. I mention that as a circumstance which is not undeserving of consideration.

I come now to the cases in which men were paid after the election. There is no doubt at all that a most disgraceful bribery took place in this town after the election of 1865, and I will now at once meet the remark which has been addressed to me, that the same scenes will take place after the decision on this petition; and that it is within the bounds of possibility that, notwithstanding the investigation, notwithstanding the proof by agents and principals, notwithstanding the production of the accounts of the election expense agents, further sums of money will be claimed and paid. It has been said that the election expense agents' accounts were returned in 1865, and that it is now shown that more than 3,000*l*. was paid outside those returns. But I wish to give a little information to those whom it may concern: here is an Act of Parliament, passed since that election election of 1865, on the 31st of July 1867, and with regard to the statements made to me by Dr. Seeds, as to the bribery that may possibly take place after this inquiry has terminated, if there be any persons within hearing who entertain any expectation or anticipation of that kind (and I am bound to say that I have not had any evidence upon the subject), the piece of information which I am now about to impart to them will relieve their anxious breasts. They may leave this court perhaps disappointed in their expectations, but at all events it is as well for them to know the worst. There is a clause in this Act of Parliament under which, if Sir Rowland Blennerhassett or one of his agents, or Lord St. Lawrence or one of his agents, pay in respect of the election one shilling of money at any time between this present hour and the last hour of the session of this present Parliament, not only in this year, not only in the next year, but up to the last hour when it may be finally dissolved at the approach of a new election, for 28 days after every individual payment a new petition can be presented, not even to Parliament, but to the Court of Common Pleas in Dublin; and if that individual payment be proved, the seat of the sitting Member is just as effectually gone as it would be upon this inquiry. I am quite satisfied that neither of the sitting Members contemplates anything of the kind, and they will not understand me as suggesting that they have any such thing in contemplation; but there are two parties to every pecuniary transaction, there is the donor and there is the donee; and though I am perfectly satisfied that neither Sir Rowland Blennerhassett nor Lord St. Lawrence intend making any such payment, let me tell the one and the other that if he is pressed by persons who wish to carry on a system of corruption in this borough, he is bound by no feeling of honour to contribute to their rapacity; and let me tell him also that if he at any time pays one single shilling in consideration of this last election, he can be again petitioned against. Let every person in the borough of Galway know that this inquiry does not terminate here, but that if one farthing of money is paid in consideration of a vote at the last election to any one here, during the existence of the Parliament now sitting, a new petition can be presented, and the whole thing can be again made the subject of investigation.

Now I come to the particular cases. All these are cases of men who received large sums of money to distribute at the election of 1865. Hundreds were given to Brady; hundreds were given to Kirwan; £.60, I think, was given to a man of the name of Fahy. Hughes claimed balances after the election; and those are sums which those persons alleged they had expended for Sir Rowland Blennerhassett. There is not the slightest doubt that they had expended them illegally. Some of them sued Sir Rowland Blennerhassett, and their demands were settled by the interposition of some other person, I think a Mr. Halliday. At all events, Hughes was paid 40*l.* in February 1867, and Kirwan was paid 50*l.* at or about the same time. Hughes accepted the 40*l.* in full discharge of all his claims upon Sir Rowland Blennerhassett, and Kirwan did the same, but he says there is still a sum of 39*l.* due to him. That 39*l.* he never mentioned until the approach of the last election, in 1868; he then applied to Mr. Samuel Reddington, and he received a most decided refusal. That disposes, in my mind, of both these cases. I do not see that they are connected with this election. I believe that they were most ill-advised transactions on the part of Sir Rowland Blennerhassett, but, at the same time, I think he acted in them from a mistaken sense of personal honour, and I do not find that they were in any way connected with this election.

The next class of cases to which I come, are O'Gorman's cases.

O'Gorman is a man in the town, a manufacturer of pipes, who is connected with Mr. John Reddington, junior. Beyond a doubt, Mr. John Reddington's acts would have bound Sir Rowland Blennerhassett throughout the whole of this case. It is unnecessary for me to refer to the evidence to show how he was the agent of Sir Rowland Blennerhassett, because he was just as much his agent as the gentleman who was acting as his attorney, Mr. Samuel Reddington. The account which O'Gorman gives of the transaction is, that he and Sir Rowland Blennerhassett went into his father's shop; that Sir Rowland was canvassing his father, and that while he was doing so he took Mr. John Reddington, junior, aside, and (not in the hearing of Sir Rowland Blennerhassett) said to him, "There are so many men up in our workshop, and if you will tell me it will be all right, they will go for Sir Rowland Blennerhassett." He says that Mr. Reddington asked him to give the names, and that he told him to send the names, and he says that he went over to Mr. Reddington's office (I think on the following day), that he gave in the names to a clerk who was sitting there, Mr. Reddington not being present, and that the clerk took down those names; and I believe it has been proved from the poll-books that some of those men, at all events, voted for Sir Rowland Blennerhassett. It is said that Mr. Davis, the person alleged to have been in the office, was not produced; nor was he; but that did not appear to me to throw any light upon it, because the question is, was there a corrupt conversation between O'Gorman and Mr. John Reddington, junior, upon that occasion? Mr. John Reddington, junior, has sworn in the most positive manner that he had no such conversation, and that if any word of the kind was said, it never reached him; that he never contemplated anything of the kind; and he has sworn in the most unmistakeable terms that, neither directly nor indirectly, neither by promise nor by offer, nor by contemplation, nor in action, nor in intention, had he any idea of paying any sum of money to this man or to any other person on behalf of Sir Rowland Blennerhassett. I am bound to say that I believe him.

That brings me to three cases upon which great stress has been laid. There is a very 120—I. Y r celebrated

Galway Town.

celebrated case, to which I myself called attention, and which I have in my recollection; and that is the Sligo case, in which Mr. Charles Townley, of Townley, in England, was unseated for the borough of Sligo, in consequence of his friend, Mr. Stonor, then a very young man at the bar in England, having incautiously entered into a correspondence with Mr. Jeremiah Joyce O'Donovan, an alderman of the borough of Sligo, who had been a leading member of the Liberal party in Sligo, and who said, "I lost a large sum of money at the last election, and unless that is repaid to me, I will take no part in the election whatsoever." That sum of money was incautiously paid, and a heavy penalty it imposed upon Mr. Stonor! He had been appointed to a judicial office in Australia, and whilst he was proceeding thither, a question was put in the House of Commons as to whether Mr. Stonor was not the person implicated. That gentleman, upon the question having been put, was recalled from Australia. When he arrived there he found he was no longer a judge as he had expected, and he returned to England, and remained for many years debarred from taking any office. The Minister of the day, however, had the courage to defy obloquy of any kind, and Mr. Stonor was ultimately appointed, I am happy to say, to a judicial office in England; the Minister holding, as I think wisely, that there must be some limit to the penalties to be imposed upon a man who had committed one indiscretion in the whole course of his life.

That Sligo case is clearly distinguishable from this one. In that case the money was given, and the person to whom it was paid broke his promise to another person. Mr. Jeremiah Joyce O'Donovan refrained from voting at the election, his vote having been promised to Mr. Somers; and the resolution of the Committee was that he had refrained from voting in consideration of the absolute payment made to him of 103 l. That is entirely distinguishable from the present case. I am now applying myself, in the first instance, to the case of Brady. Here there was no election in contemplation; there was no promise in reference to a vote. It is a remarkable thing that, though the payment was made so far back as the summer of 1868, Brady says that he did not make up his mind to vote for Sir Rowland Blennerhassett until within three or four days of the election; and therefore many months intervened between the payment to him and his absolutely forming an intention to be a supporter of Sir Rowland Blennerhassett; and Sir Rowland Blennerhassett has sworn most positively that he never had in contemplation anything relating to Brady's vote, and that he would have paid him if he had plumped for O'Flaherty.

Now what are the circumstances of the case? In the first place it is not a claim made upon Sir Rowland Blennerhassett; it is an action brought against his attorney. I do not know whether I am at liberty to speak of the gentleman as having been Sir Rowland Blennerhassett's attorney at the former election; he had his own family solicitor, Mr. Flood, but I think it involves no great assumption to arrive at the conclusion that Mr. Concannon was the person really acting for him upon that occasion because he disbursed immense sums of money on his behalf, of all of which he told us here. He may be a very clever man, but I do not think that one would take him for choice as a confidential election agent. An action is brought by Mr. Brady, claiming, I think, 123 l. against Mr. Concannon. Brady had a great deal of money to distribute, but he said he was out of pocket; he had advanced his own. There is a liberality which characterises some persons, so that they even go beyond the estimates, and with a lavish hand they gratify a creditable feeling of generosity and friendship. Mr. Concannon is sued for 123 l., which he deposes on the table was the most unfounded claim ever made in the world; that he defended it to the last and was prepared to defend it, and it was absolutely in the last summer assizes of 1868 (I forget whether I was here at the time, but I think not), that it was in the list here, and as to Mr. Concannon, the defendant (as does not always happen to a defendant), "he was most anxious that the case should proceed." However, Sir Rowland Blennerhassett arrived in town at a most unhappy moment. He certainly was not the right man in the right place then, and accordingly Mr. Brady serves him with a subpoena, or goes to serve him with a subpoena, as he said, from a gentlemanly wish not to have him served by a common process server; he goes to the club, and there Sir Rowland Blennerhassett is advised by his friends that there will be some horrible disclosures, and that the names of several most respectable people will be brought in question, and he is entreated to do something to save the exposure. Am I now to throw any doubt upon that? I may almost say that the annals of Galway have passed into the blue books, and a past Royal Commission have spent time in investigating the arcana of its elections. They have sat here for many weeks, and undoubtedly of some of the most respectable names in connection with the town and county (shall I say?) honourable mention has been made in the schedules to the report. I see no reason to entertain the slightest doubt that the screw was put upon Sir Rowland Blennerhassett to prevent any exposure in this court-house, and acting upon a feeling to which perhaps many persons in his position would have yielded, though against which sterner hearts or heads would mayhap have been proof, he again put his hand in his pocket, and he paid, or paid through his solicitor, this demand, of which Mr. Concannon has given the voucher of his oath as having been one of the most unfounded in the world. Mr. Concannon is indignant that he has not the opportunity of proving that; and having been no party to the settlement of the case, and having done all with his counsel which he could to induce the plaintiff to come to the encounter, he taxes his costs in that pleasant way which is so agreeable to gentlemen of the legal profession, and he sends down an execution against Brady. Brady was, I believe, arrested for the amount of this execution, and those acting on behalf of Sir Rowland Blennerhassett Blennerhassett paid the amount of those costs, being part and parcel of the said original transaction by which Sir Rowland Blennerhassett had bound himself to hold Brady free as between him and Mr. Concannon, and I have no doubt that in the same way Mr. Concannon will tax the costs of the action when it has come to its final stage, and it is not for me to advise Sir Rowland Blennerhassett as to what he ought to do in that case. But I have come to the conclusion that that payment to Mr. Brady was not corruptly given with a view to the future election, and I hold that Sir Rowland Blennerhassett is discharged in that regard.

I have now still, for this case is very voluminous indeed, to come to Codyer's case and Comins' case. Codyer's case is somewhat of a different kind, and yet it comes within the same range. Codyer's case is that of a man who kept an open house here, he says, on behalf of Sir Rowland Blennerhassett; he brought an action against Mr. Reddington, and he recovered 25 l. and costs. He says he was ruined by not being paid the full amount, and he had to take the benefit of the Insolvent Act very shortly afterwards, and he appears on all hands to have been thought by the people who knew him to have been a victim of the acts of the agents of Sir Rowland Blennerhassett in connection with the election of 1865. Sir Rowland Blennerhassett, in a moment of dangerous confidence, I would say, having been appealed to by that Mr. Edward Guilfoyle, in reference to this poor man who he said was ruined in Sir Rowland's cause, gave him a cheque for 50 l., desiring him to settle the matter as best he could. He has sworn that he did not know how the man was going to vote, and that he did not care how he was going to vote, and that he did it as an act of justice, believing that he was giving it to a man who had suffered to that amount, and far more in purse and in person, in his cause; and he said, in a manner which was well calculated to impress me, that he would do the same again under similar circumstances. I cannot hold, in the teeth of that evidence, that the 50 l. so paid to this man who had got through all the misery of litigation, arrest, insolvency, bankruptcy, was given from any other motive than that which Sir Rowland Blennerhassett has given, and I have no idea of voiding his election upon that ground.

Then comes the case of Mr. Comins, which is one of the almost inexplicable enigmas of the whole of this case; but there is so strange a light brought to bear upon the whole of this Galway election of 1865, that I am only thankful that there are not more Mysteries of Udolpho to explain; but still I think I can see my way through that transaction. That is a payment after this last election, and differs from the other in that respect. It is a payment of 25 l. to a gentleman of the name of Thomas Comins, who has got himself and his son, and his freeholders or voters upon the register. He was a friend of Mr. O'Flaherty; he was pledged, to support Mr. O'Flaherty. I have no doubt that he was. He tried to throw a most disgraceful imputation upon Mr. O'Flaherty in giving his evidence upon this table. I am bound to say that his imputation was not only refuted, but it was proved to have been impossible. He tried to convey to me and to the public that Mr. O'Flaherty had disgraced himself by threatening him, Mr. O'Flaherty, being an arbitrator, and in the position of a judge in a case as between him and somebody else, and had made that the means of forcing Mr. Comins to be a supporter of his. That met its conclusive answer by the statement which was made by Mr. O'Flaherty, that two months before these transactions he had absolutely signed the award which is the conclusion of an arbitration. But Mr. Comins had, like those other persons, been entrusted with money in 1865. He was, indeed, the agent for election expenses in 1865, and he paid away the moneys which were entrusted to him, less a little balance of 60 l., and acting under the advice of an eminent Queen's Counsel, whoever he may have been, he thought that that was little enough for himself, and accordingly he retained it; and there being no questions asked, at the close of another election, his mind recurred to the enjoyments of the previous contest, and as he was in communication with Mr. Uniacke Townsend, who must be considered the real agent for election expenses in this case, and not that most unmanageable gentleman, Mr. Blake, as he is going away he tells him there was 25 l. due to him as election expense agent in 1865. Mr. Townsend, having been sent here to close all transactions, to have no more rivets to close up; knowing that he was dealing with the agent for election expenses, and thinking, no doubt, that he had a man as respectable as himself to deal with (which I am far from saying) hands him over, or says that he will send him, the 25 l. Mr. Comins had then voted for Sir Rowland Blennerhassett and Mr. O'Flaherty; but I take Mr. O'Flaherty's view of that transaction, I believe that that was a sham. I believe that Comins was really in the opposite camp, and why? Because he was assisting Lord St. Lawrence's agents in Dublin, though he did not vote for him. He voted for Sir Rowland Blennerhassett, but his son and the eight other voters go the other way. Am I to consider that that is a corrupt payment made in consequence of the election? It would be a most extraordinary conclusion to arrive at. It is promised on the 17th of December, in consideration of a balance which Mr. Townsend is told by a person whom he considers he can credit, was due to him from the former election of 1865, not as a voter or as a distributor of bribes, but as the agent for election expenses, and Mr. Townsend must be a most extraordinary fool, and (as you go south I do not think that you find that they become so dull) having promised this 25 l. upon the 17th of December, the petition in this case having been presented in Dublin upon that identical day, he pays this money to Mr. Comins some 8 or 10 days after the presentation of the petition. I hold that there is no evidence in that case to justify me in ruling that that payment, that unadvised payment, that uncalled-for payment, that unjustifiable payment, to which Comins had no more right than any other man in the gallery of this court, was a payment made corruptly by Mr. Townsend on behalf of Sir Rowland Blennerhassett for and on account of Comins having voted for him at the election.

That brings me to the close of those alleged bribery transactions. Now there was a good deal of discussion here between myself and the learned counsel as to what amounted to a corrupt payment, either in expectancy of the vote, or in consideration of the vote. I lay down no hard and fast rule at all about it. When the case comes before me to deal with it, I shall deal with it upon the facts, and if the facts bring home to my mind conviction of corruption, I shall declare it to be corrupt. If, for instance, as I had occasion to see the other day, a voter applies to a person who is a candidate for a loan of money to assist him out of difficulties, and if the candidate or his agent in a moment of charitable benevolence and generosity resolves upon giving him a loan of money, and if the insolent mendicant refuses to take it unless he doubles the amount, I have no difficulty in coming to the conclusion what is meant there. But there is no such thing here, from first to last. There is want of caution, there is great recklessness of consequences, there is a lavish expenditure of money upon a former occasion, into which I have no right to go. There is, perhaps, after all a generous disposition to stand well with his fellow-men, and to see that no one suffers on his behalf unjustly, but I do not see my way to find that Sir Rowland Blennerhassett at this election has been, either by himself or his agents, guilty of the corrupt practice of bribery.

I now come to what has been not improperly called by my learned friend Dr. Seeds the great constitutional question in this case, that is, the question of undue influence practised, in the words of the Act of Parliament which I shall read on behalf of the sitting Members. The words of the Act are most precise, not leaving things at large or in any uncertainty, but going into the most specific detail. I refer to the 5th section of the 17 & 18 Vict. c. 102. I had to consider this question very anxiously in another place, at the Drogheda election, in which, beyond a doubt, undue influence was practised by laymen and by ecclesiastics, and I so declared. "Every person who shall directly or indirectly, by himself or by any other person on his behalf, make use of or threaten to make use of, any force, violence, or restraint, or inflict or threaten the infliction by himself or by or through any other person, of any injury, damage, harm, or loss, or in any other manner practise intimidation upon or against any person, in order to induce or compel such person to vote or refrain from voting, or on account of such person having voted at any election, or who shall, by abduction, duress, or any fraudulent device or contrivance, impede, prevent, or otherwise interfere with the free exercise of the franchise of any voter, or shall thereby compel, induce, or prevail upon any voter either to give or to refrain from giving his vote at any election, shall be deemed to have committed the offence of undue influence, shall be guilty of a misdemeanour, making him liable to the punishment of fine and imprisonment, and shall also be liable to forfeit the sum of 50*l.* to any person who shall sue for the same, together with the full costs of suit;" and, by a clause in another Act of Parliament, "shall render the seat of the Member void on whose behalf that undue influence is used;" and if it is used, and is found by the judge trying the offence to have been used (as it was found by me in the case of the trial of the election petition for the borough of Drogheda) by himself or his agents, the Member is incapacitated from again seeking the suffrages of that constituency during the then existing Parliament. That is the definition of undue influence given in the Act of Parliament. My learned friend Dr. Seeds reminded me that in the case of the trial of the election petition for the city of Dublin, I had given a short exposition of what I considered to be the law upon these subjects. I told him not to be so certain that a newspaper report always gives the ipsissima verba of the speaker (though the newspaper reports are generally very accurate), but I happen to have with me the official shorthand writer's notes, as prepared by Mr. Hewett, the very accomplished gentleman who acts here for Mr. Gurney, of my judgment in the Dublin case, and on referring to them I find that I said this: "I say that general bribery will invalidate an election, even though it be not directly traceable to the candidate. I say that general treating will invalidate an election, even though it be not directly traceable to the candidate, and I say, above all things, that general intimidation and undue influence" (that was the word which was omitted, I think, from the report which Dr. Seeds quoted, and I have no doubt quoted correctly), "whether it is lay or ecclesiastical, whether it is the ecclesiastic of one persuasion, or whether it is the ecclesiastic of another; whether it is the Protestant Episcopalian minister, or the Presbyterian minister, or the Roman Catholic priest, or the minister of any other of those innumerable sects which I believe are to be found existing over the face of the world, will upset every election at which it is practised." I see no reason to qualify in any way a single word which I stated in that judgment. That I believe to be the law, as laid down by the greatest authorities, and of that I believe no happier exposition was ever given than in the celebrated argument of Sir Samuel Romilly, in the case of Huguenin and Baseley, in the year 1807, before Lord Eldon, in the Court of Chancery of England, as to which I think it is recorded that Lord Eldon, years afterwards, stated that the words of that great jurist were "still ringing in his ears." It will not, therefore, be out of place that I should adopt the splendid language and diction of that great jurist, as containing a true and admirable exposition of that which constitutes undue influence when practised by ecclesiastics. The case of Huguenin and Baseley did not, of course, relate to an election, but it was a suit brought in Chancery to set aside a settlement made voluntarily by a widow upon a clergyman and his family. That settlement was set aside as having been obtained by undue influence and abused confidence by the clergyman as an agent undertaking the management of this lady's affairs, and it was so set aside upon principles of public policy and utility. Sir Samuel Romilly speaks in his argument of this undue influence. I adopt his words as marking what I conceive to be the limit between due and undue influence, and I shall proceed, when I have read those words, to refer them to the case now in question. "Undue influence will be used if ecclesiastics make use of their power to excite superstitious fears or pious hopes, to inspire, as the object may be best promoted, despair or confidence" (that is, to inspire despair or confidence, in order to obtain their own objects, be they what they may), "to alarm the conscience by the horrors of eternal misery, or support the drooping spirits by unfolding the prospect of eternal happiness—that good or evil which is never to end." The sentiment embodied in those words is as noble as the language, and the language is equal to the sentiment.

Now, what is the necessary consequence if that is a true version of influence? Is it that the influence of the clergy is to be excluded? I say not. A question was put to the Bishop of Galway by the learned counsel who cross-examined him, and who did so strictly within the line of his duty, and with perfect propriety and ability, faithful to his clients, and in no manner unbecoming to himself or to the right reverend gentleman who was the subject of his cross-examination, and the question was this: "Did you say that if the people were estranged from their clergy, and were not obedient to their clergy, they would escape from all legitimate authority?" And the answer is, "I did." I say so too. Differences of religion will prevail to the end of the world, as they have prevailed from the very first hour of Christianity; but woe betide the country in which no religion shall prevail! The great modern Cæsar, when he found every institution around him in France a wreck after the Revolution, when dynasties were overthrown, when monarchs were brought to the block, when "Les évêques à la lanterne" was the cry of the revolutionists, when to be an ecclesiastic or an aristocrat was to go to the scaffold, looked about him; and when with his mighty hand he was reconstructing the edifice of his country, his dominion, and his power, he said: "If I had not found a religion I should have been obliged, for the safety of society, to construct one." Therefore, I say, it is idle to put forward the proposition that it is desirable in any country that the people shall be free from the influence of their clergy. To be a good citizen there must be a religious sentiment; and if you release the people from the influences, I say the legitimate influences, of their clergy, you set them at sea upon the billows of every kind of infidelity; and they will become as indifferent to the civil as they have been to the religious authority. Those are my sentiments; they are perfectly consistent with, they are ingrained in, authority itself; and so far from shaking the edifice of temporal power, and of temporal peace, they go to maintain both. But the question is, has undue influence been used, and has influence been unduly used? And there is no more difficulty in answering that in the case of ecclesiastical than of civil influence. The same test must be applied to it, and that is the reasoning of the human mind.

Then let me approach this particular case, and let me ask myself this question: Has there been undue influence? In the first place, it was said rather hastily, and I am sure without meaning to argue such a proposition, that if the priest uses influence at all, the election will be void. The Roman Catholic bishop in this country is not represented at the council table, where I frequently have the pleasure of meeting archbishops and bishops of the Protestant Establishment; the cassock and the lawn sleeves of the House of Lords are not worn by him; he is and remains in the eye of the law a commoner, and as a commoner he must find his representative. The Legislature and the law have given him a vote, and have entitled him to vote, and he has a right to exercise that privilege. The minister of the Protestant Episcopalian religion has the same right, and no less; the minister of the Presbyterian religion has the same; the landlord has his vote, and his tenants have their votes; and is it to be said that the landlord is to use no influence with his tenants? I deny the proposition altogether. I say it is right and becoming that a landlord should use his influence with his tenants; and so long as he does not exercise that influence in an illegitimate manner, no steadier, or safer, or more legitimate influence can be used. The public press, which is now almost one of the estates of the realm from its great and amazing power, from day to day and from hour to hour exercises its influences upon every constituency; and no one would presume to say that the public press should not put forth its tremendous powers, to advise, to lecture, often to control the people; because if you were to place limits upon that power the public benefit would be disregarded, and the freedom of the press would be destroyed. Then I ask, are the only persons in the community who are not to be at liberty to exercise their legitimate influence the bishops and clergy of the Roman Catholic Church? I meet with a positive negative any such assumption; but, as I said before, that influence must be legitimately exercised. I hold in my hand the report of a case in which the election for a neighbouring county, the county of Mayo, was contested in Parliament before a Committee of the House of Commons, in the year 1853. There certain electors for that county petitioned against the return of the present Member for that county, Mr. George Henry Moore, and the late Member for that county, Colonel Gore Ouseley Higgins. The seat was contested, evidence was given, and the Committee came to this resolution: "That it appears from evidence given before the Committee, that there was great abuse of spiritual influence on the part of a great body of the Roman Catholic priesthood during the last election for the county of Mayo." That Committee was composed of no ordinary men; the Chairman was Lord Harry Vane, a most distinguished Member of Parliament, one of the members was Mr. John George Phillimore, the Member for Leominster, one of the ablest lawyers in the House of Commons, and another was Mr. Clive, a very able man; and they arrived at the resolution which I have read, "that there was great abuse of spiritual influence on the part of a great body of the Roman Catholic priesthood during the last election for the county of Mayo," and yet they declared the Members to have been duly elected as knights of the shire. I do not mention this as expressing my concurrence in the decision. I think that if I had come to the conclusion that there was great abuse of spiritual influence on the part of a great body of the Roman Catholic priesthood, I should have also arrived at the conclusion that the Representatives were not duly elected. Amongst that Committee there was not one single Roman Catholic gentleman, all the members being of the Protestant persuasion; and yet they, having had that evidence before them, did not think that that abuse of spiritual influence had gone the length of invalidating the election.

I come now to a case of an opposite kind. The county of Mayo has certainly in its good time earned about as unenviable a notoriety in the annals of Parliament as, I think, any place that I know. In the year 1857, Colonel Gore Ouseley Higgins was the unsuccessful candidate for the representation of the county of Mayo; he petitioned against the sitting Member, Mr. George Henry Moore, and the petition complained of every description of intimidation, and of every description of undue influence. A very full report of the case is given in Wolferstan and Dew's Election Cases, 1857-8, vol. I. The witnesses giving evidence before the Committee, as in the Sligo case, were maltreated; one of them was almost left for dead whilst the Committee was sitting, and it had to be reported to the House. The Attorney General said he would prosecute, but I do not know what became of it. What was the evidence of undue influence as reported in that case? A placard was published, signed by the Archbishop of Tuam and three Roman Catholic bishops, which said, "People of Mayo! The voice of the Church now calls upon you to do your duty! Tipperary has already spoken. All Ireland now expects your decision. With one combined effort elect your chosen candidates, G. H. Moore, Esq., and Captain R. W. Palmer; or by your apathy permit Mr. Ouseley Higgins to sneak in, and be forever disgraced. Hear the voice of your venerated bishops, ever your guide in the day of trial. Resolved, at a meeting of the bishops and several of the clergy connected with Mayo, held in Tuam, that all the energies of the people should be directed to the rejection of Mr. Ouseley Higgins, who has been unfaithful, and to the return of Mr. Moore, who has been their honest, faithful, and uncompromising supporter in Parliament." Accordingly, in due time, the one candidate was rejected and the other was returned. Then some sceptical individual doubted that this placard had been signed by the archbishop and bishops, and he ventured to say that he was satisfied that it was not an authentic document. That was Sir Richard Annesley O'Donnell. He was immediately met by another placard, signed by three Roman Catholic curates, who declared that they held in their possession the autograph of the document which I have read, and that they vouched for its authenticity. Then there was a pastoral letter by the Archbishop of Tuam, which was inserted in the usual places, and went a long way. Then there were denunciations from the altar. At Bohola, the curate, in the presence of the parish priest, told the people during service, that the archbishops, the bishops, and priests had come to a resolution to oppose the petitioner; that every good Catholic ought to support Mr. Moore; that Colonel Higgins was "a pledge-breaker" and "a traitor," and that the day the people should turn against their priests would be a sad day for themselves. Another clergyman, at Castlebar, told the people from the altar, that "the curse of God would come down upon any one voting against his country and his country's cause, and voting for Colonel Higgins was doing so;" adding, "that if they were dying he would not give the rites of the Church to anyone voting for Colonel Higgins;" that "the parish should keep their eyes on the black sheep;" that he would "brand them for life," and would have "a separate chapel for those who voted for Colonel Higgins;" and that "the congregation should not speak to them." At Ballinrobe, the Rev. Mr. Conway said that the curse of God would follow every man who voted for Colonel Higgins; and this little bit of practical instruction was given: "You have a perfectly legal right to show your disapprobation of his conduct, by shouting and hooting after everyone who comes to support him; but take care and do not molest or maltreat any of the soldiers or police." It did not stop there. In one instance, the conduct of three clergymen was so bad in threatening voters, suggesting the Candidates' names to them when they hesitated, and suggesting to them the answers to the statutable questions allowed at the poll, that the deputy-sheriff threatened to have them taken into custody. They acted in many cases as the poll-agents of Mr. Moore. At Castlebar polling-place there appeared to be none other but priests acting as poll-agents for him, and but few besides priests engaged in bringing up voters to the poll. Instances were given of the most tremendous mob violence. A gentleman with a Galway name (and therefore I will not mention it) said to a voter that he was assisting "that villain Higgins," and threatened "to make a beggar of him and his crippled son." In another instance two priests told a voter that "if we voted for Higgins his soul would be in hell." Another amiable man said that "the supporters of Higgins, the traitor, had come in, and that they had escaped them; that others were coming along the Neill-road, and that he wanted 200 men." Accordingly a mob of from 300 to 400 men, armed with sticks, proceeded along the road. They met first a gentleman of this county, of the name of Burke, and they dragged him off his car, and beat him severely. They then met two carts conveying hay and straw to Ballinrobe for Colonel Higgins's horses. The gentleman leading them said, "Boys, do not scatter the hay and straw," and for once they did not obey their priest, and they did it. The thing went to such an extent that the poll was suspended and adjourned, and then came this proclamation from one of the clergymen:

men: "My ever dear friends, I never asked a favour of you that you did not grant at once. I now ask one favour more of you this day, and I ask it in the name of the Glorious Queen of Heaven, the Immaculate Mother of God; it is this, that no man, woman, or child shall appear on the streets of Ballinrobe, except a freeholder, on to-morrow, Wednesday, or any other day, until I appear amongst you. Anyone who does not take this my advice, he is my enemy, the enemy of Moore and Palmer, and the enemy of our country. Victory is yours." Upon that evidence the Committee came to the conclusion "That George Henry Moore, Esq., was, by his agents, guilty of undue influence at the last election for the county of Mayo. That undue influence and spiritual intimidation prevailed to a considerable extent at the last election for the county of Mayo. That in the exercise of such undue influence and spiritual intimidation the Rev. Peter Conway and the Rev. Luke Ryan were so prominently active, that the Committee deem it their duty specially to report their conduct to the House, in order that such steps may be taken as may seem to the House to be proper and necessary." Of course, the gentleman who was so unseated was unable to offer himself to the electors again during the whole of that Parliament. There is a case of undue influence proved to the satisfaction of any man on earth, and there is a case in which it was acted upon by the House of Commons, not shilly-shallying with resolutions condemning spiritual undue influence, and leaving the Member to hold his seat, but finding undue influence to have been exercised, and arriving at the legitimate and logical conclusion that the Member should not retain his seat.

Looking at it in that light, let us approach this case. Has there been such undue influence as ought to avoid the election in this case? If there has, the higher the person who used it the more fearlessly he ought to be dealt with. I care not whether he be curate, parish priest, administrator, bishop, or archbishop. I cannot go higher than that in this country; but if undue influence at an election were proved before me to have been exercised within the limits of the law and of my own reason, consulting as to the proper deductions to be drawn from the facts, I would, without the slightest hesitation in the world, find that to have been an undue election; and let the persons who have brought that state of things about, whenever it occurs, deal with the consequences. But as, on the one hand, I believe that if I were to cripple the legitimate influence of the clergy I should do the greatest injury to society, and, instead of preserving the freedom of election, I should run the risk of restraining the freedom of election, in their regard at least; so, on the other hand, if that influence is unduly used, it is in the interest, I do solemnly believe, not only of the country at large, but more especially of the Roman Catholic population of the country, to prevent the recurrence of such instances. It has been urged to me that if ever there was an occasion in which it was justifiable that the Roman Catholic clergy should put forth their hands, it was at the present crisis. With the right or wrong of the present political question, I, sitting here, have nothing whatsoever to do; but I recognise the perfect propriety of that observation; I recognise the brilliant and eloquent language of Mr. Palfes, when he gave that rapid historical review, travelling from the year 1793 to the year 1829, and from the year 1829 to the year 1849, when, as he said, we passed at a great leap from franchise to emancipation, and when he expressed a hope that the Catholics of this country were now about to spring from emancipation to equality. But if, without trenching upon the domain of politics, I may be permitted to make an observation upon the stirring scenes which are now passing around us, let me say that, if the Legislature, in its good will and pleasure and judgment, is minded to strike down what is called one ascendancy, I hope and I believe that the intelligence, the spirit, and the independence of the lay Catholics of this country will prevent the setting up of another ascendancy over them more galling and more fatal, though coming from the midst of their own community.

In this case every description of charge has been made against the Roman Catholic clergy. They have been charged in the statement of my friend Mr. Heron, with having refused the rites of the Church, in order to influence votes at this election. If that had been proved in a single case, I would have avoided this election; I would not have hesitated one moment about it. If a single elector—the most miserable freeman that crawls about this town—had been refused the rites of the Church in order to compel him to vote, or because he had voted, or because a member of his family had voted, in a particular way, I would have avoided this election without the least hesitation; but I have never known of such a thing being done in this country. I am perfectly satisfied that the eminent ecclesiastic who gave his testimony so frankly upon that table would countenance no such procedure. I said when the bishop was examined, in guarded fashion (for I had not then made up my mind as to this case) that whatever inferences we might draw from the testimony of the right reverend prelate, no man could deny him the justice of saying that he had frankly told what was passing in his mind, without regard to consequences. I am certain that he would never let near him the abominable idea of making the sacred rites and mysteries of his Church subservient to political purposes. But the charge was made, and a more fearful charge I know not of; and let me say that it was one which ought not to have been hazarded without a belief in its truth, and that it would be supported in proof. In these petitions I make every allowance for human frailty and for human passion; but I say that where a great body of men, holding a position of the highest importance in the midst of a Roman Catholic congregation, headed by a bishop distinguished for great talent, as anyone would say who heard him here (and I speak from an older recollection, for I once happened to pass into a country chapel, not having had either then or since the honour of the bishop's acquaintance, and I remember being delighted with his eloquence, he being then but a humble curate), refuse the most solemn rites of the Church to persons on account of their voting or not voting in a particular way, such action on their part will, and ought to avoid an election. But I say that such a charge against such men, or against any men, ought not to have been hazarded unless there was forthcoming some evidence of it; and in this case there was not one particle of evidence offered to prove the statement. It was said that the clergy threatened privation of the rites of the Church. There is not a particle of evidence of anything of the kind, not a suspicion of it. The right reverend prelate himself said that he would immediately suspend any person who presumed to do such a thing; and I say there is no record of such a thing in this country. There is in the volume to which I have already referred, mention of one clergyman having so far forgotten his sacred calling as to threaten that he would do so; but I will not allow myself to believe that that threat would ever have been carried into execution. I know that in another country (I speak, of course, historically, and from the ordinary sources of information that we have upon affairs at home and abroad) in the early portion of what may be called the present Italian revolution, in the province of Piedmont, such a course was taken with those who were believed to be connected with what I think I may properly describe as the Siccardi laws; and when I had the honour of a seat in the House of Commons, I recollect the Prime Minister of the day asking me across the House whether I could justify such a thing; and I did then reply, as I now reply, that a greater infamy could not be perpetrated. There is no pretence of anything of the kind existing in this case. What is the intimidation? Does the candidate say that the bishop or his clergy ought to have no voice at all in this election? That cannot be, because on the 11th of October there is a letter addressed by himself to the bishop, if not asking the bishop to be active in his cause, at least asking the bishop to authorise him to say that he (the bishop) and his clergy were not opposed to his candidature. To that letter there is a reply given, which I have in my hand, in which the bishop, condoling with Mr. O'Flaherty as to a domestic calamity, says, "As regards the political portion of your letter, you will not take it, what it is not intended to be, as the slightest mark of disrespect if I forbear entering upon it." That was perfectly legitimate, and perfectly proper; no man who asked for an opinion from another had a right to complain that the bishop, or any other individual, gave him that answer. Different candidates came into the field, and ultimately Lord St. Lawrence, about that very time, I think, about the 10th or 11th of October, appears upon the scene. Mr. O'Flaherty describes Lord St. Lawrence's appearance in the terms which I have already mentioned, and which do Mr. O'Flaherty credit; but he also goes on to say, that, so far from Lord St. Lawrence having given an abject submission to the wishes of the Roman Catholic clergy, he did not do so. Mr. O'Flaherty is asked whether Lord St. Lawrence ever assented to the College House resolutions; and Mr. O'Flaherty says, on examination, that he does not believe that he ever did so. That is the testimony of Mr. O'Flaherty himself. The bishop is asked whether Lord St. Lawrence gave his assent to the College House resolutions, and he says, "Indeed he did not." His Lordship is asked, "Was it because of his dissent that you supported him?" and his reply is, "No; because I had seen his address to the electors of Louth, which I consider a far better document." Then a meeting is held, and these letters, which I will not go through in detail, passed between the parties. The Rev. Mr. Cullen is acting as the secretary of this small community, for it is not a large community, the secular clergy being only 18 in number, with some 18 or 20 of the regular orders, in the whole diocese. It is called "A meeting of the clergy and laity, presided over by the bishops, held this day in the sacristy of the parish church." The meeting is convened suddenly; the clergymen are sent through the town to call in persons to attend; but it is in evidence most distinctly, I think in the statement of the Rev. Mr. Dooley, that there were far and away a greater number of the laity than there were of the clergy; and he particularly mentioned (and that is a circumstance to which I intended to call attention) in answer to the question, "Were there a great deal more laymen than there were clergymen?" that there were "A great deal." Q. Did you consider that that represented the general wishes of the electors of Galway? A. I considered that that meeting represented the respectability of the town of Galway; I saw the greatest friends of Mr. O'Flaherty there. I observed some of his best supporters there among them. I saw Mr. Flannigan, and another also, Mr. Martin Tierney, Mr. John Dunning, and several more, great advocates of Mr. O'Flaherty. James Martyn was the first after the bishop, who explained the position of the state of the Liberal cause. James Martyn was the first man to propose the scrutiny. Then a scrutiny is proposed. No man has a right to go into such a thing. No candidate has a right to submit to such a thing. Every candidate has the right to say, "I will have the free voice of the electors at the poll;" but a letter is written to Mr. O'Flaherty, the candidate, as to Lord St. Lawrence and Sir Rowland Blennerhassett, and we are told that it was resolved that the three Liberal candidates should go into conference with their friends. In England constantly this is done. It was done the other day in Manchester, and there is nothing bordering upon offensiveness in this letter. I am dealing with this case without the slightest regard to any party, either high or low; but I must say, that I think that the letter which was written in reply to that letter was not called for. I think that from the beginning to end it adopts a tone of covert imputation. I accept Mr. O'Flaherty's explanation, that he did not intend the letter as an insult to the bishop or the clergy, but I think that through the whole of this letter there is a pervading idea that the clergy were to be excluded from participation in the conferences which were to be held by and on behalf of the Liberal party; for Mr. O'Flaherty suggests that three classes shall take the claims of the candidates into consideration; that the first shall be the mercantile community munity, the second shall be the artisan class, and finally the gentry, but from those three classes the clergy are altogether excluded, and it would appear to me that they are almost the only persons who might legitimately consider themselves excluded from the consultation on the scrutiny. Though I accept the explanation that it was not intended, yet I think that from that phraseology of the letter, and that separation of classes, pointedly excluding the clergy, they might have reasonably concluded that they were the persons to whom it was intended to apply the taint and suspicion of being "a band of unscrupulous intriguers."

Now this is a matter not to be lost sight of, when I am considering the acts which were subsequently done by the bishop and clergy. If I think it reasonable that they might arrive at that conclusion, though now having heard the explanation on oath rejecting that supposition as a matter of fact, I have asked myself whether it is conclusive; and can I hesitate to believe, when I have the positive swearing of the bishop that it was intended as an insult to himself and to his clergy; that they so considered it, even though Mr. O'Flaherty did not intend it? I do believe that; and although I think that different men might put a different construction upon that letter, with the classification which I have pointed out of the persons to whom the question was to be submitted into three divisions, each and every of them excluding the Roman Catholic clergy, I say the primary and reasonable explanation of it is that which they adopted. Then very strong measures are taken, I admit, though far as the poles away from anything that occurred in this Mayo case, and far as the poles away from what was laid down by Sir Samuel Romilly as constituting the offence of undue influence. Where is the evidence here that religious influences were brought to bear to arouse the superstitious fears or the pious hopes of the electors of this borough? Where is the evidence here that the electors of this borough were alarmed by the horrors of eternal misery, or that their drooping spirits were upheld by the prospect of eternal happiness, promised to them by their bishop or their priests? The evidence scatters such a charge to the wind. If those apprehensions were entertained, if those hopes were held out, how came it to pass that 432 electors, including 118 freemen who are described as being in a most abject position in life, were not intimidated or influenced by either of those means? But, as a matter of fact, were their superstitious fears practised upon, or were their religious hopes excited? I did not hear one tittle of evidence of anything of the kind.

The intimidation is divided by Dr. Seeds into spiritual intimidation practised by the bishop upon his clergy, and by the clergy, under his dictation, on the people. I am not here as a censor of the manners of the ecclesiastics of my own or any other church; that is not my province. I have merely to inquire, just as any other judge would do, no matter what his religious belief might be, whether the spiritual influence of the Roman Catholic clergy was brought to bear unduly upon the minds of their congregations, so as to deter them from the free use of their franchise? I may entertain, and I do entertain, opinions about some of the transactions disclosed in this case; and I must say that they do not coincide with those which evidently were entertained by a bishop of my own church. I do not approve of the most sacred mystery which is known to the Roman Catholic Church, or to every Christian in the Roman Catholic Church—that sacred and solemn mystery in which every true Roman Catholic believes that the sacrifice of Calvary is repeated in the atoning blood of our Saviour—being suspended to deliver a political discourse; of the devout minds, whose hopes and expectations are bent upon the celebration of that sacred rite, being diverted or confused by the brawl of an election battle. But, exercising my own opinion, I gave it there; it is due to the right reverend prelate to say that he never preached himself until the sacrifice of the Mass had been concluded; but not so with other clergymen. It is described, as we Roman Catholics all understand, that after the first Gospel, the celebration of the Mass was suspended, in order to lecture the people upon the subject of the conflicting claims of the different candidates. I think it would be well, even, if the House of God were not made a place for delivering political discourses at all; but I pass that by as a matter of trifling importance. I recognise the full right of the Roman Catholic clergy to address their congregations; to advise them to canvass the merits of candidates; to tell them that one man is for the country, and that another man is against the country; and to tell them that this man is in favour of a church establishment which they think is more for the benefit of the people to have disestablished; to tell them that another man, though a Roman Catholic in profession, is yet playing the game of another candidate who is against the interests, in that respect, of the Roman Catholic population; nay, more, I would not hold a very hard and fast line as to language which, in excited times, might be used by Roman Catholic ecclesiastics or by civilians. They may be impatient; they may be zealous; they may be wrathful, provided they do not surpass the bounds of what is known to be legitimate influence. I heard nothing, as reported in the discourse of the right reverend prelate, which at all surpassed those bounds. There was no threat to suspend or refuse the rites of the church; there was no play upon the superstitious feelings of the people.

There was a question asked, whether the right reverend prelate treated with levity the phrase of "clerical dictation," and he said he did use the words "clerical dictation," and that he did treat it with levity, and he said it was the parrot-cry, I think, of the revolutionists in Europe. I am not disposed to quarrel with that observation at all; and the only thing in the whole of this case which even approached the confines of the rule as laid down in the authorities which I have cited, and in the resolutions of the House of Commons upon that Mayo case, was one piece of evidence given here by a man of the name of Brennan, as regards a clergyman of the name of Holahan, namely, that he had said that if anyone supported Captain O'Hara he would be a traitor to his God and to his country, and that he would deserve to have the brand of Cain upon him as a fugitive and a vagabond, as he is described in the Book of Genesis, "to whom the earth when tilled should not yield its fruits," whose iniquity, in his own language, was "greater than that it might deserve pardon." If that language had been proved to my satisfaction to have been used, I do not mean to go the length of saying that because of that I would avoid this election; but I do mean to say that it would be a transaction and a language which no man could attempt to justify, and which it was highly creditable to the lord bishop to have met at once with the fullest expression of his indignation. But was it used? Brennan said that it was used; that he heard Mr. Holahan say that anyone who would support Captain O'Hara would deserve to have the brand of Cain upon him. It is a very remarkable fact, bearing, as we go along, collateral testimony to the truthfulness of Mr. O'Flaherty (if it was necessary to bear any testimony to it, which I do not think it is), that he was in church upon that day, and that he did not hear those words, though he heard some reference made to himself. Possibly that may be accounted for by the fact that he was at the lower end of the Abbey Chapel, very near the door, and that he did not hear the words. Those are very remarkable words, if said aloud so that they they could be heard by the chapel congregation, and it is scarcely possible to think that Mr. O'Flaherty's attention would not have been fixed by them. Mr. Holahan is produced, and he swears most positively that his remarks were directed at bribery, in the way that he has explained, which was expected to be brought to bear upon the constituency by the Carlton Club. Those reports get abroad, but there is not a shadow of evidence in the case to show that even a shilling came from the Carlton Club, or from the highly respectable gentlemen who are members of it, to operate upon this constituency, or upon any other that I know of in Ireland. Possibly we may hear again of the warmth and hastiness of language used by Mr. Holahan.

But that is not the question which we have to decide here. We have a graver question to review here—would I void this election if that language was used? I do not say that I should, even if I were satisfied that that language was used in the sense represented to me by Brennan. Then it is said that Holahan said, why did he not go on; why had he not the courage to call us "surpliced ruffians"? That, if it were used, is very strong language. There is not a particle of evidence to show that Mr. O'Flaherty had spoken outside the range of that letter, even if it bears that construction, a single disrespectful word to the clergy of his own persuasion.

Then what else is there in the case? There is that transaction in the church by the bishop, in which, dealing with Father Spelman, his conduct has been impugned. I cannot step in, nor is it my province to decide, between a bishop and his clergy. I have nothing to do with that. I have only to do with it so far as it affects the election; and so far from its affecting the election, I think that both those gentlemen very distinctly showed upon the table that their affections and sympathies were very much enlisted in favour of Mr. O'Flaherty. There is just one scintilla of undue influence, namely, that Mr. Spelman's father said he could not vote for Mr. O'Flaherty in consequence of his son's position in the church; but that is a compound influence which is not at all the influence which would be required to invalidate an election. Again, Mr. Cullen said that he was placed in a most unenviable position by reason of the commands of his bishop. I must say that my sympathies are all enlisted for that gentleman. I hope he will be no sufferer by these transactions. It would be a pitiful thing if he were to be so. He is brought into a hard personal position by the necessities of the laws of our country, which compel every man to come into a court of justice and to give his evidence freely and frankly upon his oath. I saw nothing disrespectful to his superior in his manner, and I could find many a thing which would aggravate the temper in that transaction at the chapel. The bishop says that Father Cullen undertook to speak, and I believe him. Father Cullen says that he did speak, and that he thought that he had faithfully carried out what he had promised to do. These discrepancies will exist between the evidence of the best of men; but to be told to go back in the face of the congregation and again to address them, which he was obliged to do in a hypothetical form, for he says that he did not believe that Mr. O'Flaherty was aiding Mr. O'Hara, and that therefore he was obliged to say (or otherwise he could not have spoken the truth), "I am told that Mr. O'Flaherty is working indirectly for Mr. O'Hara, and if you believe that, you ought not to give him your support," I must say was a painful position to be placed in. Then there were those other little matters which might swell the volume of suspicion and aggravation, namely, that immediately after the election he ceased to occupy the position which he fancied was that of parish priest; for I only put it so far, because he was not canonically a parish priest, but he went by the name of parish priest; he was entered, at all events, on the Calendar as a parish priest, that being a calendar specially circulated, as I well know, among the Roman Catholic clergy. He was only mentioned as administrator in the book, which is a very expensive one, and does not find general circulation through the Catholic community, namely, "Thom's Guinea Directory." I believe that the "Catholic Directory" is a volume which you buy for half-a-crown, but with that again I have nothing to do. There is an act which the right reverend prelate thought that he had a perfect right to do as between him and his clergy. It is not for me to pass any observations on that head.

I come to the conclusion that those transactions and those speeches, though they may not

not be in conformity with the highest order of the most calm and deliberate advice; though I may be of opinion that a sounder model for ecclesiastical conduct could be found in the Apostle of the Gentiles, who discoursed of "righteousness, of temperance, and of judgment to come;" though I may think that a greater example could be found in him who said, "Most noble Festus, I am not mad, but speak the words of truth and soberness;" it is not what may be my opinion as to the conduct of ecclesiastics, my own or others', that is to govern here. I have only to ask myself, Have the legitimate bounds of influence been transgressed? Has the will of the people of this ancient borough been overborne? Has there, or has there not, been freedom of election? My opinion, within the authority and within the decisions; and the words of our greatest jurists to whom I have referred, is that no such intimidation and undue influence has been used as would justify me in declaring the last election for the borough of Galway not to have been, as I did declare, in consequence of the conduct of the Roman Catholic clergymen, the election for the borough of Drogheda not to have been, a free election. Let there be no exhibition of feeling. This is too serious a matter. I have a word or two more to say. There are cases mentioned here which have gone by the name of Lynch's cases, and which prove very clearly to my satisfaction that there were some 14 or 16 of the freemen of Galway with their votes in their pockets. There has also been proved to my satisfaction, upon the evidence of the conducting agent for Lord St. Lawrence, which must be taken as convincing indeed upon that subject, that there were at least 100 of the freemen of Galway who were, to use his own very graphic language, "soliciting encouragement." There have been those vulgar by-words and pass-words used, "crap," and "twine." There has been an impression left upon my mind that, at all events, a portion of the freemen of Galway are corrupt electors. Having come to that conclusion from the evidence, I can speak of the history of the past. A Royal Commission sat here, and it reported enormous numbers of them to have been corrupt voters. I make no doubt that the House of Commons will never think of going through the same idle form again of sending another Royal Commission to investigate the condition of the freemen. I shall report that that evidence has been given; but with the exception of that fact, I shall report that it has not been proved before me, and that I have not reason to believe, that corrupt practices have extensively prevailed in the borough of Galway at the last election.

Now I have done my task. I have tried to do it without the slightest prejudice towards either one side or the other. I have, I hope, succeeded in that effort; I have done my duty at all events fearlessly, and the consequences are for Providence. I hope I have not said anything in the discharge of my duty which could be construed into offence to any individual. Nothing was farther from my intention. I respect authority as I hope to have authority respected. I have great respect for the dignitaries of my own as of every other church, and I hope I have not travelled in the discharge of my duty out of the line which that feeling imposes. I have at the same time spoken with the most perfect freedom and frankness as regards my opinion of every person who was engaged in these transactions, no matter how high his position, lay or ecclesiastical.

I have nothing now further to add, except as to the question of costs. I have carefully considered that question; and I have arrived at a conclusion which, although it may seem to be inconsequential to some of those who take upon themselves to decide off-hand cases which they have never heard of, yet I am satisfied with the conclusion at which I have arrived; and I think the parties too, when they have a little time for calm reflection, will agree with me in the opinion I have formed. I think that the transaction connected with the payment at Mr. Kyle's house in Back-street, the absence of the proper documents which the law required to be filed, and the non-production of which left the petitioner here in the utmost doubt and uncertainty, amply justified his prosecuting a petition against the seat of Lord St. Lawrence; I think that the same total absence of compliance with the requisition of the statute by Sir Rowland Blennerhassett's agents, their absolute violation of the Act of Parliament in the most deliberate manner until the very morning when we came here to try this petition, and the questionable payment which I have declared not to attach to Sir Rowland Blennerhassett's return, the guilt of bribery, but which might well appear in that aspect to the petitioner, justify me in not directing, as I have directed in other cases, the costs of the petition to follow the result, but in coming to the conclusion that all the parties in these inquiries shall pay their own costs.

TAUNTON ELECTION.

Taunton.

JUDGMENT delivered by Mr. Justice Blackburn, 5 March 1869.

Mr. Justice Blackburn.] THERE are two questions raised by this petition, touching this election. The first is, the assertion in the petition that the election of Mr. Serjeant Cox, who was returned as the Member for the borough, is void, the consequence of which would be that there should be a new election. The other is, the claim of the seat on behalf of Mr. James, claiming that he ought to have been returned at the last election, and should now be the sitting Member for the borough.

The two matters come on together, but they involve different considerations. Upon the first the law has been well established, that where a person has been returned a Member of Parliament for a constituency, and it is made to appear that he has obtained his seat by any corrupt practice (I pass by other matters which are not relevant to the present question), committed by himself or his agents, the seat which he has obtained by means of that corrupt practice is not capable of being retained, and the election must be void, that being to a very considerable extent a matter affecting personally the candidate who has been returned (though, of course, involving the interests of the constituency also), depending very much upon what he, or his agents, for whom he is responsible, have done.

The second matter involves a different consideration. The Member who is returned for any constituency ought to be the Member who is elected by a majority of pure and unimpeached voters who vote at that particular election; if anyone failed to obtain such a majority, or (what comes to the same thing) if it cannot be proved that he has obtained such a majority, there must be a new election; that constituency must have a fresh choice to return such Member as they choose for the purpose. The distinction, therefore, is obvious there; it is not any longer a matter merely between the two candidates, but it involves the interests of the constituency. The constituency are, as one may say, parties to the question, and their interests must be considered as well as those of the sitting Member and the candidate who claims the seat; it is necessary in that case to see whether or no there is a majority of pure voters, and accordingly, every voter who is shewn to have been corrupted, must be struck off, for whomever he voted. It matters not whether he was corrupted by the sitting Member, or whether he was corrupted by the sitting Member's agents, or by a stranger; even if corrupted by the other side, I take for granted the man's vote is bad; if a man accepts a bribe for the purpose of voting, say for Mr. Serjeant Cox, and then, having been so corrupted, votes for Mr. James, his vote cannot be counted for Mr. James, any more than if Mr. James himself had bribed him. Or vice versâ if it were to be shewn that he had received a bribe, or was corrupted by somebody, to vote for Mr. James, and then voted for Mr. Serjeant Cox, his vote could not stand for Mr. Serjeant Cox, and must be struck off. The result is, that we have to see, without regard to who it was corrupted this man or that, what was the majority of uncorrupted voters, and whether there is a majority for anyone who has not rendered himself by personal misconduct incapable of standing. If there is such a majority, that person should be declared returned and substituted for the sitting Member; if that majority is not made out, there must be a new election in case it is shewn that the first election is void.

That being so, the first question to consider is, whether there is shewn here to have been corruption and bribery on the part of Mr. Serjeant Cox or his agents; I may say at once, there has been no evidence, and no ground given whatever, for saying that there was any personal bribery or personal corruption on the part of either candidate; I pass that by, taking it for granted that they are both personally untainted with anything of the nature of bribery.

The first question then is, has there been any corruption on the part of those for whom Mr. Serjeant Cox is responsible, such as to make his election, as far as he was concerned, void.

Now, the great matter which has been relied on has been what has been called barrister's court money, and the proceedings of the Conservative Association in paying that barrister's court money; and that matter I divide in this way. The first question is, to see if what has been shewn to have been done by the Conservative Association in paying that barrister's court money was a corrupt practice; and secondly, if that be established, whether the relation between Mr. Serjeant Cox and that Conservative Association, or those who acted for them, is such as to make him responsible for them as his agents.

Now, as to the first of these questions, it depends entirely, I think, upon the true construction of the Corrupt Practices Act, the 17 & 18 Vict. c. 102, section the 2nd, the first part of the section, and its proper application to the facts of the case. That section enacts, "that every person who shall, directly or indirectly by himself, or by any other person on his behalf, offer, promise, or promise to procure, or to endeavour to procure, to or for any person, on behalf of any voter, or to or for any other person, in order to induce any voter to vote or refrain from voting," is declared to be guilty of bribery. That is the section we have first to consider; it is, "every person who directly or indirectly by himself" gives money—I pass by everything else—"to any voter in order to induce any voter to vote at the election"; that is made bribery on the part of the person who gives it; it is a subsequent section that declares what shall be bribery on the part of the receiver. We have to see, taking that section, whether the facts here proved, do bring the Conservative Association, treated as if it were a person within that category, as having given money to voters to induce them to vote. Now, as far as that goes, the facts do not seem to be very much in dispute as to the broad outline of the facts. It appears that the registration in this particular year happened in September, at which time it was well known that there was going to be a contest very speedily in this borough, and throughout all England; I mention that date because it makes a substantial and important difference as a matter of evidence in considering the bearing of the matter. If there was a registration held, as probably a registration in this Autumn will be held, at the beginning of a Parliament when there was not likely to be a contested election for four or five years, one would hardly consider that any proceedings taken at the registration were intended to induce voters to vote afterwards, when we find that the canvass had already commenced at the time of the registration in September, and when the election was expected to come off and did come off about the middle of November, then it becomes far more probable that what was done in connection with the registration was to induce voters to vote; I only point that out as being one of the matters of evidence. At this time, when no doubt the revising barrister held his court, many persons who were claimants, some of whom were objected to, would attend at the barrister's court to support their case, or to see if any objection were made to their claims.

Now, what was done or professed to be done on the part of the Conservative Association, was to repay those persons for their loss of time, to give them a day's pay for their loss of time in attending the registration court. The matter differs in that way from what it would have been if there had been a payment given to them for their loss of time in attending at the election itself, which was the case in one of the cases cited by my brother Ballantine, the Devonport case, where the persons who were paid money were paid for their loss of time in attending to give their votes. Such payments, when given to a person for loss of time in coming to deliver his vote, inevitably it seems to me (I cannot see how there can be a doubt about it) are payments for voting, and are distinctly struck at by the express words of the section, which I shall refer to afterwards, when I come to speak of those who received the money.

That would be a distinct and clear case within the very terms of the Act; and there is nothing further than to say, was there a payment given to them for voting? But when the payment is given for an attendance at the revising barrister's court, it is not within the express terms of the Act. It may very well be that there should be a payment for an attendance at the barrister's court, which should be bonâ fide for that purpose, and no other, and which is not meant by the Act of Parliament. From the fact of paying a person money for attending to be put upon the register, it is a matter of inference, that, doubtless, the persons who put the voter on the register expected him to vote for their party; no doubt that would be in their minds at the time. Doubtless, if you were to pay a man direct for being put upon the register, and to offer a reward for every person who would himself come and be registered by the Conservative Association or the Liberal Association, as the case might be, it would not be as a matter of law that that would be a bribe for a vote; but it would be a matter of very strong observation, and there would be reasonable ground for inferring that those who paid people belonging to any particular political party, for coming and being put upon the register did expect, as part of what they were paying for, that they were to vote for that party when the election came. It would be a matter of fact, not of law, but the inference would be strong from it. When it is merely repaying them what may be called almost money out of pocket, the loss of a day's work, the inference is by no means so strong. It might be so or it might not; in each case it would be a matter of inference, looking at the facts, and a very important fact would be, whether or no an election was pending, or close approaching. It would require looking at that to see whether it was really or not paid to induce the votes, or whether it was really and bonâ fide a repayment for money out of pocket. I certainly think that it would be a wise thing on the part of all people to avoid making such payments at any time, because, certainly, it is always open to the observation and inference that it may be for the corrupt purpose of inducing the vote, and may therefore be considered bribery.

In the present case, however, we have to go a great deal further than that. I think where it was bonâ fide it would not be a bribe; where it was intended to induce a vote, which would be a matter to be collected from the whole of the facts, it would be a bribe. In the present case I have to consider whether what was proved was such as to lead me to the conclusion that I ought to say that these payments were made to induce the vote. ¶

First, we have to look at the dates. The registration was held in September; the election was coming off in the middle of November. About the first week in November these payments were made. Five shillings is a very liberal day's pay, but not in itself necessarily a corrupt one, though it is estimating the day's wages pretty high, still it is not necessarily corrupt, though open to observation. It would almost appear that it was practically paid to everyone who would come forward and ask for it. It may be that it was want of business habit; it may be that it was not intended, but no precaution seems to have been taken at all, except an endeavour to see that the man who came forward and claimed the 5s. was really a voter. No attempt seems to have been made to procure from the persons who came forward and had the 5s., any proof that if they had, in fact, attended the registration court; many of them I have no doubt had attended; many of them I have no doubt had not. I do not doubt, from the nature of the evidence, and the way in which it came out, that a great many (what number I cannot tell, but a considerable number) got the 5s. who had no claim at all to be the person, or to be claiming on behalf of the person in whose name they got it. I have very little doubt that there was a considerable quantity of embezzlement of the funds of the Conservative Association by persons who were not voters at all.

But that is not what I am concerned with at all at present, but to try to see what from the evidence is the conclusion which I ought to form of the motives of those who advanced the money. Now, when I find that a very considerable sum (we do not know with precision how much it was, certainly beyond 25*l.*; and there seems to be some reason to believe that it was something like 50*l.*) was paid to a large number of persons without any check at all to see that they really had done anything for it, with no precaution whatever, except to see that they were voters on the register, which they did endeavour to see; and that this payment was made a considerable time after the registration, and a very short time before the election came off, and made in this way to everybody who came forward to claim it; is there any reasonable ground for coming to any other conclusion than that the motive of those who advanced the money and paid it in that way was to induce persons to vote at the election? I have thought it over, and I cannot myself come to any other conclusion than that it was so.

If that be so, it is brought at once within the terms of the section I read, and the payments to those voters were payments made to induce the voter to vote; and, consequently, being made with that intention on the part of the person who paid it, they are bribery on the part of the payer of the money; whether or no they are corruption on the part of the person who receives it depends on another section. I may probably as well point out the difference between them at once. The 3rd section, the first part of it says, "every voter who shall before or during any election receive" (I pass over the words that do not bear upon this) "any money for voting or agreeing to vote, shall be deemed to be guilty of bribery." Now, it may very well be, as a matter of fact, that a person gives money (I have already said that I have come to the conclusion that persons did give money here) to all voters who would come forward and ask for it, saying and holding forth "this is paid for your loss of time at the revising barrister's court, and I will pay money for loss of time at the revising barrister's court to every voter who will come forward for it," having the full intention thereby to induce the voter to vote on his own side and in support of his own particular views; and yet it may so happen that the voter who comes forward and receives that 5s. does come forward honestly and bonâ fide, because he believes that he is entitled to the money for his loss of time; and if he honestly and bonâ fide comes forward in that way, I do not, as at present advised, think that it would be bribery on his part within the meaning of the clause. I need hardly point out that it is a question of fact, and as a general principle where a person comes forward to receive money which is given as a bribe, the general rule of evidence applies in all such cases one would naturally conclude very strongly that the persons took it as a bribe, though it by no means follows as a matter of law that it would be so, and in regard to this particular case there are many instances in which it would require a good deal of consideration to see whether it was so or not. Where a person has actually attended the revising barrister's court either because he was obliged to do so, or because he thought he was obliged to do so, and has actually lost a day's time in attending there (and the matter to be considered is a matter of fact to see whether that was so), it is not a very strained or unreasonable inference in his favour to say that he may have taken the 5s., unquestionably believing that he was entitled to it, and not believing it to be for his vote. Where, on the other hand, a man has not attended the revising barrister's court, but has literally done nothing for it, and has not a pretence or colour for it, he may (I will not say as a matter of law he may not) believe that he is entitled to receive 5s. for going there; but I think that there would be a very strong inference in such a case, and the natural inference would be that when he took the 5s., having nothing else to give for it but his vote, he took it for his vote; and his name would be struck off on a scrutiny. I need not say that in such a case the constituency would be concerned. We must necessarily look at every individual case by itself and see in the interests of the constituency, is this really a bad vote, and one which ought to be struck off so as to see what the majority of pure votes were? It is not an inquiry that I am particularly desirous to invite, but I feel bound to enter into it, case by case and name by name; and you, brother Ballantine and Mr. Rodwell, must consider for yourselves both of you, whether that can be done, and how far it can be done.

What I have just said may rather be considered as a parenthesis, and now I have to proceed with the second question as to whether or no there is sufficient evidence of the agency in this case. Now, upon that the rule of law has long been established, and has been ratified by acts as I think, that in Parliamentary matters we are not to consider the strict rule of common law agency generally established to this extent, that a person is responsible for his agent in all that he does within the scope of his authority, but is not responsible for anything that he does beyond the scope of his authority. There is one exception exception in the case of the sheriff but I may pass that by. So that the common rule of law would be, if you employed a man to do an honest thing, and he chose to commit a crime, you would never be responsible criminally, but beyond that you would not be even responsible civilly for the crime committed when the instructions you gave him were to act as an honest man. But in Parliamentary election law it has long been established that, where a person has employed an agent for the purpose of procuring his election, he, the candidate, is responsible for the act of that agent in committing corruption, though he himself not only did not intend it or authorise it, but though bonâ fide he did his best to hinder it.

The rule must, at times, fall with great hardship upon particular persons. But I may just mention the considerations which no doubt led the common law, as I may call it, of Parliament, to establish it. Corruption, as we all know, in practice, and in fact, is seldom or never done by the hand of the candidate. The two modes in which it was found in practice that corruption was carried on, were, I take it, principally these: persons were put forward to do all the work of canvassing and conducting an election, who did it corruptly, the candidate purposely keeping himself out of knowledge of anything about the matter, or being kept by his friends purposely out of knowledge of the matter, so that he should have the full benefit of their services; and were it not for this rule which has been established he would not suffer for their misdeeds; he would put forward a person to be his agent, and conduct his election and win for him, telling him to do it by fair means; if the man won it by foul means he would have the benefit of it. That is one of the great reasons. Another great reason would be, that no doubt people were put forward, as to whom the candidate was carefully kept from knowing that they were spending any money, or doing anything, with the notion, according to the loose morality that prevailed in election matters, that when the time for petitioning was past, those persons might come to him and say, "I did spend that 1,000 l. for you upon the election; of course I did not tell you about it, or say a word about it, and now you are bound in honour to repay me that 1,000 l. of which you had the benefit," and which, in point of fact, the candidates did, I have no doubt, with some grumbling, feel themselves bound in honour to pay; accordingly that was another reason, that wherever a person was in such a relation to the candidate, that there would be reason to apprehend that in consequence following, there the Parliamentary law was a motive for declaring that the candidate should be responsible for the act of his agent. Those were the guiding principal motives that induced, I was going to say the enacting, of the law, but I should rather say the establishing of the law in practice.

Now comes the important and difficult question, to say what is the definition of agency, for which the candidate would be responsible; what relation between the candidate and the person who is shown to be guilty of a corrupt practice, would be sufficient to make the candidate responsible for that person's corrupt practice; and upon that I have, of course, done my best to find what others may have spoken about it, and have done my best to reflect upon it myself; and I am not able at present (and I rather doubt if in the nature of things it is possible) to give a precise definition of it. I think that all one can do is this, to say, that wherever a person is in any way allowed by a candidate, or has the candidate's sanction for it, to try to carry on his election and to act for him, that is some evidence to show that he is an agent. I think that we cannot come further (at least I have not been able to come further) than to say this: if in the ordinary course of things I had a jury to find the facts, I being a judge of the law, the direction I should give to the jury would be, to say, "All this is some evidence of agency; what I must say to you is to point out what I consider to be the reasons that have led to the law being established in this way;" in the present case the particular consideration would be, whether or no the agent had been doing so much for the candidate, whether there was so much commodum done that it would be just (using the Latin phrase quoted by Mr. Rodwell) to impose the onus upon him; I think I could not define it better than that I should say to a jury, "It is a question of more or less; it is the extent to which it goes. If there is evidence to show that the party is acting for the Member who is returned, then, I think, one should consider him to be an agent; if, taking the spirit and object of the rule, you think, bringing your common sense to bear upon it, that he was substantially an agent," I think that is all I could say to a jury; and then, as the Legislature have thought fit to make me both judge and jury, I must apply that guide as best I can myself. I at once see the great inconvenience of such a rule being laid down in this. If that be the proper guide to be taken, the law must be very uncertain. It is an old observation of Selden in his "Table Talk" upon Equity, as then administered, when there were no fixed rules, but according to the conscience of the Chancellor, that equity necessarily is as uncertain as a measure of length in which the writ was made the Chancellor's foot, because a Chancellor's conscience was as variable as the length of a Chancellor's foot; a remark with strong sense in it, and no doubt as applicable to the substantial common sense of an election judge as it was to the conscience of the Chancellor in those days. But I have been unable, after the best consideration I have been able to give to it, to devise any better rule. I shall be excessively glad, for my part, if the Legislature can find out a better rule and make an enactment to apply hereafter. I shall be excessively glad if other judges can discover a better rule. I have not yet been able to do so; but I must act as best I can, according to my light.

Then we have to see upon this particular case what the evidence comes to, and that is not excessively great. The evidence, I think, establishes this, that there was a Conservative association, of which Mr. Turle and Mr. Sheppard were two members who were called by the petitioners. And I may observe at once that I think, as regards Mr. Turle and Mr. Sheppard, who were undoubtedly partisans, and might be expected to be partisans, on Mr. Serjeant Cox's side, though they were inclined to get a little irritated and angry under cross-examination, I did not see the slightest ground for doubting that they both honestly spoke the whole truth to the best of their knowledge and belief. I daresay there were little inaccuracies in what they said, and perhaps there were some matters not clearly explained; but I saw no reason to induce me to suppose they were not speaking the truth as honest witnesses. From their evidence I gather this: that this association was formed as a body for the purpose principally of conducting the registration, and also for the purpose of conducting the election. Whence they got the funds, or how they got the funds, those gentlemen were not able to tell us with any precision. The parties who could have told us have not been called, and we cannot tell where they got the funds, but they did get funds, and those funds were deposited in a bank; and the arrangement with the bank, no doubt, was to honour cheques that were presented signed, I am not quite sure whether by three members, of whom Mr. Turle was one, or whether by any one of those three, or any two of those three; but I have no doubt that the fact was that cheques upon the balance at the bank were to be signed by two or more of those members. Mr. Turle did sign the two cheques which were applied to the purpose of making the payments on this occasion; and he, after being examined both by Mr. Serjeant Ballantine and myself, was unable to say when it was agreed that the money should be paid, or who it was gave the directions that it was to be paid. The result was, that I drew the conclusion that the fact was that, though he signed the cheques, he was not the active member managing the matter; that, though he signed the cheques, he was directed, I suppose, by the secretary, Mr. Clarke; and when Mr. Clarke, the secretary, told him that it was right to sign the cheque, he took it upon his word, and signed it. I mention that as pointing to the conclusion I should draw from what Mr. Turle said, who knew but little more about it than that money in November was advanced, though whether it was 25 £, or, as would appear to be indicated by the ticks on the book, about 50 £, one cannot precisely tell. I may observe that one thing that leads me to believe that Turle and Sheppard were properly and honestly fulfilling their duty as witnesses, is the way in which that book was produced. It was unknown to the petitioners. It was suggested that there was a book. Mr. Turle answered, with every appearance of sincerity, that there was such a book. He said, "It may or may not be at my house." Then he was asked to go and look for it; and he did go and look for it, and found it, and brought it. That at once produced the impression upon my mind that he was honestly telling the truth. Had he said, as a partisan witness might have said, that the book was lost or destroyed, I might have entertained a different view of the matter. I pass that by. Then we find that this association was formed; that they took a room at No. 2, Hammett-street. When they took it does not precisely appear. The landlord said they entered into possession in October. It appears that that must be inaccurate, or else they were twice occupying the room, because it appears from the evidence both of the man Trent, who was the messenger, and Mr. Cross, the printer, that there were some of these things done in this room just before the registration in September; and I think it seems probable, from what one of the other witnesses said, that the room was really taken in August, and not in October, and that Mr. Norman made a mistake in the time. It is not impossible that the higher rent of 1 £ was to begin in October instead of August. At all events they took this room, and had this room at the time of the registration, and at the time of the election; and this thus appears, that during the election, in that room the association did all those things which would commonly be done by a committee for promoting an election. They issued circulars; people met there, and sent out circulars; they circulated papers from there, and had messengers there. Now, all this was done by them in this way; and it appears distinctly enough that it was done openly, and must have been over a considerable time. They were known to be actively acting on the canvass in favour of Mr. Serjeant Cox, and there was every probability that Mr. Serjeant Cox and his agents would know it, from its being a matter that there was no secret about.

Then, further, there is distinct evidence that at the time of the registration Mr. Cox's agents were aware of this association working there, and that they acted in concert with them, and helped them by sending circulars, and causing circulars to be printed, which were paid for by Mr. Sheppard. That does not come to very much, but it brings the thing to this point, which is the point upon which I think the important case turns. We have it that this body are acting as canvassers for Mr. Cox, actively acting in promoting the election at this time, and that fact, I think, we must fairly take it, was known to him and his people.

Now does that, without taking any more, raise a prima facie case which would call for an answer? I think it does. I think when it appears that things are done openly in that way, which in the ordinary course of things would not be done, except with the cognisance of a candidate who sanctioned them, the fair and natural inference, in the absence of proof to the contrary, would be that they were done by a person acting as agent for the candidate. If that be so, then there is some evidence arising upon that, and the principle of the chimney sweep's case, Armory v. Delamirie, 1 Smith's Leading Cases, at once applies very strongly. I am very far, indeed, from thinking that that evidence which I have mentioned would be conclusive at all. I think it was quite open to Mr. Cox himself and his agents, to have been called to show that they had no communication with that body; that that they repudiated it, and if that repudiation was bonâ fide, they would not certainly be responsible for their acts. I should be sorry to lay down, for example, that every Liberal candidate in London should be responsible for the acts of the Reform League. Many similar cases might be supposed. The candidate may show that the body acting in that way was acting officiously for him, as I may call it, that it was not with his consent, and was against his will; but the presumption does arise, I think, that it was done in his favour, done for him, unless there be something to show the contrary. Then, taking it, as I said before, as a matter of common sense, looking to the substantial degree to which they went, I think the degree goes very far. I think, in this case, such a degree of benefit would be derived from their assistance, that their assistance was so important to the candidate, that it fairly establishes this, that if he took their assistance, did not hold them off, or repudiate them, he must abide the consequences, and be responsible for their malpractices. And, coming to that conclusion, it does establish this, I think, that the election of Mr. Serjeant Cox cannot stand, for this reason, that I think it is shown that those who were his agents were guilty of bribery in giving money with the intent to induce voters to vote.

I have already pointed out that the other question, whether or no that is to change the seat, must depend upon this: whether, upon going through the individual cases, and the individual votes, after striking off the bad ones on each side, the majority is turned. Upon that, as yet, I decide nothing.

Mr. Rodwell.] I feel bound to say after the very plain language your Lordship has used with reference to the acts of those parties who are said to have received money from Mr. Sheppard in respect of services not done, I should merely be keeping this case up unnecessarily, and it would be a waste of time in me to oppose Mr. James putting in at once a number of voters to give him a lawful majority, and therefore, for the sake of the public time, and upon every other consideration, whatever may be the result, I do not feel justified in struggling on after that decision, because of course it must affect a very large number of votes. I was only waiting to know what your decision was before I made that announcement; therefore I will just ask my learned friend to see which are those votes that come under the terms of your judgment, and then, I trust, that will save your Lordship and the public any further time.

Mr. Justice Blackburn.] Very well, that will make it of course much shorter.

Mr. Rodwell admitted that eight names ought to be struck off, being parochial relief cases, and also eight other names of non-residents.

The following names were also struck off:

James Sheppard, Edward Crawley, John Chiggey, Mark Besley, William Smith, Robert Hughes, Abraham Cann, James Edney, Henry Calbraith, John Dean, James Coles.

Four witnesses were examined, viz., Thomas Wood, William Littlejohn, William Tucker, and William Stuckey.

Mr. Justice Blackburn.] That turns the scale; I think that makes 29. The Act giving me no discretion; I must mention the names of all those witnesses, but as they have all spoken the truth, they will each be entitled to a certificate to relieve them from any responsibility. The only thing further to be done is, I must direct, as the petition has succeeded, that costs must be paid by the respondent. It is necessary also that I should mention in my Report to the Speaker, for the information of the House, that this corrupt practice has extensively prevailed; that there has been this extensive paying of money; but I shall also at the same time explain in my certificate what sort of corrupt practice it was, that it may be understood at once that it was not as if persons had been bribed by large sums. It is a corrupt practice which extensively prevailed, but probably the House would not look upon it as being so bad as other kinds of bribery. I think that is all I have to determine.

Mr. Rodwell.] Your Lordship has to declare your decision in regard to the scrutiny.

Mr. Justice Blackburn.] Of course my certificate will be that Mr. Serjeant Cox is unseated, and that Mr. James ought to have been seated, and ought to have been returned, and should be returned now.

NEW WINDSOR ELECTION.

[Received 16 February 1869.]

Windsor, 15 January 1869.

New Windsor.

IN the Matter of a Petition to the Court of Common Pleas, under "The Parliamentary Elections Act, 1868," by Robert Richardson Gardner, Esq., a candidate at the last Parliamentary Election for the Borough of New Windsor, against Roger Eykyn, Esq., who was upon that occasion elected and returned; which Petition alleged, amongst other things, corrupt practices to have been committed at the election, and prayed that it might be determined that the said Roger Eykyn was not duly elected, and ought not to have been returned, and that the said Robert Richardson Gardner was duly elected, and ought to have been returned, or that the election was void; I, being one of the Judges for the Trial of Election Petitions in England, having heard and determined the said Petition, do certify and report as follows:—

1. That Roger Eykyn, the Member whose return is complained of by the petition, was duly elected and returned.

2. That no corrupt practice was proved to have been committed by, or with the knowledge or consent of, any candidate at such election.

3. Upon the evidence before me, it does not appear that corrupt practices have, nor that there is reason to believe that corrupt practices have, extensively prevailed at the election.

4. After the close of the petitioner's case, and the address of the respondent's counsel in answer thereto, the petitioner's counsel stated in effect that his client, the petitioner, felt that the charge of corrupt practices was not made out against the respondent, and that the petitioner did not desire to proceed to a scrutiny.

5. Whereupon, and after hearing the examination of the respondent and two of his alleged agents, I was satisfied that the course taken was not the result of compromise; and I did not require the counsel for the respondent to proceed further, nor did I consider it my duty to initiate a general inquiry into the proceedings at the election.

To the Right Honourable
the Speaker of the House of Commons.

J. S. WILLES.

WEXFORD BOROUGH ELECTION.

[Received 16 February 1869.]

Wexford.

COURT OF COMMON PLEAS, IRELAND.

IN the Matter of the Petition of John Sutton, Thomas Edward Cavanagh, John Wheelock, James Jones, Patrick Brian, Michael Hughes, Petitioners; Richard Joseph Devereux, Respondent.

THE petition in this matter was duly presented to this court; and it appearing to the court that the case raised by the said petition could be conveniently stated as a special case, such case was so stated, a copy of which is annexed hereto, and the same was duly heard on this day before the court; and thereupon the court determined as follows:—

First. That the said Richard Joseph Devereux was not duly elected.

Second. That the said Standish Motte was not duly elected.

Third. That the said election was void.

And the court doth accordingly hereby certify to the Right Honourable the Speaker of the House of Commons,—

First. That the said Richard Devereux was not duly elected.

Second. That the said Standish Motte was not duly elected.

Third. That the said election for the borough of Wexford was a void election.

Dated this 12th day of January 1869.

Signed on behalf of the court,

JAMES HENRY MONAHAN,

Chief Justice, C. P.

GUILDFORD ELECTION.

[Received 16 February 1869.]

Judges' Chambers, 23 January 1869.

Guildford.

IN the Matter of a Petition presented to the Court of Common Pleas, under "The Parliamentary Elections Act, 1868," by William Edward Elkins and others, being persons entitled to vote at the last Parliamentary Election for the Borough of Guildford, against Guildford Hillier Mainwaring Ellerker Onslow, Esq., who was upon that occasion elected and returned; which Petition alleged, amongst other things, corrupt practices to have been committed at the election, and prayed that it might be determined that the said Guildford Hillier Mainwaring Ellerker Onslow, Esq., was not duly elected, and that the election was void.

I, SIR JAMES SHAW WILLES, being one of the Judges for the Trial of Election Petitions in England, having heard and determined the said petition, do certify and report as follows:—

1. That Guildford Hillier Mainwaring Ellerker Onslow, Esq., the Member whose return is complained of by the petition, was duly elected and returned.

2. That no corrupt practice was proved to have been committed by, or with the knowledge or consent of, any candidate at such election.

3. Upon the evidence before me, it does not appear that corrupt practices have, nor that there is reason to believe that corrupt practices have, extensively prevailed at the election.

4. That James Corson and John Glynn, whose names were upon the register of voters, but who had ceased to reside, were induced to vote for the sitting Member by a promise of their expenses, conditional upon their so voting, made by Robert William Handford, and that after their voting they asked and received from him, in pursuance of that promise, each 5*l.*, being more than their respective expenses. It did not, however, appear that Handford knew of the excess, or meant corruptly to reward them by an overpayment.

To the Right Honourable
the Speaker of the House of Commons.

J. S. WILLES.

BEWDLEY ELECTION.—(No. 1.)

[Received 16 February 1869.]

COURT for the Trial of an Election Petition for the Borough of Bewdley, in the County of Worcester, between Charles Sturge and John Baldwin, Petitioners; and Sir Richard Attwood Glass, Respondent.

Bewdley (No. 1.)

Sir,

Bewdley, 25 January 1869.

IN compliance with the directions of "The Parliamentary Elections Act, 1868," I hereby certify that the above-named Sir Richard Attwood Glass was not duly elected, and that the above election was void.

And I report that it was not proved that any corrupt practice had been committed with the knowledge and consent of any candidate at the above election.

That Robert Acton Pardoe, attorney-at-law, an agent for Sir Richard Attwood Glass, and George Baker Burmish, also an agent for Sir Richard Attwood Glass, were guilty of corrupt treating at the said election.

That Stephen Fort accepted a bribe of 10*s.* from one John Taylor, to induce him to vote for Sir Richard Attwood Glass, and afterwards voted against him.

That James Hunt was bribed to vote for Sir Richard Attwood Glass by 5*l.*, advanced to him as a loan by Christopher Pountney.

That Abram John Hamer was bribed to vote for Sir Richard Attwood Glass, but it was not proved who gave the bribe, or how much it was.

That Isaac Leverton, Herbert Burton, and Richard Millington, being at Bristol, were induced to come to Bewdley to vote for Sir Richard Attwood Glass by having their expenses from Bristol and back paid them, and would not have voted had this not been done. That it was not proved who advanced the money; nor did it appear that the money paid them, though it was an illegal payment, exceeded the reasonable expenses, so as to be a cloak for what, in popular language, would be called bribery.

That it was proved that corrupt treating by opening public-houses did extensively prevail at the election.

No evidence was given of any treating on behalf of Mr. Lloyd, the unsuccessful candidate.

Bewdley (No. 1).

That it was proved that a practice extensively prevailed, on both sides, of employing and paying a large number of persons as what was called "watchers," who rendered no service of any value in return. That this practice appears to have been kept up at Bewdley because it was formerly the practice at old elections, and is very objectionable, for the same reasons as those which have induced the Legislature to prohibit treating.

There is reason to believe that the payments were made to influence voters connected with the watchers; and also, that voters themselves were so employed, though no proof was given of any voter having been actually paid.

There was no reason to believe that direct bribery extensively prevailed at the election.

I have, &c.

COLIN BLACKBURN,
Judge of the said Court.

To the Right Honourable the Speaker.

DUMFRIES COUNTY ELECTION.

[Received 16 February 1869.]

Edinburgh, 26 January 1869.

Dumfries.

IN the Petition of Major George Gustavus Walker to have the election of Sir Sydney Hedley Waterlow, Knight, as Member of Parliament for the County of Dumfries, in November 1868, set aside as void.

THE report of Lord Cowan, one of the election judges for Scotland.

This petition was lodged with the prescribed officer on the 14th of December 1868.

The trial of the petition was fixed for Monday the 1st of February 1869.

Thereafter an application having been made by the petitioner to withdraw the petition, the parties were heard upon this application before me on the 22nd of January 1869, and after due notice no other party having appeared proposing that he should be substituted as petitioner, the petition was of same date held to be withdrawn, the petitioner being found liable in costs to the respondent in terms of the statute.

I have further to report that the withdrawal of this petition was not, in my opinion, the result of any arrangement between the petitioner and respondent, or any other party, and that there was no petition against the return of Sir Sydney Hedley Waterlow, as Member of Parliament for the county of Dumfries, other than that by Major Walker, withdrawn, as aforesaid.

To the Right Honourable
the Speaker of the House of Commons.

JOHN COWAN.

DROGHEDA ELECTION.

[Received 16 February 1869.]

Drogheda.

COURT for the Trial of an Election Petition for the Borough of Drogheda, between Sir F. Leopold M'Clintock, Petitioner, and Benjamin Whitworth, Respondent.

THE petition between the aforesaid parties came on for trial before me at Drogheda on the 15th, 16th, 18th, and 19th days of January 1869; and thereupon I determined as follows:—

First. That Benjamin Whitworth, Esq., is not duly elected a Burgess to serve in the present Parliament for the borough and county of the town of Drogheda.

Second. That said election for said borough and county of the town of Drogheda is a void election.

Third. That Benjamin Whitworth, Esq., was by himself and by his agents guilty of undue influence at the said election for said borough and county of the town of Drogheda.

Fourth. That a system of intimidation was organised and carried out at the last election for the said borough and county of the town of Drogheda, subversive of the freedom of election; and outrages were committed which were calculated to deter, and did, in fact, deter, a considerable number of voters from exercising their franchise at the last election.

Fifth. That Benjamin Whitworth, Esq., shall pay the costs of this petition.

And

And I do accordingly hereby certify to the Right Honourable the Speaker of the House of Commons,—

Drogheda.

First. That the said Benjamin Whitworth, Esq., is not duly elected a Burgess to serve in the present Parliament for the borough and county of the town of Drogheda.

Second. That said election for said borough and county of the town of Drogheda is a void election.

Third. That Benjamin Whitworth, Esq., was by himself and by his agents guilty of undue influence at the said election for said borough and county of the town of Drogheda.

Fourth. That a system of intimidation was organised and carried out at the last election for the said borough and county of the town of Drogheda, subversive of the freedom of election; and outrages were committed which were calculated to deter, and did, in fact, deter, a considerable number of voters from exercising their franchise at the last election for said borough of the county of the town of Drogheda.

Dated this 25th day of January 1869.

WILLIAM KEOGH,
One of the Judges on the Rota for the Trial of Election Petitions in Ireland.

This certificate is accompanied by a copy of the evidence given at the trial, as taken by the shorthand writer of the House of Commons, sworn by me, pursuant to the Statute.

WILLIAM KEOGH.

LIMERICK CITY ELECTION.

[Received 16 February 1869.]

IN the Matter of an Election Petition for the Borough of Limerick, between Daniel Ryan, Thomas McKnight, Mathew Brennan, Robert Stacpool, Thomas McNamara, and Denis Grimes, Petitioners; and George Gavin and Francis William Russell, Respondents.

Limerick.

I DO hereby certify to the Right Honourable the Speaker that a court for the trial of the above petition was holden before me at Limerick on the 19th, 20th, 21st, 22nd, 23rd, and 25th days of January 1869, and that at the conclusion of the trial on the said 25th day of January, I determined that the said George Gavin and Francis William Russell were both duly elected as Members to serve in Parliament for the county of the city of Limerick, being the borough aforesaid.

And I do hereby further report that no corrupt practice was proved to have been committed by, or with the knowledge and consent of, any candidate at such election, and that I have no reason to believe that corrupt practices extensively prevailed at the said election.

A copy of the said petition, and a copy of the evidence given at the trial, as taken by the deputy of the shorthand writer of the House of Commons, pursuant to the said Act, accompany this my certificate.

Given under my hand at Dublin on this 26th day of January 1869.

F. A. FITZGERALD,
A Baron of the Exchequer in Ireland, and one of the Judges for the time being for the Trial of Election Petitions in Ireland, pursuant to
"The Parliamentary Elections Act, 1868."

ATHLONE ELECTION.

[Received 16 February 1869.]

COURT OF COMMONS PLEAS, IRELAND.

Athlone.

IN the Matter of the Petition of John Stamford, Esq., of Jermyn-street, Middlesex, Petitioner; John James Ennis, Esq., Respondent.

THE said Court of Common Pleas, in pursuance of the provisions of the 36th section of said Act, do hereby report to the Right Honourable the Speaker of the House of Commons,—

That the petition in this matter, a copy of which is hereunto annexed, was duly presented to this court on the 17th day of December 1868.

And that the petitioner, on the 27th day of January instant, applied to the court, by special application, pursuant to the said statute, for leave to withdraw said petition.

3 A 4

And

Athlone.

And it appearing to the court that the notice of the said application required by said Act had been given in the said borough, and no person having applied to be substituted as petitioner instead of the said John Stamford,

The court, on said 27th day of January, made an order permitting the said petition to be withdrawn, and same has been withdrawn accordingly.

And the court do hereby report to the Right Honourable the Speaker of the House of Commons, that, in their opinion, the withdrawal of said petition was not the result of any corrupt arrangement, or in consideration of the withdrawal of any other petition.

Signed on behalf of the court this 29th day of January 1869.

JAMES HENRY MONAHAN,
Chief Justice Common Pleas.

To the Right Honourable
the Speaker of the House of Commons.

LICHFIELD ELECTION.

[Received 16 February 1869.]

Lichfield.

Common Pleas Chamber, 1 February 1869.

IN the Matter of a Petition to the Court of Common Pleas, under "The Parliamentary Elections Act, 1868," by the Honourable Augustus Henry Archibald Anson, a candidate at the last Parliamentary Election for the City of Lichfield, against Richard Dyott, Esq., who was upon that occasion elected and returned; which Petition alleged, amongst other things, corrupt practices to have been committed at the election, and prayed that it might be determined that the said Richard Dyott was not duly elected, and ought not to have been returned, and that the said Augustus Henry Archibald Anson was duly elected, and ought to have been returned, or that the election was void.

I, SIR JAMES SHAW WILLES, Knight, one of the Judges for the trial of Election Petitions in England, having heard and determined the said petition, do certify and report as follows:

1. Richard Dyott, Esq., the Member whose return is complained of by the petition, was duly elected and returned.
2. No corrupt practice was proved to have been committed by, or with the knowledge or consent of, any candidate at such election.
3. Upon the evidence before me it does not appear that corrupt practices have, nor that there is reason to believe that they have, extensively prevailed at the election.

To the Right Honourable
the Speaker of the House of Commons.

J. S. WILLES.

CARLOW BOROUGH ELECTION.

[Received 16 February 1869.]

Carlow Borough.

COURT OF COMMON PLEAS, IRELAND.

IN the Matter of the Petition of Richard Boardman, of Carlow, wheelwright and carpenter, Petitioner; and William Fagan, Esq., Respondent.

THE said Court of Common Pleas, in pursuance of the provisions of the 36th section of said Act, do hereby report to the Right Honourable the Speaker of the House of Commons,—

That the petition in this matter was duly presented to this court on the 16th day of December 1868, and that the petitioner, on the 26th day of January instant, applied to the court by special application, pursuant to the said statute, for leave to withdraw said petition.

And it appearing to the court that the notice of the said application required by said Act had been given in the said borough, and no person having applied to be substituted as petitioner instead of the said Richard Boardman,

The court, on said 26th day of January, made an order permitting the said petition to be withdrawn, and same has been withdrawn accordingly.

And the court do hereby report to the Right Honourable the Speaker of the House of Commons that, in their opinion, the withdrawal of the said petition was not the result of any corrupt arrangement, or in consideration of the withdrawal of any other petition.

Signed on behalf of the court this 29th day of January 1869.

JAMES HENRY MONAHAN,
Chief Justice Common Pleas.

To the Right Honourable
the Speaker of the House of Commons.

NORWICH ELECTION.

[Received 16 February 1869.]

22 January 1869.

Norwich.

I, SIR SAMUEL MARTIN, Knight, one of the Barons of the Court of Exchequer, and one of the Judges for the time being for the Trial of Election Petitions in England, do hereby, in pursuance of the said Act, certify,—

1. That upon the 14th day of January instant and several days following, I duly held a court at Norwich for the trial of, and did try, the election petition for the city of Norwich, between Jacob Henry Tillett, petitioner, and Sir Henry Josias Stracey, respondent.

2. And, in further pursuance of the said Act, I certify that, at the conclusion of the said trial, I determined that the said Sir Henry Josias Stracey, being the Member whose return and election were complained of in the said petition, was not duly elected, and that his election was void; and I do hereby certify in writing such my determination to you.

3. And whereas charges were made in the said petition of corrupt practices having been committed at said election; in further pursuance of said Act I report as follows:—

4. That no corrupt practice was proved to have been committed by, or with the knowledge or consent of, any of the candidates at the said election; and, further, that it was proved to my satisfaction that neither the said Sir Henry Josias Stracey, or the other candidates at the said election, had any personal knowledge of, or connection whatever with, bribery or any other illegal or corrupt practice.

5. And I further report, that the names of persons who were proved at the trial to have been guilty of corrupt practices are Robert Hardiment, Arthur Hunt, Robert Callow, and Thomas Hutchings.

6. And I further report, that corrupt practices did prevail at the said election, and that there is reason to believe that corrupt practices did extensively prevail at the same, and that they were of the nature stated in my special report, which follows.

7. And I do further, in pursuance of the said Act, make this special report as to matters which arose in the course of the said trial, an account of which ought, in my judgment, to be submitted to the House of Commons.

At the middle of the day of polling Sir William Russell and Mr. Tillett, the Liberal candidates, had a considerable majority, and there is no reason to believe that up to this time any corrupt vote had been given on either side; but from thence until the close of the poll I believe that bribery was extensively committed in order to procure the election of Sir Henry Josias Stracey. So far as the evidence went, the voters who were bribed were of one class, viz., workmen or labourers for daily wages. These people did not go to work that day, but collected in considerable numbers in and about public-houses and beershops, and there waited to be bribed. Some of them either of themselves thought, or it was suggested to them by others, that it was reasonable and just they should be paid their day's wages by the candidate for whom they voted. It may be that in some instances this feeling was honestly entertained, but in the great majority of instances it was a mere pretext in order to obtain bribes. A number of these voters went to the poll in a gross state of drunkenness, some of them so drunk as not to know for whom they came to vote; and I have no doubt that a very considerable number of bribed voters gave their votes between two and four o'clock of the day of polling. I expected that there would have been a scrutiny, but it was abandoned on behalf of Mr. Tillett, and I am, therefore, unable to state the number of bribed voters. I am also unable to state who the bribers were, with the exception of the man Hardiment, who absconded after the petition was presented, and the man Arthur Hunt, who was examined at the trial. Another man, called Warledge, also absconded after the petition was presented, and he, probably, was extensively employed in bribing. The sum paid to each bribed voter was small. One pound to each was the sum proved to have been paid by Hardiment, and seven shillings and sixpence each to the voters bribed by Hunt. I am also unable to state what amount of money was spent in bribery, and I failed to obtain any information as to the source from whence the money came, or the persons by whom it was supplied to the bribers; but I believe that there was a corrupt agency at Norwich by which the money was supplied. Both Sir H. J. Stracey and a gentleman (Mr. Patterson) who was an active supporter of his, and also Mr. Chittock, the election agent for Sir Henry, all stated upon their examinations that they did not know, and had no suspicion, from what source or quarter the money used in bribery came. I regret that I am unable to give further information upon this matter; but the trial before me was confined to evidence as to bribery (one instance being sufficient) on behalf of Sir H. J. Stracey or an agent for whom he was responsible, or by Mr. Tillett or an agent for whom he was responsible. The case of general bribery, therefore, arose only incidentally. If it be deemed right to have this matter further investigated, it can only be done under the provisions of the 15 & 16 Vict. c. 57.

The claim to the seat by Mr. Tillett was abandoned for reasons satisfactory to me; and I believe the election was, on his part, perfectly pure.

Norwich.

A copy of the evidence, taken by the deputy of the shorthand writer of the House Commons, accompanies this my certificate.

SAMUEL MARTIN.

To the Right Honourable
the Speaker of the House of Commons.

I, SIR SAMUEL MARTIN, Knight, the Judge who tried the said election petition, and made my report to you of my determination thereon, dated 22nd January 1869, further report that I determined that Sir Henry Josias Stracey, Baronet, was not duly elected, and that his election was void, because he, by his agent, was guilty of bribery at the said election.

SAMUEL MARTIN.

To the Right Honourable
the Speaker of the House of Commons.

BELFAST ELECTION.

[Received 16 February 1869.]

Belfast.

IN the Matter of an Election Petition for the Borough of Belfast, between James M'Tier and Charles Murray Arundell, Petitioners; and Thomas M'Clure, Respondent.

I do hereby certify to the Right Honourable the Speaker that a court for the trial of the above-named petition was holden before me, at Belfast, on the 27th, 28th, 29th, and 30th days of January 1869, and that, at the conclusion of the said trial, I did, on the said 30th day of January 1869, determine—

That the said Thomas M'Clure was duly elected to serve as a Member of Parliament for the said borough, at the election in the said petition mentioned.

And, in addition to the said certificate, I do hereby further report:

That no corrupt practice has been proved to have been committed by, or with the knowledge and consent of, any candidate at such election; and

That I have no reason to believe that corrupt practices have extensively prevailed at such election.

A copy of the petition and a copy of the evidence given at the trial, taken down by the deputy of the shorthand writer of the House of Commons, accompany this my certificate.

Given under my hand this 2nd day of February 1869.

F. A. FITZGERALD,

A Baron of the Exchequer in Ireland, and one of the Judges for the time being for the Trial of Election Petitions in Ireland, pursuant to "The Parliamentary Elections Act, 1868."

ENNISKILLEN ELECTION.

[Received 16 February 1869.]

Enniskillen.

COURT OF COMMON PLEAS, IRELAND.

IN the Matter of the Petition of George Kittson, of Enniskillen, and of Thomas Johnston, of Enniskillen, Petitioners; and John Henry Viscount Crichton, Respondent.

THE said Court of Common Pleas, in pursuance of the provisions of the 36th section of said Act, do hereby report to the Right Honourable the Speaker of the House of Commons,—

That the petition in this matter was duly presented to this court on the 17th day of December 1868; and that the petitioners, on the 29th day of January instant, applied to the court by special application, pursuant to the said statute, for leave to withdraw said petition.

And it appearing to the court that the notice of the said application required by said Act had been given in the said borough, and no person having applied to be substituted as petitioner instead of the said George Kittson and Thomas Johnston,

The court, on the said 29th day of January, made an order permitting the said petition to be withdrawn, and same has been withdrawn accordingly.

And

And the court do hereby report to the Right Honourable the Speaker of the House of Commons, that in their opinion the withdrawal of the said petition was not the result of any corrupt arrangement, or in consideration of the withdrawal of any other petition.
Signed on behalf of the court, this 3rd day of February 1869.

Enniskillen.

JAMES HENRY MONAHAN,
Chief Justice of the Court of Common Pleas.

To the Right Honourable
the Speaker of the House of Commons.

SLIGO COUNTY ELECTION.

[Received 16 February 1869.]

COURT OF COMMON PLEAS, IRELAND.

Sligo.

John Hannon, of Monasteredan, in the County of Sligo, and James Casey, of Falleens, in said County, Farmers, Petitioners; Sir Robert Gore Booth, Bart., Respondent.

Henry Griffith, of Killery, in the County of Sligo. D.L., J.P., Petitioner; Denis Maurice O'Connor, Esq., Respondent.

THE said Court of Common Pleas, in pursuance of the 36th section of said Act, do hereby report to the Right Honourable the Speaker of the House of Commons, that the petitions in these matters were duly presented to this court on the 29th December 1868.

And that the petitioners, in each of the said matters, on the 1st day of February instant, applied to this court by special application, pursuant to the said statute, for leave to withdraw their respective petitions.

And it appearing to the court that the notices of said applications required by said Act had been given in the said county, and no person having applied to be substituted as petitioner in either of said matters instead of the said John Hannon and James Casey, or of the said Henry Griffith,

The court, on said 1st day of February, made orders permitting said petitions to be withdrawn, and same have been withdrawn accordingly.

And the court do hereby report to the Right Honourable the Speaker of the House of Commons, that in their opinion the withdrawal of said petitions was not the result of any corrupt arrangement, but that the parties, not having evidence to sustain either petitions, mutually resolved to withdraw the same.

Signed on behalf of the court, this 4th day of February 1869.

JAMES HENRY MONAHAN,
Chief Justice of the Court of Common Pleas, Ireland.

To the Right Honourable
the Speaker of the House of Commons.

WALLINGFORD ELECTION.

[Received 16 February 1869.]

COURT for the Trial of the Election Petition for the Borough of Wallingford, between Sir Charles Wentworth Dilke, Petitioner, and Stanley Vickers, Esq., Respondent.

Wallingford.

Sir, Wallingford, 6 February 1869.

IN compliance with the directions of "The Parliamentary Elections Act, 1868," I beg to certify that I have determined that Stanley Vickers, Esq., the Member whose return is complained of, was duly returned and elected.

And I further beg to report that no corrupt practice has been proved to exist, nor is there reason to believe that corrupt practices have extensively prevailed, at the election to which this petition relates.

I have, &c.
COLIN BLACKBURN,
Election Judge.

To the Right Honourable the Speaker.

WESTBURY ELECTION.

[Received 16 February 1869.]

Westbury.

Common Pleas Chamber, 6 February 1869.

IN the Matter of a Petition presented to the Court of Common Pleas, under "The Parliamentary Elections Act, 1868," by Abraham Laverton, a candidate at the last Parliamentary Election for the Borough of Westbury, against John Lewis Phipps, Esq., who was upon that occasion elected and returned, which Petition alleged, amongst other things, corrupt practices to have been committed at the election, and prayed that it might be determined that the said John Lewis Phipps was not duly elected or returned; and that the election and return was wholly null and void, and that the said Abraham Laverton was duly elected, and ought to have been returned.

I, SIR JAMES SHAW WILLES, Knight, one of the Judges for the Trial of Election Petitions in England, having heard and determined the said petition, do certify and report such determination as follows:—

1. John Lewis Phipps, Esq., the Member whose election and return are complained of by the petition, was not duly elected and returned, and the election was void.

2. Joseph Harrop, of Westbury, cloth manufacturer, one of the committee of the said John Lewis Phipps, and an agent for whose conduct the said John Lewis Phipps was in point of law responsible, was as such agent guilty of undue influence at the election within the meaning of "The Corrupt Practices Prevention Act, 1854;" and did, in canvassing the workmen in his employ, who were voters, and had a right to vote at the election, practise intimidation upon them in order to induce them either to vote for the said John Lewis Phipps, or, if they did not so vote, then to refrain from voting at the said election; and by reason of the conduct of the said Joseph Harrop, the said John Lewis Phipps was by his agent, but not personally, guilty of undue influence at such election within the meaning of "The Corrupt Practices Prevention Act, 1854," section 36.

3. No corrupt practice was proved to have been committed by, or with the knowledge and consent of, the said John Lewis Phipps, or any candidate at such election.

4. Upon the evidence before me, it does not appear that corrupt practices have, nor that there is reason to believe that they have, extensively prevailed at the election.

5. The petitioner abandoned, and there was no evidence to sustain the prayer of the petition, that he should be declared to have been duly elected; and the said election has therefore become, was, and is, wholly null and void.

J. S. WILLES.

To the Right Honourable
the Speaker of the House of Commons.

STOCKPORT ELECTION.

[Received 16 February 1869.]

Stockport.

IN the Matter of two Election Petitions for the Borough of Stockport, between James Walton, Esq., of Stockport, and William Jones, of Stockport, Petitioners, and John Benjamin Smith, Esq., Respondent; and Ephraim Hallam, Esq., of Oakfield Hall, near Stockport, and John Eskrigge, Esq., of Stockport, Petitioners, and William Tipping, Respondent.

Judges' Chambers, Chancery-lane,
8 February 1869.

Sir,

IN the above petitions I have given leave to the petitioners in each case to withdraw the petition; and, in compliance with the 36th section of "The Parliamentary Elections Act, 1868," I beg to report that, after causing full notice to be given in the borough of Stockport of the time and place at which the application was to be heard, no person appeared before me to give any evidence showing that the withdrawal of the petitions was the result of any corrupt arrangement, or that the withdrawal of one petition was in consideration of the withdrawal of the other; and the petitioners and respondents in each case, being required by me so to do, made affidavit that, according to their knowledge, information, and belief, no such arrangement or consideration existed.

I think it impossible that such matters could exist without their or some of them knowing, being informed, or believing that they existed.

I therefore report that in my opinion the withdrawal of those petitions was not the result of any corrupt arrangement, or in consideration of the withdrawal of any other petition.

I have the honour to be,

COLIN BLACKBURN,
Election Judge.

To the Right Honourable the Speaker.

STALYBRIDGE ELECTION.

[Received 16 February 1869.]

COURT for the Trial of an Election Petition for the Borough of Stalybridge, between James Ogden, John Wooley, and Abel Buckley, Petitioners; and James Sidebottom, Esq., Respondent.

Stalybridge.

Sir,

Stalybridge, 13 February 1869.

I HEREBY certify that at the trial of the above election petition I determined that James Sidebottom, Esq., the Member whose return and election is complained of, was duly returned and elected.

And in compliance with the directions of "The Parliamentary Elections Act, 1868," section 11, I report—

(a.) That no corrupt practice has been proved to have been committed by, or with the knowledge or consent of, any candidate at the said election.

(b.) That it was proved at the trial that Richard Evans and Thomas Gilbert were bribed to vote for the said James Sidebottom, Esq., by a promise made by Joseph Thornely, that, if they did so, their day's wages should be made good to them; but that the said bribe was not by an agent of the said James Sidebottom, Esq.

(c.) That corrupt practices have not been proved to have, nor is there any reason to believe that corrupt practices have, extensively prevailed at the said election.

COLIN BLACKBURN,

Election Judge.

To the Right Honourable the Speaker.

WARRINGTON ELECTION.

[Received 16 February 1869.]

I, SIR SAMUEL MARTIN, Knight, one of the Barons of the Court of Exchequer, and one of the Judges for the time being for the Trial of Election Petitions in England, do hereby certify, in pursuance of the said Act, that, upon the 3rd day of February instant (1869) and the following day, I duly held a court at Warrington, in the counties of Lancaster and Chester, for the trial of, and did try, the election petition for the borough of Warrington aforesaid, between Miles Crozier and others, Petitioners, and Peter Rylands Respondent.

Warrington.

And, in further pursuance of the said Act, I certify that, at the conclusion of the said trial, I determined that the said Peter Rylands, being the Member whose election and return were complained of in the said petition, was duly elected and returned, and that the election for the said borough, held on the 17th day of November last, was not void as alleged in the said petition, but was a valid election, and I do certify in writing such my determination to you.

And whereas charges were made in the said petition of corrupt practices having been committed at the said election, I report, in further pursuance of the said Act, as follows:—

That upon the trial of the said petition no corrupt practice was proved to have been committed by or with the knowledge or consent of any candidate at the said election.

And I further, in pursuance of the said Act, report that upon the trial of the said petition there was not evidence before me that corrupt practices prevailed at the said election.

To the Right Honourable
the Speaker of the House of Commons.

SAMUEL MARTIN.

CHELTENHAM ELECTION.

[Received 16 February 1869.]

I, SIR SAMUEL MARTIN, Knight, one of the Barons of the Court of Exchequer, and one of the Judges for the time being for the Trial of Election Petitions in England, do hereby, in pursuance of the above Act, certify that, upon the 8th day of February instant (1869), and several days following, I duly held a court at Cheltenham, in the county of Gloucester, for the trial of, and did try, the election petition for the borough of Cheltenham aforesaid, between James Tynte Agg Gardner, Petitioner; and Henry Bernhard Samuelson, Respondent.

Cheltenham.

Cheltenham.

And, in further pursuance of the said Act, I certify that at the conclusion of the said trial I determined that the said Henry Bernhard Samuelson, being the Member whose election and return were complained of in the said petition, was duly elected and returned; and I do hereby certify in writing such my determination to you.

And whereas charges were made in the said petition of corrupt practices having been committed at the said election, I, in further pursuance of the said Act, report as follows:

That no corrupt practice was proved to have been committed by or with the consent or knowledge of any of the candidates at the said election.

And, I further report, in pursuance of the said Act, that upon the trial of the said petition, there was not evidence before me that any corrupt practices prevailed at the said election.

To the Right Honourable
the Speaker of the House of Commons.

SAMUEL MARTIN.

BRADFORD ELECTION. (No. 1.)

[Received 16 February 1869.]

Bradford, (No. 1.)

I, SIR SAMUEL MARTIN, Knight, one of the Barons of the Court of Exchequer, and one of the Judges for the time being for the Trial of Election Petitions in England, do hereby, in pursuance of the above Act, certify that, upon the 25th day of January 1869, and several days following, I duly held a court at Bradford, in the county of York, for the trial of, and did try, the election petition for the borough of Bradford aforesaid, between John Haley and others, Petitioners, and Henry William Ripley, respondent.

And, in further pursuance of the said Act, I certify that, at the conclusion of the said trial, I determined that the said Henry William Ripley, being the Member whose election and return were complained of in the said petition, was not duly elected, and that his election was void, because he, by his agents, was guilty of treating at the said election, contrary to the statutes in such case made and provided; and I do hereby certify in writing such my determination to you.

And whereas charges were made in the said petition of corrupt practices having been committed at the said election, in further pursuance of the said Act I report as follows:—

That, upon the trial of the said petition, no corrupt practice was proved to have been committed by, or with the knowledge and consent of, any of the candidates at the said election.

And, in pursuance of the said Act, I further report that the persons who were proved at the trial to have been guilty of corrupt practices are Edward Kitcheman, Jeremiah Ryan, William Bowen, Michael Lamb, Michael Coyne, William Luby, Patrick Dwyer, John Young, James Corkran, John Hoare, Richard Duffy, John Bray, James Rowney, James Tidswell, Robert Conroy, William Hinnigan, James Burke, Bryan O'Neile, Michael Manton, John Walsh, Patrick Murphy, William Handy, Samuel Abel, and Joseph Gibson.

And, in further pursuance of the said Act, I report that, upon the evidence before me, there was no reason to believe that corrupt practices extensively prevailed at the election to which the said petition relates, except as stated in my special report.

And, in further pursuance of the said Act, I make this special report as to matters which arose in the course of the said trial, an account of which ought, in my judgment, to be submitted to the House of Commons.

It was proved that the said Henry William Ripley had opened an unlimited credit at his bankers in favour of his agent, who availed himself of it to the extent of upwards of 7,200 £, and who sent in to the returning officer a mere abstract of totals of outlay unaccompanied by vouchers, and that this was knowingly done contrary to the Statute 26 & 27 Vict. c. 29, s. 4. That, in one ward of the said borough, inhabited principally by Irishmen of the working class, large numbers were influenced by corrupt practices committed by the agents of the said Henry William Ripley, and that upwards of 100 public-houses and beer-houses were opened as committee-rooms, or pretended committee-rooms, in the interest of the said Henry William Ripley, where drink, without payment, was supplied to voters which was afterwards paid for by the agents of the said Henry William Ripley.

To the Right Honourable
the Speaker of the House of Commons.

SAMUEL MARTIN.

BRADFORD ELECTION. (No. 2.)

[Received 16 February 1869.]

I, SIR SAMUEL MARTIN, Knight, one of the Barons of the Court of Exchequer, and one of the Judges for the time being for the Trial of Election Petitions in England, do hereby, in pursuance of the above Act, certify, that upon the 29th day of January 1869, and several days following, I duly held a court at Bradford, in the county of York, for the trial of, and did try, the election petition for the Borough of Bradford aforesaid, between Samuel Storey and Thomas Garnett, Petitioners; and William Edward Forster, Respondent.

Bradford. (No 2.)

And, in further pursuance of the said Act, I certify that, at the conclusion of the said trial, I determined that the said William Edward Forster, the Member whose election and return were complained of in the said petition, was duly elected and returned, and I do hereby certify in writing such my determination to you.

And whereas charges were made in the said petition of corrupt practices having been committed at the said election, I report, in further pursuance of the said Act, as follows:—

That upon the trial of the said petition no corrupt practice was proved to have been committed by, or with the knowledge or consent of, any of the candidates at the said election.

And I further, in pursuance of the said Act, report that, upon the trial of this petition, there was not evidence before me that corrupt practices prevailed at the said election.

To the Right Honourable
the Speaker of the House of Commons.

SAMUEL MARTIN.

DUBLIN CITY ELECTION. (No. 1.)

[Received 16 February 1869.]

In the Matter of the Petition of George Foley and Thomas Woodlock, Petitioners; Sir Arthur Edward Guinness, Bart., Respondent. Dublin City. (No. 1.)

THE matter of this petition came on to be tried before me at Dublin, on the 23rd day of January last, and continued on 10 succeeding days, in presence of the parties, their counsel, and agents; and, having heard the evidence and what was offered on both sides, at the conclusion of the trial, on the 5th day of February 1869, I determined, and I do accordingly certify to the Right Honourable the Speaker of the House of Commons, that the last election for the said county of the city of Dublin was, so far as related to the return of the said Sir Arthur Edward Guinness, Bart., a void election, and

That the said Sir Arthur Edward Guinness, Bart., was not duly elected to serve in Parliament for the said county of the city of Dublin.

That the said Sir Arthur Edward Guinness, Bart., was, by his agents, guilty of bribery at said election; and I do hereby report that it has not been proved before me that such bribery was committed by, or with the knowledge or consent of, the said Sir Arthur Edward Guinness, Bart.; and I do further report—

That the following freemen electors (that is to say), John Frederick Kirk, Richard Butler, junior, William Walker, George Hagarty, William Beckett, Henry Bailey, John Wilson, Robert Wilson, Benjamin Katherens, otherwise Catherens, Michael Richard Steele, and Joseph Hassett, were bribed on the day of polling to vote, or in consideration of having voted, for the said Sir Arthur Edward Guinness, Bart.

That, in addition to the persons whose names I have so reported, it was proved that from 20 to 30 other freemen, whose names were not disclosed, received bribes at the same house in which those named were bribed, and on the day of polling, in consideration of voting, or of having voted, for the said Sir Arthur Edward Guinness, Bart.

That Henry Foster, William Campbell, and William Watkins, were proved to have bribed the said freemen.

That two other freemen, namely, Richard Jesson (now deceased) and George Booth, were bribed to vote for the said Sir Arthur Edward Guinness, Bart., by Benjamin Warren.

That George M'Donnell and William Field, both freemen, were bribed to vote for the said Sir Arthur Edward Guinness, Bart., by William Robinson.

That other freemen, from 10 to 14 in number, who were not sufficiently identified by name, were bribed to vote for the said Sir Arthur Edward Guinness, Bart., by the said William Robinson.

That Henry Cramer, a rated occupier, was bribed to vote for the said Sir Arthur Edward Guinness, Bart., by the said William Robinson.

Dublin City. (No. 1.)

That Alexander Ferguson, a rated occupier, and John Kelly, a lodger, were bribed by William John Vance to vote for the said Sir Arthur Edward Guinness, Bart.

That Davenport Crosthwaite and William Johnston were guilty of bribing 41 out-voters by promises to pay to them their travelling expenses, on condition of their voting for the said Sir Arthur Edward Guinness, Bart.

That it was proved that freemen voters, to the number of 30, did apply previous to the said election to the agents of Sir Arthur Edward Guinness, Bart., to obtain bribes in consideration of their voting for the said Sir Arthur Edward Guinness, Bart.

That several of the parties so applying, and other freemen voters, numbering over 200, were induced to sign agreements pledging themselves to give their services gratuitously to the said Sir Arthur Edward Guinness at the said election; but such agreements were colourable, and framed with the object of evading the provisions of the statutes against the giving employment to voters at or previous to elections.

That it was further proved that a considerable number of the said freemen voters were, on the day of polling, seeking payment of money from William Campbell, an agent of Sir Arthur Edward Guinness, Bart., in consideration of their having voted for the said Sir Arthur Edward Guinness, Bart.; and I do report that I have reason to believe that corrupt practices have extensively prevailed amongst the freemen voters at the said election for the county of the city of Dublin.

And I do further report that, save as I have reported respecting the said freemen, corrupt practices have not been shown to have extensively prevailed, nor is there reason to believe that corrupt practices have extensively prevailed, at the election to which the said petition relates.

Given under my hand this 15th day of February 1869.

WILLIAM KEOGH,

Judge of the Court of Common Pleas on the Rota for the Trial of Election Petitions in Ireland.

A copy of the evidence taken at the trial, as furnished to me by the House of Commons shorthand writer, who was duly sworn before me faithfully to take down the same, pursuant to the statute, accompanies this my certificate.

WILLIAM KEOGH.

DUBLIN CITY ELECTION. (No. 2.)

[Received 16 February 1869.]

Dublin City. (No. 2.) IN the Matter of the Petition of the Honourable David Robert Plunket, Petitioner, and Jonathan Pim, Esquire, M.P., Respondent.

Sir,

I HAVE the honour to report to you that this petition was withdrawn with my leave upon special application, and in pursuance of the statute in that behalf made and provided; and in my opinion the withdrawal of such petition was not the result of any corrupt arrangement, or in consideration of the withdrawal of any other petition.

I have, &c.

WILLIAM KEOGH,

Judge of the Court of Common Pleas on the Rota for the Trial of Election Petitions in Ireland.

To the Right Honourable
the Speaker of the House of Commons.

LONDONDERRY CITY ELECTION.

[Received 16 Feb. 1869.]

Londonderry City. IN the Matter of an Election Petition for the City or Borough of Londonderry, between David John McGown, Merchant, and George David Christie, Commission Agent, Petitioners; and Richard Dowse, Esquire, Q.C., Respondent.

I HEREBY certify to the Right Honourable the Speaker of the House of Commons that the above-mentioned petition was tried before me at Londonderry, on the 27th, 28th, 29th, and 30th days of January, and on the 1st, 2nd, 3rd, 4th, 5th, 6th, 8th, and 9th days of February 1869; and that at the conclusion of the said trial I did, on the said 9th day of February, determine that the said Richard Dowse, whose election was complained of by said petition, was duly elected to serve in the present Parliament for the borough or city of Londonderry.

And, in addition to the foregoing certificate, I hereby further report to the Right Honourable Honourable the Speaker, that no corrupt practice has been proved to have been committed by, or with the knowledge or consent of, any candidate at such election.

Londonderry City.

And, further, that on the evidence before me it did not appear that corrupt practices extensively prevailed at said election; and I have no reason to believe that corrupt practices did extensively prevail at said election.

I beg also to state that a copy of said petition, and a copy of the evidence given at the trial, taken down by the deputies of the shorthand writer of the House of Commons, accompany this certificate.

Given under my hand this 13th day of February 1869.

JAMES O'BRIEN,

One of the Judges for the time being on the Rota for the Trial of Election
Petitions in Ireland, pursuant to "The Parliamentary Elections Act, 1868."

To the Right Honourable the Speaker
of the House of Commons.

CARRICKFERGUS ELECTION.

[Received, 16 February 1869.]

IN the Matter of an Election Petition for the Borough of Carrickfergus, between Robert Torrens, Esq., Petitioner; and Marriott Robert Dalway, Esq., Respondent.

Carrickfergus.

I HEREBY certify to the Right Honourable the Speaker of the House of Commons that the above-mentioned petition was tried before me at Carrickfergus, on the 21st, 22nd, 23rd, 25th, and 26th days of January 1869; and that at the conclusion of the said trial, I did, on the said 26th day of January, determine that the said Marriott Robert Dalway, whose election was complained of by said petition, was duly elected to serve in the present Parliament for the borough of Carrickfergus.

And, in addition to the foregoing certificate, I hereby further report to the Right Honourable the Speaker that no corrupt practice has been proved to have been committed by, or with the knowledge or consent of, any candidate at such election.

And, further, that on the evidence before me it did not appear that corrupt practices extensively prevailed at said election; and I have no reason to believe that corrupt practices did extensively prevail at said election.

I beg also to state that a copy of said petition, and a copy of the evidence given at the trial, taken down by the deputy of the shorthand writer of the House of Commons, accompany this certificate.

Given under my hand this 13th day of February 1869.

JAMES O'BRIEN,

One of the Judges for the time being on the Rota for the Trial of Election
Petitions in Ireland, pursuant to said
"Parliamentary Elections Act, 1868."

To the Right Honourable the Speaker
of the House of Commons.

GREENOCK ELECTION.

[Received 16 February 1869.]

I, EDWARD FRANCIS MAITLAND, Lord Barcaple, one of the Judges of the Court of Session in Scotland, and one of the Judges for the time being, for the Trial of Election Petitions in Scotland, pursuant to "The Parliamentary Elections Act, 1868," do hereby certify to the Right Honourable the Speaker of the House of Commons, that, at the conclusion of the trial of an election petition for the borough of Greenock, at the instance of William Dougal Christie, Esq., of 32, Dorset-square, London, petitioner, a candidate at the election for the said borough of Greenock in November last, praying to have it determined that, at said election, James Johnstone Grieve was not duly elected or returned Member for Greenock, and that the election was void, which trial was holden before me, at Greenock, on the 9th day of February 1869, and four following days; I did find and determine that the said James Johnstone Grieve was duly elected and returned as Member to serve in Parliament for the borough of Greenock.

Greenock.

Greenock.

And I humbly report that it has not been proved that any corrupt practice has been committed by, or with the knowledge and consent of, any candidate at said election, and that there is no reason to believe that corrupt practices have extensively prevailed at said election.

Given under my hand at Edinburgh, this 15th day of February 1869.

To the Right Honourable the Speaker
of the House of Commons.

E. F. MAITLAND.

TAUNTON ELECTION. (No. 1.)

[Received 17 February 1869.]

Taunton.
(No. 1.)

AN ELECTION PETITION for the Borough of Taunton, in the County of Somerset, between John Dyke and William Oaten, Petitioners; and Alexander Charles Barclay, Respondent.

I, THE undersigned Sir Samuel Martin, Knight, one of the Barons of the Court of Exchequer, and one of the Judges for the time being for the Trial of Election Petitions in England, do hereby certify and report to you that I have this day heard an application, made in the manner prescribed by the Parliamentary Elections Act, 1868, for the withdrawal of this petition, and have given leave to withdraw the same; and I further report to you that, in my opinion, the withdrawal of this petition was not the result of any corrupt arrangement or in consideration of the withdrawal of any other petition.

SAMUEL MARTIN.

To the Right Honourable the Speaker
of the House of Commons.

TAMWORTH ELECTION.

[Received 19 February 1869.]

Tamworth.

Judges' Lodgings, Coventry,
18 February 1869.

IN the Matter of a Petition presented to the Court of Common Pleas, under the Parliamentary Elections Act, 1868, by John Hill and Thomas Watton, voters at the last Parliamentary Election for the Borough of Tamworth, against the Right Honourable Sir Robert Peel, Baronet, and the Right Honourable Sir Henry Lytton Bulwer, Knight, who were upon that occasion elected and returned; which Petition alleged, amongst other things, corrupt practices to have been committed at the Election, and prayed that it might be determined that the said Right Honourable Sir Robert Peel, Baronet, was not duly elected or returned, and that the Election of him was void; and that the said Right Honourable Sir Henry Lytton Bulwer, Knight, was not duly elected or returned, and that the Election of him was void.

I, SIR JAMES SHAW WILLES, Knight, being one of the Judges for the Trial of Election Petitions in England, having heard and determined the said petition, do certify and report such determination as follows:

1. The said Right Honourable Sir Robert Peel, Baronet, one of the Members whose return is complained of by the petition, was duly elected and returned.

2. The Right Honourable Sir Henry Lytton Bulwer, Knight, the other Member whose return is complained of by the petitioner, was duly elected and returned.

3. No corrupt practice was proved to have been committed by, or with the knowledge or consent of, any candidate at such election.

4. Upon the evidence before me it does not appear that corrupt practices have, nor that there is reason to believe that corrupt practices have, extensively prevailed at the election.

J. S. WILLES.

To the Right Honourable the Speaker
of the House of Commons.

WESTMINSTER ELECTION.

[Received 22 February 1869.]

To the Right Honourable the Speaker of the House of Commons.

I, SIR SAMUEL MARTIN, Knight, one of the Barons of the Court of Exchequer, and one of the Judges for the time being for the Trial of Election Petitions in England, do hereby, in pursuance of the above Act, certify that upon the 12th day of February instant (1869), and several days following, I duly held a court at Westminster, in the county of Middlesex, for the trial of, and did try, the election petition for the borough of Westminster aforesaid, between James Beal and others, Petitioners; and William Henry Smith, Respondent.

Westminster.

And, in further pursuance of the said Act, I certify that at the conclusion of the said trial, I determined that the said William Henry Smith, being the Member whose election and return were complained of in the said petition, was duly elected and returned; and I do hereby certify in writing such my determination to you.

And whereas charges were made in the said petition of corrupt practices having been committed at the said election, I, in further pursuance of the said Act, report as follows:

That no corrupt practice was proved to have been committed by or with the consent or knowledge of any of the candidates at the said election.

And I further report, in pursuance of the said Act, that upon the trial of the said petition, there was not evidence before me that any corrupt practices prevailed at the said election.

SAMUEL MARTIN.

WICK DISTRICT OF BURGHES ELECTION.

[Received 1 March 1869.]

PARLIAMENTARY ELECTIONS ACT, 1868.

Wick District of Burghs.

Unto the Right Honourable the Speaker of the House of Commons.

IN the Petition of Edmund Beatty Lockyer, Esquire, to have the election of George Loch, Esquire, as Member of Parliament for the Wick or Northern Burghs, in November 1868, set aside as void.

THE Report of Lord Jerviswoode, one of the election judges for Scotland.

The petition was lodged with the prescribed officer of this date, 19th December 1868.

The trial of the petition was fixed for Monday, the 15th day of February 1869.

Thereafter an application having been made by the petitioner for leave to withdraw the petition, the trial having in consequence thereof been postponed until 4th March next, the parties were heard upon this application before me this day; and, after due notice, no other person having appeared, proposing that he should be substituted as petitioner, the petition was held to be withdrawn, the petitioner being found liable in costs to the respondent in terms of the Statute.

I have further to report that the withdrawal of this petition was not, in my opinion, the result of any arrangement between the petitioner and respondent, or any other party, and that there was no petition against the return of Mr. Loch as Member of Parliament for the Wick or Northern Burghs, other than that by Mr. Lockyer, withdrawn as aforesaid.

CHARLES BAILLIE.

Edinburgh, 26 February 1869.

BRIDGWATER ELECTION.

[Received 1 March 1869.]

Bridgwater.

THE PARLIAMENTARY ELECTIONS ACT, 1868.

COURT for the Trial of an Election Petition for the Borough of Bridgwater, in the County of Somerset, between Henry Westropp, Esquire, and Charles William Gray, Esquire, Petitioners; and Alexander William Kinglake, Esquire, and Philip Vanderbyl, Esquire, Respondents.

Sir,

Bridgwater, 26 February 1869.

I HEREBY certify that at the trial of the above election petition I determined that Alexander William Kinglake, Esquire, and Philip Vanderbyl, Esquire, were not duly elected, and that the election was void.

And, in compliance with the directions of the Parliamentary Elections Act, 1868, s. 11, I report,—

A. That Alexander William Kinglake, Esquire, and Philip Vanderbyl, Esq., were by their agents guilty of bribery; and that it was not proved that such bribery was committed with the knowledge or consent of either of them.

B. That Henry Chapman Bussell was proved to have been guilty of bribery in paying 10*l.* each to James Palmer, William Crocker, and James Hayward, to induce them to vote for Messrs. Kinglake and Vanderbyl; and by offering a similar sum to William Luckes; and that William Crocker and James Hayward were guilty of bribery in accepting the sum of 10*l.* each for their votes.

C. That there is reason to believe that bribery extensively prevailed at the election; my reasons for coming to this conclusion are, that it appears that statements have been made that if any money was paid to any voters on behalf of Messrs. Kinglake and Vanderbyl, the same sum should be paid to all who voted for them; the inquiry was stopped from its being admitted that agency was established with respect to Henry Chapman Bussell, so that it was not ascertained how far those statements were made by agents for whom the Members were responsible, but it was sufficiently proved that an expectation that these promises would be fulfilled existed amongst the voters; that a large number of the voters refrained from voting till past one o'clock, about which time Henry Chapman Bussell was proved to have bribed the three persons above named, and there was strong reason to suspect (though it was not proved) that he bribed others, and that voters were also bribed by one Andrew Allan, both Bussell and Allan having gone away so that they could not be examined as witnesses.

That Messrs. Kinglake and Vanderbyl, who, before the proved and suspected giving of bribes, were in a great minority, immediately began to poll many votes, and were placed in a majority; and I therefore think there is reason to believe that many of the voters for them at this time were induced either by actual money paid to them, or the expectation of a sum similar to that paid to others.

BODMIN ELECTION.

[Received 1 March 1869.]

Bodmin.

THE PARLIAMENTARY ELECTIONS ACT, 1868.

ELECTION PETITION OF BODMIN.

To the Right Honourable the Speaker of the House of Commons.

Common Pleas Chambers,
1 March 1869.

IN the Matter of a Petition presented to the Court of Common Pleas under the Parliamentary Elections Act, 1868, by Richard Adams and others, voters at the last Parliamentary Election for the Borough of Bodmin, against the Honourable Edward Frederick Leveson Gower, who was upon that occasion elected and returned, which petition alleged, amongst other things, corrupt practices to have been committed at the election, and prayed prayed that it might be determined that the said Honourable Edward Frederick Leveson Gower was not duly elected or returned, and that the said election was void.

Bodmin.

I, Sir James Shaw Willes, Knight, one of the Judges for the Trial of Election Petitions in England, having heard and determined the said petition, do certify and report such determination as follows:

1. Edward Frederick Leveson Gower, the Member whose return is complained of by the petition, was duly elected and returned.

2. No corrupt practice was proved to have been committed by or with the knowledge or consent of any candidate at such election.

3. Upon the evidence before me, it does not appear that corrupt practices have, nor that there is reason to believe that corrupt practices have extensively prevailed at the election.

PENRYN ELECTION.

[Received 1 March 1869.]

THE PARLIAMENTARY ELECTIONS ACT, 1868.

Penryn.

ELECTION PETITION FOR PENRYN.

To the Right Honourable the Speaker of the House of Commons.

Common Pleas Chambers,
1 March 1869.

IN the Matter of a Petition presented to the Court of Common Pleas under the Parliamentary Elections Act, 1868, by Robert Richard Broad and others, voters at the last Parliamentary Election for the Borough of Penryn, against Robert Nicholas Fowler and Edward Backhouse Eastwick, Esquires, who were upon that occasion elected and returned, which petition alleged, amongst other things, corrupt practices to have been committed at the election, and prayed that it might be determined that the said Robert Nicholas Fowler and Edward Backhouse Eastwick were not duly elected or returned, and that their said election and return were and are wholly null and void.

I, Sir James Shaw Willes, Knight, one of the Judges for the Trial of Election Petitions in England, having heard and determined the said petition, do certify and report such determination as follows:

1. The said Robert Nicholas Fowler, one of the Members whose return is complained of by the petition, was duly elected and returned.

2. The said Edward Backhouse Eastwick, the other Member whose return is complained of by the petition, was duly elected and returned.

3. No corrupt practice was proved to have been committed by or with the knowledge or consent of any candidate at such election.

4. Upon the evidence before me it does not appear that corrupt practices have, nor that there is reason to believe that corrupt practices have extensively prevailed at the election.

THE PARLIAMENTARY ELECTIONS ACT, 1868.

Coventry.

ELECTION PETITION FOR COVENTRY.

To the Right Honourable the Speaker of the House of Commons.

Common Pleas Chambers,
1 March 1869.

IN the Matter of a Petition presented to the Court of Common Pleas, under the Parliamentary Elections Act, 1868, by Thomas Berry Bishop and others, voters at the last Parliamentary Election for the City of Coventry, against Henry William Eaton and Alexander

Coventry.

Alexander Staveley Hill, Esquires, who were upon that occasion elected and returned; which petition alleged, amongst other things, corrupt practices to have been committed at the election, and prayed that it might be determined that the said election and return of the said Henry William Eaton and the said Alexander Staveley Hill were and are null and void, and that the said Henry William Eaton and the said Alexander Staveley Hill were not duly elected or returned to Parliament.

I, Sir James Shaw Willes, Knight, being one of the Judges for the Trial of Election Petitions in England, having heard and determined the said petition, do certify and report such determination as follows:

1. The said Henry William Eaton, one of the Members whose return is complained of by the petition, was duly elected and returned.
2. The said Alexander Staveley Hill, the other Member whose return is complained of by the petition, was duly elected and returned.
3. No corrupt practice was proved to have been committed by or with the knowledge or consent of any candidate at such election.
4. Upon the evidence before me it does not appear that corrupt practices have, nor that there is reason to believe that corrupt practices have extensively prevailed at the election.

SALFORD ELECTION.

[Received 3 March 1869.]

Salford.

THE PARLIAMENTARY ELECTIONS ACT, 1868.

To the Right Honourable the Speaker of the House of Commons.

I, SIR SAMUEL MARTIN, Knight, one of the Barons of the Court of Exchequer, and one of the Judges for the time being for the Trial of Election Petitions in England, do hereby, in pursuance of the above Act, certify that upon the 24th day of February 1869, and several days following, I duly held a court at Salford, in the county of Lancaster, for the trial of, and did try, the election petition for the borough of Salford aforesaid, between Roderick Anderson, Jesse Bryant, and Edward Charlton Harding, Petitioners: and Charles Edward Cawley and William Thomas Charley, Respondents.

And, in further pursuance of the said Act, I certify that at the conclusion of the said trial I determined that the said Charles Edward Cawley, and William Thomas Charley, being the Members whose elections and return were complained of in the said petition, were duly elected and returned, and I do hereby certify in writing such my determination to you.

And whereas charges were made in the said petition of corrupt practices having been committed at the said election, I, in further pursuance of the said Act, report as follows:

That no corrupt practice was proved to have been committed by or with the consent or knowledge of any of the candidates at the said election.

And I further report, in pursuance of the said Act, that upon the trial of the said petition there was not evidence before me that corrupt practices extensively prevailed at the said election.

SAMUEL MARTIN.

CASHEL ELECTION.

[Received 4 March 1869.]

Cashel.

PARLIAMENTARY ELECTIONS ACT, 1868.

IN the Matter of an Election Petition for the Borough of Cashel, between Henry Munster, Petitioner; and James Lyster O'Beirne, Respondent;
And of another Election Petition for the said Borough of Cashel, between the same Petitioner and the same Respondent.

I do hereby certify to the Right Honourable The Speaker that the election petitions above mentioned were tried together before me at Cashel, upon the 16th, 17th, 18th, 19th and 20th days of February 1869; and that at the conclusion of the said trial, I did, on the said 20th day of February determine that the said James Lyster O'Beirne was not duly elected or returned to serve in Parliament as Member for said borough of Cashel at the election to which said petitions relate; and further, that the said Henry Munster was not duly elected, and ought not to have been returned to serve as aforesaid, inasmuch as the said Henry Munster was not proved to have had a majority of legal votes; and was moreover proved at the said trial to have been guilty by his agents of bribery at the said election; and further, that the said election was void.

And, in addition to the above certificate, I do report—

1st. That the corrupt practice of bribery was proved to have been committed by and with the knowledge and consent of the said James Lyster O'Beirne at the said election, such bribery consisting in the payment to voters of alleged claims of money against the said James Lyster O'Beirne, arising out of a previous election for the said borough in the year 1865, and also in the paying and agreeing to pay large sums of money to voters for the hire of apartments in the houses of such voters, colourably for the purpose of committee or tally rooms, such payments and agreements respectively being made in order to induce such voters to vote for the said James Lyster O'Beirne at the said election. And further, that no corrupt practice was proved to have been committed by or with the knowledge or consent of the said Henry Munster at the said election.

2nd. That the several persons hereinafter named, and all of whom are mentioned and described in the evidence given at the said trial, were proved at the said trial to have been guilty of corrupt practices; that is to say, Simon Tracy, Patrick Laffan, and Patrick Cunningham, of bribery under the second section of The Corrupt Practices Prevention Act, 1854; and Michael Hanley, Michael Ryan, Thomas Murphy, Michael Coffey, and Edward Walshe, of bribery under the third section of the same Act, but that all said several persons, except the said Simon Tracy and Patrick Laffan, were examined before me as witnesses at the said trial, and were, in my opinion, respectively entitled to certificates under the 33rd section of The Parliamentary Elections Act, 1868.

3rd. That from the evidence given at the said trial, I have reason to believe that the corrupt practice of bribery did extensively prevail at the election to which the said petitions relate.

Copies of the said petitions, and of the evidence given at the said trial, as taken down by the deputy of the shorthand writer of the House of Commons, accompany this my certificate and report.

Given under my hand, at Dublin, on the 22nd day of February 1869,

F. A. FITZGERALD,

A Baron of the Exchequer in Ireland, and one of the Judges for the time being for the Trial of Election Petitions in Ireland, pursuant to The
Parliamentary Elections Act, 1868.

The Right Honourable The Speaker
of the House of Commons.

SLIGO BOROUGH ELECTION.

[Received 4 March 1869.]

THE PARLIAMENTARY ELECTIONS ACT, 1868.

Sligo.

In the Matter of the Petition of Michael Foley and Joseph Foley, Petitioners; Major Lawrence Edward Knox, M. P., Respondent.

THE matter of this petition (of which I annex a copy) came on to be tried before me at Carrick-on-Shannon, on the 19th day of February last, and continued four succeeding days in presence of the parties, their counsel and agents; and having heard the evidence, and what was offered on both sides, I did then determine, and do accordingly certify,—

That the last election for the said borough of Sligo was a void election.

That the said Major Lawrence Edward Knox was not duly elected to serve in Parliament for the said borough of Sligo.

That the said Major Lawrence Edward Knox was, by his agents, guilty of bribery at said election; and I hereby report—

That it has not been proved before me that such bribery was committed by or with the knowledge or consent of the said Major Lawrence Edward Knox; and I do further report—

That John Shiel, a voter, did, immediately before said election, receive money and goods to the amount of 8 l. 6 s. 2 d. from Stephen M. Cherry, acting on behalf of the said

Sligo.

Major Lawrence Edward Knox, and did agree to receive a further sum of 31*l.* 13*s.* 10*d.* from the said Stephen M. Cherry, for agreeing to refrain from voting at said election, and was guilty of bribery.

That Patrick Neilan, Patrick Flinn, Martin Mulligan, and Charles Tiernan received money for agreeing to vote for the said Major Lawrence Edward Knox at said election, and were guilty of bribery.

That, in addition to the persons whose names I have so reported, it was proved by the evidence of the said Major Lawrence Edward Knox, and other testimony, that divers of the electors of said borough, from 30 to 40 in number, were in the habit of applying for payment of money directly to the said Major Lawrence Edward Knox, and to other persons acting on his behalf, in consideration of their agreeing to vote for, or to refrain from voting against, the said Major Lawrence Edward Knox.

That Thomas Brennan, Stephen M. Cherry, John H. Galbraith, Robert Stokes, William A. Woods, and Joseph L. Woods were proved to have offered and promised various sums of money to divers electors of said borough in order to induce said electors to vote for the said Major Lawrence Edward Knox, or to refrain from voting for Captain John Flanagan, a candidate at said election, and were guilty of bribery.

And I do report that corrupt practices have extensively prevailed at the said election for the borough of Sligo; and

That a system of intimidation and violence was organised and carried out for months previous to and during the said last election for the said borough of Sligo, subversive of freedom of election, and endangering the lives and properties of the electors; and outrages were committed previous to and during the said election which were calculated to deter, and did in fact deter, electors from exercising their franchise at said election, but such intimidation and violence was almost entirely practised by large mobs of persons acting in opposition to the said Major Lawrence Edward Knox; and it was proved before me that such intimidation was continued in said borough of Sligo from the time of said election down to and during the trial of said election petition.

Given under my hand this 2nd of March 1869,

WILLIAM KEOGH,

Judge of the Court of Common Pleas on the rota for the Trial of

To the Right Honourable Election Petitions in Ireland.

The Speaker of the House of Commons.

The copy of the evidence taken at the trial, as furnished to me by the House of Commons shorthand writer, who was duly sworn before me faithfully to take down the same pursuant to the statute, accompanies this my certificate.

WILLIAM KEOGH.

TAUNTON ELECTION (No. 2.)

(Received 8 March 1869.)

Taunton.
(No. 2.)

THE ELECTIONS PETITIONS ACT, 1868.

COURT for the Trial of an Election Petition for the Borough of Taunton, in the County of Somerset, between Thomas Meredith Williams and Joseph Mellor, Petitioners; and Edward William Cox, Esquire, Respondent.

To the Right Honourable the Speaker.

Sir,

Taunton, 5 March 1869.

I HEREBY certify that at the trial of the above election petition, I determined that Mr. Serjeant Cox, the Member whose election is complained of, was not duly returned and elected, and that Henry James, Esq., was duly elected.

And, in compliance with the directions of the Parliamentary Elections Act, 1868, s. 11, I report:—

A. That Mr. Serjeant Cox was by his agents guilty of bribery at the election, but that no corrupt practice was proved to have been committed with the knowledge or consent of any candidate at the election.

B. That James Shepherd, acting for a body called the Constitutional and Conservative Association, who were agents for Mr. Serjeant Cox, was proved to be guilty of bribery in distributing 5*s.* each to a large number of voters (under colour of paying them for their attendance before the revising barrister) in order to induce them to vote for Mr. Serjeant Cox. And that the following persons, John Chigley, Edward Crosby, Mark Beesly, William Smith, Robert Hughes, Abraham Cann, James Edney, Henry Calbraith, John Deane, James Cole, Thomas Wood, and William Stuckey, were proved to be guilty of bribery in receiving the sum of 5*s.* each for voting.

C. That

C. That the corrupt practice of paying the sum of 5 s. to voters under colour of paying, as it was called, barristers' court money, did extensively prevail at the election, but that there was no reason to believe that any other corrupt practice extensively prevailed.

GALWAY TOWN ELECTION.

[Received 15 March 1869.]

THE PARLIAMENTARY ELECTIONS ACT, 1868.

Galway.

THE COUNTY OF THE TOWN OF GALWAY ELECTION PETITION.

IN the Matter of the Petition of Thomas M'Govern, Petitioner; Sir Rowland Blennerhassett, M.P., and Lord Viscount St. Lawrence, M.P., Respondents.

THE matter of this petition (of which I annex a copy) came on to be tried before me, at Galway, on the 25th day of February last, and continued for five succeeding days in the presence of the parties, their counsel and agents, and having heard the evidence and what was offered on both sides, I did then determine and do accordingly certify—

That the said Sir Rowland Blennerhassett, Baronet, and Lord Viscount St. Lawrence, were duly returned at the last election as burgesses to serve in Parliament as and for the said county of the town of Galway.

That it was proved before me that the following freemen, electors of the said borough, proposed to give their votes at said election for Martin O'Flaherty, Esquire, one of the candidates, in consideration of receiving a promise of payment of money after the said election; namely, Anthony Finegan, John Marmion, Patrick Doherty, Lawrence Drually, Timothy Toole, Thomas Murphy, John M'Tighe, John Bolger, John Lenihan, John Drually, John Walsh, John Dillon, John M'Loughlin, and Martin C. Lynch.

That said proposal was rejected by the said candidate and his agent.

That from 80 to 100 electors of the said borough known to be freemen, but whose names were not disclosed in evidence, had from time to time and shortly previous to the said election, solicited the agent of the said Lord Viscount St. Lawrence to promise them payment of money in consideration of their giving their votes to the said Lord Viscount

Galway.

St. Lawrence; but such proposals were proved to have been in every instance rejected by the said agent.

And I do further report, that I have not any reason to believe that corrupt practices extensively prevailed at the last election for the said county of the town of Galway.

Given under my hand, this 11th day of March 1869.

Judge of the Court of Common Pleas on the rota for the Trial of Election Petitions in Ireland.

To the Right Honourable the Speaker of The House of Commons.

The copy of the evidence taken at the trial, as furnished to me by the House of Commons shorthand writer, who was duly sworn before me faithfully to take down the same pursuant to the statute, accompanies this my certificate.

WILLIAM KEOGH.

KING'S LYNN ELECTION.

[Received 18 March 1869.]

King's Lynn.

THE PARLIAMENTARY ELECTIONS ACT, 1868.

To the Right Honourable the Speaker of the House of Commons.

I, SIR SAMUEL MARTIN, Knight, one of the Barons of the Court of Exchequer, and one of the Judges for the time being for the Trial of Election Petitions in England, do hereby, in pursuance of the said Act, certify that upon the 16th day of March 1869, and the following day, I duly held a court at King's Lynn, in the county of Norfolk, for the trial of, and did try, the election petition for the borough of King's Lynn aforesaid, between William Armes and George Holditch, Petitioners; and the Honourable Robert Bourke, Respondent.

And, in further pursuance of the said Act, I certify that at the conclusion of the said trial, I determined that the said Robert Bourke, being the Member whose election and return were complained of in the said petition, was duly elected and returned, and I do hereby certify in writing such my determination to you.

And whereas charges were made of corrupt practices having been committed at the said election, in further pursuance of the said Act I report as follows:—

That no corrupt practice was proved to have been committed by or with the consent or knowledge of any of the candidates at the said election.

And I further report, in pursuance of the said Act, that, upon the trial of the said petition, there was not evidence before me that any corrupt practices prevailed at the said there.

SAMUEL MARTIN.

BEVERLEY ELECTION.

[Received 18 March 1869.]

Beverley.

THE PARLIAMENTARY ELECTIONS ACT, 1868.

To the Right Honourable the Speaker of the House of Commons.

I, SIR SAMUEL MARTIN, Knight, one of the Barons of the Court of Exchequer, and one of the Judges for the time being for the Trial of Election Petitions in England, do hereby, in pursuance of the said Act, certify that upon the 9th day of March 1869, and the two following days, I duly held a court at Beverley, in the county of York, for the trial of, and did try, the election petition for the said borough of Beverley, between Luke Hind, John Armstrong, and Joseph Dannatt, Petitioners; and Sir Henry Edwards, Baronet, and Edmund Hegan Kennard, Respondents.

And, in further pursuance of the said Act, I certify that at the conclusion of the said trial I determined that the said Sir Henry Edwards and Edmund Hegan Kennard, being the Members whose election and return were complained of in the said petition, were not duly elected or returned, and that the said election for the said borough was void; and I do hereby certify in writing such my determination to you.

And

And whereas charges were made in the said petition of corrupt practices having been committed at the said election; in further pursuance of the said Act I report as follows:—

That, upon the said trial of the said petition, no corrupt practice was proved to have been committed by or with the knowledge or consent of any of the candidates at the said election.

That the number of persons who were proved at the said trial to have been guilty of corrupt practice was 104, and that their names are written in the Schedule hereunto annexed.

And, in further pursuance of the said Act, I report that corrupt practices did prevail, and that there is reason upon the evidence before me to believe that they did extensively prevail, at the said election.

And, in further pursuance of the said Act, I make this Special Report as to certain matters arising in the course of the said trial, an account of which ought, in my judgment, to be submitted to the House of Commons:—

The registered voters of the borough were stated to be about 2,600, and at the election referred to in the petition Sir Henry Edwards and Captain Kennard, who until this election was a stranger to the borough, were candidates upon the Conservative interest, and Mr. Maxwell and Mr. Anthony Trollope candidates upon the Liberal interest. The result of the poll was that Sir Henry Edwards polled 1,132 votes; Captain Kennard, 986 votes; Mr. Maxwell, 895 votes; and Mr. Trollope, 740 votes.

It appeared that Sir Henry Edwards first came to Beverley as a candidate in the year 1857, upon the invitation of a Mr. Wreghitt, a draper in the town, on behalf of himself and others. Sir Henry Edwards was then elected. Shortly after that time Sir Henry became the chairman of a company carrying on its business in the borough, called the Beverley Waggon Company, Limited. Of this company, a Mr. Norfolk, hereinafter mentioned, was manager, and a Mr. Usher the secretary. From and after the year 1857, and continually until the present time, Mr. Wreghitt has been and is the confidential agent of Sir Henry Edwards for the purposes and management of his Parliamentary interest in the borough, and during this period, and from time to time, he remitted to Mr. Wreghitt sums of money to be expended by him in support of it.

It appeared that no detailed account of the expenditure of this money was ever given to or asked for by Sir Henry Edwards, and although both he and Mr. Wreghitt were witnesses at the trial, neither of them were examined as to what amount of money was so remitted and received, or how it was expended, beyond some general questions, which were answered by a statement that money was paid for charitable purposes, and for a subscription to an agricultural association.

There is a municipal corporation of Beverley, which consists of six aldermen and 18 town councillors; the town council receives the income of the corporation, and defrays its expenditure, and also that of the gasworks, the highways, and a navigation; the corporation also possess some property in the neighbourhood, and the town council possess the influence arising from a considerable expenditure in labour, and from the corporation property; the bulk of the labourers and workpeople living in Beverley are either as freemen or householders voters at the Parliamentary election. From the time of Mr. Wreghitt's becoming agent to Sir Henry Edwards, a continued and successful attempt has been made by means of bribery to secure the town council to the Conservative interest, and for this purpose, through the agency of Mr. Wreghitt, money has been expended in bribing the voters at every contest for the town councillors during his agency. His own statement was that during the last 12 years the average amount spent upon the municipal elections had been from 50*l.* to 70*l.*, but that several times there had been no contest, and that the lowest sum paid to his knowledge at a municipal contest was 130*l.* to 140*l.*, and the highest 300*l.*, but which occurred before his agency for Sir Henry Edwards; and the evidence was that the bribes paid to the individual voter varied from 2*s.* 6*d.* to 5*s.*, which may be taken to have been the ordinary bribe until the election in November last. It was stated that in some instances as much as 1*l.* had been given, but the circumstances did not appear under which so large a sum beyond the ordinary one was paid; the result is that the members of the town council are at present almost all in the Conservative interest, and that practically they have in their hands the control and management of the corporation funds; and it is alleged that they make use of them, and the influence arising from them, for the exclusive support and furtherance of this interest.

It also appeared that at an election of town councillors, which occurred two or three years ago, the Conservative candidates had the majority at the poll, but some irregularity having occurred in the election, a quo warranto information was filed in the Court of Queen's Bench, which was determined in favour of the relators, and that Sir Henry Edwards and the other Member for the borough who sat with him in the Conservative interest paid the costs of this information through Mr. Wreghitt. Mr. Wreghitt was much pressed to state the amount so paid, but said he did not recollect it, and he would not say whether it did not amount to 500*l.*

It further appeared that the freemen of Beverley, who are also Parliamentary electors, are entitled to the pasturage of large pastures in the borough, to the extent of 1,174 acres, and that by an Act of Parliament passed in the year 1836, 12 pasture masters are to be elected annually by the freemen, which pasture masters have the management of the pastures, and the control of the income and expenditure arising from and relating to them. From a document put in evidence, being their account from February 1868 to February 1869, it appears that the amount of income received by the pasture masters during that year was about 940*l.*, and the expenditure about 635*l.* When Mr. Wreghitt became the agent of Sir Henry Edwards, the practice was that the pasture masters were equally divided between the two parties, the Conservative and Liberal, six of each; but that afterwards, by means of money supplied by Mr. Wreghitt, the same system of bribery was resorted to in the election of pasture masters as in the election of town councillors, and by this corrupt expenditure it has resulted that the entire body is now in the Conservative interest.

Beverley.

Beverley.

By the will of a Mr. Robert Walker an annual income of about 90*l.* was given to the pasture masters, upon trust, to distribute it between poor freemen of the borough, or their widows or children, to aid them in respect of losses which they might sustain by the death of their stock, and to enable them to purchase other stock, to help them in the world, and for other purposes of a similar nature; and the testator declared "his wish and intention to be that the payments should be made in such substantial sums as would effect the object he had in view, and that they should not be made or given in small amounts so as to embrace a greater number of objects." An account of the receipts and payments for the year ending February 1869 was put in evidence, by which it appears that the net income of that year was distributed amongst 42 persons. Of these, six were women, and of the remainder all, except two, were Parliamentary voters. The sums paid were all small, varying from 3*l.* downwards, and it is alleged that these payments were made by the pasture masters in direct violation of their trust, and with a view to influence votes at the elections. At the late election 34 of these freemen voted, of whom 26 voted for Sir Henry Edwards, 23 for Mr. Kennard, 11 for Mr. Maxwell, and 7 for Mr. Trollope.

It was notorious during the autumn of last year that Parliament would be dissolved, and the general election take place about the middle of November. The election of town councillors took place on the 2nd. There were six vacancies to be filled up—three in each of the two wards—there being two in the borough, and there were six Conservative and six Liberal candidates. Three of the Conservative candidates were Mr. Norfolk, Mr. Usher, and a Mr. J. B. Lowther. The election took place on Monday the 2nd November, and the Parliamentary election about a fortnight afterwards; it appears from the evidence of Mr. Norfolk that on the Friday or Saturday before the municipal election he went to a bank at Beverley, at which he did not keep an account himself, nor was the account of the Waggon Company kept there, and arranged with the manager of that bank for a loan of from 400*l.* to 500*l.* He stated that he believed he drew out 500*l.* on the Saturday, but upon that day and on the Monday he drew out 800*l.*, 750*l.* of which at least was spent in bribery; he paid it to various persons whom he named, amongst others to the Mr. Lowther before mentioned, to whom he gave 100*l.* on the Saturday and 120*l.* on the Monday. The municipal electors were to a great extent also Parliamentary electors; there appeared to have been no secrecy either observed or imposed upon the parties bribed. Bribes were paid to all who would accept them; some payments were made in the street, but three houses were particularly named at which the bribery took place; one was at a public house called the "Golden Ball," where a man named Watson, an auctioneer, sat at a table; he had a bag of gold coin before him, and a book in which he entered the names of the persons to whom he paid the bribes; no secrecy was observed, and batches of three or four voters went up at a time, and the bribes were sometimes paid to each in the presence of the others; and in other instances a sum was paid to one to be distributed by him amongst the party accompanying him. Another house where bribes were paid was the shop of a person named Dickenson, where the voting papers were filled up. Another place was a public house of a Mrs. Padget.

It has already been stated that the ordinary bribe previously paid at municipal elections varied from 2*s.* 6*d.* to 5*s.* For this election, however, except in one instance, no bribe less than 15*s.* appears to have been paid; 1*l.* was proved to have been paid in several instances, but 17*s.* 6*d.* was the general bribe; upwards of 60 voters who were bribed were examined at the trial, and proved the fact. The bribes were paid indiscriminately to all who would receive them, and several of the witnesses stated that they were paid and received, "of course." The result was that early in the morning of the municipal election, certainly as early as 11 o'clock, the Conservative candidates were in a great majority, so great that the managers of the Liberal party gave up the contest, but notwithstanding this, and after more than half of the entire voters had voted for the Conservative candidates, the payment of the bribes was continued, and nearly the whole of 800*l.* was expended in this manner. It was stated by Mr. Norfolk that this 800*l.* was to be repaid by him to the bank, each of the other candidates contributing an equal share with him, but no part of this money has yet been repaid, and the whole amount is still due to the bank, nor have the other candidates paid to Mr. Norfolk any part of what is alleged they were to contribute. Very few of the above facts, and none of them relative to the last municipal election, were disputed or denied by the learned counsel for the respondents. The contention was that the bribes then given were to influence the municipal election only, and not at all to influence the Parliamentary election.

Sir Henry Edwards and Captain Kennard came to Beverley the following day, the 3rd November, and there was no evidence that from that day any bribery took place; and Sir Henry Edwards stated that until the trial he never was told or heard of the bribery and corruption which had taken place at the municipal election, as it was proved that Mr. Lowther and others who were directly engaged in this bribing canvassed with him during during the ensuing fortnight, it is obvious that the municipal bribery of the 2nd of November, which must have been notorious in the borough, was of purpose and design concealed and kept back from him. Captain Kennard seems to have heard something of it, but as his evidence was merely that he might have been told of it, he most probably was not made acquainted with its extent, as if he had he could not have failed to have recollected it.

I was perfectly satisfied upon the whole of the evidence, that more than 800 Parliamentary electors were bribed, and what several witnesses stated to have been said to them by the persons who have bribed them, viz., that the bribes were for the Parliamentary election as well as the municipal election, was the truth. The persons who were alleged to have made these statements were all named, and not one of them was called to contradict it. The excuse alleged for this bribery was that the Liberal party were doing the same.

It was stated by Mr. Norfolk that his reason for drawing out the money on the Monday was, that he was told the Liberal party were paying 25 s. a vote with money supplied by Messrs Maxwell and Trollope, who were at that time in the borough as candidates. I had no means of investigating this matter as it was not in issue in the petition before me, nor did I think it right of myself to continue the examination of the witnesses called beyond the examination and cross-examination of the learned counsel.

The only witnesses called for the Respondents were Mr. Norfolk and Mr. Wreghitt, and the Respondents themselves, neither Mr. Lowther or any of the other persons who paid the bribes were called. If it be thought right to have the condition of this borough with regard to the general prevalence of bribery and corruption thoroughly investigated, it can only be done by a Commission issued in pursuance of the 15 & 16 Vic. c. 57.

HEREFORD CITY ELECTION.

[Received 18 March 1869.]

Hereford City.

THE PARLIAMENTARY ELECTIONS ACT, 1868.

COURT for the trial of an Election Petition for the City of Hereford, between Francis Henry Thomas, Esq., Josiah Webbe Goldsworthy, Esq., and John Cleave, Esq., Petitioners; and George Clive, Esq., and John William Shaw Wyllie, Esq., Respondents.

To the Right Honourable the Speaker.

Sir,

Oldham, 16 March 1869.

I HEREBY certify that, at the trial of the above Election Petition, I determined that George Clive, Esq., and John William Shaw Wyllie, Esq., the Members whose return and election is complained of, were not duly elected, and that the election was void.

And, in compliance with the directions of "The Parliamentary Elections Act, 1868," s. 11, I report:—

A. That no corrupt practice has been proved to have been committed by or with the knowledge or consent of any candidate at the said election.

B. That it was proved at the trial that the said George Clive, Esq., and John William Shaw Wyllie, Esq., were, by their agents, guilty of treating.

C. That corrupt practices have not been proved to have, nor is there any reason to believe that corrupt practices have, extensively prevailed at the said election.

THE PARLIAMENTARY ELECTIONS ACT, 1868.

BLACKBURN ELECTION PETITION.

To the Right Honourable the Speaker of the House of Commons.

Otterspool, Watford, 18 March 1869.

IN the matter of a Petition presented to the Court of Common Pleas by John Gerald Potter, and Montague Joseph Fielden, Esqrs., Candidates at the last Parliamentary Election for the Borough of Blackburn, against William Henry Hornby, Esq., and Joseph Fielden, Esq., who were returned as elected to serve in Parliament for the said borough, by which Petition a charge was made of corrupt practices having been committed at the Election; and it was prayed that it might be determined that the said William Henry Hornby and Joseph Fielden were not duly elected or returned, and that the Election was void;

I, SIR JAMES SHAW WILLES, Knight, one of the Judges for the Trial of Election Petitions

Petitions in England, having heard and determined the petition, certify and report as follows :

1. William Henry Hornby, Esq., one of the Members whose election and return are complained of by the petition, was not duly elected and returned.

2. Joseph Fielden, Esq., the other Member whose election and return are complained of by the petition, was not duly elected and returned.

3. The election complained of by the petition was void, by reason that the Members whose election is complained of were by their agents, but not personally, guilty of undue influence at such election within the meaning of "The Corrupt Practices Prevention Act, 1854," section 36.

4. No corrupt practice was committed at such election by or with the knowledge and consent of any candidate.

5. Upon the evidence it did not appear that corrupt practices extensively prevailed, nor that there is reason to believe that corrupt practices extensively prevailed, at the election.

6. Undue influence was exercised at the election by the threatened discharge in some cases, and the actual discharge or expulsion in others, shortly before the election, of workmen at certain mills in the borough, on account of their political opinions, such treatment having a direct tendency to intimidate not only those who were discharged or expelled, but also others who entertained, or might, if let alone, have chosen to adopt like opinions, and to induce them either to vote against, or not to vote according to such opinions. The intimidation began about the time of the municipal election, which preceded the Parliamentary election by a fortnight, and was contested by the party to which the Members adhered, with their concurrence, avowedly upon the same constitutional principles and as part of one political contest. The intimidation proceeded in most instances immediately from the fellow workmen of those who were ill-treated, but under circumstances in which it is highly improbable that they should have ventured upon such misconduct of their own heads, and in which the just inference is that they were led astray by overlookers or others in a higher position. In these cases the employers within a few days restored quiet, and in most instances did their best to repair the mischief by replacing the men discharged. Amongst those who thus interfered with their fellow workmen were very many whose names did not appear. The following were named, but no individual case was dwelt upon, and they were not called as witnesses, nor had any opportunity of explanation, viz., James Haworth, Henry Wade, Thomas Whittall, Henry Sharples, John Proctor (not the witness of a like name), Thomas Sharrock (not the witness), David Smalley, John Haworth (not the witness), George and James Indle, Jethro Leech, John Fielding, and James Fielding. In another and smaller class of cases men were threatened and discharged by persons in authority as managers, overlookers, and otherwise, who as a class had been specially called upon (with the sanction of the Members) to exercise their influence on the men, as in the case of William Greenwood's mill by John Langtree and William Wade, and at Coddington's canal mill by one Catlow, in the latter of which cases an attempt was made to recall the men, which failed because of their having taken legal proceedings by which, in the end, they recovered damages. The mischief thus done extended to a portion only of the mills upon the winning side. It does not appear to have led to retaliation. It was speedily checked by the interposition of the employers, but it must have left behind distrust and apprehension, which were expressly proved to have affected the votes of some few, and more than probably influenced many. For this interference with the free exercise of the franchise, proceeding in part, at least, from agency affecting the Members returned, the election is adjudged to be void.

7. The names of the persons mentioned in the next preceding paragraph are stated in obedience to "The Parliamentary Elections Act, 1868," section 11, article 14, letter (b), and not for the purpose of suggesting ulterior proceedings; on the contrary, it is respectfully submitted that, considering all the circumstances, any further vindication of the law is unnecessary.

Oldham.

THE PARLIAMENTARY ELECTIONS ACT, 1868.

COURT for the Trial of an Election Petition for the borough of Oldham, in the county of Lancaster, between John Morgan Coblett, Frederick Lowton Spinks, Thomas Evan Lees, and John Bentley, Petitioners; and John Tomlinson Hibbert and John Platt, Respondents.

To the Right Honourable The Speaker.

Sir,

27 March 1869.

I HEREBY certify that, at the trial of the above election petition, I determined that John Tomlinson Hibbert, Esq., was duly returned and elected, and that John Platt, Esq., was duly returned and elected.

And, in compliance with the directions of the Parliamentary Elections Act, 1868, Section 11, I report—

(A.) That no corrupt practice was proved to have been committed by, or with the knowledge or consent of, any candidate at the said election.

(B.) That James Fareman and William Mitchell were proved to have been bribed by the payment of their day's wages to vote for Messrs. Hibbert and Platt, and that James Purday and Benjamin Gallimore were proved to have bribed them by paying their day's wages; and that John Hardman, jun., was proved to have been guilty of undue influence.

(C.) That there is no reason to believe that corrupt practices have extensively prevailed at the said election.

DOVER ELECTION.

[Received 1 April 1869.]

PARLIAMENTARY ELECTIONS ACT, 1868.

Dover.

To the Right Honourable the Speaker of the House of Commons.

I, SIR SAMUEL MARTIN, Knight, one of the Barons of the Court of Exchequer, and one of the Judges for the time being for the Trial of Election Petitions in England, do hereby, in pursuance of the said Act, certify that, upon the 22nd and 23rd days of March 1869, I duly held a court at Dover, in the county of Kent, for the trial of, and did try, the election petition for the said borough of Dover, between John Helliott, Petitioner, and Alexander George Dickson, Respondent.

And, in further pursuance of the said Act, I certify that at the conclusion of the said trial I determined that the said Alexander George Dickson, being the Member whose election and return were complained of in the said petition, was duly elected and returned; and I do hereby certify in writing such my determination to you.

And whereas charges were made of corrupt practices having been committed at the said election, in further pursuance of the said Act I report as follows:—

That no corrupt practices was proved to have been committed by, or with the knowledge or consent of, any candidate at the said election.

And that, upon the trial of the said petition, there was no evidence before me that any corrupt practices prevailed at the said election.

HORSHAM ELECTION PETITION.

Dickins and Another against Hurst.

To the Right Honourable the Speaker of the House of Commons.

IN the Matter of a Petition presented to the Court of Common Pleas by Charles Spencer Scrace Dickins and another, against Robert Henry Hurst, Esq., who, by a double Return, has been returned together with John Aldridge, Esq., as being elected to serve in Parliament as Members for the Borough of Horsham, praying that it might be determined that the said Robert Henry Hurst was not duly elected or returned, and that the said John Aldridge was duly elected and returned.

I, SIR JAMES SHAW WILLES, Knight, one of the Judges for the Trial of Election Petitions in England, report as follows:—

Leave has been given to withdraw the above petition, it being proved to my satisfaction that the whole matter could be disposed of under a like petition still pending against the said John Aldridge, Esq., and that the withdrawal of the petition against the said Robert Henry Hurst was not the result of any corrupt arrangement, nor in consideration of the withdrawal of any other petition, and no one applying to be substituted as a petitioner.

THE PARLIAMENTARY ELECTIONS ACT, 1868.

To the Right Honourable the Speaker of the House of Commons.

I, SIR SAMUEL MARTIN, Knight, one of the Barons of the Court of Exchequer, and one of the Judges for the time being for the Trial of Election Petitions in England, do hereby, in pursuance of the said Act, certify that upon the 8th day of April 1869 and the following day, I duly held a court at Brecknock, in the county of Brecknock, for the trial of, and did try, the Election Petition for the said borough of Brecknock, between Thomas Prestwood Lucas and Mordecai Jones, Petitioners; and Howel Gwyn, Respondent. And in further pursuance of the said Act, I certify that at the conclusion of the said trial I determined that the said Howel Gwyn, being the Member whose election and return were complained of in the said petition, was not duly elected or returned, and that his election was void, because he, by his agent, was guilty of bribery at the said election; and I do hereby certify in writing such my determination to you.

That upon the trial of the said petition, no corrupt practice was proved to have been committed by or with the knowledge or consent of any of the candidates at the said election.

That James Morgan was proved, upon the said trial, to have been guilty of bribery at the said election.

That, upon the evidence before me on the said trial, there was no reason to believe that corrupt practices extensively prevailed at the said election.

NORTHALLERTON ELECTION PETITION.

Common Pleas, Judges' Chambers,
16 April 1869.

To the Right Honourable the Speaker of the House of Commons.

IN the Matter of a Petition presented to the Court of Common Pleas by Jasper Wilson Johns, Esq., against John Hutton, Esq., who was elected and returned to serve in Parliament for the said Borough at the last Parliamentary Election therefor, praying that it might be determined that the said John Hutton was not duly elected or returned, and that his election and return were void, and that the said Jasper Wilson Johns was duly elected, and ought to have been returned.

I, SIR JAMES SHAW WILLES, Knight, one of the Judges for the Trial of Election Petitions in England, having heard and determined the said petition, certify such determination, and report thereupon as follows:—

1. John Hutton, the Member whose election is complained of by the petition, was duly elected and returned.

2. No corrupt practice was proved to have been committed by, or with the knowledge or consent of, any candidate at such election.

3. Upon the evidence it does not appear that corrupt practices have, nor that there is any reason to believe that they have, extensively prevailed at the election.

the said Respondent.

To John Gordon, Esq.,
the Master appointed by the said Court in the Matter of Election Petitions.

YOUGHAL ELECTION.

[Received 22 April 1869.]

Youghal.

PARLIAMENTARY ELECTIONS ACT, 1868.

IN the Matter of the Election Petition for the Borough of Youghal, between John Wellington Brasier, Petitioner; and Christopher Weguelin, Respondent.

I HEREBY certify to the Right Honourable the Speaker of the House of Commons, that the above-mentioned petition was tried before me on the 19th, 20th, 22nd, 23rd, 24th, 25th, 26th, and 27th of February, and the 1st and 2nd of March 1869, in the presence of the counsel and agents for said petitioner and said respondent respectively.

And I further certify that at the said trial before me, it was proved that on the 29th of July last, the respondent had declared he was a candidate for the representation of said borough of Youghal, and would stand as such at the election to be held for said borough of Youghal consequent on the then expected dissolution of the last Parliament (and which dissolution took place on the 11th of November last); and that said respondent, at various times, between said 29th of July and said 11th of November, canvassed various electors of said borough for their votes at such election, and declared from time to time his intention of seeking at such election to be returned as Member of Parliament for said borough; and which election (being that complained of by said petition) was held on the 19th and 21st of November last.

And I further certify, that it was also proved before me, at said trial, that on various occasions between the 31st of July last and said 11th of November, the said respondent had, by himself and his agents, corruptly caused drink to be given and provided to and for various voters and electors of said borough, and other persons, in order to be elected as Member of Parliament for the said borough of Youghal at such election.

And I further certify, that it was on said trial contended before me by respondent's counsel, that, inasmuch as the giving and providing of said drink was previous to said 11th of November last (the day of said dissolution), then that same did not constitute the offence of treating, and that respondent's said election was not thereby rendered void. But it was, on the other hand, contended by petitioner's counsel, that although the giving and providing of said drink as aforesaid was previous to said dissolution, yet that same constituted the offence of treating, and was a corrupt practice within the meaning of the Corrupt Practices Prevention Acts, and of said "Parliamentary Elections Act, 1868," or of some of them, and that respondent's said election was rendered void by such treating.

And I further certify that on said trial it appeared to me requisite that before finally determining as to the validity of said election, the questions of law arising from the fact of such giving and providing of drink as aforesaid having been previous to said dissolution should be considered by the Court of Common Pleas in Ireland under the 12th section of said "Parliamentary Elections Act, 1868," and that accordingly I should, under said section, postpone granting the certificate of my determination as to the validity of said election until the determination of such questions of law by said court.

And I further certify that, since said trial, I submitted for the consideration of said court a case, stating (amongst other things) the several facts hereinbefore mentioned to have been proved before me as aforesaid, and requesting the opinion and determination of said court upon the two following questions, viz.:

1st. Whether the corruptly causing of such drink to be given and provided as aforesaid previous to said dissolution constituted the offence of treating, and was a corrupt practice within the meaning of the Corrupt Practices Prevention Act and said "Parliamentary Elections Act, 1868," or of any of them?

2nd. Whether the respondent's said election was rendered void by such treating?

And I further certify that, said case having come on before said court for argument, the said court, after hearing counsel for said petitioner and respondent respectively, pronounced their judgment and determination thereon in answer to said questions, to the following effect, viz.:

1st. That the corruptly causing drink to be given and provided as aforesaid previous to said dissolution constituted the offence of treating, and that same was a corrupt practice within the meaning of the Corrupt Practices Prevention Acts and "The Parliamentary Elections Act, 1868."

2nd. That said respondent's election was rendered void by such treating.

And I beg to refer to copies of said case and of said judgment or determination, which I inclose herein.

And Youghal.

And I further certify that, having regard to said judgment and determination, I have accordingly determined, and do determine, that said respondent, Christopher Weguelin, whose election was complained of by said petition, was not duly returned or elected at said election to serve in the present Parliament for said borough of Youghal, and that the said election for said borough was a void election.

And I further certify and report, that said Christopher Weguelin was by his agents guilty of the offence and corrupt practice of treating at said election, and that such corrupt practice was proved to have been committed with the knowledge and consent of said Christopher Weguelin.

And, in addition to the above certificate, I further certify and report that, save as aforesaid, no corrupt practice was proved at said trial to have been committed by or with the knowledge and consent of any candidate at such election.

And I further certify and report, that from the evidence at said trial, it did not appear to me that corrupt practices extensively prevailed at said election. And further, that there is not, in my opinion, reason to believe that corrupt practices extensively prevailed at said election.

And I beg further to state, that a copy of said petition, and a copy of the evidence given at the trial, as taken down by the deputy shorthand-writer of the House of Commons, and as furnished by him to me, accompany this my certificate.

Given under my hand this 20th day of April 1869.

JAMES O'BRIEN,

A Justice of the Queen's Bench in Ireland, and one of the Judges for the time being on the rota for the Trial of Election Petitions in Ireland, pursuant to said "Parliamentary Elections Act, 1868."

I, SIR JAMES SHAW WILLES, Knight, one of the Judges for the Trial of Election Petitions in England, having heard and determined the said petition, certify and report as follows:—

1. The Right Honourable Russell Gurney, one of the Members whose return is complained of by the petition, was duly elected and returned.
2. Peter Merrik Hoare, the other Member whose return is complained of by the petition, was duly elected and returned.
3. No corrupt practice was proved to have been committed by, or with the knowledge and consent of, any candidate.
4. Upon the evidence it does not appear that corrupt practices extensively prevailed, nor that there is any reason to believe that corrupt practices extensively prevailed at the election.

Sir,

15 May 1869.

I HEREBY certify that at the trial of the above election petition, I determined that Henry Davis Pochin, Esquire, the Member whose return and election is complained of, was not duly returned and elected, and that the election was void.

And, in compliance with the directions of "The Parliamentary Elections Act, 1868," section 11, I report,—

(A.) That no corrupt practice has been proved to have been committed by, or with the knowledge or consent of, any candidate at the said election.

(B.) That John Fallows, an agent for Mr. Pochin, was proved at the trial to be guilty of undue influence by inciting a riotous mob to intimidate persons in order to induce them to refrain from voting.

(C.) That there is not reason to believe that corrupt practices have extensively prevailed at the election to which this petition relates.

COLIN BLACKBURN,
Election Judge.

THE PARLIAMENTARY ELECTIONS ACT, 1868.

COURT for the Trial of an Election Petition for the Borough of Stafford, in the County of Stafford, between Richard Croft Chawner, Petitioner; and Walter Meller, Respondent.

To the Right Honourable the Speaker.

Sir,

15 May 1869.

I HEREBY certify that at the trial of the above election petition I determined that Walter Meller, Esquire, the Member whose return and election is complained of, was not duly returned or elected, and that Richard Croft Chawner, Esquire, who claims the seat, was not duly elected, and that the election was void.

And, in compliance with the directions of "The Parliamentary Elections Act, 1868," section 11, I report—

(A.) That no corrupt practice has been proved to have been committed by, or with the knowledge or consent of, any candidate at the said election.

That John Fallows, an agent for Mr. Chawner, was proved to be guilty of undue influence, by inciting a riotous mob to intimidate persons, in order to induce them to refrain from voting.

(C.) That there is not reason to believe that corrupt practices have extensively prevailed at the election to which this petition relates.

And, in compliance with the directions in the 15th sub-section of the 11th section of the said Act, I beg specially to report to you some matters arising in the trial, an account of which in my judgment ought to be submitted to the House of Commons as material to be known when the renewal or extension of the Corrupt Practices Act comes under consideration.

On

On the trial, though in my opinion there was not reason to believe that corrupt practices had extensively prevailed at the election to which the petition refers, it appeared that at the previous election in 1865 corrupt practices had very extensively prevailed, being conducted on the one side by Mr. Brough, a solicitor, who was now one of the agents for Mr. Chawner (not a candidate in 1865), and on the other by Mr. Fernie, who, both at that election and at the present, was agent for Colonel Meller.

That it appeared amongst other things that at the election in 1865, Colonel Meller's election agent returned his expenses at a little more than 1,300 £, which account was signed by Mr. Morgan. It was now admitted that these expenses exceeded 5,000 £, the difference of at least 3,700 £ having been spent by Mr. Fernie, and as it was alleged, not known by the person signing the return.

These were clearly infringements of the Corrupt Practices Act amounting to misdemeanors; but the enactments in the 17 & 18 Vict. c. 102, s. 14, and 26 & 27 Vict. c. 29, s. 5, that no prosecution shall be instituted after the lapse of a year, gives them indemnity. It will be for the Legislature to consider whether it might not be expedient in future at least to make an exception where the prosecution is instituted after the lapse of a year by the Attorney General or by order of the House.

Further, on the return of the election expenses for the present election, which was signed by the same agent, Mr. Morgan, who had signed the false return in 1865, no vouchers were returned, they being retained by Mr. Fernie, who refused to allow them to be seen till compelled to do so by an order made by me in the course of this petition.

These vouchers, when produced, together with the evidence on the trial, satisfied me that Mr. Fernie had organised the machinery for extensive bribery if required, though I came to the conclusion that it was thought either not necessary or not safe to put it in operation.

This was, in my opinion, a wilful disregard of the directions in the 26th & 27th Vict. c. 29, s. 4. It will be for the Legislature to consider whether more effectual provisions should not be made to secure compliance with that enactment in future.

I hope it may not be considered impertinent, though not quite within my province, if I further remark that the utility of the election accounts would be much greater if the time for presenting a petition were extended to a time after the rendering of those accounts.

COLIN BLACKBURN,
Election Judge.

R E P O R T.

THE PARLIAMENTARY ELECTIONS ACT, 1868.

To the Right Honourable the Speaker of the House of Commons.

I, Sir Samuel Martin, Knight, one of the Barons of the Court of Exchequer, and one of the Judges for the time being for the trial of Election Petitions in England, do hereby in pursuance of the said Act, certify that upon the 9th day of March 1869, and the two following days, I duly held a Court at Beverley in the County of York, for the trial of, and did try the Election Petition, for the said borough of Beverley, between Luke Hind, John Armstrong, and Joseph Dannatt, Petitioners, and Sir Henry Edwards, Baronet, and Edmund Hegan Kennard, Respondents.

And in further pursuance of the said Act I certify that, at the conclusion of the said trial, I determined that the said Sir Henry Edwards and Edmund Hegan Kennard, being the Members whose election and return were complained of in the said Petition, were not duly elected or returned, and that the said election for the said borough was void ; and I do hereby certify in writing such my determination to you.

And whereas charges were made in the said Petition of corrupt practices having been committed at the said election, in further pursuance of the said Act, I report as follows :—

That upon the said trial of the said Petition no corrupt practice was proved to have been committed by or with the knowledge or consent of any of the candidates at the said election.

That the number of persons who were proved at the said trial to have been guilty of corrupt practice was 104, and that their names are written in the Schedule hereunto annexed.

And, in further pursuance of the said Act, I report that corrupt practices did prevail, and that there is reason, upon the evidence before me, to believe that they did extensively prevail at the said election.

And, in further pursuance of the said Act, I make this Special Report as to certain matters arising in the course of the said trial, an account of which ought, in my judgment, to be submitted to the House of Commons.

The registered voters of the borough were stated to be about 2,600, and at the election referred to in the Petition, Sir Henry Edwards and Captain Kennard (who until this election was a stranger to the borough) were candidates upon the Conservative interest, and Mr. Maxwell and Mr. Anthony Trollope candidates upon the Liberal interest. The result of the poll was that Sir Henry Edwards polled 1,132 votes ; Captain Kennard, 986 votes ; Mr. Maxwell, 895 votes ; and Mr. Trollope, 740 votes.

It appeared that Sir Henry Edwards first came to Beverley as a candidate in the year 1857, upon the invitation of a Mr. Wreghitt, a draper in the town, on behalf of himself and others ; Sir Henry Edwards was then elected. Shortly after that time Sir Henry became the chairman of a company carrying on its business in the borough, called The Beverley Waggon Company, Limited ; of this company a Mr. Norfolk, hereinafter mentioned, was manager, and a Mr. Usher the secretary. From and after the year 1857, and continually until the present time, Mr. Wreghitt has been and is the confidential agent of Sir Henry Edwards for the purposes and management of his Parliamentary interest in the borough, and during this period and from time to time he remitted to Mr. Wreghitt sums of money to be expended by him in support of it.

It appeared that no detailed account of the expenditure of this money was ever given to or asked for by Sir Henry Edwards, and although both he and Mr. Wreghitt were witnesses at the trial, neither of them were examined as to what amount of money was so remitted and received, or how it was expended, beyond some general questions which were answered by a statement that money was paid for charitable purposes and for a subscription to an agricultural association.

There is a municipal corporation of Beverley, which consists of six aldermen and 18 town councillors. The Town Council receives the income of the corporation and defrays its expenditure and also that of the gasworks, the highways, and a navigation. The corporation also possess some property in the neighbourhood, and the town council possess the influence arising from a considerable expenditure in labour and from the corporation property. The bulk of the labourers and work-people living in Beverley are, either as freemen or householders, voters at the Parliamentary election. From the time of Mr. Wreghitt's becoming agent to Sir Henry Edwards, a continued and successful attempt has been made by means of bribery to secure the town council to the Conservative interest, and for this purpose, through the agency of Mr. Wreghitt, money has been expended in bribing the voters at every contest for the town councillors during his agency. His own statement was, that during the last 12 years the average amount spent upon the municipal elections had been from 50 l. to 70 l., but that several times there had been no contest, and that the lowest sum paid to his knowledge at a municipal contest, was 130 l. to 140 l., and the highest 300 l., but which occurred before his agency for Sir Henry Edwards; and the evidence was that the bribes paid to the individual voter varied from 2 s. 6 d. to 5 s., which may be taken to have been the ordinary bribe until the election in November last. It was stated that, in some instances, as much as 1 l. had been given, but the circumstances did not appear under which so large a sum beyond the ordinary one was paid; the result is, that the members of the town council are at present almost all in the Conservative interest, and that practically they have in their hands the control and management of the corporation funds, and it is alleged that they make use of them and the influence arising from them for the exclusive support and furtherance of this interest.

It also appeared that at an election of town councillors which occurred two or three years ago, the Conservative candidates had the majority at the poll; but some irregularity having occurred in the election, a quo warranto information was filed in the Court of Queen's Bench, which was determined in favour of the relators, and that Sir Henry Edwards and the other Member for the borough who sat with him in the Conservative interest paid the costs of this information through Mr. Wreghitt. Mr. Wreghitt was much pressed to state the amount so paid, but said he did not recollect it, and he would not say whether it did not amount to 500 l.

It further appeared that the freemen of Beverley, who are also Parliamentary electors, are entitled to the pasturage of large pastures in the borough, to the extent of 1,174 acres; and that, by an Act of Parliament passed in the year 1836, twelve pasture masters are to be elected annually by the freemen, which pasture masters have the management of the pastures and the control of the income and expenditure arising from and relating to them. From a document put in evidence, being their account from February 1868 to February 1869, it appears that the amount of income received by the pasture masters during that year was about 940 l., and the expenditure about 635 l. When Mr. Wreghitt became the agent of Sir Henry Edwards, the practice was that the pasture masters were equally divided between the two parties, the Conservative and Liberal, six of each; but that afterwards, by means of money supplied by Mr. Wreghitt, the same system of bribery was resorted to in the election of pasture masters as in the election of town councillors, and by this corrupt expenditure it has resulted that the entire body is now in the Conservative interest.

By the will of a Mr. Robert Walker an annual income of about 90 l. was given to the pasture masters upon trust, to distribute it between poor freemen of the borough, or their widows or children, to aid them in respect of losses which they might sustain by the death of their stock, and to enable them to purchase other stock; to help them in the world, and for other purposes of a similar nature; and the testator declared "his wish and intention to be, that the payments should be made in such substantial sums as would effect the object he had in view, and that they should not be made or given in small amounts, amounts, so as to embrace a greater number of objects." An account of the receipts and payments for the year ending February 1869 was put in evidence, by which it appears that the net income of that year was distributed amongst 42 persons; of these, six were women, and of the remainder all, except two, were Parliamentary voters; the sums paid were all small, varying from 3*l.* downwards; and it is alleged that these payments were made by the pasture masters in direct violation of their trust, and with a view to influence votes at the elections. At the late election 34 of these freemen voted, of whom 26 voted for Sir Henry Edwards, 23 for Mr. Kennard, 11 for Mr. Maxwell, and seven for Mr. Trollope.

It was notorious during the autumn of last year that Parliament would be dissolved, and the general election take place about the middle of November. The election of town councillors took place on the 2nd November; there were six vacancies to be filled up—three in each of the two wards, there being two in the borough; and there were six Conservative and six Liberal candidates. Three of the Conservative candidates were Mr. Norfolk, Mr. Usher, and a Mr. J. B. Lowther. The election took place on Monday the 2nd November, and the Parliamentary Election about a fortnight afterwards. It appears from the evidence of Mr. Norfolk, that on the Friday or Saturday before the municipal election he went to a bank at Beverley, at which he did not keep an account himself, nor was the account of the Waggon Company kept there, and arranged with the manager of that bank for a loan of from 400*l.* to 500*l.* He stated that he believed he drew out 500*l.* on the Saturday, but upon that day, and on the Monday, he drew out 800*l.*, 750*l.* of which, at least, was spent in bribery. He paid it to various persons whom he named; amongst others to the Mr. Lowther before mentioned, to whom he gave 100*l.* on the Saturday and 120*l.* on the Monday. The municipal electors were to a great extent also Parliamentary electors; there appeared to have been no secrecy either observed or imposed upon the parties bribed. Bribes were paid to all who would accept them; some payments were made in the street, but three houses were particularly named at which the bribery took place; one was at a public-house called the "Golden Ball," where a man named Watson, an auctioneer, sat at a table; he had a bag of gold coin before him, and a book in which he entered the names of the persons to whom he paid the bribes. No secrecy was observed, and batches of three or four voters went up at a time, and the bribes were sometimes paid to each in the presence of the others, and in other instances a sum was paid to one to be distributed by him amongst the party accompanying him. Another house where bribes were paid was the shop of a person named Dickenson, where the voting-papers were filled up. Another place was a public-house of a Mrs. Padget.

It has already been stated that the ordinary bribe previously paid at municipal elections, varied from 2*s.* 6*d.* to 5*s.* For this election, however, except in one instance, no bribe less than 15*s.* appears to have been paid; 1*l.* was proved to have been paid in several instances, but 17*s.* 6*d.* was the general bribe. Upwards of 60 voters who were bribed were examined at the trial, and proved the fact. The bribes were paid indiscriminately to all who would receive them, and several of the witnesses stated that they were paid and received "of course": the result was, that early in the morning of the municipal election, certainly as early as 11 o'clock, the Conservative candidates were in a great majority, so great that the managers of the Liberal party gave up the contest; but notwithstanding this, and after more than half of the entire voters had voted for the Conservative candidates, the payment of the bribes was continued, and nearly the whole 800*l.* was expended in this manner. It was stated by Mr. Norfolk that this 800*l.* was to be repaid by him to the bank, each of the other candidates contributing an equal share with him, but no part of the money has yet been repaid, and the whole amount is still due to the bank; nor have the other candidates paid to Mr. Norfolk any part of what is alleged they were to contribute. Very few of the above facts, and none of them relative to the last municipal election, were disputed or denied by the learned counsel for the Respondents. The contention was that the bribes then given were to influence the municipal election only, and not at all to influence the Parliamentary election.

bribery took place; and Sir Henry Edwards stated that until the trial he never was told or heard of the bribery and corruption which had taken place at the municipal election. As it was proved that Mr. Lowther and others who were directly engaged in this bribery canvassed with him during the ensuing fortnight, it is obvious that the municipal bribery of the 2nd of November, which must have been notorious in the borough, was, of purpose and design, concealed and kept back from him. Captain Kennard seems to have heard something of it; but as his evidence was merely that he might have been told of it, he most probably was not made acquainted with its extent, as, if he had, he could not have failed to have recollected it.

I was perfectly satisfied, upon the whole of the evidence, that more than 800 Parliamentary electors were bribed, and what several witnesses stated to have been said to them by the persons who bribed them, viz., that the bribes were for "the Parliamentary election as well as the municipal election," was the truth. The persons who were alleged to have made these statements were all named, and not one of them were called to contradict it. The excuse alleged for this bribery was that the Liberal party were doing the same.

It was stated by Mr. Norfolk that his reason for drawing out the money on the Monday was that he was told the Liberal party were paying 25 s. a vote, with money supplied by Messrs. Maxwell and Trollope, who were at that time in the borough as candidates. I had no means of investigating this matter, as it was not in issue in the Petition before me, nor did I think it right of myself to continue the examination of the witnesses called beyond the examination and cross-examination of the learned counsel.

The only witnesses called for the Respondents were Mr. Norfolk and Mr. Wreghitt, and the Respondents themselves; neither Mr. Lowther nor any of the other persons who paid the bribes were called. If it be thought right to have the condition of this borough with regard to the general prevalence of bribery and corruption thoroughly investigated, it can only be done by a Commission issued in pursuance of the 15 and 16 Vict. c. 57.

MINUTES OF EVIDENCE

TAKEN before the Honourable Mr. Baron Martin, on the TRIAL of the ELECTION PETITION for the BOROUGH of BEVERLEY, at the East Riding Sessions House.

Tuesday, 9th March 1869.

HIND, ARMSTRONG, and DANNATT - - - - Petitioners.

AND

EDWARDS and KINNARD - - - - Respondents.

Mr. Serjeant Sargood, Q.C., and Mr. Waddy, appeared as Counsel for the Petitioners. Mr. Hind appeared as Agent.

1869.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine, Q.C., Mr. Giffard, Q.C., and Mr. Charles Grove Edwards, appeared as Counsel for the Respondents. Mr. Bainton appeared as Agent.

Mr. Serjeant Sargood was heard to open the allegations of the Petition.

Mr. WILLIAM THIRSK, sworn; Examined by Mr. Waddy.

1. WERE you one of the Ward Assessors for St. Mary's Ward on the 2nd of November?—Yes.

2. At the municipal election?—Yes.

3. The Liberal party had a room, I believe, at which they delivered the voting papers?—I suppose so; I was in the assessor's room.

4. The poll was taken by a paper which was delivered by the voter with the names of the candidates on it for whom he voted?—Yes.

5. Was Mr. Alderman Cussons presiding?—Yes.

6. Did he receive the voting papers?—Yes.

7. A short time after the poll was opened, did Mr. Alderman Cussons begin to arrange and count the papers?—Yes; he counted them up in hundreds, or at least in fifties, I think.

8. And put them by?—Yes.

9. Did Mr. Luke Hind, one of the Petitioners, sit there beside you and take a record of the poll?—Yes; he did.

10. Did you see him make entries on those slips at the time (handing the same to the Witness)?—Yes, I did; he sat next to me.

11. Have you since then compared them with the original slips, and found them to be correct?—I have; these slips that I have in my hand, I have compared with the list made out.

90.

12. Mr. Baron Martin.] Made out by whom?—By the attorneys, I suppose, for the Petitioners.

Mr.
W. Thirsk.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] I think this is not the way of proving it.

Mr. Waddy.] I wish to prove the state of the poll.

Mr. Baron Martin.] That can be done by calling the check clerk.

13. Mr. Waddy (to the Witness).] Did any one take the state of the poll from time to time on behalf of the alderman?—It is not usual for them to do so.

14. Was it done on this occasion?—The alderman took it himself.

15. So you told us?—Yes.

16. And in no other way?—No.

17. Was William Lane there who took the poll on behalf of the Conservative candidates?—Yes.

18. Mr. Baron Martin.] Was he a check clerk?—Yes. I believe that it was a matter agreed between the parties, that each should have a poll clerk.

19. Mr. Waddy.] William Lane acted for the Conservatives, and Mr. Luke Hind for the Liberals?—Yes.

20. Do

Mr.
W. Thirsk.
1869.

20. Do you remember George Bielby voting?—Yes.

21. At that time do you know what was the relative state of the poll between the Conservatives and the Liberals?—

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] That can only be known by the returns.

Mr. Baron Martin.] The returns are not the only mode of proving it; the check clerks will be equally competent to prove it. I think the proper way will be to produce the papers themselves. Call upon the person holding them to produce them.

22. Mr. Waddy (to the Witness).] Was there any counting or returning of the numbers that had voted at separate times by the alderman, or on his behalf?—Yes; by all the parties in the room.

23. Were you there at that time?—Yes.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] I must ask for this to be strictly proved.

Mr. Baron Martin.] I think that is quite reasonable. If you want to prove how people voted, you must get possession of the voting papers. I see no objection to asking the witness whether at any particular time the numbers were so-and-so.

Mr. Waddy.] That is what we propose to do, my Lord.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] I do not object to that.

24. Mr. Waddy (to the Witness).] Was it stated by the returning officer, or the alderman presiding, when George Bielby voted, what was the relative state of the poll?—Yes; I believe it was.

25. What was stated?—He counted the papers, and said, "We are about 100 a-head in this ward."

26. Do you remember anything being said at that time about the countings being continued?—

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] I must object to this; my learned friends have no right to bind us by anything that has been said.

Mr. Baron Martin.] You must leave me to draw inferences from the facts. (To Mr. Waddy). Just prove the facts.

27. Mr. Waddy (to the Witness).] Do you remember what time Mr. Sugdon voted?—I cannot say that I remember.

28. Do you recollect anything being said about Mr. Burrell to Mr. Hind?—Is it necessary that I should relate anything of that kind that transpired?

Mr. Baron Martin.] It is for you to answer any question if it is not objected to. If it is, I will listen to the objection.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] I object to the present question, my Lord.

Mr. Waddy.] Did you hear anything said?—

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] I have made the objection.

Mr. Baron Martin.] I think it is going rather too far. Just endeavour to prove the facts, and not what people have said; it does not signify what they have said.

29. Mr. Waddy (to the Witness).] Previously to this time, had there been a public meeting in the town at which Sir Henry Edwards and Captain Kennard were present?—I believe so; yes. Captain Kennard was there; it was some weeks before the election.

30. Mr. Baron Martin.] Was Captain Kennard alone, or were both of them there, or only one of them?—I cannot say.

31. Mr. Waddy.] Were you at the meeting?—No; I was not at the meeting.

32. During the Parliamentary election, did you see Sir Henry Edwards and Captain Kennard in Beverley?—Yes; I saw them both very often.

33. Did you see them canvassing?—Yes.

34. Mr. Baron Martin.] Had you seen them canvassing before the general election?—Yes.

35. Mr. Waddy.] Whom had you seen canvassing with Sir Henry Edwards and Captain Kennard?—I do not think I can remember all I have seen; there was a great number of parties I have seen. I have seen Mr. Arden, and I saw Mr. Wriggitt, Mr. Lowther, and Mr. Hudson. I should think I have seen a score of gentlemen.

36. Did you ever see Mr. Norfolk?—I do not remember ever seeing him.

37. Or Mr. Burrell?—I cannot say that I ever saw him along with the candidates.

38. Do you know Mr. Cleaver?—Yes.

39. Have you seen him?—Yes.

40. And Robert Thirsk?—No; I never saw him going about canvassing.

41. Or Mr. Whitton?—Yes.

42. And Mr. Wallace?—No; I cannot say that I did.

43. Or Mr. Akrill?—Yes.

44. And Mr. Thompson?—I think I saw him once in High-street.

45. Mr. Skinn?—Yes.

46. And Mr. Kempley?—No; I never saw him going about with them.

Cross-examined by Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.

47. You say that at half-past 10, or about that time, you heard the returning officer say something as to the state of the poll?—Yes.

48. Do you mean to say that you are sure about it, that he said anything?—I am quite certain of it.

49. Who was "he"?—I mean the alderman of the ward, Mr. Cussons.

50. Was it Mr. Cussons whom you heard say anything?—Yes; constantly during the day.

51. Do you remember at that particular time that he called out the state of the poll?—Yes; and I remember it from another circumstance.

52. Do you mean to pledge your oath that the alderman called out the state of the poll at the time that Bielby voted?—How do you mean called it out? He mentioned it in the room; there was no calling out.

53. How was it done?—He stated it as a matter of fact by counting the papers up.

54. Did he count the papers at that particular time?—Yes.

55. You are sure of that; you remember it perfectly, do you?—Yes.

56. Did he count them up at any other time?—Yes.

57. He counted them up whenever he got 50?—He counted them up, and put them aside.

58. What did he call out at 11 o'clock?—I do not know exactly what he called out at 11 o'clock, but something at 11 o'clock; I should think he would call out that they had about 250.

59. What did he call out at any other part of the the day?—I remember about one o'clock he said that they had polled above half the constituency, and that it was of very little use people coming to vote; he said that over and over again.

Re-examined by Mr. Serjeant Sargood.

60. At what hour did the poll commence?—The poll commenced at nine o'clock; the municipal.

61. At what hour did it close?—It closed at four o'clock.

62. Were you there during the whole time?—Yes; I was bound to be there.

63. Mr. Baron Martin.] What was your office?—I was assessor.

64. Is that different from the alderman that took the poll at the ward?—The ward assessors, they are the returning officers, along with the alderman of the ward.

65. It was your duty, was it not, as assessor, to strike voters off the list as they voted, so as to check the list of voters?—Yes.

66. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] You had the register, and struck out any person who voted?—Yes; every one that voted I struck out with a pencil.

67. The other gentleman had these papers in his hand, and posted them up, so as to know whom they voted for?—Yes; he had no right there except by courtesy; but each of the parties had a man for that purpose; he sat next to me. I was there officially.

68. The alderman having said that they had polled half of the constituency at one o'clock; the poll was kept open till four o'clock?—Yes.

69. Did Conservative voters continue to vote?—Yes.

70. Did you see them brought up, and who brought them up?—They were brought up by many parties.

71. Can you remember the names of any of the parties who brought them up?—I have already named one, Burrell.

72. Were there any more?—

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] I asked nothing in cross-examination upon this.

73. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] You said that you remembered this half-past 10 o'clock business from some other circumstance; what was that?—The other circumstance was, at least, I believe that the town clerk, or the deputy town clerk came out of the other room about half-past 10, and said, "How do you come on here? I think they must have polled 100 to one in the other room"; and that was the reason that Mr. Cussons had stated at that time that they were about a hundred a-head.

74. That was the provoking cause of his observations?—Yes.

[The Witness withdrew.]

Mr. RICHARD HODGSON, sworn; Examined by Mr. Serjeant Sargood.

75. You are carrying on business, I believe, as a Tanner and Leather Merchant in this borough?—Yes.

76. You have been for many years a member of the town council, I think?—Some years ago I was.

77. I think you have twice filled the office of mayor?—Yes.

78. Can you give me the figures as to the population and the number of voters on the register for the municipal borough?—No; I am not able to give you that.

79. Will you tell me this; the town council in this borough, as constituted, have a particular amount of patronage amongst the tradespeople, have they not?—Yes; a great amount of patronage.

80. Can you shortly point out to my Lord, how it is that they have that patronage?—They have the control of the gas works, in which they employ a great many people; they also have the control of the repairs of the roads and the highways.

81. Are they great employers of labour in reference to that?—Yes.

82. Mr. Baron Martin.] Just name the others over which they have control?—They also have the control of the navigation, and the repairs and the collecting of the dues; they have also a considerable number, at least some amount of property, both house property and land, in Beverley, and of the neighbourhood of Beverley; they have also some amount of patronage, both in the way of tenants and for the repairs of their property.

83. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] Are the persons, so under the patronage of the corporation, to a very large extent Parliamentary voters?—Yes, they are now, with the altered constituency; nearly all of them, I should say; the majority of them at any rate.

84. What number of town councillors have you?—There are 18 town councillors, and six aldermen in addition; altogether 24.

85. I see that you have two wards; how many go out each year for a change?—Six go out each year, three for each ward; the aldermen are elected every three years, half of them; every three aldermen every three years; the aldermen, when they are elected, are elected for six years.

86. By whom are the town councillors chosen?—By the ratepayers.

87. Mr. Baron Martin.] Are the electors for the town council the same now as for the Parliamentary election?—To a great extent.

88. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] Are they, to a great extent, Parliamentary voters?—Yes; much more so at the last election than at any previous one.

89. By whom are the aldermen chosen?—They are chosen by the town councillors.

90. I believe there is a good deal of political feeling carried on at the municipal contests quite independently of Parliamentary business?—Yes.

91. A good deal of political feeling is carried on in the borough in these municipal contests?—Yes; ever since I remember, there has always been.

92. But since you have been favoured by the interest of Sir Henry Edwards since 1857, have you perceived any marked difference in the result of the municipal elections?—Yes; soon after that, there was a great change in the kind of political feeling in the town council.

93. What has been the result; have the Conservatives or the Liberals attained the ascendancy in the council and the corporation?—In the

Mr. R. Hodgson. the last eight or ten years, the council has been almost entirely in the hands of the Conservative party.

1869.

94. Have you a personal knowledge of the existence of such a gentleman as Mr. Wreghitt in this town?—Yes, I have the pleasure of knowing him.

95. Is it at all within your local knowledge, whether he has been active in promoting this change that you have mentioned, in the corporation?—It is generally understood so.

96. As to your own personal knowledge of him, I believe, you are not acquainted with him individually?—No.

97. You have come to that conclusion, whether it is ill or well founded?—Yes.

98. That Mr. Wreghitt has been very active in promoting this change in the constitution of the borough?—Yes.

99. Have you ever heard Sir Henry Edwards make any remark, as to the change in the constitution of the corporation?—No; I cannot speak from memory conscientiously.

100. You are a freeman of the borough yourself, are you not?—Yes.

101. Were you in court when I mentioned this subject, on opening this matter to his Lordship?—Yes.

102. You heard, I suppose, what I said about the matter?—Yes.

103. Was what I said accurate, within your knowledge, as to all the interest that the freemen have in the pasturage surrounding the place?—Yes.

104. That, I believe, is managed by 12 pasture masters?—Yes; the parties who govern the pastures are called pasture masters.

105. I think they are annually elected on the 1st of March?—Yes.

106. This is the official announcement of the forthcoming election last Monday (pointing to the same)?—Yes.

107. Mr. Baron Martin.] What benefit have the freemen had; is it feeding cattle on the pastures?—Yes; they have the power of stocking the pastures with a certain amount of cattle.

108. And milch cows?—Yes; they have a certain number of stock which they turn upon these pastures; there are three or four times the amount of stock in; but the whole matter is regulated by the pasture masters, who make by-laws for their regulation.

109. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] I believe that that applies to sheep and horses, as well as to cattle?—Yes.

110. Mr. Baron Martin.] They are all there?—Yes.

111. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] Those who do stock the pastures make some small payment; I do not call it an equitable one, but some payment?—Yes; they do pay a certain entrance fee.

112. I believe that the freemen who are not fortunate enough to have cattle and stock, gain some benefit out of the control which is contributed by those who have?—Yes; the poorer class of freemen do.

113. Those who have stock and cattle have them feeding at a very small cost; and those who have none, derive benefits from the subscription of those who have?—Exactly.

114. Mr. Baron Martin.] It is not confined to milch cows?—No.

115. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] Are those benefits under the control of those 12 pasture masters?—Entirely.

Mr. Baron Martin.] I think you said that they acted under an Act of Parliament.

116. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] Yes, my Lord; it is the 6th of William 4th, an Act of 1836. (To the Witness.) You have spoken of the political feeling as influencing the constitution of the town council; has that also for many years past been regarded as having an influence in the election of the 12 pasture masters?—Yes.

118. Until about what year?—Until about 1857 or 1858.

119. Had that been the antecedent practice for some time within your memory?—Yes.

120. After that, what change took place?—After that they were re-elected, and they all belonged to the Conservative party.

121. You being a freeman, is it within your knowledge whether Mr. Wreghitt took an active part in promoting those elections at all?—Never having taken any part in them, I can speak no more than from common report; it is generally understood so.

122. Being a freeman yourself, you know that he is not a freeman?—Yes, I am aware that he is not.

123. Those are the accounts, I think, of the Beverley pasture masters for the last year, properly audited?—

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] They may be put in without any inquiry.

124. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] Very well. (To the Witness.) What has a druggist to do with it?—I do not know.

125. He does not supply drugs for the cattle, does he?—I do not know.

126. What are “leadings”?—That indicates that they employ a man with a horse and cart to convey the materials; a man leading a horse, that is what they describe to be the meaning of that word “leading.”

127. It appears from that that a very large number of persons are employed by the pasture masters; I do not talk about influencing?—

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] Yes, you may.

128. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] They are under the control of the pasture masters in consequence of their having an opportunity of giving them employment?—A great number of men are employed by them, and may be influenced by them.

129. Those persons so employed are for the most part Parliamentary electors, are they not?—A great number of them.

130. Another little incident connected with the pasturage is this gift of Mr. Walker's?—Yes.

131. You are acquainted with that, I daresay?—Yes.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] Is that subordinate to the pasture masters?—

132. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] It is a voluntary gift for a dinner. (To the Witness.) That is a list of the recipients of that bounty, under that gift, gift, is it not (handing the same to the Witness)?—Yes, I presume so.

133. And the gift of that money is under the absolute control of the pasture-masters for the time being, is it not?—Yes.

134. Those names, I believe, show who were the recipients of the bounty during the past year?—Yes.

135. Are the bulk of those, within your knowledge, Parliamentary electors?—As to the bulk of them, I have never seen the names.

136. Look at that (handing a paper to the Witness)?—It will be better proved by the register.

137. They must be freemen who are recipients of this bounty?—Yes.

138. With the exception of the widows, they are all Parliamentary electors necessarily, are they not?—As a matter of course, I believe that all freemen have a right to vote.

139. I think you have already said that the present constitution of the pasture-masters is very highly Conservative?—Yes.

140. The freedom, I believe, is attained by purchase and by servitude?—Yes.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] The Act of Parliament will show that. I understand that it is not so.

The Witness.] It is not so now by purchase.

141. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] How is the freedom acquired in this town?—By birthright and by servitude.

142. Can you tell me whether fees are paid in each case upon getting entered on the roll?—Yes, fees are paid in both cases.

143. Is it the same sum in each case?—I think not.

144. About what does it cost?—I really do not know; I think it is larger for servitude than in the other case, but I cannot speak positively.

145. In either case I think it is small, 50 s.?—I think it is more than it was; but I suppose it is not more than 50 s.; I cannot say.

146. Are you able to state, from your own knowledge, whether any freemen have been assisted in taking up their freedom, to get on the roll?—No, I am not.

147. Do you know Sir Henry Edwards, and have you seen him canvassing with Captain Kennard?—Yes.

148. Can you tell me whom you have seen assisting with them in that canvass?—I have seen Wreghitt, Mr. Arden, who is an alderman in the town council, and Mr. Cleaver; but I really do not know that I can speak as to the others.

149. Do you know Mr. Burley?—Yes.

150. Have you seen him with them?—I do not remember that I have seen him.

Cross-examined by Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.

151. I take it that the majority of the aldermen, whether Whig or Tory, possess very great influence?—The aldermen or the town councillors do.

152. I suppose that the aldermen have the greatest patronage?—No, merely in name; they have no greater power than the town councillors.

153. It is the majority of the aldermen and the town council?—Yes.

90.

154. There was some legal error, was there not, in 1866, about the election?—Yes.

155. You knew of that?—Yes.

156. A second warrant was moved for, I believe?—Yes; there was some informality in the voting.

157. Which terminated, I believe, in quashing the election?—Yes, entirely so.

158. And in seating six Liberals instead of six Conservatives?—Exactly. It was the first time that the Liberals had succeeded in getting any Liberal on the Town Council.

159. It was from a purely technical error?—Yes. Had it not been for that, the Town Council would have been, except for Alderman Sir Henry Edwards, entirely composed of Conservatives.

160. But for that, you would never have been a Liberal in the corporation at all?—Not up to that time, speaking from the time that he became a member; prior to that, the members were very different.

161. Have you subscribed to these municipal contests?—I never entered into any contest at all since Sir Henry Edwards came in.

162. Have you subscribed for the municipal contests?—At what time?

163. At any time?—Previously to that time I had subscribed towards legitimate expenses.

164. You have subscribed to the municipal contests; I thought so, whether they were legitimate expenses or not?—Yes, I have subscribed.

165. How often?—Perhaps two or three times.

166. Lately?—No.

167. When did you last subscribe?—I cannot speak exactly to the year, but before Sir Henry Edwards became one of the members.

168. Do you mean in 1865 or 1866?—No; the first election was in 1857.

169. Have you never subscribed since then?—No; speaking of legitimate expenses, I mean to say that my subscription was very small.

170. What was it?—I merely gave 5 l.; with that there are certain expenses consequent.

Re-examined by Mr. Serjeant Sargood.

171. You say that in 1866 the Liberals obtained the seats, but that the result of the election was to seat all the Conservatives?—Yes.

172. Did it turn out that the nomination papers of six of the Conservatives had been erroneously framed in some way?—Yes, there had been some informality in the framing of the papers.

173. And for that reason they were incapable of taking the seats to which they had been elected?—Yes; some votes having been recorded for the others, they took their seats.

174. But the Liberals with their numbers were able to fill the empty chairs?—Yes.

175. As to your subscription to the municipal election, there are legitimate expenses, of course, connected with the municipal election?—Yes.

176. What had been the amount of your subscription before 1857?—The utmost amount I ever gave was 5 l.

177. Since then would you look upon any subscription to such a contest as a hopeful one, having regard to what has been going on?—No, certainly not.

Mr.
R. Hodgson.

1869.

Mr. THOMAS EVANS, sworn; Examined by Mr. Waddy.

Mr. T. Evans. 178. I BELIEVE you are a Member of the Town Council?—I am.

9 March 1869. 179. Were you nominated as a candidate for the Minster Ward in 1866?—Yes.

180. You were one of the gentlemen, I believe, that got in by the quo warranto?—Yes, I am.

181. Have you looked through the accounts for the years from 1863 to 1866?

Mr. Baron Martin.] What accounts do you refer to?

182. Mr. Waddy.] The Town Council accounts. (To the Witness). What are they?—The payments of the expenses of the corporation.

183. Have you analysed the names of the tradesmen who were employed?—Yes, I have.

184. What have you discovered?—I find that the whole of them are Tories that have been employed, very nearly all Tories, for the past few years.

185. At the last municipal election, were you a candidate, and did you take part in the election for the Liberals?—I did.

186. Had you committee rooms at which you distributed voting papers to the voters?—Yes.

187. What took place as to those committee rooms; I mean your operations generally, to about a quarter to 11 o'clock?—We found, from the immense amount of money given by the Tories, it was of no use keeping up the voting, and consequently we gave up bringing up voters from about half-past 10 to about a quarter to 11 o'clock.

188. The committee rooms, I believe, were shut up, and the clerks were withdrawn?—Yes, they were withdrawn about that time.

189. Do you remember, in the month of September, a meeting being held?—In connection with Captain Kennard, I recollect seeing a paper announcing that he was going to address the electors, but I did not attend the meeting.

190. On the 3rd of November, do you remember a meeting being held at which you attended?—Yes, in the Assembly Rooms.

191. That was a meeting of the Conservatives, I believe?—It was not confined to the Conservatives, or else I should not have gone; it was a public meeting.

192. Were Sir Henry Edwards and Captain Kennard on the platform?—Yes, they were.

193. Can you give me the names of some other gentlemen; first of all, who was in the chair?—Alderman Arden.

194. Can you give me the names of some of the gentlemen who were on the platform?—Yes; there was Mr. Norfolk and Mr. Lowther, Mr. Wreggitt, Mr. Cussens, and Mr. Parkinson, I think; and Mr. Mooney, I believe, was there too.

195. Did you see Mr. Cleaver?—Yes, he was there too.

196. And Mr. Whitton?—Yes, I believe he was there as well.

197. And Mr. Watson?—And Mr. Watson the painter.

198. Was Mr. Akrill there?—I believe so.

199. And Mr. Nutchey?—Yes.

200. Mr. Monekman, was he there?—I think not, on the platform; I saw him at the meeting.

201. Did Sir Henry Edwards and Captain Kennard address the meeting?—They did.

202. Do you remember Mr. Norfolk moving a resolution after that?—I do.

203. What did he wish the meeting to resolve upon?—That Sir Henry Edwards and Captain Kennard were two fit candidates for this borough.

204. Do you remember who seconded that resolution?—Mr. Alderman Cussens.

205. Do you remember anything being said in the presence of the candidates, Messrs. Edwards and Kennard, about the municipal election of the day before?—Mr. Alderman Cussens, in seconding it, referred to that, and described it as a very great victory.

206. What else did he say as to the municipal election?—I do not call to my mind anything just now.

207. Did he say anything as to the effect of it?—I cannot say that he did.

208. You have mentioned the names of some of the gentlemen on the platform; did you afterwards, between then and the day of the Parliamentary poll, see those gentlemen in the streets with Messrs. Edwards and Kennard?—Yes, I did.

209. How were they engaged?—They were canvassing with them.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine stated that he had no question to put to the Witness.

[The Witness withdrew.]

Mr. JOHN DALTON, sworn; Examined by Mr. Serjeant Sargood.

Mr. J. Dalton. 210. Is your name John Dalton?—Yes.

211. What are you?—A Merchant's Clerk.

212. Were you engaged at the municipal election on the 2nd November, taking the poll for the Liberal candidates in Minster Ward?—Yes.

213. Mr. Baron Martin.] What were you, a clerk?—A check clerk.

214. In the Minster Ward?—Yes.

215. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] An alderman provided there, I believe?—Yes.

216. I suppose there were official persons engaged; did you occupy yourself, as the voting papers came in, in posting up the name of the voter, and the persons for whom he gave his vote?—Yes.

217. Are those the papers on which you were so employed (pointing to the same)?—Yes; they are like them.

218. They are arranged in the order in which they came in, I suppose?—Yes.

219. You posted them up in that order?—Yes.

220. Have you examined them with this fair copy in ink, to see that they are correctly copied?—Yes.

221. Do you remember Mr. Crosskill coming there to vote?—Yes, I do.

222. Do you remember about what hour in the morning it was?—It would be about 11 o'clock.

223. Have you examined your list in order to ascertain from that what number of votes had been given on the two sides at that time?—Yes.

224. How

224. How did the poll stand; have you got the figures 281 and 118, and are they correct?—Yes, that is the number.

225. How many were Conservatives?—281; and the Liberals were about 118.

226. Do you remember Mr. Sugden voting?—Yes.

227. About what hour in the morning was that?—About three quarters of an hour later.

228. Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] What memorandum is that?—This is a memorandum that I had when I was taking the poll; about three-quarters of an hour after that Mr. Sugden voted.

229. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] About three-quarters of an hour past 11 o'clock?—It was getting on to 12.

230. It was about 12 o'clock?—Yes.

231. How did the poll stand at that time?—About 450, I believe.

232. Mr. Baron Martin.] For the Conservatives?—Yes.

233. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] How many for the Liberals?—One hundred and seventy.

234. Do you know how many people there are on the register altogether, capable of voting?—Nine hundred and odd, I believe; 900, or thereabouts.

235. Therefore the Conservatives at that time had more than half of the whole roll?—Yes; there was over half.

236. How long was the poll kept up in your district, in the Minster Ward, where you were?—Up till four o'clock.

237. Did Conservative voters still keep coming up?—Yes, all the afternoon.

238. Did you see anyone showing them the way to the poll?—Yes.

239. Who did you see bringing them up; by name, if you can remember it?—I remember Mr. Thomas Richmond and Mr. Thomas Monckman.

240. Was there anyone there checking the poll on the part of the Conservative interest?—Yes; Mr. Charles Wood was taking the poll.

241. Mr. Baron Martin.] He was check clerk for the Conservatives, was he?—Yes.

242. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] Did he send out his slips anywhere by anyone?—Yes; by Robert Clark, I believe his name is.

243. Is he connected with the Wiggon works?—Yes; he used to be working there, but I do not know whether he does now or not.

244. Although an official report was not made up, was the state of the poll currently known in the room on both sides?—Yes.

245. There was no difficulty in knowing it, I suppose?—No, it was quite open.

246. Was it within your knowledge, sitting there all day, whether the Liberal voters ceased to come up after the hour you have mentioned?—Yes, it was said that they had given over.

247. A very few came up afterwards?—We voted a few after that.

248. But a very few?—Yes.

249. You assisted, I believe, the presiding Alderman at the close of the poll, in helping him to count up?—Yes.

250. You were considered a trustworthy person, I suppose, as to numbers and figures?—Yes.

251. Are you able to tell me the name of any gentleman who went about canvassing with Captain Kennard.

252. Mr. Baron Martin.] What was the result at the end of the day in Minster?—Five hundred and fifty, I believe, the Conservatives were, and the Liberals 216, or thereabouts.

253. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] You have, I believe, looked carefully through the list, in order to see that it agrees with your paper?—Yes, with these slips.

254. Just hand them to my Lord (the same were handed to his Lordship). Have you seen Sir Henry Edwards and Captain Kennard canvassing about the borough?—Yes, I have seen them.

255. Can you tell me the names of any of the gentlemen that you have seen canvassing with them?—I have not taken that notice; I have seen a few with them that I remember.

256. Tell me the names of any that you have seen?—I have seen Mr. Barkworth, Mr. Wreghitt, and Mr. Cleaver.

257. Do you remember any others; Mr. Burley, do you remember him?—No, I do not remember him.

258. Do you know Mr. Cussons?—Yes, I have seen Mr. Cussons.

259. Do you know Mr. Lowther; have you seen him?—No, I have not seen him with them, but I know him; I have seen Mr. Cleaver.

260. Mr. Monckman, do you know him?—I know Mr. Monckman, but I have not seen him with them canvassing.

261. Do you know Mr. Nutchey?—Yes; but I have not seen him canvassing.

262. Or Mr. Akrill?—I have not seen him.

263. Or Mr. Richmond?—No.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine stated that he had no question to put to the Witness.

[The Witness withdrew.]

Mr. RICHARD SOUTHWICK, sworn; Examined by Mr. Waddy.

264. ARE you a Town Councillor?—Yes.

265. Did you assist, on the day of the municipal election, in canvassing and getting up voters?—Yes.

266. Did you begin at nine o'clock?—Yes.

267. How long did you continue at work?—Till a little after 10 o'clock; 20 minutes after.

268. Did you then cease to work any longer?—Yes.

269. Why?—Because I saw that it was of no use trying any longer; the others were gaining ground, and besides, men that came to me, that I wanted to get to vote, said that they could get any amount of money on the other side.

90.

270. Who did you see on that day engaged on behalf of the Conservatives at the municipal election in your ward?—Mr. Burley was one, and there was Mr. Nutchey; there was also Mr. Richmond, and several others that I cannot exactly remember, and they were very busy.

271. Did you see Mr. Kempley?—Yes.

272. And Mr. Arden, or Mr. Akrill?—I did not see them.

273. On the day of the Parliamentary election, did you observe who were engaged on behalf of the Conservatives then?—I saw mostly the same men; that is, I saw Mr. Akrill. Do you mean canvassing?

1869.

Mr. R.
Southwick.

Mr. R.
Southwick.
1869.

274. First of all, in getting up voters; whom did you see engaged on the day of the election for Sir Henry Edwards and Captain Kennard?

—I saw several.

275. Did you see Mr. Richmond or Mr. Nutchey?—Yes, I saw them both.

276. And Mr. Norfolk?—I cannot say that I noticed Mr. Norfolk.

277. Between the time of the municipal election and the time of the Parliamentary election, did you frequently see Sir Henry Edwards and Captain Kennard canvassing?—Yes, I saw them at different times.

278. On those occasions, were they generally accompanied by one or two of their political friends?—Yes.

279. Can you tell me the names of any of the gentlemen that you have seen canvassing with them in that way?—Yes; I noticed Mr. Richmond was one; I saw him once or twice with them, and I saw Mr. Arden.

280. Did you see Mr. Watson, the auctioneer?—I cannot say that I did.

281. Or Mr. Norfolk?—No; I never noticed him.

282. Or Mr. Wreghitt?—Yes; I saw him several times.

283. Did you ever see Sir Henry Edwards and Captain Kennard in the streets without Mr. Wreghitt?—I cannot say; perhaps I did; I do not say that he was every time with them, but I saw Mr. Wreghitt several times with them.

284. Mr. Burley, did you see him?—Yes, I think I saw him once with them.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine stated that he had no question to put to the Witness.

[The Witness withdrew.]

JOHN REENEY OXLEY, sworn; Examined by Mr. Serjeant Sargood.

J. R. Oxley.

285. WHAT are you by trade?—I am a Brick-layer by trade.

286. Were you one of the Liberal canvassers at the last municipal election, on the 2nd November?—Yes.

287. You and a good many other persons were occupied in that business, I think?—Yes.

288. Was there any hour of the day at which you ceased to carry on your operations?—Yes.

289. What was that hour?—It was from a quarter past 10 to a quarter to 11.

290. Did you all give up at that time?—Yes; I think we did.

291. What was your reason for giving up then?—Because we saw that it was of no use going on. The Conservative side was overpowering us with the money that was had.

292. They were so far a-head that it was of no use going on?—Yes, they were above 100 a-head.

293. Had you seen the Parliamentary candidates, Sir Henry Edwards and Captain Kennard, about canvassing?—Yes.

294. Can you give me the names of any gentlemen who you saw with them canvassing?—Yes; there was Mr. Wreghitt, Mr. Arden, Mr. Norfolk, Mr. Thomas Monckman, Mr. Robert Thirsk, wood merchant, Mr. Richmond, Mr. Thompson the ironmonger, and Mr. Thompson the barber.

295. Did you see Mr. Alderman Cussons?—Yes, and I saw Mr. Barkworth.

296. Did you see Mr. Watson the auctioneer?—Yes, I saw him once.

297. Did you also see Mr. Dickson, the nurseryman in Norwood?—Yes.

298. Did you also see Mr. Ackrell?—Yes.

299. You have mentioned the name of Lowther?—Yes; Mr. Lowther and Mr. Cliffe.

300. Do you know Mr. Skinner?—Yes, he was with them too.

Cross-examined by Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.

301. What Norfolk is it you mean?—He is the manager of the iron foundry.

302. When did you see him with Skinner?—In the street.

303. I ask you when?—In the week-days, canvassing the town in Norwood.

304. What day of the week was it?—I cannot say exactly what day of the week it was.

305. How long before the election was it?—I think it was before the Parliamentary election.

306. How long before?—Perhaps five or six days.

307. Was it five or six days before?—I should say it was.

308. Now pray be particular about this; was it five or six days before the Parliamentary election?—It was between the municipal election and the Parliamentary election.

309. You say it was more than five or six days, but it would be 14 days?—Yes.

310. Within what time before the election will you venture to swear that you saw Mr. Norfolk?—I cannot say that, to a day; but I did see him with them.

311. Can you tell me within a week?—I have not made any memorandum of anything.

312. Can you tell me within a fortnight?—Yes, I can within a fortnight.

313. It was within a fortnight was it?—Yes.

314. Is that all you can tell me?—I saw him with them after the meeting in the Assembly Rooms.

315. When was that, or was that the only time that you saw them together?—I saw him on the platform.

316. You were asked whether you had seen them canvassing; do you swear that you ever saw them canvassing in your life, together?—Yes, I have seen him in the street with them; I cannot tell you the day, but it was in Norwood.

317. Will you venture to swear that you ever saw Sir Henry Edwards and Captain Kennard, and Mr. Norfolk canvassing together?—I saw Mr. Norfolk in the streets in different batches, and I expected that he would be with them; there was some on one side of the road, and some at the other.

318. Will you take upon yourself to swear that Mr. Norfolk was ever canvassing with Sir Henry Edwards?—Canvassing is, I suppose, standing in the streets in different groups, some soliciting, and some looking on.

319. How near will you swear that you ever saw Mr. Norfolk to Sir Henry Edwards when he was canvassing?—I cannot tell, because the streets of Beverley are of different widths, and I did not take any particular measurement of the distance.

320. Did you see Mr. Norfolk canvassing any-body body, or any house?—No, I did not see him, not taking him by himself; I only saw him in a batch along with the company.

321. Will you swear that it was along with Sir Henry Edwards?—He was close by the side of him.

322. How far was he off?—I cannot say how far he was off, but there was a deal of company.

323. When you saw this man did you see them at the same time?—I saw them in the street.

324. Did you see Sir Henry Edwards and Mr. Norfolk at the same time?—In the street.

325. At the same time?—In the street.

326. At the same time?—Yes.

327. That you swear?—That is in Norwood.

328. Do you swear that you saw, you know what being together means, Sir Henry Edwards and Norfolk in the street—

Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] He says that he saw him in Norwood.

329. Mr. Baron Martin.] Yes, that, I suppose, is a place in Beverley?—Yes.

330. Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] Will you swear that you saw them together in any street whatever?—Not close together; I mean that they were in company.

331. How far off were they?—Eight or nine yards, or perhaps further; I cannot tell to a yard or two; I did not measure the distance.

332. Were you watching them?—No, I was leaving work.

333. How many people were there in the street at that time; was there a large number of people in the street?—It was at my dinner time about 12 o'clock.

334. Were there a great many, a number of people in the street?—Only the people that I call, that were canvassing.

335. Why do you say that they were canvassing?—Because I know they were the Conservative party; the election was to come on the day that I saw Mr. Barkworth and Mr. Wilson go to Mr. Carrington's.

336. Were those the only two that you saw?—They were the only two that went to Mr. Carrington's, and he shut the door upon them.

337. Did you see Sir Henry Edwards go to any house?—He entered into Mr. Dickson's, and he went into the iron yard.

338. Where was Mr. Norfolk then?—He was in the street at the time.

339. How far off was he?—I cannot say.

Re-examined by Mr. Serjeant Sargood.

340. You understand what canvassing means, I suppose?—Yes.

Mr. Baron Martin.] He judged from what he saw that they were canvassing.

Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] Yes, my Lord.

341. (To the Witness).] Have you any doubt about Mr. Norfolk; do you know him?—Yes; perfectly well.

342. Had you seen him in that party, at a greater or less distance, from Sir Henry Edwards?—Yes.

STEPHEN GEORGE SMELT, sworn; Examined by Mr. Waddy.

343. WERE you a Canvasser on the Municipal Election Day, on behalf of the Liberals?—Yes.

344. At what time did you begin to canvass?—I began about nine o'clock in the morning.

345. How long did you continue?—Till about a quarter-past 10, or from that to a quarter to 11; we finished then.

346. Did you cease then?—Yes.

347. Why was that?—Because the other party was overpowering us with money.

348. You were going backwards and forwards to the rooms; you went with voters, did you not?—Yes.

349. As you were going backwards and forwards to the rooms with voters, can you tell me what parties you saw employed by the other side on the municipal election day?—I saw Mr. Ackrell, and Mr. Cliffe, and Mr. Wreghitt.

350. Did you see Mr. Burrell?—Yes.

351. Did you see Mr. Watson, the auctioneer?—Yes.

352. And Mr. Watson, the painter?—No; I cannot swear to him.

353. Or Mr. Whitton?—Mr. Marmaduke Whitton?

354. Yes?—Yes.

355. On the day of the Parliamentary election, were you taking any part in the work?—I was looking out at the mob.

356. Did you see who were employed on that day to do the same work that had been done at the municipal election?—Yes.

357. Who were they?—There was Mr. Arden.

90.

358. Were they the same parties?—Yes.

359. Are you a freeman?—Yes.

360. Did you ever loose any animals on the pastures?—No.

361. You never did?—I never did.

362. Did you ever get part of the grant?—Yes.

363. When was that?—It would be about five or six years ago since I got the first grant; I got the other about two years ago.

364. How was it that you got it; to whom did you apply for it?—I applied to the pasture master's clerk, Mr. Monckman.

365. Did some one take you to the clerk?—No.

366. Who was it that you spoke to first of all?—I wrote a note to the clerk first, and then afterwards; this was the month of October, when I first applied. I heard on the Thursday that a Tory, Mr. Johnson, was putting up for the election; and I then asked him—he was pasture-master at that time—how it was that I had not received an answer about making my application for Walker's Gift, and he said, "I did not know that you had applied for it, or you should have had it"; and I said that I had. Then he said to me, "Do the best you can to get me in for the Conservatives, and I will do the best I can to get you Walker's Gift."

367. How much did you get?—£. 2.

368. Mr. Baron Martin.] That was Johnson, was it?—Yes.

369. Mr. Waddy.] Did you hear anything about this afterwards?—No.

S. G. Smelt.

- S. G. Smelt.* 370. Did you afterwards get the 2*l.* gift in 1867?—Yes.
- 9 March 1869. 371. Who got that for you?—I could not say exactly.
372. Do you recollect a man of the name of Pipes coming to you?—Yes; that was when they elected for pasture-master, on the 1st March; he asked me to vote for them, and I said, that if I was wanted, probably I might, but I never went near to vote at all.

GEORGE SUGDON, sworn; Examined by Mr. Serjeant Sargood.

- G. Sugdon.* 375. WERE you a voter at the municipal election?—Yes.
376. Did you vote last November?—Yes; I did.
377. As a Liberal or a Conservative?—I voted for the Liberals.
378. Do you know about what time it was?—It was about 12 o'clock.
379. Had you any communication with anybody at the time, as to why the poll was kept open?—I had been out of town, and when I returned to vote, as I came in, they told me that the Liberals had ceased voting, and that they had closed the committee-room; but I thought, as I had come, I would vote.
380. And you went to the committee-room, I suppose?—No, I did not.
381. You went to the poll?—Yes; I went to vote.

Mr. Baron Martin.] This has been proved by several witnesses.

382. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] Do you know

373. But why were you to vote for them?—I suppose because they gave me the gift.

374. What was said upon the occasion?—He said, "We have helped you," and I said, that if I was wanted, I should go, but I never went near it.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine stated that he had no question to put to the witness.

Sir Henry Edwards and Captain Kennard?—Yes, I do.

383. Had you seen them canvassing?—Yes.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] There are some figures, my Lord, in the case, that I shall call your Lordship's attention to presently.

384. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] Had you seen anyone canvassing with them?—Yes; I saw some, I know.

385. Will you tell me their names?—I recollect seeing Mr. Wreghitt and Mr. Arden, Mr. Cleaver and Mr. Barkworth. I cannot speak to any one else positively. I only saw them once to notice them. I never saw them but once; I saw Mr. Wreghitt.

386. Did you see Mr. Watson?—No; I cannot speak to any one positively. I know them all, but I cannot speak to more than those I have named.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine stated that he had no question to put to the witness.

[The Witness withdrew.]

JOHN DALES, sworn; Examined by Mr. Waddy.

- J. Dales.* 387. WERE you Pasture Master in Beverley from 1859 to the present year?—Yes.
388. Were you chairman for the year ending in March 1867?—I was chairman in 1866, and up to 1867.
389. Within your memory, how often have there been contests for the pasture mastership?—Every time, or nearly so.
390. Since the year 1857, do you know of your own knowledge as to the employment of money in these contests?—I expect that at least there was money sent for the contest to carry it on; there is no doubt of it.
391. Mr. Baron Martin.] Do you mean in bribing people to vote for the pasture masters?—Yes, money to get the pasture masters in.
392. Mr. Waddy.] What person in Beverley supplied that money?—Mr. Wreghitt, I believe.
393. Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] Did you see the money?—No; I did not see him give the money, but I have heard him say that he would send it.
394. Mr. Waddy.] What has Mr. Wreghitt himself ever told you?—

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] I must object to this, my Lord.

Mr. Baron Martin.] I think it is admissible in evidence. One of the things that I have to report upon is bribery.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] But, my Lord, this is bribery for the pasture mastership.

Mr. Baron Martin.] I do not know how it will be, but if Mr. Serjeant Sargood's opening is borne out, it will be evidence.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] Does your Lordship think that what Wreghitt said is evidence?

Mr. Baron Martin.] Yes, certainly.

395. Mr. Waddy (to the Witness).] What have you heard Mr. Wreghitt say as to any money being employed in the pasture master contests. I mean as to where he got it?—I do not know where he got it, but I heard him say that; when I was chairman I went with the clerk to ask for the money.

396. Who was the clerk?—Mr. Monckman was clerk to the pasture master.

Mr. Baron Martin (to Mr. Waddy).] Ask him what he heard Mr. Wreghitt say?

397. Mr. Waddy.] You have said that you went with Mr. Monckman, the clerk, to Mr. Wreghitt?—Yes.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] When was this?

398. Mr. Waddy.] Isaac Monckman you say was the clerk?—Yes.

399. When was this?—It was the last day in February in 1867.

Mr. Baron Martin.] I think this is evidence, dence, but what weight it will have as to the elections is a different thing.

The Witness.] It was when my time was expired for chairman.

400. Mr. Waddy.] Do you mean that your time as pasture master had expired?—No, my time as chairman.

401. Did you go with Monckman, the clerk, to Mr. Wreghitt?—Yes.

402. What took place, just tell us, between Mr. Monckman, Mr. Wreghitt, and yourself?—We applied for money for the election on the 1st March.

403. Mr. Baron Martin.] Do you mean in 1867?—Yes.

404. Mr. Waddy.] What was the money wanted for; what were you to do with it?—To choose the pasture master.

405. How was it to be used?—It was to be given to those men who had the votes.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] If we are to have this evidence given, we ought to have what was said.

406. Mr. Baron Martin.] You say that the money was to be given to the men who had the votes?—Yes; before that we asked Mr. Wreghitt for the money, and he stated that the money would be all ready in the morning, and that he would see Mr. Dawson; that is, the 1st of March; and he would not give us it; and he did not give any that night.

407. Mr. Baron Martin.] He was to see somebody, was he?—Yes; Mr. Dawson; he was one of the pasture masters.

408. Mr. Waddy.] I believe it is Mr. James Dawson?—Yes.

409. Do you know whether Mr. Wreghitt did pay the money to Mr. Dawson?—I do not know whether he did or not.

410. Who was chairman for the following year; was it Mr. Dawson?—No; do you mean after me.

411. Yes?—Mr. Arnott.

412. The year following that, I believe, Mr. Dawson was chairman?—Yes.

413. On the last day of February 1868, were you at a meeting at the "Golden Ball"?—Yes.

414. Was Mr. Charles Arnott then the chairman?—Yes.

415. Were Mr. Arnott and Mr. Monckman, the clerk, present at the meeting at the "Golden Ball"?—Yes.

416. Did they leave the meeting to go to Mr. Wreghitt?—Yes.

417. Before they left the meeting, had you and other persons present desired them to do so?—Yes, it was the custom to do so; they always used to go to Mr. Wreghitt at that time.

418. Mr. Baron Martin.] How long had this been the custom; for many years?—As far as I have known it, for nine or ten years it has been the custom to do so; I do not say to a year.

419. Mr. Waddy.] Did you ever hear of such a thing before 1857, or before Sir Henry Edwards came to the borough?—No, I never heard of such a thing before.

420. Had Mr. Wreghitt himself any interest or right in the freedom or in the pasture?—No, he had no right in it.

421. He had nothing to do with it?—No; he is not a freeman.

422. Did Mr. Arnott, after he had left the meeting, come back again?—Yes.

423. What took place at the meeting; what was the result, then, when Mr. Arnott came back?—He reported that Mr. Wreghitt had stated that he would let them have 100*l.* and more.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] This is what somebody said that Mr. Wreghitt said.

Mr. Baron Martin.] I do not think this would prove that Mr. Wreghitt gave the money.

424. Mr. Waddy.] Did he produce any money?—I never saw it, but he stated that he would let them have 100*l.*; Mr. Wreghitt would; I do not know where it came from; I cannot say.

425. Was any money found by anybody the next day?—I cannot say where it was found.

426. Mr. Baron Martin.] Did you see any money paid the next day?—No; I do not know that I did.

427. Mr. Waddy.] Before the year 1859, were the pasture masters elected from each body, the Conservatives and the Liberals?—

Mr. Baron Martin.] I think that has been sworn to, and there has been no cross examination upon it.

428. Mr. Waddy.] Very well, my Lord. (To the Witness.) Has Mr. Wreghitt ever paid you any money?—He once paid me a sovereign; that was for the choosing of a guardian.

429. Mr. Baron Martin.] He gave you a sovereign?—Yes, to help me to get in the guardian, and I was guardian at that time.

430. You mean guardian of the poor?—Yes, I was guardian of St. Nicholas's parish.

431. Mr. Waddy.] How came he to give it you?—It was to help me to get in, that I might stand treat for those that voted for me.

432. When was that?—I forget the year, I am sure.

433. Did you so apply it?—

434. Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] But when was it?—I cannot exactly say the year at present, but I think it was about 1866 or 1867.

435. Mr. Waddy.] What is Mr. Wreghitt in this town?—He is a draper.

436. How long has he been in the town, do you know?—I cannot say that.

437. How long have you been in the town?—All my life, I think, almost.

438. Did Mr. Wreghitt ever tell you about where the money came from that he had?—No.

439. Do you remember being at the "Cross Keys" with Mr. Kempley?—Yes.

440. Did you receive anything from him?—Yes.

441. What did you receive?—I believe 40*l.*

442. Mr. Baron Martin.] When was this?—It was at the election of Sir Henry Edwards and Mr. Walker; the election of Mr. Walters and Mr. Glover, I believe.

443. In the year 1859?—I think it was.

444. Mr. Waddy.] What did you do with that money?—It was to pay voters.

445. How much did you give to each voter?—About 3*l.*

446. What was the money given to them for?—To vote for Edwards and Walker.

447. Mr. Baron Martin.] Was this before the election, or after the election?—It was on the election day.

J. Dales.

J. Dales.
9 March,
1869.

448. Do you know where Mr. Kempley got that money from?—I do not know, but I expect he got it from Mr. Wreghitt.

449. Why do you say that?—Because we always knew the money came from there; we always had a knowledge of that.

450. Did Mr. Wreghitt say anything to you about it?—No.

451. In the last few years have you been having grouse sent to you?—Yes, I have.

452. For how many years have you had them?—I have only received twice a brace of grouse.

453. Who sent them to you?—Mr. Wreghitt.

454. When he sent them, did he say where they came from; how he had got them?—No; I do not know that he said particular where they came from; I do not know whether he said where they came from.

455. Do you remember whether there was any ticket upon them?—I cannot say whether there was; but I believe he said something about Sir Henry Edwards' compliments when the grouse was given to me.

Cross-examined by Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.

456. Was there an election petition in relation to that election, when you say that you received 40*l.*?—Yes; there was a petition against Mr. Walters, and against Sir Henry Edwards, too.

457. There were two petitions?—Yes.

458. One against Mr. Walters, and another against Sir Henry Edwards?—Yes.

459. Was Mr. Walters a Radical?—I do not know that.

460. Was he a Liberal?—Yes; perhaps.

461. Mr. Walters was unseated, was he not?—Yes.

462. And Sir Henry Edwards retained his seat?—Yes.

463. There was another petition next year?—Yes.

464. Mr. Baron Martin.] Were you examined as a witness?—No; I was not at all.

HENRY WARD, sworn; Examined by Mr. Serjeant Sargood.

H. Ward.

465. You are Henry Ward?—Yes.

466. Are you a Reporter for the "Beverley Recorder" newspaper?—Yes.

467. Did you attend a meeting called by the Conservative party at the Assembly-rooms, on the 2nd November?—On the 3rd November.

468. Did you see Sir Henry Edwards and Captain Kennard on the platform?—Yes.

469. Have you your note-book here?—Yes.

470. Who were with them on the platform taking any active part in the meeting?—

471. Mr. Baron Martin.] This was published in the newspaper, was it?—Yes, my Lord.

472. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] Give me the names of the gentlemen who were there?—There were Mr. Alderman Arden, Mr. Alderman Cozens, Mr. Barkworth, and the Reverend Mr. Mooney.

473. Mr. Baron Martin.] A clergyman?—Yes; Captain Elliott and Mr. Wreghitt.

474. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] And several other gentlemen?—Yes; but I cannot call them to mind just now.

475. Were you present at the Conservative meeting on the 11th of November?—Yes.

476. Were the two candidates there?—Yes.

477. What gentlemen did you see there then?—About the same gentlemen.

478. Mr. Wreghitt was there?—Yes.

479. And Mr. Alderman Arden took the chair?—Yes.

480. And the other gentlemen whom you have mentioned; did you see them again?—Yes.

481. Had you seen Sir Henry Edwards and Captain Kennard canvassing about the borough?—Yes.

482. Frequently?—Yes.

483. Had you seen with them on that canvass the same gentlemen you have mentioned as having been present at the meeting?—Yes; with the exception of Captain Elliott, but I cannot say that I saw him.

484. Had you seen other persons whom you have not mentioned, as being at the meeting, canvassing with them?—Yes.

485. Had you seen, amongst others, Robert Thirsk; just mention some of their names?—Yes.

486. And Mr. Cleaver?—Yes.

487. And Mr. Watson?—Yes.

488. And Mr. Ackrell?—Yes.

489. Thomas McCoy?—Yes.

490. And Mr. Straker?—Yes.

491. Mr. Nutchee?—I cannot say I have seen him.

492. And Mr. Monckman?—Yes.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine stated; that he had no question to put to the Witness.

JAMES HUTTON, sworn; Examined by Mr. Waddy.

J. Hutton.

493. WERE you formerly a member of the Conservative Working Man's Association?—I was.

494. Was Mr. Wreghitt chairman of that association?—He was.

495. In the month of February 1867, were you chosen pasture master?—I was nominated one: I was chosen on the 1st March.

496. After the election, did you offer to pay your share of the expenses of the election?—I inquired what was to pay, and then I was told that when I was wanted, or when any money was wanted of me, I should be axed for it; and for that reason I had nothing to pay. Before I was elected, I said that I wished to try what a pure election would do, and that I would be at no expense whatever, not to be elected; but I did not think it right that a poor man was to pay for me, and that if he had to pay, I should wish to pay it myself.

497. While you were pasture master, do you recollect applications being made for Walker's Freeman's Gift?—Yes.

498. Mr.

498. Mr. Baron Martin.] Was Mr. Walker a native of this town?—I do not know; I have not been long in the town.

499. Mr. Waddy.] When these applications were received by the pasture masters, what were the questions asked as to it?—I do not know whether there were many questions asked, but there was always a partiality shown if they belonged to what they called “our party.”

500. Which party was that?—The crimson party.

501. Do you mean the Conservatives?—Yes.

502. Crimson was their colour?—Yes.

503. Did you object to that?—Yes, I objected to it; I said that they should leave their politics at home as pasture masters, and should come there and do their duty as pasture masters.

504. At that time did Mr. Wreghitt, to your knowledge, interfere with the elections?—He had on following elections. He said that there was one of the pasture masters that had lifted them up with one hand, and knocked them down with two, and that was only me; at the municipal election, I voted for the two Liberals; I did not vote for Mr. Wreghitt; I voted for Mr. Findlater that was one of the candidates, and so I was not nominated.

505. Before that time, had you observed whether Mr. Wreghitt had had anything to do with the pasture master's election?—He had nothing to do with the pasture master's election, but he had to do with the dinner.

506. Did you say something about the dinner?—I said that I thought that if they had any dinner to spare, there was plenty of freemen to invite without inviting anybody else.

JOHN WARD, sworn; Examined by Mr. Serjeant Sargood.

516. ARE you the Publisher of the “Beverley Recorder” newspaper?—Yes.

517. Did you publish in your paper the address of Sir Henry Edwards at the last election?—I did.

518. By whose instructions?—I received my instructions from Sir Henry Edwards.

519. From him personally?—Yes.

520. Was that publication of the address to be continued until it was countermanded?—There was no positive order.

521. No positive direction?—No.

522. You began, and you did publish it from time to time in the paper?—Yes.

523. Having published it for a few times, did anybody come to you as to it?—Yes.

524. Who was that?—Mr. Wreghitt.

525. What did he say to you about the address?—He asked the cost of it.

526. Mr. Baron Martin.] That is, the amount of your bill?—Yes, for its insertion; and I told him.

Mr. GEORGE M. USHER, sworn; Examined by Mr. Waddy.

533. I BELIEVE you are Secretary to the Beverley Iron and Waggon Company, Limited?—I am.

534. Is Sir Henry Edwards one of the directors and chairman of that company?—He is.

535. When was it established?—In 1864.

536. Mr. Norfolk is the managing director, I believe?—He is.

537. Mr. Baron Martin.] Is it for making rail-

507. Was there a dinner every year?—Yes.

508. Did Mr. Wreghitt come to that dinner?—Yes, he did.

509. Was there anybody else at that dinner except Mr. Wreghitt, who was not a freeman?—Yes; I believe there was one.

510. Mr. Alderman Cozens was there?—Yes, he was there, I believe.

511. He is one of the trustees, is he not?—I do not know; but if he was there, that was all that was there that were not freemen.

512. Except Mr. Alderman Cozens and Mr. Wreghitt, there were none there but freemen?—No; not to my knowledge.

513. Mr. Baron Martin.] At whose expense is the dinner given?—It is under Walker's Gift, the dinner is.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] My Lord, the will directs that the dinner is to be given, and the amount allowed for it is 5 l.

514. Mr. Waddy.] Did you object?—I only objected to him himself. I mentioned it afterwards, that if I had known he had been there, I certainly should not myself have gone.

515. What was the result as to your election in the next year?—I never was nominated at all, because I did not vote for Mr. Wreghitt; that was one thing.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine stated he had no question to ask the Witness.

527. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] What did he say when he heard the price of it?—He said that I was to discontinue it for the present.

528. Did you recognise him as a competent authority to countermand Sir Henry Edwards' order, and did you act upon it?—Yes, I did.

529. To whom did you send in your bill for what you had done already?—To the solicitor, Mr. Bainton, the election agent.

530. The recognised agent of Sir Henry Edwards?—Yes.

531. Your bill was duly paid, was it?—Yes, it was.

532. And it appears in their accounts sent in to the returning officer?—Yes.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine stated he had no question to put to the Witness.

way waggons?—Yes, and for general agricultural purposes as well, my Lord.

538. Mr. Waddy.] Are Mr. Robert Thirsk, Anthony Levett, and John Robinson Bentley, foremen?—Yes.

539. Are these men workmen: George William Davis?—Yes.

540. Thomas White?—Yes.

541. Thomas Monckman?—Yes.

543. Robert Bentley?—I do not know him.
544. John Turnbull?—Yes.
545. Do you know John Robinson Bentley?—Yes, I admitted him; he is a foreman.
546. Has he a nephew employed at your works?—That I cannot say.
547. At the last municipal election did you stand for one ward?—Yes.
548. Which was it?—The Minster ward.
549. And Mr. Norfolk, did he stand for the other ward of St. Mary's?—Yes.
550. Each of you stood, I believe, in the Conservative interest, with two other candidates for each ward?—Yes, I was in the former election.
551. And you were one of the three in each case?—Yes.
552. And all three, I believe, were successful in both wards?—Yes.
553. Who were the other candidates in your ward with you?—Mr. Catterson and Mr. Lowther.
554. Is that Mr. Robinson Lowther?—Mr. Butterwell Lowther.
555. Was it Mr. Catterson, junior?—No, senior.
556. I believe Mr. Catterson is your father-in-law?—Yes.
557. In the other ward who were the successful candidates with Mr. Norfolk?—I believe Mr. Whitton and Mr. Benton.
558. Marmaduke Whitton?—Yes.

Cross-examined by Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.

559. This company, I believe, used to be in the hands of the bank?—It was.
560. But it got into circumstances of difficulty?—Yes.
561. Mr. Baron Martin.] It is Mr. Crosskill's old business, is it not?—Yes.
562. Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] I believe some difficulties arose?—Yes.
563. Do you know that Sir Henry Edwards was solicited to take the chair?—Yes; he was solicited to take the chair.

WILBERFORCE HERDSMAN, sworn; Examined by Mr. Serjeant Sargood.

Herdsman.

575. ARE you one of the Municipal Electors?—Yes.
576. And have been for some few years past?—Yes.
577. Are you personally acquainted with the mode by which the municipal elections have been carried on for some years past?—Yes.
578. Is it within your knowledge whether or not money has been paid to voters?—Oh, yes, it has.
579. Probably from your own personal experience, one way or another, you can tell me what amount is the usual amount?—There has been a difference in the amount; it varied from half-a-crown to a crown at times, and up to 10s. and 1 l.
580. That is recently, is it not?—Yes, that is recently, before the last election.
581. Did you ever know it higher?—Yes, 15 s.
582. Before 1868?—Yes, and in the case of some individuals a sovereign.
583. In 1861, were you an applicant for Walker's Gift?—I did not apply, while I was asked if I had had anything; I went round with

564. That was after he had become a Member for the borough, was it not?—Yes; it was many years after that.

565. Upon the earnest solicitation of the parties he became chairman?—Yes.

566. It is a fact, is it not, that if you had broken up at that time, there would have been an enormous deal of want in consequence?—There is no doubt that if the thing had not been turned into a company the works would have been taken down completely.

567. And the men would have been thrown out of employment?—Yes; we have generally employed from 200 to 300 men.

568. Mr. Baron Martin.] Has Mr. Crosskill anything to do with it now?—No.

Re-examined by Mr. Serjeant Sargood.

569. It was a very unsuccessful affair; and was not Mr. Crosskill paid a considerable sum to retire from it?—He was paid something; it was arranged in the Court of Chancery, and I cannot answer for it.

570. This unhappy concern paid him something to retire?—Yes.

571. Was not this unflourishing concern in such a state that the applications for shares were more numerous than you could supply?—We had more applications for shares than we could supply according to the number that we issued.

572. Mr. Baron Martin.] It is Mr. Crosskill's Company still?—No; it is the Beverley Iron Working Company.

573. What things do you send up to exhibit?—They are similar in many respects to what were manufactured formerly. Mr. Crosskill's name is not used for us; they have a patent besides of their own.

574. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] Mr. Crosskill's son carries on a business of his own, I believe?—Yes.

the gentlemen to canvass for the municipal, and they canvassed upon a man that had had this Walker's charity, and he would not vote for them; he said he was the wrong party, and one of the gentlemen axed me if I had got anything, and I said no, I had never applied for nothing, and they said, "Then on Monday we can give this money to you, or give it to your friend."

584. This was in 1861?—Yes.

585. Did you get any grant from Walker's Gift?—Yes.

Mr. Giffard.] This gentleman's name is not in the particulars; I take it, that the only hypothesis upon which this can be evidence is upon the hope of connecting one thing with the other.

Mr. Baron Martin.] 1861 is a very long time ago.

586. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] It is, my Lord; I will not pursue that. (To the Witness.) Were you canvassed at the last municipal election at all?—No.

587. What was the date of the last one that you you took any active part in?—I believe it was 1867.

588. Was the same practice going on then?—Yes.

589. What was the sum that was paid, within your knowledge, at that time?—From half-a-crown to a crown.

590. Have you made any application for Walker's Gift since 1861?—Yes.

591. When was it?—I believe it was in 1867.

Mr. Giffard.] I must again take the objection, this gentleman's name is not in the list.

Mr. Baron Martin.] I do not know what my brother Sargood means to prove. (To Mr. Serjeant Sargood). Do you mean to show that this man was paid himself?

Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] Yes, my Lord.

Mr. Baron Martin.] Just show me the particulars.

592. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] I may save your Lordship trouble; I am told he is not named in the particulars; therefore, I will not give any individual act of receiving money, but I will use him as a witness, giving general evidence upon the subject. (To the Witness.) Do you know any person who did get anything from Walker's Gift besides yourself?—Yes, a great many.

593. Do you know which way they voted at the Parliamentary elections?—There has been one or two that has voted contrary against them, but the biggest part of them voted for them.

594. Had you ever any communication with Mr. Monkman, whose name has been mentioned to-day?—Yes, Thomas Monkman.

595. What was the subject of it?—We was what was called runners at the municipal election.

596. What had you to do?—I had to go and fetch men up to vote.

597. Mr. Baron Martin.] Do you mean at this last municipal election?—No, 1867.

598. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] You were employed on that election?—Yes.

599. What did Monkman employ you to do?—Monkman paid me 5 s. for my day, and I voted and had 5 s. for my vote, the same as the rest of the men got, and he sent me to Mr. Wreghitt.

600. You asked for 5 s. for your vote?—Yes, the same as the rest was getting.

601. Did he refer you to anybody on the subject?—Yes.

Mr. Giffard.] I do object to that; it comes to precisely the same thing.

Mr. Baron Martin.] I do not see any objection to it; I know from the opening of the learned Serjeant that he means to show that there has been a system of appropriating this money to those who were not entitled to receive Walker's Gift, and other matters with regard to this pasturage, for the purpose of promoting the election, as I understand, anything to do with bribing individual men, but as a general system affecting the election generally, that there has been corrupt influence used by means of this pasturage and Walker's Gift, for the purpose of affecting voters, it is not personal bribery at all.

Mr. Giffard.] I should put it thus: if it is bribery, the particulars have not been given; if it is not bribery, it is irrelevant.

Mr. Baron Martin.] I do not think so; it is evidence of a general system of applying the benefits, that is, the feeding of cattle upon the pasture, and money coming out of Walker's Gift, for the purpose of influencing voters; it is clearly evidence.

Mr. Giffard.] It would clearly be evidence if the particulars had been given.

Mr. Baron Martin.] You do not want any particulars for that; will you show me Mr. Justice Blackburn's order; if it is the common order it is the particulars of persons bribed, which means persons bribed at the election; this would not come within that at all; it has nothing to do with it.

602. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] I do not think the particulars bear upon it; I take it as part of the general evidence. (To the Witness.) He referred you to Mr. Wreghitt?—Yes.

603. Did you go to him?—Yes.

604. What did you say to him?—I told him I had only received 5 s.; I had not received nothing for my vote the same as the rest of the men that I had fetched up; they had got money, and he said he would see Mr. Monkman, and I was to call again; I seed Mr. Monkman, and he paid me 5 s. for my vote.

Mr. Giffard.] My Lord, we have now the order, if your Lordship will hear me: "Upon hearing counsel on both sides, I do order that the petitioners shall, three days before the day appointed for trial, leave with the master, and also give the respondents or their agents, particulars in writing of all persons with numbers on register, alleged to have been bribed, of all persons alleged to have been treated, of all persons alleged to have intimidated, and of all persons alleged to have been conveyed to the poll, or their expenses paid."

Mr. Baron Martin.] That is, persons who are bribed at the election of 1868.

Mr. Giffard.] That is not quite all, this order goes further than the common form: "And that no evidence shall be given by the petitioners of any objection not specified in such particulars, except by leave of a judge upon such terms, if any, as to amendment, postponement, and payment of costs as may be ordered; and I further order that the petitioners shall, within four days from this day, leave with the master, and give the respondents particulars in writing of the nature of the corrupt or illegal practices charged in general terms in the petition, otherwise the petitioners shall be restricted to the charges the nature of which is specified in the petition; and in the event of such particulars of the nature of the corrupt or illegal practices, in the petition alleged in general terms, being given, the petitioners shall, three days before the day appointed for trial, leave with the master, and give the respondents, particulars of the person or persons alleged to have been affected thereby, subject to the same consideration as above provided in cases of bribery, or other specified charges." Your Lordship observes that the order is a great deal more precise than an order for particulars generally is.

Mr. Baron Martin.] It seems to me that this is not within it at all. This man is not a person, as I understand, who is alleged to be bribed at the last election, or to have received anything for it; but it is for the purpose of showing, as was done in the Salford case, the general conduct at the election, and for the purpose of thereby affording evidence which may bear upon what was the general quality of the act which was done afterwards which may affect the election. It is like the hiring of cabs, and it is like the hiring of roughs, and it is like the hiring of public-houses, and having people there and treating them; but it is clearly admissible in evidence for the purpose of showing what possibly may be the quality of acts which do immediately affect the election. There is nothing in this to confine the evidence in the case simply to what has been done with respect to bribing any particular man; but my brother Sargood may give general evidence bearing upon the case showing the real nature of the transaction here.

Mr. Giffard.] What occurred to me was, that that last branch of the order pointed out that the Petitioner must, in order to entitle himself to give this evidence, have given particulars specifying those individual acts, and the names of the persons whom he alleges to be corruptly influenced.

Mr. Baron Martin.] I do not think that is necessary at all. You may go on, Mr. Serjeant Sargood.

605. Mr. Serjeant Sargood (to the Witness).] I will come to another matter; were you employed by Mr. Wreghitt originally for the purpose of signing notices of objections to Parliamentary electors for the Conservative party?—Yes.

606. He was your employer?—Yes.

607. Did he pay you?—Yes.

608. For what period were you so employed?—For the last four years.

609. Mr. Baron Martin.] Do you mean 1868, 1867, 1866, and 1865?—Yes, my Lord.

610. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] Do you know a person named Henry Usher?—Yes.

611. Did you, in 1865, apply to Mr. Wreghitt about taking up Henry Usher's freedom?—No; Mr. Wreghitt applied to me about him.

612. What did Mr. Wreghitt say to you?—He axed me if I knewed the man, and I said "Yes;" he said he had had his brother applying for his freedom-money, and it was 2*l.* 10*s.* was the cost of his freedom; he axed me if I thought he would be a man that would support the party.

613. Did he say who?—Yes; Sir Henry Edwards; at that time it was not Sir Henry, it was Mr. Edwards, and I was to see the man, and tell him to come to Mr. Wreghitt for his money.

614. Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] Who said this?—Mr. Wreghitt.

615. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] Was Usher a young man who had just come of age?—He had not got his freedom; I will not say how old he was; I believe he was away from the town a piece.

616. Was he about 22 or 23?—Yes, something of the sort.

617. Not a man who had had a vote before?—No.

618. Did you communicate to Usher what Wreghitt had said to you?—Yes.

619. What did you say to Usher about his voting?—I told him that his brother had applied for his freedom; Mr. Wreghitt told me that I was to see him; that his brother had applied for his freedom, and he would give him his freedom upon condition that he hoped he would support Mr. Edwards' party.

620. Did you send Usher to Wreghitt?—Yes.

621. Did you afterwards see Usher when he returned from Wreghitt?—Yes.

622. Did he show you anything?—He took me to a public-house, to give me the lunch-money; there was 1*s.* allowed out of it always to get lunch with.

623. Did he show you any money?—No; he said he had got the money; he did not show me it.

624. Do you know how much was wanted to take up the freedom?—Yes, 2*l.* 9*s.* altogether, putting his claim in and putting him on the free-men's list, and then that was 1*s.* less as a matter of regular rule; that was for the man to get the lunch with.

625. In the same year, 1865, did you see one Joseph Newball?—Yes.

626. Was that by Wreghitt's desire?—No; I seed Wreghitt first, and when I seed him, I went to apply for this young man to take up his freedom for him.

627. You introduced the subject to Wreghitt?—Yes.

628. What did you say to Wreghitt about Newball?—I told him he was a young man that wanted to take his freedom up; he was free-born and his freedom only cost 10*s.* altogether, and I told him he was a young man, and he wanted to see if they would take it up for him, and he would support them; Mr. Wreghitt said I might send him on, if I thought he was a friend of ours.

629. You mean about voting?—Yes.

630. Did some negotiation practically take place as to that young man's vote?—Yes.

631. Did you send him to Mr. Wreghitt?—Yes; I took him to Mr. Wreghitt.

632. Is it within your knowledge that his freedom was paid for by Wreghitt?—Yes.

633. Do you know that?—Yes.

634. Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] Did you see it paid for him?—Yes, I seed him pay it; I was by him.

635. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] Do you remember William Palmer?—Yes.

636. In the beginning of the year 1867, did you go with him to Mr. Wreghitt about taking out his freedom?—No; I went to Mr. Wreghitt before I seed Palmer, to ask Mr. Wreghitt to take his freedom up, but he objected to it at first, but I seed a gentleman they called Mr. Lowther, and he told me I was to go to Mr. Wreghitt again, and tell him he must take his freedom up; he was a man that he thought would support the party.

637. And was Mr. Palmer's freedom taken up accordingly?—Yes.

638. In July 1868, last year, did you see Mr. Wreghitt about getting Thomas Rippon's freedom for him?—Yes.

639. Did you introduce that subject to Mr. Wreghitt?—Yes.

640. How did he receive that proposal?—Not very well.

641. What did he say about it?—He said he had taken his brother's freedom up previous to the last general election, and he had polled against him.

642. Was that true within your knowledge?—Yes.

643. Did you say anything to Mr. Wreghitt about about which way this man would go?—Yes; I said this man told me he would vote for the party if they would take his freedom up.

644. What did Wreghitt say to that?—He said I was to send him on to him.

645. And was his freedom taken up?—Yes.

646. Do you remember the late Mr. William Watson, the builder?—Yes, very well.

647. Did he send you to Mr. Wreghitt about Thomas Wilson's freedom?—Yes; others besides him, sent me there about his freedom.

648. Was anything said then about Mr. Wilson as to how he would vote?—Yes; he axed me how I thought he would vote, and his uncle said he would depend upon him voting; he was apprenticed with his uncle, and he said he would depend upon him voting for the party if they took it up.

649. You told Mr. Wreghitt that?—Yes.

650. And was Wilson's freedom taken up?—Yes.

651. Mr. Watson, the uncle, was a man well-to-do in the world, was he not?—Yes.

652. Why did not he pay for it himself?—He promised me half-a-sovereign if I could get his nephew's freedom money; he said if he could not get it, he would take it up himself for him, as he had been a good apprentice. He got married just after, and he said he wanted more money; he would be glad to get his furniture, and such like.

653. Did you also see Mr. Wreghitt about James Ellerker?—Yes.

654. Was anything said about the voting then?—I went to see his master; he was apprenticed to Mr. Watson, was that young man.

655. Did you go to Wreghitt to see if he would take up his freedom?—I went for Watson to Mr. Wreghitt, to ax him if he would take it up.

656. What did Wreghitt say?—Wreghitt said he would see his master, and I fetched Mr. Watson to Mr. Wreghitt.

657. What took place while you were there?—Wreghitt asked him if he thought he would support them, and he said he had been a good and faithful servant all his apprenticeship, and he warranted he would support the party; that he might depend upon his word if he said so, and upon this condition, Mr. Wreghitt took his freedom up.

658. What year was that; was it July 1867?—Yes.

659. What was the month?—Rippon's was last year.

660. Do you remember William Smelt?—Yes.

661. Did you see Mr. Wreghitt about William Smelt?—Yes.

662. What year was that?—I am sure I have not it down, it is two or three years since; two years since perhaps.

663. You saw Wreghitt about that; what was said about it?—I was to tell him to go and see Mr. Wreghitt, and he would take it up for him.

664. What was said about voting, if anything?—He axed me what he was, and I told him; I said his father had supported the party, and he would support the party if he took his freedom up; so he said I was to send him down and he would take his freedom up.

665. Was Smelt's freedom taken up by Wreghitt?—Yes.

666. Those are all the questions that I am told to ask you about freedoms; you have told us about the price of municipal votes; is it within your knowledge, that votes for election of pasture masters were ever paid for?—Yes.

667. Is that a common practice?—Yes.

668. Had Mr. Wreghitt anything to say to that, do you know; what was the price then?—There has been different prices, 5 s., and 10 s., and 15 s., and as high as a sovereign for some odd individuals.

669. Have you had any communication with Mr. Wreghitt on the subject of pasture masters?—No, I never had no communication with him upon it.

670. Did you ever hear from Wreghitt where all this money came from to pay for people's freedoms who were likely to vote the right way?—

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] Does your Lordship think that this can be asked?

Mr. Baron Martin.] It is no evidence to prove that it was given by any particular individual; but it is evidence, I should take it, with respect to Wreghitt; it is not evidence, of course, that Wreghitt gave it.

671. Mr. Serjeant Sargood (to the Witness.) Have you heard from Wreghitt where the money came from which he supplied to pay for the freedoms?—No; he never told me that.

672. Or has he ever told you where the money came from for buying votes for the municipal elections?—He has said to me that the money came from Mr. Edwards, that it was Mr. Edwards's money that he took the freedoms up with.

673. He has said that, has he?—Yes.

674. Has he ever told you where the money came from that paid the voters at the municipal elections?—No.

675. Have you ever known money paid for voting for churchwardens?—Yes; and given it myself.

676. You say yes, as though it was not an exceptional thing; have you often known it?—Yes.

677. How much was the tariff there?—It varied there from 1 s. to 2 s.

Mr. Baron Martin.] What was the object of being a churchwarden; it is generally considered a troublesome office.

678. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] Why should people pay for being elected churchwarden?—I do not know what perquisites they had in the church.

679. Perhaps there is a good deal of patronage to pay them; but do you know whether the churchwardens themselves paid for the votes, or whether somebody subscribed to get the votes for them?—I think the churchwardens did not pay themselves.

680. Mr. Baron Martin.] Were you examined in a trial at York, that took place three or four years ago?—No, never in my life.

681. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] Have you seen Sir Henry Edwards and Mr. Kennard canvassing about the borough?—Yes.

682. You know what I mean; before the Parliamentary election, soliciting votes?—Yes.

683. Have you seen any gentlemen with them?—Yes.

Mr. Baron Martin.] That does not prove anything; of course when a man goes canvassing, he goes about with his friends.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] As I had heard what your Lordship has said upon the subject of canvassing upon former occasions, I have not cross-examined upon this matter.

Mr. Baron Martin.] It is a thing that must be done at present; I shall not be sorry if it is prevented; but at present there is nothing wrong in it.

[The Witness withdrew.]

THOMAS RIPPON, jun., sworn; Examined by Mr. Waddy.

T. Rippon,
jun.

684. ARE you a freeman of this borough?—Yes.

685. Had you a conversation with Wilberforce Herdsman about the month of July last?—Yes.

686. I do not ask what was said between you; but, in consequence of what was said, did Herdsman promise to get you some money?—Yes.

687. Did you afterwards meet Herdsman in the market place?—Yes.

688. Had you another conversation with him about the matter?—Yes.

689. In consequence of that conversation did you go to see Mr. Wreghitt?—Yes.

690. Was Wreghitt, when you went to see him, at his shop?—Yes, I went to see him at his shop; but he was not at home.

691. Was that on Saturday, or what was the date?—I believe about the 20th or the 21st of July.

692. When you got to Wreghitt's shop it was about 2 o'clock in the afternoon?—Yes, from two to half-past.

693. He was not in, and you waited some short time and then came out of the shop?—Yes.

694. You met him coming out of the bank?—I met him coming out of the Beverley Bank.

695. Did Wreghitt then come along the road towards you?—Yes.

696. Did you enter into conversation with him?—Yes.

697. Just tell us in your own way exactly what passed between you?—I said, "Mr. Wreghitt, you are just the gentleman I have been wanting to see for some time." He says to me, "Hallo! what is it?" I said, "I want to see, Mr. Wreghitt; if you will do a little towards taking my freedom up, as I am out of work, or I would not have asked you"; and he asked me what was my name. I told him, "Thomas Rippon." He said, "Was it Rippon in Minster-gate, brother to John Cundys Rippon." I said, "Yes." He says, "Oh, we took his freedom up, and he voted against us"; and I said, "You cannot condemn one man for another man's deeds"; and he hesitated for some time. I walked up with him; then he says, "Well," he says, "I will take your freedom up on conditions that you vote for Sir Henry Edwards and Captain Hegan Kennard at the forthcoming election"; and I walked along with him.

698. You have told us that this was Saturday, some time after the 20th of July?—Yes, some time; I could not say the proper date; from the 20th to the 21st or the 25th; somewhere about that date.

699. Is there a newspaper published in the town on that day?—Yes, the "Beverley Guardian" and the "Beverley Recorder."

700. Had you seen that day anything in the paper about Captain Kennard?—I seed the "Beverley Guardian," that the Conservatives had held a meeting on Friday night; it was published in the "Beverley Guardian" on the Saturday morning, the same day as I received the money from Mr. Wreghitt.

701. Was Captain Kennard's name mentioned?—Yes; I believe he had been nominated on the Friday night previous.

702. Now, then, just tell us what was the end of this conversation; when he asked you to vote for Edwards and Kennard, what followed?—He took me along with him up to his shop, and he pulled out his purse, a leather purse, and gave me half-a-sovereign.

703. And what did he say to you when he gave you that; did he tell you to do anything?—Yes, he said I was to go and put my claim in at once, else there would not be sufficient time to get it taken up to vote at the forthcoming election.

704. Where were you to go to to take it up?—To Mr. Crust's office.

705. Mr. Crust, the town clerk?—Yes.

706. When you got to the town clerk's office, did you see any person there?—Yes, I saw Mr. Pomfret.

707. Who is he?—He is one of Mr. Crust's clerks, I believe.

708. Just tell us exactly what took place when you came to put your claim in?—Pomfret said, "You have run it very near; I do not know how we shall manage with you, I am sure;" and I said to him, "I hope you will do what you can for me to get it in in time."

709. I believe then it was that you made out the claim, signed it, and in the end you got your freedom?—Yes; there was not sufficient time to take it up at the Town Hall; I had to go to the mayor's office to get it taken up.

710. Mr. Baron Martin.] You were a freeman by birth, I think?—Yes, my Lord.

711. Mr. Waddy.] Did Wreghitt say anything to you about whose money it was, that was paying for your freedom?—No.

Cross-examined by Mr. Giffard.

712. And, as I understand, you did get on the list?—Yes.

713. And you did vote at the election?—Yes.

714. How long before you went up to the town clerk's office with the claim was it that this conversation took place between you and Wreghitt?—Perhaps about three or four days; three days, perhaps.

715. You are quite certain that it was before the 31st of July?—Yes.

716. You said to Wreghitt that you were out of work at the time?—Yes.

717. Was that true?—It was.

718. When did you get into work again?—I have not been in regular work for some time now; in fact, I am not now in regular work.

719. Mr.

719. Mr. Baron Martin.] What is your business?—A bootmaker.

720. Mr. Giffard.] How have you been supported since?—I live at home with my father; I get work now and then, at least I have been doing work now at Mr. Crosskill's Foundry, as far as that goes, but it is not my regular employment.

721. For whom did you vote?—I voted for Maxwell and Trollope.

T. Rippon,
jun.
1869.

JOHN DICKSON, sworn; Examined by Mr. Serjeant Sargood.

722. WHAT are you by trade?—A Smith.

723. Were you admitted to your freedom in February 1867?—Yes.

724. You had been apprenticed, I think, to a Mr. Relph?—Yes.

725. Mr. Baron Martin.] Had you been apprenticed to a freeman?—Yes.

726. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] Do you know what his politics were?—He was a Tory.

727. When you were out of your time did he introduce you to Mr. Wreghitt?—Yes.

728. How much did it cost to take up your freedom?—£. 2. 9 s.

729. Who found the money?—Mr. Wreghitt gave me the money.

730. How much did he give you?—£. 2. 10 s.

731. Did he say anything to you about voting?—No.

732. Or anything about the party?—No; he just asked me my name.

733. But who took you?—Mr. Relph took me himself.

734. Tell us what was said to Wreghitt when Mr. Relph introduced you; what did he say about you?—He went into Mr. Wreghitt himself, and had a conversation before I went in.

735. Privately?—Yes.

736. Leaving you in another room?—I stood outside.

737. Had Mr. Relph said anything to you before he took you in to Wreghitt, as to what you were to do?—I cannot say that he had.

738. Excuse me if I tell you that I think you can say.

Mr. Baron Martin.] My impression is that this will not do; bribery to affect the seat must be at the election, in my judgment, by the member himself or his agents; bribery, treating, or undue influence at such election.

Mr. Giffard.] I understand that your Lordship has ruled so.

Mr. Baron Martin.] I have not ruled that; I have avoided ruling it, as it was not necessary for the purpose; I think it is a very arguable question, but that is my impression, as I told Mr. Giffard upon last Saturday.

Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] In the authority that we all consult with advantage, that is Rogers, I find on page 323, in the last edition but one, "payments for admission of freemen, and of rates for the purpose of enabling a voter to be registered, which have always been regarded with suspicion, will now be strictly within the Statute, and subject both the payer and him for whom the payment is made, to the penalties thereof."

Mr. Baron Martin.] My impression strongly is, that that which vacates the seat is the operation of the 17th and 18th Vict. c. 102, coupled with the 46th section of the 31st and 32nd of Vict. c. 125. The enactment in the 17th and 18th of Vict. is, that the candidate is to be by himself, or his agents, guilty of bribery, treating, or undue influence at such election; I think that it would be impossible to carry that back to 1867, when an immediate election was not in contemplation; of course it possibly might do so, because it might possibly be in contemplation of the election; but I think for the purpose of affecting the seat, that this payment in 1867 would not affect that object; that is my strong impression. What is the section which makes payment for admission of freedom a misdemeanour?

Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] The 17th and 18th of Vict. section 2, my Lord; the words are very open to that construction.

Mr. Baron Martin.] I do not at all say that it is not; but my impression, as I stated last Saturday, is that it is so; but it is not necessary that I should decide it.

Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] It provides that every person who shall, directly or indirectly, by himself or others, give or lend any money or valuable consideration to or for any voter, or to or for any person on behalf of any voter.

Mr. Baron Martin.] Now the 17th and 18th of Vict. chapter 102.

Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] That has a most clear meaning, without any date, as to whether it was at the election.

Mr. Giffard.] At any election.

Mr. Baron Martin.] It would be the operation of the third statute with the other two that will make the offence; I am now speaking of the offence which destroys the status of the candidate, and makes his candidature null and void, after the act has been done; that is the Act I am thinking of; but I want to know what is the Act, with regard to the payment of a fee upon the admission of a freeman, which forbids it.

Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] I do not think that it is forbidden in express terms.

Mr. Baron Martin.] Payments of a fee for the admission of freemen, have always been regarded as not strictly within the statute, which is the statement in this book, at page 323.

Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] I do not think that it is intended to state the payment to a freeman in terms.

Mr. Baron Martin.] It says, "Payments for admission of freemen, and of rates, for the purpose of enabling a voter to be registered, which have always been regarded with suspicion;" then it states the "Worcester case, and the dictum of Baron Alderson in Baynton v. Cattle, which must have been about the year 1831, for I recollect I was in the cause; 'and by Lord Denman, in another cause,' will now be strictly within the statute."

Mr. Giffard.] I rather think that the writer is referring to that part which relates to the payment of rates.

Mr. Baron Martin.] I suppose so; is there any analogous Act of Parliament with respect to freemen, the payment of rates, and so on; that is the thing we had the other day. There is a section with respect to the payment of rates; there is nothing with respect to payment for the admission of freemen.

Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] No, there is not, my Lord; certainly there is nothing specific as to the payment of freemen's money in the statute in terms; there is no doubt about that.

JAMES HUTTON, sworn; Examined by Mr. Waddy.

J. Hutton.

739. ARE you a freeman of this borough?—Yes.

740. And were you of age, or did you take up your freedom before the 6th of February 1865?—Yes, it was on the 6th of February I took it up.

741. Mr. Baron Martin.] What is your age now?—Twenty-five.

742. Mr. Waddy.] Did you see Mr. Botterill Lowther on the subject?—Yes.

743. When was it you saw Mr. Botterill Lowther?—Some time in the latter end of January 1865.

744. First of all, tell us exactly what took place between you?—He called on me one night as I was going up town, and he asked me if I had taken my freedom up; I said "No;" he said he would see it taken up for me; he would go to Mr. Wreghitt, he would take it up for me. I said "Very well," I would go with him to Mr. Wreghitt; but he said "You had better go yourself first," and I went and seed him a week after. Lowther said he had made it all right.

745. Did he say with whom?—Mr. Wreghitt.

746. When he said he had made it all right, did he say anything about what you would have to do?—He asked me if I was their party, and I said "yes."

747. Mr. Baron Martin.] Did Lowther ask you this?—Yes.

748. Mr. Waddy.] After that, did you see Mr. Wreghitt, and speak to him about it?—Yes.

749. You met him, I believe, in the street?—Yes.

750. Did he tell you to go with him to his shop?—Yes.

751. And did you go?—Yes.

752. When you got inside the shop, what did he say to you; did he tell you what they would expect you to do?—He said they expected I should support the Conservative party.

753. When he said he expected you to support the Conservative party, did he mention anybody's name?—No.

754. Did he then give you any money?—Yes.

755. How much?—Ten shillings.

756. Was yours a birth freedom?—Yes.

757. Do you remember the last municipal election?—Yes.

758. At nine o'clock in the morning, did you see Mr. Skinn?—Yes.

759. What took place between you and Mr. Skinn?—I went in the crowd, and he asked me if I would vote; I said "No," I thought I should not vote that way.

760. What way?—The Conservatives; and he said he would give me 10 s.

761. Mr. Baron Martin.] For your vote?—Yes.

762. Mr. Waddy.] Did you get the 10 s.?—No.

763. What happened upon that?—I said no, I would not go that way; he said well, if you mean going the other way, if they can give 10 s., we can give 1 l.

764. I do not know whether you did vote or not?—No, I had not voted then.

765. Did you vote at all?—Yes, I did vote; but not that way.

Cross-examined by Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.

766. Let me see if I quite understand you; you got your freedom taken up for you?—Yes.

767. Upon the promise to vote Conservative; is that what I understand?—Mr. Wreghitt said as he expected I should vote for the Conservatives.

768. Did you accept that proposition, and did you get your freedom taken up?—Yes, I did get my freedom taken up.

769. And then you voted the other way?—Yes.

770. And, after having voted the other way, you went and told the opponents to the people who had taken up your freedom, this story about Skinn's offering you 10 s.?—No, he offered me 10 s. the last municipal election.

JOHN DUFFILL, sworn; Examined by Mr. Serjeant Sargood.

J. Duffill.

771. WHAT are you?—A Shoemaker.

772. Did you at any time apply to Mr. Wreghitt about taking up your son's freedom?—At one time.

773. When was that?—I cannot tell the day of the month, I am sure.

774. Can you tell me the year?—Last year.

775. What did you ask him?—If he would take my son's freedom up; if he would be at the expense.

776. Did he do it?—No.

777. Did he refuse?—Yes.

778. Did

778. Did he tell you why he refused; you need not be ashamed?—I have no occasion to be ashamed; he said he durst not do it.

779. Did he tell you why?—Well, he did not say any more. He said he durst not do it.

780. What politics are you, may I ask?—Politics?

781. Have you any politics?—No, not at all; but I will tell you my reason for asking him; I asked him if he would take up the freedom of my son, just simply because the lad wanted his freedom taken up. I went in and applied to him, and he said, "No; because you ought to apply to your own party."

782. You were a Liberal then?—I was.

783. And your son is a young man?—Yes, a young man; and he took his own freedom, and paid for it himself.

THOMAS WATSON WILSON, sworn; Examined by Mr. Waddy.

784. ARE you a freeman by apprenticeship?—Yes.

785. When were you admitted; was it in July 1865?—Yes.

786. How did you get your freedom; where did you get the money from for your freedom?—From my uncle.

787. Who is he?—William Watson.

788. Do you know where he got it from?—No.

789. Did you see Mr. Wreghitt at all?—No.

790. Mr. Baron Martin.] Was William Watson your master?—Yes.

791. Mr. Waddy.] Which way did you vote at the last election?—For Sir Henry Edwards and Captain Kennard.

792. What was it that induced you to do so?—Nothing.

THOMAS DUFFILL, sworn; Examined by Mr. Serjeant Sargood.

MR. SERJEANT Ballantine.] THIS man's name is not in the particulars.

MR. Baron Martin.] I do not know what he is going to prove.

MR. Serjeant Sargood.] He and some half-a-dozen, who are in the particulars, are prepared to be called and depose to a certain state of facts which happened at the municipal election; I do not press Duffill's case as a case of individual bribery; but I call him to give general evidence of that day to corroborate others; but, as he is the first on the list, I take him because the proofs are prepared in that way, and it is convenient.

MR. Baron Martin.] Yes, you can do that.

793. Mr. Serjeant Sargood (to the Witness).] Are you employed at Grove Hill Works?—Yes.

794. They are colour works, I believe?—No, manure works.

795. They are called "Grove Hill Manure Works," are they?—Yes.

796. Are a great many men employed there?—Yes.

797. Do you remember the municipal election, which happened on the 2nd of November last year?—Yes.

798. Did you, on that morning, see a person named Robert Knaggs Wallis?—Yes.

799. Is he a person carrying on the business of a cooper in this town?—Yes.

800. Did he come to the works, or did you go to him?—He came to the works.

801. Did you and some others go outside to see him?—Yes.

802. Had you known him before?—Yes, worked with him.

803. What had he to do with the election; do you know?—He came to get votes.

804. Canvassing?—Yes.

805. Did he make any communication to you about money?—He said he would get us 10 s. each. I was to see him at dinner-time.

806. This was in the morning?

MR. Serjeant Ballantine.] I must take objection formally, and ask your Lordship to consider it. This person is not mentioned, as your Lordship has already heard. I take it for granted that the only value of this evidence is to show that a bribe was given.

MR. Baron Martin.] As I understand, Mr. Serjeant Sargood is going to prove the bribes given to others that are contained in the particulars. If this case was to govern the whole concern, and the election depended upon it, inasmuch as this man's name is not in the particulars, a bribe given to him, assuming that there was one, could not affect it; but he is perfectly competent to be a witness to prove a bribe given to others, or, indeed, a bribe given to himself; but it could not affect the seat if it depended upon him alone. As I understand, Mr. Serjeant Sargood intends to prove that this man accompanied some others whose names are there, and he, in company with them, received a bribe.

MR. Serjeant Ballantine.] Will my learned friend give us the names?

MR. Baron Martin.] The particular is not to limit the witnesses who are called, but merely to limit the acts which are relied upon, for the purpose of unseating the Member.

807. Mr. Serjeant Sargood (to the Witness).]—Did he at that time say anything to you about any elections; if so, what?—He said there would be nothing got at the borough election.

808. Did he say anything about what they were doing on that particular day, or endeavouring to do?—He did not say particularly; something about vote.

T. Duffill.

T. Duffill.
 1869.

809. Tell us what he said about the election?
 —They would get money for that day, and they would not get anything at the borough election.

810. Between one and two o'clock, did you and some of your fellow-workmen leave to go and vote?—Yes.

811. Tell me who went with you?—Robert Hambleton and Spence Collinson.

812. Did you meet a person named William Vernom as you were going?—No; he came to us.

813. Where?—In the square.

814. The square near to the polling place?—Yes.

815. What did he say to you?—He asked us whether we had voted; we said, "No." He said, "Will you go with me; I will get you 15 s. a-piece."

816. Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] Who said that?—William Vernom.

817. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] Did he tell you how the poll stood at the time?—He said they was between 200 and 300 ahead, and he said the Liberals had done.

818. And he said they would give you 15 s. each?—Yes.

819. Did you say anything to him about that, seeing that the Liberals had done?—I was rather dubious that we should get 15 s. at first, because I did not think they would give 15 s. when they was so many ahead.

820. Did you say anything to Vernom about that, as to what it meant?—He said he was going to carry both events on that day, and he was a runner. I asked him if he was a runner, and he said yes.

821. Did he run anywhere with you and Collinson?—Yes.

822. Where did he take you?—To the "Golden Ball," to get 15 s.

823. Mr. Baron Martin.] Was that a public-house?—Yes.

824. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] Did you meet anyone as you were going down there?—Yes, George Walker, and he went with us.

825. Was Walker a voter?—Yes.

826. Is he one of your workmen?—Yes.

827. Then, there were four of you; you and Hambleton, and Collinson, and Walker?—Yes.

828. Did you go upstairs at the "Golden Ball"?—Yes, we did.

829. On to the first floor?—Yes, the first landing.

830. Up one flight of stairs?—Yes.

831. Did you go into a room there?—I went in, but I was ordered back; I was told to stop back while there was some other men got paid.

832. Having waited while the other men were served, you got into the room?—Yes.

833. Whom did you see there?—There was Mr. Lowther, John Stothard, and William Watson.

834. That is the painter?—Yes, and Watson, the auctioneer, who was paying the money.

835. Was there a table in the room?—Yes, and Watson was sit down at it, and he had a bag of money on the table and a book.

836. Who introduced you to Watson, to show that you were right?—John Stothard was in; there was a lot more upon the stairs waiting for their turns to get paid. I got in as soon as I could.

837. Mr. Baron Martin.] About how many would there be?—About a dozen, I should say.

838. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] Your lot of four waited till some of the others came out?—Yes, I got in as soon as I could. I thought the tap would be stopped, when they said there was so many.

839. Did Mr. Watson, the auctioneer, hand out any money?—He gave a man of the name of Thomas Hazelhurst 3l. for the four of us; that was Thomas Hambleton, me, and Spence Collinson.

840. Was Hambleton one?—No, Hambleton did not go in with us; it was Hazelhurst, myself, Spence Collinson, and George Walker.

841. Hazelhurst was a voter, then?—Yes.

842. Did he divide the money, giving you 15 s. each?—Yes.

843. And did you then leave the room with your money?—Yes.

844. Where did you go next?—I came into the street.

845. What did you do?—I went and had a look about, and then went and stood in the square again.

846. What became of your votes; that is what I want to know—the municipal votes?—We had to go and vote before we got the money.

847. You had voted before you got the money?—They looked after it, you know.

848. I assume there would be no loss if you had not?—No.

849. Who went with you to vote, to see if it was all right?—Vernom went with the lot of us, you know.

850. Did he come back with you to introduce you to what you call the top?—Yes, but we got in afore this, you know.

851. Having looked about, did you afterwards meet Vernom again?—He came to us, and he says, "Now," he says, "you see this, you would not believe me that I could get you 15 s. each; now, if you will see me on the borough election day morning I will get you some more."

852. Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] Who said this?—William Vernom did.

853. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] Did you see him on the morning of the Parliamentary election?—I did see him; he was coming down to Grove Hill on the election day morning.

854. Was anybody with him?—Robert Wallis was with him.

855. Is that the same Wallis that you saw on the municipal day?—Yes.

856. What did they come to Grove Hill about?—They came to get votes.

857. Did they tell you so; did Vernom speak to you about it?—He did not to me; but he spoke to a man who was with me, and he will come and speak for himself.

858. What is his name?—John Atkinson.

859. What did you hear him say to John Atkinson?—He will say himself; I did not hear anything.

860. Did he say anything to you?—No.

861. Did you tell him whom you meant to vote for?—No, I did not speak to him then, because I was talking to Robert Wallis, he was talking to this Atkinson.

862. What did you and Wallis say together?—Wallis said it was no use asking me for my vote, for he knew how I should vote, he knew that I was a Liberal.

863. You meant to vote against him, then?—Yes, assuredly I did.

864. Did you go up that day and vote?—Yes.

865. For whom?—For Maxwell and Trollope.

866. Do

866. Do you know Clowes's house?—Yes.

867. Whereabouts is it?—It is in the market.

868. Did you go in there at all?—Yes.

869. Was that on the Parliamentary election day?—Yes.

870. That is the Conservative principal committee-room, I believe?—I do not know; they said it was a mill when I went in.

871. But it was a committee-room?—I do not know, they said so; I do not know.

872. Was anything then up?—I did not see anything.

873. This is the same T. Clowes, I suppose, who is down in the list of expenses under the head of Committee-rooms: "T. Clowes, Four Guineas"?—Yes.

874. Was it a committee-room of the Conservatives?—I do not know.

875. If you went in, tell us what you saw there and whom?—On the first-floor I saw Mr. Cousins and Mr. Barkwith.

876. Did you see anybody else?—I saw two or three men upon the landing; Thomas McCoy I saw for one, and Robert Wallis and Newstead.

877. Going up or coming down?—They was with the other messengers, they was stood upon the landing.

878. You got into the wrong place; you did not stop there long, I believe?—No, I did not stop there long, there was another room.

Cross-examined by Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.

879. You voted for Lowther?—Yes.

880. You received 15 s., did you?—Yes, I did.

881. Tell us what it was for?—It was for voting for him.

882. For voting for whom?—For the Conservatives, I expect.

883. You think that you took it to vote for the Conservatives?—I am sure I did; I voted for them for it.

884. At the municipal election?—Yes, to be sure I did.

885. Do you consider that you fairly earned that money?—I consider I did if I had got twice as much.

886. You did all that was expected of you?—For that day.

887. Did you do all that you considered was expected of you, I ask?—For that day.

888. Was anything more expected of you?—Yes, I think there was.

889. Did you take the 15 s. for anything more?—Yes, I think you would if you had the offer.

890. Answer my question decently; did you or not take the 15 s. for anything besides your vote at the municipal election?—He said he would get us some more.

891. Did you or did you not take it upon those terms?—I voted for them for the 15 s. at the municipal election.

892. Was that all they expected of you, as far as you know?—No, I expect they expected more, else they would not have given me that.

893. When you took the 15 s., did you understand them to expect that you would vote for the general election for that 15 s.?—Yes, I expect they did.

894. Then you took it intending to deceive them, did you?—No, I did not take it with an intent to deceive them, but I went to hear the Members speak, and I thought I was convinced in my mind that I should vote the other way.

895. You heard both sides speak?—Yes.

[The Witness withdrew.]

SPENCE COLLINSON, sworn; Examined by Mr. Waddy.

896. ARE you employed at the Grove Hill Works?—Yes.

897. Do you remember the morning of the municipal election?—Yes.

898. Do you remember a person called Wallis coming to the Grove Hill Works?—Yes, I remember seeing him there.

899. What brought him there?—He came to canvass, I believe.

900. What did he say in the course of his canvassing?—I did not see him till he was just going away.

901. Did you hear him say anything?—Just when he was going away he asked me what I thought about supporting them, and I told him that I would see him when I got to the town.

902. Mr. Baron Martin.] Was this at the municipal election?—Yes.

903. Mr. Waddy.] What else did he say to you?—Nothing; no more to me.

904. Was anything said about money at all?—He never named any money to me.

905. Did you hear him say it to other people?—No, I did not; I was in another department, and I just went away again.

906. Did you go to the poll that day, between one and two o'clock?—Yes, I did.

907. When you started, were you intending, in the first instance, to vote for the Liberals, or the Tories?—I believe I promised Mr. Lowther; I had promised the Conservatives.

908. After that, when you went to vote, what took place as you were going?—I went on to the town; I stood in the square along with the rest, and William Vernom came to us.

909. You say along with the rest; was Thomas Duffill with you?—Yes.

910. And Robert Hambleton?—Yes.

911. Tell us exactly what took place?—William Vernom came to us, and asked us if we had voted, and, I believe, he was directing his conversation to Duffill; he said had we voted, and we said "No;" he said, if we would go with him he would get us 15 s. a-piece.

912. Was anything said about the Liberals retiring?—Yes, they said the Liberals was retiring, and their party was between 200 and 300 ahead; those was the words, or, perhaps, it was 300.

913. Did he say anything about why the poll was kept open?—I think he said something about going in for the two events, or something in that way.

914. Do you remember that Duffill asked him what the poll was being kept open for?—Yes, he asked what is the poll being kept open for, and he said for two events, or something in that way; I cannot exactly name the words.

915. Did Vernom invite you to go anywhere?—Yes, to the "Golden Ball."

916. Why were you to go to the "Golden Ball"?—To get our money

917. Did he say how much?—15 s. a-piece.

1869.

918. Did Hambleton go away with him?—I did not see which way Hambleton went, but me and Duffill, and Thomas Hazelhurst, and George Walker went there.

919. When you got to the "Golden Ball" did you go to the top of the stairs?—Yes.

920. Who did you see there?—Mr. Lowther, I believe, came past us to go into the room while we was standing upon the stairs waiting to go in.

921. Did you hear Mr. Lowther say anything to Duffill?—He said, "I am surprised to see you here, Duffill," or something in that way.

922. Did Mr. Lowther go into the room?—Yes.

923. And did you offer to follow him in?—Yes.

924. Did Mr. Lowther prevent you?—Yes, he said we was to keep back.

925. What were you to keep back for then?—Till some more came out of the room.

926. Is that what Mr. Lowther said?—Yes, I think Mr. Lowther said so, or someone said keep back, while others get down.

927. Do you know who it was said so?—I cannot distinctly say.

928. You waited; did some other persons come out of the room?—Yes.

929. How many?—I cannot say.

930. Two or 20?—Perhaps two or three; I cannot say how many.

931. When those other people came out of the room did you go in?—Yes.

932. When you got into the room whom did you see in the room?—I saw Mr. Watson, the auctioneer, sat at the table.

933. Was Watson, the painter, there also?—Yes.

934. And Lowther?—Yes.

935. And Stothard?—Yes.

936. You said that Watson was sat at the table; had he anything before him?—He had a bag with some gold in it.

937. Did you see whether he had a book before him?—Yes.

938. When you got into the room did Vernom go with you?—No.

939. Who spoke for you?—I cannot say who spoke for us.

940. Did Watson, the auctioneer, do anything with the book?—He took our names down.

941. When he had taken your names down, what did he do to the gold?—He gave Thomas Hazelhurst 3 l. for the four of us.

942. After this did you go down into the street again?—Yes.

943. And did you meet Vernom again?—We were stood in the square, me and Duffill and Robert Hambleton and Thomas Atkinson together, and Vernom came to us.

944. Mr. Baron Martin.] Atkinson had joined you?—Yes.

945. Mr. Waddy.] Just tell us what took place then?—Vernom said that we disputed whether he could get us this money, and we would not believe him; and he says come to me on the election morning, and, if we give more, I will get it you, or something of that.

946. You had voted for the municipal election before this, I believe?—I voted after I got it.

947. What time in the day was it when Vernom said this to you?—I believe it was somewhere about two o'clock, as near as I can tell.

948. Was anything said by Vernom about his own canvassing?—Duffill asked him if he was a runner, and he said he was.

949. What else did he say?—I did not hear him say any more about it.

950. Did you hear anything said about the Orange party?—He said there was no chance for the Orange party, or something to that effect.

951. Did Edwards and Kennard come to canvass at your works?—Yes.

952. Do you remember who accompanied them?—I do not know all that was there.

953. Tell me a couple?—I believe I can remember Mr. Arden and Mr. Cleaver.

954. Was Mr. Wreghitt there?—Yes, Mr. Wreghitt was there.

Cross-examined by Mr. Giffard.

955. What time of the day was it that you had this conversation, in which Vernom said he would get you 15 s.?—It would be betwixt one and two o'clock, I think.

956. At that time, as I understand, you had not voted?—No.

957. Did you vote before or after you went to the "Golden Ball"?—After.

958. What time was that?—As near as I can tell, it would be about two o'clock.

959. What was said about the double event; just repeat the words; tell me who spoke, and what the words were?—Vernom said that they was going in for the two events, or something of that.

960. What did he say; just give us his words?—Duffill asked him why they was keeping the poll open when they was so far ahead, and he said they was going on for the two events; it was for the two events, or something of that, as near as I can tell.

961. You heard the words yourself?—Yes, we was all stood together.

962. Did you hear the words yourself, or are you speaking of what Duffill told you?—No, Vernom was speaking to Duffill, and I was stood by him.

963. Did you hear what you have told us with your own ears?—Yes; I heard Vernom say what he said; I heard him say it to Duffill; he was directing his discourse to Duffill.

964. Just give me the exact words?—I heard Duffill ask him why they was keeping the poll open, or something of that, and he said they was going in for the two events.

965. Do you mean that Duffill said, "Why are you keeping the poll open"?—Yes, something to that effect, as near as I can tell.

966. Do you mean that those words were used of the poll being kept open?—Yes, something to that effect, as near as I can tell.

967. The word poll was used?—Yes.

968. And it being kept open was used?—Yes, I think it was.

969. Will you swear it was?—Yes, as far as I can think on, that is what he said. Duffill asked him why they was keeping the poll open, or something to that effect.

970. Now, give me the answer again; what words did Duffill echo back?—Vernom said it was for the two events, or something of that.

971. It is somewhat important. I want to get the words, if you can remember them?—I think this is as near as I can remember the words.

972. That was all he said; it was for the two events?—Yes.

973. Is that all you can tell us?—Yes.

974. How

974. How did you vote at the election for Members of Parliament?—I voted for Mr. Maxwell and Mr. Trollope.

976. Did you get your dinner before you went on this mission?—Yes. S. Collinson.

1869.

Re-examined by Mr. Serjeant Sargood.

[The Witness withdrew.]

975. It is about one o'clock that you leave your works to go to dinner, is it?—Twelve.

ROBERT HAMBLETON, sworn; Examined by Mr. Serjeant Sargood.

977. ARE you in the employ of the Grove Hill Works?—Yes.

978. Do you remember the municipal election for the Town Council last year?—Yes.

979. Did you and Duffill and Collinson go round together and give your votes?—Yes, we went one lane together; but we was not together all the time in the town.

980. Do you remember meeting Mr. Vernom?—Yes.

981. Whereabouts was that?—In the square.

982. That is close to the polling place?—Yes.

983. What did he say to you?—He asked us for our votes.

984. Who for?—Usher and Lowther, I think; I forget their names.

985. For that party?—Yes.

986. What did you say to that?—I told him I did not know what we should do just then.

987. Did he say anything about the Liberals then?—Yes, he said they had no chance, and he begged on us to go and vote.

988. Vote for the Conservatives?—Yes.

989. Did he tell you how the poll stood?—Yes, about 300 ahead.

990. That is, the Conservatives were 300 ahead?—Yes.

991. Did he say why they wanted your votes, if that was so?—No, he did not say why they wanted them.

992. But he asked you for them?—Yes.

993. Was anything said about money?—Yes; he said if we would go and vote for him he would get us 15 s. each.

994. What did you say to that?—We did not go then. Me and the party that was with me went away, and he came to us again, and then we went and voted.

995. Did he go with you to see that you voted?—Yes.

996. Mr. Baron Martin.] Who were the party?—William Weldrick was one and John Rawson was another that went with me to vote.

997. He came to you again, you say?—Yes.

998. What happened then?—We went to vote then with him.

999. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] Did he go up to the poll to see you vote?—Yes.

1000. You had not then got your money, I suppose?—No.

1001. After voting what did he do with you?—He took us to the "Golden Ball."

1002. All three of you?—Yes.

1003. Did you go upstairs?—Yes.

1004. Whom did you see there?—Mr. Lowther; I do not think I knowed anyone else, but my own party that was with me, but him.

1005. Was there a table, and anyone sitting?—Yes.

1006. Who were sitting there, do you know?—I do not know them, I am sure.

1007. Did you hear anybody say who it was?—I heard after.

90.

1008. What did you hear?—I heard them call him Watson after.

1009. Had he anything on the table?—Yes, a bag with some gold in it.

1010. Did Vernom say anything when he took you in?—He took us up to the table, and told the man he had brought us for what we bargained for, the 15 s.; he told the man that we had been polling, and we wanted 15 s. a piece.

1011. What happened then?—He gave it to Weldrick.

1012. The man at the table did?—Yes; 1 l. 10 s. for me and him.

1013. Did you get your 15 s. out of it?—Yes.

1014. And Weldrick kept his own, I suppose?—Yes.

1015. Did Vernom tell you why they were keeping the poll open, as they had won the election, you say; did he say anything to you about it?—I was there when Duffill asked him why they were keeping the poll open, and he said they were keeping it open for the two events; I was there with them then after we came out of the "Golden Ball," in the square.

1016. You heard him say that they were keeping it open for the two events?—Yes.

1017. Did you see Vernom after you had received your money and got out again into the street?—Yes, he came to us all when we were talking in the street, in the square.

1018. What did he say to you?—He came up, and he said, "You disputed me about the money;" that was the 15 s.; and he said, "If you see me on the morning of the general election I will get you some more then."

1019. Did he say how much?—No.

1020. You voted for the Liberals at the general election?—Yes, for Mr. Maxwell and Mr. Trollope.

1021. Did you see Vernom that morning?—No.

1022. And you did not get anything else?—No, not a penny.

Cross-examined by Mr. Giffard.

1023. This observation about keeping the poll open and the double event, was it before or after you had got your money at the "Golden Ball"?—I think it was before.

1024. I thought you said just now that it was after you had come from the "Golden Ball"?—I think it was when we first met him when he promised us the money, that Duffill asked him that question about keeping the poll open.

1025. Did you not say to my learned friend that it was after coming from the "Golden Ball"?—I think it was when we first met that Duffill asked him.

1026. Did not you tell my learned friend just now that it was after coming from the "Golden Ball;" it only happened a minute or two ago, you know; did you say so within the last two or three minutes?—I think it was when we first met that Duffill asked him why they were keeping the poll open, as they were 300 a head.

1027. That happened, you say, last November?—Yes.

1028. I am asking what you said within the last five minutes; I find I am right about it; you did say so; you are quite sure you are right now; which was it; before or after you had been at the "Golden Ball"?—(No answer.)

1029. Mr. Baron Martin.] Was it before you voted or after you voted?—I think it was before.

1030. Mr. Giffard.] You say you think so; will you swear it?—No, I will not swear it.

JAMES ATKINSON, sworn; Examined by Mr. Waddy.

J. Atkinson.

1031. WERE you a voter at the last election?—Yes.

1032. Are you employed at the Grove Hill Works?—Yes.

1033. Did you vote at the Parliamentary election?—Yes.

1034. For whom?—For Mr. Maxwell and Mr. Trollope.

1035. Did you vote at the municipal election?—Yes.

1036. About what time in the day?—I should think it would be some time betwixt one and two; near upon two, I should think.

1037. Did you go to the poll with a man of the name of Matthew Walker?—Yes.

1038. When you got to the square, did you see Mr. Wallis?—Yes.

1039. Mr. Robert Knaggs Wallis?—Yes.

1040. Just tell me all that took place between Mr. Wallis and you two men?—I went up to him, and I says, "Now, Mr. Wallis;" he says, "Now, Jim."

1041. After that introduction, what took place?—I says, "We have comed," and he says, "Well, go and get voted, then." Well, we goes and gets voted.

1042. Before you went and got voted, did he give you any reason for voting?—No.

1043. Was anything offered to you?—No, it was not.

1044. Did you go to the "Golden Ball" with him?—No, not at inside; not afore we voted; we did not go nowhere with him.

1045. But after you voted did you go to the "Golden Ball"?—On the side on it.

1046. Into a passage; is there a passage there?—We did not go in; I believe Mr. Wallis was just at inside, but I was never in; I do not think I was off the flags.

1047. When you got to the "Golden Ball" did you get anything more?—He put his hand into his pocket something like this (describing the same), and says, "Here is your money;" that is all.

1048. And what was your money?—Fifteen shillings each.

1049. Before he gave you that money, did you know that you were going to get 15 s.?—I expected I was; I heard them tell that they was giving 15 s. a man, and I heard Vernom offering several of them 15 s.; but I had promised them when they came round canvassing, so I never looked out for it; I never axed nobody what they was going to give me.

1050. You did take it, I think?—Yes.

1051. After that did you see Vernom?—Yes.

1052. Did he say anything to you?—Yes.

1053. Just tell us what Vernom said?—He says, "Have you polled?" and I says "Yes;" he says, "Come on and get your money."

1054. Before that, I mean?—That was next.

1055. Was anything said about 300 ahead?—That was next; he says, "Come and get your money;" I says "What is there?" he says "There is 15 s. a man," and I says, "Oh, is there;" he says, "Yes," he says "Come on and I will get you it;" "No," I says, "I have gotten it," I says; "I do not want to be a rogue, I do not want it again."

1056. Mr. Baron Martin.] You did not want to take it twice over?—No, I wanted to have a straight game; if I had gotten it again I should have been condemned.

1057. Mr. Waddy.] Having done nothing but what was right, just tell us the rest of the conversation?—He says, "Now as you have come up and voted for our side, if you will meet me on the borough election in the morning in good time, I will get you 4 l. if you will vote for the Tory parties."

1058. Was that the whole of the conversation which took place at that time?—I said I would not promise nobody while the time was come on; I did not know what I might do.

1059. Was that the whole of the conversation which took place at that time?—I think it was, merely to me.

1060. Did you hear before this time anything about 300 ahead?—Yes, he said that there was 300 ahead.

1061. When?—After he said he would get me 4 l.; there was Duffill and Hazlehurst and Col-linson "came along," and he says to me, "We have them now, we are 300 ahead; and if there be any more given I will get you it at the borough election day."

1062. On the night of the municipal election day did you see Mr. Wallis?—Yes, municipally.

1063. What took place between you and Mr. Wallis then?—Nothing, I think, particular.

1064. Just tell us whether Mr. Wallis said anything to you about voting, and the Grove Hill Works?—No, he did not; all he said was, he said he had gotten 5 s. to stand a drop of allowance for our men, he was coming down next morning to give us it, a sup of ale.

1065. It is a large patent manure manufactory?—Yes, middling.

1066. Was anything said of some voters only getting 10 s.?—Oh, yes; he said there was men that had only gotten 10 s. a piece, I understood him, for voting, but he had the other 5 s. in his pocket for them, so he would make them all alike.

1067. Did you get the allowance?—No, I did not stay to have none of it.

1068. Do you know whether it was given?—I could not say.

Cross-

Cross-examined by Mr. Giffard.

1069. Was the conversation about 300 ahead after you had got your money?—I am sure I could not say exactly whether it was or not.

1070. You have said so already?—I do not think I did.

1071. Were you in court when the last man was examined?—Yes, Robert Hambleton.

1072. Now, take care, did you not tell my learned friend that it was after you had got your money that this conversation took place about 300 ahead?—Yes, I did.

1073. Was that true?—Yes, that is correct, because I remember that when he came to ask me, because he gave me this 4 l., and then I turned to talk to him I was —

1074. Who was present at the time that observation was made?—Thomas Duffill, Spence Collinson, Robert Hambleton and me.

1075. Do you know whether Duffill and Hambleton had got their money at that time?—No, I could not say that they had gotten their money; I do not know, I am sure.

1076. Can you tell me this, whether they came from the direction of the “Golden Ball”?—I cannot say.

1077. When did you see them first after you had been at the “Golden Ball” yourself?—I was talking to a servant man in the middle of the street, and Vernon came up to me and gave me a nudge, and he axed me if I had voted and I told him I had.

1078. Did you see Duffill and Hambleton come up to the place where you saw them?—Yes.

1079. Did they come from the direction of the “Golden Ball,” or from a different direction?—I think it was just from the opposite direction.

1080. Mr. Baron Martin.] Where is the “Golden Ball”; is it at the market-place?—It is agin the square.

1081. Mr. Giffard.] I think you told us you voted for Trollope and Maxwell?—Yes.

JOHN BROOKS, sworn; Examined by Mr. Serjeant Sargood.

1082. WHAT are you?—A labourer.

1083. For whom do you work?—I work for different people, anybody; catch jobs.

1084. And do you live or work at Beck-side?—Yes.

1085. That is a district of the town, I think, where the navigation ends?—Yes.

1086. A good many of you work there?—Yes.

1087. Do you remember the municipal election of town councillors?—Yes.

1088. Did you and a number of other men come away from Beck-side up here to vote that day?—Yes.

1089. What time of the day was it, do you remember?—It would be between 9 and 10 when we first come up the street, I dare say.

1090. Did you come up twice?—No, we stopped about the square.

1091. You amused yourself by stopping about the place?—Yes.

1092. Did you go to the rooms where the voting papers were filled up for the Liberals?—Yes.

1093. Do you remember about what o'clock it was in the day?—It would be about 11 o'clock, a bit after 11.

1094. This was in the Minster Ward, I think you were?—Yes.

1095. What did you find going on in the Liberal rooms at 11 o'clock?—We found they had retired; there was no one there to fill the papers up.

1096. How many of your friends were with you at that time, do you remember?—There would be about a dozen of us.

1097. What did you do then when you found the place deserted?—We came into the square in front of Dickinson's shop.

1098. What sort of a shop does Dickinson keep?—A pork shop.

1099. Opposite Dickinson's shop, did you meet with anyone?—Yes.

1100. Did you see somebody come out there?—Yes, a young man came out.

1101. Is that the shop that is used at the time of elections for business arrangements?—Yes, J. Brooks.

1102. You knew that?—Yes.

1103. By the Conservatives?—Yes.

1104. And has been usually so?—Yes.

1105. A young man came out to you, while you and your friends were standing in the street?—Yes.

1106. What did he say?—He asked us if we had voted.

1107. What did you say?—We said “No.”

1108. Thereupon, I suppose, he added something?—He said he would give us 18 s. each if we would go and vote.

1109. And what did you say to that?—We said we would not take it then.

1110. Where did you go then?—We then went down to the “Angel Inn,” Mr. Boys's.

1111. Whom did you see next?—We seed Thomas Duffill.

1112. Who is he; they call him in my brief Duffill of High Gate?—Yes.

1113. That is not the Duffill who works at the Manure works?—No.

1114. Another gentleman?—Another Duffill.

1115. Just tell us who the Thomas Duffill is that you saw?—Thomas Duffill in High Gate is a gentleman.

1116. And therefore Conservative; tell me is this gentleman that you speak of a Liberal or a Conservative?—He is a Liberal.

1117. What did he say?—We asked him if he could not give us anything to vote for the Liberals, and he said, “No, the Liberal candidates have retired.”

1118. Did you go back towards Dickinson's shop?—Yes.

1119. Whom did you meet on your way?—William Thompson.

1120. Who is he?—He keeps a marine stores, buys rags and bones, and he is a chimney sweep.

1121. Is he Liberal or Conservative?—I am sure I do not know whether he is Liberal or Conservative.

1122. You met him?—Yes.

1123. What

J. Brooks.

1869.

1123. What did he say to you?—He said “Get on,” he says, “They are giving a sovereign.”

1124. Did you see the young man again who had previously come out of Dickinson’s shop?—Yes, and he came to us again; there was seven of us then; some of them had left us.

1125. What did the young man tell you?—He said they was only giving 17 s. 6d. then; I says, “Cannot you give us 18 s. yet?” he said he would go in to Robert Thirsk and see, he was in Dickinson’s shop.

1126. Who is Robert Thirsk?—He is one of the foundry men; he is employed at the foundry.

1127. One of the foundry foremen?—Yes.

1128. Of The Waggon Company, Limited?—Yes.

1129. Did he thereupon go into Dickinson’s shop for that purpose?—Yes, he did.

1130. Did he come out again?—Yes.

1131. What did he tell you?—He said they would give us 18 s.

1132. Did he say what for?—To vote for the Conservative Members.

1133. Then did you go inside Dickinson’s shop with some of your friends?—Yes, me and the other six.

1134. Just give us their names?—John Wardell, Edward Beattie, James Ellis, John McGinnis, John Folkes, and John Shaw Tomlinson.

1135. You and those six men all went into Dickinson’s?—Yes.

1136. Did you go into a room there?—Not then.

1137. What happened to you when you got inside?—When we got inside we was getting our papers filled up, and Mr. Lowther tapped me on the shoulder and said I had not a vote.

1138. You go into the shop, do you, to get your paper filled up?—Yes; before you go to vote.

1139. Why was it Lowther said you had not got a vote; did he tell you that. What did he say to you; tell us your own story?—He said, “Baxter, you have not got a vote.” I said, “Yes, I have; they do not call me Baxter.”

1140. What do they call you?—John Brooks.

1141. Just go on and tell us your story?—And so he said then that he would only give us 17 s. 6 d. each?

1142. Who said that?—Mr. Lowther; and we agreed to take it. We got our papers filled up, and Mr. Cleaver said he would go to see us vote. We went to the Town-hall with Mr. Cleaver, and when we got there the man Shaw Tomlinson stopped at the door and said he would not go and vote before he got his money.

1143. To whom did he say that?—To Mr. Cleaver. We then went in, the six of us, and we voted.

1144. Tomlinson hung back?—Tomlinson hung back; he did not go with us.

1145. After you had voted, what did Cleaver do with you then?—He brought us back again.

1146. To Dickinson’s shop?—Yes.

1147. Just tell me who is Cleaver?—Mr. Cleaver is a gentleman in the town, and lives in Railway-street.

1148. Mr. Baron Martin.] What happened in Dickinson’s shop?—We went through the shop into a room.

1149. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] Whom did you see there?—Martin Lascelles, and other voters.

1150. Whom did you see there besides voters?—Mr. Cleaver went in with us.

1151. Who was there?—I did not know any one else.

1152. Mr. Baron Martin.] What happened?—Mr. Cleaver told us to stay there and he would go and fetch the money; he left us there and he came out of the room into the shop, and he came back again, and he says, “You are one of the party I expect, and it does not matter if I pay one of you,” and we said, “No.” So he paid me five sovereigns and two half-crowns for six of us.

1153. That would be 17 s. 6 d. each?—Seventeen and sixpence each for the lot of us.

1154. Did you divide it?—Yes.

1155. Did you see Mr. Lowther that day?—Yes; Mr. Lowther was in the room there when we went to get the papers filled up; he was in the shop when we went to get the papers filled up.

1156. Lowther and Robert Thirsk were in the shop?—Yes; and Mr. Cleaver.

1157. But they took you into the room to pay the money?—Yes.

1158. And Cleaver went and fetched him back to you?—Yes; Cleaver went out into the shop, or he might have gone out into the street for anything I know; but he came back into the room and paid us.

1159. What had become of Mr. Tomlinson in the meantime?—I do not know; I never seed him after we left him at the Town-hall door.

1160. Did Cleaver say anything particular to you, after you came back from voting, before you got to the shop?—Nothing particular; he said the sun was shining brilliantly, and such like; the victory was sure, or something to that effect.

1161. I am told he is a poetical gentleman?—Those may not be the exact words.

1162. Was any explanation given to you why the voting was still kept going on after they had gained it?—I never heard any.

1163. You had voted at the municipal elections before last year, I dare say?—Once.

1164. May I venture to ask whether you received anything on that occasion?—I received 5 s.

1165. Can you explain to me why it was worth 17 s. 6 d. this time?—No, I do not know why it was worth more this time than it was any other.

1166. You do not know; really you mean that?—Yes.

Cross-examined by Mr. Giffard.

1167. Tell me, how did you vote at the borough election; I observe that my learned friend did not ask you?—I voted for Messrs. Maxwell and Trollope.

1171. Do you live at the Beck-side?—Yes.

1172. On the municipal election day did you go

J. Wardell.

1168. ARE you a municipal voter, and also a Parliamentary voter for this borough?—Yes.

1169. Did you vote both at the municipal and Parliamentary elections last time?—Yes.

1170. How did you vote in the Parliamentary election?—Maxwell and Trollope.

1171. Do you live at the Beck-side?—Yes.

1172. On the municipal election day did you go

go from the Beck-side with some other persons into Beverley to vote?—Yes.

1173. When you got into the square did you come opposite to Dickinson's shop?—Yes.

1174. Just tell us exactly what occurred, what you saw and heard when you got opposite Dickinson's shop?—We went up into the square, that is opposite Dickinson's shop, and there was a gentleman came out there, out of Dickinson's shop, and axed us to poll, and we said we should not poll yet, and he said he could give us 18 s. for to poll, and we would not go then, and we went into the square.

1175. A little after that did you see some people come out of the shop?—They kept coming out.

1176. Did you see Mr. Watson come out?—They kept coming in and out there all day.

1177. Did you see Mr. Thompson?—Yes.

1178. Did Mr. Thompson say something to you?—When we was going on the flags he did; but it was after we had polled Mr. Thompson said to us —

1179. Just tell us your own tale; what happened to you?—After we had polled —

1180. Mr. Baron Martin.] You said they could not give you more than 18 s.; why would not you take it?—Then we went to the Hall in the square, the Mechanics' Hall, and we went in, and they said they was not paying nothing.

1181. Mr. Waddy.] Was that the Liberal committee-room?—Yes, I expect it was; they said we was to go and make the best of ourselves; they said they had plenty of votes; they did not want us.

1182. Mr. Baron Martin.] What happened then?—We went back again to Boys's, and it was the same there, and then when we came back again we took 17 s. 6 d. a piece.

1183. Was that the end of it?—Yes; that is all I know about it.

1184. Mr. Waddy.] After you had been away did you come back again to Dickinson's shop?—Yes.

1185. When you came back again to Dickinson's shop just tell us exactly what took place then?—We took the 17 s. 6 d.

1186. From whom?—I took it from Brooks, my money.

1187. Where did he get it?—He got it from Mr. Cleaver.

1188. Did you see him get it from Mr. Cleaver?—Yes; I was in the room when he paid him.

1189. Where was Cleaver at the time that he gave it to Brooks?—In the room next to the shop; we went through the shop into the room.

1190. Did you hear what was said by Cleaver at the time that he gave this money to Brooks?—No, I never heard him say nothing.

1191. Did you hear anything said?—No; he paid him the money for all six on us, and he divided it when he came out.

1192. Had you voted before that, or did you vote afterwards?—We voted before he paid us.

1193. After you had voted did you see Mr. Thompson?—Yes; he was on the flags off of Dickinson's.

1194. What took place between you and Thompson?—He said, "Get away, my lads; they are giving a sovereign a piece;" accordingly we turned back, and we could not get no more than 17 s. 6 d.

1195. Did you hear Duffill say anything either to Cleaver or to Thompson about the Liberals retiring?—No; I cannot say that I did.

1196. Did you see Robert Thirsk that day?—I am sure I cannot say whether I did or not; I do not think I did; I do not know; I cannot say that I did.

1197. Do you remember after you had voted Mr. Cleaver saying anything?—No; I never seed him after I had voted.

1198. Do you remember anything being said about the sun shining that day?—No, I never heard him say so.

1199. How long have you been a voter at the municipal election?—Twenty years I should think.

1200. Mr. Baron Martin.] Are you a freeman?—Yes.

1201. Mr. Waddy.] Have you voted frequently?—Yes.

1202. Had you been paid for your vote before this last time?—Yes.

1203. Generally?—Yes.

1204. Always?—I believe always.

1205. Mr. Baron Martin.] Do you mean that you have been paid for your vote during the election?—Yes.

1206. Mr. Waddy.] What have you got?—Sometimes half-a-crown; sometimes 2 s.

1207. What was the highest you ever got till the last election?—I believe 3 s. 6 d.

Cross-examined by Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.

1208. Did both sides use to pay?—Yes, I believe they did.

1209. I suppose the price was kept up on one side according to the price of the other; I suppose it was pretty much that, was not it?—Yes.

1210. I am quite sure that a respectable person like yourself did not see any harm in it?—I have taken all I could get; that is all the harm I did.

Re-examined by Mr. Serjeant Sargood.

1211. If it depends upon the state of the market, can you tell why you got 17 s. 6 d. last year, never having had anything like it before?—No, I cannot.

1212. Have you no idea about it?—No, I have no idea about it.

1213. You won the game, you know?—I do not know.

1214. Mr. Serjeant Ballantine (through the Court).] How much were the other side, the Liberals, giving this last time?—I never heard of anything.

1215. I suppose you did not like to take money from your own party?—I never heard of their giving anything, not the last time.

JOHN MCGINNIS, sworn; Examined by Mr. Serjeant Sargood.

1216. WHAT are you?—A labourer.

1217. Are you one of the Beck-side labourers?—No; I work out in the country.

1218. Do you remember the municipal election?—Yes.

90.

1219. Were you at about 11 or 12 o'clock in the town here?—Yes. J. McGinnis.

1220. And did you arrive opposite Dickinson's shop like the rest?—Yes.

1221. Do you know what the state of the poll was

J. McGinnis. was about that time?—I heard them saying they was about 200 ahead.

1869.

1222. The Conservatives were so?—Yes.

1223. Did you see any young man come out from Dickinson's?—Yes.

1224. What did he say to you, if anything?—He asked if we had polled; we said not, and he said he could get us 18 s.

1225. What did you say to that?—We said we would not take it.

1226. You waited to see if it went up any higher; was that it?—Yes.

1227. Did you see William Watson and William Thompson come out?—I met them on the flags.

1228. Were they voters?—Yes.

1229. Did they say anything to you?—Thompson said they had given him a sovereign.

1230. As you said you would wait awhile, did you go away to the "Angel Inn"?—No, we went to the Mechanics' Hall, or Mechanics' Institute.

1231. Did you afterwards come back to the neighbourhood of Dickinson's shop to see what was going on?—We heard that they gave up there, and we came back again.

1232. You heard that the Liberals had given up?—Yes.

1233. Did you see the young man again?—Yes.

1234. What did he say the next time?—We went from there to Dan Boys's.

1235. Never mind where you went; what did he say about the price?—He said he could get us 17 s. 6 d. then.

1236. How much did you ask?—We would like 1 l. if we could get it.

1237. Did he say he would go and speak to anyone about it?—Yes, he said he would go and see somebody; I forget who it was.

1238. Did he go into Dickinson's shop to inquire?—Yes.

1239. What did he say when he came back?—He said he could get us 17 s. 6 d.

1240. Upon that did you and the other men go in?—Yes.

1241. Tell us who went with you?—There was Jack Brooks, Jack Wardell, Beattie, Ellis, and Fox and me.

1242. Was Tomlinson with you then?—Yes.

1243. Did you go into the shop?—Yes.

1244. That is where they make up the voting papers?—Yes.

1245. Who did you see there?—I have seen Mr. Lowther there.

1246. Was Mr. Cleaver there?—Yes.

1247. And Mr. Thirsk?—I do not know him.

1248. Another person, whose name you do not know?—Yes.

1249. Was there anything said about voting by anybody?—Yes.

1250. Tell me what was said?—They said, one of them, that Brookes had no vote.

1251. We have heard about that, but was anything said about when you men were to vote?—No, not that I know of.

1252. Mr. Baron Martin.] Did you go and vote?—Yes, we went and voted.

1253. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] Did anybody take care of you?—Mr. Cleaver went with us.

1254. I suppose he brought you back safe?—He brought us back.

1255. Did Mr. Cleaver say anything about your voting?—No.

1256. When he brought you back, what then?—He got us our money.

1257. Where did you go to get it?—We went into the back room, and he brought it to us and gave it to Brooks; 5 l. and two half-crowns.

1258. It was divided amongst you?—Yes.

1259. Did you get your 17 s. 6 d.?—Yes.

1260. Did you see any other voters in the room when you arrived there?—There was some wanted to get in, but they would not let them in till we got paid.

1261. Did you see Sir Henry Edwards and Mr. Kennard when they were canvassing?—No, I never seed 'em; none on 'em.

Cross-examined by Mr. Giffard.

1262. You have not told us, but I suppose at the municipal election you voted for the Conservative candidates?—Yes.

1263. How did you vote at the borough election?—For Mr. Maxwell and Mr. Trollope.

EDWARD BEATTIE, sworn; Examined by Mr. Waddy.

E. Beattie.

1264. Do you live at the Beck-side?—Yes.

1265. And are you a voter both for the municipal and the Parliamentary elections?—Yes.

1266. And did you vote at both?—Yes.

1267. For the municipal election which way did you vote?—For councillors for the municipal election I voted for, I forget their names.

1268. For the Conservatives?—Yes.

1269. And for the Parliamentary election you voted for the Liberals?—Yes.

1270. On the day of the election did you go from Beck-side to the Square to vote?—Yes.

1271. About what time did you get there?—About half-past 10.

1272. Did you go to the Liberal polling place?—Yes.

1273. Did you find that there was nobody there?—There was nobody there to fill our papers.

1274. Did you after that go to Dickinson's shop?—Yes.

1275. And who did you see there?—A young man came out to us there; I do not know who he was.

1276. What took place between the young man and you?—He axed us, had we voted; we said we had not. He said, if we went in with him, he would get us 17 s. 6 d.

1277. Was 17 s. 6 d. what was offered in the first instance?—In the first instance, he said he would give us 18 s.; but when we went in, he said he would only give us 17 s. 6 d.

1278. Did you see Thompson?—Yes; we met him on the flags.

1279. Was that before or after you had voted?—Before we had voted.

1280. Tell us what took place between you and Thompson?—He said we was to be quick, they was giving a sovereign; we was to look sharp, they was giving a sovereign.

1281. What did he say the sovereign was for?—To vote for them.

1282. To

1282. To vote when?—At the municipal election.

1283. Was anything said by Thompson about the other election?—No.

1284. Did you see Thomas Duffill?—Yes.

1285. Mr. Thomas Duffill, I mean?—Yes.

1286. I believe you asked him about some money?—We asked him for our day's wages, and he said he could not give it to us.

1287. After that, did you go back to Dickenson's shop?—Yes.

1288. On your way, did you see anybody?—We had seen that young man again.

1289. And then, what then?—Then we went with him; we wanted 1*l.* from him. He said he would go in and see; and he came out and said he could not give us any more than 17*s.* 6*d.*

1290. Did you get 17*s.* 6*d.*?—Yes; we went in with him and got our papers signed.

1291. Mr. Baron Martin.] You went and got your papers signed, and got the 17*s.* 6*d.*?—Yes, from Mr. Cleaver.

1292. Mr. Waddy.] Did you see Mr. Robert Thirsk?—Yes.

1293. Where did you see him?—We saw him in Dickenson's shop.

1294. Did you speak to Thirsk, or did he speak to any of you?—No.

1295. You heard no conversation with Mr. Thirsk?—No.

1296. Where was your voting place; was it the Town Hall?—Yes; the Town's Hall.

1297. As you came away from the Town Hall, was Mr. Cleaver with you?—Yes.

1298. Which ward do you belong to?—The Minister Ward.

1299. But both wards, I believe, voted at the Town Hall?—I do not know about that.

1300. Do you remember any fine language of Mr. Cleaver's as you were coming away from the Town Hall?—I heard him saying something about the sun shining, or something, but that is all I could make out about it.

1301. Tell us as nearly as you can what it was?—I cannot say what it was.

1302. Do you remember his mentioning Sir Henry Edwards' name?—He said he thought they would win the day, or something; it looked very prospective, or something.

1303. Did he mention Sir Henry Edwards' name, or did he not?—He said he thought they would gain the day, or something like it.

1304. That who would gain the day?—That Mr. Edwards would gain the day.

1305. I believe you were one of the lot that got your money from Brooks?—Yes.

JAMES ELLIS, sworn; Examined by Mr. Serjeant Sargood.

1306. WHAT are you by business?—A Chimney Sweeper.

1307. Do you remember the municipal election on the 2nd of November?—Yes.

1308. Did you come into the town between 11 and 12 o'clock?—Yes, it would be about that time, I think, when I got into the town.

1309. Did you come into the town and meet a lot of other men; Brooks, and Beattie, and Wardell, and Fox, and McGinnis?—Yes.

1310. Were you opposite Dickenson's shop?—Yes.

1311. Did you see a young man come out?—Yes.

1312. Did he say what the price was for voting?—Yes.

1313. How much was it?—18*s.* at that time.

1314. Were you all satisfied to take it at that time?—Yes, only we did not take it.

1315. Did you go into the shop?—No, we went away.

1316. Did you afterwards come back again?—Yes, we afterwards came back again.

1317. I think it had gone down to 17*s.* 6*d.*?—Yes, when we seed the young man again.

1318. Did you go into the shop where they filled up the papers?—Yes.

1319. Who did you see there?—I seed Mr. Lowther, Mr. Thirsk and Mr. Cleaver.

1320. Did you know what the state of the poll was at that time between the Conservatives and the Liberals?—No, I did not know.

1321. I do not mean the number, but which had got the biggest?—The Conservatives were the highest.

1322. Did they say what they wanted with you for the 17*s.* 6*d.*?—I was to vote for them.

1323. Vote where?—For the Conservatives.

1324. Whereabouts; at what election?—The municipal.

1325. Was anything said about anything else?—No.

1326. Did you go in yourself with Mr. Cleaver?—Yes.

1327. And the lot of you?—Yes.

1328. And when you had voted you came back for your money?—Yes, we went to the Town's Hall and voted there, and they took us back again.

1329. How much did you get?—I got 17*s.* 6*d.*

1330. How did you vote at the Parliamentary election?—Mr. Maxwell and Mr. Trollope.

1331. Did anybody canvass you for Sir Henry?—I was not at home when they came round canvassing; I never saw them.

1332. You heard of their calling, but you had not seen them?—Yes, I heard of their calling, but I was not at home, and I never saw them.

JOHN TOMLINSON, sworn; Examined by Mr. Waddy.

1333. At the municipal election which way did you vote; for the Tories or the Liberals?—For the Tories.

1334. Do you know Mr. William Catterson, junior?—Yes.

1335. Did you get anything from Mr. William Catterson?—Yes.

90.

1336. What did you get?—Half-a-sovereign.

1337. What for?—For voting.

1338. Where were you when you got it?—At the Town's Hall.

1339. When was it that you got it?—About one o'clock.

D 4

1340. On

E. Beattie.

1869.

J. Ellis.

J. Tomlinson.

J. Tomlinson. 1340. On the day of the municipal election?

—Yes.

9 March
1869.

1341. Before you had voted, or afterwards?—After.

1342. Mr. Baron Martin.] Had you previously gone in company with Brooks and the others to the booth?—No.

1343. Mr. Waddy.] That was John Shaw Tomlinson, my Lord. (To the Witness.) You are John Tomlinson, not John Shaw?—Yes.

1344. Had you previously promised your vote to anybody?—Yes, to Mr. Catterson, Mr. Lowther and Mr. Usher.

1345. For whom did they canvass you?—For themselves.

1346. After the municipal election did you see Mr. Thompson?—What Thompson?

1347. The barber?—I generally uses his shop.

1348. When you were using his shop, had you a conversation with him?—Yes.

1349. Was that when you were in his shop, or not?—Yes, I was in his shop.

1350. What did you say to him?—I do not know; I said that I was not exactly used as the other men was. When Mr. Lowther canvassed me I promised him my vote, and I wished to be used as the other men was; I did not want no more, nor no less; I wanted to be used as the other men was; I consider as I was not, and so I turned round, and I voted against them at the borough election.

1351. Did you tell them that before the election?—I told them that when they was canvassing me.

1352. Mr. Baron Martin.] Did you and Thompson have any talk about this?—I do not know; there is a deal of odd talk in barbers' shops.

1353. Mr. Waddy.] What took place when you told Thompson that you had not been served as the other men were; what did you mean by saying that you were not served the same as the other men were?—They did not give me the same pay as the other men had.

1354. They did not give you the same pay as the other men had for your vote?—No.

1355. What did Thompson say?—He said it would be made up to me before long, or in a day or two.

1356. It was not made up, I believe?—No.

Cross-examined by Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.

1357. You voted for the Liberals, did you?—Yes, for the borough.

1358. What you mean by not being used the same as the other men were was, you heard that 17 s. 6 d. had been the price paid to the others, and only 10 s. had been given to you?—Yes.

1359. That is really what you mean?—Yes, that is what I do mean.

1360. Mr. Baron Martin.] You thought that you ought to have got 17 s. 6 d. like the others?—Yes.

1361. Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] It was a pretty-well-understood thing that they should all get the 17 s. 6 d.?—I said I should be content to be used as the other men was.

[The Witness withdrew.]

JOHN SHAW TOMLINSON, sworn; Examined by Mr. Serjeant Sargood.

J. S.
Tomlinson.

1362. You are the son of the last witness, I think?—No; he is my uncle.

1363. Do you remember, on the municipal election day, being opposite Dickenson's shop, with a lot of others?—Yes.

1364. Did you hear the proposal of 17 s. 6 d.?—First of all, when we was up there, there was a man came out and said he would give 1 l. a man, 10 l. for 10 votes, and 20 l. for 20.

1365. Mr. Baron Martin.] Do you know who the man was?—No, I do not.

1366. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] That was a young man out of Dickenson's shop?—I do not know who he was; that was before that young man came out; I was just gone up there.

1367. Afterwards, did the young man come out?—Yes.

1368. What price did he put on them?—18 s. he thought he could get.

1369. What time in the day was this?—About a quarter past 10, may be.

1370. Do you know how the poll was standing between the Liberals and the Conservatives then?—No, I had not heard that then.

1371. Did you hear afterwards?—Yes, about 200 ahead.

1372. What time was that?—Between 10 and 11.

1373. You went with the men down to the polling place under the care of Mr. Cleaver, I think?—Yes.

1374. But you thought it safer to get your money before you voted than afterwards?—To be sure I did.

1375. Mr. Baron Martin.] You went to the booth, but you would not go in?—I went in, but I would not deliver up my paper.

1376. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] Did you find your way back to Dickenson's after that?—In front of Dickenson's shop I did.

1377. Who took you there?—I do not know that anyone took me there.

1378. Did you go in and get your money?—I had not polled; I did not poll till after 12. I was just an hour skulking about.

1379. Did you ultimately go into Dickenson's and get your money before you voted?—I went in to get my paper filled up, and then I went to the "Golden Ball," and got my money.

1380. You got your paper filled up at Dickenson's?—Yes.

1381. You did not, like the other men, go into a back room at Dickenson's, but you went into the "Golden Ball"?—Yes.

1382. How much did you get?—17 s. 6 d.

1383. Who paid it you?—A man they call Watson, the auctioneer.

1384. Who introduced you to him?—A young man they called Bentley.

1385. Is he the son or the nephew of Bentley, one of the foremen at the Waggon Company?—I believe he is a nephew; he came from Welton.

1386. Having got your money, did anybody take care of you up to the polling place, to see that you earned your money?—Yes, I did not like to go myself, so I got Mr. Booty to go up with me.

1387. Did anybody tell you why they were going going on buying votes, seeing they were all safe?—No, I never heard that mentioned.

Cross-examined by Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.

1388. You were not a voter in the borough, were you?—No.

1389. That was perfectly well known, was it not?—I do not know, I am sure; I should think plenty know it well.

1390. You did not pretend to be a voter, or anything of the kind?—No, I said nothing; all I was afraid of was that I would not get my money.

Re-examined by Mr. Serjeant Sargood.

1391. But you had always previously been a voter?—I had never voted only for the municipal; I had never voted for the borough before.

1392. You had for the municipal?—Yes, several times.

1393. Had you been on the register for the Parliamentary list?—No, I had not got on because I had not paid my rates.

[The Witness withdrew.]

WILLIAM THOMPSON, sworn; Examined by Mr. Waddy.

1394. ARE you a voter in the borough?—Yes.

1395. Both for the municipal and Parliamentary elections?—Yes, it is the first time for the Parliamentary.

1396. Which way did you vote for the municipal election, for the Tories or the Liberals?—For Mr. Lowther and Mr. Catterson.

1397. That is for the Conservatives?—Yes.

1398. For the Parliamentary election which way did you vote?—Mr. Maxwell and Mr. Trollope.

1399. Do you remember the morning of the municipal election; did you meet Matthew Wilson and Robert Mann?—Yes.

1400. Where did you meet them?—I seed them in the square.

1401. What time?—I should say it would be about 11 o'clock.

1402. Was Benjamin Moore with them?—He was.

1403. Just tell me what took place?—Matthew Wilson says to me, "Come, you may as well go on with us, you will get a sovereign," just so; then I said "No, not yet." So, when they came out I said, "You have not got a sovereign." "Yes, he had," he said; then he puts his hand in his pocket, and shows me a sovereign; so I went to the other, but they had shut the door.

1404. To the Liberal committee-room?—Yes; I sees Moore again, and he says, "Come on, you may as well have 17 s. 6 d., it is settled half-a-crown"; so I went and took 17 s. 6 d.

1405. After Wilson showed you the sovereign, what followed upon that?—Moore took me to Dickenson's shop, and he said, "Stop there," and I stopped; then he went and fetched 17 s. 6 d., and he said, "Come in and get your name signed," and he took me to the court-room to get my name signed, and then he left me in the court.

1405*. Do you mean that he took you to get your paper filled up?—Yes.

1406. When you got that, did you go and vote?—I voted before I got the money; he says to me, "Here is another man in too, I will be with you in a few minutes." When he comes out he says, "Come up here"; so he takes me up to the "Golden Ball" yard, and he gave me half-a-sovereign and three half-crowns.

1407. Before you got this money had you been to the Liberal committee-room?—Yes.

[The Witness withdrew.]

JOHN GOLDWELL, sworn; Examined by Mr. Serjeant Sargood.

1408. WHAT are you by trade?—A Cabinet Maker.

1409. Were you a voter at the municipal election?—I was.

1410. Did you come into the town between two and three o'clock?—No, by the half-past 12 train.

1411. When did you vote?—Between two and three.

1412. Before voting did you meet Mr. Watson, the painter?—I did.

1413. Did you know what was the state of the municipal election at that time, the state of the poll?—Yes.

1414. Who were ahead?—The Tories were ahead, the others had done.

1415. Did Mr. Watson make any proposal to you for your vote?—Yes, he asked me if I would go and vote, and if I had voted; I said, "No, I had not voted"; he said "Come along then"; and I went, and I got my paper filled up in Padgett's shop.

1416. Which ward was this?—St. Mary's Ward, I think it is called, where I went to vote; and when we came through the square he put a sovereign into my hand.

1417. Did he explain to you why they should give 1 l. for your vote at that time of the day?—He did not.

1418. He said nothing?—He said nothing.

1419. Had you been a voter before for any length of time?—I had been a voter for the municipal.

1420. For how long?—Only once before.

1421. How much did you get that time?—Five shillings.

Cross-examined by Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.

1422. How did you vote at the general election?—I voted Liberal.

[The Witness withdrew.]

1869.

1423. ARE you a voter for Beverley?—Yes.
1424. Both for the municipal and Parliamentary elections?—Yes.

1425. How did you vote at the municipal election?—For the Liberals, I mean for the Crimsons.

1426. And then for the Parliamentary election, how did you vote?—For the Liberals.

1427. What time in the day did you go to vote for the municipal election?—About one o'clock, as near as I can say.

1428. Mr. Baron Martin.] Are you a labouring man?—Yes.

1429. Mr. Waddy.] Did you see Robert Thirsk?—Yes.

1430. Was that before or after you had voted?—Before.

1431. Where was it?—It was at the railway station.

1432. What took place between you and him then?—I was working for him.

1433. Just tell us what took place between you and Mr. Thirsk at the station?—About one o'clock I left my work and came to my dinner.

1434. Did you see Mr. Robert Thirsk near the "Golden Ball"?—Yes, I did.

1435. Had you voted then, or had you not?—No.

1436. Just tell us what took place between you and Robert Thirsk when you saw him near the "Golden Ball"?—He said the Liberals were about done up, and I should go and vote which way I liked; I then went and voted for the Crimsons.

1437. What took place afterwards between you and Mr. Thirsk?—There was nothing besides that.

1438. Did you see Mr. Thirsk that day at all afterwards, after you had voted?—No, not after, I did not.

1439. Did you get any money that day?—Yes.

1440. From whom?—Robert Thirsk, the foreman over the Old Foundry.

1441. He gave you how much?—He gave me 5 s.

1442. The Robert Thirsk that you have been speaking about is not the same Robert Thirsk?—No, it is another Thirsk at the station that I was working for.

1443. Robert Thirsk gave you 5 s. that day?—Yes.

1444. Which of them is your master, James Thirsk or Robert Thirsk?—James Thirsk.

1445. I have been asking you about Robert Thirsk all the time?—I did not hear it.

1446. When did you first that day see Robert Thirsk, I do not want James at all?—I went to him, and I told him that I had voted, and I had not got no money.

1447. When was that, what time in the day?—It was again Mr. Taylor's shop.

1448. When?—I cannot say what time of the day, he then gave me 5 s., when I told him I had got no money.

1449. What took place when he gave you the 5 s.?—He said, "My lad, you may go upstairs, and see if you can get any more."

1450. Mr. Baron Martin.] Go upstairs, where?—At the "Golden Ball."

1451. Mr. Waddy.] Did you go up then?—No, I did not like to go up, and I seed William Vernom, and as asked him, and he said he would go up with me; he said, if I would give him half-a-crown he would go and get me some more.

1452. Did you and Vernom then go upstairs together?—Yes.

1453. Did you go into a room upstairs?—Yes.

1454. Did you see Mr. Watson, the auctioneer, there?—Yes.

1455. What took place between Mr. Watson and you?—He axed me my name, and he set my name down in a book.

1456. Then what happened?—He gave me 10 s.

1457. Were you told what you got that money for?—Yes.

1458. What for?—It was for voting for them.

1459. Was that said so; did anybody say that?—No.

1460. Was anything said about it?—No, not that I heard.

1461. On the day of the Parliamentary election did you see Vernom?—Yes.

1462. Mr. Baron Martin.] Did you give him half-a-crown out of that 15 s., or whatever it was?—Yes, I gave him half-a-crown out of it, and a glass of liquor and all.

1463. Mr. Waddy.] Did you see Vernom after you had voted on the Parliamentary election day?—Yes.

1464. What took place between you?—He was going by, and he says, "You are a turncoat," he says, "you have got our money and you have not voted for us"; I said, "I did not intend it."

[The Witness withdrew.]

HORNER WALTERS, sworn; Examined by Mr. Serjeant Sargood.

H. Walters.

1465. WHAT is your trade?—A Shoemaker.

1466. Were you a voter at the municipal election?—Yes.

1467. And at the Parliamentary?—Yes.

1468. Do you remember the morning of the municipal election?—Yes.

1469. What time did you vote?—About 11 o'clock.

1470. Do you know in what state the poll was then; who was highest?—No, I do not.

1471. Did you get anything for voting?—Yes.

1472. How much?—I got 17 s. 6 d.

1473. How much in the first instance?—Ten shillings.

1474. From whom?—From a man they called Tindal Brown.

1475. Who is he?—He is a tanner, he works at Mr. Cussons' yard.

1476. Are you sure that was he?—Yes, Mr. Richmond sent him up along with me.

1477. Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] Did you hear Richmond send him?—Yes, I did.

1478. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] Had you spoken to Richmond?—No, he met me in the street.

1479. Richmond sent Tindal Brown with you to to vote?—Yes, he took me into a room and gave me a paper, and sent this man along with me.

1480. And when you had done that job Brown gave you the 10 s.?—Yes.

1481. After that, did you meet Richmond again?—Yes.

1482. What did you say to him about the 10 s.?—I did not say anything to him. He met me, and he says, “You only got 10 s., and I will give you another three half-crowns to make it 17 s. 6 d.”

1483. Did he say what you were to do for it?—I was to poll.

1484. But you had polled, you know?—Yes, I had polled.

1485. What did he say you were to do, then?—He said, perhaps they should want me again.

1486. For what?—For the election.

1487. What did he say that they would want you again for?—For the election.

1488. Did he say that?—Yes.

1489. Did he say what election?—No, he did not.

1490. “Perhaps we shall want you again for the election”?—Yes.

1491. That was all?—Yes.

1492. Afterwards were you canvassed by Sir Henry Edwards and Captain Kennard?—Yes, I was.

1493. Where was that?—In Keldgate.

1494. Is that where you live?—Yes.

1495. At your own house?—Yes.

1496. Who introduced them to you; did anybody at that time?—I think Mr. Richmond came along with them, and Mr. Cussons.

1497. You voted for Maxwell and Trollope, I believe?—Yes.

Cross-examined by Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.

1498. Did Mr. Richmond or anybody else speak to you after this day about whom you should vote for?—No, they never mentioned nothing to me who I should vote for.

1499. You said that Richmond said, “Perhaps we may want you again for an election”?—He said he should want me again for an election.

1500. Just give me the conversation again; can you begin and go right through with it?—I have gone through with it.

1501. You have gone through with it for the sake of my learned friend; go through with it again for the sake of me?—I met with Mr. Richmond in Keldgate about 10 yards from what they call Beck-street, and he came up to me and said, “Have you voted”? and I said, “No.” Then they sent Tindal Brown along with me, and he went into the room. I do not believe that Tindal Brown went into the polling-place with us, and polled us; but when we came out, Tindal Brown gave me half-a-sovereign. Then I met with Richmond, perhaps about an hour afterwards. As I was coming back again, I met with Richmond; he says, “You have only gotten 10 s.”; I said, “No.” He says, “There is the other three half-crowns, that will make the 17 s. 6 d.” He says, “I shall want you again for election.” Then he went away.

1502. And you never saw him afterwards?—I did not see him after that day.

Re-examined by Mr. Serjeant Sargood.

1503. Was it after or before that that he came and introduced Mr. Kennard and Sir Henry?—It was before that. No, it was not before that, it was after that that they came round for the borough election.

1504. It was after you had got your money that they came round to canvass you?—Yes, they came round after.

1505. How many days after?—I cannot hardly tell to a few days; it was not very long afterwards.

[The Witness withdrew.]

[Adjourned to To-morrow, at Ten o'clock.]

H. Walters.

1869.

Wednesday, 10th March 1869.

Mr. JOHN SMALES VICKERS, sworn; Examined by Mr. Serjeant Sargood.

Mr. J.S. Vickers. 1506. ARE you Assistant Overseer in the parish of St. Mary's?—Yes.

1507. I believe that your occupation is that of an Auctioneer?—Yes.

10 March 1869. 1508. You have known Mr. Wreghitt for some years probably?—Yes, several years.

1509. I think for some time you were an active supporter of Sir Henry Edwards?—Yes, I was.

1510. Were you in consequence of that in constant communication with Mr. Wreghitt?—Yes, for some years.

1511. Give me the earliest time at which you became connected with Mr. Wreghitt on behalf of Sir Henry Edwards?—When Sir Henry first appeared in Beverley.

1512. In 1857?—Yes.

1513. And you continued so, I believe, for some years?—Yes.

1514. Do you know Mr. Kempley?—Yes.

1515. And Mr. David Nutchey?—Yes.

1516. Thomas Richmond?—Yes.

1517. And Francis Burrell?—Yes.

1518. Were they, with other gentlemen, active supporters of that particular interest?—Yes; during the time that I was connected with the party.

1519. When was the Conservative Working Men's Association first established?—In 1857, I believe.

1520. How soon was it after Sir Henry Edwards' appearance here, or when he came to this borough?—It would be about the time that he was introduced.

1521. Were you officially connected with that institution?—Yes, I was on the committee some time afterwards. I was chairman of it for about a year and a-half.

1522. Can you tell me what its means of support are?—By a small subscription from the members, and a subscription from the borough Members, from the members constituting the association.

1523. You leave out the word "small" there; what was it?—From 1s. A great number of them were at 1s. each.

1524. What was the subscription of the gentlemen who were Members?—I think the deficiency was made up by the borough Members, for the expenses.

1525. Can you tell me about the amount that they have contributed?—I think it is 20 l.

1526. Do you know through whose hands the money was supplied?—I have known it supplied or paid through Wreghitt.

1527. You are acquainted also, I believe, with the constitution of the pasture masters in this place, are you not?—Yes.

1528. How were they elected?—By the freemen.

1529. Have you any personal knowledge how the votes were obtained from the freemen?—By payment for them.

Mr. Baron Martin.] You mean by bribing them?—

1530. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] Have you personally at any time been employed for that purpose?—Yes.

1531. Mr. Baron Martin.] You mean to bribe?—Yes.

1532. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] Can you tell me about what sum would be paid on an average?—Ten shillings each.

1533. Mr. Baron Martin.] Was that the ordinary sum?—Yes, that was the prevailing sum at that day; it varies according to the contest.

1534. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] What particular day are you thinking of at this moment?—I am thinking of about 1862, when the highest I ever knew was given. It was given from 10 s. to 15 s. I have known of from 2 s. 6 d. to 3 s. 6 d. up to nearly 1 l., and 1 l.

1535. From whom did you receive your instructions on this subject?—Mr. Wreghitt.

1536. From whom did you get the money?—It was paid by Mr. Wreghitt.

1537. Did he inform you from whom he obtained the money?—From various conversations that we had he mentioned the borough Members' names, and I suppose it came from them.

Mr. Baron Martin.] It is no evidence that the money was paid by the persons he has named; but it is evidence to show the course that matters took. The Witness mentioned that it was from the borough Members.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] That was not his answer, I think.

Mr. Baron Martin.] Just read the answer. (The answer was read.)

1538. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] What names did he mention?—Edwards and Walker.

1539. What was there in the conversation when he mentioned those names, that led you to suppose the money came from them?—At that time the sum that I proposed to pay he thought was too much, and I told him it was the way to secure the election; I said my proposition would secure the election, and it was during that conversation that he mentioned the names of Edwards and Walker, and where the money came from; it was making it too expensive for them.

1540. I need scarcely ask you what were the political views of the pasture masters you were thus to secure the return of?—They were the Conservative party that Wreghitt had nominated.

1541. We have been told that Mr. Wreghitt was not a freeman; just explain what you mean by his nominating them?—He was recognised as the Members' representative in Beverley.

1542. What had he to do with nominating the pasture masters?—What he did not approve of, nobody else could; they could not stand.

1543. Amongst other things, did Mr. Wreghitt explain to you the object of securing Conservative pasture masters?—It was to secure the patronage, and and by securing the patronage he would secure the Parliamentary elections.

1544. Were the persons so patronised, persons who had Parliamentary votes?—All freemen have Parliamentary votes.

1545. That would be the consequence?—Yes.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] It was proved yesterday, that all freemen had not Parliamentary votes.

The Witness.] Those who have benefits from the pastures have.

1546. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] You are speaking of pasture freemen?—Yes.

1547. I will go from the pasture masters to Mr. Walker's Gift, which arises out of it; have you had anything to do with that at any time?—No.

1548. Now, as to the churchwardens, have you been active at all in promoting the election of the churchwardens?—I was one myself, several times.

1549. Is anything of this sort done as to obtaining votes for churchwardens?—Yes.

1550. Mr. Baron Martin.] Do you mean that people were bribed to vote for churchwardens?—Every one who voted.

1551. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] What was the object of that?—To secure the election of the candidate; those who will give the most money get in.

1552. It is rather hard work, is it not, to be a churchwarden?—There are some good dinners.

1553. Mr. Baron Martin.] At whose expense?—The estate of the church produces an income of 1,000*l.* a year, and they have a great deal of patronage; they have more patronage than any other body in the town, considering the number.

1554. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] Were your efforts to get in Conservative churchwardens?—Yes.

1555. Were the persons whom you had the power of patronising, for the most part, Parliamentary electors?—Yes.

1556. In your capacity of churchwarden as well as from your other knowledge, was the patronage distributed according to the political views of the persons who received it?—That was the object of obtaining the appointment.

1557. Mr. Baron Martin.] Have you been engaged in this election for a long time?—From 1852, I believe.

1558. In what election was it that a man called Boyes was imprisoned by the House of Commons?—In 1857.

1559. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] I think you must mean in 1859, when the inquiry was?—Yes; it was.

1560. Mr. Baron Martin.] Who were the candidates in the election in which the man of the name of Boyes was imprisoned?—Sir Henry Edwards, then Major Edwards, and Mr. Walters; Mr. Walker was defeated; Sir Henry Edwards and Mr. Walters were elected; and Mr. Walters was unseated.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] Boyes, I believe, was on the Liberal side.

Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] He was; he appeared to have been too "liberal."

Mr. Baron Martin.] He was tried before me at York.

1561. Mr. Serjeant Sargood (to the Witness).] Who found the money for bribing the votes for the churchwardens?—Wreghitt gave me, on two or three occasions, money.

1562. To what extent was money spent for this particular object?—Do you mean the amount for each vote?

1563. Yes?—About 2*s.* 6*d.*

1564. How many voters would there be?—Every ratepayer has a vote; there are about 800 or 900 in the borough, and perhaps more than 400 or 500 will vote at times; it depends upon the amount of money paid to bring up the voters.

1565. Did Wreghitt inform you from what source this money came?—This was from a fund supplied by Edwards and Walker.

1566. As to the municipal elections for the town council, have you been active in them also?—Yes.

1567. You have had the honour, if it be one, of being a town councillor, I believe?—I was in it for some years.

1568. And were an active canvasser for other councillors when you were not in office?—For several years.

1569. Were votes obtained by the same system of purchase?—Yes.

1570. What sum was given for it?—I have known some years half-a-crown; I never knew it to get up to as much or more than 7*s.* 6*d.* until this year; the last sum paid in 1868 was 1*l.*

1571. Was that for the purpose of securing town councillors of active minds or of peculiar political views?—It was for the purpose of obtaining Conservatives.

1572. With what ultimate object were Conservatives to be obtained?—To secure patronage.

1573. Was that a patronage capable of being exercised in favour of those who were Parliamentary voters?—The town council influences many votes for the Parliamentary election.

1574. They employ a large number of tradesmen, of course?—Yes.

1575. And a great many men who are not tradesmen, workmen and labourers, who have Parliamentary votes?—Yes.

1576. When you were elected a town councillor, was bribery resorted to?—Yes.

1577. Where did the money come from, both on that occasion and on others, when you were active in bribing?—On the first occasion that I stood each candidate paid his own expenses.

1578. That was before Sir Henry Edwards did you the honour to come here?—Yes.

1579. What was the date of that?—At the first contest, when I stood, each candidate paid his own expenses.

1580. Give me the date?—In 1856, I believe, or 1857; I cannot speak to a year.

1581. Was it before or after Sir Henry Edwards came amongst you?—Before; at that time we were unsuccessful.

1582. From whom did the money come after that date, when you were active in assisting in the bribery?—I have known it come from many sources.

1583. From whom did you get it; from whose hands?—

1584. Mr. Baron Martin.] What were the sources?—On one or two occasions the candidates themselves subscribed.

1585. Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] Did you receive ceive the money from the candidates?—From those candidates that subscribed.

1586. Did you receive the money from the candidates?—I did on one occasion.

1587. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] Did you see Wreghitt in reference to the municipal elections?—Yes; in later years I did.

1588. Give me the date when you had interviews with him?—It was in about 1860 and 1861; in those years.

1589. What amount did you receive from Wreghitt on the municipal elections?—

1590. Mr. Baron Martin.] The time was about 1860 or 1861, you say?—Yes, I cannot swear to one year; on some occasions there has been no contest; merely the expenses have been paid of cabs and bills and legal expenses; those have been paid by Mr. Wreghitt; on one occasion I received as much as 100 l. from him.

1591. When was that?—On one municipal election; I cannot say the year it was in, about 1861.

1592. You received that from Mr. Wreghitt?—Yes.

1593. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] For what purpose was it?—It was paid to the municipal voters.

1594. It was used for the purpose of bribery?—Yes.

1595. Did he tell you from what source that money came?—From the same fund that he received the other from.

1596. As to this Conservative association, was Wreghitt at any time chairman of it?—He is now, and he has been ever since a part of the first year that it was established, when a gentleman of the name of Collinson was chairman; he succeeded Mr. Collinson; then I was chairman for about a year and a-half, and he has been ever since.

1597. Mr. Baron Martin.] Mr. Collinson was the original chairman?—Yes.

1598. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] And then Wreghitt was chairman?—Yes.

1599. And then you were, you say, for a short time?—Yes; for a year and a-half.

1600. And ever since then Wreghitt has been chairman?—Yes.

1601. What business was done at this Conservative association, can you tell me?—The business was to further the interests of the Conservative party.

1602. You had an interest in the pasture masters; did the association do anything with respect to it?—They had their meeting to appoint who was to stand for the pasture masters; the association nominated gentlemen for all the positions in the town, such as churchwardens, guardians, and town councillors, and, in fact, all officers that were nominated.

1603. Mr. Baron Martin.] All officers that held office by election?—Yes.

1604. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] How came it that you were chairman during a short period?—Several of the members were not satisfied with Mr. Wreghitt, I suppose, and we had an election and an appointment, and then even they resorted to bribery; each candidate supplied the members with drink.

1605. They elected you as the president at one time?—Yes.

1606. Had that change to be approved by anybody?—Not that I am aware of.

1607. Do you know, as a member of the society, and as its president, whether any official communication was made to Sir Henry on the subject?—I know that Sir Henry never recognised the change in the head of that association, except the change for Mr. Wreghitt, when he was chairman.

1608. That is to say, he would not recognise you?—No.

1609. Who would Sir Henry recognise?—Mr. Wreghitt.

1610. And nobody else?—Nobody else.

1611. He went back again as president, and has remained so ever since?—Yes.

1612. As the Conservative association would decide upon who should be elected on the town council, did you wait upon the persons who were suggested to become candidates?—When I was chairman of the association, it was part of the duty of the chairman to find the candidates, and to wait upon them after they had been appointed by the association.

1613. After they had been selected rather?—Yes.

1614. To communicate to them the honour that the Conservative association proposed to confer upon them?—Yes.

1615. As certain expenses were attendant on that, did you give them any assurance about it, one way or the other?—Yes; I told them that they would be at no expense whatever; that the expenses would be paid them.

1616. Mr. Baron Martin.] Was that carried out?—Yes, it was, my Lord.

1617. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] You are acquainted with the mode by which admission is obtained to the freeman's roll of this city?—Yes.

1618. It costs a few shillings to get on it, I think?—For the birth-freedoms they are very small, only about 7 s.; the servitude is about 50 s.

1619. Have you kindly interested yourself in getting young men put on the freedom roll from time to time?—Yes.

1620. Mr. Baron Martin.] To what extent have you done that; over what number of years, and for how many people?—I never interested myself much in that, except when a change in the association took place; at that time a lad applied to me that I took to Wreghitt about something, and he paid the amount.

1621. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] Whether a small or a large amount, he paid what was necessary?—Yes.

1622. What was the amount of that generosity?—To secure the support to the party; those who were paid for were expected to vote.

1623. At what sort of election were they to vote?—For all elections.

1624. What species of elections are you alluding to?—I mean for all; the party they had any interest in.

1625. In everything?—Yes.

1626. The freemen would be entitled to vote for the pasture masters?—Yes.

1627. And for the Parliamentary elections?—Yes.

1628. But not necessarily for the municipal elections?—Not necessarily for the municipal elections, unless he is an occupier.

1629. Then he would vote in right of occupation, and not in right of freedom?—Yes.

1630. To what extent, during your years of office, do you think Mr. Wreghitt has taken taken up freemen to have an introduction?—Not a great many, perhaps four or five; I do not say that he took up four or five freemen in one year, but in a year and a-half it might occur.

1631. During the time that you were in office?—Yes.

1632. You have said that there has been a great deal of bribery in different directions; was that carried on in the open street, or at any particular place?—I have known it both ways; I have known it carried on in the open street on some occasions, and on others places were taken for the purpose.

1633. Mr. Baron Martin.] It was carried on in the open street, was it?—Yes.

1634. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] And at other times at places that were taken for the purpose?—Yes.

1635. Name some of those places, if they are within your memory?—The “Golden Ball” was the principal place; they had generally a room at that house, and a person sat there with money, and all the voters were taken to him and paid the amount that was agreed upon.

1636. Can you name any other place; which ward would the “Golden Ball” be for?—On these occasions both wards would go to that house.

1637. Name any other place that you can remember?—I do not know any others than that.

1638. Is there any other house near to the “Golden Ball,” in the square, that you remember being used for the Conservatives for any purpose?—No; I know the houses they used for filling up the papers.

1639. Where did they fill up the papers?—At Dickinson’s.

1640. Do you know any other place where the papers were filled up?—Yes; they were filled up in a house in the square occupied by Mr. Lythes.

1641. Is there any other place that you remember?—In the square.

1642. Do you know a place called the Toll-gavel?—Yes.

1643. Was any house there used for any purpose that you remember?—No.

1644. You have referred to 1868 as a very exceptional year in the price of votes, and I think you were not then connected with them?—No.

1645. Did you see any persons whom you knew to be actively engaged on behalf of the Conservatives in the Parliamentary election of 1868?—I saw most of the party who were engaged when I belonged to them.

1646. Just mention some of their names?—Mr. Burrell, Mr. Nutchee, Mr. Kempley, and Mr. Lowther.

1647. Do you remember any others?—There was Mr. Wreghitt, and I saw several others.

1648. Do you know Mr. Cleaver?—Yes, I saw him that day too; but Mr. Cleaver took no active part in the Conservative interest when I was there.

1649. Not in your early days?—No.

1650. Do you know Mr. Robert Thirsk?—Yes; I know him.

1651. Did you see him engaged in it?—Yes; I saw him engaged.

1652. Mr. Norfolk, I think, you mentioned?—No.

1653. Did you see him?—No.

1654. Do you know a person of the name of Thompson?—I know several Thompsons.

1655. Thompson, the barber?—Yes.

90.

1656. You know him?—Yes.

1657. Did you see him occupied about it?—Yes.

1658. He is rather an old hand at it, is he not?—Yes.

1659. Do you know Mr. Watson, the auctioneer?—Yes; I know him.

1660. Was he one of the old hands when you were busy?—No.

1661. How lately had you seen him about?—I never had seen him.

1662. Not to speak to him, perhaps; but had you not seen him occupied?—No.

1663. You did not see him?—No.

1664. Or Mr. McCoy; did you know him at all?—Yes.

1665. Was he actively occupied?—Yes.

1666. At the time you were in the office?—Yes.

1667. Did you see him again in 1868?—Yes; I saw him about.

1668. Who is McCoy?—He is managing clerk to Mr. Bainton.

1669. The recognised agent of the Members?—Yes.

Mr. Baron Martin.] The agent of Sir Henry Edwards and Captain Kennard?

1670. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] Yes, my Lord. (To the Witness.) Is Browsho within your list of acquaintances?—Yes; I know him.

1671. Was he acting with you?—No.

1672. Did you see him active lately in 1868?—Yes.

1673. Is Mr. Monckman a person that you know?—I know two or three Monkman’s.

1674. I mean belonging to the Waggon Company (Limited); has he been active?—Yes; he has always been active ever since I knew him.

1675. Did you see him active in 1868?—Yes.

1676. And Mr. Levitt, of the Waggon Company?—I do not know him.

1677. Or Mr. Watson, the painter?—I know him.

1678. Was he one or not?—I do not know.

1679. Do you know Mr. Ireland, I mean Thompson Ireland?—I never saw him.

1680. Do you know Mr. Arnott?—I never saw him.

1681. Do you know Mr. Vernom?—No.

1682. Or J. R. Bentley, of the Waggon Company; do you know him?—Yes.

1683. Was he one of the old supporters?—He was a supporter of the party.

1684. Was he active in 1868 again; did you see him?—No.

1685. Did you see the same persons engaged in the municipal as in the Parliamentary elections?—Yes; about the same.

1686. That was also your own experience while you were in connection with them?—Yes.

1687. Just tell me this; on the nomination day who proposed Sir Henry Edwards and his colleague, Captain Kennard?—I do not think that I was in front of the hustings; it is only by hearsay.

1688. Mr. Bainton, I believe, was the proposer, and Mr. Norfolk, of the Waggon Company, was the seconder?—So I have heard.

1689. Mr. Alderman Cussons, I think, was there?—Yes; I was there when he was there.

1690. Captain Kennard was proposed by Alderman Cussons and seconded by Mr. Arden?—I do not know; I was not there then.

1691. Can

Mr.

J. S. Vickers.

1869.

Mr. J. S. Vickers. 1691. Can you tell me the earliest date at which you knew Captain Kennard to be before the public as a candidate?—

1869.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] I believe he was a candidate in August, but his name was mentioned in July.

Mr. Baron Martin (to Mr. Serjeant Sargood).] Are you content with that?—

Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] Yes, my Lord.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] In the month of September he formally declared himself to be a candidate, and received a deputation that waited upon him in August; in July it probably got into the papers; his name was mentioned in July, and very probably it got into the local papers.

Mr. Baron Martin.] Very likely.

Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] I see that my learned friend is right.

Mr. Baron Martin.] When was his address published?—

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] Not till September; the middle of September.

Cross-examined by Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.

1692. I want you to tell me when you received this 100*l.* from Mr. Wreghitt, and I beg of you to be cautious?—On the morning of the election.

1693. What election?—The municipal election.

1694. In what year was that?—When I gave my evidence I said that I could not say to one year, but it was about 1861 or 1862.

1695. Was any one present at the time?—I gave it into the hands—

1696. Did any one see you receive it?—No.

1697. What was it paid you in?—In gold and silver.

1698. To whom did you pay it?—I gave it to Kempley and a man called Train, who paid it away.

1699. When was your evidence taken in this case?—

1700. Mr. Baron Martin.] You paid the money?—Yes.

1701. Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] When did you give your evidence for the purposes of this inquiry?—I have given it now.

1702. That is not what I asked you; you know what I mean; when did you give your evidence for the purposes of this inquiry?—I do not know that I am compelled to answer that question.

Mr. Baron Martin.] You must answer it. The question is, when did you communicate with the attorney on the other side?—

1703. Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] It is not the attorney; when did you give your evidence for the purposes of this inquiry?—About a fortnight ago.

1704. To whom did you give it?—To Mr. Hind, the solicitor.

1705. Is that the person who has been instructing my learned friend, Mr. Serjeant Sargood, and who has been so active in the matter?—I understand so.

1706. Who is that person instructing my learned friend, Mr. Serjeant Sargood?—

Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] No one is instructing me.

1707. Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] I can see a gentleman instructing you, and I want to know what he is. (To the Witness.) What is his name?—Mr. Crosskill.

Re-examined by Mr. Serjeant Sargood.

1708. You may, perhaps, give me a little bit of information; who is the gentleman with the grey beard and spectacles sitting behind my learned friend, Mr. Serjeant Ballantine, and who I saw telling him something just now?—That is Mr. Wreghitt.

1709. I believe that Mr. Crosskill is chairman of the Liberal party?—I do not know him as such.

1710. He proposed one of the original candidates; did you know that?—He proposed one of the candidates.

1711. We see what has been said about this 100*l.*; there was no one present when you got it from Mr. Wreghitt, you say?—No.

1712. What time of the day was it when he handed you that money?—Early in the morning before the poll opened.

1713. That must have been early; what time does the poll begin?—Nine o'clock is the time when the poll opens for the municipal; it was before nine.

1714. Did you go to him by appointment, or merely by chance?—No, it was by arrangement previously.

1715. When had the arrangement been made?—I could not swear to the day.

1716. Was it recently before?—It was immediately before that time.

1717. By whose instructions did you, having received the money, give it to Mr. Kempley and to Mr. Train?—I had the management of the election, you might term it, at the time, and we made the best of it.

1718. Did you give the money to them, they being both together, or give each his share separately?—I should give them, perhaps, a portion of it at first to pay—

1719. By instalments?—Yes.

1720. Were they both together when you gave either of them any money?—No, I do not think they were.

1721. Would you give it to them at the time by degrees as the exigencies of the day required it?—Yes.

1722. Where would Kempley be at the time?—He would be at the place.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] I think, my Lord, this is scarcely fair.

Mr. Baron Martin.] You asked him to whom he gave it, and Mr. Serjeant Sargood has a right to go into that fully.

1723. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] Where would Kempley have been when you gave him the money?—Either at Dickenson's or at the "Golden Ball."

1724. Where was the other man, Train?—Those are the places where it was paid, I cannot recollect which place.

1725. Would the distribution of one have been at one place, and the distribution of the other at the other?—

Mr.

Mr. Baron Martin.] I suppose he gave the money to the men, and they exercised their judgment.

1726. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] Were they the two persons between whom the money was divided?—Yes.

Mr.
J. S. Vickers.

1869.

ROBERT TAYLOR STOTHARD, sworn; Examined by Mr. Waddy.

1727. ARE you a freeman of this town?—Yes.
1728. Were you apprenticed in the Recorder office here?—Yes.

1729. When were you admitted to your freedom?—In 1867.

1730. Where did you get the money from to pay for your freedom, from whom?—I got it from Mr. Wreghitt; I was not told at the time I received it that it was for the purpose of taking up my freedom, neither did I ever apply to take it up; I had been absent for upwards of three years from Beverley, and when I came back my father said to me, "Do you intend to settle here?" I said, "I do not know that I shall"; he said, "Should you like to take up your freedom before you leave it?" and I said, "I may as well"; he said, "I will take you along with me to Mr. Wreghitt," and he introduced me to him. £2 10s. was given to me and no questions were asked either as to my political convictions or whether I should support the party. Of course I am Conservative, but not for the 2 l. 10 s. I do not know but boys are boys, and perhaps they follow the popular opinions, but since I have been able to have convictions of my own they have been Conservative opinions.

R. T.
Stothard.

1731. How did you vote the last time?—For Maxwell and Edwards; I voted for Mr. Maxwell simply because he was a Roman Catholic; if he had not been I should have voted for Captain Kennard.

Cross-examined by Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.

1732. I suppose you are a Catholic?—Yes; I am a Roman Catholic, and had he not been one I should not have voted for Mr. Maxwell.

MARTIN HUNT, sworn; Examined by Mr. Waddy.

1733. WHAT is your Christian name?—Martin.

1734. Have you any connection with the Society of Druids?—Yes.

1735. What is the name of the society?—The United Ancient Order of Druids.

1736. Was Sir Henry Edwards a member of that society?—Yes.

1737. Was it a society to which the members paid a subscription?—Yes; some pay annual subscriptions, and some pay fortnightly.

1738. Was it your duty to apply for the subscription of Sir Henry?—Yes.

M. Hunt.

1739. In what year was that?—In 1868.

1740. To whom did you apply?—To Mr. Wreghitt.

1741. Did he pay it?—Yes.

1742. How much was it?—£1.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine stated that he had no question to put to the Witness.

HENRY FIRTH, sworn; Examined by Mr. Serjeant Sargood.

1743. ARE you a member of the Druids' Society in this town?—Yes, I am.

1744. Was it your business at any time to apply for Sir Henry Edwards's subscription?—Yes.

1745. In what year was that?—I applied for it in 1865 and 1866.

1746. To whom did you go for it?—I applied by letter, being secretary of the society, to then Colonel Edwards, before he received the title of Sir Henry; I was instructed by the members of the society, and I wrote.

1747. Did you get the money?—Yes.

H. Firth.

1748. From whom did you get it?—From Mr. Wreghitt.

1749. In each of those years?—Yes.

Cross-examined by Mr. Giffard.

1750. Are you a voter?—Yes.

1751. How did you vote?—Liberal; Maxwell and Trollope.

MARTIN HUNT, re-called.

1752. Mr. Giffard.] ARE you a voter for the borough?—Yes, I have been for the last time.

1753. Did you vote?—Yes.

1754. Which way did you vote?—I voted for Maxwell and Trollope.

M. Hunt.

THOMAS BEST, sworn; Examined by Mr. Waddy.

- T. Best.*
 1755. ARE you a freeman of this town?—Yes.
 1756. Did you vote at the election for pasture masters in the month of March 1868?—Yes, I did.
 1757. Did you vote for the Tory candidates?—Yes.
 1758. A short time after that, did you go and apply for Walker's Gift?—Yes, I did.
 1759. Mr. Baron Martin.] What are you; how do you earn your living?—I am a labourer.
 1760. Mr. Waddy.] Do you remember whether Thompson, the barber, was an applicant at the same time?—He was there.
 1761. When you went to apply for the gift, was Mr. Catterson, jun., one of the pasture masters?—Yes.
 1762. And Mr. Thompson?—Yes.

1763. And Mr. Forster, Mr. Farmer and Mr. Sotherby?—Yes.

1764. Had you lost a cow?—No, I had lost nothing.

1765. You were not going to be apprenticed, or anything of that sort?—No, I was not.

1766. Did you get anything?—Yes, I got a sovereign.

1767. What was that for?—For being ill; I could not attend my work; I was laid up for 18 weeks, and I had not been able to attend for that.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine stated that he had no question to put to the Witness.

WILLIAM HALL, sworn; Examined by Mr. Serjeant Sargood.

- W. Hall.*
 1768. Is your name William Hall?—Yes.
 1769. How did you vote at the last Parliamentary election?—For Maxwell and Trollope.
 1770. Have you always been a Liberal?—No.
 1771. Not always?—No.
 1772. Did you happen to be unfortunate enough to lose some cattle at one time?—Yes.
 1773. When was that?—Several times; year after year; immense; I suffered very much.
 1774. Did you apply for assistance under Walker's Gift?—Yes.

1775. Having lost your cattle, did they assist you?—No, nought but once.

1776. How many times did you ask for assistance under these misfortunes?—Three times.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine stated that he had no question to put to the Witness.

JOHN HALL, sworn; Examined by Mr. Waddy.

- J. Hall.*
 1777. ARE you a freeman?—Yes.
 1778. Have you lost cattle?—Yes.
 1779. Are you a Liberal or a Conservative?—I always voted for the Liberals, except for one pasture master.
 1780. You applied for the gift, did you?—Yes.

1781. Did you get it?—No; they told me that I was a young man in constant work, and that I did not stand in need of it.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine stated that he had no question to put to the Witness.

ROBERT MOORE, sworn; Examined by Mr. Serjeant Sargood.

- R. Moore.*
 1782. Do you know Ackrill?—Yes.
 1783. Did you see him about the time of the last municipal election?—Yes, I saw him.
 1784. Did you give your vote at the municipal election?—Yes.
 1785. Was that the first time you had an opportunity of voting at the municipal election?—No.
 1786. How long have you been a voter?—I have voted for five or six years.
 1787. Had you any communication with Mr. Ackrill about voting?—Yes.
 1788. What did he say to you about it?—He came into my house, and asked me if I would vote for their side.
 1789. Which side was that?—The Conservatives.
 1790. What did you say?—I said I would not promise; not at present.
 1791. Did you go to the poll on the polling-day?—Yes.
 1792. About what o'clock?—About 11 o'clock, or a little before 11.

1793. Did you see any one there?—Yes; I went into my brother-in-law's, Mr. Proctor's, which was next door to Dickenson's, about 11 o'clock. I went up and stood there about half an hour, and then I came out, and I just walked a few yards across the street, and the first man I met was Robert Walker, and he said, "Have you voted?" and I said, "No"; and he said, "We have part sugared on our side." Robert Walker said that. He came up to me and said, "Have you voted?" and I said, "No"; and he said, "Well, if you will vote for us we are part sugared on our side, and the other side is boxed up; there is nothing there." By that time Thirsk came up, Robert Thirsk, and Walker said to him, "Here is a man here who has not voted"; and Thirsk said, "What is it you want?" and I said, "What are you giving?" he said, "15s."; and I said, "I heard that you were giving 1l."; and he said, "Well, if 17s. 6d. be it, come on and get voted." And we all three went into Dickenson's shop, and Thirsk said, "Just stand at the counter-side"; and I stood there, as I am standing standing here, and he went round the counter end and came back again. He came back, and he put some silver into my hand, which I had down at the time. I never looked at it, and I put it into my pocket, of course. Then I got my papers, and he said, "Take him across to the Guildhall," where they were filling papers up; and we went there.

1794. To whom did he say that?—To Robert Walker; and we went there, and delivered the papers up there.

1795. Mr. Baron Martin.] You went and gave your vote?—Yes.

1796. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] Did you look at your money afterwards?—Yes; after I had done there I went straight away home, and never stopped a moment anywhere; but I thought I would look at the money. I did not know whether it was 5s., 10s., or 15s.; and when I looked at it there was 1l. in silver.

1797. After that, did you see Mr. Ackrill again?—Yes.

1798. What did he say to you?—He came into my house that day or the day after, I am not sure which, and he said, "How did you come on?" and I said, "Oh, very well"; and he said, "What did you get, what did you come up with; did they come up 1l.?" I said, "That is just the money"; and that was all that passed.

1799. Did he not say anything more; try and remember?—Not at that time; no, he did not say anything more.

1800. How soon afterwards did you see him?—I do not know; but he was often in my house, sitting there and talking.

1801. What did he say to you?—I cannot remember particularly what he said; but he talked, and he said, would I promise to vote for their party; and I said, "No." I thought I would not promise. He said, would I vote for them; and I said, "No."

1802. With what party?—The crimson party.

1803. When was that to be?—At the borough election; and I said I would not promise.

1804. What did he say to you?—That is about what I can say; I would not promise.

1805. What did he say then?—He did not say any more to me.

1806. Had Ackrill said anything to you about it on the second occasion; on the morning of the municipal election?—No; he did not say anything that morning.

1807. And nothing about the borough election?—No.

1808. Were you canvassed by the candidates?—For the borough election?

1809. Yes?—Yes.

1810. By Sir Henry Edwards and Captain Kennard?—Yes.

1811. Did they come to your house?—Yes.

1812. Who came with them?—I was not in the room at the time when they came. I believe I was upstairs when they came, and my wife went to the door, and saw them.

1813. Who came with them; cannot you tell me that?—I can tell you whom I saw.

1814. Who was it?—Sir Henry Edwards, Captain Kennard, and Mr. Bainton, and Mr. Ackrill.

1815. The man you have been speaking of?—Yes.

Cross-examined by Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.

1816. For whom did you vote?—For Maxwell and Trollope.

[The Witness withdrew.]

THOMAS APPLETON, sworn; Examined by Mr. Waddy.

1817. WERE you a voter at the last municipal election?—Yes.

1818. And also at the Parliamentary election?—Yes.

1819. How did you vote at the Parliamentary election?—For Mr. Maxwell and Mr. Trollope.

1820. How did you vote at the municipal election?—For the Tory party.

1821. On the morning of the municipal election did you see Mr. Francis Burrell?—Yes.

1822. About what time did you see him?—About seven or half-past seven.

1823. Mr. Baron Martin.] In the morning?—Yes.

1824. Mr. Waddy.] Tell us what took place between you; what did Mr. Burrell say to you?—He asked me if I was going to support them, and I said that it was rather early on the day.

1825. What did he say in answer to that?—He said, "You shall have 12s. 6d. for you to start with."

1826. This was the morning of the municipal election?—Yes.

1827. What was the rest of that sentence; what was the 12s. 6d. for?—To vote for him, I expect.

1828. What did he say?—He said that I should have 12s. 6d. to start with if I would vote for him.

1829. When did he say that?—That morning.

1830.

1830. Was anything at all said on that occasion about the Parliamentary election?—No. T. Appleton.

1831. What did you say in answer to the 12s. 6d.?—I said that it was "rather early on the day."

1832. What happened after that?—Nothing happened; I left him.

1833. After that did you see Charles Arnott?—Yes.

1834. What did he say to you?—He axed me if I was going to vote for him, and I said that I had not made up my mind, or something to that effect.

1835. Did he offer you anything?—Yes.

1836. What was it?—Ten shillings.

1837. Mr. Baron Martin.] To vote for whom?—For the Tory party.

1838. Mr. Waddy.] What took place?—I told him that I had had more bidden.

1839. Did you tell him by whom?—Yes.

1840. By whom was it?—Burrell.

1841. Mr. Baron Martin.] Is that all that passed?—Yes, that is all that passed, I believe.

1842. Mr. Waddy.] About nine o'clock did you meet Thomas White?—Yes.

1843. What took place with him?—He asked me if I was going to vote for the Tory party.

1844. What did you say in answer to that?—I said I always expected that he was "Orange."

1845. You said that you thought he was one of the Orange party?—Yes.

T. Appleton.

1869.

1846. What did he say to that?—He said no, he was not. They were going to win to-day; the Tory party was going to win.

1847. Did he say whom he was engaged for?—No, he did not mention any names.

1848. He said that they were going to win; what else was said?—That is as near as I can tell you.

1849. Was that all that was said?—Yes.

1850. Was any sum mentioned by him?—He said that he would get me 10s.

1851. Did you see Browsho?—Yes.

1852. What did he say?—He said, "Had I voted?"

1853. What did you say to that?—I said "No."

1854. What did he say to that?—

1855. Mr. Baron Martin.] What o'clock was this?—It was about 12 o'clock.

1856. Mr. Waddy.] Go on?—I said no, I had not voted; and he said, "If you will go with me and vote, I think I shall give you 15 s."

1857. What did you say in answer to that?—I said that I would not take it, I wanted 1 l.

1858. Did you give any reason for wanting 1 l.?—No, not then. I had no reason then.

1859. Did you mention any reason?—I said that I wanted 1 l.

1860. Did you say why you wanted 1 l.?—No, I wanted 1 l. for voting.

1861. When?—That day.

1862. Tell me the very words that you used to him?—I could not tell you exactly.

1863. Try?—

Mr. Baron Martin.] He tells you the substance; he cannot tell you the very words he used.

1864. Mr. Waddy.] Was that all the conversation that you had with Browsho that day?—I never saw him before that day; I went with him from the square to Padgett's shop —

1865. Go on?—And Mr. Nutchey was in; he said that he would not give any more than 15 s., and had not occasion to give any more. I said, "Then I will not take it"; at last he said, "I will put another 2 s. 6 d., and make it 17 s. 6 d."

1866. Mr. Baron Martin.] Who said this?—Browsho; Mr. Nutchey gave Browsho 15 s., and he came to me at the Town Hall to vote.

1867. You got 17 s. 6 d. for the vote?—Yes, off Browsho.

1868. Mr. Waddy.] Did you go away with Browsho?—No; I came up the square with him; that is all.

1869. You said that you went to the Town Hall?—Yes.

1870. On your road to the Town Hall, did Browsho say anything to you about money?—He said that he would put 2 s. 6 d. to it.

1871. Was that all?—Yes.

1872. On your road away from the Town Hall, did he say anything about it?—He said that they were sure to win.

1873. What was the conversation about at which that took place; did you say anything to him about the money that was being spent?—He said that they had plenty of money to spend that day.

1874. Did he say what it was being spent for?—To such as me, I expect, to vote for him.

1875. Not the whole of it; what did he say about the amount of money they had to spend?—(No answer.)

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine stated that he had no question to put to the Witness.

RICHARD TATTERSALL, sworn; Examined by Mr. Serjeant Sargood.

R.
Tattersall.

1876. Did you go to vote at the municipal election between 11 and 12 o'clock?—Yes.

1877. How stood the matter between the Liberals and Conservatives then?—It was publicly reported in the town that the Liberals had retired.

1878. Did you meet Thompson Ireland?—Yes, I saw him in the street.

1879. Did he inquire whether you had voted?—Yes; he asked if I had voted, and I said, "No."

1880. Was there anyone with you at that time?—Yes, a person of the name of Henry Decox.

1881. Did he promise you anything?—He asked me if I had voted, and I said, "No"; he said, "I can get you 17 s. 6 d., providing you will vote at this municipal election and the other as well," or words to that effect; but he did not word it exactly that way.

1882. Was that 17 s. 6 d. between you and Decox?—No; 17 s. 6 d. each.

1883. Did you go then to the Town Hall with Ireland, you and Decox?—Yes.

1884. What did you do there?—We gave in our papers; our voting papers.

1885. Which side did you vote for then?—The Tories.

1886. Where did you go to afterwards?—He took us to the sign of the "Golden Ball."

1887. Ireland did?—Yes.

1888. He took you both, did he?—Yes.

1889. Mr. Baron Martin.] What happened there; whom did you see there?—A gentleman of the name of Watson.

1890. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] The auctioneer?—Yes.

1891. What did Ireland say when he took you in?—He said, "They are all right," or something to that effect.

1892. To Mr. Watson?—Yes, I believe those were his words.

1893. Did Mr. Watson do anything with a pen and ink?—Yes, he put each of our names in a book; I was rather anxious, looking after the money, and I watched to see if my name went down into the book.

1894. Mr. Baron Martin.] What sort of book was this?—A very small book.

1895. Was it a memorandum book?—No; it was a small book with a paper cover; it was very small.

1896. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] He put your names down; how much did you get?—A man of the name of Matthew Wilson was there.

1897. Was he a voter?—Yes, I daresay that he was a voter; Mr. Watson was short of silver, and had not silver to pay us separately, and he gave Matthew Wilson 2 l. 12 s. 6 d. for a man of of the name of William Hardy, and Henry De Caux, and myself.

1898. Did you get your 17 s. 6 d.?—We went out and got change, and Matthew Wilson gave me my 17 s. 6 d., and the other as well, I suppose.

1899. Do you know De Caux?—Yes, I worked with him for nine months.

1900. Is he a man who has anything the matter with him?—Yes, there is an impediment in his speech; if he came in I do not suppose that you would get a word at all from him; he is worse when he is in company.

Cross-examined by Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.

1901. What are you?—A labourer.

1902. What in?—I am working in a foundry; I was working with a coach-maker's, when I voted for the municipal election.

1903. Whose foundry is it?—Crosskill and Sons.

1904. Are you working in their foundry?—Yes, when I am at work.

1905. You are working there?—Yes.

1906. Do you know the gentleman sitting there (pointing to him)?—Yes; he is one of the firm.

1907. Did you see him last night?—No; I do not remember it; I might have met him in the street.

1908. Did you see anybody last night about this matter?—Yes.

1909. Did you or not?—Yes.

1910. Whom did you see?—I saw Mr. Hind.

1911. The brother of the petitioner, or the petitioner, which?—The brother of the petitioner.

1912. Where did you see him?—At his own house.

1913. Did you go there?—Yes.

1914. How came that?—I met a man in the street who said that Mr. Hind wanted to see me.

1915. Who was the man who told you that?—His name is Herdsman.

1916. You went and saw Mr. Hind, did you?—Yes.

1917. Did you then give him evidence?—Yes.

1918. Was that the first time that you gave it?—No.

1919. What did he want with you?—To see if I was straight, or had forgotten anything.

1920. What process did he put you through to see whether you were straight; how did he try you to see whether you were straight?—He merely read the evidence that I had given him.

1921. He read the evidence over to you, did he?—Yes; or mentioned it.

1922. What did he do; did he read anything over to you?—Yes; what I had told him before.

1923. What had you told him before?—The tale I am telling now; I have only one.

1924. Without suggesting that you have more than one tale, what was the necessity for reading it over to you?—Merely to see that I was prepared to give evidence.

1925. Were you in court here, yesterday?—No.

1926. Why was that?—Because I could not get in.

1927. In the paper that was read over to you, were these words in it, that when the money was given to you, it was given to you providing that you would vote for the municipal election and the borough as well?—Yes.

1928. Those were the very words that he read over to you, were they?—Yes; that I had given him before.

1929. Were they the words that he read over to you?—Yes.

1930. Those were the words that he read over to you?—Yes.

1931. Were there any other persons present who had words read over to them also?—The same words?

1932. Yes?—No.

1933. What?—No.

1934. Were there any other persons present?—Yes; there was Duffill there.

1935. Who else?—I believe that De Caux was there.

1936. Do not you know that he was?—Yes; he was there.

1937. Have you any doubt that he was there?—Not at all.

1938. Was there anybody else present?—I do not think there was, when it was read.

1939. Was it read to you all, the three of you?—He read it out, and we all three heard it.

1940. And he ascertained that you were all straight, all one way?—Yes.

1941. De Caux has got an impediment in his speech, I believe?—Yes.

1942. What was the use of having him there; are you sure that De Caux did not say, that it was all a lie about the municipal election and the borough as well, and that he would not swear to anything like it, and that nothing of the kind ever took place?—Not in my presence; he said, he did not hear what took place between Thompson and Ireland.

Re-examined by Mr. Serjeant Sargood.

1943. How long is it since you first gave your evidence to Mr. Hind as to what you have said to-day?—I cannot tell you to a week or a month, perhaps.

[The Witness withdrew.]

JOHN RAWSON, sworn; Examined by Mr. Waddy.

1944. ARE you a municipal voter?—Yes.

1945. Are you a Parliamentary voter also?—Yes.

1955. Was Well Drake there?—Yes.

1956. Did you go with Hambleton and Well Drake anywhere?—Yes.

1957. Where did you go to?—To the "Golden Ball"; somewhere I suppose it would be.

1958. Did Vernom go with you?—No.

1959. Who was with you?—Well, sir, there was Hambleton and that other man Well Drake; but I do not know whether I exactly went on with them or not, but they were in the room when I was in.

1960. Mr. Baron Martin.] You mean in the "Golden Ball"?—Yes.

1961. Mr. Waddy.] When you were in the room did you get some money?—Yes.

1962. From whom did you get it?—I did not know the gentleman.

1963. Mr. Baron Martin.] What money did you get?—17 s. 6 d.

1964. Mr. Waddy.] Did you get it from a stranger; was he seated at the table?—Yes.

1965. With a book before him?—Yes; I believe he had.

1966. And a bag of money?—Yes; he would have some money.

1967. Mr. Baron Martin.] Was the money lying on the table?—Yes, I think so.

[The Witness withdrew.

2000. At that time did you hear anything said about the Parliamentary election?—No, not then.

2001. Or at any time that day?—No.

2002. Was anything said to you about the Parliamentary election?—They said nothing to me about the Parliamentary election, not then.

2003. Mr. Baron Martin.] On any other day were you spoken to about the Parliamentary election?—No; I was asked if I would give my vote to Sir Henry Edwards, and I said, No, I had promised it.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine stated that he had no question to put to the Witness.

[The Witness withdrew.

MARTIN LASCELLES, sworn; Examined by Mr. Waddy.

2004. DID you vote at the municipal election?—I did.

2005. For the Tories?—I did.

2006. Did you see Robert Thirsk that day?—I saw a man called Thirsk, but I did not know his name was Robert; I understand since that his name is Robert.

2007. Did you get any money that day for voting?—I did.

2008. I daresay you will say how much it was, if I ask you?—I should think, I do not know exactly; there is a deal of points at work in the law; they worked a deal of points of law with me, but I worked a point of law on them.

2009. Now, then, another answer from you; how much money did you get?—I got 17s. 6d.

2010. From whom?—This Mr. Robert Thirsk.

2011. Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] Which way did you vote for the borough election?—Do you think I ever voted for other than the yellows ever since I was born?

2012. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] Did Mr. Thirsk say what he was going to give you the money for?—Yes; he wanted me to poll for the major on the polling day; he said, You will think on it to vote for Major Edwards at the election day. I did not speak another word to him, because when I vote for a member, and he is put up for Beverley, I expect, when you promise, you will do your faithful duty, the same as we are now; we are the judge now, but when we die we are judged then.

2013. Have you anything more to say as to what took place on that day?—Yes; I had my paper filled up to poll for the yellow lads.

2014. You were ready to poll yellow for the Liberals?—Yes, I was; I had my paper filled up and signed by Mr. Foxhall, at the Gas Works, Back-side.

2015. But the 17s. 6d. converted you?—Yes, because my friends had known that Major Edwards had done it for year after year, and I said, I will cling on to him.

M. Lascelles.
1869.

Cross-examined by Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.

2016. Did you see anybody about this matter, last night, that you have been telling us about?—Yes, I heard the matter last night, that a man got 3l. 10s. from Mr. Thirsk, and if you had been up two nights, the same as I have, lambing sheep, how would you look, if you were 62 or 63, which I shall be to-morrow; how would you like that?

2017. Did you see Mr. Hind last night?—No, I did not want to see him.

2018. Did you see Mr. Crosskill last night?—If I had wanted to see him, I will bet I could have found him; I did not see Mr. Crosskill.

 2356. He was a Liberal also, was he?—Yes.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] As far as the municipal election goes, my Lord. W. Dixon.

Mr. Baron Martin.] It seems to me that it was a mass of corruption from beginning to end.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] I am inclined to agree with your Lordship as far as the case has gone at present, but you have not at present heard the sitting Members' case.

Mr. Baron Martin.] I have not heard the sitting Members' case, but I have heard such a quantity of corruption in the town that it seems to me to be a town that is unfit to possess the privilege of sending members to Parliament; the persons elected in such a place cannot properly be Members of the House of Commons, in order to perform legislative duties; the country is interested in having persons there who are honourably you about the Parliamentary election?—Yes.

2642. Who was it?—William Vernom.
2643. Anyone with him?—Yes, Robert Wallis.
2644. Did they canvass you for your vote?—
Vernom did.
2645. You are a voter?—Yes.
2646. Did Vernom ask you for your vote?—
Yes.
2647. For whom?—For Sir Henry Edwards and Captain Kennard.
2648. What did he say to you on the subject?
—He axed me if I was going to vote for them, and I told him I thought not; he says, “You will get nothing from the other party; but,” he says,
“you will get well paid if you vote for Sir
Henry and Kennard afterwards”; he says, “Every man will be paid well that voted for them afterwards”; but he said I was not to say anything about it.
2649. Did he say anything else that you remember just now?—He says, “I got some for your brother in the councillors’ election.”
2650. What did he get for your brother at the council election?—I did not ask him.
2651. What did you understand him to say he did get him; was it bread or beer, or what?
—I think he got him 15s.

2652. Your brother was examined yesterday about it; we know what he got.—He said he had promised to get him some more.
2653. You mean Vernom told you that he had promised to get your brother some more?—Yes.
2654. Some more what?—I think some more money.
2655. You refused to promise, I think, at that time?—I did not promise him.
2656. Did he ask you to meet him again?—
Yes.
2657. Did you see him again?—Yes.
2658. Had you then voted?—Yes.
2659. For the Liberals?—Yes.
2660. Did you tell him so?—Yes.
2661. What did he say to you?—He says,
“You will get nothing for it; you would have been all right if you had voted for us.”

J. Atkinson.

Cross-examined by Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.

2662. Where do you live?—At Weel.
2663. Are you on the register; you did vote, did you?—Yes.
2664. Who is Vernom; do you know him?—
Yes.
2665. What is he?—I think he is a pattern maker.
2666. Where?—In Beck-side; I think it is near Potter’s-hill where he works; he lives in the Grove Hill-lane, I believe.
2667. Did you vote at the municipal election?
—No.
2668. Have you a vote for the municipal?—
No.

[The Witness withdrew

 10] March 2682. What pay did you get?—Fifteen
 1869. shillings.
 2683. Who paid it to you?—Mr. Skinn.
 2684. What time of the day was it that you voted?—I should think close upon dinner time, 12 o'clock, or something like that.
 2685. You voted for the Tories, of course?—Yes.
 2686. Where was it that Mr. Skinn paid you the money?—At the “Golden Ball.”

2687. Did you go into an inner room upstairs, where a gentleman sat at the table?—No, I did not.

2688. You were paid down below?—Yes.

2689. Did you vote afterwards at the Parliamentary election?—Yes.

2690. Whom did you favour, then?—I favoured Sir Henry Edwards and Mr. Hegan Kennard.

[The Witness withdrew.]

ROBERT SHAW PORTE, sworn; Examined by Mr. Waddy.

R. S. Porte. 2691. WERE you a voter at the municipal election?—Yes.
 2692. What time in the day did you vote?—Sometime about dinner-time.
 2693. Mr. Baron Martin.] For whom did you vote?—I voted for the Tories.
 2694. Mr. Waddy.] How much did you get for your vote?—Fifteen shillings.

2695. Who gave it you?—Mr. Skinn.

2696. Where did you get it?—In the “Golden Ball.”

2697. How did you vote at the Parliamentary election?—For Mr. Edwards and Kennard.

[The Witness withdrew.]

PAUL MARSH DUFFILL, sworn; Examined by Mr. Serjeant Sargood.

P. M. Duffill. 2698. You voted at the municipal election, I think, did you not?—Yes; I did.
 2699. What are you?—I am a Fishmonger and a Shoemaker as well.
 2700. Did you vote for the Tories at the municipal election?—Yes, I did; properly.
 2701. Did they properly pay you; how much did you get?—Am I forced to tell you?
 2702. I am afraid you are; how much was it?—Must I tell you what they gave me it for?

Mr. Baron Martin.] You must tell the whole story; you must understand that in consequence of your evidence you can never be punished in any way: I will give you a certificate, if necessary, to protect you from any indictment, but you must tell the truth.

2703. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] Will you answer my question?—Ax me a question and I will answer it properly.

2704. How much was it you were paid?—I cannot say.

2705. Then you have made a great fuss about it for nothing; let me see whether I can say for you; was it 20 s.?—It was not.

2706. Was it more?—No.

2707. Was it less?—Yes.

2708. Suppose I bid 17 s. 6 d., what would you say to that; is that the right mark?—It was not.

2709. What was it?—I will run to the door.
 (The Witness attempted to leave the witness-box.)

Mr. Baron Martin.] Answer the question, or you will go to York Castle.

2710. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] You do know; tell me how much it was?—I was fresh at the time.

2711. Mr. Baron Martin.] You were fresh then, are you fresh now?—I have had a drop of lush.

2712. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] You are not so fresh, but what you know what you are about; how much money did you get?—I do not know.

2713. But you know my Lord may not believe you?—Well, either him or you can either believe me or you do not; I do not know what I got, and I shall not tell it none of you.

2714. Did you vote first and get your money afterwards?—

Mr. Baron Martin.] What is the use of asking him; his silence is worse than if he gave evidence.

2715. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] Did you vote at the Parliamentary election?—Yes.

2716. For whom did you vote then?—Kennard and Major Edwards.

Cross-examined by Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.

2717. Just attend to me for a moment, were you at Mr. Hind's last night?—No, never; I do not know the man.

[The Witness withdrew.]

GEORGE SANDERSON, sworn; Examined by Mr. Waddy.

G. Sanderson. 2718. ARE you a voter for the borough?—Yes.
 2719. And did you vote at the municipal election?—Yes.
 2720. For whom did you vote?—I voted for

Sir Henry Edwards and Captain Kennard for the borough election; at the municipal election I voted for the Tory party.

2721. About what time in the day did you vote at the municipal election?—I cannot exactly say; perhaps perhaps, it may be some time about one, or 12 o'clock, or half-past one.

2722. Did you receive any money for your vote?—Seventeen shillings and sixpence, I got.

2723. From whom?—From a man of the name of Samuel Bishoprick.

2724. Where?—I believe it was pretty near what we call the Horns-lane-end.

2725. Was it in the street, or in a house?—Not in a house, in the street.

2726. Mr. Baron Martin.] A street in this town?—Yes; a street in this town.

GEORGE ATKINSON, sworn; Examined by Mr. Serjeant Sargood.

2728. Do you know Mr. Marmaduke Lowson Whitton?—Yes.

2729. What is he?—He is a builder.

2730. Did he, a few days before the Parliamentary election, solicit your vote?—Yes.

2731. Mr. Baron Martin.] Do you know how long it was before the Parliamentary election?—About a week, I believe.

2732. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] And on whose behalf did he ask you to vote?—He asked me to vote for Mr. Edwards and Mr. Kennard.

2733. What did you say to him?—I told him I could not promise him.

2734. Did he say anything more to you?—Yes; he begged of me to vote for them.

2735. Did he propose anything to you that he would do for you?—No.

2736. Did he say anything to you beyond asking for your vote?—That is all he did to me there.

2737. Did he afterwards and before the election come or do anything more?—I went to ask him for a job.

2738. What did he say?—He gave me one.

2739. How long did it last?—I was four and a half days at work before the election.

2740. Mr. Baron Martin.] Are you a builder or a labourer?—A labourer.

2741. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] How much money did you get?—Thirteen shillings and sixpence, I believe.

2742. Did Mr. Whitton say anything more to you about the election matters?—No.

2743. Not at that time?—No.

2744. Do you mean he never spoke to you again in his life about election matters?—Yes.

2745. Did he say anything more to you at that time when you were paid that 13 s. 6 d.?—No.

2746. Who paid you, he or the foreman?—Mr. Whitton himself paid me.

2747. When did you next see him?—The day after the election.

2748. Where did you meet him?—I met him in the street.

2749. What did he say to you then?—I asked him to lend me half-a-crown, and he said he would not, nor do anything more for me; I had not been a man to my word; I promised him, he said, faithful to vote for Mr. Edwards and Mr. Kennard, and I told him I did not, nor I never did.

2750. You had voted for the Liberals?—I voted for Mr. Edwards and Mr. Maxwell.

2751. You split it?—Yes.

2752. Then you had not voted for the two Tories, only for one?—Only for one.

2753. Did you see Mr. Whitton after that?—Yes.

2754. Did you go to work after the election, as usual?—Yes.

2755. Where did you go to?—I went to where they was working.

2756. You went to the job where the job was?—Yes, where I had been before.

2757. Did you see the foreman?—I see'd a man that told me I was not to start till I saw Mr. Whitton.

2758. Was that the same job that you had worked on when he paid you on Saturday night the 13 s. 6 d.?—Yes.

2759. Did you wait till Mr. Whitton came? No, I went to him.

2760. What did you say to him?—I asked him the reason why I was not to start work.

2761. What said he to that?—He said he was not going to have so many hands.

2762. What did you say?—I said, "Well, it looked very queer, as he was setting a fresh man on.

2763. What did he say?—He hardly give me an answer to it; he said he had no more for me to do.

2764. And so you went about your business?—Yes.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] I do not see how this bears upon the issue.

Mr. Baron Martin.] The Act says, "Every person who shall, directly or indirectly, by himself or by any other person, make use of, or threaten to make use of, any force, violence, or restraint, or inflict or threaten the infliction, by himself or by or through any other person, of any injury, damage, harm, or loss, or in any other manner practise intimidation upon or against any person, in order to induce or compel such person to vote or refrain from voting, or on account of such person having voted, shall be deemed to have committed the offence of undue influence."

Cross-examined by Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.

2765. Were you told that you were too weak for the job?—No; nor yet found fault with.

J. R. Hall.

J. R. Hall. remained with Mr. Whitton as a journeyman?—Yes.

10 March 1869. 2771. Just before the election were you canvassed for your vote for the Parliamentary election?—Yes.

2772. Were you canvassed at the shop of Mr. Whitton, where you worked?—Yes.

2773. Will you tell me the names of some of the gentlemen who canvassed you?—They was Mr. Whitton, and both of the Members.

2774. Mr. Baron Martin.] They were together, Mr. Whitton and the Members, were they?—Yes, and Mr. Cliffe; I cannot remember some of the others.

2775. Mr. Waddy.] Was Mr. Bainton there?—Yes.

2776. Mr. Arden?—I will not positively say.

2777. Do you remember whether you were canvassed once or more than once by those gentlemen?—It was only once at the shop, but they came to our house, but I was not there.

2778. Confine your attention to that occasion when those gentlemen were present, and tell me did your master speak to you, and ask you how you would vote?—Yes.

2779. Just tell us what passed at that time?—I told him that I should not promise him, because I did not know what I should do before the day, and Mr. Whitton asked me what for.

2780. Mr. Baron Martin.] Was this when the other gentlemen were present?—Yes; I told them because I did not like promising, as I might break my promise; he went on for a length of time till they got my name down.

2781. Mr. Baron Martin.] Did you then promise to vote?—I did in a manner; but I told them I should not be obliged to vote for them if I did; but they would have my name, and so they got it.

2782. Mr. Waddy.] On the morning of the election day, a little after eight o'clock, did you see Messrs. Kemplay, Hodgson, and Mead?—Yes.

2783. Did they come to your house, and wish you to go and vote?—Yes.

2784. For which party were they canvassing?—For the Conservative party.

2785. I believe you declined to vote?—Yes.

2786. What did you tell them finally?—I told them I should not go at all, because I considered to go the other way.

2787. About half-past 11 o'clock did your master, Mr. Whitton, come?—Yes.

2788. Where were you when he came to you?—I was in the building.

2789. In Mr. Whitton's building, do you mean?—Yes.

2790. Mr. Baron Martin.] In the workshop?—No, in the building that was erecting.

2791. Mr. Waddy.] Tell us what took place between your master and yourself then?—He only asked me if I knew where to vote, and I told him yes; and he hoped I should vote for them; I did not give him any answer then, and he went away.

2792. Did you go and vote about two o'clock in the afternoon?—Yes.

2793. Which way?—For the Liberal party.

2794. Next morning, about eight o'clock, did your master come into the shop?—No, not in the shop.

2795. Did you see him next morning early?—Yes.

2796. Where?—In the building.

2797. What happened then?—He said, "You have gone straight against us."

2798. What did you say to that?—I told him I had.

2799. What did he say to that?—He said I was "a damned fool."

2800. What else did he say?—I told him I was not, and he said I was; and I said there was plenty more.

2801. Mr. Baron Martin.] Was anything else said?—He said he should pay me off.

2802. Did he do so?—Yes, he has done so.

2803. He has discharged you?—Yes.

2804. Mr. Waddy.] When did he discharge you?—Three weeks after, I think it was.

2805. Before that time had he ever complained about your work?—No.

2806. Before the election day?—No.

2807. Had his foreman complained of your work at all?—No.

2808. At the time he turned you away was his work diminished?—No, he had plenty of work.

[The Witness withdrew.]

JOSEPH ELLIOTT, sworn; Examined by Mr. Serjeant Sargood.

J. Elliott. 2809. WHEN did you take up your freedom?—In 1861, I believe it was.

2810. Who paid the money for you?—I had not funds to take my freedom up, and I got it taken up through Mr. Wreghitt.

2811. Do you remember how much you got from him?—£.2. 10s.; my servitude was my freedom.

2812. Was there any condition upon which Mr. Wreghitt paid the money?—Of course I was to support his principles.

2813. Do not say of course; did he say so?—Yes.

2814. What did he say to you; what did he bargain for, if anything?—Of course that was it.

2815. Do not say of course that was it?—He took it up on the condition that I supported his principles.

2816. Did he mention any gentlemen's names to you?—No; I do not think he did.

2817. Have you been in the habit of working for Mr. Whitton during the last five or six years?—Yes, off and on several times.

2818. Mr. Baron Martin.] Are you a joiner or a bricklayer?—A joiner.

2819. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] Did you begin to work for him about the month of April in last year?—Yes.

2820. Did you continue to work for him down to the time of the Parliamentary election?—Yes.

2821. Do you remember the last municipal election?—Yes.

2822. Were you a voter at that?—Yes.

2823. Did Mr. Whitton say anything to you on the morning of that day about your voting?—Yes.

2824. What did he say?—He came into the shop where there was several workmen that had votes, votes, and he said they had commenced with 10s. a man, and we was to be off.

2825. You mean, go away and vote?—Yes; go away and vote, of course.

2826. Did you and the others then go to vote?—Yes.

2827. Before you voted, did you meet with any one else who spoke about how much was to be paid?—Me and another went down to Dickenson's shop; no, it was Padget's shop.

2828. Who did you see there?—Mr. Nutchey.

2829. David Nutchey?—Yes.

2830. Anybody else?—There was several other people there.

2831. Did you see Browsho?—Yes.

2832. Do you remember anybody else?—Not particular; I did not notice.

2833. Did you speak to Nutchey about the subject?—Yes.

2834. What did he say to you?—He said he would give us 15s. each.

2835. Did you agree to accept it?—No; Mr. Browsho, the stonemason, was present, and we bargained with him.

2836. How much did you settle you were to have with Browsho?—Seventeen shillings and sixpence; 15s. from Nutchey, and Browsho he would give the other half-a-crown out of his own pocket.

2837. Who went with you to vote?—Mr. Browsho.

2838. Were you paid after you had voted?—Yes.

2839. Who paid you?—Mr. Browsho, outside the Guildhall.

2840. He gave you the extra half-a-crown as well as the 15s.?—Yes.

2841. Did you see where he got the 15s. from?—I could not positively swear, but I believe Mr. Nutchey gave it him.

2842. After this I believe you made a holiday for the rest of the day; did you go back to work as usual at Mr. Whitton's?—Not that day.

2843. But afterwards?—Yes, the following day.

2844. And then the Parliamentary election happened about a fortnight afterwards?—Yes, about that time.

2845. Before that Parliamentary election were you asked for your vote by Sir Henry and Mr. Kennard personally?—Yes, they called at my house, and several of the canvassers with them.

2846. Whom do you remember coming with them?—There was Mr. Cliff and Mr. Wreghitt, and I believe Mr. Cleaver was one, I did not take particular notice.

2847. Do you remember Mr. Kemplay at all?—Yes, he was with them.

2848. McCoy, did you see him?—Yes, I think he was with Mr. Bainton, the solicitor.

2849. Mr. Bainton is a solicitor, and McCoy is in his employ?—Yes.

2850. They were with the gentlemen canvassing?—Yes.

2851. Did Sir Henry Edwards ask for your vote?—Yes.

2852. What did you say?—I said I would not promise.

2853. What happened then?—They persevered to try to get it, the same as all canvassers do, but I would not promise, and so it passed off.

2854. Do you remember the Saturday before the Parliamentary election, the day the wages were paid?—Yes, quite well.

2855. Did you see Mr. Whitton when the wages were being paid at the pay table?—Yes, of course, he paid me.

2856. Did he say anything to you then?—Yes.

2857. Tell us what it was?—He said that he had heard as I was going against them.

2858. What did you say?—I said I had not promised either party; well he says, "Sir Henry Edwards has been a very good gentleman to the town of Beverley." I said I believed he had, and he said no doubt Mr. Kennard would be one too; but I said I would not promise for all that.

2859. Did you go to work as usual on the following Monday?—Yes.

2860. And on the Tuesday was the election day?—Yes.

2861. Did Mr. Whitton say anything to you early in the morning?—I met him in Tiger-lane, and of course he asked me to go and vote for Sir Henry Edwards and Mr. Kennard, and I put it off, and said I should be all right; that was all that passed that morning.

2862. You did vote for Maxwell and Trollope, the two Liberals?—Yes.

2863. Your own views being of that sort?—Yes.

2864. Did you go to work next morning?—I went to work the following morning after the election.

2865. The following morning was on the Wednesday?—Yes.

2866. While you were there and the foreman was there, did you see Mr. Whitton?—Yes, Mr. Whitton came in the shop.

2867. What did he say to the foreman?—He said, "Is he fit to work?" that was me.

2868. What did the foreman say?—The foreman said Joseph is all right.

2869. Were you in good health as usual?—Yes.

2870. Nothing the matter with you?—No.

2871. He said you were all right; what did Mr. Whitton say then?—He said, "Oh, you went dead against us."

2872. What did you say?—I said "Yes"; I went for principle.

2873. What did Mr. Whitton say?—He said I had got no principle.

2874. Did he say anything else?—He was in a very bad humour; he did not say much more, but he said, "I will remember you for it."

2875. Did you go up on the following Saturday for your wages at the end of the week's work?—Yes.

2876. What did the foreman do, did he pay you?—The foreman did not pay me.

2877. Did Mr. Whitton pay you?—Yes.

2878. What did he say?—All went off quietly, there was nothing more said then.

2879. When was anything said?—I believe it would be 10 days, or two Saturdays, before Christmas.

2880. On the Saturday that you were paid, what did they tell you?—We was working out of the town; we was rather late in getting home, and so we thought the foreman should get our wages without going to trouble the master; he paid us, and he paid John Robert Hall off first, and he said, "I am very sorry to say that master has done with you"; he said, "it is dirty work, it is all electioneering work."

2881. What is the foreman's name?—Matthew Robinson.

2882. He said to your fellow-workman Hall, that he was sorry to say that master had done with him?—Yes, and he begged hard for a week; we ought to have had a week's notice, at any rate.

2883. Mr. Baron Martin.] The foreman said this to Hall?—Yes.

2884. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] He begged hard for a week's notice, but he could not get it?—Yes, that was so.

2885. Did he then pay you, and give you notice?—Yes, he gave me the same; he said, "You are the same"; I said, "It is all right, it is what I expected, according to what he said he would remember me."

2886. Did you say anything more about the people who were kept on in employment?—There was one man there, and is now, that had not a tool at all, quite a stranger, and I thought it was very strange he should pay two off, especially one that had been apprenticed with him, and a stranger he keeps on that had not a tool at all, and paid two off because they polled the opposite side.

2887. Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] Is that what you said?—Yes, to the foreman.

2888. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] I understand you, this is what you said to the foreman, "I think it is very strange he should keep a man on, a stranger, who has got no tools at all, and turn off a man who was his own apprentice, who has got tools"?—Yes.

2889. What did the foreman say?—He said it was dirty work.

2890. Anything else?—No.

GEORGE SLATER, sworn; Examined by Mr. Waddy.

G. Slater.

2891. How old are you?—Seventy-one.

2892. Are you an inmate of some almshouses in this neighbourhood, called the "Maison Dieu"?—Yes.

2893. Are you enabled to vote at the Parliamentary election?—Yes.

2894. Who is it puts the people into those houses where you live; is it the corporation patronage?—Yes.

2895. Before the Parliamentary election, did Mr. Wreghitt pay you a visit?—He came and said he had a bit of a bother to get the place for me; that was all.

2896. To get you in as an inmate of the place?—Yes.

2897. Did he say anything to you about the election?—No, he said nowt about that; there was nowt mentioned about it.

2898. Not at any time?—No.

2899. Was your vote ever asked for on behalf of Sir Henry Edwards and Mr. Kennard?—They axed for the vote, and I gave them one; I meant to poll that way at first.

2900. Who asked you for it; did Mr. Wreghitt ask you for it?—Yes, that was all.

2901. At the same time that he told you he had had great difficulty to get you in, or a bit of a bother, or whatever it was?—He said he had a bit of trouble to get the place for me, that was all.

2902. Was it the same day and the same visit; was it on the same morning or afternoon?—I do not know nowt what to say

2903. WERE you a voter at the municipal election?—Yes.

2904. Were you paid for your vote?—Of course.

2905. Who paid you?—James Haddlesey.

2906. How much?—15s.

2907. Where did you get the 15s.?—I got it in the street.

2908. What time in the day, as near as you can remember, did you poll?—I do not know, I am sure; some time about dinner time, I believe; I believe that is right.

2909. Did you vote crimson; did you vote Tory?—I voted for Mr. Whitton.

2910. Mr. Whitton was one of the candidates, was he?—Yes.

2911. At the Parliamentary election, whom did you vote for?—I forget what they call them.

2912. Messrs. Edwards and Kennard, was it not?—Yes, Mr. Edwards and Captain Kennard.

 —Because Mr. Richmond had not sufficient change to give me the 15 s. in the whole.

2972. Your bargain was for 15 s., and you got 10 s. on account?—No bargain I do not suppose was ever made.

2973. But when you got the 10 s., did you expect to have the other 5 s.?—Yes.

2974. Why?—Because that was the current price, I suppose.

2975. You voted Tory at the municipal election?—I did.

2976. Did you vote at the Parliamentary election afterwards?—I did.

2977. Which way?—Conservative.

2978. Do not sigh over it?—I am not sorry for it.

Cross-examined by Mr. Giffard.

2979. Did you get anything for your vote at the borough election?—Nothing.

[The Witness withdrew.]

Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] That is my case, my Lord. I will just put in the accounts as a matter of form.

Mr. Giffard.] We did not waste time by cross-examining upon it, because the returns show what the fact is that when Mr. George Sugdon voted the numbers were 153, 149, and 139, for the three Liberals; and at the close of the poll the same names exhibited 224, 219, and 202. Your Lordship will remember the argument used about the Liberals giving over; and, my Lord, without going exactly through it, you will find that at the very end of the poll there were a considerable number of Liberals still voting.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine was heard to address his Lordship in opening the case on behalf of the respondents.

[Adjourned to To-morrow, at Ten o'clock.]

Thursday, 11th March 1869.

Mr. RICHARD NORFOLK, sworn; Examined by Mr. Giffard.

2980. Is your name Richard Norfolk?—Yes.

2981. Were you a candidate at the last municipal election for St. Mary's Ward?—If your Lordship requests me to answer all the questions that are put to me I will do so.

Mr. Baron Martin.] I will tell you what the Act of Parliament says: it provides that "no person who is called as a witness in a case like this, shall be excused from answering any question relating to any corrupt practice at, or connected with, any election forming the subject of the inquiry, on the ground that the answer thereto may tend to criminate himself," and therefore you cannot refuse to answer any question relating to a corrupt practice connected with the borough election in this place; then it is provided that, "Where a witness shall answer every question relating to the matter as to which he shall be required to answer, and the answers to which may criminate, or tend to criminate him, he shall be entitled to receive"; (now it will be from the Judge) "a certificate stating that the witness was upon his examination, required by the Judge to answer questions relating to the matters aforesaid, and if in consequence of the answers given to such questions, any information, or indictment, or action, be brought against him, the certificate of the Judge will protect him"; you will be protected in answering questions relating to the borough election.

The Witness.] Thank you, my Lord.

2982. Mr. Giffard.] You were a candidate for St. Mary's Ward at the last municipal election?—I was.

2983. Had you any particular reason for being desirous of being elected for that ward?—Only the reason of being a town councillor, or the object of being one.

2984. Did that render you eligible for the office of mayor?—I presume so, in due course.

2985. Was that the object of your ambition—to become mayor at the time of the Agricultural Show?—No; it was impossible; it could not happen in that year.

2986. When is the Agricultural Show?—This year.

2987. You desired to be a town councillor, at all events?—Yes.

2988. Did you take any course on the day of the municipal election; what was it, and why?—I attended previous meetings of the Conservative association, and after talking over all matters that were relative thereto, it was agreed amongst ourselves and the candidates that we should try to get ourselves elected, and that I should be the individual to find the means to secure that election, to be reimbursed pro ratâ by the other candidates.

2989. Who were the other candidates, the 90.

parties to this agreement?—In other words, that we were to pay our own expenses; I was to find the money, and it was to be settled up afterwards.

2990. Who were the parties to that agreement?—We had none; it was all verbal.

2991. I mean that arrangement?—Mr. J. B. Lowther.

Mr. Baron Martin.] I should be sorry that you should give your evidence under a misapprehension; no certificate of mine will protect you from this.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] I have considered the question, and I think we put Witness in no peril.

Mr. Giffard.] I think the proviso is entirely independent of the certificate.

Mr. Baron Martin.] I think not, but you had better proceed.

2992. Mr. Giffard (to the Witness).] Had Sir Henry Edwards or Captain Kennard anything directly or indirectly to do with that arrangement?—No.

2993. Did they know anything about it?—I had not a word to know anything about it; I had no communication with them.

2994. Did you, in pursuance of that arrangement, find the money?—I did.

2995. For the municipal election?—Yes.

2996. Did you take any part yourself in the general election?—No, I did not take any active part beyond speaking on the occasion of seconding the nomination of Sir Henry Edwards; I took no other part.

2997. How came you to do that?—Mr. Alderman Arden asked me to do so, and I consented; it is uncertain whether I spoke either once or twice, I could not say; I was speaking on the occasion of seconding the nomination of Sir Henry.

2998. You did that, as I understand, at the request of Mr. Alderman Arden?—Yes.

2999. You are, I believe, connected both by office, and you have shares in this company?—Yes.

3000. Mr. Baron Martin.] What is your office?—I am the managing director of the company.

3001. Of the Waggon Company?—Yes.

3002. Mr. Giffard.] And you hold shares in it?—Yes; I am obliged to hold shares to be qualified as a director.

3003. You have told me generally that you provided the money for the municipal election in pursuance of that arrangement; has Sir Henry Edwards or Captain Kennard contributed anything towards those expenses?—No, not a penny.

Cross-examined by Mr. Serjeant Sargood.

3004. When did you first become a resident here?—I think about four years ago, I cannot say exactly; it may be four and a half years; I have have resided in the town for about five years, but I have not been an occupier above four and a half years.

3005. That was just my question, when you became a resident, not an occupier?—About four and a half years I have been resident.

3006. Was that before or after the foundation of the Beverley Iron and Waggon Company, Limited?—It was after.

3007. How soon after was it?—Half a year, or as near as I can say.

3008. Mr. Baron Martin.] It was about half a year?—Yes, within five or six months.

3009. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] By whose invitation did you join the Waggon Company?—I joined the Waggon Company simply as a shareholder; I took shares in the company.

3010. By whose suggestion?—I will answer your questions if you will put them direct; I saw the prospectus, and in the same way as any other gentleman I took shares.

3011. By whose introduction, or suggestion, or recommendation was the matter introduced to you?—By a man of the name of Hancock; he brought the prospectus and asked me to take shares; I was an acquaintance of his.

3012. Did you take shares upon that without any communication with other parties connected with the concern?—Without any.

3013. May I ask you what part you had come from before you came here?—I had previously resided in Manchester; I resided in Liverpool before I came here; I resided in Liverpool at the time I took the shares.

3014. Were you in business at Liverpool?—Yes.

3015. What was your occupation there?—I was a timber merchant in Liverpool; it was a partial occupation that I had.

3016. What was the other occupation?—I was an embroiderer in the city of Manchester, I brought out an embroidery machine, being an engineer; I was a partner in a concern in Manchester, and also in the firm of William Rutherford and Co., in Liverpool.

3017. Did you retire from those two partnerships when you came here?—No.

3018. Perhaps you are in them still?—No.

3019. When did you cease to be a partner there?—I ceased to be a partner in one of them about three months, as near as I can say; or probably it might be about the time that I came here, and in the other about half a year afterwards.

3020. Did you withdraw any large amount of capital from either of those concerns?—No; both of them were very unfortunate to me; I had a large amount to pay.

3021. What number of shares did you take in the Waggon Company?—One hundred and fifty.

3022. Were they 20 l. shares?—Yes.

3023. You do not mean to say that you paid 20 l. for them?—No; there are 14 l. paid up to the present time.

3024. What emolument do you get from the Waggon Company, Limited?—£800 per annum.

3025. Mr. Baron Martin.] As a salary?—Yes, my Lord.

3026. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] Is this the prospectus (handing the same to the Witness) that you refer to?—I should say so, speaking from memory.

3027. You probably inquired into the nature of the business before you risked your capital in it?—I inquired; I asked Mr. Hancock, and he assured me that it was a very profitable concern, in accordance with the prospectus.

3028. And this was Sir Henry's first connection with it, joining the company on becoming the chairman of it?—I fancy so; the first time that I saw him was at a meeting to which I was invited with other people; that was the very first time I ever saw him in my life.

3029. I noticed this particular paragraph in the prospectus, "The profits arising from the conduct of the business for the last eight years have been such that the promoters can, with confidence, advise that upon the proposed contributions, interest after the rate of at least 15 per cent. can be realised after paying every reasonable expense and deduction"?—Yes.

3030. Did you hear what your secretary, Mr. Usher, said the other day, when he was in the box; he rather depreciated the prosperity of this affair at the time it was launched?—I heard what he said.

3031. You did?—Yes.

3032. He rather surprised you, perhaps?—No he did not.

3033. Mr. Baron Martin.] Have you Messrs. Crosskill's patents?—I am not aware that they have any, or ever had; they might have had some; I have some patents of my own.

3034. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] Did you hear what my learned friend, Mr. Serjeant Ballantine, stated yesterday, that Mr. Crosskill had entered into a covenant with the company not to trade, and that in spite of that, they had carried it on?—I heard Mr. Serjeant Ballantine say so.

3035. Did that surprise you?—I had never heard it before; I was not aware of such a thing.

3036. Have you heard this: that upon parting with the property, Mr. Crosskill was to have 25,000 l., and that those who continued it were not to use his name beyond the following month of October; have you heard that?—Never; I heard that Mr. Crosskill had got 25,000 l., but I never heard the other.

3037. Did you ever hear of the suit that he instituted against the bankers who had got hold of his property?—I heard of that, and that he got 25,000 l.; that was one of the terms of the settlement, I know.

3038. You did not know as between the bankers and Mr. Crosskill, in addition to the 25,000 l., that it was part of the contract that Messrs. Bower, Hall and Company, should be at liberty within 12 months to sell any articles already made, or partly made, bearing the name of Crosskill, but that no new articles should be made with that name after the 1st of October which then followed, and this is dated in the month of July 1863?—I never heard of that before, it would be before I came to the town; I did not know anything about it.

3039. You have told us that your ambition was to become a town councillor?—Yes.

3040. Why did you want to become a town councillor?—Simply because Mr. Crosskill was one, I presume; that is the best answer I can give, or perhaps I wanted to be one; I thought as the representative here of the largest rate-paying establishment in the town, an institution that did more benefit to it than half-a-dozen others, I had a right to have a voice in the councils of the town.

3041. You thought that you had a right to have have a voice in the councils of the town?—Yes, I did.

3042. Commercially speaking, you thought that you ought to be represented?—No; I did not take that view of it; I thought I had a right.

3043. Did you not take that view of it?—No.

3044. I will remind you of what you said at a former meeting, a few days after you were elected, as to your objects, did you not take this view of it: that your object was to be commercially represented in the town council, to protect the Waggon Company (Limited)?—I am not aware I said so.

3045. It was after dinner, I will admit?—It is a very good job it was; I am certainly not aware that I said so; I might have done.

3046. Do you know Mr. Whiting?—Yes.

3047. While you and half-a-dozen others had a gossip after your recent election, did you not tell him that your object in getting into the town council was to protect the Waggon Works Company (Limited), you having had some disputes with the corporation about not consuming your own smoke?—It is probable that I might have said so, but I am not certain that I said so.

Mr. Baron Martin.] There was no harm in his saying it.

Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] No harm at all, my Lord.

The Witness.] I might have said so.

3048. The shadowy vision of the mayor and chains never entered into your head?—I leave that to you.

3049. Having decided upon the gratification of this object, whatever might be its motive, another gentleman, Mr. Usher, that I have spoken to you about, went in for the other ward?—He was in previously.

3050. Mr. Baron Martin.] He is another man who is connected with you; is he a director?—He is secretary of the company.

3051. He was a town councillor in another ward?—He was, my Lord.

3052. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] Had he not gone out of office by effluxion of time, and was he not put up as a candidate last year, when you were?—Yes.

3053. You were up for St. Mary's, the smaller ward of the two?—Yes.

3054. And he was up for Minster, the larger one?—Yes, he was.

3055. How many were up altogether?—There are three in each ward.

3056. Tell me the names of the two gentlemen who were candidates with you in St. Mary's Ward?—Mr. L. Whitton and Francis Denton; Marmaduke Lowther Whitton, Francis Denton, and myself.

3057. Mr. Whitton is the same gentleman about whom my learned friend was very properly indignant yesterday, a builder?—He is a builder.

3058. Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] No, I was indignant, assuming it to be true?—I do not know: I was not in court.

3059. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] But that is the same gentleman?—Yes.

3060. Who were put up with the secretary, Mr. Usher, in the other ward?—I. B. Lowther and Mr. Catterson.

3061. You say that you all met at this Conservative association?—No, I did not say all of us.

3062. But some of you?—Yes.

3063. Were you all members of it?—I was a member of it.

3064. Were the others members?—I am not aware; I was only at the Conservative association on one occasion.

3065. It was an important one; it was when they settled the list?—No, after being nominated; if I stated it so I stated it incorrectly; it is a mistake; after we had been nominated at the Conservative association, we met afterwards at the "White Horse."

3066. Mr. Baron Martin.] You had been nominated there before?—Yes, but I was not present, and I do not know who was there.

3067. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] Who communicated to you the honour that the association had done you?—I am really unable to say; I do not remember.

3068. Might it have been Wreghitt?—No, I never heard anything from him about it; I am certain that he did not communicate it to me.

3069. When you use the word "nominated," you mean that the society had approved of a list?—I suppose so; I was not present.

3070. You knew that you were nominated to a public place when you were elected?—I presume so; I was not present to see.

3071. You mean by that that the society approved of you?—I presume so; but I was not present either at one or the other.

3072. Tell me where it was that you and your friends met when you arranged that little matter about the mode of paying the expenses?—We met at the "White Horse."

3073. Is that Mr. Burrell's house?—Yes.

3074. Then I understand that you were to find the money, and that they were to reimburse you their respective shares, as you said, pro ratâ?—I was to find the money, and each of them would pay their share.

3075. But pro ratâ?—There were only three of us present.

3076. Who were they?—Mr. Lowther was present; he represented the Minster Ward, and spoke for all of them; I was present, and Mr. M. L. Whitton was present; that is, to the best of my memory; there were probably a score of people present, but I cannot remember who were the persons; it was an arrangement made at that meeting.

3077. What do you mean by a "score of people"; was it a public meeting or a private dinner, or what?—There was a score of persons in the room, certainly.

3078. Were they intruders or visitors?—I cannot say; there were persons in the room.

3079. You can say who they were, can you not?—I cannot; I do not remember.

3080. You do not know what business they had there?—It is a public-house, and I presume that they came in to get drink; they were all members of the Conservative party that were present, so far as I know.

3081. Then you say that the Minster Ward was represented by one of the three?—Yes.

3082. And your own secretary, Mr. Usher, was one of the candidates?—He was in Scotland at the time. I believe that he had wrote to me stating that he would stand with me and pay his share of the expenses. I have not seen the letter,

Mr. but I have heard that he wrote to me. I cannot say.
R. Norfolk.

 1869.

3083. Did you ever speak to Mr. Usher on the subject?—I asked him if he had done so, and he said that he had wrote from Scotland to Mr. Lowther stating that he would stand with me and pay his share. I asked him the question, and he said that he had done so, but I have not seen the letter.

3084. I am not quite sure that you and I will agree about the meaning of the words pro ratâ, which you used; if I am rightly informed the agreement was this, that five out of the six candidates should pay 5 l. each, and that you, being the sixth, should contribute 20 l.?—I never heard anything of the sort in my life, never before; we did not know what the expenses could possibly be under the circumstances, but we heard that the other party had a large sum of money.

3085. Am I to understand you to say that your five colleagues have backed out of their bargain, and paid you nothing?—There has not been anything paid in any way.

3086. That only answers half my question; have they backed out of the bargain, and repudiated it?—No, I am not aware that they have. I have never asked them for anything.

3087. Have you not sent in your little account yet?—No, it is not made up.

3088. You do not know how much it has cost?—No.

3089. As you are a commercial man, when you talk of a little account, is there any book in which you have totted up how far you have gone?—I have not any.

3090. You have been subpoenaed to produce it; who kept it?—I have not been subpoenaed to produce it.

3091. Have you been subpoenaed at all?—Yes.

3092. Have you read the subpoena?—Yes.

3093. Who does keep the book?—I cannot say. I do not know.

3094. Mr. Baron Martin.] You do not know who kept the account?—No.

3095. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] That is an embarrassing thing to a commercial man, is it not, who wants to settle accounts with his five partners?—Very.

3096. Have you ever complained to your colleagues that they have not contributed anything?—No.

3097. It is attributable to your own liberality in not pressing the subject at present?—No; I do not think so. The only reason I have to give is that the other election was on so soon that we have not had time to arrange anything, and we have not done so; in fact, we have not done anything.

3098. The election was last November; we are in March now?—Yes, I am aware of that.

3099. That is four months?—Yes, it is a long time.

3100. And an expenditure of one or two days you have not been able to make out?—I do not know where the book is to enter it from.

3101. How then shall you make it out, at your leisure?—I can very easily make it out.

3102. Very easily?—Yes.

3103. As the contest was to be a severe one, and you had heard that the other side had a large sum, what amount of capital did you provide for this expense?—£.800.

3104. Mr. Baron Martin.] It was 800 l.?—Yes, my Lord.

3105. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] Was it worth all that to contest a smoky chimney question in the corporation?—No, I do not think it was.

3106. Is there anything else in the position of a town councillor that is worth the 800 l., if that was not?—It was only about 100 and odd pounds each. It was not for my position; it was for the whole of the positions. It gave them the power of electing aldermen, provided these could be got in; consequently in taking nine seats, it was only a very reasonable amount.

3107. Six men with 800 l. between them, and I want to know if there was anything else that would make it worth the money?—I am not aware of anything else, I say.

3108. Is there anything beyond the smoke question; I asked you whether the smoke question was worth it, and you said no: is there anything beyond that that makes it worth the money?—There were six seats in the council, and the smoke question; and it would give the council the power to elect aldermen. There are the nine seats, and the smoke question included.

3109. Then you had an aggregate amount of 800 l. among you?—No; it cost so much on account of the money that would be spent by the other side. If you start on a contest, you cannot start with your hands tied behind you very well.

3110. It was the amount of money that was spent by the other side that drove you to the 800 l.?—I had no idea that it would cost half so much.

3111. Do you swear that?—I believe so; I have been informed so.

3112. You heard Mr. Serjeant Ballantine speak yesterday?—No, I did not, only the close of it; I was not in court, and I heard very little of it. I have seen it in the paper this morning.

3113. Did you read it through?—Yes.

3114. Did you read there that he said, after the Liberals had given up, that you went on paying from a sense of personal honour, because the bargain was that all the Tories should be paid, whether they voted or not?—I had nothing to do with the paying.

3115. You do not answer the question; did you read that Mr. Serjeant Ballantine had been instructed to say that you went on paying after the Liberals had retired, from a sense of personal honour; because the bargain was that the Tories were to have their pay, whether they voted or not?—Yes, I read that in the paper.

3116. I ask you, not intending to criticise what Mr. Serjeant Ballantine said; but was the statement true as to you?—I could not say personally that I should have objected to it, but it was out of my hands.

3117. Then it is a mistake to suppose that you were actuated by any sense of personal honour in the matter?—No; so far as I was concerned, if I had promised anything I would perform it, and I presume that the other people who had money in their possession early in the day, if they made promises, would follow it in the same way.

3118. You would feel bound by any agreement that your representatives had made, would you?—I should, certainly.

3119. Who had you authorised to make personal contracts, in order to win the election?—For the St. Mary's Ward I gave money to Mr. Francis Burrell, an innkeeper.

3120. It is the same public-house which is mentioned in the election accounts of the candidates as the Tory committee-room, is it not?—Yes; I presume it is for all Conservative purposes poses we frequent that house ; I do, at least, and it is a very respectable one.

3121. It was in St. Mary's Ward?—Yes.

3122. Did you entrust money to any other person but Mr. Burrell, in St. Mary's Ward?—No.

3123. Who represented you in the Minster Ward?—Mr. Lowther, Mr. J. R. Bentley, and Mr. Robert Thirsk.

3124. How much of the 800 l. did you give to Mr. Burrell, in your own ward?—I gave him on the Saturday, as well as I can remember, 50 l., and about 150 l. early on the Monday ; that is as near as I can say.

3125. On the Monday you gave him 150 l.?—Yes ; in round numbers, say, a couple of hundred, as near as I can tell.

3126. As to the names in the other wards, how much did you give Mr. Lowther?—I gave him 300 l.

3127. When?—On the Saturday and on the Monday. I cannot possibly say how much I gave him on the Saturday.

3128. How much do you believe?—£.100, I should say ; but I cannot remember.

3129. And 200 l. on the Monday?—Yes, I should say so.

3130. How much did you give to the other gentlemen ; how much did you give to Mr. Bentley?—I gave him 100 l.

3131. On the Saturday?—I gave him about 20 l. on the Saturday, either more or less, I cannot say.

3132. And about 80 l. on the Monday?—Yes.

3133. Making 100 l. altogether?—Yes, as near as I can remember.

3134. How much did you give to Mr. Robert Thirsk?—I gave him 50 l.

3135. How much on the Saturday?—£.10 on the Saturday, and 40 l. on the Monday, in various sums, as he wanted it.

3136. I have got to 600 l. out of the 800 l. ; where did the other 200 l. go to?—As to the other 200 l., I should spend about 20 l. myself.

3137. Out of the 200 l.?—Yes, as near as I can say. I am not aware that I spent over myself. I paid for cabs, and printing, &c.

3138. Cabs and printing would not make up the other 180 l.?—No.

3139. What did the cabs and the printing cost?—I should say only a trifle.

3140. Was it 20 l.?—I should think about that.

3141. Your 20 l. and their 20 l. make 40 l. ; I want 160 l. now?—I drew 800 l. out of my bank, and to the best of my recollection that is as far as I can tell you the cost ; there might be incidental expenses, but I cannot recollect them.

3142. You have left a deficiency of 160 l. ; I am curious to know what it means?—I drew 800 l. out of the bank, and those are, as near as I can say, the amounts I can remember parting with.

3143. Somehow or other 800 l. went in this affair?—To the best of my knowledge it went in the affair. I paid some other things. I cannot say I did not keep any account of them, certainly.

3144. Out of what bank did you draw it?—I drew it out of the Beverley Bank of Machell, Pease & Company.

3145. Do you keep a private account there of your own?—No.

3146. Do you keep a deposit account there?—No.

90.

3147. Are you, as managing director, entitled to sign cheques on behalf of the Waggon Company (Limited)?—Yes.

3148. Do they keep their account there?—No.

3149. Where do they keep their account?—At Bower, Hall & Company.

3150. Is that another bank in the town?—Yes.

3151. What fund did you draw upon at Pease & Company's for the 800 l.?—I went and spoke to the manager, and told him that I wanted it for municipal purposes, and I would be responsible for it if he would let me have it ; and he said that he would. I opened it purposely, in order to keep it separate from anything I had in connection with the Waggon Company. I asked him first for about from 400 l. to 500 l. ; it was estimated by Mr. Lowther that that would be the expense, and I asked to draw to the amount of 400 l. or 500 l., and it ultimately ran up to 800 l.

3152. How long before the 2nd of November did you make this arrangement at Pease's Bank?—I believe I made it on the Friday previously, speaking from memory ; I cannot swear to it ; I spoke to the manager on two or three occasions. I believe I made it on the Friday, and drew the money out on the Saturday, but I cannot say ; I fancy it might have been done on the day previous.

3153. Did you draw it out by cheque?—Yes.

3154. How many cheques did you draw?—It might be three or four, I cannot speak to that ; I have no doubt that the manager will inform you if you ask him.

3155. Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] Have you had them returned to you?—No.

3156. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] You have not asked for them, I dare say?—No.

3157. You know that you had four people to give the money to?—Yes.

3158. And you gave instalments to each of them on two occasions?—Yes.

3159. Which made eight payments?—Yes.

3160. You think that three or four cheques were all you drew?—Yes, I think so.

3161. Did you draw them all at once?—No.

3162. All on the same day?—No.

3163. How many did you draw on the Saturday?—I should draw one on the Saturday and the other on the Monday.

3164. Three cheques did you draw on the Monday?—I cannot say ; I do not know whether I drew it in four or three cheques.

3165. But it was one or the other ; it was one on the Saturday and the remainder on the Monday?—To the best of my recollection.

3166. How much did you draw on the Saturday?—I think I drew 500 l. on the Saturday, but I cannot say ; I think so.

3167. How did you have it ; in what is called "short," or all in gold?—I had it both ways.

3168. No bank-notes, surely?—Yes, I think I had ; I do not know, I cannot say, I might have had ; I believe I had it in each way.

3169. At any rate, you got it?—Yes.

3170. You would not want 5 l. notes, would you?—I received it on the Saturday, and on the Monday I sent, I think.

3171. Did you go as high as a 5 l. note to any single man?—I am not aware that it went over 1 l. ; I did not pay one myself.

3172. Do you mean to state that you got any bank-notes amongst the money?—I might have.

3173. Do you mean to swear that you did?—

I 4

I do

Mr.
R. Norfolk.

11 March
1869.

Mr.
R. Norfolk.

11 March
1869.

I do not mean to say anything; I will tell you the truth.

3174. You did not get any bank-notes on the Monday, did you?—No, decidedly not; they were all sovereigns and half-sovereigns; it was wanted for immediate use.

3175. You did not spend any on the Monday or on the Saturday, did you?—I cannot say that I did; it was spent.

3176. As a commercial man, and lavishing money in this way, do you mean to say that you do not know whether you got rid of your 500 l. on the Saturday?—I did not do anything of the sort.

3177. Not all on the Saturday?—No; I thought you asked me if those people representing me had spent it on the Saturday.

3178. You do not know whether they did?—No, not at all; I presume they applied it for the purpose.

3179. Has your colleague in St. Mary's Ward rendered you an account?—No, I never asked him for one.

3180. But he might have volunteered it as a trustee?—He has not done so.

3181. Has either of the three gentlemen in Mr. Usher's ward rendered you an account?—Only by saying that they had spent all the money; I have had no account, and I never expected one.

3182. You were very anxious to get in, of course?—Yes; after I had started, I was.

3183. You watched the election, I suppose, from hour to hour with great interest?—No; I never went into the town.

3184. Where were you?—At my office.

3185. Were you at the Waggon Works (Limited), all day?—Yes.

3186. Do you mean that?—I mean that I never came to the town till my usual dinner hour, when I walked through the town, at half-past 12 o'clock.

3187. Had they sent you down slips?—No; I have not ever seen one.

3188. Did they send messengers to report progress?—No; I am not aware that anyone did.

3189. You sat there till dinner time in a state of unalleviated anxiety?—No; I heard it, in general conversation, that we were ahead.

3190. General conversation was supplied to the office, although you had no special messengers?—Yes.

3191. When you went to dinner you found out, I suppose, that the general conversation was true?—Yes.

3192. That you were all right?—I heard so.

3193. That was at dinner time, at half-past 12 o'clock?—Yes; it would be about a quarter to one, when I should get into the town.

3194. Thereupon did you communicate with any of the almoners of your bounty, whom you had elected, those four gentlemen?—I saw Mr. Lowther and I told him to stop immediately; I saw him in the street, and he said that he would do so as soon as he could.

3195. What did you understand by that; did you ask him what it meant?—It meant the honourable arrangement, that if he had agreed with any men from the outskirts of the town to come in, I suppose it meant that he would pay them.

3196. Did not he say, "I cannot shut up in this way, I am under terms"?—No, he did not say anything of the sort.

3197. When he said, "I will stop as soon as I can," you did not know what he meant then?—No, I understood it to mean that he would stop paying as soon as he could.

3198. Which phrase "as soon as he could" you did not quite understand?—I understood it to mean in what he said that if he was bound to pay anything to anyone he would have to pay it; I could not suspect anything.

3199. You did not suspect that he was bound to pay anybody?—No.

3200. What could he mean by saying, "I will leave off spending it as soon as I can"?—That if he had made any arrangement with any one he would be bound to pay them.

3201. Did you go to the other three gentlemen and tell them to stop as soon as they could?—No, I quietly walked through the town home, and I did not meet any others.

3202. But you went to one man who held a bag in a small district?—I did not go to him, I met him.

3203. Were you not anxious that the other three should not go on spending money?—I was not anxious about it in any way specially; the intention was that we should win, and I ordered them to do so.

3204. You had won at half-past 12, had you not?—It appears so.

3205. When you told them not to spend anything more, what did you do to stop the other three men?—I did not do anything, I was not acquainted with these things before; I was not a very efficient hand at them, I suppose.

3206. At what hour of the day will you undertake to swear that you drew out the money by means of two or three cheques on the Monday from Machall & Pease, the bankers?—I cannot say positively, I should say that I did not draw any out after 12 o'clock; at the same time I might have drawn some out after 12.

3207. I should say that you would not have drawn any money after 12 o'clock, but did you not as a fact draw any money after 12?—I cannot say, I am not aware that I did, I am as certain as I stand here that I did not draw it after 12 o'clock, but I will not swear it.

3208. What is your impression about it?—That it was all drawn out earlier than 12.

3209. Having supplied so large a sum on the Saturday night, what information had you received that could possibly induce you to draw out the remainder of the 800 l. before 12 o'clock in the day?—I was told that the Radicals were paying 25 s. a piece.

3210. Well?—And that if we meant to beat them we must pay equal to them; that Mr. Crosskill had got money from Maxwell and Trollope, and that they were determined to win at any cost, and we must beat them.

Mr. Baron Martin.] Who told you this?—

3211. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] You were told that Mr. Crosskill had got money from Maxwell and Trollope and that they were determined to win; who told you that?—I heard it in general conversation, it was the general talk for days.

3212. It is easy to attack a fellow citizen in that way, but on your solemn oath will you tell me who said such a thing to you, be it true or false?—I believe that I heard it from Mr. I. B. Lowther, but I will not swear it, I heard it 20 times; but I cannot say where, or any nearer than that it was certainly talked of in the town by 20 people.

3213. Mr.

Mr.
R. Norfolk.
11 March
1869.

3213. Mr. Lowther, you say, told you that the other side had lodged money with Mr. Crosskill, and that they were paying 25 s. a head?—I believe so.

3214. Do you not know that in the evidence given of all the parties who got their money there is not one single one to whom they were paying such a sum at all?—I did not know what they paid.

3215. But you know it now?—No, I know the evidence.

3216. Do you mean to say that Mr. Lowther was cheating you, or meant to say that while he was paying men 10 s., 15 s., and 17 s. 6 d., the other side were paying 25 s., and that you must outbid them?—I do not believe that he would cheat any one.

3217. If he told you that to get more money, that looks like it, does it not?—It was the general impression on the Saturday evening that the other party had offered 25 s.

3218. Do you swear that Mr. Lowther told you that?—No, I do not.

3219. Will you swear to any man by name who told it you?—No.

3220. You believe that you sent all the remainder of the money before 12 o'clock to the gentlemen you have named?—I believe so.

3221. You said that you sent somebody, and that you did not go yourself, on the Monday, to the bankers; who did you send?—I sent a clerk out of my office, of the name of Charles Collinson.

3222. Not Spence Collinson?—No.

3223. Charles Collinson, one of your employes?—Yes, one of my clerks.

3224. Who communicated to you that the cheques were wanted?—Mr. Francis Burrell, and all of them, I believe; every one of the four that were entrusted with the money kept fetching it away, and if I had not any I sent for some more.

3225. Mr. Baron Martin.] Where are these works; in the town?—Probably at the extreme end of the town; 400 or 500 yards off of the town.

3226. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] The four gentlemen came from time to time to fetch the money, as they wanted it?—Yes.

3227. Did they continue to come after 12 o'clock?—I am not aware that any of them came after 12 o'clock; I cannot say.

3228. I understood you to say that before you went to dinner you had no direct information from the town or from any of your accredited agents; am I to understand that those four gentlemen were coming up to you from time to time before 12 o'clock?—Yes, and they told me that we were ahead as they came; that is all the information I had.

3229. Who suggested to you the names of those four gentlemen as the parties to be employed by you in this delicate operation of bribery; you were inexperienced, as I understand?—I was; I cannot say they were persons who had always taken active operations before, and they were recommended to me as trustworthy men.

3230. They were men who had conducted the operations before?—Yes, it was the common talk of the town, the same as any other talk; that is the only answer I can give.

3231. You did not think that you were insulting Mr. Burrell when you asked him to take a bag of money, and be instrumental in bribing?—No.

3232. Or the other three gentlemen?—No.

3233. Of course you took great care not to talk to Mr. Wreghitt about it, he being Sir Henry's accredited representative?—I am not very friendly with Mr. Wreghitt.

3234. Have you had any cause to quarrel with him?—No, I do not know that I have.

3235. Then why be unfriendly with so good a friend to your immediate superior, Sir Henry's representative?—I do not know that I am positively unfriendly, but I am not on intimate terms with him.

3236. That may be; had you any conference with him on the subject?—I had.

3237. Were you in court yesterday?—No, I was scarcely in at all.

3238. We were told yesterday that he was chairman, and a supporter of this Conservative association, and approved of the lists; you know that, I suppose?—Yes, I know that.

3239. You could hardly very well get anything approved by this association without communicating with Mr. Wreghitt?—I never had any communication with him; with respect to the Conservative association I had.

3240. They were putting you up in common with the others, and did you not have any communication with Mr. Wreghitt?—With respect to what?

3241. To your being put up with Mr. Usher and the other gentlemen as candidates for the town council, and under the protection of this Conservative association?—No.

3242. You never spoke to him on the subject?—Never in my life.

3243. Did you speak to him simply with regard to who the bribers were to be?—I asked him if he would find any of the means to win with, any of the money for the municipal election, and he said, "No."

3244. Did that surprise you?—No, I cannot say that it did; I do not know that I had any reason to be surprised.

3245. How came you to insult Mr. Wreghitt, by making such a proposal to him?—The common conversation was that he had done it previously, and I went to ask him the same question.

3246. Mr. Baron Martin.] To bribe the voters?—I presume so.

3247. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] You mean to find money for municipal bribery?—The common conversation of the town was so, and I went and asked him the question; I asked him the question whether he would find it.

3248. And he said, "No"; what did you say?—I said, "We shall have to find it ourselves," I presume; I cannot tell what I said, I do not remember; I certainly had not any from him in any way; he refused to find any, and I should go away.

3249. You say that you are not on intimate terms with him, not friendly with him; if so, how could you go and propose such a thing as this?—

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] He said that he had heard it in the town.

3250. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] Is that your only reason for it?—I had not any other that I know of.

3251. Having no accounts from the bribers, and expecting none, how are you going to settle

Mr.
R: Norfolk.

the shares with the other gentlemen?—I am advised, with respect to the money that has been drawn out of the bank, that I am responsible for it, and they all of them state that they are willing and anxious to pay their share of the cost, and when I get it I shall go and pay the 800 l. in again.

3252. How shall you ascertain their share; you cannot tell me how you have spent the 800 l.; how much shall you charge them?—I shall charge them the 800 l.

3253. Whether they have spent it all or not?—No; I shall try to make up the account in the best way I can; in the way that such things are made up.

3254. You have not repaid the bankers, and it is an open question?—Yes.

3255. What is the salary of your secretary, Mr. Usher?—£400 a year.

3256. Are you going to charge him a sixth part of the 800 l.?—I presume so.

3257. I will not presume unless you swear it?—I have not any other means.

3258. On your oath, are you intending to charge your secretary, Mr. Usher, a sixth part of the 800 l. for this job?—Yes.

3259. As to Mr. Catterson, what is he?—I believe he is a tanner in the town.

3260. Do not you know?—Yes, he is a tanner in the town; I have not been into his works.

3261. Have you said anything to him since this election as to your intention to charge him a sixth part of the 800 l.?—No, I asked him if he would pay his share.

3262. What did he say?—He said he would.

3263. Did you say that it would be a sixth part of the 800 l.?—No.

3264. Was any sum mentioned?—No.

3265. When he said that he would pay, he had no idea how much you had spent, had he?—I should fancy he had not.

3266. Did you hear another thing that my learned friend, Mr. Serjeant Ballantine, said, that he admitted that the candidates were unable to pay their own expenses, but that you were a man of opulence who intended to pay them at your own cost, and out of your own pocket.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] I never said anything of the kind, nor anything like it.

The Witness.] I never heard him say so.

3267. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] Were all the candidates well able to pay their own expenses?—I should think so, I cannot say; I cannot speak as to that, they all appeared to be able to pay; every one appears to be worth 150 l.

3268. Had you ever any intention to gratify your own ambition and pay the money entirely out of your own pocket?—Not the least, only to pay my share, decidedly not; the same as the others.

3269. Did you ever tell Mr. Whiting that the election had only cost you a sum of 20 l., and that you had agreed to pay?—Certainly not; I might have stated that I had personally spent 20 l.; I believe I have given that in my evidence that I did personally spend 20 l., but I never told him anything that I am aware of.

Mr. WILLIAM SMALES WREGHITT, sworn; Examined by Mr. Giffard.

Mr. W. S.
Wreghitt.

3270. WHAT are you?—A Draper.

3271. First of all, had you anything to do, directly or indirectly, with the bribing of voters at the municipal election?—Nothing whatever.

3272. Or supplying funds for that purpose?—Nor for supplying funds for that purpose.

3273. A person named Vickers has been examined here who says that you gave him 100 l. in gold and silver for the purpose of bribing at the municipal election; is that true, or it is false?—My Lord, do you request me to answer all these questions?

3274. Mr. Baron Martin.] I suppose you have heard what passed upon that point when the last witness was in the box; if you answer the questions to my satisfaction, and I believe that your evidence is true, you will be entitled to a certificate from me that will protect you, as it appears to me, from all proceedings with regard to the borough election?—Thank you, my Lord. Then the statement that was made here yesterday by John Smales Vickers is not true.

3275. Mr. Baron Martin.] You mean as to the 100 l.?—Yes, my Lord.

3276. Mr. Giffard.] A man of the name of Dales stated that you gave 40 l. to Kempley at the Parliamentary election of 1860; is that true or false?—That is utterly untrue.

3277. Mr. Baron Martin.] Do you mean 1859 or 1860?—1860.

3278. Mr. Giffard.] Is it true that you have given any money to any person whatever at any Parliamentary election, either before Sir Henry Edwards came here, or afterwards?—It is not true; I never gave 1 s. to any man living for any Parliamentary election in my life.

3279. I believe you were originally deputed to ask Sir Henry Edwards (then Major Edwards) to come forward when he first came to the borough?—I was.

3280. After he was elected, did he communicate from time to time with you with reference to applications made to him for local charities, and local cases of distress?—He did.

3281. And, from time to time, has Sir Henry sent money through you for such purposes?—He has.

3282. Has that been confined to persons of his own party, or belonging to the other political party in the town?—I have given to both, under his instructions.

3283. Is it true that you have ever made the future support of the person receiving the money a condition for giving it?—It is not true; I never made a corrupt bargain with any man in my life.

3284. I believe it is true that you have from time to time taken up freedoms?—It is.

3285. Have you ever made it a condition of doing so that the person receiving the money should give his political support to Sir Henry Edwards?—Never.

3286. You received a note last night; will you produce it?—Yes (producing the same).

3287. What time last night did you receive that note?—I think it was between eight and nine o'clock.

3288. It

3288. It was from the solicitor to the Petitioners?—Yes.

The following letter, dated 10th March 1869, and signed William S. Hind, addressed to W. S. Wreghitt, was read: "Sir,—Take notice that you will not be required to attend as a witness to-morrow on the trial of the Beverley Election Petition, unless you have notice so to do. This notice does not exonerate you from being called upon your subpoena, should you be required."

Cross-examined by Mr. Serjeant Sargood.

3289. You are here as a witness for the Respondents?—Yes.

3290. But the Petitioners have taken care that you should be here by sending you a subpoena?—No, I have been requested to attend.

3291. I said the Petitioners?—No, certainly not.

3292. Have you not had a subpoena from the other side?—I have not; I mean from the Petitioners.

3293. You have not received their subpoena?—Yes, from the first I have.

3294. You have had a subpoena from the Petitioners?—Yes.

3295. I suppose that they gave you notice in order to save expense as a witness that so far as they were concerned they did not want you?—I do not know what it was for.

3296. You have been in court during the last two days?—I have.

3297. Have you heard all that the witnesses have stated, both with regard to municipal elections, charities, freedoms, and corruption?—Yes, I have.

3298. You have heard how frequently your name has been mentioned in connection with this matter?—I have.

3299. Am I to understand you to say that you are here to deny every allegation that was made against you?—Every allegation? No.

3300. Not every one?—No.

3301. Then tell me what allegations or corruption you mean to admit?—With regard to yesterday, so far as any statements that have been made in this court as to myself, I deny them utterly.

3302. You deny everything?—Yes.

3303. How long have any financial transactions been carried on between you and Sir Henry Edwards?—Sir Henry Edwards has committed money to my charge to begin with, and when the money was exhausted I wrote for more and I received it.

3304. You occupied a position of confidence and trust?—Yes.

3305. You acted as a sort of banker, if one might say so?—Yes, in a qualified sense it was the case.

3306. When you wrote for more money, his faith and confidence in you were such that he did not want a debtor and creditor account of what you had done with the rest?—He did not.

3307. And you never rendered one?—Never.

3308. I may take it, I suppose, that this had lasted from the year 1857, when you first became acquainted with him, to the present time, and you have never rendered him an account of how you applied the money he entrusted to you?—I have offered to do so on several occasions, but I have never done so.

90.

3309. As you have offered it, I presume, I may say that he never required you to do it?—He never required me to it.

3310. How was the money transmitted?—In bank notes.

3311. By course of post?—Yes.

3312. Invariably?—Invariably.

3313. With two bankers in your town?—Yes; I had no transactions through the banks.

3314. With four bankers in this town for 12 years, do you mean to say that no money transaction ever went through a banker?—None.

3315. You have had no money transaction in any way except through the post?—No; not in any way except through the post, that I know of.

3316. But it could not have happened without your being aware of it?—I do not think it would.

3317. But you recollect nothing except through the post?—I may say that I fancy during all that time there has never been any instance, but that the money was sent; I think I may say always, excepting that there may have been one or two instances in which I may have had a cheque; I cannot say but what I have.

3318. After deliberately saying what you have said, and after repeating my words, that with four bankers in the town it was always by post, and never on a banker?—It was certainly not upon a banker in the town.

3319. Very well, I am quite satisfied; still it was on a banker out of the town?—It would be on a banker out of the town; no doubt it was.

3320. What bank was it?—I really do not know, I cannot say I am sure; it is a length of time since I had a cheque.

3321. Have you no idea of the banker being out of the town, who he was, or where he was?—I really cannot state at this time.

3322. Do you keep a banking account yourself?—I do.

3323. Did you pay any money that you had received from Sir Henry Edwards by cheques into your own banking account?—Never.

3324. Did you go and cash the cheques yourself?—I did.

3325. And although they were sent out of the town or taken, you swear that you cannot tell me whether you cashed the cheques yourself?—I got them cashed in that sense, of course; I did not cash them myself.

3326. Did you go yourself personally?—Yes; I did personally.

3327. Not sending them by any one?—No.

3328. Do not you know where you went to cash them?—I say that I know where I went to get them cashed in Beverley.

3329. Where did you go?—To Mr. Lowson's bank.

3330. When you had two or three cheques on a bank out of the town you got them cashed as a matter of indulgence and convenience?—Entirely so.

3331. You do not think there were more than three cheques?—I should not think it would be more than three cheques.

3332. You did not keep your account there?—No.

3333. Why did you go there instead of to your own bankers?—Because I thought it was better to do so.

3334. What are the charitable institutions on both

Mr. W. S.
Wreghitt.

both sides of politics that you said you subscribed to by Sir Henry Edwards' special desire?—Never said by his special desire.

Mr. Baron Martin.] I understood the witness to say that he gave the money to individuals.

3335. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] To charities I understood?—Yes; for instance, we have soup kitchens and lying-in charities, dispensaries, and a variety of other things of that nature, my Lord, which Sir Henry Edwards has subscribed to through me.

3336. They have no political character?—Certainly not.

3337. There is the Conservative association, you are an active gentleman in that, are you not?—Yes.

3338. When was that invented?—In 1857, on the 28th of March.

3339. When was Sir Henry Edwards first elected?—In 1857, at the latter part of the year; he succeeded Mr. Glover, who was unseated on petition.

3340. What was the subscription of the members to that?—From 10 s. to 1 s.

3341. An opulent man like you would subscribe 10 s. while a poor man would subscribe 1 s. and so forth?—Yes.

3342. You heard what was said yesterday about the balance being made up by the borough Members?—Yes; they subscribed, annually, 10*l*. each.

3343. But there might have been a balance to make up for all that?—Exactly so.

3344. You heard, I think, what was said about the borough Members making it up?—I dare say they might be called upon to do so.

3345. That gentleman we heard yesterday, Mr. Smales Vickers, was president for a short time?—Yes; for a very short time.

3346. What do you call a very short time?—I believe something like six months.

3347. Is the president elected annually?—Yes.

3348. As his reign was cut short at the end of six months, did not Sir Henry approve of him?—I do not think that Sir Henry was ever consulted in the matter about him.

3349. Is that your belief, upon your oath?—It is.

3350. Had you preceded Mr. Vickers as president?—Yes.

3351. Did you succeed him?—Yes.

3352. Have you been in office ever since?—Yes.

3353. Do you mean to tell my Lord, that you believe Sir Henry Edwards was never communicated with on the subject of Mr. Vickers being the president instead of yourself?—I do; there was no motive for communicating with him; Sir Henry had no power to elect a president; he is elected by the members of the association. They might as well have consulted any gentleman in this court as Sir Henry Edwards on that point.

3354. Is it not the fact that the Conservative association could approve of them before they have a chance of election?—They do by arrangement.

3355. Did not Sir Henry Edwards, by arrangement, approve of your being always president?—I have no reason to think that he disapproved of it.

3356. You have good reason to think otherwise, I have no doubt?—I have.

3357. You have said that Sir Henry could not control the electors; Mr. Vickers was elected instead of you on competition, was he not?—Yes, he was.

3358. How was that, as it is an annual election, and he only reigned for six months?—I must leave him to answer that question; I cannot be responsible for other people's acts.

3359. He did answer that yesterday, that it was because Sir Henry was communicated with, and he would not approve of anybody but Mr. Wreghitt, and he was compelled to go out?—There is no compulsion.

3360. Can you give me any other reason?—I have no power to assign reasons for other men's conduct.

3361. Can you give me any other reason why he ceased to continue in office, and you became his successor?—I cannot give you any reason at all; not anything beyond what I have said.

3362. It is quite true, is it not, that the Conservative association took the liberty of arranging beforehand who should be put up for town councillors?—That was the object of its being formed.

3363. That is in the Tory interest alone?—Yes; of course.

3364. The institution was formed, do you say, for that object alone?—It was; and also to afford a reading-room for the benefit of the Conservative party.

3365. We might say a consulting-room as well, perhaps?—Possibly, you might add that. There is a committee in connection with it, and that committee has a room, in addition to the reading-room, for consulting purposes.

3366. You say for that purpose alone?—I do.

3367. Do you mean that?—Yes.

3368. With no political views?—How can there be a Conservative association without political views?

3369. It need not interfere with political business, unless it was invented for that purpose?—I said that it was invented for the purpose; you inquired were the town councillors approved of by the Working Men's Association?

3370. Yes?—And the answer I gave was "Yes."

3371. You have said more than that; you said the society was formed for the purpose?—For political purposes.

3372. That is what I want to know, part of the political purposes of the society, I suppose, was to control the town council?—Not to control; of course men were nominated, that is simply nominated, to be put forward to be elected; I do not consider a man a town councillor at all till after his election.

3373. It meant that you could put him forward as a man that the party were to support?—Certainly.

3374. Was that why the borough Members were to pay the balance, if there was any deficiency?—The borough Members had no agreement of that sort.

3375. You have said that it was the understanding, was that the reason why they were to pay the balance?—They were not called upon to pay the balance, there was no agreement of that kind, in any shape or form, nor any understanding.

3376. With regard to the fund that you have told us you had at your command, without accounts from Sir Henry, you being chairman; you did did not want to call upon anyone; you were everyone yourself?—I do not take that view myself.

3377. Who keeps the accounts of the Conservative association?—Mr. Wilson.

3378. Are they audited?—Yes, every year.

3379. Do you mean to say that the borough Members have never contributed anything beyond their 10 guineas subscription to it?—I do not remember that they ever did.

3380. Or you on their behalf?—Nor me on their behalf.

3381. What did you mean by saying that the borough Members might be called upon to make up the balance?—I meant this: that such a thing might be done, but I anticipated that you would have asked me another question, were they ever asked, and I should have answered you; but I was rather anticipating your question. I may state that they never did do so, and it was never necessary for them to do so.

3382. You do not, I presume, deny the general corruption of the borough in electing town councillors for many years past?—I do not take the proceedings of yesterday as a sample.

Mr. Baron Martin.] Just be good enough to answer the question.

3383. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] You do not intend to deny the general corruption of the borough in electing town councillors for many years past?—No.

3384. Mr. Baron Martin.] You say that you do not take the evidence given yesterday as a sample?—I said so, my Lord.

3385. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] Do you refuse that sample because it is so much above the old average or so much below it?—I have known as much given before as 20 s. for a vote.

3386. I am talking of the aggregate of 800 l.?—I never knew so much as that.

3387. While you were intimate with the subject, what would be the average amount at a municipal election that they would have spent upon it?—I should think from 100 l. to 150 l.

3388. You mean to say that that is the average gross expenditure to carry a town council election for one party, the Tories?—The average would not amount to that, not the average. I should think, my Lord, that the average would not be more than from 50 l. to 70 l.

3389. How many years did your experience that you had run over, to take the average, 10 or a dozen?—I think so.

3390. That we may estimate to have been your general average; tell me the lowest and the highest sums during those 10 years that you have known to be spent?—Several times there has been no contest, and so we began at nothing; and we may go up, I should think, to perhaps 130 l. or 140 l.

Mr. Baron Martin.] Are you now speaking of sums paid in gross for the election?—

3391. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] Yes. (To the Witness.) What is the lowest gross sum at the contests which you have known paid?—I have known, when we have had sham contests, that it has not cost more than 20 l. It is well known that there are degrees of energy put forward in contested elections, and we have scarcely or seldom been without nominations on the opposite side.

90.

3392. You have had such in your experience of twelve years?—

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] He says that although there may have been no real contests, there have been several elections in which there were nominations, and that involves a certain amount of expense.

Mr. Baron Martin.] So I understood him, and he put it at 20 l.

3393. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] I put that out of the question where there has been a real contest, and the average which you have stated it to be, what has been the lowest sum for a real contest which you have known?—For a real contest I should think, when party efforts have been fairly put forth, it would be something like from 130 l. to 140 l.

3394. At the lowest?—Yes.

3395. Is that what you mean?—Yes.

3396. What is the highest, do you think, not taking yesterday, for you say that is not a sample?—I have known in 1857, but I had nothing to do with that; it was found by another party, and I believe it cost about 300 l.

3397. What is the highest sum you have known in twelve years' experience?—I could not say of my own knowledge.

3398. What do you believe it would be?—I believe it would be something like 300 l.

3399. If the lowest contest costs 130 l., and the highest 300 l., I should not call that an average of 70 l.?—No, and I did not state that.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] He included those elections in which no money had been spent.

The Witness.] I understood the learned counsel to be asking what the elections were that I had had to do with personally. I was speaking of those elections that I had had to do with personally, and the expenses had not exceeded, I believe, from 130 l. to 140 l. in a spirited contest. I understood him to inquire whether I had ever known any contest which cost more; there was one in 1857, when Mr. Almack was candidate, and I believe that the election did cost more.

3400. It was a very severe one, was it not?—Yes.

3401. Exceptionally severe, was it not?—Yes.

3402. Mr. Baron Martin.] The highest cost 300 l., and you were not concerned in that?—No.

3403. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] Then he says that it was exceptionally severe at the time he speaks of?—Yes.

3404. Do you remember the year 1867, when the quo warranto went out?—Yes.

3405. You remember that?—Yes.

3406. Mr. Baron Martin.] Was that in 1867?—No; I believe it was in 1866.

3407. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] It was not an exceptional contest in 1867, was it?—No.

3408. It was another election?—Yes.

3409. Did it happen that some of the gentlemen whom your Conservative association had put forward were elected, but that their right to take their seats was disputed from some informality in the nomination?—Yes.

3410. As a consequence, there was a prolonged litigation?—Yes.

3411. How long did it last?—About 12 months, I think.

K 3

3412. And

Mr. W. S. Wreghitt.

11 March 1869.

Mr. W. S.
Wreghitt.

1869.

3412. And your friends occupied their seats until they settled it, and decided against them, I presume?—I wish to be very guarded in what I say, and I do not wish to be misunderstood. Our friends took their seats, at least they made a declaration and took their seats; but afterwards, when the litigation commenced, they took the advice of counsel as to whether it was safe for them to vote, and finding that it would not be, they retired from the council until the decision was given.

3413. Did the chairs remain vacant?—Yes, they remained vacant.

3414. Do you happen to know what the costs were?—I do not recollect the costs, but I know there was a very serious amount taken off by taxation.

3415. As to the little sum that was left behind, who paid that; do you know?—I paid it.

3416. Mr. Baron Martin.] You paid the costs of the quo warranto?—Yes.

3417. About how much were the costs?—I do not clearly remember now, I am sure, but I think it was something like, in round numbers, about 200 l.; but I am merely quoting from memory, I really cannot say.

3418. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] You have forgotten that you had to pay costs on both sides; how much altogether, I mean, did it come to?—I am sure I could not state at this hour; I do not remember.

3419. Did 500 l. cover it?—I should think a great deal less than that.

3420. You will not swear that it was not more?—I could not swear to anything; I really do not remember. I must say that I do not remember.

3421. Mr. Baron Martin.] You paid the costs on both sides?—Yes.

3422. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] You paid them personally?—Yes, I did.

3423. Were you one of the candidates involved in that dispute?—No.

3424. You would not like to say, perhaps, that it was not as much as 500 l.?—I could not say what it was.

3425. Would you like to say that it was all out of your own pocket, at your own individual loss and cost?—No.

3426. Why should you have paid, not being one of the candidates involved in the contest?—Because it was looked upon as a party question, and being the chairman of the association, and having to do with political matters here, I made it my business.

3427. Then you looking upon it as a party question, being chairman of the Conservative association, and not paying it out of your own funds; did you pay it out of theirs?—No.

3428. Then out of what did you pay it?—I applied to Mr. Sykes and to Sir Henry Edwards, and I obtained the money.

3429. Mr. Baron Martin.] You obtained it from them?—Yes, my Lord.

3430. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] In equal or in unequal proportions?—In equal proportions.

3431. For municipal purposes, because it was a party question?—For the purpose of settling the expenses incurred at the trial.

3432. Municipal expenses incurred by the party question?—Clearly so.

3433. Had you ever obtained money from any other sources than the Conservative subscription or the personal contributions of Sir Henry Edwards and his colleague for the time being?—No.

3434. On the 2nd November the municipal contest was on a Monday?—Yes.

3435. Where were you on the Saturday?—I was at Hull in the morning and at home in the afternoon.

3436. Where were you on the Friday?—At home.

3437. At home in the morning and at Hull in the afternoon?—No.

3438. When you were at Hull in the morning and at home in the afternoon, if we begin an hour or two earlier you would be at home; you went to Hull and you came back again?—On the Saturday.

3439. At what time did you go?—I went by the half-past eight o'clock train from Beverley to Hull.

3440. You began by saying that you were at Hull?—Yes; I came back the same morning by the half-past nine o'clock train.

3441. You were not long in Hull?—Not long in Hull.

3442. Who went with you?—Mr. Bainton, the solicitor.

3443. The solicitor of the Members?—Yes.

3444. Where did you go to in Hull?—We first went to the "Station Hotel," and from thence to Mr. Atkinson's office, the solicitor, in Parliament-street, and from thence to Mr. Rollit's office, the Conservative agent to Messrs. Baxter and Atkinson; then we returned to the station.

3445. The Conservative agent to Messrs. Baxter and Atkinson?—Yes.

3446. Mr. Baxter being the head of that old firm, Baxter, Rose & Norton, acting on behalf of Sir Henry Edwards now?—Yes.

3447. May I ask you what took you to Hull the morning before the municipal election; have you any objection to answer that?—Not the slightest.

3448. What was it?—On the Friday evening before the Liberal Members were introduced into Beverley they addressed the constituency, and after their speeches were ended Mr. Leman, the then Member for York, came out upon the platform and made a speech, which I considered to be exceedingly damaging to Sir Henry Edwards as an individual and to the party; I was coming away, and I met Mr. Bainton, the solicitor to Sir Henry Edwards and Captain Kennard, and he put this question to me, "What do you think of the proceedings to-night?" I said, "Well, I think it is a success." Then he said, "What do you think of the speech delivered by Mr. Leman?" I said that I considered it exceedingly damaging, and I suggested to him that as Mr. Baxter was in Hull it was probable that he would be at liberty on Tuesday evening; as it was arranged that the Bishop of Oxford was going to be in Hull I thought it was well for us to take a lesson from the Liberal party, and to get Mr. Baxter to come over on Tuesday evening to speak in favour of the Conservative party, and the Conservative candidates.

3449. You were nervous about the political position the day before the municipal election?—Not at all.

3450. You only thought that something had been damaging to you, and you were not anxious about it?—I always think that it is wise to repair breaches as early as possible.

3451. Do you remember the election proceedings of 1859?—Yes; I have no doubt that I should remember them.

3452. Is

3452. Is the "Beverley Guardian and East Riding Advertiser" a Tory paper?—Yes.

3453. I see this: "Beverley Election Nomination.—Mr. Wreghitt had much pleasure in seconding the nomination, as he knew Major Edwards to be a most humane and kind individual"?—Yes.

3454. You were there?—Yes.

3455. Did you hear him make his speech?—No doubt.

3456. Do you recollect this paragraph in it: "He was proud of being brought forward as their champion at the election in August 1857, when they struck the first decisive blow at usurpation, and by the unparalleled efforts of that noble and independent body, the Working Man's Association, they had overcome the dominant Whig and Radical influences, and returned the Members of their choice; they had followed up their victories in the municipal and other elections, and thus had this loyal and ancient borough vindicated their rights and their independence, and long may she retain her proud position. But he would impress upon them the necessity of watchfulness, and, above all, of unanimity, in repressing any return of the aggression by faction, which they had so signally defeated. They could now boast of having a Conservative town council, Conservative pasture masters, a Conservative mayor, and they should endeavour to obtain Conservative Members of Parliament"?—I think it is highly probable that all you have read was stated; I do not doubt it.

3457. Admitting, as I do not doubt you do, with sorrow their corruption in the last 12 years, are we to take it that my Lord is to understand you to express a belief that the Parliamentary election of 1868 was pure?—May I ask whether that was the election at which Mr. Walters was a candidate?

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] No, the last election.

3458. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] Do you mean to say that you think that Parliamentary election was pure?—I believe it to have been the purest election in England; I take the nation, or I will take Great Britain, if you like.

3459. That is your belief?—It is.

Re-examined by Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.

3460. What had Mr. Baxter and the Bishop of Oxford to do together?—It was just this: I thought that Mr. Baxter would probably be engaged every night during the week on his own account, but as that event was going to take place I thought it probable that the Conservative party who were favourable to Church and State would not hold a meeting on that evening, and I thought that Mr. Baxter would be at liberty.

3461. You have mentioned a sum of 200 l. in relation to the quo warranto?—Yes.

3462. I suppose that there was no source from which the funds could be obtained that you know of?—No.

3463. Independently of that amount of money how much during the last year have you actually received from Sir Henry Edwards, and from his colleague, Captain Kennard?—Do you mean from each, or from the two together?

3464. From the two together; how much have you received from them altogether?—£. 300.

3465. Have you distributed some part of it?—I have.

3466. To what amount about?—I should think about 100 l.

3467. There is, I believe, an agricultural association in the town?—Yes.

3468. And a large subscription has been made to it from each of the Members?—£. 50; not from each.

3469. There are also subscriptions, as we understand, to charities?—Yes.

3470. They each subscribed an amount?—Yes.

3471. And you have paid only one of them?—Only Captain Kennard's subscription.

3472. There are other charities in relation to which you have received money from time to time?—Yes.

3473. Have you lived all your life in the town?—No; I came here in April 1841.

3474. Sir Henry Edwards has entrusted you with the disposition of those funds?—Entirely so.

3475. Has one single farthing of that money gone, or is it going, for any purposes of the election?—None whatever.

3476. Do you know of any sum of money that you can be called upon to pay on the part of these gentlemen in relation to that election?—Not any at all.

3477. You rather intimated that you had been active in some of the municipal elections, and my learned friend put a very general question to you; I just want to know this: have you upon former occasions ever spent any money in taking out freedoms for instance?—I have.

3478. When you say that all you heard stated yesterday was untrue, that does not include, as I understand you, payments for bribes?—No; I admitted that this morning.

3479. When you gave a general denial it was a denial with that exception?—Yes.

3480. Were you aware that there was anything illegal in taking out the freedoms of persons belonging to your own party?—I was not aware of that.

3481. You have, I believe, assisted on former occasions in municipal elections?—I have.

3482. Were you applied to on the last occasion by the last witness who was called; was that so?—Yes.

3483. What did you tell him?—I told him that I would not have anything whatever to do with it.

3484. Had you a motive for saying that?—I had.

3485. What was your motive?—I considered that it would be very wrong for us to mix up the elections in any shape or form, as I knew that I should have something to do with the coming election, and therefore I would not have anything whatever to do with the municipal election.

3486. That was your determination?—Yes.

3487. In point of fact, did you interfere in the remotest way with that election?—Nothing beyond quietly going down and registering my vote.

3488. In no other respect did you interfere in the slightest degree?—In no other respect.

3489. Just answer this question fully and frankly: did you operate in any way through other persons upon that municipal election?—Not in the slightest degree.

3490. Did you use it, or use the result of it, or what had been done in any way in relation to the Parliamentary election?—Not in any case.

3491. Did you ever ask or apply to a single voter in consequence of what had taken place at the municipal election?—Never.

Mr. W. S. Wreghitt.

11 March 1869.

Mr. W. S.
Wreghitt.
11 March
1869.

3492. Or authorise anyone to do so?—Never.

3493. You say, and very likely a man knows his own mind, that Mr. Vickers left the Conservative association of his own accord?—To the best of my knowledge he did.

3494. You had nothing to do with turning him out?—Not the slightest.

3495. He left entirely of his own accord?—Yes.

3496. Mr. Baron Martin.] Was Sir Henry Edwards in Beverley on the 14th November?—No.

3497. Was Captain Kennard here?—No, they came together on the 3rd.

3498. I suppose the latter gentleman is a stranger to the town?—Yes, quite so.

3499. Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] I believe that the Liberal candidates came in also on the 3rd?—No; on Friday, the 30th, I think it would be.

3500. Was that before?—Yes, two or three days before the municipal election.

3501. The Liberals came in three or four days before the municipal election?—Yes; it was on a Monday. The 1st November was on a Sunday, and, consequently, the municipal election was on the Monday. Our Members came in the day after the election, Tuesday; and the Liberal Members came in on the Friday previously.

Sir HENRY EDWARDS, Bart., M.P., sworn; Examined by Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.

Sir H.
Edwards,
Bart., M.P.

3502. You are a Baronet, and, I believe, a Magistrate of many years' standing in this county?—I have been so for nearly a quarter of a century.

3503. You are Colonel of Yeomanry?—I am Commandant of the Second West York Yeomanry.

3504. I believe you are the proprietor of a moor which produces grouse in this county?—Yes; I am very fond of shooting, and I have shot for a great many years.

3505. I believe you have sent up grouse to some of your constituents?—I have until I found that it was an imprudent thing to continue it.

3506. We have heard also that when you came into this borough you had no intention at any time, nor did you know at any time, of any corrupt practices going on?—I know of none whatever.

3507. With regard to the municipal elections, were you aware of what you heard stated yesterday, or until you heard it?—I had not the remotest idea of anything having happened of the kind.

3508. Did you ever learn from Mr. Wreghitt or from anybody that anything of the kind went on in this town?—Never.

3509. Did you give your countenance, or would you have ever lent your countenance to anything of the sort?—No, I have always protested against any practices of the sort since I came here. I have done so both publicly and privately.

3510. As far as you know, from your position in the borough, was there any necessity for you to resort to any such practices?—None whatever.

3511. You have always, have you not, had large majorities?—Yes, on four different occasions; the only four occasions on which I have contested the election.

3512. Was Captain Kennard a personal friend of yours?—Yes, I have known him for some time.

3513. And his family?—Yes.

3514. I suppose you and he had been in communication before he determined upon standing?—Yes; I think he asked me my opinion as to his prospects.

3515. Did you afterwards consent to coalesce with him in the contest?—I did.

3516. You knew him to be a man of university education and a gentleman?—Yes; and I stipulated that it should be a thorough coalition.

3517. Captain Kennard was an officer, I believe, in the 8th Hussars?—He was a captain in the 8th Hussars, and he has also been at the Court in Dublin for a long time, under the Lord Lieutenant. He was on the staff of the Lord Lieutenant.

3518. I suppose that the question of expenses was discussed between you and Captain Kennard?—Yes, I think it was.

3519. How much did your contest on the last occasion cost you?—I have my banker's book here, which I shall be very glad to put in, if it is desired.

3520. You have had it made up, I believe?—It is an exact copy from the banker's book.

3521. Have you any banker here?—I may explain, that I always sent a certain sum of money to Beverley before the election; I have no other regular standing account in Beverley in any one of the four banks.

3522. When you have had occasion to send money to Mr. Wreghitt, have you done so by cheque?—I have sent 500 l. to the bank, not only upon the last occasion, but on an occasion before, and all that is accounted for here; a sum of 200 l. was drawn out in the first instance by Mr. Bainton.

3523. Your solicitor?—Yes; and after that a sum of 150 l.

3524. Mr. Baron Martin.] Give me the amounts in round numbers?—My Lord, I have now a balance of 193 l. 3 s. 8 d. out of the 500 l., which I remitted for election purposes alone.

3525. Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] Is there at the present time one halfpenny due from you for election purposes beyond that?—Nothing whatever.

3526. Do you believe that that amount is all that was spent in relation to the election?—On my account I do; we were associated —

3527. Have you taken any means to avoid learning the facts or to avoid learning whether there is anything whatever behind?—None whatever; I do not want to conceal anything.

3528. To the best of your belief, and upon your oath, do you believe that there is a single farthing that could be claimed from you by anybody?—Not one farthing, to the best of my belief; I also believe that there never was a purer election in England than that which has taken place in my experience. After having fought eight contested elections, I mean to say this, in the presence of my God, that I do not believe there ever was a purer election than the last.

Cross-examined by Mr. Serjeant Sargood.

3529. I understood you to say that you had no idea idea of any imputation as to corrupt practices until after this petition?—I do; I said so.

3530. And you still believe that there had been no corrupt practices?—I did not say so.

3531. Then the purity of the 1868 election is relative to the United Kingdom?—Will you allow me to ask a question; are you alluding to the Parliamentary election?

3532. Yes?—Yes, certainly; I just stated so.

3533. Notwithstanding this petition having been filed, and all that you have heard since I have had the pleasure of seeing you sit here, you still express that as your personal opinion?—That is my firm belief.

3534. You believe it has been as pure an election as any in the land?—I entirely believe what I have just now stated; I have endeavoured during the last four months to find out whether even a glass of beer or a glass of spirits has been given by any individual belonging to our party, and I have never been able to bring forward a single instance.

3535. May I ask you over what period of time you extended that inquiry?—From the time of the election?

3536. Over how many days?—I do not know what you mean.

3537. You say you have made enquiry whether anything has been expended with reference to the election?—Naturally, as soon as the petition was filed, I felt more interest than anybody else in knowing the truth, and therefore I communicated with Mr. Wreghitt and many other gentlemen in the neighbourhood, and desired, naturally, to know if anything could be elicited from any party whatever, with reference to anything like corruption having been practised in the borough, on my part, or on the part of Captain Kennard.

3538. Have your inquiries been from Mr. Wreghitt and other gentlemen whose names I will venture to ask you?—And many other gentlemen.

3539. I will venture to ask whom?—My solicitor, Mr. Wreghitt, and a great many others.

3540. Can you remember any few of them, I do not want a great many?—Those I have met with I have inquired of.

3541. Who that were likely to be able to tell you?—I can mention to you, perhaps, a dozen men in one street as I would leave the “Beverley Arms,” say on the right or on the left. To almost all those individuals I have put the question.

3542. Taking it as a promiscuous inquiry?—Yes; I have asked “Has there been anything wrong, that you are aware of,” and from all parties I have been answered, that, to the best of their belief, the election has been perfectly pure.

3543. But did you limit your inquiry by any given number of days antecedent to the election?—No.

3544. Was it confined to a week or a fortnight?—No.

3545. Then it would include the period during which the municipal election was going on?—No; I was not in the town at the time.

3546. I am not imputing to you being here doing anything; do not misunderstand me?—But my inquiries have been personal inquiries generally, and not being present, how could I make those inquiries.

3547. And you failed to hear anything?—Of course; I was not here.

3548. But in your personal inquiries you failed to get any information?—I did not fail to get any information, because I was assured that nothing wrong had taken place.

3549. Mr. Baron Martin.] When did you find out that bribery had been practised at the municipal election?—I heard nothing of it till I came into this court.

3550. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] They told you nothing, then?—I mean as to the extent of it.

3551. Did you know that there had been bribery practised at the municipal election?—I did not know from my own personal knowledge.

3552. Did you acquire that knowledge by any careful investigation that you have made?—I tell you I made no investigation whatever, because I was not here at the time of the municipal election.

3553. But when you set to work to ascertain, as you have told me, from Mr. Wreghitt and many other gentlemen, did you then learn the bribery that had occurred at the municipal election?—It was before the municipal election that I made those inquiries.

3554. Not the Parliamentary election?—Before the municipal election.

3555. Surely we are at cross-purposes quite unintentionally on both sides. I am asking you as to the inquiries you made in this town in consequence of this petition which had been filed against you. Did I not understand you to say that after the petition, and as a consequence of it, you inquired of Mr. Wreghitt and others whether there had been anything of irregularity at the Parliamentary contest?—I did.

3556. I want to know whether, in making those inquiries, you learnt those great irregularities at the municipal contest a fortnight before?—No, I did not.

3557. They kept you in ignorance then, did they?—I did not know of it.

3558. The gentleman with whom you had been more immediately in association would be Mr. Norfolk?—Exactly.

3559. And you naturally talked over with him the disagreeable position that you were in, of having this petition against you?—I am not aware; in fact I cannot swear that I have seen Mr. Norfolk since the election, but my impression is that we have never met since the Parliamentary election. I will not swear that I did not attend one meeting in Manchester, but to the best of my belief I did not, and therefore I have not seen him at all, and I have had no communication with him directly or indirectly. If I may have met him at Manchester, which I do not believe, I should be there as chairman of the Waggon and Iron Company, and he would be attending as the chief manager. I cannot swear it, but I believe that I have not been present at any of their meetings since the election.

3560. But whether that is so or otherwise, am I to understand that from Mr. Norfolk, who was one of the successful candidates at the municipal election, you have made no inquiries as to the contingencies of the Parliamentary election, by which you were affected in this petition?—None whatever; I had no communication with him whatever upon the subject, or on any other subject, to the best of my knowledge.

3561. You have produced a transcript of a banker's book with regard to your Parliamentary expenses; I presume I may take it that that does not include any remittances of yours to Mr. Wreghitt?—Certainly not.

L

3562. You

Sir H. Edwards,
Bart., M.P.

11 March
1869.

Sir H.
Edwards,
Bart., M.P.

11 March
1869.

3562. You have also alluded to that, I think, as the gross sum for which you and Captain Kennard were jointly liable?—No, not at all.

3563. Am I to take it that it is your own personal expenditure?—This is a sum of money which I remitted to Beverley, 500 £. to the bank.

3564. And, subject to the balance now remaining, was the remainder spent as your personal expenses, unconnected with Captain Kennard?—Yes, certainly.

3565. I mean your individual expenses, unconnected with those of Mr. Kennard?—This comprises the whole.

3566. Do I understand you to say that when you talked to Mr. Kennard upon the subject of his putting up, some arrangement was made about the expenses between you?—I did not say so; I said it would be a perfect coalition between the two, and the expenses would be shared equally; that was our understanding.

3567. Then I may understand you, putting it in a commercial form, that his expenditure and yours, being added together, the understanding between you was that you should each bear it equally?—Exactly.

3568. Was that the arrangement?—I mean the expenses of the election; I do not mean the expenses of contributions to charities and other things; I wish to be perfectly clear.

3569. I will not do you any injustice about those things, of course, but was that the arrangement that was made with Mr. Kennard's predecessor, Mr. Sykes?—Exactly the same, and the same with Mr. Walker.

3570. Exact proportions, each paying half?—Yes, half each.

3571. Did Mr. Sykes come in after communicating with you, as Mr. Kennard has done?—It is a long time ago, but I think that we did communicate together, certainly.

3572. Was one of the incidents of Mr. Sykes's advent to this place taking shares in the Waggon Company, Limited?—I believe he took shares in the Waggon Company long subsequent to his arrival in the town as a candidate, and, in fact, after his return; but it would be easy to arrive at that knowledge from Mr. Norfolk's mouth; my impression is that he did not take any shares for 12 months after.

3573. He did not take them up?—He did not take shares; he had nothing whatever to do with the company.

3574. I want to know whether it was any part of the arrangement of his becoming Member for Beverley that he should become a shareholder in the company?—The subject was never alluded to.

3575. I will take your word for it, if you say so; is he a shareholder still?—No, he is not.

3576. You would know as well as any one?—I do not look at the share-list; to tell you the truth, I had no very deep interest in it, beyond my own shares.

3577. But he has ceased to be a director?—I believe he has ceased to be a director.

3578. And as a shareholder also?—He never was a director; he has ceased to be a shareholder.

3579. Do you know to whom his shares were transferred?—I cannot swear.

3580. I will not ask you to swear?—That is easily ascertained.

3581. Have you any knowledge whether the secretary, Mr. Norfolk, took them back again?—My impression is, that the other directors, perhaps the secretary and the other directors, took them conjointly, but I will not swear to it, because I do not know it.

3582. That was after he ceased to be Member for Beverley?—After he ceased to be Member for Beverley.

3583. Mr. Kennard has not acquired the honour yet, perhaps, of being a shareholder?—He has never been asked to my knowledge.

3584. He might have done it without being asked?—No, he is not a shareholder.

3585. You have a commercial stake in the Waggon Company; I suppose you will agree with me, and I want to relieve Mr. Crosskill from the imputation which I am sure was cast on him unintentionally. He is not under any covenant not to trade?—I am not aware that he is.

3586. I am sorry that that was said, because, commercially, it has been an annoyance to him?—I made no imputation upon him.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] The truth is that we sent for the deed last night, and in order that I might render myself perfectly accurate, and I was about to say we found that the provision did not exist in the deed.

Witness.] I never saw the deed; I know nothing whatever about it.

3587. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] Nothing can be more handsomely acknowledged; and I say no more about it; it has been a painful matter to have an imputation of that sort, and it really was a mistake altogether; with regard to your connection with Mr. Wreghitt, it has been one of great confidence?—Of great confidence.

3588. To some extent one might use the word unlimited?—I am not ashamed of any transactions that have ever passed between us.

3589. I am not imputing that, but to some extent one might use the word unlimited, because you had never required an account from him?—I looked upon him in the light of a friend; he has been a great friend to me since I have been here; I confided matters to him that I should not have confided to others.

3590. You have never required from him any account of the payment of the monies that you entrusted him with?—He has asked me on one or two occasions to look at the account, but I had such implicit confidence in him, that I did not care to take the trouble to look at the account.

3591. Did you never require him to deliver an account?—Never; I believe I speak the opinion of the whole town, that a more honest man does not live.

3592. I do not ask an opinion, but I will not quarrel with your giving it; you may be well excused for saying that perhaps?—I will volunteer it.

3593. With regard to that large sum of money for the costs of the Quo Warranto that we have heard of, you required no account from him?—Not at all.

3594. May I ask what particular interest you felt in fighting the battles of the town council, Mr. Wreghitt not being one of the disputed candidates?—I did not fight the battles of the town council.

3595. He fought them with your money; why should he?—I am not aware that he ever fought the battles of the town council with my money.

3596. Your money paid for the fight; I will put it in another way?—No; my money partly paid paid for the deficiency, according to what Mr. Wreghitt has told you just now.

3597. When he said he had had some hundreds from you, you think that the costs were more than your contribution?—How do you mean?

3598. He told us he had had 500 l. from you and your colleagues?—I am not aware of that.

3599. I am sorry we should so misunderstand things.

Mr. Baron Martin.] I did not understand him to tell where the money came from; and that is one of the matters which I should think ought to be cleared up.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] He distinctly said that the costs were taxed to him at about 200 l.

Mr. Baron Martin.] He said, "I paid the costs of the Quo Warranto, about 200 l.," and then he said he could not tell what it was.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] He expressly said that the money came from the two sitting Members, and that there was no understanding between the Members and himself that they were to pay anything whatever.

Mr. Baron Martin.] You are right; they paid them in equal proportions.

3600. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] My question will be pertinent if I ask you why should you contribute towards the costs of this municipal litigation?—Because I found that it had been promoted by the Conservative Association of the Borough, and they were my friends; there was no bargain before or after that either of the Members ever should pay a shilling; it was our own act and deed when applied to; we did pay the deficiency, but what it was I do not know; I have no recollection of the sum of 500 l.

3601. You do not, I dare say, remember accurately what sum it was?—I do not.

3602. Do you agree with Mr. Wreghitt, that your ordinary channel of communicating money to him was through the Post Office in bank-notes?—It was through the Post Office in bank-notes; I believe occasionally I sent him cheques on the London and Westminster Bank, or on the Halifax Bank, but on no other; and I do not really recollect that many cheques passed between us; I think that the remittances were generally made in bank-notes.

3603. You have been so many years the Member for Beverley that you will excuse me asking you whether you were acquainted with the constitution of that Pasture-Masters' Board?—Yes, I am.

3604. You knew the nature of its constitution and its objects?—Yes, I think I understood both perfectly.

3605. You also knew of the existence of Walker's gift which was in their control?—I ought to have known it, but to tell you the truth I did not till it was produced here; I may have known it years ago, but it was quite new to me when I saw it here.

3606. You also knew the mode by which freedoms were obtained in this place by servitude or birth?—Yes.

3607. And that it cost a few shillings in either case to be put on the roll?—Yes; it was a sort of charity to take up the freedom of young men, very often.

3608. Did you sanction Wreghitt's exertions in these various matters of the election of the pasture-masters, Walker's gifts and freedoms as a political question?—Did I sanction as a political question, the taking up of freedoms? No; in no sense of the word; he had orders from me to subscribe to every charitable institution in the town, which he has done for 12 years, and amongst others, that of taking up the freedom of very poor people in the town.

3609. That is not a charitable institution, that is an act of individual benevolence?—The benefit is about 8 s. or 10 s. a year, and it is no great consideration except to a very poor man.

3610. I do not call it a charitable institution, it is a piece of individual benevolence; that is the distinction I wish to make?—The distinction is immaterial to me altogether.

3611. You did sanction his taking up of freedoms?—I sanctioned any charitable distribution that he might choose make.

3612. Will you excuse my putting the question pointedly?—I do not evade the question; Yes.

3613. Did you sanction his taking up freedoms?—Yes; not knowing that there was anything wrong in it; I do not think he ever applied to me upon the question, whether he should take up a freedom or not; I think he has never done so.

3614. Then you did not give that your individual sanction?—He had my sanction for everything that he contributed for the benefit of the institutions and charities of the town.

3615. May I take it that you left it to his personal discretion, not troubling yourself to give individual sanctions to his particular acts?—I did.

3616. You did interest yourself in municipal matters, did you not?—Do you mean personally?

3617. Yes, personally, individually?—I was very glad to hear when we had a majority.

3618. In the municipal contests I mean?—Yes, naturally; I thought much of the municipal contests.

3619. Did you not come here at the time of the municipal contests, when no Parliamentary contests were thought of?—I do not think I was here at the time; I used to come generally, on the 9th of November, to the dinner given generally by the out-going mayor or the incoming mayor, one of the two; I have made a point of coming for the last 12 years to attend those dinners.

3620. I believe that you have assisted in giving your presence to processions and those sort of things, dinners and so forth?—I have generally walked to the Town-hall with the mayor in procession; it has been the practice of the Member always to do so.

3621. You mean it has been your practice since you have been the Borough Member?—I have seen Mr. Sykes, and I have seen Mr. Walker do the same.

3622. Your colleagues you mean?—Yes; they are the only opportunities I have had.

3623. You never knew it done in this town until you became Member?—How could I? But I think it more than probable that it was.

3624. I am not asking about probability; we have heard that Mr. Wreghitt was chairman of the Conservative Association; did you ever hear of

Sir H.

Bart., M.P.

Sir H.
Edwards,
Bart., M.P.

11 March
1869.

Mr. Vickers having been elected by the members?—I have heard about it more to-day than I ever heard of it before.

3625. That does not quite answer my question, because you might have heard something or nothing before?—I believe he was for six months perhaps; I do not know how long.

3626. Are you prepared to say that no communication was made to you on that subject by the secretary?—I am; none whatever.

3627. And no opinion of yours upon the subject communicated by you to anyone?—No; as far as my recollection serves, none whatever.

3628. One more thing only, that I may not misunderstand you; do I understand you to say that until this petition was lodged against you, you had never had reason to suspect this borough of corruption at the Parliamentary elections?—I have never contributed anything, if you mean that, to corrupt the borough.

3629. That is not my question?—I had no means of knowing that whatever.

3630. That was not my question?—Do you want to know what I think, because that is not evidence.

3631. I do, if you will tell me?—I can state nothing but what I know to be a fact, and I do not know it to be a fact that any corruption has prevailed on the part of the Conservative party of Beverley since I have been its Member.

3632. You know I am asking you this because it was said yesterday, Sir Henry never bribed, Sir Henry never treated, Sir Henry never used undue influence, Sir Henry never knew of those things, and never had had any occasion to believe they existed?—I will swear to the best of my belief that all that is correct.

3633. Did you then never have occasion to believe that such things existed at the Parliamentary elections?—No.

3634. Do you mean that?—As far as I myself go (that is the way you put the question), I did not know of any corruption whatever that has taken place.

3635. I do not ask you if you knew it; do you mean to say that you have had no reason to believe that Parliamentary corruption existed in this borough during the time that you have been its Member?—I did not know of anything of the kind.

3636. Have you never been charged personally with it?—There was a petition some time ago, and that petition failed.

3637. That might have been an injustice to you; have you never been charged personally with it?—Not to my knowledge; do you mean at the time of the petition?

3638. I am not talking of petitions at all?—I have never been charged to my knowledge; never.

3639. You have never been charged to your knowledge. I will ask you this: did you not in 1859, through your solicitors, Messrs. Baxter, Rose & Norton, bring an action against the proprietor, or editor, or printer of the "Beverley Recorder," for having charged you with Parliamentary corruption at that recent election?—That was done; I forget whether I was the instigator or not; I cannot recollect.

3640. You were the plaintiff, Sir Henry?—I may have been.

3641. You do not know whether you allowed the action or not?—I did not say that I did not; I said that I did not know whether I brought the action or not; now that you assure me that I did, I do not deny it.

3642. But had you forgotten it?—It was not fresh in my memory; my subpoena told me that I should be answerable for everything that occurred for the last five years, and I came supplied with the information that I could give you.

3643. You have told me that you have never been charged with this thing in any way; my question was, did not you bring an action against the editor of the paper for charging you with that?—Very likely; I think I did.

3644. Do not you know you did?—I think I did; yes, I did.

3645. Do you doubt it?—I did.

3646. Though Messrs. Baxter, Rose & Norton are now representing you?—Yes, I think I did.

3647. Do not you know you did?—I think I did, and I believe I was the plaintiff.

3648. Do you doubt it?—No, I do not doubt it; I do not want to prevaricate in any way whatever; I merely want to tell you what is the truth.

3649. I do not doubt it; if you mean me to think that you are uncertain whether you brought such an action, say so; but if you know that you did bring it, say so; did you bring it?—I suppose I did.

3650. Is it merely supposition?—I cannot recollect positively about it, but I believe I did.

3651. Can you tell me what became of the action?—It is so long ago that I do not remember the particulars with respect to it.

3652. These things may not impress some minds; but you know it is a charge on your personal character, and you bring an action to vindicate your character; cannot you tell me what became of the action?—I believe it was given against me, but I have no recollection of it whatever.

3653. Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] No, it was not?—I have no recollection of it whatever, never having been questioned upon the point.

3654. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] I do not know what you may mean by being given against you, but I will remind you of the result of the action. Do you know that your solicitors, having required the particulars of the charges that were made against you by the defendant, he supplied the particulars and set out all the cases of bribery and the names of the bribers?—No, I do not know anything of the kind.

3655. You did not know it?—I do not recollect it. If you had mentioned it in my subpoena I should have been prepared to answer it, but I have no recollection of it.

3656. Do you know that after all the particulars were delivered for your information the action was withdrawn, and you paid all the costs?—Very likely.

3657. And the action was brought to justify your character, was it not?—Yes, I suppose so.

Re-examined by Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.

3658. You say that there was a letter in one of the newspapers, and you put the matter into the hands of your attornies. I suppose you left them to take the proper course?—Yes.

3659. After you had done that, was the election petition tried?—Yes.

3660. And were the allegations of bribery then gone into?—Yes.

3661. And

3661. And did you retain your seat?—I did.

3662. And after that, as far as you know, the action was not gone on with?—Exactly.

3663. There is just a question. My learned friend has asked you a good deal about this company of which you are chairman. Is it a business of any importance to yourself, or was I correct in the statement I made as to the reasons for your taking it?—You were perfectly correct. I understood that it was the greatest calamity that could befall the town if the bank sold or destroyed the works; that a great number of poor people would have lost their work, and would have had to leave the town, and that an immense number of houses would be tenantless, and I took it up as a matter of charity simply, and a grateful return for all the kindness that I had received in Beverley.

3664. So far as the pecuniary object went, it was no object?—None at all; it was no matter to me at all.

3665. The name of a person has been mentioned, Mr. Norfolk; did he canvass with you, or was he in any way whatever an agent of yours?—He has never been with me at all during the whole election. What was stated to be a fact here yesterday was untrue; he was never near me, to my knowledge. I never saw him during the whole election canvassing.

3666. There is one matter that I ought to have asked in relation to Whitton; was Whitton a person who was an agent of yours in any way, or who acted with you?—None whatever. I remember on one or two occasions—

3667. Mr. Baron Martin.] I do not think, brother Ballantine, you need trouble yourself about that. (To the Witness.) You came here, as I understand, upon the 3rd of November?—I did.

3668. And I understand you to state that no one ever communicated to you what had taken place the day before?—Perhaps it may have been mentioned to me.

3669. That is the very thing I want to know. Was it mentioned to you; did you learn the corruption that had taken place in respect of the municipal election?—No; it was not communicated to me.

3670. It was never communicated to you during the fortnight that you were in the place?—No.

[The Witness withdrew.

Captain EDMUND HEGAN KENNARD, M.P. sworn; Examined by Mr. Giffard.

3671. WE hear that you are a comparative stranger to this borough?—Yes, I am.

3672. Is it the fact that you were first applied to formally, in the month of August, to stand; that you consented in September, and came here to conduct your canvass on the 3rd of November?—That is correct.

3673. We have heard from Sir Henry Edwards that you and he had an understanding that you were to divide the expenses, whatever they should turn out to be?—Yes.

3674. What have you spent in the course of the contest, in round numbers?—£. 300.

3675. With your knowledge or sanction, was one farthing of that spent in any illegal manner?—Not to my knowledge, certainly.

3676. And had you any reason to believe that it was spent in an illegal manner?—No.

3677. Speaking for yourself, I put it in the broadest way, is there any claim upon you, or do you believe there is any claim upon you, for anything done at the election, either directly or indirectly, which is not returned in your expenses?—I do not believe there is the slightest claim, and I do not know of any claim; I do not believe that there is.

3678. May I take it, that in the event of any claim being made you would not pay any money or recognise anything that may have been done?—I should recognise no claim whatever.

3679. So far as you were concerned, did you desire the election should be purely and properly conducted?—I desired it, and stated it both in public and in private.

3680. Did you so direct your solicitor?—I did.

3681. And did you tell him what you have now told us, that you would not recognise any illegal or improper expenditure?—I did.

Cross-examined by Mr. Serjeant Sargood.

3682. Who proposed and seconded you, do you remember?—I think it was Alderman Arden 90.

proposed me and Alderman Cussons seconded me.

3683. You were comparatively a stranger to Beverley before the last election, I daresay?—Yes.

3684. I may assume, from what Sir Henry has told us, that you came in rather under his wing than otherwise?—I do not consider that I was under his wing; we coalesced, if that is what you mean.

3685. You committed your interests to his solicitor and his agent?—We employed the same solicitor and the same agent.

3686. A gentleman who was well known, and in short was employed by him?—Yes.

3687. Have you not had any occasion to have any personal communications with Mr. Wreghitt, or have you begun them since the election of 1868?—I have corresponded with Mr. Wreghitt.

3688. You are not in the position with him that Sir Henry Edwards is?—Yes; I acknowledge that I am.

3689. Have you been in the habit of sending him money and never requiring an account; that has not been for many months, I know?—Yes, I have sent him money.

3690. Then you have begun that system?—Yes, I have begun that system.

3691. No very great results could have come from this yet; you have not had any account, I presume?—I have seen a memorandum of an account, but—

3692. But what?—That is all I wish to say.

3693. I suppose you confided your case to those who have always had Sir Henry's interest in their hands, and trusted that whatever was done would be properly done?—Yes.

3694. As we heard yesterday, whatever may be the result, adverse or otherwise, you, like other men, are prepared to share?—Yes.

Re-examined by Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.

3695. Is there anything within your knowledge, from from your communications with Sir Henry, or in any other way, that leads you to believe that there is any sum of money due beyond that which you have already expended?—No.

3696. Mr. Baron Martin.] I will ask you the same question as I asked Sir Henry. As I understand, you came to the town upon the 3rd of November?—Yes.

3697. Did you ever hear, during the fortnight that you were here before the election, of this corruption which took place in respect of the municipal election?—I heard of certain irregular proceedings, but no corruption that I know of. I knew there had been a severe contest, and I concluded that a certain amount of money had been spent, but I knew nothing of it.

3698. Did you hear of it; were you told of it?—I might have been told of it.

3699. I should think you might recollect whether you had been told of it or not?—People talked of the contest, and I knew there had been a very severe contest. I cannot remember anybody in particular, or any facts coming out, but I knew that there had been a very severe contest the day before.

[The Witness withdrew.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine stated that that concluded the case for the respondents, and was heard to sum up the evidence in their behalf.

Mr. Serjeant Sargood was heard to address the court in reply on behalf of the petitioners.

Mr. Baron Martin, after going through the facts of the case, stated that he should report to the Speaker that, in his opinion, this election was void at common law; that a very large number of the electors of this borough were bribed and did sell their votes under the influence of bribery; that the evidence which had been given before him did not show that the corrupt practices which had been proved to exist had been committed with the knowledge and consent of the candidates at the election; that he should make special report that there was reason to believe that corrupt practices had extensively prevailed in the election; that he should also make a special report with respect to matters arising in the course of the trial, and should state substantially the evidence which had been laid before him, and it would be for the House of Commons and the Attorney-General to deal with it in such manner as they might think fit; and also that the costs would follow the event.

MINUTES OF EVIDENCE - - - - - p. 1

R E P O R T.

THE PARLIAMENTARY ELECTIONS ACT, 1868.

COURT for the Trial of an Election Petition for the Borough of Bewdley, in the County of Worcester, between Charles Sturge and John Baldwin, Petitioners, and Sir Richard Attwood Glass, Respondent.

To the Right Honourable the Speaker.

Sir,

Bewdley, 25 January 1869.

IN compliance with the directions of "The Parliamentary Elections Act, 1868," I hereby certify that the above-named Sir Richard Attwood Glass was not duly elected, and that the above election was void.

And I report that it was not proved that any corrupt practice had been committed with the knowledge and consent of any Candidate at the above election.

That Robert Acton Pardoe, Attorney-at-Law, an Agent for Sir Richard Attwood Glass, and George Baker Burmish, also an Agent for Sir Richard Attwood Glass, were guilty of corrupt treating at the said election.

That Stephen Fort accepted a bribe of 10*s.* from one John Taylor, to induce him to vote for Sir Richard Attwood Glass, and afterwards voted against him.

That James Hunt was bribed to vote for Sir Richard Attwood Glass, by 5*l.* advanced to him as a loan by Christopher Pountney.

That Abram John Hamer was bribed to vote for Sir Richard Attwood Glass, but it was not proved who gave the bribe, or how much it was.

That Isaac Leverton, Herbert Burton, and Richard Millington, being at Bristol, were induced to come to Bewdley to vote for Sir Richard Attwood Glass by having their expenses from Bristol and back paid them, and would not have voted had this not been done. That it was not proved who advanced the money; nor did it appear that the money paid them, though it was an illegal payment, exceeded the reasonable expenses, so as to be a cloak for what in popular language would be called bribery.

That it was proved that corrupt treating, by opening public-houses, did extensively prevail at the election.

No evidence was given of any treating on behalf of Mr. Lloyd, the unsuccessful candidate.

That it was proved that a practice extensively prevailed on both sides of employing and paying a large number of persons as what was called "watchers," who rendered no service of any value in return. That this practice appears to have been kept up at Bewdley because it was formerly the practice at old elections, and is very objectionable for the same reasons as those which have induced the Legislature to prohibit treating.

There is reason to believe that the payments were made to influence voters connected with the watchers, and also that voters themselves were so employed, though no proof was given of any voter having been actually paid.

There was no reason to believe that direct bribery extensively prevailed at the election.

I have, &c.

COLIN BLACKBURN,

Judge of the said Court.

MINUTES OF EVIDENCE

TAKEN before The Honourable Mr. Justice Blackburn, on the TRIAL of the ELECTION PETITION for the BOROUGH of BEWDLEY and STOURPORT, at the Town Hall, Bewdley.

Tuesday, 19th January 1869.

1869.

Mr. Justice Blackburn desired that, in order to save time, the next 10 or 12 witnesses who were to be called, should be collected in an adjoining room, and their places supplied as they were removed for examination.

STEPHEN FORT, sworn; Examined by the Honourable Chandos Leigh.

S. Fort.

11. ARE you a Shoemaker in Stourport?—Yes.

12. On Monday, the 9th of November, did you go to the shop of Mr. Thomas Radford, in High-street, Stourport?—Yes.

13. Did you go there of your own accord, or were you sent for?—Mr. Radford sent for me to the shop where I was working.

14. When you got to Mr. Radford's shop, did he meet you at the door?—He met me at the doorway.

15. Did you go in with him?—I went from there to the office of Mr. Crowther, with Mr. Radford; he said he wanted me to go there to have an interview with Mr. Glass.

16. After that, did you go into Mr. Radford's shop?—Not into Mr. Radford's shop; into the office of Mr. Crowther.

17. Whom did you see there?—Mr. Radford, Mr. Joseph Rogers and Mr. Glass.

18. By "Mr. Glass", I suppose you mean Sir Richard Glass, the candidate?—Yes.

19. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] You saw Mr. Radford; whom else did you see?—Mr. Joseph Rogers.

20. Mr. Chandos Leigh.] And who else?—And Sir Richard Glass.

21. Did any conversation take place there?—Mr. Glass solicited me for my vote, and spoke on different points of politics respecting of it; he solicited my vote; then I says to him, "Well, my wife has persuaded me not to have anything at all to do with it; for I have been putting money by for her and me to go down and see my relatives"; and Sir Richard, in reply, says, "I can have nothing to do with that;" but Mr. Radford and Mr. Rogers says, "We will make that all right."

22. Was that all that took place there?—Yes, there, that morning.

23. You said that you wanted to see your relatives; where were your relatives living?—In Wiltshire; three miles from the city of Salisbury.

24. Did you say anything, or make any promise about your vote?—I promised my vote to Sir Richard.

25. At that time?—At that time.

26. Did you then go home?—I was going up the back alley, and as I was going towards my work, I was called by a man of the name of Thomas.

27. Who is Thomas?—John Thomas; he keeps the "Fruiterer's Arms."

28. Where?—In High-street.

Mr. Hardinge Giffard objected to the evidence on the ground that this case was not included in the particulars furnished to the Respondent.

Mr. Justice Blackburn stated that the only list he had before him was the list furnished six days before the trial, and that the name of the witness did not appear in that list; but it might appear in particulars of bribery given three days before the trial.

Mr. Hardinge Giffard stated that Mr. Justice Willes had made an order that as a scrutiny was prayed for in this case, the list six days before the trial would be sufficient, and handed to his Lordship the endorsement of Mr. Justice Willes to that effect.

Mr. Justice Blackburn observed that, particulars having been furnished to commence with a case of which no notice had been given, appeared to be a course tending to take the other side by surprise.

Mr. Fitzjames Stephen stated that he opened this case specially, and that he regretted that it was not included in the particulars; but he could account for its not being in the scrutiny list, since the witness voted not for the Respondent, but for the Petitioner.

Mr. Justice Blackburn stated that it appeared to him to be fair and right that this case should be stopped now, in order to give the Counsel for the Respondent opportunity for inquiring into it; and that it should stand over until the cases of which notice had been given had been gone through.

Mr. Fitzjames Stephen stated that he would proceed with the evidence of treating.

[The Witness withdrew.]

THOMAS WOOD, sworn; Examined by Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.

T. Wood.

29. I BELIEVE you live in Bewdley?—Yes.

30. And you are not a voter?—No.

31. Where do you lodge?—At Mr. Griffin's, at the "Fox."

32. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] Is that a public-house?—Yes.

33. Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.] What is your business?—I am a butcher's slaughterman.

34. Did you act as a watcher during this election?—Yes.

35. What had you to do as a watcher?—I was employed to watch the voters, and see anything that they did.

36. What time used you to go about your business, watching?—I was on, night and day, except only to have a little victuals now and then.

37. What

37. What time in the morning did you go on?—We never went off; only just to have a little breakfast.

38. What time did you begin?—We used to come for breakfast at something like five or six o'clock.

39. What time did you go off at night?—We used to have our supper brought to us, and then stop there.

40. What time was your supper brought to you?—Sometimes at eight o'clock, and sometimes nine.

41. What were you doing all day between five or six in the morning and eight or nine in the evening?—We were put in a certain place to watch to see if there was any voters took off.

42. Used you to watch at night, too?—Yes.

43. How long then did you watch at night?—Five nights.

44. From what time at night till what time in the morning did you watch?—From about eight or nine o'clock at night till we were to go to breakfast in the morning; then we used to go off and come on again.

45. How many days did you watch?—Five days.

46. Five days and five nights?—Yes.

47. Who engaged you?—Mr. Christopher Pountney.

Mr. Justice Blackburn observed that it would be necessary to ask the witness how he knew that the persons, whose names had been mentioned, were employed as watchers.

196. Mr. Fitzjames Stephen (to the Witness).] What did you see those men you have mentioned doing?—I saw them on different beats watching; the same as I was doing.

197. What were they doing; walking about, or what?—Yes; walking about.

198. Where they alone or in parties?—They were in general three or four together.

199. Did you speak to them about what they were doing, and what you were doing?—No; I had not any cause, because I knew what they were doing.

Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.] I propose to identify these persons with voters on the register.

Mr. Justice Blackburn.] I do not suppose there will be any difficulty about any person who you say was a voter, being a voter.

Mr. Hardinge Giffard.] I apprehend not, my Lord; I suppose identity of names, prima facie suffices; if any difficulty should arise, I will suggest it.

Mr. Justice Blackburn.] Certainly, that will be quite right. (To Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.) I do not anticipate that there will be any dispute that a particular man you have named just now is a voter, nor any dispute as to which way he voted, if he voted at all, but probably there will be considerable dispute as to whether or not he was a watcher; that is what you should direct your attention to.

200. Mr. Fitzjames Stephen (to the Witness).] You say, with respect to those men you saw, that you saw them walking about the street in parties?—Yes.

201. You said something about having your supper?—Yes, at Mr. Acton Pardoe's I had supper.

202. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] Did you go into Mr. Acton Pardoe's and there have your supper, or did somebody bring you something out of Mr. Acton Pardoe's?—We had it on the lawn.

203. Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.] I mean when you were on duty watching, where used you to get your supper?—We used to get it on the beats; my parents would bring it to me and I would eat it on the beat.

204. Were you ever paid for watching?—Yes, I was paid 8 s. and 6 s.

205. Eight shillings at one time?—Yes, and 6 s.

206. Where were you paid the 8 s.?—At Mr. Osman Pountney's.

207. Is that the "Malt Shovel"?—Yes.

208. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] Where were you paid the 8 s. and the 6 s., and by whom?—I could not say who it was paid me at Mr. Osman Pountney's; he was with a false wig on and a mask on his face.

209. Mr. Fitzjames Stephens.] Were you paid at Mr. Osman Pountney's by a man with a false wig on and a mask on his face?—Yes, the 8 s.

210. Was that at the "Malt Shovel"?—Yes.

211. When was it that you were paid?—I could not say what day it was on, not the day of the month; I think it was on a Friday night.

212. Was it after the election or before?—It was after the election.

213. Long after or not?—A few days after the election, not long.

214. When you went to this Mr. Osman Pountney's to be paid, were you alone or were there other men who had been watching there too?—They were all up there, the men who had been watching.

215. Where was this man with the false wig on, was he in the room where you all were, or in some other place?—No, we were called up one at a time, and he was up in the room standing between two other men.

216. You say the man had got on a false wig, what else had he got on?—A mask on his face.

217. Who were the other two men who were with him in the room?—One was William Jackson; I do not know who the other man was.

218. Who let you into the room where the man with the mask was?—Mr. Osman Pountney.

219. You got 8 s.?—Yes.

220. Did you make any objection to the 8 s.?—Yes.

221. Did

221. Did you think it was not enough?—Yes.

222. Where did you go the day after that?—Down to Mr. Acton Pardoe's office.

223. Did anybody else go with you?—Yes, they all went with me.

224. A lot of you went?—Yes.

225. What did you do when you got to Mr. Acton Pardoe's office?—We said we wanted more money; we had our names put down for some more money.

226. Who put your names down?—Mr. Bur-nish.

227. You have told us about the 8 s., when did you get the 6 s.?—At the beginning of the week after we had the 8 s.; one day at the beginning of the week.

228. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] In the beginning of the next week?—Yes; I think it was on the Tuesday.

229. Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.] You think it was the following Tuesday after the Friday?—Yes.

230. Then you got 6 s.?—Yes.

231. Who gave you the 6 s.?—William Jack-son.

Mr. Fitzjames Stephen stated that he was informed that Mr. Osman Pountney, whose name had just been mentioned, was close behind the witness, and submitted that the usual practice should be followed in this case of ordering all who had been subpoenaed as witnesses, with the usual exceptions of agents and such persons, to leave the court.

Mr. Hardinge Giffard concurred.

Mr. Justice Blackburn gave order accordingly, and the witnesses, with a few permitted exceptions, withdrew.

232. Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.] You told us just now about Mr. Pardoe's lawn; do you recollect the night that Sir Richard Glass came down to Bewdley?—Yes.

233. When was that?—I think it was on the 6th of July.

234. Did you go that night to Mr. Pardoe's house?—Yes.

235. Did you go of yourself, or did anybody tell you to go?—Mr. Fisher, the police officer, told me to go.

236. What time did you get there?—I think it was about half-past eight or a quarter to nine, or something like that.

237. Were you let in?—Yes.

238. Were you asked any questions before you were let in?—No; we were asked two or three questions after we got inside the door.

239. What were you asked?—Mrs. Pardoe met us and asked if we were for Mr. Glass or for Mr. Lloyd.

240. What did you say to that?—I told her I could not tell; I did not know what I went down there for.

241. Was anything asked about how you came to come?—No.

242. After you had been asked that, what did you do?—I went on to the lawn.

243. How many people were there on the lawn?—There was a good few people on the lawn, I could not say how many.

244. What else was there on the lawn besides people?—There was a table and a cloth laid, and the victuals put upon it.

9.

245. What kind of victuals?—Some bread and cheese and onions.

246. Was there anything to drink?—Yes.

247. What?—Beer.

248. Who ate the supper, did you get any?—Yes.

249. And other people who were there?—Yes; they all had some, I believe, that were there.

250. Do you know a man named Richard Danby?—Yes.

251. Did he come there?—Yes.

252. What did he do?—He was at the top of the table.

253. How many people were there at the table, about, do you think?—There might have been 20; I did not take the trouble to count.

254. You say there might have been about 20?—Yes.

255. Did Mr. Richard Danby make a speech?—Yes.

256. I suppose it would have been in favour of Sir Richard Glass?—Yes.

257. James Fisher; was he there?—Yes.

258. Is he the policeman you spoke of?—Yes.

259. Thomas Poole; was he there?—Yes.

260. Did you see a man who lives in Dog-lane?—Thomas Poole his name is.

261. Where does he live, do you know?—In Dog-lane, down against the waterside.

262. John Gittens?—Yes.

263. Joseph Field?—Yes.

264. Edwin Pountney?—No, I did not see him there.

265. Walter Payne, did you see him?—Yes.

266. John Clark, did you see him?—Yes.

267. And Edward Field?—Yes.

268. Daniel Gardiner?—Yes.

269. John Oaks?—No, I do not think I saw him there.

270. You do not remember Oaks?—No.

271. Joseph Rogers?—Yes.

272. Henry Moul?—Yes.

273. Were there other persons besides those you have mentioned?—Yes, there was a good few there; I could not remember all the names.

274. But were there others besides those you have mentioned?—Oh, yes, a great many more.

275. Do you recollect Sir Richard Glass coming?—Yes.

276. What time did he come?—I could not say, somewhere near 10, as near as I can guess.

277. You got a good supper, I suppose?—Yes.

278. And how much beer did you get?—Well, we had all of us as much as we liked.

279. Then Sir Richard Glass came; whose carriage did he come in, do you know?—I believe it was Mr. Shaw's.

280. What time did he get there?—As near as I can guess, I think about 10 o'clock.

281. Mr. Giles Shaw lives at Winterdine, I think?—Yes.

282. When Sir Richard Glass arrived, what did the persons present do?—They gave him a good hurrah.

283. Was there any speech-making?—No, there was not.

284. Was there any cannon fired?—Yes.

285. And other things besides that, do you recollect?—No, I came away when I saw that.

286. Where did you go when you came away?—I came down by the "Peacock," and stood there a good bit.

287. Did any of the others who were with you, come to the "Peacock"?—Yes, there was a great many men came down there.

288. Did you go into the "Peacock"?—No, I did not go in.

289. Did you go home after that?—No, I did not go home for a good bit after that.

290. Where did you go?—I walked along the streets, and stood in the street in several places.

291. Do you know Dr. Webster?—Yes.

292. Did you see him that night?—Yes.

293. Did you see a man of the name of Joseph Field; did you see anybody with Dr. Webster?—Yes.

294. Whom did you see with Dr. Webster?—I saw Joseph Field and Joseph Rogers.

295. Where did you see them go?—Into the "Packhorse."

296. Who keeps the "Packhorse"?—Mr. Cooke.

297. Is that Abel Cooke?—Yes.

298. Mr. Abel Cooke, of Lode-street?—Yes.

299. Do you recollect the 27th of October last?—Yes.

300. Did you go to any public-house that evening?—I could not say particularly; I forget whether I did go to a public-house on that night or not.

301. Do you know the "Rifleman" public-house?—Yes.

302. Did you go to the "Rifleman" on any night in October?—Yes; I was at the "Rifleman," at the free and easy.

303. Tell us about the free and easy at the "Rifleman"; whom did you see; first of all where was this free and easy?—At Mr. Elcock's public-house.

304. Is that Mr. Thomas Elcock?—Yes.

305. Of Lax lane?—No; of Wribbenhall.

306. Where was the free and easy held?—In the house.

307. In which room?—There was some in the kitchen and some in the parlour.

308. Tell us some of the people whom you saw at the free and easy?—I saw James Grove there.

309. Did you see a man called Joseph Cooke there?—Yes.

310. Abel Danby?—Yes.

311. John Parsons?—Yes.

Mr. Hardinge Giffard.] I think my learned friend had better not read the names to the witness now.

Mr. Justice Blackburn.] Certainly; see what his memory supplies without assistance.

312. Mr. Fitzjames Stephen (to the Witness).] Just think of the people whom you saw there, and give us a few names?—I saw Proverts; he was there.

313. Who else?—John Parminter.

314. Tell us some more; take your time and think?—I saw Mr. Burnish there.

315. Go on; did you see anybody else; think about it?—Abel Danby was there, and Joseph Mitcham; John Lancett was there.

316. Do you mean Thomas; what Lancett did you say?—John Lancett.

317. Any more?—Edward Field.

318. Well?—William Payne; I do not think I can remember any more; I saw a great many there, but I do not think I can remember any more names.

319. Can you tell us whether any of those whom you saw, were voters or not?—I do not know, I am sure, whether they were or not.

320. Did you see any landlords of other public-houses there besides Mr. Elcock?—Yes; there was Mr. William Mountford of the "Rising Sun"; he was there.

321. Just think if there were any more landlords; that gives you a little help?—No; I do not remember any more now.

322. What were those people whom you saw there doing?—They were having some beer, the same as the rest that was there.

323. What was the company in general doing?—They were all having beer; that was all I saw, and tobacco.

324. Where did the beer and tobacco come from?—The beer came out of the cellar; I do not know where the tobacco came from.

325. I suppose it did; I mean how did it come; did each man call for what he wanted, or were there jugs, or what?—No; it was brought in gallon cans.

326. Did the company help themselves?—Yes; as soon as it was put on the table.

327. How about the tobacco; how was that brought?—It was brought on plates.

328. Were these plates put on the table?—Yes.

329. Did the company help themselves to tobacco?—Yes; they all helped themselves as far as it went.

330. Did the liquor last all through, or did it run short at any time during the evening?—I believe the tap was stopped; then we all came out again.

331. Tell me about the tap being stopped; did anybody say anything before it was stopped? No; not as I remember.

332. You mentioned about Mr. Burnish being there?—Yes; Mr. Burnish was there.

333. Did you hear him say anything?—No; I did not hear him say anything; not as I remember at present.

334. Just consider whether you heard Mr. Burnish say, or saw him do anything there; now recollect?—No; I do not remember as I saw him do anything there.

335. Just try and remember?—No, I do not remember.

336. Was Mr. Burnish in the room all the time?—Sometimes he was in the room, and sometimes he was in the kitchen.

337. You told me the tap was stopped; what do you mean by that; how was it stopped?—Not for any more beer to come in.

338. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] I understand the statement that the tap was stopped to mean that no more beer was supplied?—Yes, that was it.

339. Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.] Did you hear any more orders given then?—No, not until James Grove went in, and then we had some more beer.

340. Where did James Grove go?—I believe he went into the parlour.

341. Did you go into the parlour at any time?—No, I was in the kitchen.

342. Did you see who was in the parlour?—No, I did not see who was in the parlour.

343. Did you look into the parlour at any time?—No.

344. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] Let me see that I understand what you said; I think you said you had some more liquor after you went in?—Yes.

T. Wood.
1869.

345. I understand that when the tap was stopped you and the other company went out?—Not all of them.

346. The bulk of them?—Yes.

347. And then, after that, you and Grove went in, and you then had some further liquor?—Yes.

348. Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.] Did you see where Groves went?—I saw him go along the passage that leads to the parlour.

349. Did you see him come back?—No, I did not see him come back; I went into the kitchen.

350. You were in the kitchen?—Yes.

351. But you saw him go from the kitchen towards the parlour, I understand?—Yes.

352. Did you see him in the kitchen again that evening?—Yes; he was in the kitchen talking to me again.

353. Was that before the tap was stopped?—No, that was after the tap was stopped.

354. Was that before the company went away?—No; there was some of the company there, and some gone.

355. Did any more liquor come after Grove came back?—No, there did not any more liquor come after Grove came back again.

356. Consider this again; I ask my question again; did you hear Mr. Burnish say anything that evening?—No, I do not remember his saying anything.

357. Just consider?—I do not remember anything he said—not at present.

358. Do you remember anything that he did?—No, not now, I do not.

359. It seems as if at some time you had remembered, you know. You have given an account about this matter, have you not; you have spoken to young Mr. Morgan about it, or Mr. Glaisyer?—Yes.

360. Did you tell Mr. Glaisyer what you had seen and heard?—Yes; I told him a bit that I had seen here; I do not remember all I said.

361. Did you see him write down what you said?—Yes.

362. Had he got this book in his hand, writing it down (holding up a book)?—Yes, he had.

Mr. Justice Blackburn stated that the rule was, that a previous statement of a witness differing from his statement on oath in court, might be proved to shake his evidence, but that it could not be used as evidence in chief.

Mr. Fitzjames Stephen submitted that a rule of procedure of this kind was at the discretion of the judge, and that having regard to the peculiar circumstances under which evidence in election cases was given, he might be permitted to prove in this instance the former statement of the witness on a most material point.

Mr. Justice Blackburn stated that the previous statement of the witness could not be made evidence in chief; but that he would allow a leading question to be put to the witness upon the subject.

363. Mr. Fitzjames Stephen (to the Witness).] Did you not hear Mr. Burnish say that the tap must be stopped?—I almost forget now.

364. I ask you again, did you not hear Mr. Burnish say that the tap must be stopped. Now, recollect. You may very easily forget, having said so many things?—I have forgot that; I am sure I have.

9.

365. Just consider whether you did not hear Mr. Burnish say that the tap must be stopped. You said that you almost forgot just now. Now see if you cannot almost remember one way or the other?—No; I cannot exactly think of it now.

366. You cannot exactly; just think?—I cannot now.

Mr. Justice Blackburn intimated that it was of no use pressing the witness further on this point.

367. Mr. Fitzjames Stephen (to the Witness).] Never mind Mr. Burnish at present; did you pay anything for this?—No.

368. Did you see anybody else pay?—No.

369. Who gave the orders for the beer that you know of, or did it come without orders?—I could say who gave the orders for the beer. When we went into the house, they brought some beer into the kitchen, and we drank it in the kitchen.

370. But who gave the orders, you do not know?—I do not know who gave the orders.

371. Do you know the "Old Packhorse" public-house, that is Abel Cooke's?—Yes.

372. Do you remember being there one night?—Yes.

373. What night was it when you were there?—I could not say what night it was.

374. Was it after the "Rifleman" occasion or before?—I forget now whether it was after the "Rifleman," or before the "Rifleman."

375. What month was it in; how long before the election; about, you know; I do not want it exactly?—I should think, as near as I can guess, it was nearly three weeks or a month before the election.

376. Were there many people at the "Packhorse"?—Yes, there were a good many there.

377. Can you give me some of the names of the people you saw at the "Packhorse"?—Yes; I can give you some of those names. I saw Mr. Shrimpton.

378. Who else?—I saw Mr. Burnish there, and Christopher Pountney I saw there.

379. Which of the Pountneys?—Christopher Pountney.

380. Who else did you see there?—I saw Proverts there.

381. Anybody else?—Yes; I saw William Burnish there.

382. Any one else besides them?—There was John Parmenter there, and Charles Parmenter; and Samuel Carter was there; James Pargeter was there.

383. Who else?—Thomas Bond was there.

384. Was there any one else?—Yes, I believe I saw Mr. Landon go through the place.

385. Mr. Landon the mayor?—Yes.

386. Mr. Hardinge Giffard.] The present mayor; he was not the mayor then?—Yes.

387. Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.] Anybody else?—Not as I can remember the names of, not now; there were a great many there.

388. What was going on there?—They were having beer and tobacco.

389. How was the beer and tobacco brought; was it in the same way as at the other place?—It was brought in cans, the beer was.

390. Can you give me an idea of how much was brought?—I should say there was about five or six gallons came into the kitchen, as near as I can guess.

A 4

391. And

T. Wood.
—
20 January
1869.

391. And tobacco?—Yes, there was some tobacco brought in.

392. Did the people help themselves to this?—Yes.

393. Did they pay for it?—No.

394. When did the drink stop there?—I do not know, I am sure, what time it was when it was stopped; they came in and said that the tap was stopped.

395. Who came in and said that?—A man of the name of John Powning.

396. John Pountney, do you say?

397. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] Just say that name again?—I do not know whether it is Pountney or Powning.

398. Is he one of the people belonging to the house?—He is a man that works there.

399. Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.] Will you say his name again?—I would not say whether it is Powning or Pountney. I do not know which it is of those two.

400. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] Was he one of the people belonging to the house, or a person who did not belong to the house, that is the important thing?—He is a person who belongs to the house, and spends very nearly all his time there, I believe.

401. Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.] How many rooms were there there that the company was in?—Three.

402. Which rooms were they?—The bar-room, the parlour, and the kitchen.

403. Did you see who was in the parlour?—No, I did not see who was in the parlour in particular; I did not go into the parlour to see who was there.

404. Did you see who was in the bar?—No, I was not in the bar; I was only in the kitchen.

405. Do you recollect about the same time going to a place called the “Rising Sun”?—Yes; that is at Catchem’s End.

406. William Mountford’s?—Yes.

407. Were there many people there?—No; there was not a great many people there.

408. Do you remember any of them?—Yes, there was Proverts, and John Parmenter, and James Pargeter.

409. Any one else?—I saw Mr. Glass come there.

410. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] Mr. who?—Sir Richard Glass.

411. Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.] Do you know a man named Thomas Pardoe, a shoemaker, or a barber rather; was he there?—Yes, I believe he was.

412. Mr. Hardinge Giffard.] You believe he was; did you see him?—Yes, I did.

413. Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.] You say you saw Sir Richard Glass there?—Yes.

414. What time did he come?—I could not say what time of night it was.

415. It was night, was it?—Yes.

416. There was beer and tobacco there at the “Rising Sun” on the table?—Yes.

417. Was it on the same day as at the two other public-houses you have described?—Yes.

418. Did the people pay for it?—No.

419. You saw Sir Richard Glass; you say he came there?—Yes.

420. Where did he go when he came, what room was he in?—I do not know particularly which room he came in; I saw him in the passage.

421. What room were you in?—I was in the kitchen.

422. Did he come into the kitchen?—No, I do not think he came into the kitchen at all.

423. You saw him in the passage; did you see him go away?—Yes, he went from there to Strange’s; I believe he called there.

424. Is that the “Waggon and Horses,” Mr. Strange’s public-house?—Yes, I believe it is.

425. Can you give us a notion about how long Sir Richard Glass stayed at the “Rising Sun”?—No, I could not say particularly how long he stayed there.

426. You can give us an idea whether it was two hours, or an hour-and-a-half, or a quarter, or what?—I should not think it was half-an-hour.

427. Can you give us a notion about what time it was; was it seven o’clock or eight, or nine, or ten, or what o’clock at night?—No, I could not say what time of night it was.

428. Was it dark?—Yes, it was dark.

429. Can you give us a notion what time you left?—No, I could not give any idea what time it was when I left there.

430. While Sir Richard Glass was there, you say you do not know what room he was in; but he was not in the kitchen?—No, I do not know what room he went into.

431. Did you see whether any of the people who were in the kitchen left the kitchen, and came back again?—No, I did not see any besides what went out of the kitchen; some went into the yard, and came back again into the kitchen, only that.

432. Did you see any of them go into any other room except the kitchen?—No.

433. Now you mentioned Strange’s, the “Waggon and Horses”?—Yes.

434. Did you go there the same evening?—Yes, I was down there the same night.

435. Was that after or before you went to the “Rising Sun”?—I was at the “Packhorse” after I went to the “Rising Sun,” and I was at the “Packhorse” before I went to the “Rising Sun.”

436. I talk of the “Waggon and Horses,” not the “Packhorse;” I mean Strange’s?—Yes; I know Strange’s.

437. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] Did you go to Strange’s public-house before or after you went to the “Rising Sun”?—I went before and afterwards, both.

438. Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.] What was going on at Strange’s?—There was beer and tobacco being drunk there.

439. Were there many people there?—Yes, there were a good few people there.

440. Was the beer and tobacco served there in the same way as at the other places you mentioned?—Yes.

441. And did the people pay for it?—Not that I was aware of.

442. Can you tell us any people who were at the “Waggon and Horses”?—Yes; there was James Pargeter there, and John Parmenter was there, and Proverts was there, and Mr. Glass called there.

443. Sir Richard Glass, you mean?—Yes.

444. Did you see Mr. Burnish that evening?—Yes.

445. Where did you see him?—I saw him up at the “Rising Sun” and at Mr. Strange’s.

446. Both at the “Rising Sun” and at the “Waggon and Horses”?—Yes.

447. Did you see a man named William Lane?—Yes, I saw him there.

448. At the “Waggon and Horses”?—Yes.

449. Do you know William Jackson?—Yes.

450. Did

T. Wood.
—
20 January
1869.

450. Did you see him there?—Yes.
451. About the same time did you go to the “Acorn”?—Yes; I was down at the “Acorn.”
452. You say you saw Sir Richard Glass at the “Waggon and Horses”?—Yes, I saw him there; that was all I saw of him there.
453. Where did you see him?—I saw him at the parlour, on the left-hand side going in.
454. Were there other people in the parlour?—Yes, I believe there was; I could not say who there was.

585. The “Black Boy” is kept by Mr. John Taylor, is it not?—Yes.

586. Was that beer and tobacco supplied in the same way?—Yes.

587. Was it paid for?—I did not see it paid for.

588. Did you get any?—Yes.

589. Did you pay?—No.

590. Did you see a man named John Parsons there?—Yes.

591. Was

591. Was there any speech making?—Not that I recollect not now.

592. Did you see Mr. Burnish there?—Yes, I did.

Cross-examined by Mr. Giffard.

593. You mentioned that you were employed to watch for five days; what five days were they?—Friday, Saturday, Sunday, Monday, and Tuesday.

594. That is the Friday before the polling-day, you mean?—Yes.

595. Up to and inclusive of the polling-day?—Yes.

596. Up to that Friday had you had any other employment?—Yes.

597. Do you mean in your trade as a slaughterman, or connected with the election in any way?—No; I was at work at Mr. Boraston's brickyard, making pipes.

598. How long had you been at work there?—I think I had been there a month or three weeks.

599. After the election was over, were you employed?—No, I was not; I lost my work through the election.

600. Have you had any work from the election down to the present time?—No, I have not.

601. When did you go to Mr. Glaisyer?—I did not go to him at all.

602. Did he come to you?—I was in a public-house.

603. Did he come to you?—I do not know particularly whether he spoke to me first; I sat in a public-house when we spoke together.

604. You cannot tell which spoke first?—No.

605. Whose public-house was it?—The "Fox."

606. When was this interview with Mr. Glaisyer, when he took down what you had to say in a book?—I do not know in particular.

607. Never mind in particular, about when? I cannot say for sure.

608. You can tell me whether yesterday, or a month ago, or two months ago?—It might have been about three weeks ago.

609. You believe it was?—Something like that.

610. Did you tell him all you told us to day?—I told him a good deal of it; yes, I believe I did.

611. You were a long time about it; at least I suppose so; how long do you suppose you and Mr. Glaisyer were together talking over this matter?—Not any great while.

612. How long do you suppose?—We might have been an hour together.

613. You do not remember whether he spoke to you or you spoke to him first?—I do not remember which it was spoke first.

614. Did you seen anybody else besides Mr. Glaisyer to give an account of this matter; come, you must know that?—Yes, I gave it to Mr. Griffin of the "Fox," first.

615. When was that?—I do not know particularly when.

616. About when?—It might have been three weeks ago.

617. Was it the same day you saw Mr. Glaisyer?—It was a different day.

618. Before or after?—I forget now whether it was before or after.

619. We will leave that for the present; did you see any other gentleman who took it down; either Mr. Morgan or any gentleman from his office; any gentleman who took it down besides Mr. Glaisyer?—Not that I am aware of.

620. Then the only time, so far as you now remember, when you have given an account of this matter which a gentleman took down in writing was to Mr. Glaisyer?—Yes.

621. Did you hear any talk about a reward to be given to persons who could give information about the late election?—No, I did not.

622. Did you get anything after you had given all this information, yourself?—No, I did not.

623. You have not got anything yet at all?—No.

624. You were not in work at that time, three weeks ago?—No.

625. How have you been living?—Doing little jobs now and then on purpose to get my living.

626. How were you getting your living that particular day that you were having this long conversation with Mr. Glaisyer?—I had some money in my pocket.

627. But where did you get it?—For doing different things, little jobs.

628. What little jobs?—Going different journeys for butchers, fetching things in.

629. Who was the person who last employed you before this interview with Mr. Glaisyer?—I do not know; I do not recollect now.

630. Nor what you got for it?—No.

631. Now, during the time that you were paying visits to these various public-houses, were they all in the evening that you have told us of?—Yes, they was.

632. After you had done your day's work?—Yes.

633. Were you in work the whole of that time; the period during which you were paying these visits to public-houses?—Yes, I believe I was.

634. Were you in work on the 6th day of July, the day when you say Sir Richard Glass came in?—Yes, I was.

635. Where?—I had been fetching some sheep in for Mr. James Cole in Lax-lane that day.

636. You mean a odd job?—Yes.

637. May I ask what is your name?—Thomas Wood.

638. Will you swear that is your name?—Yes.

639. Have you ever gone by any other name?—Yes; they generally call me Bliss.

640. Is that the name you are generally known by?—That is the name they generally call me about here, but Wood is the proper name.

641. I think you mentioned in the course of your examination that your parents brought you your food; do they live here?—My mother does, but my father is dead.

642. What name does she go by?—Wood.

643. You have been in trouble, I think, have you not?—Yes.

644. What trouble have you been in?—I was in trouble over a sheep as I killed.

645. I suppose they said you stole it?—They did, but I did not steal it.

646. Did they convict you, and did they get you imprisoned for it?—Yes; six weeks.

647. As to this occasion, when you went on the 6th of July which you mentioned, I do not think my lord could have understood it in the way you mentioned it; you were at Mr. Pardoe's on the lawn, were you not?—Yes.

648. And

T. Wood.
—
1869.

T. Wood. 648. And Sir Richard Glass drove by to his place?—Yes.
 649. He did not come there at all, did he?—No; his carriage stopped opposite the gate.
 650. And you gave him a cheer?—Yes.
 651. Then where was it the cannon were fired?—On the top of the hill by Mr. Shaw's house.
 652. That was when Sir Richard arrived, I suppose?—Yes.
 653. And that was the house where Sir Richard lived during the election?—It was where he stopped at; he was down at Lick-hill some of the time.
 654. Did not he and his establishment go in and occupy the house?—Yes, I believe he did.
 655. You mentioned another place where Sir Richard was?—Down to the Lick-hill.
 656. He took the house and occupied it?—Yes; I believe he did.

Re-examined by Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.

657. About this name of Bliss; what was your father's name?—Bliss, and he never was married.
 658. Then about this matter about the sheep, what was it they said you had done?—They said I had stole the sheep.
 659. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] You said you had killed the sheep?—Yes, because they gave me the sheep to kill.
 660. Who gave it you?—Mrs. Crumps gave me the sheep and said if I would kill it and sell the skin and give part of the price to her son I could have the rest.
 661. On that they concluded that you had a guilty knowledge in the matter?—Yes.
 662. Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.] Were you tried at the session or by the magistrates?—I was tried by the magistrates.
 663. And got six weeks?—Yes.

[The Witness withdrew.]

GEORGE STOKES, sworn; Examined by Mr. Chandos Leigh.

G. Stokes. 664. WHERE do you live?—At High-street, Bewdley.
 665. Do you work for anybody?—Yes, Mr. Hewitt over here, an ironmonger.
 666. How old are you?—Fifteen, last September.
 667. Do you remember the day when Sir Richard Glass came into the town?—I cannot remember the day.
 668. But do you remember his coming in?—Yes.
 669. Where were you on that day when he came in?—I was down by Mr. Pardoe's.
 670. Were you alone?—No; some more boys with me.
 671. What did you see when you were down at Mr. Pardoe's?—The men went in and we boys were outside playing; I cannot tell the names of the men, there were ever so many of them in.
 672. Where did the men go into?—They went through the big door; Mr. Pardoe's.
 673. There are high doors leading into Mr. Pardoe's premises?—Yes.
 674. And they went through those high doors?—Yes.
 675. And you were left outside?—Yes, we boys were left outside.
 676. What did do when you were left outside?—We were playing.
 677. And who let the men in?—I did not see who let the men in.
 678. Did anybody stand at the door?—There was somebody at the door; I cannot tell whether it was one all the time, or they took it in turns.
 679. What happened after you had done playing?—The doors were opened, and the boys went in.
 680. What did you see when you got in?—We went down to the back of the house, and there was a table with bread and cheese and ale on it; some of the other boys went first.

681. Did you see any people there?—No, I did not see any people there.
 682. Did you see any people in Mr. Pardoe's garden?—Yes, I saw some in front of the house; there was lots of men there.
 683. Can you say about how many?—I should think 30 or 40; I did not notice them very much; I know there were lots there.
 684. Do you remember any of their names?—No, I do not; I did not take any notice.
 685. Did you see any of those men go up to the table where the bread and cheese was?—No.
 686. Did you go up to the table?—Yes; we went down to the table, and I had some.
 687. And the other boys some?—Yes, all of them.
 688. What was there?—Bread and cheese and ale.
 689. Before you went up to the table, did it look as if people had been eating there?—I did not take much notice; there were things all about; it seemed so.
 690. Did you see Sir Richard Glass drive up?—Yes; I was at the door when the carriage came up.
 691. To what door did he drive up?—The carriage stopped at Mr. Pardoe's big door.
 692. After that what happened?—They stopped there a few minutes, and then the carriage drove up to Winterdyne's; Mr. Shaw's after that.
 693. When the carriage drove up to the big door did anybody get out?—I did not notice that; I was at the top end of them.
 694. Was there any cheering?—Yes.
 695. Can anybody standing in the road see if the doors are shut at Mr. Pardoe's premises?—No.

Mr. Giffard stated he would not ask this witness any questions.

[The Witness withdrew.]

JAMES GROVE, sworn; Examined by Mr. Sturge.

696. Do you know Thomas Elcock?—Yes.
 697. Landlord of the “Rifleman Inn,” is he not?—Yes.
 698. What are you?—Pikelet and muffin maker.
 699. Has Thomas Elcock on some occasions employed you as a waiter?—Yes.
 700. Where do you live?—At Lax-lane.
 701. And you are not a voter?—I am not a voter.
 702. Do you remember the 27th of October, Tuesday, or about that time; do you remember going into the “Rifleman”?—I have been at the “Rifleman” repeatedly.
 703. Do you remember going there on a Tuesday afternoon?—Yes; I have been there on a Tuesday afternoon.
 704. About the end of October?—I was there.
 705. Do you remember Elcock coming to you and asking you to stop?—Yes.
 706. Was it the Tuesday after Old Hall races?—Yes.
 707. Did he tell you to stop?—Yes.
 708. Did he tell you what for?—No.
 709. And did you stop?—Yes.
 710. What did he give you then?—He gave me a crown piece.
 711. Did he tell you what to do with it?—To lay it out in some beer.
 712. Did you take the five shilling piece?—Yes.
 713. And what did you do with it?—Laid it out in beer; he said, “This is a portion of what we have got from the races.”
 714. Mr. Giffard.] Was this Thomas Elcock the one in Lax-lane or Wribbenhall?—In Wribbenhall.
 715. Mr. Sturge.] Were there many people there?—Yes, there were a good few there.
 716. Did you go into the kitchen after this five shillings?—I went into the kitchen, when I had a five shilling piece gave me.
 717. Did you spend this in beer?—Yes.
 718. What was it done with?—Drunk by the company.
 719. Brought in in a can?—Brought in in a can, I think.
 720. Was it drunk by the company?—It was there for anybody to partake of it.
 721. Do you know the people who were there?—I know some.
 722. Tell me any names?—A man of the name of Lancet and George Humpherson.
 723. Anybody else?—Thomas Pardoe.
 724. Is that the barber?—Yes.
 725. Anybody else?—A man of the name of Crewe.
 726. Alfred Crewe is that?—Yes.
 727. Anyone else?—One of the name of Davis.
 728. Thomas Davis?—I cannot say that.
 729. Were there any others?—There were plenty there; I do not remember the names.
 730. When you had spent the 5 s., did Elcock afterwards come to you again?—Yes, he was in the kitchen again.
 731. Did he give you anything else?—He gave me 3 s.
 732. Did he tell you what to do with it?—No.
 733. What did you do with it?—Spent it the same as the 5 s.

734. Did you get any more after that?—Two shillings more.
 735. From Elcock?—Yes.
 736. And did you spend that in the same way?—Yes.
 737. After that was spent, did you ask him for any more?—No.
 738. Did the beer run out after that?—Yes, there was more beer brought in; I cannot say who brought it; I had been up all night Monday night, and I had got a drop of beer and had got fresh.
 739. When the beer stopped coming in, did you go to the landlord?—Yes, I went to the landlord.
 740. And did you ask him for some more?—Yes.
 741. And what did he say?—He said, “We shall see about it.”
 742. Where did he go then?—He turned again from me to the passage.
 743. Where did he go to?—In the parlour, I believe.
 744. Do you know who was in the parlour?—No; I know one gentleman who was there, Mr. Benjamin Gardener.
 745. Did Elcock go into the parlour?—Yes.
 746. Did he afterwards come back?—Yes.
 747. Did he give you any more money?—Not after he gave me what I have said.
 748. Was there any more beer brought after that?—Yes, there was beer brought into the kitchen.
 749. Did anybody pay for it?—I did not see anybody.
 750. Did you see anybody besides Mr. Benjamin Gardener in the parlour?—No.

Cross-examined by Mr. Hardinge Giffard.

751. Can you tell me what day it was that you saw this?—It was the day after the Old Hall races. I had not had any date of it.
 752. Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.] Just one question about Elcock; Elcock gave you, you said, a crown piece, and said, “That is what we got from the races”?—“A portion of what we have got from the races.”
 753. Has he ever said anything else to you about money got from the races?—No, not before that.
 754. But, after the races, did he tell you whether he had got money from the races?—I asked him how he got on, and he said he had done middling at the races.
 755. Did he ever say he had lost money?—Yes.
 756. At the races?—Yes.
 757. When did he say that?—Some time after.
 758. When was it that he said he had lost money at the races?—I do not know the day of the month; I did not know I should be required to take my oath to the day of the month.
 759. But he did say that afterwards?—He did say that.
 760. Mr. Giffard.] Did he have a booth at the races, do you know?—Yes.

J. Grove.
 20 Jan.
 1869.

J. Grove.

20 Jan.
1869.

761. This conversation, I think you say, took place, and this money was spent the day after the races?—Yes; on the Tuesday; the races were on the Monday.

762. Did you see that man, who is called

Bliss or Wood, at the "Rifleman"?—I could not say that I saw him; I do not remember seeing him.

763. Were you in the kitchen?—Yes.

[The Witness withdrew.]

GEORGE HUMPHERSON sworn; Examined by Mr. Fitzjames Stephens.

G. Humpherson.

764. ARE you the son of George James Humpherson, the Comb Manufacturer, in this town?—I am.

765. Do you recollect, one day late in October, being at the "Rifleman"?—Yes.

766. Did you see people drinking there?—I did.

767. How many of them?—Well, I could not tell the number; but a great many.

768. Could you give me any of the names?—Yes.

769. Tell me some of the people?—Mr. Benjamin Gardener, Mr. Parsons, Mr. Richard Colwick, Mr. Joseph Price, Mr. Cecil Webster, Mr. Osman Pountney, Mr. Christopher Pountney, Mr. Edwin Pountney. There were others there.

770. What room was Mr. Benjamin Gardener in?—In the parlour.

771. And where were most of the company?—In the kitchen and the parlour; there were a good many.

772. What room was Mr. Webster in?—In the parlour.

773. What were all these people doing?—Drinking.

774. Were they smoking?—Some of them were.

775. How was the beer provided; did each man call for what he wanted, or was it brought for the company generally?—Brought in cans, and Thomas Pardoe, the barber, poured it out; and some were drinking liquor.

776. Did you see anybody pay?—No; I saw no one pay. I saw Parsons offer sixpence, but it was not taken from him, and he put it in his pocket again, or attempted to put it in his pocket.

777. What liquors was it that some were drinking?—It was white. I do not know whether it was gin or whiskey.

778. How long did this go on?—Well, I was in the parlour from half an hour to an hour.

779. Did you have anything to drink?—I drank some of the beer.

780. Did you pay?—No; for the first glass my friend paid for me.

781. What after that?—What I drank after I did not pay for.

782. Did Elcock, the landlord, say anything to you about being there?—He beckoned me out, and said I was wanted; and I said, "All right, tell them I am coming; who is it?" And he said, "You are wanted;" and he came again directly after and said, "You are wanted;" and I said, "Oh! I see; I am not wanted here, that is your meaning." He beckoned me again, and I said "All right;" and with that I went out to him, and he says, "You will do me an injury if you stop here. Whatever you want to drink come on out here, and you can have something, whatever you like;" and I said "I wanted a cup of ale or beer."

783. What room were you in when he called you out?—In the parlour.

784. Were there other persons in the parlour?—Yes, a great many.

785. Were you there when the company went away?—Yes, but I was in the kitchen.

786. How long did they go on drinking in this manner that you have described?—Well, I did not go in the parlour again; I went to sleep after that; I had been shooting.

787. You are a rifleman yourself, are not you?—Yes.

788. What time was it when the people went away?—Well, I left between 12 and 1.

789. Did the others leave with you?—Several had gone before, and some went with me.

Cross-examined by Mr. Hardinge Giffard.

790. I think you said that you had been shooting; had there been a rifle shooting?—Yes.

791. You are one of the riflemen?—Yes.

792. What was your friend's name who you said paid for you?—James Clinton.

793. What is he; is he a rifleman?—He was.

794. At that time?—Yes.

795. How came you to go to the house?—Coming back from shooting at Hartlebury, me and the serjeant went in there.

796. You happened to be on your way?—Well, it was not the direct way home, but we wanted a glass of beer, and we went there to have it.

797. Can you give me the date of that?—It was the latter end of October; the 27th I think it was, but I will not be sure. I know it was the day the Beauchamp was shot for at Hartlebury.

798. Were there any more of the riflemen besides you and your friend Clinton?—Not with me after the serjeant went; he was obliged to leave to go to drill.

799. Did you see any riflemen in the house besides yourself and friend?—Yes, Christopher Pountney.

800. He was one of the riflemen?—Yes.

801. Any others?—Well, I cannot just think of them at the present time. Oh, yes! our ensign was there, Mr. Pardoe.

802. Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.] What Pardoe is that?—This one (pointing to a gentleman near him).

803. Mr. Hardinge Giffard.] Which Mr. Pardoe is that?—Mr. Herbert Pardoe.

804. I suppose he was in the parlour?—Yes.

805. Was he there when you first went in?—No, he came in afterwards.

806. Now, you said that a Mr. Parsons attempted to put a sixpence in his pocket?—Yes.

807. What happened to the sixpence?—I do not know whether he put it in or not; he did not pay, nor no one took the sixpence of him.

808. Who

808. Who did he offer it to?—To Tom Pardoe, the barber; he was keeping the door, and pouring out the beer.

809. Has he anything to do with the public-house generally?—No.

810. On that particular occasion he had?—Door-keeper.

811. He has nothing to do with the public house generally?—Not to my knowledge.

812. You have never known him as a servant of the house?—No.

Re-examined by Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.

813. This Mr. Pardoe is Mr. Pardoe's son, is he not?—Yes.

[The Witness withdrew.]

THOMAS LANCET, sworn; Examined by Mr. Chandos Leigh:

814. WHAT are you?—A Gardener.

815. Where do you live?—In Wribbenhall.

816. Do you live with your father, James Lancet?—Yes.

817. Do you remember going to the "Rifleman Inn" in October last?—Yes.

818. Do you remember the day in October?—Yes, the 27th of October, Tuesday.

819. Did you go alone?—No.

820. Who went with you?—John Darkes and Joseph Meacham.

821. Those, I believe, are both non-voters?—Darkes is a voter.

822. Is that the "Rifleman Inn," kept by Thomas Elcock?—Yes.

823. Where did you go when you got there?—To the kitchen.

824. What did you do?—John Darkes called for a pint of ale, and he paid for it, and we drank it; and we had another pint or two; and Joseph Meacham called for a pint of beer, and we drank that; then we sat down, and directly after there was some beer brought in by the landlord.

825. What time was this?—Between 6 and 7 o'clock.

826. In the evening?—Yes.

827. Now you were telling us about some beer being brought in by the landlord, had you ordered that?—No.

828. Were there other people in the kitchen besides yourself and Meacham and Darkes?—Yes.

829. Had any of the company in your presence ordered the beer that the landlord brought in?—No, not to my knowledge.

830. What did he do with the beer when he brought it in; how much did he bring in?—Two cans.

831. After that did he come in again; the landlord, I mean?—Yes, he came in several times.

832. Was the beer drunk that was brought in?—Yes.

833. After that beer was drunk, did Elcock come in?—Yes, he came in the kitchen several times.

834. Did he say anything?—No, he did not say anything particular; he said the beer was to be drank for the company.

835. And when it was drank what was to happen?—He said that when that beer was out each person was to pay for what he had.

836. Did anybody after that beer was drank call and pay for what he had?—Yes.

837. Who?—James Grove called and paid for it.

838. What did he call for?—He called for a pint at a time; I think he had two or three pints.

839. And he paid for that?—Yes.

9.

840. Was that drank by other people besides Grove, the beer that he ordered?—Yes; I had some of it, and so did others.

841. After Grove's beer was drunk, what happened?—People began to talk as to whether there was not any more beer coming in.

842. When the people talked about this, did Grove go out of the room?—Yes.

843. Tell us what happened?—He came back again in a short time, and then the landlord, Thomas Elcock, came back and gave Grove a crown piece.

844. I believe you had music going on, a fiddler?—Yes, a fiddler.

845. Did Grove give anything to the fiddler?—He gave him sixpence.

846. Out of the crown piece?—Yes.

847. What happened to the rest of the crown piece?—Spent it in beer, Grove did.

848. After this money was spent in beer, what happened then?—Several parties then had beer of their own, and paid for it.

849. Now, did Grove leave the room again?—Yes.

850. Did he come back again?—Yes.

851. Had you or had you not more beer after that?—We had some more beer.

852. Was that beer that you paid for, or not?—It was not paid for by any in the company then present.

853. Now can you tell us the names of any of the people who were in this kitchen, at this time, at the "Rifleman"?—Yes; James Davis.

854. Is he James Davis, of Lax-lane?—Yes; and John Darkes, James Everett, Henry Charles, William Wakeman, John Davis, and Joseph Gilham.

855. How many were you about altogether there?—I should think between 20 and 30.

856. What time did you leave the "Rifleman"?—Between 10 and 11.

857. Where did you go after that?—I went from there and called at the "Lion Inn," kept by William Lane.

858. Is that in Wribbenhall?—Yes.

859. What did you see when you got to the "Lion"?—There were a few men in there drinking.

860. Can you tell us who they were there, any of them?—Charles Hobbs was there, Peter Mountford, William Jackson, and a man of the name of Sheriff, Mr. Carter's gardener in Wribbenhall.

861. Did you notice what state Hobbs was in?—He was tipsy.

862. Was Hobbs taken away?—Yes.

863. Who took him away?—Peter Mountford took him away.

864. Did you leave about 12 o'clock, and go home?—Some time before 12.

865. Did you see any drink there?—I saw what

B 4

G. Humpherson.

20 Jan.
1869.

T. Lancet.

T. Lancet. what people were paying for with their own money.

20 Jan. 1869. 866. Do you know the "Waggon and Horses," kept by John Reynolds?—Yes.

867. Did you go there about the same time?—Not the same night.

868. When?—The 28th of October.

869. That was the day after?—Yes.

870. When did you go there?—A little about 8 o'clock at night.

871. When you got there what did you do; did you order anything?—I went into the house and went into the parlour, and ordered a pint of beer.

872. Did you pay for that?—Yes.

873. Did you drink it in the parlour?—Yes.

874. Were there any people in the parlour then?—Yes; it was full of people.

875. How many about?—I should think there were over 20.

876. Do you remember any of the names of those who were there?—Yes; Mr. Christopher Pountney, Mr. Charles Pountney, Mr. Osman Pountney, Mr. Thomas Pardoe, the barber; Mr. Milson White, Mr. John Clark, and Pargeter, Mr. Price's engine driver; and John Oaks, and a great many more.

877. Do you know the mayor by sight?—Yes.

878. Was he there?—Yes.

879. Which mayor, the present mayor?—Yes; Mr. Landon.

880. You say you paid for a pint; was that all you had?—That was all I paid for.

881. All you had?—No.

882. How much more had you besides?—I could not say; but my cup was replenished when it was empty.

883. Besides what was served to you, did you see any other liquor in the room at the time?—Yes.

884. Where?—On the table, in the same room where I was.

885. What was it?—Ale.

886. Did you see any of that liquor paid for?—No, not to the best of my recollection.

887. Was it ordered by any one, or was it brought in common for the company?—It was brought in for the company, for what I could see.

888. I think you have mentioned Thomas Pardoe's name as being there?—Yes.

889. Did Thomas Pardoe do anything on that evening?—Made a sort of speech.

890. Do you remember anything that was said by Thomas Pardoe?—Yes, I can recollect something.

891. What?—He said that Sir Richard Glass was a proper sort of man to represent the borough, and he hoped that there were none there but friends and supporters of Sir Richard Glass, and proposed the health of Sir Richard Glass, which was drank with great acclamation.

892. Whilst the speechifying was going on, were you called to the door?—Not while it was going on; after it had gone on.

893. Who called you?—Henry Reynolds, the son of the landlord.

894. Did anything happen then?—He told me that I was wanted outside; and I went out, and could not find anyone; and I went back and asked who it was that wanted me, and he said no one wanted me, but he thought that I had been in there long enough.

895. You, I believe, going from the parlour outside, would have to pass by the kitchen?—Yes.

896. Did you look into the kitchen?—I just glanced in when I went by the door.

897. Did you see any people there?—Yes, Benjamin Hinton and John Carter.

898. Did you see any drink?—They appeared to be drinking, but that I could not say.

899. Do you know the "Acorn Inn"?—Yes.

900. Is John Fox the landlord of the "Acorn Inn"?—Yes.

901. That is an inn by the Severn side?—Yes.

902. Did you go to the "Acorn" about that time?—I do not know whether it was before I went to the "Waggon and Horses" or after.

903. Was it about that time?—One night about eight o'clock; the night of the free and easy.

904. But you do not know whether it was before or after the "Waggon and Horses"?—No.

905. When you got there, where did you go to?—I went to the tap-room.

906. Did you see any one there?—It was full of people.

907. Can you remember the names of anybody you saw?—Yes; Edward Field was there, and Charles Hobbs was there, and Thomas Cooper, and a person they called James Blunt.

908. How many were there, on the whole, could you say?—I could not say how many there was; there was a great many.

909. Was there any liquor there?—Yes.

910. What was that liquor?—Ale.

911. You have used the technical expression "Free and Easy"; will you tell me what a free and easy means?—I do not know; I only know that it was called a free and easy.

912. What goes on at a free and easy?—They were always drinking ale and smoking tobacco; that is all I know of it.

913. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] Is anything paid at the door for admission?—No.

914. Mr. Chandos Leigh.] Did you pay anything for yourself?—No, I did not pay anything for myself.

915. Not at the free and easy you were at?—No, not at the "Acorn."

916. Did you ever know of this sort of thing going on when an election is not going on?—No.

917. Is it a usual thing to go on in public houses?—Not that I am aware of.

918. Were there any orders given?—Yes, a few.

919. That you heard?—Yes.

920. You told us you saw nothing paid?—There was some money paid, but not for the beer that was drunk in common.

921. Was beer brought in, in common, as well as the beer that was ordered?—Yes.

922. And for the beer that was brought in in common, I understand you to say nothing was paid?—Not that I was aware of.

923. Is there a back kitchen as well?—Yes.

924. Did you see any other people in the back kitchen?—Yes; I saw William Jackson there, and Mr. Cartwright, the printer, and several others; a great number of boys too.

925. Did you see any liquor brought in there?—Yes.

926. Who brought it in?—I do not exactly recollect recollect who it was that took it in; but it was Thomas Cooper, I believe, that brought it into the kitchen.

927. Was Thomas Cooper discharging any duty that day?—He was acting in the capacity of tap-man, for what I could see.

928. Was there anybody in the passage?—There were some women in the passage.

929. What were the women doing?—Talking, for what I could see of them.

930. Did you see them with any ale?—Yes; I saw them with some jugs.

931. Did you see what was inside the jugs?—No, I did not.

932. Were they drinking from the jugs?—They might be drinking, for all I know; but I did not see them drinking.

933. What did they do with these jugs?—They went away with them, I suppose.

934. Did you see them go away?—I saw women leaving the house with jugs.

935. Can you tell whether they were full or empty jugs?—No; I do not know whether full or empty.

936. Did you see any of these jugs paid for?—No.

937. Do you know the "Old Mug House"?—Yes.

938. Is that kept by Henry Southan?—Yes.

939. One question about the "Acorn;" was there any cheering?—Yes.

940. Why?—A person they commonly call Jemmy, the lad, was there.

941. Did they cheer him, or did he cheer?—He rose the cheer for Sir Richard Glass.

942. Was that in the kitchen or the parlour?—In the kitchen.

943. Now, you said you know the "Old Mug House," kept by Henry Southan?—Yes.

944. Did you go to the "Old Mug House" about that time?—On November the 4th, I believe it was.

945. Was anything going on there?—Yes; there was beer on the same scale as at the other places.

946. Whom did you see there?—I went in with Charles Southan, the landlord of the "Cock and Magpie;" Joseph Meacham was with me.

947. This is kept by Henry Southan?—Yes.

948. Did Henry Southan bring any beer in?—Yes.

949. What did he bring in?—He brought it in cans; I do not know whether gallons or half gallons.

950. Was it ordered by anybody?—I heard Mrs. Southan, the landlady, say that Mr. Burnish ordered it.

951. Was any tobacco brought in at the same time as the beer?—Yes.

952. Was the ale given to the company?—Yes.

953. About what time was that?—It was after eight o'clock when I went.

954. How long did this ale drinking go on?—I should think it lasted from nine till ten.

955. What happened when this ale was finished?—The parties paid for some then.

956. What time was that?—I think it was somewhere about 10 o'clock.

957. Was it announced that the treat was stopped, that the ale was stopped?—The landlord said the tap was stopped.

958. After that you began to pay?—Yes.

959. Now after this stoppage did anybody go out?—Yes.

960. Who?—Edward Peel.

961. What did he go out for?—He said he would go out and see if he could get some more beer; something to that effect.

992. Did he get any more?—No.

963. You have made a statement about Mrs. Southan and Mr. Burnish; did you see Mr. Burnish there?—I did not see him.

964. Do you know the "Cock and Magpie," kept by Charles Southan?—Yes.

965. Did you go there about that time?—It was on November the 9th; I was there pretty nearly all the afternoon that day.

966. What were you doing there nearly all the afternoon?—I helped Charles Southan to fetch forms and a table, something of that description, from his brothers.

967. What for?—For the purpose of making it convenient for the party that was going to be there that night.

968. About six o'clock that evening, did you have anything to drink?—Yes.

969. What?—Beer.

970. In the back parlour?—Yes; in the back kitchen rather.

971. Yourself I am talking about?—Yes.

972. Was Mrs. Southan the landlord's wife in there with you?—Yes.

973. Did anybody come in there?—Yes.

974. Who?—James Pargeter.

975. Who is James Pargeter?—Mr. Price's engine-driver.

976. Is that Mr. Price at the tan yard?—Yes.

977. Did Pargeter see you?—Yes.

978. Did he on that make a remark to Mrs. Southan?—Yes.

979. Have you seen Pargeter canvassing about?—No.

980. Did Pargeter go away after that?—Yes.

981. And did he come back again?—Yes.

982. And did he say something to Mrs. Southan then?—Yes.

983. Were you on the following day at this "Cock and Magpie"?—Yes.

984. Were you there with John Strange, the landlord of the "Old Waggon and Horses"?—Yes.

985. Did Strange say anything there?—Yes.

986. What did he say?—We were talking about beer at these public-houses, and one thing and another.

987. Do you know the "Hop Pole," Mrs. Winwood's?—Yes.

988. Were you on the 15th of September there?—No.

989. When were you there?—I have not been there at all.

990. Do you know Miss Nicholas?—Yes.

991. Who is Miss Nicholas?—She is Mr. Nicholas' daughter, on the other side of the Severn.

992. What is Mr. Nicholas?—A solicitor or a lawyer, or something of that kind, I believe.

993. Did Miss Nicholas come to your house one day?—Yes.

994. Were you present?—Yes.

995. When was it about?—In the morning just before dinner.

996. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] Before or after the election?—After the election.

997. Mr. Chandos Leigh.] Did she give your mother anything?—Yes.

998. What?—Four shillings.

Mr. Hardinge Giffard objected to the evidence, on the ground that the name of Miss Nicholas was not included in the list which had been furnished by the other side to the Respondent.

Mr. Justice Blackburn stated, that if the counsel for the Petitioners attached importance to this case, they must recall this witness at a later period.

Mr. Fitzjames Stephen stated that there was only one more question to ask on this point.

Mr. Giffard offered no objection to the question being asked now.

Mr. Justice Blackburn stated that Mr. Giffard could, if he pleased, cross-examine the Witness on this point at a later stage.

999. Mr. Chandos Leigh.] What did Miss Nicholas say when she gave 4 s. to your mother?—She made some remarks about Sir Richard Glass being returned for the borough; said he was a very nice man, and asked my mother if she did not think it was a very good thing that he was returned, and wound up by asking if my father had voted for Sir Richard Glass, but said afterwards, that she did not give the money in regard to those who voted for Sir Richard Glass, because there were some who did vote for Sir Richard Glass, to whom it would not be a charity to give it.

1000. Did she say who sent the money?—She said that Sir Richard Glass sent it.

In answer to his Lordship, Mr. Giffard stated that he would not postpone the cross-examination of this Witness.

Cross-examined by Mr. Giffard.

1001. I think you said you were a gardener?—Yes.

1002. Where are you working as a gardener?—Nowhere at present.

1003. When did you used to work anywhere as a gardener?—I have been acting as a journeyman gardener, gardening at different places about.

1004. When last, is my question?—Some two years ago.

1005. What have you been doing since, for the purpose of getting your living?—Working at a tan yard, Mr. Thomas Beaman's, in Lax-lane, Bewdley.

1006. When did you go and work with him?—Twelve months ago, now.

1007. Do you mean you have been working with him from that time till now?—No.

1008. When last did you work for him?—Twelve months ago very near, since I left.

1009. What have you been doing since?—I have not been doing anything particular since.

1010. Have you been at any time in the employment of Mr. Morgan, Mr. Lloyd's agent?—Yes.

1011. When did you get into his employment?—At the late election.

1012. But when?—I do not recollect the day.

1013. Was it before the polling day or after, or what?—A little before.

1014. How long before?—I do not recollect how many days.

1015. But about?—I could not possibly say.

1016. What were you employed at?—Taking the polling cards and different things out.

1017. I suppose you were paid?—Yes.

1018. That will remind you I dare say, of how long you were employed; what were you paid?—I was paid according to the number of cards or notices, whichever it was that I took out.

1019. Was that the only form of employment you had of Mr. Morgan?—Yes, before the election.

1020. We will come to after the election presently, before the election I am speaking of at present; you told me how your wages were calculated, but how were you paid, every Saturday night, or every day, or how?—No; I was paid at once.

1021. Paid every time you acted?—No, paid for the whole affair I did; at one time.

1022. What were you paid?—£. 3 10 s.

1023. When was that payment made to you?—I do not recollect.

1024. About; was it the day after the election?—Some time after the election.

1025. Who first employed you?—Mr. Morgan, I believe.

1026. You have no doubt about that, I suppose?—I do not recollect exactly whether it was Mr. Morgan or Mr. Glaisyer.

1027. And you took directions, I suppose, from time to time from either Mr. Morgan or Mr. Glaisyer as to what you were to do?—Yes.

1028. Did they send you to any of these public-houses?—No.

1029. How came you to go there?—Of my own accord.

1030. You did not go there, I suppose then, because they were places where Sir Richard Glass's friends met?—No, I thought I would go because I saw others going, and I thought I might as well go.

1031. That is the only reason you had to go?—The only reason.

1032. You said something about being employed by Mr. Morgan after the election; how have you been employed by Mr. Morgan after the election?—Going with a man delivering subpoenas; serving subpoenas.

1033. But it does not require two to serve a subpoena?—No; but I was acting as a guide to take them to the places where they wanted to go.

1034. Have you been in Bewdley ever since the election?—Yes.

1035. Never been to London since?—No.

1036. Or Birmingham?—Yes.

1037. You cannot have been in Bewdley ever since then?—I was only half a day away.

1038. What did you go to Birmingham for?—With a friend of mine, Samuel Farmer.

1039. What for?—Because he asked me to go with him.

1040. Did you pay for your journey?—He paid for me.

1041. What is he?—A cabinet-maker and carpenter, I believe.

1042. How came he to pay?—Because he wanted my company.

1043. When was this?—I do not recollect which day it was.

1044. About; I am not asking you exactly?—I think it was a few days before Christmas day.

1045. Had he anything to do with the election?—Nothing at all.

1046. Is he a voter?—No.

1047. Where does he live?—In High-street.

1048. In this town?—Yes.

1049. Have

1049. Have you been getting up evidence for Mr. Morgan?—Not directly.

1050. Just explain what you mean by that?—I have not been paid to do it.

1051. I did not ask you that, you see; just explain what you mean?—If I have heard anything I have told them.

1052. And how many times do you think you have heard something and told them?—I cannot say.

1053. A good many times, I suppose?—Several times.

1054. And has it been part of your, I will not say employment, but practice to go out into the town and hear something, and tell it to Mr. Morgan?—I could not help hearing something.

1055. And you could not help telling Mr. Morgan, I suppose?—No.

1056. Has he taken it down?—Mr. Glaisyer.

1057. How long have you been thus employed, hearing things and having them taken down?—Since the election, and a little while before.

1058. What was the last payment you have received of Mr. Morgan for any service?—Five shillings.

1059. I meant when?—I do not recollect when.

1060. About how long ago?—A few days ago, from Mr. Glaisyer, I received that.

1061. What had you done that day?—Delivered a few subpoenas.

1062. How long were you employed?—Three parts of the day, or thereabouts.

1063. And, since the election, has that been the only mode in which you have worked to get your living at all?—Yes.

1064. Your mother, I think, lives in Bewdley?—In Wribbenhall.

1065. Is she in the service of Miss Nicholas, whose name you mentioned?—Not that I am aware of.

1066. You never were aware of it?—She has not lately, I know.

1067. Are you at all aware of her working for Miss Nicholas?—Not that I am aware of.

In answer to Mr. Justice Blackburn, Mr. Giffard stated that he proposed to cross-examine the Witness now on this point.

1068. How long had you been away from Bewdley before the election?—I had not been away for some time, for any length of time.

1069. How long?—I think the longest period that I was away from Bewdley was six months; that was four or five years ago.

1070. Since that you have been in Bewdley?—In Wribbenhall.

1071. Have you lived with your father and mother?—Yes.

1072. Do you mean to say you do not know whether your mother worked for Miss Nicholas at all?—I never took any notice of such things.

1073. Do you mean to swear that you did not know whether she worked for Miss Nicholas?—I would not say she has or has not.

1074. Living at home with your father and mother the last five years, do you mean to say that you do not know that your mother worked for her?—I could not swear about it.

1075. Do you believe she has?—Well, it is a question of doubt to me.

1076. Do you believe she has?—She may have done it, or she may not.

1077. Do you believe she has?—I believe she might have worked for her.

1078. So do I; but I ask you, do you believe she has?—Yes, I believe she has.

1079. Now, you have mentioned once or twice, in going to these different public-houses (I will not go through them all)—that beer was brought in for the company, and I think on one occasion you said that the landlord said so?—Yes.

1080. Just tell me what words he used?—He said, "Here is some beer for you to drink," and they were to drink it; and then when it was out he came in and said that we were to pay for our own.

1081. You gave us a particular landlord and a particular house; you said he came in and said that that was for the company to drink; he did not use, as I understand you now, the word company at all?—No, he did not.

1082. I want his words, as near as you can give them?—He said, as near as I can recollect, "Here is some beer for you to drink"; I do not recollect anything nearer.

1083. As he said that, what did he do?—Placed it on the table.

1084. What was "it"?—Two cans.

1085. What landlord was that?—Thomas Elcock, the "Rifleman" inn.

1086. What day was that?—The 27th of October; a Tuesday.

1087. Was that the day after the races?—I believe it was.

1088. Were you at the races?—No.

1089. Do you remember whether it was shortly before that, that Mr. Hemming, the other candidate for this borough, had retired?—Yes; I think it was.

1090. How long before that do you remember?—I cannot recollect.

1091. It was about that time?—Some time before then.

1092. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] Which was first, the candidate retiring, or going to the races?—Mr. Hemming retiring.

1093. Mr. Giffard.] You said, first, shortly before that. Do you mean to retract that now; Was it shortly before that?—Some considerable time.

1094. You are quite sure about that?—Yes.

1095. You say, "Considerable time"; what do you mean by that?—I do not exactly recollect how long it was.

1096. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] When you say "some considerable time," do you mean a month, or six weeks?—I should think it was a month, or five weeks, if not more.

1097. Mr. Giffard.] You were present, I think you say, at the time Miss Nicholas came with the money for your mother?—Yes.

1098. What were your mother's circumstances; was she poor?—She is not very well off.

1099. Is she poor, or not?—I do not know what you mean by poor.

1100. You are doing nothing for the family, except in the way you told us?—No.

1101. What is your father?—He works for Mr. Price.

1102. What are his wages?—I do not know.

1103. You never heard?—No.

1104. Did Miss Nicholas say she had received a cheque for 10*l.* to be distributed among the poor?—She did not say anything about a cheque.

1105. Did she say she had received 10 l. to be distributed among the poor?—Yes.

1106. You did not mention that; had you forgotten it?—I was not asked the question.

1107. I think you were asked what she said. You had not forgotten that?—No.

1108. Did Miss Nicholas say she was to distribute that among the poor, without reference to which way they voted?—She said she was not giving it with regard to those who voted for Sir Richard Glass, because there were some who voted for him to whom it would not be a charity to give it.

1109. Did she say that she was to distribute it among the poor without reference to which way they voted?—I did not hear her say so.

1110. Will you swear she did not say so?—I did not hear it.

1111. I think you said that she said it was sent by Sir Richard Glass?—Yes.

1112. You are mistaken there, are you not; she said it was sent by Lady Glass?—She said Sir Richard.

1113. You are quite sure?—Quite sure.

1114. Was Miss Nicholas in the habit of visiting that district among the poor?—Yes, I think she is.

1115. I do not mean during the election only, it was her habit to visit in that district?—She has been at our house several times.

1116. Long before the election?—Yes.

Re-examined by Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.

1117. Miss Nicholas, you said, I think, asked which way your father had voted?—Yes.

JOHN CARTER, sworn; Examined by Mr. Sturge.

J. Carter.

1130. ARE you under-gamekeeper to Mr. Hemming?—Yes.

1131. And you are not a voter?—No.

1132. Where do you live?—At a place called Bark-hill.

1133. Do you know the "Rifleman" inn?—Yes.

1134. Thomas Elcock is the landlord?—Yes.

1135. Do you remember going there the end of October?—Yes.

1136. What day was that?—I cannot recollect.

1137. Was it on a Tuesday?—I cannot tell.

1138. What room did you go into?—Into the tap-room.

1139. Were there many people there?—No.

1140. Whom did you see there?—I see Samuel Adams.

1141. Do you remember about what time that was; was it at the time of the Old Hall races; do you know anything about them?—No.

1142. It was about the end of October, you say?—Yes.

1143. The last week in October, was it?—I cannot say; I am no scholar.

1144. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] Do you recollect the shooting of the riflemen for the Beauchamp cup?—No.

1145. Mr. Sturge.] You say that you went to the tap-room and saw Samuel Adams there?—Yes.

1146. Anybody else?—Joseph Tankis.

1147. Anybody else?—James Phillips.

1148. Anybody else?—George Hinton.

1149. Anybody else?—No one else that I know.

1118. Your father is James Lancet, of Wribbenhall?—Yes.

1119. And is a voter, is he?—Yes.

1120. Do you know which way he voted?—He voted for Sir Richard Glass, I believe.

1121. What does your mother work at when she does work?—She is a laundress.

1122. You said you believed that your mother had worked for Miss Nicholas; do you know how long ago, or when she worked for her?—No; I do not.

1123. Working for her when she was a laundress, was taking in washing for her, perhaps?—She might have done so.

1124. You say you believe she did; I want to know when you think she worked for Miss Nicholas; how long ago?—I am sure I cannot say; I think I have a faint recollection of Miss Nicholas having dresses washed at our place.

1125. How long ago?—Well, I cannot recollect the date.

1126. You have been asked about what you did about 5 s. that you got from Mr. Morgan for serving subpoenas; did you act as guide?—Yes.

1127. Who to; what is the man's name?—Finch, I believe.

1128. And you served subpoenas on various people?—Yes.

1129. Did Elcock say anything to you when you were serving subpoenas.

Mr. Giffard objected to the question, on the ground that it did not arise out of the cross-examination.

[The Witness withdrew.]

1150. Were there other people there that you did not know?—It may be four or five more.

1151. What time in the evening was this?—Between six and seven o'clock, as near as I can recollect.

1152. What were they doing there?—They were having some beer, and Samuel Adams was singing.

1153. Did Elcock come in?—Yes.

1154. Did he bring anything with him?—Yes.

1155. What did he bring?—Two jugs of beer.

1156. And what was done with the beer?—Drunk.

1157. By the company?—Yes.

1158. Did you get any?—Yes.

1159. Did you pay for it?—No.

1160. Did you see anybody pay?—No.

1161. How long did you stay there?—About half an hour.

1162. And then you went away?—Yes.

1163. Do you know the "Waggon and Horses," in Welsh Gate?—Yes.

1164. John Reynolds is the landlord, is he not?—Yes.

1165. Do you remember going there?—Yes.

1166. Do you remember what day that was?—No.

1167. Was that before you had been to the "Rifleman," or afterwards?—Afterwards.

1168. Soon afterwards?—It may be within a week afterwards.

1169. What room did you go into there?—In the tap-room.

1170. Were there many people there?—Yes.

1171. Who was there?—I saw Edward Aston,

Aston, George Garbett, William Genner, and Mr. Jackson.

1172. Is that William Jackson?—Yes, the painter.

1173. Does he live at Wribbenhall?—I think so.

1174. Do you recollect anybody else?—No.

1175. Was there any beer in the room?—Yes.

1176. Was it in a jug, or had everybody their own?—It was in a can.

1177. In a large can?—Yes.

1178. Did you see the company help themselves, or did anybody help them?—Yes; there was a boy pouring it out.

1179. Did you pay anything?—No.

1180. You had some?—Yes.

1181. Did you see anybody pay anything?—No.

1182. Did you see any ale taken out of the house while you were there?—No.

1183. Do you know the "Peacock"?—Yes.

1184. William Hay is the landlord, is he not?—Yes.

1185. Do you remember going there?—Yes.

1186. What day was that; was it before you had been to the "Waggon and Horses," or afterwards?—I am sure I cannot tell.

1187. Was it about the same time?—Very near the same time.

1188. Within a day or two?—Yes.

1189. Who went with you?—Thomas Harvat and James Davis.

1190. What time of day was that?—About seven o'clock at night.

1191. Did you ask for any drink?—Yes.

1211. Do you know the "Vine Inn"?—Yes.

1212. Thomas Gillam is the landlord?—Yes.

1213. Do you remember going there?—Yes.

1214. What time was that?—Between seven and eight.

1215. What day?—I do not know.

1216. Was it after you had been to the "Peacock"?—Yes.

1217. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] The same day, or a different one?—A different one.

9.

1218. Mr. Sturge.] Within a day or two?—Yes.

1219. Where did you go; into the parlour or kitchen?—Went into the kitchen first.

1220. Who were there; many people there?—Yes, a good few in the kitchen.

1221. Then did you afterwards go into the parlour?—Yes.

1222. Can you tell us who were in the parlour?—I saw Mr. Parsons.

1223. Yes; who else?—William Phillips.

1224. Who else?—Thomas Sparks, Charles Hobbs, Samuel Birch, and William Birch.

1225. Any more?—Mr. Price's engine-driver.

1226. What is his name?—I do not know his name.

1227. Anybody else?—I cannot recollect any more.

1228. How many were there altogether?—It may be 30.

1229. Do you know any of the Pountneys?—Yes.

1230. Did you see any of them there?—Yes, I saw William there.

1231. Do you know their Christian names?—I saw Osman, Edwin, and Charles.

1232. Was there any drink there?—I did not see them take any.

1233. Did you see the company drinking anything?—Yes.

1234. Who brought it in?—I did not see who brought it in.

1235. Was it in a jug or a can?—In a can.

1236. Did the company help themselves?—Yes.

1237. Did you drink?—Yes.

1238. Did you pay anything?—No.

1239. Did you see anybody pay for this?—No.

1240. In the parlour was there any speaking; did anyone make a speech?—Yes.

1241. Who was that?—I heard Mr. Parsons.

1242. What was his speech about?—He said that Mr. Lloyd would not have any chance of standing past the middle of the day.

1243. Do you know the "Labour-in-Vain" public-house?—Yes.

1244. Did you go there?—No.

1245. You have not been there?—No.

1246. Have you been to the "Cock and Pie"?—No.

1247. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] Did you say that Mr. Parsons said this in the course of conversation, or did you mean to say that he made a regular speech, and addressed the company?—He was set down.

1248. Merely conversation, then, not a speech?—Yes.

Cross-examined by Mr. Giffard.

1249. You have told my learned friend, I think, that you were half an hour at one of these places; you have not been asked about the others; how long were you at them; how long were you at the next one after the "Rifleman"?—I was about half an hour there; it may be rather better than half an hour.

1250. I think you say that you had something to drink; did you help yourself, or did anybody ask you?—They gave me some.

1251. Was that the same at all of them, or did you help yourself at any of them?—Some they gave me, and some I drank myself.

c 3

1252. I mean

J. Carter.

20 Jan.
1889.

J. Carter. 1252. I mean some of that you did not pay for?—Some I helped myself to, and some they gave me of it.
 20 Jan. 1253. Did you speak to anyone before helping yourself?—Yes.
 1869. 1254. You were not a voter I think you say?—No.

1255. You mentioned that you brought in two companions with you at one of these places, Harvat and Davis?—Yes.

1256. Those are neither of them voters, are they?—No.

[The Witness withdrew.]

JOSEPH MECHAM, sworn; Examined by Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.

J. Mecham. 1257. WHAT are you?—Labourer.
 1258. Do you recollect the latter part of last October going to the “Cock and Magpie”?—Yes.
 1259. Who did you go with?—William Payne and William Carter, and James Plevy.
 1260. Was Thomas Carter with you?—Yes.
 1261. What room did you go to when you went there?—We were in the back place.
 1262. Can you tell us what day of the month it was?—No, I cannot in particular.
 1263. What month was it in, October or November?—November, I think.
 1264. What part of November; the early part or the latter part?—I think it was somewhere about the 9th.
 1265. What room did you go into when you got into the “Cock and Magpie”?—When me and Lancet was there in the evening, we were in the back place by our two selves.
 1266. Did you go into any other place besides the back place?—Lancet was not with me when I went into the bar.
 1267. Did you go into the bar?—At night with James Plevy and William Carter, and William Payne.
 1268. What time of night did you go into the bar?—Somewhere about half-past seven at night, as near as I can guess.
 1269. How many people were there in the bar when you got there, about?—That I cannot say.
 1270. Were there few or many?—Not many, because it was a very small place.
 1271. Was the place full or empty?—It was full, the small place where we were; it would not hold above a dozen, or something like that.
 1272. Were there other rooms in the house besides that?—Yes, but I was not in them.
 1273. All you saw was in the bar?—Yes.
 1274. What were they doing in the bar?—I went in and had a pint of beer, and after we had been there a little time Mrs. Southan brought me in some beer to the bar.
 1275. Was that beer that you had ordered?—No, we did not order it.
 1276. How much beer was brought in at that time?—I cannot say.
 1277. Did the people in the bar drink it?—Yes.
 1278. Had anybody ordered it?—I cannot say.
 1279. Did you hear anybody order that?—No.
 1280. How much beer was brought into the bar, that you saw?—I was there a long while, but I did not take any notice what beer was brought in, nor how much.
 1281. Was it brought in to particular people who ordered it, or was it brought in generally for the company?—It was brought in generally for the company, I believe, for we who were in the bar. I was not in the other places.
 1282. When it was brought in, did the company help themselves, or was it given to particular people?—The company helped themselves.

1283. Did you see anybody pay for it?—No.

1284. Could you give me the names of any people you saw there?—No more than what I have told you.

1285. Did you fetch anybody there?—Yes, I did.

1286. Whom did you fetch in?—Three young girls.

1287. Did the young girls get anything to drink?—Yes; it was there for them, or anyone else as went in there as was long with we.

1288. Can you tell me any of the people who were in the bar; you have mentioned Lancet; he did not go into the bar?—No.

1289. Who were there when you went into the bar?—I was the first that went in there.

1290. Who was there that came in afterwards?—I did not notice anybody beside the three young men I told you.

1291. Do you know a man named Thomason?—Yes.

1292. Was he there?—I saw him in the kitchen; he came into the bar after we had been there a little while.

1293. Were there others besides him in the kitchen?—There were others; I cannot say whether they were paying for their own beer or not; I only saw them through the window.

1294. Did it look pretty full of people through the window?—It was full enough.

1295. Did you see a man named William Lynes?—No; he was not there.

1296. Thomas Wood?—I see him come in the house.

1297. Was he in the bar?—No.

1298. One day, late in October, did you go to the “Rifleman”?—Yes, I was at the “Rifleman”; I cannot say when it was.

1299. Was that before the “Cock and Magpie”?—Yes.

1300. What was going on at the “Rifleman” when you were there?—Me and Lancet went in there, and John Darkes, and we had two pints of beer between the three of us; and there was two half gallons of beer brought in afterwards.

1301. For the company generally?—Yes.

1302. Did any one drink it who liked?—Yes.

1303. And was that paid for that you saw?—Not that I saw.

1304. How much beer was brought in in that way at the “Rifleman”?—Only those two half gallons; that I can answer for.

1305. How long did you stay there?—Till half-past nine, or from that till ten o'clock.

1306. What room were you in?—The kitchen.

1307. How many people were there do you think?—That I cannot give no idea of at all.

1308. Was it pretty full?—Yes, it was pretty full.

1309. Did you see a man named Grove there?—Yes.

1310. Did

1310. Did you see him leave the room?—No.
 1311. Were the two half gallons finished before you left?—Yes.
 1312. After they were finished, did any more come?—Thomas Elcock brought in a five shilling piece, and gave it to Grove.
 1313. What did Grove do with it?—Spent it.
 1314. In beer?—Yes, all but 6d., and that he gave to a man who was fiddling in there.
 1315. Was that beer drank by the company at large?—Yes.
 1316. Was there any more beer drank after that?—Well, I will not say whether there was, because I am not sure. J. Mechem.

1317. Do you know Mr. Gardener?—Yes.
 1318. Did you see him there?—No.
 1319. Did you see anybody in the parlour?—No.
 1320. Did you go into the parlour, or go past the door at all?—No.
 1321. Are you a voter?—No.

Mr. Giffard stated that he would not ask this witness any questions.

JOHN GARRETT, sworn; Examined by Mr. Chandos Leigh.

1322. ARE you a voter for Bewdley?—Yes.
 1323. Where do you live?—At Spring Grove.
 1324. And are you a waggoner to Mr. Hemming?—Yes.
 1325. Do you remember going to the “Rising Sun” at Catchem’s End in October last?—Yes.
 1326. Can you fix the day?—On the 31st of October.
 1327. What did you go there for?—I am on the Foresters’ club that is held there, and it was our regular club night.
 1328. Did you go to attend a club night?—Yes.
 1329. Did you find the club business over when you got there?—Yes.
 1330. Did you go into the club room there?—Yes.
 1331. What did you find going on in the club room?—A lot of people drinking there.
 1332. Were they all club people?—No.
 1333. Had the drinking anything to do with your club?—No.
 1334. What were they drinking?—Beer.
 1335. What did they drink the beer out of?—I believe it was glasses.
 1336. Were there jugs on the table?—I think it was cans, not jugs.
 1337. Did you see any money paid?—No.
 1338. Who brought the beer in?—I think the landlord brought it in.
 1339. Did you hear orders given for beer?—No.

1340. After that, did you go into the front parlour?—Yes.

1341. Did you go of your own accord, or were you sent for?—Some person came up to the club room door and called me out, and said Sir Richard Glass wanted to speak to me.

1342. Did you go into the front parlour?—Yes.

1343. Whom did you find there?—Sir Richard Glass, Mr. Bury, young Mr. Pardoe, and Mr. Gardener.

1344. Do you mean by young Mr. Pardoe, Mr. Herbert Pardoe?—Yes.

1345. Is he that gentleman (pointing to a gentleman)?—Yes.

1346. Who is Mr. Bury?—A lawyer, I believe.

1347. A lawyer in Bewdley?—Yes.

1348. When you got into the parlour, was anything said?—Sir Richard asked me if I had any objection to give him my vote. I told him I had. He then asked me what my objections were. I told him there was a great difference in our opinions on the great questions of the day; that I could not conscientiously give my vote to any Conservative. He then asked me what my objections were. I told him that my views on the Irish Church question were in accordance with Mr. Gladstone’s views. He then asked me if I thought with Mr. Gladstone that the Irish Church ought to be swept away from Ireland altogether. I said, No, I did not believe that was Mr. Gladstone’s object either.

1349. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] You may pass over the general politics?—He asked me at last if I was a Catholic. I said I was. He said if he had known that sooner he should not have talked to me so long.

1350. Mr. Chandos Leigh.] Did you then leave the parlour?—He then asked me if I had been to consult the priest about that.

1351. After Sir Richard Glass had said to you that about your being a Roman Catholic, did you leave the parlour?—Yes.

1352. Did you go back into the club room?—Yes.

1353. What did you find there?—I found a lot of people still drinking there.

1354. Was there any toast proposed?—Sir Richard Glass’s health was drunk.

1355. Did you see anybody pay for what they had?—No.

1356. Did you pay?—No.

Mr. Giffard objected that the name of this witness was not in the treating list.

Mr. Justice Blackburn stated that it was an additional piece of evidence, to show that there was treating going on at the “Rising Sun.”

1357. Mr. Chandos Leigh.] Did you have anything yourself?—Only beer.

1358. Did you have the beer in the room where Sir Richard Glass’s health was being proposed?—Yes.

1359. Can you tell us any of the people who were in that room?—There was Philip Smith, Henry Charles; those were club members; and there was Edwin Darkes. I do not recollect any more that I knew.

1360. Did you see William Jackson there?—Yes.

1361. Was John Goodwin there?—Not up in the club room; he was in the house.

1362. Was Richard Danby there?—Yes.

Mr. Giffard stated that he would not ask this witness any questions.

J. Garrett.

20 Jan.
1869.

EMMA MOODY, sworn; Examined by Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.

1381. Do you remember any one else?—John Goodwin was there.

1382. Anybody else besides them?—There was a great many; I am sure I could not recollect.

1383. Now, you say you saw Sir Richard Glass go in and come out; how long was he there?—Half an hour, I should think.

1384. After he had come out, did you see any one on the door-step outside?—I saw Mr. Boucher and Mr. Parsons.

1385. Did you see or hear anything between Mr. Boucher and Mr. Parsons while they were standing outside?—I think money passed between them; I heard money.

1386. Just tell us a little more what you mean; did you see them do anything?—I heard the money between Mr. Boucher and Mr. Parsons.

1387. Did you see either of them give money to the other?—No; I think they did, but I do not know.

1388. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] What was it that you heard which makes you think so?—Because I heard the chinking of money in their hands.

1389. Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.] Were they close together at the time?—Yes, they were.

1390. After you had heard that, what became of them, or either of them?—I saw Mr. Parsons go in.

1391. Where did he go?—Went round the screen to the kitchen.

1392. Who was in the kitchen?—There were a lot of people there.

1393. Who keeps the house?—Mrs. Strange keeps the house.

1394. Was Mrs. Strange in the kitchen?—She was in that apartment.

1395. You say you saw Mr. Parsons go towards the kitchen?—Yes, I did.

1396. And did you follow?—No, I did not follow.

1397. Did you go into the kitchen yourself?—I went in afterwards, about ten minutes after.

1398. When you got into the kitchen what did you see; was there a table there?—Yes.

1399. What was there on the table?—There was writing paper and pen and ink.

1400. How long had you been in the kitchen before that night?—Half an hour, I dare say.

1401. Were there any things for writing on the table when you were there before?—No; I did not see that.

1402. Was there a slate in the kitchen?—Yes, there was a slate in there.

1403. And was there anybody doing anything to it?—No; I did not see him do anything to that.

1404. Did you see anybody do anything to it?—I saw some figures on it.

1405. Did you see anything done to those figures?—No.

1406. Did you see there Sarah Strange, the daughter of Mrs. Strange?—Yes.

1407. Did you see her do anything?—No; I did not see her do anything.

1408. Just think; I mean the last time you know after Mr. Parsons had gone in?—I went in afterward.

1409. Did you see Mr. Parsons in the kitchen?—No, I did not.

1410. Did you see anything done with the slate the last time you went into the kitchen?—No, I did not.

1411. Did you see anything done to the slate anywhere?—No.

1412. Did you see what became of Mr Parsons when he left?—No, I did not.

1413. What time did you leave?—About 10 o'clock.

Cross-examined by Mr. Giffard.

1414. I think you said you fetched some beer that first time you went there that evening?—Yes.

1415. How did you fetch it?—In a cup.

1416. Did you see into the parlour, where you say you saw Sir Richard Glass come out of?—I saw some gentlemen in there, but I could not say who they were.

1417. I do not know whether you can tell me this: there was no drinking going on in that parlour, was there?—I did not see anybody drinking there.

1418. There was nothing to drink there, was there?—They keep liquors in there.

1419. You

1419. You mean they usually do?—Yes.
 1420. Whether there was anything going on there then, you do not know?—No.
 1421. Was there a speech made then, do you know?—I do not know.
 1422. Your husband is not a voter, is he?—No.

JOHN MOODY, sworn; Examined by Mr. Chandos Leigh.

 1427. One Saturday in October did you go to the “Waggon and Horses”?—Yes.
 1428. Was that October 31st?—Yes.
 1429. What time did you go?—About nine o'clock, I think, I went.
 1430. And till when did you remain?—Till nearly eleven.
 1431. And where were you, in what part of the house?—In the kitchen.
 1432. Whom did you see in the kitchen?—On the outside I see Mr. Gardener coming out of the parlour, and I see Mr. Parsons, and Mr. Boucher, and Mr. Glass.
 1433. Did you see Mr. Bury there?—No.
 1434. Were people doing anything in the kitchen?—They was drinking there.
 1435. You went into the kitchen?—Yes.
 1436. Whom did you see in the kitchen?—I see lots of men out of Bewdley here.
 1437. You did not see Mr. Gardener and Sir Richard Glass in the kitchen?—No, not in the kitchen.
 1438. That was coming out of the parlour?—Coming out of the parlour.
 1439. What was taking place in the kitchen?—We were all drinking and smoking.
 1440. Can you tell us any of the people who were in the kitchen?—They were pretty well all strangers to me.
 1441. Did you know any of them?—Thomas Crewe was there from Catchem's End.
 1442. Do you know a man named Goodwin?—Yes.
 1443. Was he there?—Yes.
 1444. Do you know any of the Parmenters?—No.
 1445. What were they drinking?—Ale.
 1446. Who gave the orders?—I do not know.
 1447. Did you pay for any ale?—I paid for some, and some I had I did not pay for.
 1448. Did you see other people pay for ale?—No, I did not.
 1449. How many were there; about?—About 30 or 40.
 1450. How long were you in the kitchen?—I might be in the kitchen for pretty well an hour.
 1451. During that hour you were in the kitchen, was drinking ale going on all the time?—Yes.
 1452. Who brought the ale in?—A little girl brought the ale in, and the landlady and Mr. Saltar's blacksmiths was there.
 1453. Was there any tobacco there?—Yes.
 1454. You say that the ale was brought in by a little girl?—Yes.
 1455. How was it brought in?—In big jugs.
 1456. Where were the big jugs put?—This man, Mr. Saltar's blacksmith, had a big one under his arm; he had his arm round it, pouring out.

1423. Where does he work?—For Mr. Sturge.
 1424. That is the gentleman who is the petitioner here, Mr. Charles Sturge?—Yes.

[The Witness withdrew.]

E. Moody.
 1869.

1457. Who is Mr. Saltar's blacksmith?—His name is William.
 1458. A man of the name of William, Mr. Saltar's blacksmith, had a big jug under his arm?—Yes.
 1459. Was that jug brought in whilst you were in the kitchen?—Yes.
 1460. Was it brought in by William?—I see he coming round with it under his arm, and pouring it out to the customers.
 1461. To whom did he serve it out?—To all in the kitchen.
 1462. Did he serve any out to you?—Yes.
 1463. Did you pay for the ale which William served out to you?—No.
 1464. Did you see anybody pay for the ale served out to them by William?—No.
 1465. Besides this amount of ale served out by William, did you see any other ale served?—I see several men in the house, the landlord and they was busy about it.
 1466. Did the landlady bring in any ale?—She was busy up and down in the cellar afterwards, and she brought the jug and they poured it out. She was drawing the beer and bringing it to the top of the cellar steps, and then they took it off.
 1467. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] Who took it off?—William and the landlord.
 1468. Mr. Chandos Leigh.] You say that it was taken off by William and the landlord; what did the landlord do with the ale when he took it off?—Took it into the kitchen.
 1469. Then the landlord brought it into the kitchen as well as William?—Yes.
 1470. When the landlord brought it into the kitchen did he serve it out?—Yes.
 1471. Will you tell us, please, what happened then?—Well, I see Mr. Glass when John Goodwin went out into the road, following him out, and asking for his vote.
 1472. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] When the landlord brought the beer that he had got from his wife at the top of the cellar steps into the kitchen, what did the landlord do?—They took it of him, and poured it out to the men among the kitchen.
 1473. Who took it from the landlord?—Any of the men in the place.
 1474. Mr. Chandos Leigh.] Did you see any of that beer paid for?—No, I did not.
 1475. Was that beer that was brought up, brought up for the common use of the company, or was it ordered?—I heard no beer ordered.
 1476. You were saying something about Goodwin?—Yes; that was after the beer was stopped; and I was going out and going home, and Mr. Glass asked John Goodwin in the road for his vote.
 1477. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] How was the beer stopped?—Some one went in and ordered it to be stopped, but I cannot say who it was.
 1478. How was the tap stopped, when the house was closed or before that?—Before that; before 11 o'clock a little.

J. Moody.

J. Moody.

20 January
1869.

1479. Mr. Chandos Leigh.] Some one went in and ordered the tap to be stopped?—Yes.

1480. Can you tell us who that was?—No.

1481. After that did you see Goodwin?—Yes, after I was gone on to the road, and Mr. Glass asked John Goodwin for his vote.

1482. Where did Sir Richard Glass come from when he asked John Goodwin for his vote?—Came from the “Rising Sun.”

1483. Where did John Goodwin come out of?—Out of the “Waggon and Horses.”

1484. Did Sir Richard Glass’s carriage come up after that?—Yes.

1485. And did he go away in his carriage?—Yes.

1486. Where was the carriage; opposite where?—Stopped outside, opposite the door.

1487. What door?—At the “Waggon and Horses.”

1488. How near is the “Rising Sun” to the “Waggon and Horses”?—Pretty well 200 yards.

1489. Had you seen Sir Richard Glass in the “Waggon and Horses” before?—No; I had not been to the “Waggon and Horses” during the election; I never went up there.

1490. I am asking you about the “Waggon and Horses”; this was at the “Waggon and Horses”?—Yes.

1491. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] As I understand it, you say that Sir Richard Glass came out of the “Rising Sun,” and that his carriage was opposite the door of the “Waggon and Horses”?—Yes; but he came from the “Rising Sun” down to the “Waggon and Horses,” and the carriage met him there.

1492. Mr. Chandos Leigh.] Had you seen Sir Richard Glass in the “Waggon and Horses” at all?—Yes.

1493. Now, did you see Parsons and Boucher there?—Yes.

1494. Where did you see them?—I see them standing at the door.

1495. At the door of what?—They were a-passing money from one to the other.

1496. At the door of what did you see them?—At the door of the “Waggon and Horses.”

1497. Did you see anything happen between Parsons and Boucher?—I thought I heard money jingling passing between them.

1498. You say you thought you heard money; what do you mean by hearing money?—Passing money from one to the other; they were searching their pockets and feeling for their money.

1499. After you thought you heard them passing money, where did either of them go?—They went into the kitchen.

1500. Which?—Both of them.

Cross-examined by Mr. Giffard.

1501. Where were you when you say that you heard them jingling the money?—Just outside in the front of the house.

1502. Was your wife near you?—Yes.

1503. Were you talking to her?—No, not just at that time.

1504. How far was she from you?—Close to me.

1505. Was that before or after you had heard Sir Richard Glass speak to Goodwin?—It was after.

1506. How far from the house door was it where you heard Sir Richard Glass speak to

Mr. Goodwin?—He was outside the gate, on the turnpike road, then.

1507. How far, is my question?—Perhaps it might be 10 or 12 yards.

1508. Was he on his way from another direction when he met Goodwin?—No; he had just come out on the road.

1509 I ask, was he on his way from another direction when he met Goodwin?—He was just come outside the gate on the turnpike road.

1510. Outside the gate of what?—He called Goodwin aside to speak to him.

1511. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] You do not seem to understand the question; where was Sir Richard Glass at the time when he apparently spoke to Goodwin?—Out on the road.

1512. Sir Richard Glass was in the road; we are not asking where Goodwin came from, just now; but where did Sir Richard Glass seem to be coming from and going to at that time?—He came out of the house on to the road.

1513. Mr. Hardinge Giffard.] Out of which house?—Out of the “Waggon and Horses.”

1514. Are you quite sure of that?—Yes.

1515. Attend; you said first, that he was coming from the “Rising Sun”?—Out of the “Waggon and Horses.”

1516. Did you say he came from the “Rising Sun”?—He came from the “Rising Sun” and went into the “Waggon and Horses,” and when he came out of the parlour, he spoke to John Goodwin.

1517. He came from the “Rising Sun” to the “Waggon and Horses”?—Yes.

1518. Did you see him come?—Yes.

1519. Where were you when you saw him come from the “Rising Sun”?—Just outside the door.

1520. Of what place?—Of the “Waggon and Horses.”

1521. How could you see him come from the “Rising Sun” if you were just outside the door of the “Waggon and Horses”?—They came down from there.

1522. From where?—The “Rising Sun.”

1523. Were you at the “Rising Sun”?—No, I did not go in there.

1524. How do you know that he came from the “Rising Sun”?—There were some more men who just came down from there; they said he had been up there.

1525. Are you quite sure that when Sir Richard Glass spoke to Goodwin, it was not on his way from the “Rising Sun” to the “Waggon and Horses”?—Yes; it was from the “Waggon and Horses.”

1526. I ask you, when Sir Richard Glass spoke to Goodwin, was not it when he was on his way from the “Rising Sun” to the “Waggon and Horses”?—No; when he came out from the “Waggon and Horses” on to the road.

1527. Are you quite sure of that?—Yes; because his carriage was come up then.

1528. Never mind about his carriage at present, just think now for a moment; you said it, as I am instructed, right at first; think how it was; whether Goodwin did not go out of the “Waggon and Horses,” and whether Sir Richard Glass did not meet him on his way from the “Rising Sun”; was not that it?—No. They had both been in the “Waggon and Horses,” and both came out, and both was going on to the road.

1529. What did you hear Sir Richard Glass say?—I heard him ask John Goodwin for his vote, and and he said he could not promise it, not until he had seen his master again.

J. Moody.

1530. Who was John Goodwin's master?—Mr. Hemming.

1531. Is that the gentleman who was a candidate first himself?—Yes.

1532. Had you seen John Goodwin before?—I cannot say as I had not seen him, but not to speak to him; I had seen him.

1533. Whereabouts had you seen him?—I had seen him in the kitchen.

1534. Do you know had he been in the parlour at all?—I did not see whether he went into the parlour at all.

1535. Did you see whether he came out of the parlour?—No, he did not.

1536. He did not at that time?—No.

1537. Whether he had been in the parlour at the time Sir Richard Glass was there, you do not know?—I cannot say; I did not ever see him either go in or come out.

1538. I think you say that after this jingling of money you have described, you saw Parsons and Boucher both go into the kitchen?—Yes, they both went inside, but I was outside; they both went into the house again.

1539. I thought you said that both went into the kitchen?—I was outside, they were inside.

1540. You have said they went into the kitchen, is that right or not?—I was outside, and could not see whether they went into the kitchen or not.

1541. How came you to say that they went into the kitchen?—I did say that they went into the kitchen.

1542. How came you to say that?—I thought they went into the kitchen.

1543. Is that why you swore they did go in, because you thought they went in; had you any other reason for saying so?—They went the way for the kitchen, whether they went into the kitchen or through the house I cannot say.

1544. Did you see them come out again?—Yes.

1545. Together?—I cannot say both together, they was together directly after.

1546. If you saw them together you can say whether they came out together?—They was in and out so many times; I saw them come in and out so many times.

1547. You saw them go in after you heard this jingling of money?—Yes.

1548. Did you see them come out again after that?—Yes; I saw them come out again two or three times after that.

1549. Did you see them come out together, or not?—I saw them come out once or twice together after that, and they came out separately too.

1550. And go in again, I suppose; they must have gone in again, as you saw them come out again?—They must have gone in again; I did not see them every time.

1551. What were you doing at the door all this time?—There seemed to be a good deal going on outside; I was looking to see what was going on, as well as I could.

1552. How long do you think you were outside the door?—I daresay better than an hour.

1553. Did anybody employ you to do that, or was it for your own amusement?—It was for my own amusement.

1554. No one had employed you to be there?—No. I did not know there was anything of the sort going on, until I went down the road at nine o'clock; somewhere about nine.

1555. What time was it when you left the kitchen, after you say the tap was stopped?—About half-past 10, something like that.

1556. How long did you remain outside the door?—Till 11 o'clock.

1557. That is only half-an-hour; how long had Sir Richard Glass gone when you went away?—Not long; I cannot say exactly, but not long.

1558. About; I do not ask you to a minute, or even 10 minutes?—Perhaps he might have been gone a quarter of an hour.

1559. Then what you call the tap being stopped took place before he went away?—Yes.

1560. Were you in the parlour at all?—No.

[The Witness withdrew.]

CHARLES MILLS, sworn; Examined by Mr. Sturge.

1561. You are Mr. Sturge's gamekeeper, are you not?—Yes.

1562. Do you live at the lodge of his house?—Yes.

1563. Do you remember going to the "Wagon and Horses" in October?—Yes.

1564. What day was it in October, do you know?—The 31st.

1565. And what time of day was it?—About eight o'clock when I got there.

1566. In the evening?—Yes.

1567. What room did you go into?—Into the kitchen.

1568. Did you call for anything to drink?—Yes.

1569. What did you have?—A pint of ale.

1570. Did you pay for that?—Yes.

1571. Who did you see there?—I cannot say who I saw in particular, in the room; I did not take much notice of that.

1572. Can you remember any one?—Not very particular, not inside; I did not notice much.

1573. Were there many people there?—Yes; there were a good few people there.

9.

1574. Were they drinking?—Yes.

1575. Was there beer in the room?—There was beer in the room.

1576. What was it in; was it in pints, or what?—It was in a large jug, and poured out into glasses, from what I could see of it.

1577. Who poured it out?—I did not notice.

1578. Did you see who brought it in?—No, not particularly.

1579. Did the company help themselves?—Yes.

1580. Did you see anybody pay anything?—No.

1581. Did you have any of this beer?—Yes, I had a glass or two.

1582. You helped yourself out of the jug, did you?—No; it was given me.

1583. Who gave it you?—There was strange people there; I could not say who it was.

1584. Strange people gave it you; they poured it out of the jug?—Yes.

1585. How long did you stay there?—About two hours.

D 2

1586. What

C. Mills.

C. Mills.

20 January
1869.

1586. What time did you leave?—Ten or eleven.

1587. When you left was the drinking going on still?—I think it was nearly out then.

1588. When you left where did you go to?—Back home.

1589. Did you go straight home, or did you stay outside in the street at all?—I was out in the road at first.

1590. When you were out in the road did you see anybody come to the house?—I saw Sir Richard Glass come up to the house; I saw him in the road; I saw him go into the house.

1591. Did you see what room he went into?—No, I stood in the road; I could not say which room he went into.

1592. Did you see him come out again?—Yes.

1593. How long was he in the house?—I should think it was hardly a quarter of an hour.

1594. Did you see anybody come out with him, or did he come out alone?—There were other gentlemen with him.

1595. Can you say who they were?—No.

1596. Did you know them?—No.

1597. Did they go in with him?—Yes.

1598. Who was it?—There were other gentlemen with him; I do not know who.

1599. When he came out did he go away?—Yes; his carriage was waiting in the road, and he went away.

1600. While standing there, did you afterwards see anybody else come out?—No; no others that I know of.

1601. Do you know Mr. Parsons?—Yes.

1602. Did you see him come out?—I saw him at the door.

1603. Was that after Sir Richard Glass had gone away?—Yes.

1604. Was anybody with him?—Yes; there was another gentleman with him.

1605. Who was he?—Mr. Boucher.

1606. You saw them at the door, you say?—I saw them while they stood at the door.

1607. While they were at the door did you see them do anything?—No.

1608. Did you hear them say anything?—No; I was at a little distance.

1609. How far off were you?—Ten yards.

1610. Were they close together?—They stood in the doorway.

1611. Were they talking together?—Yes.

1612. You did not see anything?—No.

1613. You did not hear them say anything?—No, the distance was too far.

1614. Did you hear any noise?—No.

1615. Did they afterwards go into the house?—No; not that I am aware of. I left them then.

1616. You left them standing outside?—Yes.

Cross-examined by Mr. Hardinge Giffard.

1617. How came you to be there?—I do not know, I thought I would go up and have a pint of drink that night.

1618. Are you in the habit of drinking?—No.

1619. Are you a teetotaller?—No.

1620. Mr. Sturge is, I believe?—Yes, I believe he is.

1621. He is rather unpopular with the publicans on that account, is not he?—He never interfered with me in drinking.

1622. How far do you live from this place?—It might be a quarter of a mile; I cannot tell rightly.

1623. I mean from the house you went to; not from the place I am now standing; I mean from the house where you got this beer?—It might be a quarter of a mile; I cannot say for certain; it might be less.

1624. And you went up for beer?—Yes; I went up for a walk too; I was not aware that there was any open house or anything of that kind.

1625. You did not go up because you were aware that there was an open house, but it was accident that brought you there?—Yes.

1626. Then, when you went you intended to pay for what you had?—Yes.

1627. Did you offer to pay?—Yes, I did pay.

1628. For all you had to drink?—Not all.

1629. How much did you pay for?—It might be three pints, something like that.

1630. "It might be," I know; but what was it, do you think?—Ale.

1631. In what quantity do you think it was, because people sometimes forget?—I am certain I paid for two pints.

1632. Will you undertake to say you did not pay for three pints?—No doubt but what I did.

1633. Perhaps you might have paid for more; are you sure you did not; will you swear it?—I will not be quite certain of that; I will not swear it.

1634. How much did you drink altogether?—I cannot tell.

1635. About what, do you think?—I might have had some given me; I cannot tell what the quantity was.

1636. I am asking you about how much you think you drank; never mind whether it was given you or not; do not be very particular, you know, to a pint or two?—I might have had four pints, perhaps, that would be the outside.

1637. You told me just now you would not swear you did not pay for more than three pints; now, have you altered your mind about it; will you swear you did not pay for more than three pints?—I could not say that.

Re-examined by Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.

1638. Are you quite sure you had some beer which you did not pay for?—Yes.

1639. Can you give me an idea how much you had that you did not pay for?—Two or three glasses.

1640. Who gave you the two or three glasses that you did not pay for; where did that come from?—The parties that was in the house; I do not know who they were.

1641. Was any offered to you besides what you drank?—Oh, yes.

1642. How many offers did you get?—There was pretty well of them, but I did not want the quantity.

[The Witness withdrew.]

JOHN GOODWIN, sworn; Examined by The Honourable Chandos Leigh.

1643. WHERE do you live?—In Sallinton, near Spring Grove.

1644. What are you?—A labourer.

1645. Were you at the “Old Waggon and Horses” on the 31st of October?—Yes.

1646. What made you go to the “Old Waggon and Horses”?—I was invited there.

1647. Who invited you?—The landlady.

1648. Was the landlady in the habit of inviting you to her public-house?—Yes; she did then, however.

1649. Did you go there?—Yes, I did.

1650. When you got there whom did you see; did you see anybody?—There was a great many; the house was full of faces that I never saw before; a good many; there were some that I knew, and some that I did not.

1651. Before you went in, did you stand in front of the “Waggon and Horses”?—Yes.

1652. When you were standing in front of the “Waggon and Horses,” did you see anybody?—Yes.

1653. Tell us whom did you see?—I saw Mr. Glass.

1654. You saw Sir Richard Glass?—Yes.

1655. Who else?—Mr. Bury; lawyer Bury.

1656. Who else?—Mr. Gardener.

1657. Is he lawyer Gardener?—Yes.

1658. Who else?—Two of Mr. Sturge’s men I had been talking to outside.

1659. Were those Moody and Mills?—Yes.

1660. Did you see Parsons there?—Yes, he was there with Mr. Glass; there was seven or eight of them, I think, altogether.

1661. Did he come with Sir Richard Glass?—They came down the road from the “Rising Sun” together.

1662. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] You say that these were all with Sir Richard Glass?—Yes, they were.

1663. Mr. Chandos Leigh.] At what time was it that you were standing in front of the “Waggon and Horses”?—I think it was between 10 and 11; that would be it.

1664. What time was it you went into the “Waggon and Horses”?—It was about nine o’clock when I went in; it might be a little after that.

1665. When you went first to the “Waggon and Horses,” where did you go to?—I went into the house; into the back kitchen.

1666. What did you see when you got into the back kitchen?—There was plenty of drink and tobacco for them that liked it.

1667. Did you have any drink and tobacco?—I had some beer there, but I had not any baccy.

1668. Did you pay for the beer that you had?—No, I did not pay for any.

1669. Did you see anybody pay for any beer or tobacco that they had?—No, I did not see anybody pay.

1670. Did you hear anybody give orders for any beer or tobacco?—When the company were out of beer and wanted more, it was brought immediately.

1671. Who brought it?—Mr. Strange drew it.

1672. Mr. Strange is the landlord of the “Waggon and Horses”?—Yes.

1673. Who served it out to the company?—It was given to the porters to pour out and help themselves.

9.

1674. And you say when that was done they called for more?—Yes.

1675. How long did this giving of beer last till?—It was begun before I went, and it was going on after I left. I do not know how long it went on, I am sure.

1676. You left them at it?—Yes, they were there at it when I went away.

1677. When you left the kitchen, where did you go to?—I went out into the road.

1678. Was it then that you saw these gentlemen coming down in a body?—Yes; I had been in the kitchen before, and I was on my way for home, and going out I met Sir Richard Glass and his party.

1679. You say you met Sir Richard Glass and John Bury, and John Parsons?—Yes, and Mr. Gardiner.

1680. And William Jackson?—Yes.

1681. Was anybody else there?—There was another or two that I did not know with them.

1682. Did they come together?—They came together down the road.

1683. Do you know any of the Mr. Pardoes by sight?—I do not know them.

1684. Look at that gentleman (pointing to a gentleman on the Respondent’s side of the table); did you see that gentleman there?—I believe that that was one face; I am not sure.

1685. You believe that that was one face, but you will not swear it?—I will not swear it, but I believe it was.

1686. What happened then?—Mr. Jackson asked me if I would have a glass of something to drink, and I said I did not mind having a glass, and I went into the parlour and they paid for a glass of rum and water for me.

1687. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] Was Mr. Jackson along with Sir Richard Glass at this time?—Yes.

Mr. Hardinge Giffard pointed out that the name of this Witness did not appear among those of the persons alleged to have been either treated or bribed or sought to be treated or bribed.

1688. Mr. Justice Blackburn (to the Witness).]—Which way did you vote?—I voted for Mr. Lloyd.

Mr. Justice Blackburn stated that the reason why no specific notice had been given was apparently the same in this case as in the former one, namely, that as the Witness voted for the Petitioner his name was not mentioned in the Scrutiny objections.

Mr. Hardinge Giffard submitted first that even supposing that it was proved that there was treating at the “Waggon and Horses” this evidence could not go a feather’s weight towards establishing that this treating was by the authority of Sir Richard Glass.

Mr. Justice Blackburn ruled that anything done in Sir Richard Glass’s presence, which would tend to show that he was aware that liquor was given gratis, was relevant (the weight to be attached to it being greater or less according to circumstances) as tending to show that he was in the words of the Act “accessory to” treating.

John
Goodwin.
—
1869.

Mr. Hardinge Giffard submitted in the second place that the list furnished by the Petitioner had been taken by the concession of both sides as a complete list of cases of bribery and treating.

Mr. Justice Blackburn stated that it was to be regretted that notice had not been given of these cases; and that if any cases came forward in which there was ground to suppose that, by having a delay of a day or two, the Respondent could make preparations to meet them, he would adjourn the case for that purpose; but he thought that such cases could not be excluded.

Mr. Hardinge Giffard stated that if any such case arose he would make an application to his Lordship upon the subject.

1689. Mr. Chandos Leigh.] You said that Mr. Jackson asked you to have something, what was it?—A glass of something to drink.

1690. Where were you then?—Just outside the gate, in the road.

1691. Where was Sir Richard Glass at that time?—He was along—

1692. Along with Mr. Jackson?—They were going on into the house; he was there at the same time; he was close by. They was all started to go up into the house from the road, and Mr. Jackson says: "Will you have a glass of something to drink?" and I says, "Thank you, I do not mind having a glass."

1693. Did you go with them?—I went with them.

1694. Where did they go to?—Into the parlour.

1695. The parlour of what?—The parlour belonging to the public-house.

1696. Belonging to what public-house?—The "Waggon and Horses."

1697. Who went with you into the parlour at the "Waggon and Horses"?—Mr. Glass, and his party that was with him.

1698. Sir Richard Glass and the party you have mentioned before?—Yes.

1699. Did Mr. Jackson go, too?—Yes, he went with him, and he asked me what I would take to drink; I said, "A glass of rum and water, if you please."

1700. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] Was that in the parlour?—It was in the parlour.

1701. Mr. Chandos Leigh.] He repeated his offer?—Yes.

1702. Did you have a glass of rum and water?—Yes, and Mr. Jackson paid for it; I saw him pay for it.

1703. After that did they ask you anything?—No, not after that; I drank it and came away.

1704. Had you any conversation with anybody at that time?—No, not then.

1705. Were you ever canvassed for your vote?—They solicited me for my vote then; Mr. Bury did; that was before, when they met me in the road.

1706. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] Sir Richard Glass asked you for your vote in the road?—Mr. Bury and Mr. Jackson did. He did not know me. They said, "Here is Mr. Goodwin;" so they asked me if I would vote for Sir Richard Glass; I told them I could not.

1707. When was this that they asked you; was it before you went into the public-house or after?—Before I went into the public-house, before they went in at least.

1708. Mr. Chandos Leigh.] Were you asked at any other time for your vote except then?—Not by that party, by Mr. Lloyd.

1709. When were you asked by Mr. Lloyd?—Some time before that; I cannot tell the day of the month; Mr. Lloyd came to my house.

1710. Were you asked more than once that evening for your vote?—No.

1711. You went afterwards to the "Rising Sun," I believe?—Yes, I went up there.

1712. Was there anything going on there?—Very little. They were nearly all gone away when I came there.

1713. What time did you go there?—Between 10 and 11; nearly 11, perhaps.

Cross-examined by Mr. Hardinge Giffard.

1714. Who is Mr. Jackson?—A man in the town here.

1715. What vocation does he follow in the town?—He is a plumber and glazier.

1716. Had he been a friend of yours before?—No.

1717. You never spoke to him before?—I had spoken to the man; I know the man when I see him; that is all I know of him.

1718. Had you ever been in a public-house with him before?—No, not to have any conversation with him.

1719. That is not my question; have you ever been in a public-house with him before?—I have been in a public-house where he has been before, but I never had anything to do with him before.

1720. You say you had the rum and water?—Yes.

1721. Where was the rum and water got from?—I do not know; the landlady brought it.

1722. Was it in this parlour?—They generally keep it there.

1723. You seem to know where they keep it on this occasion, was it got in the parlour or brought from elsewhere?—I believe it was fetched out of the parlour.

1724. You were in the parlour, were you not?—Yes, and they generally keep it there in a cupboard.

1725. Was it hot water or cold?—Hot.

1726. Where was the hot water got from?—The fire, I suppose.

1727. Do not suppose; you are on your oath?—It was hot.

1728. Where was it brought from; was there a fire in the parlour?—I do not know.

1729. Was it brought in a jug or a kettle?—In a jug.

1730. Who brought it?—The landlady brought it.

1731. Mrs. Strange?—Yes.

1732. You said Sir Richard Glass was quite close, or some word to that effect; do you mean that he was near enough to hear what Jackson said to you?—Yes; they all stood together.

1733. Never mind about their standing together; do you believe that Sir Richard Glass was near enough to hear what Jackson said?—Yes, I do believe so.

1734. You had refused your vote, I think you say?—Yes, to that party.

1735. You had agreed to vote for Mr. Lloyd?—I had not agreed then.

1736. But you had refused to vote for Sir Richard Glass?—Yes.

1737. And you told Jackson so?—I did not tell

John Goodwin.

1869.

tell him; I told him I had not promised any one.

1738. Did you not say that you could not do so, or words to that effect?—I told him that I should not promise anyone till I saw Mr. Hemming, my master.

1739. Mr. Hemming had been a candidate himself?—Yes.

1740. On which side in politics had Mr. Hemming been a candidate?—The Liberal side.

1741. Of course, you knew that Sir Richard Glass was on the opposite side in politics?—Yes, I did.

1742. You say that Mr. Jackson was with Sir Richard Glass; did Sir Richard Glass come in his carriage?—His carriage was there, but he was not in his carriage when I saw him.

1743. He had got out of his carriage if he had been in it, when you saw him?—Yes.

1744. How near was the carriage?—Within about a dozen yards or twenty; something like that.

1745. You say you saw Jackson; was he in a crowd of other people?—No; he was with Sir Richard Glass and his party.

1746. You say “with;” that is what I am inquiring into; how many people were there altogether coming into the house?—I cannot tell how many people there was in the house.

1747. Coming into the house?—Six or seven, together with Sir Richard Glass.

1748. There were six or seven?—Yes.

1749. Will you undertake to say there were not more?—I should not think there was; I cannot say particularly to a man; I did not count them.

1750. Why do you say he was with Sir Richard Glass?—Because they all came down the road together.

1751. That is to say, from the 12 yards off, where the carriage was?—It may be rather more than 12; it was not much.

1752. How long before had you been in the road?—I had but just come out of the house.

1753. I know; but how long before that had you been there?—I had been at the “Waggon and Horses” perhaps an hour before.

1754. You had not been in the road from the time you went in till the time you came out again and saw the people you have spoken of?—No.

1755. At the time you went in first Sir Richard Glass’s carriage was not there?—No, it was not there then.

1756. Did you see the carriage drive up?—No, the carriage was stood, and a man on the box, waiting for Sir Richard Glass to come.

1757. Whereabouts was it that you first saw Sir Richard Glass?—Right opposite the gate that leads up into the house.

1758. How far from you?—It may be a dozen yards, perhaps, from the house door.

1759. That is about the same distance as the carriage?—No; the carriage was in a different direction.

1760. Do you mean that the carriage was in a different direction to the way Sir Richard Glass was walking?—The carriage was at the side of the wheelwright’s shop.

1761. Do you mean that the carriage was in a different direction to the way Sir Richard Glass was walking; attend to my question?—Sir Richard Glass was walking along the middle of the road, and the carriage was on one side of the road.

1762. Was he walking in the direction as if he had come from his carriage or not?—Yes; he was coming from his carriage.

1763. How far was he from the carriage when you first saw him?—About seven or eight yards, perhaps.

1764. And how far was the carriage from you?—About the same when I saw him.

1765. Whereabouts was this man Jackson with reference to Sir Richard Glass?—He was along with him.

1766. You have told me that a great many times; I ask you whereabouts?—Right in the front of the “Waggon and Horse’s” door.

1767. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] Was he holding Sir Richard Glass’s arm, or walking before him, or behind him, or what?—No.

1768. What was he doing?—Walking by the side of him; they all came down the road together.

1769. Mr. Hardinge Giffard.] You did not see them, you know?—I saw them when they came to me.

1770. You keep repeating that they all come down the road together. You first saw Sir Richard Glass when he was about seven yards from his carriage?—Yes, he was.

1771. Where was this man Jackson, with regard to Sir Richard Glass, when you first saw Sir Richard Glass?—Close by him.

1772. Behind him, before him, or one side of him. Now, attend and answer directly?—He was before him.

1773. How far before him?—Not above a yard or two.

1774. That was when you first saw them?—Yes.

1775. How in the world do you know whether they came down the road together or not?—They were coming down; they came down to meet me as I came out of the house. Do you think I could not see whether they came to meet me or not.

Re-examined by Mr. Fitzjames Stephens.

1776. When you came out of the house, whom did you see?—I saw Jackson and Sir Richard Glass, and the party that was with him.

1777. Were any of them walking arm-in-arm, or were they all walking separate?—No, they were not; I did not see them walk arm-in-arm.

1778. Did you hear them speak to each other?—No, not in particular.

1779. When you went into the parlour where the liquor was, how large a room was it; how many people were there in the parlour when you went into the parlour?—There was no one but them, that party and me, that went in. The parlour was empty at that time.

1780. Did they stand or sit, or what?—They sat, one in one place and one in another, round the room, and they called, one for a glass of one thing and another another.

1781. Is this parlour a large room or a small room?—Not very large nor very small; a middling-sized room.

1782. Was Sir Richard Glass sitting or standing?—Sitting.

1783. And was Mr. Jackson sitting or standing?—He was sitting.

1784. How near to Sir Richard Glass was Mr. Jackson sitting?—He was on one side of the room and Sir Richard Glass on the other.

John
Goodwin.
—
20 January
1869.

1785. Was there a table between them?—Yes.

1786. Were they nearer or further from one another than Mr Hardinge Giffard and myself?—They were not that near, I think.

1787. How near were they?—The same as if one was here (pointing to the furthest corner of the table on the left hand), and the other there (pointing to half way down the table on the right hand).

1788. Where were you?—I was at the one end. As soon as I went in I took a place on a chair; here, as it might be (describing the same).

1789. Was it a square table like this?—Yes.

1790. Suppose it were this table, where would Sir Richard Glass be sitting?—At that corner (pointing to the farthest corner on the right hand).

1791. Where would Jackson be sitting?—At this side here (pointing to the left-hand side).

1792. Where were you sitting?—There (pointing to a position near the last).

1793. When you saw them out in the road first, who came into the house first, Jackson or Sir Richard Glass?—Mr. Glass went in first; Jackson walked up just before me.

1794. You said as they came along towards the “Waggon and Horses” Jackson was in front of Mr. Glass?—When they came down the road he was in front, and came and spoke to me, because Jackson knew me, Mr. Glass did not.

1795. How near was Sir Richard Glass to you when Jackson was speaking to you?—He was as near as from me to you, for instance.

1796. What did Jackson say when he spoke to you?—He said that this was Mr. Glass, and asked if I would vote for him; and Mr. Bury was talking to me.

1797. Did he stand still to speak to you?—Yes.

1798. Did Sir Richard Glass stand still or did he go on?—He stood still for a short time.

1799. Was Sir Richard Glass standing still at the same time you were talking to Jackson?—Yes, he stood in the road opposite the gate.

1800. Then, after your talk with Jackson was over, was it then that you went into the house?—Yes.

[The Witness withdrew.]

JAMES BISHOP, sworn; Examined by Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.

J. Bishop.

1801. What are you?—A labourer.

1802. Were you at the “Waggon and Horses” on the 31st of October?—Yes.

1803. Did you see Sir Richard Glass there?—Yes.

1804. When you saw Sir Richard Glass, where was he?—In the parlour.

1805. And were there other people in the parlour besides?—Yes.

1806. Did you see him anywhere else besides in the parlour?—No.

1807. Were you in the parlour?—Yes.

1808. Who else was there then?—There were several others there as I did not know.

1809. Did you hear Sir Richard Glass say anything?—No, I did not.

1810. Just think; did you hear him say anything at all?—No, I did not.

1811. Did you have any conversation with your master, Thomas Lowe; did you soon after this “Waggon and Horses” affair tell anything to Mr. Thomas Lowe; that may just remind you; he is a good master, is not he?—Yes.

1812. Did you tell anything to Mr. Thomas Lowe. I do not ask what you said, but anything about what you had heard at this “Waggon and Horses”?—I said —.

1813. Never mind what you said; you did say something to him?—Yes.

1814. You remember what you said to your master?—Yes.

1815. Now, I ask you did you hear Sir Richard Glass say anything that day; you know you have spoken to your master about it. Come tell us did you hear Sir Richard Glass say anything that evening?—No.

1816. Just think, you know?

After a short pause,

Mr. Justice Blackburn intimated that it was of no use pressing the Witness any further upon this point.

1817. Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.] What was going on in the parlour; what was Sir Richard Glass doing there?—He was talking to a gentleman taking to the company.

1818. What did he say to the company?—I could not tell what he said; I could not tell what his conversation was; I was not close enough to hear him.

1819. Was not he speaking loud?—No.

1820. Was any speech made, or anything of that kind?—No.

1821. Who was there in the room?—There was several in the room as I did not know.

1822. Were there any in the room that you did know?—No.

1823. Nobody in the room that you knew, except yourself?—There was Sir Richard Glass there.

1824. What were you doing in the “Waggon and Horses”?—I went there as a treat, because it was open house.

1825. Did you get any liquor there?—I got some beer there.

1826. Did you pay for it?—No.

1827. Did other people get beer there?—Yes.

1828. Did you vote?—No; I have no vote at all.

1829. Was there any speaking done at the “Waggon and Horses”?—I heard no speaking at all.

1830. Were you in the parlour all the time?—No.

1831. How came you to go into the parlour?—I was sent for.

1832. Who sent for you?—A gentleman.

1833. What gentleman?—Mr. Hemmingway.

1834. Was he there?—Yes.

1835. He is a clerk to the town clerk, I think, is not he?—I believe he is.

1836. How near were you to Sir Richard Glass when you were in the parlour; were you as near to him as you are to me now?—Yes.

1837. You were?—Yes, I was.

1838. Was anything said to you that he could hear; was anything said to you in his hearing?—No, not that I am aware of.

1839. What happened to you when you had got there; did you get anything to drink, or what?—I had some liquor.

1840. Mr.

1840. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] In the parlour?—In the parlour.

1841. Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.] I want to know what you went into the parlour for; what was done when you got there?—I was sent for into the parlour.

1842. What for?—To go of an errand.

1843. Where to?—Up to Mr. — (the Witness paused.)

1844. Mr. what; come?—Up to Mr. Ince.

1845. Did you fetch Mr. Ince?—No; he was gone to bed.

1846. He is a voter, is he?—I cannot tell whether he voted or no; I was sent for him.

1847. But he has got a vote, has not he?—Yes, he has got a vote.

1848. Who sent you to Ince?—Mr. Hemmingsway.

1849. Did he tell you to go in the presence of Sir Richard Glass and the other gentlemen there?

—He told me to go and ask Mr. Ince to come down; there was a gentleman wanted to see him.

1850. Who was the gentleman who wanted to see him?—I cannot tell.

1851. Did he say who the gentleman was?—No, he did not.

1852. And Mr. Ince was in bed, was he?—Yes.

1853. At any rate he did not come?—No.

1854. Were you sent to fetch anybody else that night?—No.

1855. Or on any other errands at all?—No.

Mr. Hardinge Giffard stated that he did not wish to cross-examine the witness.

J. Bishop.

1869.

Mrs. HANNAH STRANGE, sworn; Examined by Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.

1856. ARE you the landlady of the “Waggon and Horses”?—Yes.

1857. Were there a quantity of people at your house on the 31st of October?—The 31st of October; well, I am sure I cannot tell that night in particular.

1858. Do you recollect Sir Richard Glass being at your house one night at the end of October?—He was at our house one night, but I did not see him.

1859. On that night that Sir Richard Glass was at your house, was there a lot of people drinking there?—It was on the Saturday night; we have a good many of a Saturday night generally.

1860. Were there a good many that night?—I am sure I cannot tell who was there that night in particular.

1861. Were there a good many people there; had you a great lot of people there?—No more than usual of a Saturday night.

1862. Was there a quantity of beer served out to people there?—There generally is of a Saturday night.

1863. Was there more beer than usual served out that Saturday night?—I do not know that there was.

1864. Who takes the money for the beer that is served out there?—I did not receive it from the customers; I had a person there waiting for me that night.

1865. Who was the person waiting for you that night?—My husband's sister, Mrs. Crew.

1866. Did she receive the money?—She received some money.

1867. Was there anybody else waiting besides Mrs. Crew?—Yes, my little girl was waiting.

1868. What is her name?—Sarah; she has been here to-day.

1869. Was there anybody else besides your little girl Sarah and Mrs. Crew waiting at your house that night?—No, there was not.

1870. Did they take all the money that was taken?—Yes, they did.

1871. Was beer and tobacco, or was beer served out there and given to people who did not pay for it that night?—Not as I know of; I might have trusted somebody with a quart of ale. I cannot tell now to be certain of that.

1872. Do you know anything of gallon jugs of ale being taken in and served to anybody that wanted them there—to anybody who liked to take it without being charged?—No.

1873. You say that nothing of that kind happened?—No; not as I am aware of, however; the beer was paid for.

1874. The beer was paid for?—Yes, it was.

1875. By the people who had it?—I suppose so; the money was brought to me.

1876. Who brought it to you?—Mrs. Crew and my little daughter.

1877. What is Mrs. Crew's other name?—Eliza Crew.

1878. What is her husband's name?—Thomas Crew.

1879. Was Thomas Crew there?—Yes.

1880. Was Alfred Crew there?—I cannot tell whether Alfred was there or not.

1881. You say that Mrs. Crew took money; how much money did Mrs. Crew bring you?—I cannot tell; she brought me different sums at different times.

1882. Did you go down into the cellar to draw beer that night?—I daresay I did.

1883. Can you tell me how much beer you drew that night?—No; indeed I could not.

1884. Did anybody besides you draw any beer?—Yes, the master did.

1885. Mr. Strange?—Yes, Mr. Strange.

1886. Did he take any money?—I daresay he did; I am sure I cannot tell that now; if I had known it I would have kept a better account who took the money, but I was paid for the beer, I know.

1887. Did you get any orders from anybody to serve out beer to anybody who came?—No; indeed I did not.

1888. Did you get any orders from any person to serve out beer to any people, except the people who ordered it?—No, I did not.

1889. Not at any time?—No, I did not.

1890. Do you know a Mr. Boucher?—Mr. who?

1891. Mr. Boucher?—The druggist in Bewdley?

1892. Yes?—I have seen him; yes.

1893. Do you know Mr. Parsons?—Yes.

1894. Were they at your house that night?—Yes, they were.

1895. Did you receive any money from either of them?—No, I did not.

1896. Did they come to you in the kitchen?—No, not to me, they did not.

1897. Not to you?—No, they did not.

1898. Did you see them in the kitchen?—No,

E

not

Mrs.

H. Strange.

Mrs. not in the kitchen; I saw them in the parlour; I just saw them, but I did not speak to them.
H. Strange. 1899. Did you receive anything from either of them?—No, I did not.
 26 January 1869. 1900. Do you know a man of the name of John Moody?—Yes.

Mr. Justice Blackburn stated that Mr. Fitzjames Stephen might treat this witness as if he were cross-examining her.

1901. Mr. Fitzjames Stephen (to the Witness).] Do you know John Moody?—Yes.

1902. Did you ever speak to John Moody about there having been a treat at your house?—Not as ever I am aware of.

1903. Will you swear that you did not?—No, I did not.

1904. Did you ever say you had been paid for the treat that same evening to John Moody?—All the beer that was had that night was paid for.

1905. Did you ever say you had been paid for the treat that evening to John Moody?—No; I should think I never did.

1906. Are you sure; will you swear you never did?—No, I never did.

1907. You never did say so?—No, I never did.

Mr. Justice Blackburn.] Witness, you are aware that if it should be found afterwards, and can be proved that any of these answers are untrue, you will be liable to be tried for perjury. Now attend to the questions, and answer them.

1908. Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.] Do you know John Coles?—The butcher; yes.

1909. Did you see him one evening early in November, the 6th of November?—I cannot tell; I have my meat of him; I see him most weeks.

1910. Did you not, early in November, tell him that Mr. Parsons paid for the drink which was supplied to the party on the previous Saturday?—Mr. Parsons nor no one else did not pay me; my little girl and the other waiter gave me the money. If he paid them, that is another thing.

1911. Did you not tell John Coles that Parsons had paid for the drink?—No; Parsons never paid me a penny, nor ordered the drink.

1912. Did you not tell Coles that he did?—No; I have no recollection of anything of the sort.

1913. Will you venture to swear you did not tell him so?—I have no recollection of anything of the sort.

1914. Will you venture to swear that you did not tell him so?—I do not remember saying anything of the kind to any one.

1915. Will you venture to swear positively that you did not?—I cannot remember that I did; I do not remember saying anything of the kind.

1916. Your memory is getting worse; you may have said such a thing to Coles and have forgotten it, may you not?—Why should I have said so? I did not receive any money of Parsons, nor of any other man.

1917. May you have said such a thing to Coles and forgotten it?—I never received money of Coles, nor any other man.

1918. May you have told Coles that Parsons had paid you, and forgotten it?—I never remember saying anything of the kind.

1919. You will not go beyond, you do not remember it?—I cannot remember anything of the kind.

1920. May you have said it and forgotten it?—No, I do not say that; I say I cannot remember it.

1921. Do you know Emma Moody, the wife of John Moody?—Yes.

1922. Was Emma Moody there that night?—Yes, she was; she came for her supper there.

1923. Did you invite her to come?—No, I did not; I am sure I did not.

1924. Do you know John Goodwin?—I will tell you about that; we were about having the shoe club supper as we have usually; I invited him to come to the club supper; but we did not happen to have it on that night.

1925. Why did you invite him for that night?—Because it was our regular night to have one.

1926. How came you not to have that regular club supper that night?—I cannot tell; something happened that made it not convenient.

1927. What was it that happened that made it not convenient to have the club supper?—I cannot tell.

1928. You remember about the club supper as your reason for not inviting Goodwin; when did you invite Goodwin?—The last time I saw him before that night.

1929. How long before was it?—I cannot tell how long before.

1930. When did you determine not to have the club supper; when did you put it off?—I cannot tell that; I could not answer that question now, indeed.

1931. Just try a week before?—I cannot answer it.

1932. How often do you have this club supper?—At the finishing of the shoe club; we have a shoe club —

1933. That is at the end of the year?—No; that is every 22 weeks.

1934. When was it that you determined to put it off?—I cannot tell; I cannot answer that question.

1935. Why was it you determined to put it off?—I cannot answer it.

1936. Try and answer it?—I cannot answer it.

1937. Who is the person who manages the club supper?—We have it cooked at home; myself.

1938. Who orders it and pays for it?—The shoemaker and myself between us.

1939. What is the shoemaker's name?—Mr. Southan.

1940. Did he order it this time?—No, it was Mr. Clayton that ordered the finishing of that club; but Mr. Southan has got the club going on now.

1941. When did they determine not to have the supper?—I could not, indeed, answer that question.

1942. How come you to have forgotten all about it; how many people do you generally have at the supper?—It depends upon how many people there are in the club; sometimes 14 or 15, sometimes more.

1943. Then it would be an important thing to you; why did you put it off?—I cannot give any reason.

1944. Did you send word to the people who were to have come, that there was not to be a shoe shoe club supper?—I forget now how it was; I cannot answer that question.

1945. Did you get the victuals into the house for the shoe supper?—Yes; we mostly have meat in the house.

1946. Did you cook the food?—No, we did not.

1947. Then it must have been a day before, at all events, when you put it off?—I cannot tell whether it was only the day before that, or when.

1948. Were not your rooms wanted for something else?—I cannot answer that question.

1949. Your daughter you say gave you money?—Yes.

1950. Is that Sarah Strange?—Yes.

1951. How much did she give you?—I cannot tell now; she gave me the money that was paid to her in the kitchen; she handed it over to me. I cannot tell how much it was.

1952. She gave you the money that was paid to her in the kitchen; as a general thing of a Saturday night, do you give trust to people?—I have done so, and often do.

1953. When a person gets a pot of beer of a Saturday night, as a general thing he pays the money, I suppose?—But they are not paid every week; sometimes their masters pay them once a fortnight.

1954. Supposing a person calls for beer and has some beer of an evening, when does he pay; he pays when he has it, I suppose?—Yes, if he has got the money, he does.

1955. Then, does your girl bring it to you?—Yes, generally.

1956. She brings it to you as she takes it?—Yes, if I am in the house.

1957. You sit in the bar and take it, I suppose?—No, I am at work.

1958. At any rate she brings it to you?—Yes.

1959. So that if there was a good deal of drinking going on she would be bringing you money all the evening; is that the common thing?—Yes, she brings me money as she receives it.

1960. This evening she paid paid you money, I understand?—Yes, several times; so did her aunt, Mrs. Crew.

1961. What was the total amount she paid?—I cannot tell, I am sure.

1962. She paid you some that she received in the kitchen?—Yes, as she received it she paid it me.

1963. How many times in the evening did she pay you?—I could not tell.

1964. Do you keep a slate in the kitchen?—Yes.

1965. Did you enter any scores that evening?—Yes, we entered some that evening, but they were wiped off as the money was paid.

1966. Do you recollect what money she brought you, whether it was shillings, or coppers, or what?—No, I do not; it was both.

1967. You do not recollect how much?—No, I do not, indeed. I do not recollect.

1968. Do you know a man of the name of William, or Williams, who is Mr. Saltar's blacksmith?—Yes.

1969. Was he at your house that night?—Yes.

1970. Did he wait for you, serving customers?—Yes, that night he did.

1971. Did he take any money?—I cannot tell whether he did or not. I cannot remember that.

1972. Do you recollect whether he went round with a big jug under his arm?—I cannot tell; I was not looking after him and what he did.

1973. You cannot tell whether he did or not?—No, I cannot.

1974. Did your husband vote in this election?—Yes.

1975. He voted for Sir Richard Glass?—Yes.

1976. Was Mrs. Moody waiting that evening?—No.

1977. Did she not get some tobacco for you?—Yes, she did fetch me some tobacco, I think.

1978. You sent her out to get some tobacco, did you not?—Well, I daresay I did.

1979. Was that tobacco for your customers?—It was for me to sell.

1980. To sell to your customers?—Yes.

1981. That night?—Yes, that night, and other nights; what was left.

1982. Did that tobacco go up to the table in saucers in large quantities?—I sent three pen'orth on the table at a time.

1983. Then, did you let your customers help themselves?—When they pay me for it they can do what they like with it after; eat it if they like.

1984. Did you give the three pen'orth to the men who ordered it, or did you put the three pen'orth on the table all open?—If they asked me for three pen'orth of tobacco, they had it.

1985. If who asked you?—Any of them; it did not matter to me.

1986. Do you not generally sell your tobacco in screws?—Yes, mostly in pen'orths.

1987. This time you say it was in three pen'orths?—I weighed three pen'orth, and sent it in on a plate.

1988. Open?—Yes.

1989. Did you not do that more than once?—Yes.

1990. Did you use up what tobacco you had, and sent out Mrs. Moody to get you more?—Yes.

1991. And it was sent up in three pen'orths on plates open?—Yes.

1992. Who gave you the orders?—I cannot tell you; one of the customers that was in the house.

1993. Did you yourself wait upon the customers?—No, I did not wait upon them.

1994. Then somebody must have brought you the orders?—Yes, they did.

1995. Who brought you the orders?—I cannot tell now who it was.

1996. Did you get the 3d. before you sent up the three pen'orth of tobacco?—I cannot tell now how it was, but I was paid for it.

1997. But you did send up three pen'orths of tobacco on that occasion in saucers?—Yes.

1998. And I think you say generally you send it in screws?—If there is not but one person in the house, and he asks for a pennorth of tobacco, he has it; sometimes if there is three or four, they ask for three pen'orth of tobacco, and they have it.

1999. On this occasion it went up in three pen'orths; do you recollect whether the ale went up in gallon jugs that night?—It went up in pints and quarts, and half-gallons. I daresay there was some went up in gallons; just as they wanted it.

2000. Do you mean to say that you got your money for your beer upon every order that was given?—I cannot say it was every order, or how it was, but I had the money; they brought me the money.

2001. The people in the place?—Not the people, but my waiters; my daughter and my sister-in-law.

2002. Then it was Sarah Strange and Mrs. Crew who brought you the money?—Yes.

2003. You remember Sir Richard Glass coming there?—I did not see him in the house at all; I did not see him.

2004. Do you recollect his being in the parlour?—He was there. I heard them say he was there, but I did not see him.

2005. Was he there at other times besides that?—He called to ask for the master's vote.

2006. That evening?—No, not that evening; some time before.

2007. When he called to ask for the master's vote, who came with him?—I am sure I cannot tell who was with him.

2008. Mr. Boucher?—I saw Mr. Webster with him, I think, once.

2009. Did you see Mr. Boucher with him?—No.

2010. Mr. Parsons?—No, I think not.

2011. Did you see Mr. Parsons with him?—No, I do not think I ever did.

2012. On this evening do you know whether there were any orders given about the parlour, or who was shown into the parlour?—I was not in the parlour at all that night, so I do not know.

2013. You were the mistress of the house; was the parlour kept for anybody in particular?—The parlour was not kept for anybody. I could not tell who they all were that was in there.

2014. Did you know beforehand that Sir Richard Glass was coming there that night?—No, I did not.

2015. You had not been told beforehand?—No, I never was, because he had been to call to ask the master for his vote two or three times.

2016. Were you about the house that night in the different rooms?—Yes, I was at home.

2017. You had been in the kitchen for one thing?—I did not wait upon them; I had my sister-in-law to wait, and my little daughter. I did not wait at all.

2018. You did not go into the parlour at all?—I did not go into the parlour at all.

2019. The whole evening?—No, I was not in the parlour at all the whole evening.

2020. Where did you remain the whole evening?—In the back part of the house where my family and children were.

2021. Did your husband promise his vote the first time that Sir Richard Glass came?—I cannot tell nothing about that; he never told me he should vote. Mr. Hemming came to canvass, and he promised Mr. Hemming his vote, and while Mr. Hemming was——

Mr. Hardinge Giffard objected to the evidence.

2022. Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.] On a Saturday night do you generally have in people to wait, or do you do your waiting yourself?—My sister-in-law often comes in to assist me while I wash the children, and send them to bed.

2023. Did you wash the children that night?—Always of a Saturday night; I always do.

Cross-examined by Mr. Hardinge Giffard.

2024. Is it true that you brought in hot rum and water for Goodwin into the parlour?—Not me; I was not in the parlour at all.

2025. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] When you get things put down upon the slate, anything that has been served and not paid for at the time, when it is paid for you rub it out, I suppose?—Yes, I always do.

2026. If it is not paid for on the evening, you keep it in a book I suppose?—Yes, we keep it in a book.

2027. On the 31st day of October last, did you book anything as being served upon trust?—No.

2028. Then all that was served on this 31st of October was paid for, either by the people themselves or by somebody else that same night?—Yes, it was.

[The Witness withdrew.]

Sarah Strange was called.

Her mother stated that she was ill and had been obliged to go home.

[Adjourned to To-morrow, at Ten o'clock.]

Thursday, 21st January 1869.

THOMAS COOPER, sworn; Examined by Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.

2029. WHAT are you?—A labourer.

2030. Are you the brother-in-law of a man called Fox?—Yes.

2031. The landlord of the "Acorn" public-house?—Yes.

2032. Do you recollect being at the "Acorn" public-house the day the town council was chosen?—Yes.

2033. That would be the 1st of November?—Yes.

2034. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] That was on a Sunday. Was it on the Monday or the Saturday, or what day when you were at the "Acorn"?—On the Monday.

2035. Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.] What were you doing at the "Acorn," or going to do; for what purpose were you there?—I went in intentionally to have a pint of beer, but when I got there—

2036. Did you wait there?—Yes.

2037. Do you know Mr. Burnish?—Yes.

2038. Did you see Mr. Burnish there?—Yes.

2039. In what room?—In the parlour.

2040. What did Mr. Burnish say to you, if anything?—He came out, and he asked me where Fox was.

2041. What did you say to that?—That he were in the cellar.

2042. After you had said Fox was in the cellar, what happened next?—He asked me please to show him the way down into the cellar.

2043. What did you do?—I showed him the way into the cellar.

2044. When Mr. Burnish got into the cellar, what was said?—He said they were getting on too fast.

2045. Who said that?—Mr. Burnish.

2046. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] Whom did he say that to?—To Fox.

2047. Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.] Tell us the words he said as well as you recollect?—He said that we were getting on too fast, and that the tap must be stopped for half an hour.

2048. Were there people drinking in the house then?—Yes.

2049. Had you been serving them?—I took up one jug when Mr. Burnish asked me.

2050. When Mr. Burnish asked you; you had not before?—I had emptied one jug, and was coming back with a jug.

2051. When you set out with that jug, were you paid for it, or did you put it upon the table without being paid?—I poured it out.

2052. Were you paid by the people for whom you poured it out?—No.

2053. Then you tell us Mr. Burnish said the tap must be stopped for half an hour?—Yes.

2054. What happened after he had said that?—Half an hour after—

2055. Was there any more beer drawn after that?—No; not for about half an hour.

2056. After half an hour what happened?—He came out of the parlour again.

2057. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] Who; Mr.

Burnish?—Yes; and he gave orders for five gallons more beer to be drawn.

2058. Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.] Did you hear him?—Yes.

2059. Before he gave orders for the five gallons more to be drawn, what were the people doing who were in the house after the beer had been stopped for half an hour; what did they do?—They all sat down waiting for some more.

2060. Did they call for more, or make any remarks?—Yes, they kept asking for some more beer.

2061. Did they ask quietly or loudly?—They did not ask very quiet.

2062. Just tell us what kind of a business it was; did one ask, or many?—They were pretty nearly all of them asking for it.

2063. Did they say, "Please more beer," or did they shout, or what did they do?—They kept on saying, "Now, Tommy, bring us some more beer."

2064. And then you said there was this additional supply of five gallons?—Yes.

2065. Was there anybody else in the parlour besides Mr. Burnish?—Yes; there was a quantity of people in the parlour.

2066. Do you know any of those who were there?—Yes.

2067. Tell me who was there that you knew?—Mr. Smith, of the "Dog-wheel."

2068. Who else?—And Mr. Hughes, of the "Running Horse," and William Jackson.

2069. He was there, William Jackson?—Yes.

2070. Anybody else that you know?—Not that I can just recollect.

2071. Do you know Mr. Gardener; lawyer Gardener?—Yes.

2072. Did you see him that night?—No; I do not recollect seeing him that night.

2073. Was he in the parlour?—I did not see him.

2084. Did you see him?—No; I did not see him there.

2085. Do you know the Pountney family?—Yes.

2086. Did you see any of the Pountney's?—Not that I can recollect.

2087. Dr. Webster?—No.

2088. Mr. Bury, was he there?—No; not that I see.

T. Cooper.

1869.

T. Cooper.

Cross-examined by Mr. Hardinge Giffard.

1869.

2089. What were you doing there yourself; were you waiting?—Yes.

2090. You mentioned that you brought up a jug, I think you said first?—Yes.

2091. Where did you get it?—In the cellar.

2092. Did you go and help yourself out of the cellar, to serve the customers without any further orders from anybody else?—Fox gave it me.

2093. Fox gave you the order?—No.

2094. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] Fox gave you the beer, not the order?—Yes; Fox gave me the beer.

2095. Mr. Hardinge Giffard.] Who had ordered it from you?—No one had ordered it from me.

2096. Had you received any general order or any specific order for this jug?—When I went in I saw they could not carry up the beer fast enough; and me being brother-in-law, I thought I would help them go; I picked up a jug and went down into the cellar.

2097. And then, I suppose you said to your brother-in-law, that you wanted a jug of beer, or did you simply hold out the jug and have it filled?—He said he was glad I was come, and then I held out my jug, and he filled it for me.

2098. That was all that passed between you?—Yes; he filled the jug and I brought it up.

2099. You said you are a labourer; who are you with?—Mr. Sturge.

2100. Mr. Charles Sturge?—Yes.

Re-examined by Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.

2302. John Smith?—Yes.

2303. Thomas Cleeton?—I do not recollect it.

2304. Richard Danby?—Yes.

Cross-examined by Mr. Hardinge Giffard.

2305. Who is Richard Gardener that you spoke of?—Who is he?

2306. That is my question. Is that very difficult to answer; who is Richard Gardener; you appear to know him?—Yes; he lives on Venus's Bank.

2307. What is he by trade?—A labourer.

2308. What sort of a labourer?—He makes besoms.

2309. You said you went to a meeting at the "Wheatsheaf," for which you got a ticket from your wife?—Yes.

2310. Was there anything printed on the ticket?—Yes.

2311. Was the meeting a meeting of some association?—I cannot tell.

2312. Are you a member of any association?—No.

2313. Can you read?—No.

2314. Your wife did not tell you what it was?—No.

2315. Do you know whether there is a Conservative association?—I cannot tell.

2316. You never heard of it?—Not as I am aware of.

2317. Pray is there another man of your name a voter in Bewdley?—No, not as I am aware of.

2318. Is there another man of your name?—Yes.

2319. Thomas Ashcroft is his name too?—Yes.

2320. There is another Thomas Ashcroft, then, is there?—Yes.

2321. You do not know whether he is a member of that association, because you do not know whether there is such an association?—I do not know whether he is a member or not.

2322. More than that, you do not know that there is such a thing as an association in Bewdley; you never heard of it?—Not as I know of, I have never heard of it.

2323. You did not know at all whether you were going to that meeting as a member of an association, and whether the ticket had got to you by mistake?—No, I cannot tell.

2324. Do you know the other Thomas Ashcroft, to speak to?—Yes.

2325. Have you never heard from him that he is a member of an association?—No.

2326. Did you see your namesake at that meeting?—No.

2327. So far as you know, he was not there?—No.

2328. How long do you suppose you were at the meeting altogether?—At the "Sheaf"?

2329. Yes?—I dare say I was there a couple of hours.

9.

2330. Was there only this one speech made? T. Ashcroft.
—Mr. Bury was speaking.

2331. Was there only this one speech made? 21 January 1869.
—Yes, Mr. Bury made one.

2332. Who else made one?—Nobody, as I know of.

2333. Was there speechifying going on all the time you were there?—No.

2334. Did the speeches begin as soon as you got in, or afterwards?—Oh! afterwards.

2335. Did anybody take the chair?—Yes.

2336. Who was it that took the chair?—Mr. Parsons at first.

2337. Who then?—I do not know him.

2338. Some other gentleman got into the chair?—Yes.

2339. Did Mr. Parsons go away then?—No; he did not go away; he got up and sat on another chair.

2340. Was there a person who occupied the chair, and whom the speakers addressed as "Sir"?—I do not recollect it.

2341. Can you tell me what the first speech was about?—No.

2342. You do not remember any part of that?—No.

2343. Come now, tell me this: did they mention the Conservative and Constitutional Association at all?—Not as I remember.

2344. Come now, think. Just think whether there were not speeches about the association, and about defending the English and the Irish Church, and about Mr. Gladstone and Mr. Bright. Come now, think?—Yes; I remember that being said.

2345. Do you remember all that I put to you or only part of it?—Part of it.

2346. What part do you recollect; my learned friend wants to know which part of it made an impression upon you?

Mr. Justice Blackburn stated that it was unnecessary to go into further detail, as it was plain what the general object of the speech was.

Re-examined by Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.

2347. About this ticket; did your wife tell you who gave you the ticket, or where it had come from?—Yes.

Mr. Giffard objected to this evidence.

Mr. Justice Blackburn ruled that the evidence now proposed to be given was inadmissible, and suggested that probably either the ticket itself, or a counterpart of it, might be produced.

2348. Mr. Fitzjames Stephen (to the Witness).] You were there, you say, two hours, about?—Yes; I am sure I was there two hours.

2349. All the time in the same room?—Yes.

2350. Were there other rooms in the same house to put the people into?—Yes.

Mr. Giffard objected to the examination on the ground that it did not arise out of the cross-examination.

Mr. Justice Blackburn stated that Mr. Fitzjames Stephen might ask the question, and if Mr. Giffard wished to cross-examine upon it, he might do so afterwards.

2351. Mr. Fitzjames Stephen (to the Witness).] F Were

T. Ashcroft. Were there other rooms in the house at the "Wheatsheaf" besides the room in which you were?—There are sure to be other rooms in the house.

2352. I know that; were there any other rooms in which there were company?—I do not know that.
2353. You could not see?—No.

[The Witness withdrew.]

 2551. What Parmenter?—John Parmenter.
 2552. Gittins; do you recollect him?—Abraham Gittins?
 2553. Was he there?—Yes.
 2554. I think you said Thomas Pardoe?—Yes.
 2555. Were there other persons besides, whom you did not know or do not remember?—Yes.
 2556. Was the place full, or empty, or how?—Full.
 2557. What were the people doing?—Drinking beer.
 2558. Could you see where the beer came from, and who brought it?—His son.
 2559. Whose son?—Cartwright's son.
 2560. Where did he bring it from?—Out of the cellar.
 2561. What did he bring it in?—In a gallon jug.
 2562. What did he do with the gallon jug?—He placed it on the table.
 2563. What happened to it then?—The company poured it out as they wanted it.
 2564. Was there any tobacco?—Yes.
 2565. How was the tobacco served?—It was brought in a saucer and placed on the table, and then you took it as you wanted it.
 2566. Do you recollect a glass being broken in the course of the evening?—Yes.
 2567. What was said when the glass was broken?—It was to be put down to Mr. Glass.
 2568. Who made that remark?—John Parmenter.
 Mr. Justice Blackburn observed that if this was to be relied upon, it must be gone into in greater detail.
 Mr. Fitzjames Stephen stated that he only intended to rely upon it as showing what was in the minds of the company.
 2569. Mr. Fitzjames Stephen (to the Witness).] Did anybody pay anything?—Not as I saw.
 2570. How long did this drinking and smoking go on?—Until about 11 o'clock.
 2571. Did you also go, about the same time, to the "King of Prussia"?—Yes.
 2572. Was it the same night or soon after?—Soon after.
 2573. I think that is kept by Coldrick?—Yes.
 2574. Whom did you see there that you knew?—James Davis, Mr. Proverts, Samuel Danby, and James Carter.
 2575. And were there other people besides?—Yes.
 2576. Were there many people or few; was the house full or empty?—Full.
 2577. What were the company doing?—Drinking beer and smoking.
 2578. How was the beer served?—It was brought in a can, and you then poured out into a pint pot for yourself.
 2579. Did people help themselves?—Yes.
 2580. And was there tobacco?—Yes.
 2581. How was the tobacco served?—I cannot exactly tell what it was brought in; it was brought in and put on the table, and you served yourself with it.
 2582. I forgot

2582. I forgot to ask you did you pay at the other place?—No; we did not.

2583. Did you pay at this “King of Prussia”?—No.

2584. Did you see any of the other people pay?—No.

2585. How long did the beer and the tobacco go on?—As nigh as I can recollect, till between 10 and 11.

2586. Now about the “Hop Pole;” did you go to the “Hop Pole” in Lode-street?—Yes.

2587. About when was it that you went into the “Hop Pole”?—I cannot exactly tell you, but it was before the election.

2588. Was it before or after you had been at the “King of Prussia”?—Afterwards.

2589. Within a few days?—Yes.

2590. What did you find at the “Hop Pole”?—Beer and tobacco.

2591. I mean what company did you find; were there many people or few?—Many.

2592. Was the house full?—Yes; the kitchen was full.

2593. Was there anybody there that you knew, whose name you could give?—John Pember.

2594. Well?—That was all that I knew of in the kitchen.

2595. Do you know a man named Brown?—No.

2596. Thomas Pember; do you know him?—No; this was John Pember that I knew.

2597. What were all those people doing?—Drinking beer and smoking.

2598. How was the beer served?—It was brought in a gallon jug, and it was placed on the table, and then you poured it out into half-pint cups.

2599. Did you pay?—No.

2600. Did you see the others pay?—No.

2601. How was the tobacco served?—It was brought in on a tin plate, I think, and then you helped yourself.

2602. Was that plate full that you saw?—No.

2603. Do you know Christopher Pountney?—Yes.

2604. Did you see him that night there?—Yes.

2605. What did you see him do?—He went and ordered some beer and some tobacco.

2606. Was that drunk by the company or by himself?—He ordered it. There was one named John Parmenter, and he said, “We have got no beer;” and he said, “I will go and see that you have some beer.”

2607. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] Tell me this again. You saw Mr. Christopher Pountney there. Where was he?—Up in the room.

2608. Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.] What did you see him do?—He said he would go and order some beer and some tobacco.

2609. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] You said somebody went to him first and said something?—John Parmenter.

2610. Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.] What did John Parmenter do?—He said, “We have got no beer;” and he said, “I will see as you have some beer and some tobacco,” so he went downstairs and he sent some beer and some tobacco up.

2611. Pountney did?—Yes.

2612. And was that beer and tobacco drunk in the same way as the rest?—Yes.

2613. Do you know whether Mr. Lloyd had a meeting that night?—Yes.

2614. Was anything said about Mr. Lloyd’s meeting?—Yes.

2615. By whom?—Christopher Pountney says, “Do you not go down to Mr. Lloyd’s meeting, because it will do Mr. Glass an injury.”

2616. Was that before he went down, as you say, about the beer and tobacco?—Yes.

2617. And after he had gone how did the tobacco that came come?—It was brought up and put on the table and we used it; we took it as we wanted it.

2618. How was it; was it loose, or made up, or how?—It was made up in penny packets that was.

2619. Where was Mr. Lloyd’s meeting, do you know?—At the Town Hall.

2620. Here?—Yes.

2621. Now, how long did this go on at the “Hop Pole”?—Till a quarter past eleven, I think.

2622. Did you go on that evening to the “Wheatsheaf”?—Yes.

2623. Which evening was that?—I cannot exactly tell.

2624. Was that after the “Hop Pole”?—I cannot remember whether it was after or before.

2625. Was it within a few days either way?—Yes.

2626. When you got there, where did you go?—Into a room.

2627. Which room?—A room on the left-hand side.

2628. What did you see there?—Some beer and tobacco.

2629. What company did you see; was the room full?—Yes.

2630. Did you know any of the people who were there?—Mr. Garbet and Mr. Pardoe from the Bridge, and Thomas Gillam.

2631. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] Which Mr. Pardoe do you mean; is that Mr. Pardoe, the barber?—Mr. Pardoe, the barber.

2632. Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.] Did anybody make a speech?—Yes.

2633. Who?—Thomas Gillam.

2634. Do you recollect what he said?—No, I cannot recollect it now.

2635. Do you remember what it was about; do you remember anything he said?—Yes.

2636. Tell us anything he said?—He says, “Mr. Glass has got four thousand to spend about you people in Bewdley.”

2637. Was there more besides that; did he make a speech?—Yes; but I cannot exactly tell what it was now.

2638. No; but was it about the election?—Yes, about the election.

2639. I do not think you have told me yet how was the beer and tobacco served here?—It was brought in a jug and placed on a table, and then you poured it out into a half-pint cup.

2640. Did the company help themselves?—Yes.

2641. And was there tobacco?—Yes.

2642. How was that managed?—You took it as you wanted it.

2643. Did you pay?—No.

2644. Did you see anybody else pay?—No.

2645. You say you went into a room on the left-hand side?—Yes.

2646. Did you besides that go into another room?—Yes.

T. Lewis.

1869.

2647. What room was that?—A room where there were some women in.

2648. What room was it where the women were?—On the left-hand side.

2649. The same side as the one you went in?—Yes.

2650. Were there many women or few?—Many.

2651. What were they doing?—Drinking beer.

2652. How was the beer served for the women?—I cannot tell.

2653. But you could see whether there were jugs?—They had pint cups.

2654. Did you see any of them pay?—No.

2655. Do you know Miss Havergill, a lady?—Yes.

2656. And Miss Clay?—Yes.

2657. Did you see them come there?—Yes.

2658. Did they come in together?—Yes.

2659. Did you see them speak to the women who were there?—Yes.

2660. When those ladies spoke to the women, what did the women do?—I cannot tell.

2661. Think. Did you see where any of them went, or what they did?—No; I do not know what they did.

2662. Did they stay where they were, or did they get out of the way, or what?—I think some of them got out of the way.

2663. Where did they get out of the way?—Up in the corners.

2664. Did they get anywhere else except up in the corners?—I cannot recollect it.

2665. Just remember?—I cannot recollect it.

2666. Were there any tables in the room?—Yes.

2667. Now then, cannot you recollect anything now. Come, did you see anybody under the tables?—Yes, I think I did see some.

2668. Were the people you saw under the tables men or women?—Women.

2669. Now, give us the names of some of the people who were at the "Wheatsheaf" at this time?—I do not remember them.

2670. I am not asking about the women. I am asking about the men at the "Wheatsheaf"?—Mr. Christopher Pountney.

2671. Did you see Mr. Parsons?—I cannot recollect whether I did or not.

2672. Think, recollect?—As I went into the passage I saw Christopher Pountney and Mr. Parsons, and I think it was Peter Mumford.

2673. You did see Mr. Parsons in the passage?—Yes.

Cross-examined by Mr. Giffard.

2674. Do you know Mrs. Knowles?—Yes.

2675. Have you been talking to her about this matter?—What do you say, sir?

2676. Did you not hear my question?—No.

2677. Do you mean to swear you did not hear what I asked you?—Yes; I did not hear what you said.

2678. I will repeat it. Have you been talking to Mrs. Knowles about this matter?—Yes.

2679. Did she tell you where to go to give your evidence?—No, she did not.

2680. Who did?—I went of my own accord.

2681. Where did you go?—To Mr. Hardwicke's.

2682. Mr. Sturge's bailiff?—Yes.

2683. How came you to go there?—I went up with my own accord.

2684. But how came you to go to Mr. Sturge's bailiff; he is not a lawyer, is he?—No.

2685. How came you to go to him?—Because I went up there and told him what I saw.

2686. How came you to go to Mr. Sturge's bailiff to tell him what you had seen?—There was a young chap, named Henry Hunt, asked me to go up with him.

2687. Your father is a voter, is not he?—Yes.

2688. He was a friend to Mr. Lloyd, and was going to vote for Mr. Lloyd before the election, was not he?—Yes.

2689. And he did do so?—Yes.

2690. Where are you employed yourself?—At Mr. John Thomas Wildsmith's, the shoe-maker's.

2691. He was a friend of Mr. Lloyd's, too, was not he?—Yes.

2692. And voted for him?—Yes.

[The Witness withdrew.]

HENRY MOUL, sworn; Examined by Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.

H. Moul.

2693. IN November last, were you employed as a waiter at the "Blue Ball" inn?—No.

2694. Were you employed at any time as a waiter at the "Blue Ball" inn?—No.

2695. Did you wait at the "Blue Ball" inn?—No.

2696. Where do you live?—In High-street.

2697. Do you know Sarah Cooke?—Yes.

2698. Is she the landlady of the "Blue Ball"?—Yes.

2699. Were you at the "Blue Ball" one night in November?—Yes.

2700. On the 6th of November?—I do not know what night it was; it was the night they had what they call the free-and-easy; that is the night it was.

2701. Tell us about the free-and-easy; first of all, how many people were there there, about?—I could not exactly say; I should think probably 60 or 70 of them.

2702. What were they doing?—Oh, drinking.

2703. What were they drinking?—Ale.

2704. How did the ale come up?—The daughter brought it up, and the granddaughter.

2705. What did they bring it up in?—In cans.

2706. Who served the company; did the company help themselves?—Yes; they poured it out themselves; everybody who wanted it took it themselves.

2707. Did the people who poured it out pay for it?—I never saw anyone pay at all; I never saw any money pass.

2708. How about the tobacco?—Yes, there was tobacco as well.

2709. How was that served out?—It was brought up and put on the table.

2710. And did the company help themselves to that?—Yes.

2711. How long did it go on?—I cannot say how long it went on; I was there from an hour and a half to two hours myself.

2712. Did you pay?—No.

2713. Can you give us the names of any of the the people who were there?—I could of some, I dare say.

2714. Very well; then tell us some that you recollect?—There was John Oaks there and James Oaks, and there was the saddler Plevy.

2715. Do you know Mr. Parsons?—Yes.

2716. Was he there?—Yes.

2717. And Thomason?—Yes.

2718. Was he there?—Yes.

2719. Thomas Housman, was he there?—Yes.

2720. Besides the room where the people were drinking, was there any other room where people were in the house?—In the kitchen.

2721. Were they drinking in the kitchen?—Yes.

2722. Was there any room in the house where people were who were not drinking, but who were strangers to the house?—No, I did not see any strangers, at least they were all strangers. I saw no one drinking except in the kitchen and upstairs; that is where I was.

2723. Was there any room with gentlemen in it?—No; I never saw any. I was only upstairs and down in the kitchen.

2724. Were you a voter?—Yes.

2725. Who did you vote for?—Mr. Glass.

[The Witness withdrew.

Miss ELIZABETH CLAY, sworn; Examined by Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.

2726. DID you, in company with Miss Haver-gill, go to the “Wheatsheaf” inn on one evening in November?—Yes, I did.

2727. Was that the 10th of November?—Yes, on the 10th of November, a Tuesday evening.

2728. Did you see a considerable number of persons drinking there?—I saw a good many women.

2729. I believe you reproved them for drinking?—We tried to induce some of them to come away.

2730. Did you take a list of the names of some of them there;—Yes, of a few; of some that we recognised.

2731. Would you favour me with their names, if you please; you have the list, I suppose?—I have no names here, but I can mention some from memory.

2732. Have you preserved the list?—Yes; I have a list.

2733. You took it, I think, for charitable purposes of your own; that I will not further inquire into?—Yes; we took it because we thought it was desirable to ascertain who they were, that we might remonstrate with them afterwards.

2734. I think you have the list?—Yes, but not here. I can tell you the names from memory.

2735. Do you think your memory would serve you as well as the list?—I think so.

2736. Then, perhaps, you will be kind enough to give me the names?—Hannah Bond.

2737. Is she the widow of Thomas Bond?—I do not know what her husband's name is.

2738. Is she a married woman?—Yes.

2739. Does she live in Welsh Gate?—Yes.

2740. Who else?—Emma Pountney, of Sandy Bank.

2741. Is she a married woman?—Yes.

2742. Who else?—A woman named Allchurch, I do not know her christian name.

2743. Is she married?—Yes, not long ago.

2744. Can you tell me in which street she lives?—Yes, in the Holloway.

2745. Who else?—Widow Gittins.

2746. Never mind her?—A young woman of the name of Landor.

2747. Is she a married woman?—Yes, she is.

2748. Is she the wife of James Landor?—I do not know her husband's name.

2749. Does she live at Sandy Bank?—Yes.

2750. Can you give me some more, if you please?—Eliza Ashcroft.

2751. Where does she live?—In the Holloway.

2752. Is she the wife of Thomas Ashcroft?—I do not know the man's name.

2753. She is a married woman?—Yes, she is.

2754. Do you know where she lives?—In the Holloway, as I said. Elizabeth Genner.

2755. Do you happen to know a place called Venus' Bank?—Yes, she lives there.

2756. You mentioned another name, what was it?—Elizabeth Genner.

2757. Is she the wife of William Genner?—I do not think that is her husband's name, I do not know the man's name.

2758. She is a married woman?—Yes, she is.

2759. Do you know where she lives?—She lives close by Eliza Ashcroft, at Venus' Bank.

2760. Another?—Moul, on Sandy Bank.

2761. Is she married?—Yes.

2762. The next?—I do not remember any more now.

2763. I think you told me you took down a list?—Yes, I did.

2764. Mr. Giffard.] You took down all the names, I suppose?—We took down the names of those we recognised.

2765. Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.] If you will send down the list we need not trouble you to come again: after this transaction, did you, in consequence of what you had seen, make any complaint to any person?

Mr. Giffard objected to the question.

Mr. Justice Blackburn intimated that the question might be put.

2766. Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.] Did you make any representation to Mr. Herbert Pardoe, the son of Mr. Acton Pardoe, upon the subject?—I really do not know him by sight.

2767. That is Mr. Herbert Pardoe who is close to you?—I do not recollect speaking to him.

2768. Did you go to Mr. Pardoe's office, and see anyone?—No, I did not go to his office.

2769. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] Will you let us have the list, if you please, as soon as you can?—Certainly.

2770. Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.] I am instructed to ask you this question; did you find any difficulty in getting into the “Wheatsheaf;” were you asked for a ticket?—No, we were not.

2771. Did you walk straight in?—Yes, we walked in, into the room.

H. Moul.

Miss
E. Clay.

Miss MARIA VERNON GRAHAM HAVERGILL, sworn.

Miss M. V. G. Havergill.

1869.

Witness.] I wish to state that I have not been paid my travelling expenses for appearing here.

Mr. Justice Blackburn.] I am afraid I cannot prevent that; your expenses as a witness will be taxed, and allowed you afterwards.

Witness.] I am much obliged to your Lordship; I was told to state that.

Examined by Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.

2772. I believe you are a sister-in-law of Mr. Giles Shaw?—I am.

2773. And you were at this time, in November and October last, living in his house?—No.

2774. Staying there?—I was resident in lodgings; my house is with my father, the Reverend Canon Havergill, of Leamington.

2775. You were at that time, at all events, lodging in Bewdley?—I was.

2776. You heard Miss Clay give her evidence, did you not?—Part of it.

2777. Did you accompany her to the "Wheatsheaf" on this night?—I did.

2778. And there you found women drinking, and you remonstrated with them?—I did.

2779. After that had taken place, did you in consequence of that go to Mr. Pardoe's office?—No, I did not go to the office.

2780. Did you see or speak to Mr. Pardoe, or his son, or his clerk, or any person in his establishment?—When I left the room, there was a crowd of women who said, "That is young Mr. Pardoe." I had not the pleasure of knowing either of the Mr. Pardoe's. I said, "Mr. Pardoe, is your father here?" he said, "He is not."

2781. Which Mr. Pardoe was it you saw; was it that gentleman (pointing to a young gentleman on the opposite side of the table)?—Honestly, there was not much light.

2782. And you do not know?—I have never been introduced to Mr. Pardoe; I never spoke to him in my life before.

2783. Was that the gentleman (pointing to the same gentleman as before)?—I think so, I believe it was; but I have never been introduced to him, and it was not light.

2784. At all events, you spoke to him as Mr. Pardoe, and he answered, and said his father was not there?—Yes, I did.

2785. Did you make any further representation to him about what was going on?

Mr. Giffard objected to the question.

Mr. Fitzjames Stephen submitted that Mr. Pardoe, junior, had been shown to be an agent of the Respondent.

Mr. Justice Blackburn decided not to exclude this evidence; but to receive it for the present, and consider the effect of it afterwards.

Mr. Giffard stated that he was informed that the Mr. Pardoe to whom the Witness spoke was not the gentleman in court, but a younger Mr. Pardoe.

2786. Mr. Fitzjames Stephen (to the Witness).] Did you make any complaint, and what did you say to the gentleman you spoke to; this young Mr. Pardoe?—I said, "There is disgraceful drinking in that room among the women."

2787. How came you to speak to him more than anyone else?

Mr. Justice Blackburn ruled that the question was inadmissible.

2788. Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.] Did you say more than that?—I said, "I hear your father is responsible for it."

2789. Will you tell us what was said; go on?—"I cannot help it, Miss Havergill," I believe was his reply.

2790. Was that all the conversation that passed?—All.

2791. Did you mention what you had seen to your brother-in-law, Mr. Giles Shaw?—Not for a long while; I wished to keep the matter quiet to myself.

2792. Will you tell me when you mentioned it to Mr. Giles Shaw?—I never gave him the whole detail until yesterday.

2793. When did you mention it generally to him; I presume from that that you mentioned it generally?—He heard that I had been there, and inquired if I had.

2794. When was that?—It might have been Wednesday, the 11th of November.

2795. This happened, I think, on the 10th?—Tuesday, the 10th of November.

2796. In consequence of something he had heard, he asked you if you had been there?—Yes; he asked if I had been there.

2797. And, of course, you told him you had?—Yes.

2798. And in general terms you told him, I suppose, what you had seen?—Yes, generally.

Mr. Giffard stated that he did not wish to ask the Witness any questions.

Mr. Justice Blackburn referred in terms of high commendation to the conduct of the ladies in going to the "Wheatsheaf," to remonstrate with the women who were drinking.

JOHN HUNT, sworn; Examined by Mr. Chandos Leigh.

J. Hunt.

2799. WHAT are you?—A Carpenter.

2800. Where do you live?—At Wrax.

2801. In Bewdley?—Yes, in the borough of Bewdley.

2802. Do you know the "Hop Pole"?—Yes.

2803. Were you there on the 5th of November?—Yes.

2804. What was going on there?—Drinking and amusements, and so forth; fiddling and something of that.

2805. Who is the landlady?—Mrs. Winwood.

2806. Whom did you see there?—There was John James, a voter; Benjamin Carter, Edward Waldron, and Mr. Burnish was chairman of the meeting, I believe. He acted as chairman, and several others were there.

2807. Was

2807. Was there a free-and-easy going on?—It was something similar to one; I do not know what they call it.

2808. Did you see any ale brought in?—Yes.

2809. How much?—A quantity; I could not count how much. It was late when I went in, after nine o'clock.

2810. Till how late did you stay?—Perhaps twelve.

2811. How much ale did you see brought in in that time?—I could not state any quantity; it was about eleven o'clock when they said the ale was all in.

2812. Who said that?—Benjamin Carter.

2813. How was the ale brought in?—In jugs; it was in an upstairs room.

2814. Were you there?—Yes.

2815. Did the company help themselves, or was it poured out to them?—First one poured out and then another; not any particular one.

2816. Did you see anybody pay for it?—No, not up to, I should think eleven o'clock.

2817. Did you see anybody pay for it then?—Yes.

2818. Was that after this Carter said the drink was out?—Benjamin Carter came in; he said, "Mr. Chairman, the drink is all in"; and he said, "Bring another gallon."

2819. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] Who said this?—Mr. Carter.

2820. When he said "Mr. Chairman," whom did he mean?—Mr. Burnish was acting as chairman.

2821. What did Mr. Burnish say then?—He ordered another gallon of ale in, and paid for it, and said he supposed he should have six months before it was all over, on the round stairs.

2822. Will you say again what Mr. Burnish said?—He ordered a gallon of ale, and he paid for it 2 s. to Benjamin Carter; he said he supposed he should have six months before it was all over, on the round stairs.

2823. Who; Carter or himself?—Himself; Mr. Burnish said this, applying it to himself.

2824. Mr. Chandos Leigh.] After that gallon of ale was drunk, did the people pay for themselves?—Yes.

2825. You mentioned some of the names; how many people about were there altogether?—During the whole time I was there?

2826. Yes?—Perhaps 20 or more.

2827. You told us that you paid nothing yourself?—No.

2828. Saw nobody pay?—No, up to this gallon of ale.

2829. You voted for Mr. Lloyd?—Yes.

Mr. Giffard stated that he would not ask this witness any questions.

[The Witness withdrew.

THOMAS DRAPER, sworn; Examined by Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.

2830. WHAT are you?—A Butcher.

2831. Do you know the "Hop Pole" public-house?—Yes.

2832. Who does that belong to?—Miss Radnor.

2833. And who is that kept by?—Mrs. Winwood.

2834. And have you a mortgage upon it?—Yes.

2835. Did you go some time lately to Mr. Pardoe's office?—No, not on that business. He is my solicitor.

2836. Did you see Mr. Burnish?—I saw his clerk.

2837. Pardoe's clerk?—Yes; Mr. Pardoe's clerk.

2838. Is that Burnish?—Yes; I believe that is his name.

2839. When was it you saw Burnish about this business?—I do not know the day.

2840. Was it since the election?—Oh, yes.

2841. How long ago; a month ago?—A month or six weeks ago; more I should think.

Mr. Justice Blackburn observed, that what was said by Mr. Burnish after the election was over did not seem to him to have any bearing on the question of agency.

Mr. Fitzjames Stephen stated that his examination was intended to elicit facts of some importance.

Mr. Justice Blackburn stated that he might elicit the facts.

2842. Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.] I do not ask you specially what was said, but did you deliver to him anything which you had received from Mrs. Winwood?—No. Oh, yes, I did; I beg pardon, I had a bill.

9.

2843. Who had given you the bill?—Miss Radnor, a neighbour, to Mrs. Winwood; in fact it is her property; she lives under Miss Radnor.

2844. Did you give this bill to Mr. Burnish?—No.

2845. What did you do with it then?—Gave it back again; gave it back to the party that brought it me.

2846. Who did you give it to?—Miss Radnor.

2847. What did you do with the bill?—I gave it back to Miss Radnor.

2848. Did you show it to Mr. Burnish?—No.

2849. What did you do with it then?—Gave it back to Miss Radnor.

2850. Did you mention it to Mr. Burnish?—I did.

2851. What did you say to Mr. Burnish about this bill?—

Mr. Giffard objected to the question.

Mr. Justice Blackburn stated that Mr. Fitzjames Stephen might elicit the facts of the case.

2852. Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.] Now, first of all, when was the bill shown to you by Miss Radnor?—I do not know the day.

2853. Was it before you went to Burnish, or after?—Before I asked Mr. Burnish about the bill.

2854. When did you give it her back?—I do not know the day; it may be a week after.

2855. Did you give it back after seeing Mr. Burnish?—No; I gave it before I saw Mr. Burnish.

2856. Had you looked at the bill?—I saw the bill.

T. Draper.

1869.

2857. Did you speak to Mr. Burnish in consequence of seeing the bill?—Yes.

2858. And about the bill?—I asked Mr. Burnish. I was at the shop and he was at the door. I asked Mr. Burnish not to pay Carter the bill; that was all I had to do with it.

2859. Who is Carter?—A customer to Mrs. Winwood.

2860. What Carter is that?—Benjamin Carter.

2861. You said, "Do not pay Ben Carter"?—Yes; "Do not pay Ben Carter, but pay the Mrs."

2862. What Mrs.?—Mrs. Winwood.

2863. What did Mr. Burnish say to that?—If I recollect right, I think he said that he would pay it himself.

2864. To whom?—To Mrs. Winwood.

2865. What did he say?—He said he would pay it himself, or something like that.

2866. But to whom was it to be paid?—Mrs. Winwood.

2867. Did he say anything about what the bill was, or the amount of it?—No, that was not said by either of us.

2868. What did you say about the bill?—I merely asked him to pay Mrs. Winwood instead of Ben Carter; that was all that was said and done.

2869. But surely you must have introduced it in some way?—

Mr. Giffard objected to the question.

2870. You must have introduced it in some way; there must have been some more conversation or you would not have known what bill you were talking about?—I merely asked him not to pay Mrs. Winwood's bill but to herself.

THOMAS DARKE, sworn; Examined by Mr. Chandos Leigh.

T. Darke.

2882. WHAT are you?—A Labourer.

2883. Where do you live?—At Lax-lane.

2884. Lax-lane, Bewdley?—Yes.

2885. You are not a voter?—No.

2886. Were you engaged as a watcher?—Yes.

2887. On whose side?—The Tory side.

2888. Who engaged you?—James Pargeter.

2889. Was any sum named; that you were to be paid anything?—No.

2890. Did you watch?—Yes.

2891. For how long?—Five nights and two days.

2892. Do you know what month that was in?—I do not know.

2893. Was it before the election?—Yes.

2894. About how long before the election?—About a week.

2895. Where did you watch?—On the Kidderminster-road, and the Stourport-road.

2896. What did you do?—Walked about.

2897. Were other people there at the same time?—Yes.

2898. Watching also?—Yes.

2899. Did you know them?—Some of them.

2900. Can you mention any of their names?—Yes, I could one or two.

2901. Tell us the one or two that you can mention?—William Clark, Samuel Darks.

2902. Yes; any more?—Thomas Cavill.

2903. Anybody else?—Not that I recollect.

2871. Did you call it Mrs. Winwood's bill, or say what the bill was for?—He knew what the bill was for.

2872. How do you know that he knew; did you talk about it? what did you say?—I had been talking to Miss Radnor when she brought me the bill before. Miss Radnor wished me to see Mr. Pardoe, but I saw the clerk and told the clerk what I tell you, and no more.

2873. How long were you in company with Mr. Burmish?—It may be 10 minutes; 10 minutes, or thereabouts.

2874. Where was that?—At my shop-door. I was in the shop, and he was at the door.

2875. Had you spoken to him about the bill before that?—No, I had not. I told you before I had not.

2876. Was the amount of the bill mentioned?—No, it was not.

2877. Or anything said about what it was for?—No; I merely said I hoped he would not let Carter receive the money.

2878. That you say was Ben Carter?—Ben Carter.

2879. Miss Radnor is the owner of the house, and you have a mortgage on it?—Yes.

2880. I wish you would remember, as near as you can, the words in which Mr. Burnish replied to you?—I think he said, he would see it paid; I do not remember anything else that passed.

Cross-examined by Mr. Giffard.

2881. You did not vote either way, I think, at the election?—No, I did not.

[The Witness withdrew.]

2904. You cannot recollect any more?—No.

2905. Were you paid for this job?—Yes.

2906. When were you paid?—I do not know when it was.

2907. Was it after the election?—Yes.

2908. Where were you paid?—At Osman Pountney's.

2909. Is that at the "Malt Shovel"?—Yes.

2910. What were you paid?—Sixteen shillings.

2911. Who paid you?—I do not know.

2912. How was the man dressed?—He was so disfigured that I did not know him.

2913. Where was he disfigured?—About his head and face.

2914. In what way was he disfigured about the head and face?—He had got a mask on, I believe.

2915. Was there anybody with him at the time, standing beside him?—Yes, there was one or two there.

2916. Did you know them?—No.

2917. Do you know a man of the name of William Jackson?—Yes.

2918. Was he there?—I could not say he was.

2919. Are you sure he was not?—I could not say he was there.

2920. Was Osmond Pountney there?—He was at the top of the stairs.

2921. Was

2922. Were there other people who watched there besides yourself?—Yes, there was a great many there.

2923. Were there other people besides yourself in the room when you were paid?—Yes, there was the man that paid us.

2924. But were the other watchers there?—I could not say; not in the room.

2925. Did you go in together, you watchers, or go in one at a time?—One at a time.

2926. Who let you in?—Osmond Pountney.

2927. Can you say how many watchers were there at the time down stairs?—No, I could not.

2928. Were there 20?—Oh, yes, I should think there were 20.

2929. Thirty?—I should not like to say.

2930. You will say that there were 20?—Yes, I am sure there were 20.

2931. Used you to work for Mr. Price at his tan-yard?—I did.

2932. Do you remember Sir Richard Glass coming to canvass?—I do.

2933. At the tan-yard was that?—The bottom of the yard.

2934. When was that; what month was it in? —I do not know.

2935. Do you remember a meeting at the Town-hall when Sir Richard first came here?—No.

2936. Was it in the summer or the autumn when he came to the tan-yard?—I do not know.

2937. Was it in August, or July, or September, or when?—I do not know.

2938. Was it in the summer?—No.

2939. You cannot remember at all when it was?—No.

2940. But you say you remember he came?—Yes.

2941. Can you tell us who came with him?—Several gentlemen.

2942. Did you know any of them?—Yes, one or two of them.

2943. Tell us those whom you know?—Mr. Landon was with him, Mr. Gardener, Mr. Pardoe, and several others I do not know.

2944. Mr. Herbert Pardoe, was he there?—I believe he was.

2945. Which Mr. Pardoe do you mean?—Mr. Herbert Pardoe was there.

2946. Look at the gentleman (pointing to a gentleman); was that one?—Yes.

2947. Any other Mr. Pardoe there?—That gentleman there (pointing to another gentleman).

2948. What time was it do you know?—Between 11 and 12 o'clock, I should think.

2949. In the morning?—Yes.

2950. What happened when these gentlemen came?—Oh, he asked them for their votes.

2951. Who is "he"?—Sir Richard Glass.

2952. Asked the men for their votes?—Yes.

2953. Where did he ask them for their votes?—At the bottom of the yard.

2954. Whilst he was asking for their votes did any two of the gentlemen talk together; did you hear Mr. Acton Pardoe say anything or do anything?—No, I did not hear him say nothing, that I know of.

2955. Did you hear Mr. Pardoe, senior, do anything or say anything?—No, not that I know of.

2956. Do you know a man called John Clark?—Yes, I do.

2957. Did Clark say anything?—Oh, they went on talking about the votes.

2958. What did they say?—I did not take notice of what they were talking about much.

2959. Was anything said about holding up hands for Sir Richard Glass?—I could not say.

2960. Did you see Clark do anything?—No, I did not see him do nothing.

2961. Did you see anything fetched?—I saw some beer fetched.

2962. Who fetched the beer?—Clark and Pargeter.

2963. Where did they fetch it from; did you see that?—No, I did not see where they fetched it from.

2964. Did Clark say anything before he fetched the beer?—Oh, I did not hear him say nothing.

2965. Where did they fetch the beer to?—Mr. Price's tan-yard.

2966. Who drank the beer?—Oh, there were a good many there to drink it.

2967. Was it drunk?—It was drunk.

2968. Where was it drunk?—At Mr. Price's.

2969. In what part of the yard?—In the boiler-house.

2970. How long after the talking about the votes was this beer fetched?—Oh, directly.

2971. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] Was it fetched before Sir Richard Glass had gone away or afterwards?—Oh, he had gone away.

2972. Mr. Chandos Leigh.] Was anything paid for it that you saw?—No, I did not see that.

2973. Were Clark and Mr. Pardoe there all the time that Glass was there?—No, they were not there all the time.

2974. Did Mr. Pardoe stay after Sir Richard had left?—No.

2975. Was the beer sent for while Sir Richard was there?—No, it was not.

2976. Were any of those gentlemen who came with Sir Richard Glass there when the beer was fetched?—No, that I know of.

2977. Can you mention any of those who drank the beer?—Yes, I can mention one or two of them.

2978. Tell us their names, please?—Thomas Griffiths was one.

2979. Yes, who else?—John Brooks.

2980. Yes, who else?—Benjamin Pountney.

2981. Yes, who else?—Mr. Hollington.

2982. Yes, who else?—John Clark, James Pargeter.

2983. Joseph Evans, do you know?—Yes, I know him.

2984. Did he drink any?—I could not say.

2985. Charles Moul?—He was there, I believe.

2986. George Thomason?—I could not say.

2987. Before this beer was sent for, did you see Clark talk to anybody?—To Mr. Pardoe.

2988. Which Mr. Pardoe?—The old gentleman.

2989. How near were they to you when they were talking together?—Oh, 12 or 14 yards I may say.

2990. Were they away from the others or with the others?—Away.

2991. Where was Sir Richard Glass when they were talking together?—He was amongst the lot of them.

2992. How long did they go on talking?—Oh, not long.

2993. After they talked, what happened?—They went away, and the beer was fetched.

T. Darke. 2994. Fetched by whom?—John Clark and Pargeter.
 2995. You said it was at Mr. Price's tanyard?—Yes.
 2996. Did Mr. Price send you after anybody on the polling-day?—Yes.
 2997. Whom did he send you to?—Edward Miles.

Mr. Giffard objected to the evidence.

Mr. Justice Blackburn stated that it must be shown to him who Miles was.

2998. Mr. Chandos Leigh.] Who is Miles?—He worked for Mr. Price as a tanner.

2999. Is Miles a voter?—Yes.

Mr. Justice Blackburn stated that the notice of objection was to Mr. Price exercising undue influence.

Mr. Chandos Leigh stated that he would not pursue this course.

Cross-examined by Mr. Giffard.

3000. Were there watchers on the other side?—I do not know.

3001. Do you mean to swear that?—Yes; I do not know.

3002. How do you know there were more watchers than yourself on your side?—Oh, because they told me; I was with them.

3003. You did not see them; you did not judge they were watchers from what you saw?—Oh, they told me.

3004. That is the only way in which you know it?—Yes.

3005. Do you mean while they were walking up and down they told you?—I was with them before we went to watch.

3006. How many were with you then?—There was only one with me.

3007. Do you mean to say you did not see anybody watching on the other side?—No, not that I am aware of.

3008. You are quite sure of that?—Not that I am aware of. I cannot be sure I did not see anybody; I may have seen some one.

3009. Do you mean this one man who walked up and down with you, is the only one who told you that he was a watcher while he was walking up and down watching?—It was not only him; I was talking to several more.

3010. While they were walking up and down watching, is my question?—Yes, when I met them.

3011. How many do you suppose you met who spoke to you about what they were doing?—I met two.

3012. Is that all?—I could not say for any more.

3013. The one who was with you, and the two you met?—Yes.

3014. Now you had better give me the names of the one who was with you and the two others you met?—Samuel Darks and William Clark and Thomas Cavill.

3015. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] Which was the one that was with you, and which were the two that you met?—Thomas Cavill was with me, and we met William Clark and Samuel Darks.

Re-examined by Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.

3016. You say you were watching with another man?—Yes.

3017. Did you go in one particular place, one particular beat?—Yes.

3018. Before you set out to go on this beat, did you see other persons there, a lot of you together?—Yes, there were a good many going on other beats.

3019. In different directions?—Yes.

3020. Did you see them set off?—Yes.

3021. Did they go two and two?—Well, they were supposed to be two and two.

3022. I suppose that is not a very difficult thing; you can say whether they were two and two, because you saw them go?—Yes.

[The Witness withdrew.]

EDWARD MILES, sworn; Examined by Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.

E. Miles.

3023. WHAT are you?—Tanner.

3024. Last summer were you working for Mr. Price?—I was at work for Mr. Price.

3025. Do you recollect Sir Richard Glass coming to the yard?—No.

3026. Have you ever seen Sir Richard Glass about the yard or near it?—I have never seen Sir Richard Glass on them premises.

3027. Did you ever see Sir Richard Glass anywhere in the neighbourhood?—Yes, I see him in the street.

3028. How near did you see him come to the door of the tanyard?—Of course the yard is 40 or 50 yards to the street; he came down behind the entry door, the yard door.

3029. Did you ever see him speak to the men at the tanyard?—No.

3030. Do you recollect ever seeing Mr. Pardoe in the tanyard?—Mr. Acton Pardoe?

3031. Yes?—I saw him several times in the tanyard years ago.

3032. I am not talking of years ago, last July?—I do not know whether he was here in that month particularly. I do not recollect particularly; I have seen him several times; I might have seen him then.

3033. Were you there early in July yourself, working all through July at the tanyard?—Yes.

3034. Did you see Mr. Pardoe in the tanyard any time early in July?—Not as I know of; not as I recollect.

3035. Did you early in July, at any time, see Sir Richard Glass talking to Mr. Price's men at the tanyard?—No.

3036. You did not?—No.

3037. You never saw him at all there?—Never saw him at all on the premises.

3038. Or talking to the men?—Or talking to the men.

Mr. Giffard stated that he would not ask this witness any questions.

MICHAEL JAMES HOLDER sworn; Examined by Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.

3039. WHAT are you?—Out of business.
 3040. Retired?—No.
 3041. Do you recollect being at the “Wheat-sheaf” in the course of last summer?—Yes.
 3042. Did you ever see Sir Richard Glass there?—Yes.
 3043. Who else have you seen there with Sir Richard Glass?—I do not remember.
 3044. Were there many persons or few?—Few.
 3045. Are you a voter?—Yes.
 3046. Was there anything to drink on that occasion?—Yes.
 3047. What was there to drink?—Brandy and soda-water.
 3048. Was there any wine?—No.
 3049. At no time?—No.
 3050. Now about the brandy, did you pay for it?—No.

Mr. Giffard objected to the evidence on the ground that the name of this witness was not in the list furnished by the other side.

Mr. Fitzjames Stephen stated that he was not mentioned in the scrutiny list, but that the contention was that he was treated by Sir Richard Glass on this occasion.

Mr. Justice Blackburn stated that he must hear at what time this occurred.

3051. Mr. Fitzjames Stephen (to the Witness).] What time is this that you are speaking of?—I cannot remember.

3052. I must try and help you; was it in July?—I think it was.

3053. You say there was brandy?—Yes.

3054. What was going on when you were at the “Wheat-sheaf” with Sir Richard Glass?—What was going on? I heard Sir Richard Glass make a speech, a short one.

3055. What was his speech about?—I cannot remember now.

3056. Was it about politics?—Yes.

3057. Who else was there besides yourself?—I cannot tell.

3058. Could you give me an idea how many people there were present?—Perhaps a dozen.

3059. How came you to go?—I saw the gentlemen coming from canvassing and I followed them in the room. M. J. Holder.

3060. Now, what gentlemen had you seen canvassing, as you say, with Sir Richard Glass that day?—I forget who they were.

3061. Well, think and remember?—I cannot tell.

3062. How many did you see?—Well, there were not a dozen altogether.

3063. You followed them in?—Yes.

3064. When you got in, into the room, what about the brandy; where did that come from?—From the table.

3065. Do you mean you found it on the table when you came in?—Yes.

3066. And was there anything else besides brandy?—Soda-water.

3067. How much was there on the table?—I cannot tell.

3068. Was any observation made by Sir Richard Glass, or in his presence, about the quality of the brandy?—No.

3069. Did you see any other liquor come into the room, in the course of the time you were there, besides what there was at first?—No.

3070. Nothing but the brandy and soda-water that you saw when you went in?—No more than when I went in.

3071. Did you drink it?—I drank one bottle of soda-water with brandy.

3072. Was there any champagne at any time that you saw?—No.

3073. Do you know a man of the name of Charles Pountney?—Yes.

3074. Had you talked to him about this meeting when you were present at the “Wheat-sheaf”?—I may have.

3075. Now, I cannot ask you what you said to him; but recollecting what you said to him, I ask you whether the brandy that you found was not changed in the course of the time that you were there, and other brandy put there?—No.

3076. Do you say now there was no other brandy brought?—No.

Mr. Giffard stated that he would not ask this witness any questions.

[The Witness withdrew.]

WILLIAM PAGET, sworn; Examined by Mr. Chandos Leigh.

3077. ARE you the landlord of the “Red Cow,” Stourport?—Yes.

3078. Are you a voter?—Yes.

3079. Do you remember a supper at your house in August last?—Yes.

3080. Early or late in August?—I cannot say.

3081. You cannot remember the day?—No, I cannot.

3082. Who ordered the supper?—That I cannot say.

3083. Can you tell us who were there at the supper?—Yes, a few of them.

3084. Tell us a few?—Charles Ball and William Rowley, and George Massey, Nixon; I cannot mention all their names.

3085. Do you know a man called John Taylor?—No.

9.

3086. Do not you know Mr. Taylor?—Taylor? W. Paget.
Yes.

3087. Did anybody take the chair at the supper?—Taylor.

3088. Who is Taylor?—He is a clerk; one of Mr. Swan’s, at the vinegar works; he is a stranger to me.

3089. Do you know whether he has anything to do with the Conservative Association at Stourport?—I do not know anything of it.

3090. You say he took the chair?—Yes.

3091. How many were at supper altogether?—Ten or fifteen; perhaps more; I cannot say.

3092. What time did the supper begin?—Eight o’clock.

3093. And until what time did it last?—About half-past 10.

G 3

3094. What

W. Paget.

1869.

3094. What was supplied, in the way of drink, for supper?—Nothing but ale.

3095. Any tobacco?—Yes.

3096. Were there any speeches made?—Yes.

3097. Who made speeches?—Mr. Taylor.

3098. What was the speech about?—Hoped we should all vote for Mr. Richard Glass.

3099. Were healths drunk?—Yes.

3100. Whose healths were drunk?—Mr. Richard Glass's.

3101. You were at the supper yourself?—Yes; I had none of the supper, but I had some of the beer afterwards.

3102. Did anybody pay you for the supper?—Yes.

3103. Who?—Mr. Taylor.

3104. When?—As soon as they had finished.

3105. Were you canvassed for your vote?—Yes.

3106. Were you ever canvassed by Sir Richard for your vote?—Yes.

3107. Did he come alone when he canvassed you for your vote?—No.

3108. Who did he come with?—Mr. Joseph Rogers, and there was two more of them; there was his clerk, lawyer's clerk.

3109. Do you know a Mr. Crowther?—Yes; Mr. Crowther and Mr. Anderson.

3110. Mr. Anderson is the gentleman you mean by the lawyer's clerk?—Yes.

3111. Did you know Sir Richard Glass when he came to canvass you for your vote?—Not the first time.

3112. Was he introduced to you?—Yes.

3113. Who by?—Mr. Rogers introduced him to me.

3114. That gentleman there (pointing to a gentleman)?—Yes.

3115. After they had canvassed you did you see what they did?—No, I did not.

3116. Did you see them go down the street?—Yes.

3117. Together?—Yes.

3118. Did they stop at any other houses?—Well, they seemed to take the houses afore them; but I did not take much notice.

3119. What do you mean by taking the houses afore them?—The voters they took afore them; the houses.

3120. You mean they canvassed at the houses?—Yes.

3121. Were they together, as they took the houses before them?—Yes.

Mr. Giffard stated that he would admit that these persons were in company with Sir Richard Glass, but that he would not admit that they canvassed.

3122. Mr. Chandos Leigh.] Had any of the party a book with them?—Yes.

3123. Who?—Anderson.

3124. Did you see him mark or write anything in the book?—He had his book with him. I did not notice whether he put anything down.

3125. When you were introduced to Sir Richard Glass, did you see him make any mark in the book?—No, I did not.

3126. Had he the book open or shut, then?—That I cannot say.

3127. Do you know a Mr. Thomas Radford?—Yes.

3128. Did he canvass you for your vote?—Yes.

3129. When was that?—I cannot say; not many days before the polling.

3130. Had you ever seen Thomas Radford with Sir Richard Glass?—No, I did not.

3131. When Thomas Radford canvassed for your vote, did he say anything to you?—Yes.

3132. What?—He asked me if I would vote for Sir Richard Glass.

3133. Anything else?—Yes.

3134. What?—He asked me how it was that he had not dealt with us lately, and I told him I could not tell. He ordered some coal of us.

3135. How much?—Three tons.

3136. Did he say anything else?—No; he told me to send it in when I liked.

3137. Did you send it in?—No.

3138. How did you come not to send it in?—I did not send it in.

3139. How was that?

3140. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] I suppose you had some reason?—Yes, because I did not mean voting on their side. I thought, perhaps, he would not like to deal with us again, and so for that reason I did not send it.

3141. Mr. Chandos Leigh.] Was anything more said by Radford about getting or losing custom?—No; he left me then.

3142. But at any time?—No.

3143. Think?—No.

Cross-examined by Mr. Giffard.

3144. You were at the supper, you say, but partook of the beer and not of the supper; what was the supper?—I cannot say, for I did not come home till it was over.

3145. Well, you have been telling us a good deal about it; how did you know that Taylor took the chair at the supper?—He was in the chair when I come home after it was over.

3146. You infer from that that he was in the chair during the supper?—I cannot say as he was during the supper.

3147. You have said so?—He was when I was in the room.

3148. Do you know anything about where this supper was obtained from?—No, I do not.

3149. You did not supply it?—I cannot say, for I come over just as it was over; but I went in the room and had share of the beer and tobacco.

3150. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] You know whether you were paid for the supper or not?—No, I had been out for some days.

3151. You say Taylor paid you afterwards?—Yes.

3152. Was Taylor's payment for the supper or not?—Taylor paid for the supper afterwards.

3153. Paid you?—No, my wife.

3154. Mr. Giffard.] You say he paid your wife?—Yes.

3155. Is your wife here?—No.

3156. She can be, I suppose; there is no difficulty in getting her?—No, but not to-day.

3157. You only know, then, about the payment to your wife?—She had the payment.

3158. That is all you know about the payment; what your wife has told you?—Yes.

3159. When were you canvassed by Mr. Lloyd, if ever?—I cannot say.

3160. You were canvassed by him?—Yes.

3161. Did you promise him your vote?—Yes.

3162. And you voted for him?—I did.

3163. Can

3163. Can you tell me whether that was before or after the supper?—I cannot.

3164. Cannot tell either way?—No.

3165. Now, you talk about being introduced to Sir Richard Glass; I suppose the gentlemen said to you, "This is Sir Richard Glass"?—Yes.

3166. And then Sir Richard Glass spoke to you about your vote?—Yes.

Re-examined by Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.

3167. You say your wife was paid; did you see the money paid to your wife?—I did not.

[The Witness withdrew.]

JAMES WILLIAMS sworn; Examined by Mr. Sturge.

3191. Are you a voter?—Yes.

3192. How did you vote?—For Mr. Glass.

3193. What time of the day did you go to the poll?—I cannot tell.

3194. Did you go from the "Rising Sun"?—We walked down from the "Sun" to the poll.

3195. And then you voted?—Yes.

3196. These people that you mentioned, did you see them have any beer?—No, I did not.

3197. Did you see beer there?—There was some beer there, because I had some.

3198. Did you see any beer besides?—No.

3199. Who gave you the beer?—It was on the table, and I took it.

3200. What was it in?—In a jug.

3201. A large jug?—A quart, or something like that.

3202. Did you see anybody help themselves?—No.

3203. Did you help yourself?—I had a glass, out of it.

3204. Did you pay for it?—No; I did not.

3205. Did you have anything to eat?—No.

3206. Did you see anything on the table?—There was nothing on the table, only the jug and the glass.

[The Witness withdrew.]

W. Paget.

21 January
1869.

J. Williams.

JOSEPH ROGERS sworn; Examined by Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.

3207. ARE you a Groom?—Yes.

3208. To Mr. Rickaby?—Yes.

3211. Were you let in to Mr. Pardoe's grounds?—Not the first time as I went.

3212. But were you after a time?—Yes.

3213. Who let you in?—Mrs. Pardoe.

3214. When you got in, where did you go?—She led me the way round the house on to the back of the lawn.

3215. When you got to the back of the house, what did you find there?—I saw a table there, and a cloth laid, and some bread and cheese on it.

3216. And some beer?—Yes.

3217. Did you find any people there besides yourself?—Yes; a number of people besides myself.

3218. How many altogether, do you think?—About 50.

9.

3219. Did you see John Oakes there?—Yes; I see John Oakes.

3220. He is the gardener, I believe?—Yes.

3221. Did you see James Field?—I did.

3222. Did you see a man, Thomas Wood, who is called "Bliss"?—Yes, I did.

3223. And various other people?—Yes; and various other people.

3224. Did these people who were there eat the supper?—They had some supper, and I had some with them.

3225. After you had done supper, did Sir Richard Glass's carriage drive up?—About an hour and a-half after; after I had my supper.

3226. Who was in the carriage with him when he came?—There was Sir Richard, Mr. Giles Shaw, and Mr. Webster, and I think Mr. John Bury was there; I will not be certain.

3227. Did you cheer him, and so on?—Yes.

3228. Did the carriage stop at Mr. Pardoe's?—They drew up about half a second.

3229. What happened while the carriage was drawn up?—There was a hurrah and a waving of hats.

G 4

3230. What

J. Rogers.

J. Rogers.

21 January
1869.

3230. What did Sir Richard Glass do, or say ?
—Like that (describing it).

3231. Then you hurrahed, and the carriage drove off?—Yes.

3232. I believe you ran on the step?—Yes, I
did.

3233. To Winterdyne?—Yes.

3234. When you got back to Winterdyne, did you see Dr. Webster?—I did.

3235. What did you do when you saw Dr.
Webster?—I said, "Glass for ever!"

3236. Was there anybody else with you?—
There was another person with me, but I cannot recollect who it was; there was two of us.

3237. And what became of you and Webster?
—I touched my hat to him, and I gave a tip for some beer; I asked for beer.

3238. Did you get any beer?—He took me into the "Pack Horse" and ordered me to have a cup of beer.

3239. Was there anybody else in the "Pack Horse" when he gave you a cup of beer?—Yes.

3240. Who was there?—Mr. Abel Cooke was there, and a man of the name of James Jordan.

3241. And Joseph Cooke; was he there?—
Yes.

3242. Did Joseph Cooke get any drink?—He did not have any beer.

3243. But did he have anything else?—Yes.

3244. What did he have?—It was liquor of some sort.

3245. Who paid for Joseph Cooke's liquor?—
Mr. Webster.

3246. Did you see him?—Yes; I see him drop the money on the tray that the liquors was brought on.

3247. Was there any talk going on at that time about Sir Richard Glass?—I did not put my head into what they were talking about; but I heard two or three words; they were making remarks of Sir Richard.

Cross-examined by Mr. Poland.

3248. Did you sit down to this table that was at Mr. Pardoe's?—No, I stood up.

3249. You stood up and took a scrap of bread and cheese, did you?—Yes.

3250. You did not vote, I suppose?—No.

3251. About the number of persons; you do not mean to say that there were anything like 50 persons?—There was.

3252. A good many boys?—Not the time that I was there; they came afterwards.

3253. You mean altogether 50; do you?—Yes.

3254. Were there a lot of boys there?—Yes, after.

3255. They cheered, did they?—Yes, they cheered.

3256. How far is the "Pack Horse" from this place; from Mr. Pardoe's?—A quarter of a mile.

3257. How much beer did Dr. Webster give you there?—A pint.

3258. What was it Joseph Cooke had?—
Liquor.

3259. What liquor, do you know?—No; I know it was liquor.

3260. Do you know what was paid for it?—I think it was half-a-crown. I will not be certain whether it was half-a-crown or a two-shilling piece.

3261. And some change given?—Yes, and some change given.

3262. You work for Mr. Rickaby, do you?—
Yes.

3263. Did he vote for Mr. Lloyd?—That makes no difference to me.

3264. Did he vote for Mr. Lloyd?—I do not know, I am sure.

3265. Do you mean to say you do not know
Mr. Rickaby?—Yes.

3266. Do not you know he voted for Lloyd?
—He did not tell me.

3267. Do not you know he is on Mr. Lloyd's side?—He never talked to me much about it.

3268. Have you the remotest doubt about that?—I believe I was told that he was for Mr.
Lloyd, but he does not tell me that.

[The Witness withdrew.]

HENRY CARTER sworn; Examined by Mr. Chandos Leigh.

H. Carter.

3269. ARE you a non-voter?—A non-voter.

3270. Where do you live?—The Lakes, near Bewdley.

3271. What are you?—A woodcutter.

3272. Were you employed during the last election by any body?—Yes.

3273. What as?—Watcher.

3274. Who by?—Edwin Pountney.

3275. Was it to watch for Sir Richard, or for
Mr. Lloyd?—To watch for Sir Richard.

3276. Did you watch?—Yes.

3277. How long did you watch?—What they call 10 turns.

3278. How many days was that?—Five nights and five days.

3279. Did you see others watching?—I saw some round, but I could not say whether they were watching or not; I did not put that question to them.

3280. What were they doing?—Walking round, but whether watching or not I could not say.

3281. Can you tell us some of the people you saw walking round; do you know them?—Some
I did not.

3282. Did you know any of them?—Yes, some of them.

3283. Tell us them?—I knew Samuel Birch and his two sons.

3284. Anybody else?—No one else.

3285. Those are all the people you knew in your 10 turns?—Yes.

3286. Were you paid for watching?—Yes.

3287. What were you paid?—Fifteen shillings
I had on the Friday night, and 15 s. more on the Thursday night following.

3288. Where were you paid these two 15 s.?—
One 15 s. I was paid at Osman Pountney's, the "Malt Shovel."

3289. Who were you paid by?—I cannot say;
the man was disguised.

3290. Were you paid in a room upstairs or downstairs?—Upstairs.

3291. Were there other people in the room when you were paid?—Yes, there was some one in the room.

3292. Did you know him?—No.

3293. Do you know William Jackson, of Wribbenhall?—Yes.

3294. Was

3294. Was he in the room?—He may have been; I did not take any notice of him.

3295. Were there other people in the room?—Yes.

3296. Few or many?—Few.

3297. Were any other people, whom you had seen watching, paid in the room at the same time as yourself?—No.

3298. Were you let into the room by anybody?—I was let into the room the same as if there were a man keeping the door, and I was let to go in like that (describing it), it was through the door.

3299. Repeat that again?—There was a man kept the door.

3300. Who was the man that kept the door?—Mr. Pountney was the man that kept the door.

3301. What Pountney?—Osman.

3302. Just describe to us how you were let into the room?—The man had the door in his hand and asked me if my name were Carter, and I said "Yes," and I walked in as it may be two paces, and the money was put into my hands, and I was turned out again downstairs.

3303. Do you know a man called George Millward?—Yes.

3304. Did you see George Millward at the "Malt Shovel"?—I saw him; yes.

3305. Did he show you anything?—He came downstairs after he had been upstairs, and said he had got a sovereign.

3306. You saw him come downstairs?—Yes.

3307. Did you see him go up?—No.

3308. Did he show you anything when he came downstairs?—No, he did not show me anything. I only heard the words that he had got a sovereign.

3309. Did you see any money?—No.

3310. Do you remember the polling-day?—Yes, I remember it.

3311. Were you at Mr. Pardoe's house in Lower Park?—I went across there in the morning, but I did not go into his house. I went into a back place.

3312. Did you see anything in the back place?—No; nothing besides a lot of men stood there.

3313. Who were the men?—I cannot say.

3314. Did you know any of them?—I may have known at the time. I do not know any of them now.

3315. Do you remember who any of them were?—No.

3316. Were they doing anything besides standing still?—No; doing nothing besides standing about.

3317. Did you see any eating or drinking?—No.

H. Carter.

Cross-examined by Mr. Giffard.

1869.

3318. I do not know whether you know where the George Millward lives that you speak of; there are two persons named George Millward in Bewdley; do you know which is which?—I know the one I mean; he lives opposite the "Malt Shovel," just beyond the Welch Gate.

3319. Is the "Malt Shovel" on Sandy Bank?—No.

3320. Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.] Where does the George Millward live whom you saw at the "Malt Shovel"?—Opposite the "Malt Shovel;" the back of the Welch Gate, a little above the Welch Gate; it is a place called Sandy Bank.

3321. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] What do you call the street where he lives?—Sandy Bank I think it is. I do not know anything else.

3322. What is he by trade?—Wood collier.

3323. Mr. Giffard.] Just one word more about it. Is this George Millward that you saw a married man?—Yes.

3324. Do you know more George Millwards than one?—No; I do not know any more than one.

3325. You only know one George Millward?—Only one.

3326. And you said he was a wood collier?—Yes.

3327. Where does he work?—He works for the Pountneys, I believe.

3328. How long have you known this man George Millward?—Three or four years; it may be longer.

3329. Has he been always working there?—I do not know whether he has always worked there or not.

3330. I mean since you have known him?—When I first knew him he did not work for them.

3331. Is the man in court you speak of?—I do not know.

3332. Just look round and see; is that the man (pointing to a man)?—Yes.

3333. Mr. Justice Blackburn (to George Millward).] Are you the voter?—Yes.

3334. Mr. Giffard (to George Millward).] Did you vote at all?—Yes.

[The Witness withdrew.

Mr. Justice Blackburn desired that Millward should be sworn.

GEORGE MILLWARD sworn; Examined by Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.

3335. ARE you George Milward of Sandy Bank?—Yes.

3336. Did you vote for this election?—Yes.

3337. Who did you vote for?—Sir Richard Glass.

3338. Did you watch?—No.

3339. Did you get any money?—I never watched, and so I could have none.

Cross-examined by Mr. Giffard.

3340. You did not receive any money?—No; not a farthing. I want some, if I can get hold of it. I should like to have some, if they talk about having any.

Mr. Giffard stated that he found that there were two voters on the Register of the name of George Milward.

*G.
Millward.*

MARY HEAD, sworn; Examined by Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.

- M. Head.*
 21 January 1869.
3341. ARE you the wife of Edward Head?—
 Yes
3342. And is he a shoemaker in Welch Gate?—
 Yes.
3343. Do you recollect, one day in July last, seeing Sir Richard Glass?—I remember the first time that Sir Richard Glass came here; I do not know what month it was.
3344. Is there a Mrs. Lucas, who lives opposite to you?—Right opposite.
3345. Did you see Sir Richard Glass come out of her house?—Yes; I did.
3346. Who was with him; anybody?—There were several gentlemen with him; but one, in particular, was Mr. Pardoe.
3347. Do you remember any of the others?—I think Mr. Bury was one.
3348. Can you mention any others besides?—I cannot, for I did not notice them. I merely noticed Sir Richard.
3349. After he came out, did you see Mrs. Lucas?—Yes; I did.
3350. How far off was Sir Richard Glass, when you saw Mrs. Lucas?—About six yards from Mrs. Lucas's door.
3351. Did Mrs. Lucas do anything?—Held up the money, in her hand, that she said Sir Richard had given her.
3352. What money?—Half-a-sovereign in her right hand and a shilling in her left.
3353. Did she say anything; do not tell me what she said; but did she say anything?—Yes.
3354. Could Sir Richard Glass hear what she said?—No; I do not think he could, for he was some distance from her.
3355. You heard distinctly what she said?—Yes.
3356. Now, do you recollect anything that took place in Welch Gate, in the open street?—Yes.

3357. When was it; the same evening, or the next evening?—I think, as near as I can recollect, it was the next evening, when I was going to tea.
3358. What did you see taking place there?—I saw two forms along the street, one behind the other, opposite Mrs. Lucas's shop window, and some women drinking beer there.
3359. Were there any men or children besides the women?—There were some children; but I did not see any men.
3360. And were there any ribands about, or anything?—I think there were ribands or blue paper; one or the other.
3361. Where?—Hanging on a large tree at Mrs. Lucas's door.
3362. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] What is Mrs. Lucas's; a public-house?—No, she keeps a green-grocer's shop.
3363. Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.] She is the wife of Edward Lucas, is she?—I do not know her husband's name.
3364. These people, you say, were drinking beer?—They were.
3365. Did they drink any healths?—Yes, they were drinking Sir Richard's health, and shouting "Glass for ever."
3366. Did you see whether any money was paid; whether they paid anything to anybody?—No, they did not; not that I see.

Mr. Giffard stated that he would not ask this witness any questions.

[The Witness withdrew.]

Mr. Chandos Leigh stated that this closed the evidence with regard to treating as a system, and that the evidence now would chiefly have reference to isolated cases of bribery and intimidation.

WILLIAM JONES, sworn; Examined by Mr. Chandos Leigh.

- W. Jones.*
3367. WHAT are you?—A letter carrier.
3368. Where do you live?—At Stourport.
3369. Are you a voter?—Yes.
3370. Which way did you vote?—For Mr. Lloyd.
3371. Do you remember Monday the 2nd of November?—Yes.
3372. On that day did you bring your letter bags to the Stourport Post Office?—Yes.
3373. Is a Mr. Charles the postmaster?—Yes.
3374. And does he keep a shop?—Yes.

Mr. Giffard stated that he did not propose, at present, to ask his Lordship to check this examination; but he pointed out that this was a case of which the Respondent had had no information furnished him by the Petitioners.

Mr. Fitzjames Stephen stated that this was the case of intimidation by the postmaster.

Mr. Justice Blackburn stated that he trusted, in future, the fullest information would be given beforehand in these cases; and that he must, if Mr. Giffard desired it, postpone the cross-examination of this witness until he had had some opportunity of answering their evidence.

3375. Mr. Chandos Leigh.] You say you went into the office; does Mr. Charles, the postmaster, keep a shop?—Yes.

3376. Was anybody in the shop with him?—Yes, Joseph Rogers.

3377. That gentleman (pointing to a gentleman)?—Yes.

3378. Did Mr. Rogers speak to you?—No; not in going in.

3379. Did he speak to anybody?—He spoke to Mr. Charles when I went through.

3380. After he had spoken to Mr. Charles did he come to you?—Yes.

3381. What did he say to you?—He asked me if I had a vote.

3382. Who asked you?—Mr. Rogers.

3383. Was Mr. Charles there at the time?—No; he was in his shop still.

3384. Tell us what he said?—He came in and asked me for my vote; he wanted to know if I had promised it; I told him I had not promised, but I expected a party when I got home; he said he would accompany me home from the office office; I said, he might if he liked. When I got home he stayed, it may have been more than 20 minutes, in the house and asked me for my vote there. I told him that Mr. Baldwin had been a friend to me, I lost my hand under Mr. Baldwin's employment, it was they that got me my situation, and he said, "So might anybody else;" he said after that, "You would not like to offend your master," (meaning Mr. Charles), and I said "No," he said, "If you do, you will get reported and lose your place, and you know very well," he said, "as well as I do that there is plenty waiting for your job."

3385. Was anybody there at the time he said this?—My wife.

3386. Do you remember Sunday morning, November the 15th?—Yes; he called me after I went to the door, called me up the yard.

3387. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] Was this on a subsequent day?—The same day; I did not go up to him, and he said "Never mind."

3388. Mr. Chandos Leigh.] Was that all that happened on that day?—Yes.

3389. Now I was asking you about Sunday November the 15th, the day before the nomination; did you go to the office on that day for your bag?—Yes.

3390. Were you late?—Yes, seven o'clock; I ought to have been there by a quarter to six.

3391-2. Did you see Mr. Charles?—Yes.

3393. Did Mr. Charles make a statement to you then?—Yes; he said "I suppose you have been electioning," I told him "I had," "They have got a promise out of you I suppose?" I said "Yes, I have promised Mr. Lloyd," "If you vote that way it will be worse for you."

3394. But you did vote for Mr. Lloyd?—Yes.

3395. You have mentioned the name of Mr.

Joseph Rogers, have you ever seen Joseph Rogers asking other people for their vote?—I have seen him with Mr. Glass.

3396. With Sir Richard Glass?—Yes.

3397. What were they doing when they were together?—I do not know what they were doing, but I thought they were going round as if they were canvassing.

3398. Did they stop at houses?—I saw Rogers go to the Post Office, but Sir Richard Glass did not go in with him that day that I saw him.

3399. Have you seen them together?—Yes.

3400. Seen them call at houses?—Yes.

3401. Together?—Yes.

3402. More than one house?—They have been at mine several times when I was not at home.

3403. Have you seen them together at houses?—Yes.

Mr. Giffard stated that he was in his Lordship's hands, but that Mr. Charles was not here, and of course under those circumstances it would be idle for him to cross-examine the Witness.

Mr. Justice Blackburn stated that the cross-examination of this Witness, must be postponed until to-morrow.

3404. Mr. Chandos Leigh.] Is your wife here?—Yes; over the road.

Mr. Justice Blackburn desired that if there were any other cases of this description, information should at once be given of them to the Respondent by the Petitioners.

Mr. Fitzjames Stephen stated, that before doing that, he would call the wife of the last Witness.

[The Witness withdrew.

MARY JONES, sworn; Examined by Mr. Sturge.

3405. ARE you the wife of William Jones, the last witness?—Yes.

3406. Do you remember the 2nd of November, Monday?—Yes.

3407. Do you know Mr. Joseph Rogers?—Yes.

3408. Do you remember his coming to your house with your husband?—Yes.

3409. How long did he stay there?—From 10 to 20 minutes.

3410. Did you hear him talking to your husband?—Yes.

3411. What did he say to him?—He asked him, had he promised his vote, he said he had not; he asked him if he would vote for Mr. Glass; he said he did not know.

3412. Who said?—My husband said he had not promised.

3413. What did Mr. Rogers say then?—He told him of course he supposed he would vote the same way as his master, as he had been a friend to him in little matters, and if he did not it would be worse for him, as he knew there was plenty waiting for his job.

3414. Who was his master?—Mr. Charles, the postmaster.

3415. Was that all that passed then?—No, there were several other things, but not worth notice.

3416. And then Mr. Rogers went away?—Yes.

3417. Has Mr. Rogers been again at your house?—No.

3418. Has Mr. Rogers ever been there before this time?—Yes, he has called before.

3419. When your husband was not in?—Yes.

3420. Was anybody with him when he called?—Yes, Sir Richard Glass and several other gentlemen.

3421. Can you name any other gentlemen?—Mr. Radford was one; I do not know the others.

3422. Have you seen them going to any other houses?—No, not to notice.

[The Witness withdrew.

At this stage Mr. Fitzjames Stephen informed his Lordship that if he would allow the Counsel for the Petitioners to retire for a short time, they would prepare such a list as his Lordship had indicated.

Mr. Justice Blackburn stated that this course would, no doubt, save time in the result, and the Counsel for the Petitioners accordingly retired for consultation.

After a short time the Counsel for the Petitioners returned, and Mr. Fitzjames Stephen stated that a list of cases of bribery was now being copied, and would be furnished at once to the Respondent's Counsel, and that, with the sanction of his Lordship, he proposed now to go into such cases of bribery as Mr. Giffard was prepared for, and to give some evidence with relation to agency.

AMOS BOWER, sworn; Examined by Mr. Chandos Leigh.

A. Bower. 3423. WHAT are you?—They call me a loom-tuner in this part of the country.
 21 January 1869. 3424. Does that mean an overlooker of carpet looms?—Yes.
 3425. Where do you live?—At Stourport.
 3426. You voted for Lloyd, I believe?—Yes.
 3427. Were you canvassed for your vote?—No.
 3428. Did you see Sir Richard Glass at Stourport?—I saw him, but did not speak to him.
 3429. What was he doing when you saw him?—Walking in the street.
 3430. Alone?—Mr. Radford and Joseph Rogers were with him.
 3431. Anybody else?—Yes; John Radford and Parsons of Bewdley.
 3432. What were they doing?—They were walking down the street when I see them.
 3433. Did you see them more than once?—Well, I see Sir Richard Glass on the balcony of the "White Lion," on his first appearance in Stourport.
 3434. Who was he with then on the balcony, any other gentleman on the balcony with him?—Joseph Rogers, Thomas Radford, and a few strangers.

Cross-examined by Mr. Giffard.

3435. Did you go up to the polling booth on the polling day with a voter who purported to be Mr. Lloyd?—Yes.
 3436. How came you to go up?—Friends and neighbours, that was the only thing.
 3437. What were you doing in the election, were you bringing up voters to the poll for Mr. Lloyd?—I brought three or four up; three of them.
 3438. I suppose you got some instructions about bringing the voters up from somebody?—No.
 3439. Did you do that out of your own head?—My own accord.
 3440. Had you been to Mr. Lloyd's committee-room?—No; I had nothing to do with Mr. Lloyd's committee.
 3441. Had you been to his committee-room?—No.
 3442. Never?—No.
 3443. What time did you go up with this person who voted as Lloyd?—Perhaps it might be a quarter-past three; I cannot say.
 3444. Just give us the names of the three persons you say you took up to the poll?—I took one William Wanklin, and up I went along with him; I cannot recall all the names now.
 3445. There were but three, you have told me?—I went up with three or four; I went up with this Lloyd.
 3446. Did he vote?—I believe he did; but I stood in the doorway.
 3447. You took him up to vote?—Well?
 3448. Did you know him before?—I had been a shopmate with him.
 3449. You did know him before?—Yes.
 3450. How long had you known him?—Twelve or thirteen years.
 3451. Do you mean to say that you were not near enough to see whether he voted or not?—It was inside the doorway; I could see them entering their names.
 3452. You could see him giving his name, and the poll-clerk taking it down?—Yes.

3453. Do not you believe he did vote?—It is hard to say, if a man cannot believe his own eyes.
 3454. You do believe it?—Yes.
 3455. What is his Christian name?—William.
 3456. Where does he live?—Cheapside; Severnside some call it.
 3457. Did you know this man, William Lloyd's father?—I have seen the man.
 3458. Well, you knew his father?—Yes, I know him; I have never had any dealings with him; I have seen him.
 3459. Were you at the registration last July, last September I suppose it would be?—That is before the revising barrister?
 3460. Yes?—Yes, for the county, not for the borough.
 3461. You were not before the revising barrister for the borough; are you quite sure of that?—Yes.
 3462. Did not the barrister do the borough and the county the same day?—No.
 3463. You will swear you were not before the revising barrister for the borough?—I had no cause for that.
 3464. Mr Justice Blackburn.] Cause or not, can you not say whether you were or not?—No, I was not.
 3465. Mr. Giffard.] You were not before the revising barrister for the borough?—I was noticed for the county, and I appeared before him there; but as for the borough vote I was not.
 3466. That you are quite positive of?—Yes.
 3467. Do you live in Stourport?—Yes.
 3468. Were you in Stourport the day the revising barrister was there revising for the borough?—Yes; I was at work there.
 3469. How many days was he revising for the borough?—If I had been there I could have told you, but I think it was only one day.
 3470. You knew William Lloyd, the son, you say, and he had been a shopmate with you?—Yes, I did.
 3471. Did you not know from him that he had no vote?—No.
 3472. Take care; did you not know from him that he had been before the revising barrister to try to get a vote, and had been refused?—I knew afterwards, but not before.
 3473. Before when?—Before the day.
 3474. Did you mean before the election day, or the day of the revising barrister?—The revising barrister of the borough.
 3475. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] What did you know about his having no vote?—I did not know anything about that till after.
 3476. After what?—After the day of the revising barrister.
 3477. Mr. Giffard.] Then you did know it?—I knew what was the rumour, that was all. If I had been in the Court, perhaps, I should have known more about it.
 3478. Now, was it the son or the father that you took up to vote on the day of the election?—The son.
 3479. Was it before that that you had heard what you called a rumour (come now, just tell us) that the son had been refused his vote before the revising barrister?—I heard afterwards, when they scrutinised his vote, that it was not legal; that was after the election when I knew it.
 3480. You had not heard from William Lloyd before then that he had not got a vote?—No.
 3481. You

3481. You swear that; you swear you had not heard from William Lloyd, the son, that he had got no vote?—Not before the revising barrister gave it him; I never did; knew nothing about it.

3482. Between the time the barrister revised and the time of the election, had you heard whether the revising barrister had refused Lloyd his vote or not?—I had never heard.

3483. That you swear?—Yes.

3484. Were you making yourself rather busy about the election?—No, not particularly.

3485. We will see; do you remember paying 15 s. for drink at the "Holly Bush"?—Never.

3486. Will you swear that you did not?—Never a shilling.

3487. Do you know a man named Glover?—I know him; but I am not accustomed to go into his house.

3488. Did you give him 15 s.?—No.

3489. At any time?—Never in my life. I have had a pint of cider there.

3490. Glover keeps the "Holly Bush," does he?—Yes.

3491. Did you give this man Lloyd a card to go to the poll with?—No.

3492. Are you quite sure of that?—Yes.

3493. Had he got a card?—Yes, he showed me his card: "No. 2 booth," that he was going to; that is all I know about it.

3494. Were there different colours to the cards for Glass and Lloyd?—I never see one for Sir Richard Glass. I cannot say whether there was any difference or not.

3495. What was Mr. Lloyd's card?—White and black.

3496. I suppose the colour this man Lloyd showed you was white and black?—I do not remember his showing it me, only he took it down.

3497. You saw it; was it white and black?—You might call it white and black, or black and white, which you will have.

3498. It was one of these two, was it?—It was printed.

3499. Was the card itself any colour?—Well, it was what you call white, I should think, if you can call that a colour.

3500. Had it got any description of the voter on it, of where he lived?—I never handled it.

3501. You saw "No. 2 booth" on it, you know; did you know where the son lived?—Yes, I have told you, at Cheapside.

3502. Does he live at the same place as his father does, or did he at that time?—Two separate houses.

3503. Do you mean by two separate houses, in the same street?—No.

3504. Where do they each live; first tell me where the son lives?—Well, if there be such a place as Mitton, his father lives in Mitton, and the other at Cheapside.

3505. Whereabouts is Cheapside?—Adjoining Severn.

3506. They are known as different places?—Yes.

3507. And you cannot say which address, if either, was upon the card?—No.

3508. You did not look?—I did not handle it.

3509. "Did not look," was my question; did you see what address was on the card?—No.

3510. That you swear?—Well, he said he had to go to No. 2 booth.

3511. I ask you, Did you see on the card what was the address of the voter?—No, I did not have it in my hand.

3512. Did you see the address on it?—Not to make it out.

3513. Did you see the address on it?—I was not near enough to make it out.

3514. Did you see the address on it?—I never handled it, and did not see the address to make it out.

3515. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] Surely you can answer a simple straightforward question in a simple straightforward way?—I will try.

3516. Mr. Giffard.] Did you see the card?—I could not tell —

3517. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] Did you see or know in any way what was the address on the card?—I cannot tell.

3518. Did you not know that this was William Lloyd, the son, and that the man who was on the register was William Lloyd, the father?—I know that it was William Lloyd that the revising barrister gave a vote to; I know that that was the man.

3519. Was not the William Lloyd that the revising barrister gave a vote to, as you say, William Lloyd, the father?—It was given to the son, I believe; I knowed no better.

3520. Mr. Giffard.] You told me, I think, that the father lived at Mitton?—In Mitton.

3521. You were getting up voters to the poll; did you ever look at the register?—No, I do not —

3522. Now, take care?—I looked at my own.

3523. You did look at the register, as you looked at your own in it?—I never see one.

3524. What did you mean by saying you looked at your own?—I looked at my own card.

3525. Do you mean to swear, when you said you looked at your own, that was what you meant; do you know what a register is?—Yes; a list of voters, of course.

3526. My question was, whether you looked at the register, and your answer was, "I looked at my own;" do you mean to swear that by that answer you meant, "I looked at my own card?"—Yes, that is what I am alluding to.

3527. Now, I will repeat my question, then: Did you ever look at the register?—I had a register of the voters after the polling; I never see one before.

3528. That is not my question; Did you ever look at one; you might have looked at one in a committee-room, or a friend's house, or a great many other places?—No.

3529. Did you look at the register the day before the election?—I do not remember that ever I did.

3530. Will you swear you did not?—Well, for all I know.

3531. Do you mean you might have looked at it and not known?—I do not believe ever I did.

3532. Will you swear you did not?—Yes; as far as that goes.

3533. As far as what goes?—As looking at one of the registers before the day of the election goes.

3534. You say you brought up three or four voters; where did you get their votes from?—They were neighbours and friends, and never had had the privilege to vote before; and one of them asked me if I would go with him, to accompany him. That is as plain as I can give it.

3535. Which one is that?—That is William Wanklin.

3536. The others, did you fetch them yourself up to the poll?—No.

3537. Where

A. Bower.

21 January
1869.

A. Bower.
1869.

3537. Where does Wanklin live?—He lived on the Farm Bed, at that time, in Lower Mitton.

3538. How far did he live at that time from you?—Three or four hundred yards.

3539. How did you know these three or four people had not votes, did they tell you?—Very few, only the present system—

3540. Do not talk about the present system; answer my question?—How did I know? I knowed it was a general thing as far as that went.

Mr. Justice Blackburn.] This is not material, I think.

Re-examined by Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.

3541. About this William Lloyd, when you took William Lloyd up to the poll, did you or did you not believe that William Lloyd had a right to vote?—I believed he had a right.

3542. Had you heard anything about a question as to the right to vote before the revising barrister?—No; I heard afterwards.

3543. Had you, at the time of the election, I mean, heard that there had been a question before the revising barrister about his vote?—Yes.

3544. And had you heard that the revising barrister had decided that he had a vote, or that the revising barrister had decided that he had not a vote?—I heard that the revising barrister had given him a vote.

3545. Now, about this man's father; do the father and son live in the same house or different houses?—In different houses at present.

3546. Do you know who pays the rates for the house in which the father lives?—No, I cannot answer that question.

WILLIAM DAVIS, sworn; Examined by Mr. Chandos Leigh.

W. Davis.

3547. WHERE do you live?—In Pall Mall.

3548. Is that in Stourport?—Yes.

3549. And what are you?—A forgerman.

3550. Are you a voter?—Yes.

3551. Are you in the employment of a Mr. Baldwin?—Yes.

3552. Which way did you vote?—For Mr. Lloyd.

3553. Were you canvassed by the other side?—Yes.

3554. Who canvassed you?—Sir Richard Glass, Mr. Joseph Rogers, Mr. Crowther, and Mr. Anderson.

3555. You say they canvassed you; where did they come to?—To my door.

3556. Mr. Crowther is a solicitor?—Yes.

3557. And Mr. Anderson, that is the clerk?—Yes.

3558. Did they come together, those gentlemen you have named?—Yes.

3559. Who spoke to you when they came?—When they came, Mr. Joseph Rogers said to Sir Richard—"Mr. Davis, sir," and then he turned to me and said—"This is Sir Richard Glass."

3560. Introduced you to him?—Yes. "He is come to solicit you for your vote."

3561. What did he say afterwards?—Well, we had a little conversation.

3562. Did anything take place after that?—He asked me to promise him.

3563. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] Who asked you to promise him?—Sir Richard.

3564. Mr. Chandos Leigh.] Did you promise him?—No, I told him I could not.

3565. Had any of the company books with them?—Yes.

3566. Who?—Anderson.

3567. Did you see Anderson make any mark in the books?—I did.

3568. When was that?—Early in the election.

3569. I am talking of the time at which they called at your house?—It was all the same time.

3570. Now, before they came to your house, did you see them?—I saw them at the houses before.

3571. Were the same party together then?—Yes.

3572. Did Anderson say anything to Sir Richard Glass in your presence?—No; I told him that I had promised Mr. Lloyd; but the report was, that Mr. Lloyd was not going to stand, and if not, to solicit me again. He says, "Anderson, make a memorandum of that."

Mr. Giffard stated that he would not ask this witness any questions.

[The Witness withdrew.

JOHN DAVIS, sworn; Examined by Mr. Chandos Leigh.

J. Davis.

3573. WHAT are you?—A Forgerman.

3574. Where do you live?—On the Farm Bed.

3575. Is that at Stourport?—Yes.

3576. Are you a voter?—Yes.

3577. For whom did you vote at the last election?—Thomas Lloyd.

3578. Did the other side call upon you before the election?—The Conservatives? yes.

3579. Who?—Mr. Joseph Rogers, Mr. Glass, Mr. Crowther, and George Anderson.

3580. When was that; how long before, about?—I cannot exactly say the day of the month, but it was some time before the election.

3581. Where did they call at?—My house.

3582. What happened when they called at your house?—Mr. Joseph Rogers introduced Sir Richard Glass to me, and talked to me a little while, and then Mr. Glass offered me a card of address; a card with Sir R. A. Glass on it.

3583. Did anybody ask you for your vote?—Yes.

3584. Who?—Joseph Rogers.

3585. Was it in Sir Richard Glass's presence?—Yes.

3586. Did you see them after they left your house?—No.

3587. Or before?—No; I see them about the street.

3588. When you saw them about the street, were they together then, the same party; tell me who were together?—Mr. Glass I have seen, when he has called at my house, and Mr. Rogers; that is all.

3589. You said you have seen them about the street?—I have seen Mr. Rogers about the street.

3590. Have you seen Rogers about the street with anybody else?—No.

3591. Did

3591. Did you ever see Rogers in company with Sir Richard Glass, except the time that he called at your house?—No.

Cross-examined by Mr. Giffard.

3592. Just tell me what happened exactly; who spoke first?—Mr. Joseph Rogers.

3593. What were his words?—He told me that they had called on me to solicit me for my vote.

3594. He did not say “they,” I suppose?—He said “we.”

3595. Just give me, as nearly as you can, his words; first of all, did he tell you who it was that had come?—He told me that Sir Richard was come; that he had brought Sir Richard to me.

3596. Did he point out which Sir Richard was?—Yes.

3597. When he had pointed out which Sir Richard was, did Sir Richard himself speak?—Yes.

3598. What did he say?—He asked me if I would vote for him.

3599. What did you say?—I said, “No, I will vote for Thomas Lloyd; you need not trouble any further.”

3600. What did Sir Richard say upon that?—“Thank you.”

3601. Was that all Sir Richard said?—Yes.

3602. And was that all that Rogers said?—Yes.

Re-examined by Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.

3603. You told us just now that Rogers asked you for your vote?—Mr. Rogers introduced Sir Richard Glass to me.

3604. You told us Mr. Rogers asked for your vote?—Mr. Rogers called on me, and said he had brought Sir Richard to ask for my vote.

3605. Is that all he said?—I do not know exactly; I cannot recollect exactly; he told me something about the Church and State.

3606. Mr. Rogers, do you mean?—No; Sir Richard.

3607. I ask you about what Mr. Rogers said?—I do not know about what he said; he merely said what I have told you.

Mr. Giffard stated that it would be part of his case, that Sir Richard Glass made a point of doing his canvassing himself.

[The Witness withdrew.]

BENJAMIN AINSWORTH, sworn; Examined by Mr. Chandos Leigh.

3608. WHAT are you?—Blacksmith.

3609. Where do you live?—At Stourport.

3610. Are you a voter?—Yes.

3611. Whom did you vote for last election?—Mr. Lloyd.

3612. Before the election, did you see the other side at all; Sir Richard’s people?—Yes, several times.

3613. Where did you see them?—I saw them in the street.

3614. Whom did you see?—I saw Mr. Glass, Mr. Rogers, and Mr. Radford, and Mr. Danks and another gentleman.

3615. Do you know a Mr. Parsons?—Yes, he was along.

3616. Where did you see them?—Opposite my house, in Mitton.

3617. Had they anything in their hand, any of the party; did you see any books or papers?—I saw some papers in one of their hands.

3618. Can you say which that was?—I cannot say; not now.

3619. Did you see any of the party go into the house when they were at your neighbours?—Mr. Rogers I saw at the door talking to my neighbour opposite.

3620. Did he go into the house?—I do not think as he did; stood at the door.

3621. Did anybody else speak to the neighbour opposite except Mr. Rogers at that time?—I did not see any one; not at that time.

3622. What did they do after they had done talking to your opposite neighbour?—They went farther on up the town to some more houses.

3623. Did they go together then?—Yes.

3624. Did they ever come to your house; any of these people?—Yes.

3625. Who came to your house?—Mr. Joseph Rogers and Mr. Radford.

3626. Anybody else?—Yes, young Mr. Anderson, the clerk, and another lawyer; I heard the name and have forgotten; I cannot say what his name was; he was a stranger to me.

3627. Were those all that came to your house?—Those four.

9.

3628. Was Sir Richard there then?—No.

3629. When they came to your house, what happened?—They asked me about my vote.

3630. Who asked you about your vote?—Mr. Rogers.

3631. What did he ask you about your vote?—He asked me if I had promised my vote to Mr. Lloyd, and I told him I had not. He asked me if I would vote for Sir Richard Glass, and I told him I did not know how that might be, not yet. He said they would give me a month’s work if I would vote for Glass.

3632. Who would give you a month’s work?—Mr. Radford.

3633. On that occasion had any of the party any book or papers in their hands?—Mr. Rogers had.

3634. Did he do anything?—He asked me if I would have my name put down to vote for him; I told him I would rather not that night; I would consider on it in the course of a day or two.

Cross-examined by Mr. Giffard.

3635. Did any of those other gentlemen speak to you besides Mr. Rogers?—Before?

3636. No; on this occasion, when you say this talk about the work was?

Mr. Justice Blackburn.] I thought he said it was Mr. Radford who spoke to him.

3637. Mr. Giffard.] Who was it that made the observation about the work?—Mr. Radford.

3638. Before Mr. Radford made that observation about the work, did anybody else speak to you about giving your vote?—No; I had not been at home for a long while.

3639. I mean, in the same conversation, you know; who was it that spoke first about getting your vote?—Mr. Rogers.

3640. Just give me his words?—He asked me if I had promised my vote.

3641. Did he say, “Have you promised your vote?”—Yes, “Have you promised your vote?” says he; and I says, “No, I have not.”

B.
Ainsworth.
21 January
1869.

3642. You said, "No, I have not"?—Yes.

3643. What happened next?—He kept on talking.

3644. Do not talk about keeping on talking; that is just what I want to know; what did he say?—He asked if I would let him put it down then.

3645. That is what Mr. Rogers said?—Yes.

3646. Mr. Rogers said, "Will you let me put it down"?—Yes.

3647. But you had not agreed to give your vote?—No, I had not.

3648. What was said next by any one?—He said that Mr. Radford would find me work if I would do so.

3649. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] Who said that, Mr. Radford or Mr. Rogers?—Mr. Rogers said if I would do so, Mr. Radford would find me work for a month.

3650. Mr. Giffard.] Who spoke next?—He asked me if I would go to Kidderminster in the morning to work.

3651. Who did?—Mr. Radford.

3652. After Mr. Rogers had said Mr. Radford would find you work for a month if you would give your vote, who spoke next?—Mr. Rogers, for him to put my name down.

3653. Mr. Rogers asked you again to have your name put down?—Yes, he said—

3654. Who spoke next; did you answer?—I did.

3655. What did you say?—I said I would rather not—not then—not that night; I would rather let it stop; I would consider of it in the course of a day or two.

3656. Who spoke next?—I believe it was this Mr. Gardener (pointing to a gentleman close to him); I believe his name is Gardener.

3657. What did he say?—He said I had better vote for Sir Richard Glass, for he was a very nice man; I told him I could not say what he was, for I did not know nothing about him; he said if I would vote for him, there was a very nice chance for me to go to work, being as I had not had any to do a good while.

3658. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] Just repeat that?—He said there was a very nice chance for me; for I had been out of work a good while, and there would be a job for me to go to in the morning.

3659. Mr. Giffard.] Did he say you had been out of work a good while?—I told him so.

3660. Where had you told him that you had been out of work for a good while; you have not told us that part of the conversation?—I told him in my house.

3661. Was it in the same conversation?—Yes.

3662. What part of the conversation was it in that you told him you had been out of work a good while?—When he promised me the work, he knew that I had been out of work.

3663. How do you know that he knew that you had been out of work?—Because I had worked for him about eight weeks before then.

3664. I thought you said that he was a stranger to you?—Not Mr. Radford.

3665. I thought you said Mr. Gardener was a stranger to you?—Mr. Gardener, I said, promised me the work.

3666. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] Do you mean Mr. Radford, or do you mean Mr. Gardener; was Mr. Gardener present at this talk at all?—Yes, in the house.

3667. He was in the house?—Yes.

3668. Who were the four who were in the house at the time; I understand you to say that there were four; I want to understand you?—Mr. Rogers, Mr. Radford, Mr. Anderson, and Mr. Gardener.

3669. We will call him the anonymous lawyer?—I do not know what he was.

3670. Mr. Giffard.] Do not be in a hurry; let us see whether you had made a mistake before. You told me just now that Mr. Gardener spoke to you next, after I had asked you the order of speaking, and that that gentleman had said it would be a good chance for you, because you had been out of work a long time; was that a mistake or not?—Perhaps, because he heard what I had been saying.

3671. One thing at a time; do you mean that that is what Mr. Gardener said?—He stood by, and he heard what Mr. Rogers and me spoke of.

3672. Attend; is it true that Mr. Gardener said to you it would be a good chance for you, because you had been out of work a long time?—He did say so.

3673. There is no mistake about that; it was Mr. Gardener who spoke?—Yes.

3674. Now, we will come back again; how did Mr. Gardener know that you had been out of work for a long time?—Because Mr. Rogers and me had been talking about it, and Mr. Rogers did know.

3675. You did not mention that before; now tell me what had been said about your having been out of work a long time?—Mr. Rogers knew, and Mr. Radford knew; they asked me if I had got any work, and I said I had not got any.

3676. What part of the conversation was that; I wanted you to tell me how it happened, and in the order in which it happened, if you could; do you think you yourself mentioned at all, when you were asked for your vote, that you had been out of work for some time?—Mr. Radford knew it at the time.

3677. Never mind what he knew; I ask whether you think you mentioned it; do you think that you mentioned being out of work when you were asked for your vote?—I did say that I had been out so many weeks.

3678. What did you say about being out of work so many weeks?—(A pause.)

3679. What do you say to that question?—Mr. Rogers asked me if I had any work; I said I had not any; he asked how long I had been out, and I told him how many weeks I had been out.

3680. That was how it happened, was it?—Yes.

3681. Was that before or after you were asked for your vote?—It was before he asked me about the vote.

3682. Then it was the first thing that happened, was it, when they spoke to you?—Nearly.

3683. Had you forgotten that when you were first asked questions about this conversation?—No.

3684. How came you not to tell us of it, because I asked who spoke first, and what was said?—(The Witness remained silent.)

3685. See if I cannot remind you; did you say anything to this effect, "Them that gives me work has my vote"?—No.

3686. Take care. Just think before you answer answer that question; you know you did say you had not promised your vote; you did say that, did you not?—Yes.

3687. When you said you had not promised your vote, did you also say, "Them that gives me work has my vote"?—No; I did not say so.

3688. Will you swear you did not say so?—I did not say so.

3689. Do not let us have any misunderstanding; you mean to swear you did not say that, or anything to that effect?—No, I did not.

3690. Who was it first promised you work, Mr. Radford or Mr. Rogers?—Mr. Radford.

3691. What did he say?—That he would give me a month's work.

3692. Was Mr. Radford the first person who mentioned giving you a month's work?—Yes, at that time; yes.

3693. At that time; was there any other time?—No; it was he who mentioned it to me.

3694. Mr. Radford was the first person who mentioned giving you a month's work; are you quite sure of that?—Yes.

3695. Did you not tell me just now, that Mr. Rogers said that Mr. Radford would give you a month's work if you voted?—Mr. Radford promised me the work, and then, when Rogers had asked me several questions, "Come now," he says, "let me put your name down, and Mr. Radford will find you a month's work if you will give your vote."

3696. Let me have no mistake about this; the shorthand writer has got it down; I ask you now, who was it first mentioned your having a month's work?—Mr. Radford.

3697. That you are sure of?—Yes.

3698. Had you spoken to Mr. Radford before this conversation, at all?—No.

3699. Had you mentioned to Mr. Radford at all that you would like work?—No.

3700. Where are Mr. Radford's works?—In Kidderminster.

3701. Had you ever worked there?—Yes.

3702. How long before this?—It might be about 9 or 10 weeks, just for one week.

3703. How long before this conversation took place, had you worked there?—About 10 weeks before that.

3704. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] You mean that 10 weeks before this conversation, you had ceased working with him?—One week I worked with him.

3705. You worked for him one week, and that was 10 weeks before this conversation?—Yes.

3706. Mr. Giffard.] And from that time to the time this conversation took place, were you out of work?—Yes.

3707. Did you get any work between that time and the time of the election?—I worked perhaps one day in the week, sometimes two days, perhaps two or three weeks I did nothing at all.

3708. Did you get any work, is my question?—Yes, some little.

3709. Where?—I worked a day or two for a person on Hartlebury Common, a blacksmith, and I had done a day or two's work, gardening.

3710. Let me suggest a name to you; did you work for Mr. Baldwin before the election?—No, I did not; I never worked for him.

3711. Where are Mr. Baldwin's works?—In Stourport.

3712. Whose employment are you in now?—Mr. Baldwin's.

3713. How long have you been in Mr. Baldwin's employment?—About eight or nine weeks, I cannot say to a week, or two or three days.

3714. I suppose you have made your statement to some lawyer or another, what you could prove about this question, have you not?—No, not that I know of.

3715. "Not that you know of"! do you mean you have not been to some gentleman to have your statement taken down of what you could prove as a witness?—There was a gentleman over from the other side—(the Witness paused).

3716. There is no harm in it, let us have it?—On the other side there was a gentleman this morning, and he asked me.

3717. Do you mean for the first time?—What, sir?

3718. Did you not hear my question?—I am rather thick of hearing.

3719. I will speak louder. When for the first time did you make your statement as to what you could prove?—(The Witness remained silent for some time.)

3720. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] Do you not understand the question; if so, answer it?—I do not, my lord.

3721. Mr. Giffard.] You have told us that you went across to the other side. I suppose the other side of the road; probably to the "George" inn?—Yes.

3722. And there you made your statement to the lawyer, what you could prove; you understand that?—Yes.

3723. Was that the first time you had ever made a statement of what you could prove?—No, I had spoke to Mr. —, I forget the party's name.

3724. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] You spoke to Mr. something; whom was it you spoke to?—Mr. Watson.

3725. Mr. Giffard.] Who is Mr. Watson?—I believe he is a lawyer at Stourport.

3726. I suppose he is Mr. Lloyd's agent, is not he?—I believe he is.

3727. When did you do that?—Last Friday night.

3728. Was that the first time you made a statement?—Yes.

3729. To anybody?—Yes.

3730. Just tell me this; who put you on Mr. Baldwin's work, about eight or nine weeks ago?—Why, Mr. Baldwin.

3731. Did you tell him anything of what you could prove?—No.

3732. Never?—No.

3733. Nor his manager?—No, nor his manager.

3734. Are you quite sure of that?—Yes.

3735. Did you give away any beer in the "Holly Bush," or any money for beer?—No; I had no money for myself.

3736. Did you give away any money at all, in the "Holly Bush"?—No.

3737. Did you hand any money (I will not say "give," because that might lead to misunderstanding) to the landlord of the "Holly Bush"?—No.

3738. Never?—Not on that occasion; not anything in electioneering; never.

3739. Was it about the same time as the electioneering was going on?—I have gone into the "Holly Bush," and had a small jug of ale; I paid for it; but not anything to do with electioneering.

3740. Do you remember any sum of 10 s., or something of that kind, that you handed to the landlord of the "Holly Bush"?—No; because I had not got that sum of money.

3741. Never mind about the reason; you did not hand it to him?—I did not.

3742. You swear you did not?—I will.

3743. You are quite sure of that?—Yes; I am sure I did not; I will swear it.

[The Witness withdrew.]

STEPHEN FORT, further Examined.

S. Fort.

Witness.] My Lord, before I give any evidence, I ask for protection from your lordship, for I have been threatened, on coming into the court, again to-day.

Mr. Justice Blackburn.] If anyone has threatened you in any way, if that person is brought before me, I will take care that he is properly punished. Meanwhile, I do not see any reason for supposing that any one has cause for alarm at what is going on.

Mr. Giffard stated that he should be quite content if the evidence of this witness was resumed at the point where it was left off yesterday.

3744. Mr. Chandos Leigh (to the Witness).]—You told us about going to Mr. Crowther's office?—Yes.

3745. Did you go then into a room up-stairs?—Yes.

3746. Who were in the room up-stairs?—Mr. Radford and Mr. Joseph Rogers.

3747. And Sir Richard Glass?—And Sir Richard Glass.

3748. Did Sir Richard Glass then ask for your vote?—He asked for—he solicited my vote.

3749. Now, will you tell us, please, what took place then from that time?—I stated to him that my wife wished not for me to have anything to do with the electioneering, because I had expended a deal of money, and we was going down home to see my friends.

3750. Where did your friends live?—At Wilton, three miles from the city of Salisbury.

3751. What happened after you had said that?—Sir Richard Glass said, well he could not do anything himself; but Mr. Radford and Mr. Joseph Rogers said that that should be all right.

3752. Did you then make any comments?—No more than that he solicited my vote.

3753. Did you say whether you would give it him or not?—I did.

3754. You said you would vote for him?—I did.

3755. Did you vote for him?—No, I did not.

3756. Whom did you vote for?—I voted for Mr. Lloyd.

3757. Did you then go down High-street after that?—Yes.

3758. And did you go on your road into a public-house?—Into John Thomas's; I was called by John Thomas.

3759. Into a public-house?—Yes.

3760. What public-house does he keep?—The "Fruiterers' Arms."

3761. What did he do when he called you into the public-house; tell me first, is he the landlord?—Yes; the landlord called me himself.

3762. What did he do or say then?—He says, "Come and have something to drink;" he says, "We shall have some one here presently;" he says, "Sir Richard will be here presently."

3763. Did you go into the public-house?—Yes.

3764. Did you have anything to drink?—Yes; I was there nearly the whole of the day.

3765. You say you had something to drink, what did you have to drink?—Why, several pints of ale.

3766. Did you pay for it?—No, I did not pay anything.

3767. Whilst you were in there drinking the ale, did anybody come in?—After a lapse of time, about half-an hour, Sir Richard Glass and Mr. Joseph Rogers came in.

3768. Where did they go?—Into the front shop.

3769. Do you know a man of the name of Proverts?—Yes, perfectly well.

3770. Is he a voter?—Yes.

3771. Did you see him there?—Yes, he was called from the kitchen into the front shop.

3772. Who called him?—John Thomas took him before Sir Richard Glass.

3773. You were not in the front shop?—No.

3774. Did Mr. Proverts come out of the front shop afterwards?—Yes, he came back into the kitchen.

3775. Is Proverts' Christian name Thomas?—I cannot tell you.

3776. After he came back again from the front shop into the kitchen, did Proverts have anything to eat?—Not as I am aware of, but he had something to drink.

3777. What had he to drink?—Some cider.

3778. Who gave him the cider?—John Thomas.

3779. Did he pay for it?—No.

3780. Do you know the Lion Hotel?—Yes.

3781. Were you there any time about the election?—The day previous to the election I was.

3782. Were you there on the 10th of November?—The day previous to the election I was.

3783. What happened on the day previous to the election?—I was going by there, no, not the "Lion," the "Bell."

3784. I am asking about the "Lion" the day after you were at Thomas's; were you at the "Lion," do you remember?—No, I was not.

3785. Do you remember a Conservative meeting being held; had you any circular about a Conservative meeting?—I had a circular.

3786. Had you any printed thing; did you receive a printed thing?—Yes.

3787. In consequence of that, did you go anywhere?—I went that evening.

3788. Where to?—To the "Lion," the "White Lion Hotel."

3789. Was that before the election?—It was the week previous—before the election.

3790. When you got there did you find any people there?—Yes.

3791. Can you say how many, about?—Before the meeting was over there was from 60 to 70; I would rather say under than over.

3792. Were there any speeches made there?—Yes, there was speaking; there was a man of the name name of Pawtrey that got up and spoke respecting Mr. Bright.

3793. Do you know John Taylor?—Yes.

3794. Did you see him there?—Yes, he was there.

3795. Who took the chair?—He was reckoned to be chairman of the Working Men's Association.

3796. I asked who took the chair?—Well, I cannot say for certain who took the chair.

3797. Did Mr. Taylor speak?—Yes.

3798. You said just now that he was reckoned to be chairman of the Working Men's Association?—Yes.

3799. Are you a member of that association yourself?—Well, I was initiated as a member, but I did not pay anything.

3800. Were you initiated as a member of the Working Men's Association?—Yes.

3801. Who by?—Mr. Radford paid my initiation money.

3802. As a member of that association, do you know of your own knowledge who is the chairman of it?—Mr. Taylor.

3803. Do you know Mr. Rogers?—Yes, perfectly well.

3804. Was he there then?—Yes, and Mr. Radford.

3805. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] You mean at the "Lion," I suppose?—Yes.

3806. Mr. Chandos Leigh.] Which Mr. Rogers, John or Joseph?—John, no, Joseph, Mr. Joseph Rogers.

3807. Look at that gentleman sitting next to you (pointing to a gentleman), is that the gentleman?—Yes, that is the gentleman I mean.

3808. Was anything said about the election then?—It was discussed over in different ways.

3809. Were you spoken to about it?—Well, during the evening I was; they was glad to see me there.

3810. Were you asked about your vote?—Not there I was not.

3811. Who asked you, who said they were glad to see you there?—Mr. Rogers here (pointing him out).

3812. Was there anything to drink at the meeting?—Yes.

3813. What?—Why, there was sufficient ale for us during the evening.

3814. Who ordered the ale?—Well, I cannot say who ordered the ale.

3815. Was it ordered by the people in the room, or was it brought in for the use of the company?—It was brought in by the waiters, they brought it round to every man; every man was served with his pint of ale.

3816. Did you see any of the people pay?—No, I did not.

3817. Were you served with a pint of ale?—Yes.

3818. Did you pay for it?—No, I did not.

3819. Before the meeting finished, did Mr. Radford leave?—Yes; no, at the close of the meeting, both Mr. Radford and Mr. Rogers left together.

3820. Had you any ale after that?—The finishing up of the ale that was left in the can, no more than that.

3821. Do you know James's public-house?—Yes.

3822. Were you there any time about the election?—The day previous to the election—on the Monday.

3823. The nomination day, November 16th, the day previous to the polling?—Yes.

3824. What is the sign of James's public-house?—It is the "Railway Tavern," I think.

3825. Is it kept by a man of the name of James?—Yes.

3826. Were you going with your wife towards the railway station on that day?—Yes; we were going for a walk.

3827. About 12 o'clock of the day?—Yes, about 12 o'clock of the day.

3828. You say you were in James's public-house, did you go there of your own accord?—No, as me and my wife was going towards Kidderminster for a walk, Mr. Jeff, Mr. Taylor, and Luke Price, came out and invited us in, and my wife said, "I will take good care you are not going to drug my man; where he goes," she says, "I will go."

3829. Is that John Taylor?—I do not know his Christian name.

3830. Is he the man you spoke of before, as the chairman of the association?—Yes.

3831. Did you see Thomas Radford at that time?—Yes, he came out of the public-house, and walked down Worcester-street.

3832. And a man called Coley?—Yes, Coley was there.

3833. And other people?—Other people besides.

3834. You were telling us about your wife then?—Yes.

3835. Did you then, upon your wife making that speech, both go into the public-house?—We both went in together.

3836. Did you have anything to drink?—Yes.

3837. Did you order the drink, or did anybody offer to treat you?—Taylor says, "What will you have to drink," and, as the other parties was a drinking of grog, I says, "I will take a glass of rum," and so I had a glass of rum-and-water.

3838. Did you pay for the rum-and-water?—No.

3839. Who paid for it?—A person of the name of Lloyd.

3840. Was he in the house at the same time as Price and Taylor, and the other people you have mentioned?—Yes, the whole of the time.

3841. How many glasses had you, more than one?—Three.

3842. And who paid for the other glasses?—Why, Lloyd paid for the whole of them, but Taylor gave the orders for them. Taylor gave the orders for them, but Mr. Lloyd paid for them.

3843. You say the others were drinking spirits and water; who were the others, were they those whose names you have mentioned, or were there other people besides?—There was several; a person of the name of Lloyd, Taylor, myself and my wife, and a man of the name of Proverts.

3844. Were they all drinking spirits and water?—Yes; but what sort of spirits they were drinking I cannot say.

3845. Did you see anybody pay for what they were drinking?—Mr. Lloyd paid for it.

3846. For the company?—For the company at large.

3847. Who is Mr. Lloyd?—He is commonly called Tommer Lloyd, but I believe his name is Thomas Lloyd.

3848. The same name as Mr. Thomas Lloyd, the the candidate, but not the same person?—

Oh, no.

3849. Whilst you were in this public-house, did you go into the back part of it, the back premises?—Yes.

3850. Did anybody come after you?—Taylor.

3851. Did Taylor do anything?—He put half-a-sovereign into my hand, and he says, "Will you vote for Sir Richard Glass, to-morrow?" I says, "I shall not be far behind you."

3852. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] Will you repeat that again?—He says, "Will you vote for Sir Richard Glass, to-morrow," and by that he puts a half-sovereign into my hand.

3853. And you added that you said or did something, as I understand you?—I says, "I shall not be far behind you."

3854. Did you take and keep the half-sovereign?—Yes, I kept the half-sovereign.

3855. Mr. Chandos Leigh.] Did you give the half-sovereign to anybody?—To my wife, directly as I came out.

3856. Now, before this half-sovereign, as you say, was given you, what had you in your pocket?—I might have had 1s. 6d. or 2s. in my pocket, no more than 2s. I cannot speak to the exact amount.

3857. You say your wife and yourself went home together afterwards; going home, what happened?—As we were going home, we were called by a person unknown to me into the "Bell," and I called for a pint of ale there, and paid for it; and while we was drinking that pint of ale, Mr. Green says to me—

3858. Stop. Tell us who is Mr. Green?—The landlord of the "Bell."

3859. What did Green say to you?—Who are you going to vote for?—I said, "Well, I have promised Sir Richard Glass," and by that he asked me to have something to eat, to go in to dinner; and my wife said, there was a good dinner provided at home.

3860. Is he Joseph Green?—Yes; Joseph Green.

3861. Of Lion-hill?—Yes.

3862. Did you see Taylor again after this?—No, not after that, not till the next day; not till the election day.

3863. The day of the poll?—Yes, the polling day.

3864. Did he speak to you then?—He came to my house, him and Mr. Jeff.

3865. What happened there?—He says, "Now Fort," he says, "what did I ask you yesterday," and I says, "I am going to vote for Mr. Lloyd;" and by that him and Mr. Jeff walks away.

Cross-examined by Mr. Giffard.

3866. You said, I think, that you had become a member of this association?—Yes.

3867. When was that; about when, you know; I do not ask you for a day, or even a week; about when?—The Saturday previous to the demonstration.

3868. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] Do you mean, by the demonstration, your going to the "Lion"?—No; the demonstration that was given in Mr. Roger's fields.

3869. Mr. Giffard.] I want a date?—About the 29th of August.

3870. I presume you were aware that it was an association which was called "The Conservative and Constitutional Association"?—Yes.

3871. You said the inauguration money, I think, was paid by Mr. Radford?—Yes.

3872. What was that?—Sixpence.

3873. As you consented to become a member, I presume your principles were Conservative and constitutional?—They was partly at that time.

3874. Do you remember about three weeks before the election calling on Mr. Radford?—Yes.

3875. One Saturday night about nine o'clock?—Yes.

3876. Did you say to him, "Oh! Mr. Radford, I thought I would just call to see you as you have not been to see me; I want to let you know I shall vote for Sir Richard"?—Those were not the words; I was invited by a person and waylated (waylaid) the Monday before on purpose, and taken to Mr. Radford's by a man of the name of Daniel Boham.

3877. We will come to that; in the meantime, tell me what you said to Mr. Radford?—I said, "Do you want to see me," and he said, "Yes, I want to know whether you will vote for Sir Richard Glass or not."

3878. Is it true that you said you were going to vote for Sir Richard?—I said, "Yes."

3879. Did he say he was pleased to hear it?—Yes.

3880. Did you say that you were a Wesleyan, and you would oppose the disestablishment of the Irish Church; did you say so; it is very easy to answer yes or no?—I will tell you what I said.

3881. Did you say that first, and tell me anything you like after?—No; I did not say that.

3882. Did you say you were a Wesleyan?—I did not.

3883. Did you say you would oppose the disestablishment of the Irish Church?—Yes; I said I did not approve of the principles of the present Established Church.

3884. That you did not approve of the principles of the present Established Church; did you give that as a reason for voting for Sir Richard; now then, Mr. Fort, just go on a little faster; what did you say?—I spoke of Martin Luther; I went back to Martin Luther, and Ridley, Latimer, and Cranmer; I spoke of them, and I said if the disestablishment of the Irish Church was done away with, I think it would be a very bad thing for England.

3885. There is a certain confusion of ideas there; do you mean that you said that if the Irish Church was done away with, it would be a bad thing for England?—Yes.

3886. Did you say that your sons had been brought forward in the world by members of the Church of England, and you felt very much indebted to them for it?—I did.

3887. And did you give those as reasons for voting for Sir Richard Glass?—I did.

3888. Now tell me (unless you want to explain anything which took place then) what exactly passed between you and Sir Richard Glass, when you met in Mr. Crowther's office?—Sir Richard solicited my vote.

3889. He did not say "I solicit," I suppose; what were his words?—He asked me—

3890. What did he say?—I cannot say what he did say; he spoke of his politicians.

3891. What did he say about his politicians?—The Government of Lord Derby.

3892. And

3892. And I suppose he praised the Government of Lord Derby?—Yes.

3893. What said you?—I told him in reply; I says, "Well, I have been expending of a deal of money, and my wife wishes me not to have anything at all to do with it."

3894. He praised Lord Derby and his administration, and you said you had been expending a great deal of money, and your wife did not wish you to have anything at all to do with it; is that what happened; do not let me misrepresent you?—He says, "Well, I cannot do anything myself"; but Mr. Rogers and Mr. Radford were there; Sir Richard said, "I cannot do anything myself"; Mr. Radford and Mr. Rogers says, "We will make that all right." They are both here sitting at the table.

3895. I want to know, when you were with Sir Richard Glass, and he was talking about Lord Derby, and so on, whether you mentioned to Sir Richard Glass what you had been talking about to Mr. Radford before, about the Irish Church, and Luther, and Cranmer, and Ridley?—It was not brought forward before Sir Richard.

3896. You did not speak about it at all, do you mean?—I said, "Me and my family have received a great boon from it."

3897. From what?—The Established Church.

3898. That is what you said to Sir Richard?—Yes.

3899. You told Sir Richard that you and your family had received a great boon from the Established Church?—Yes.

3900. How came you to say that?—Why, Sir Richard stating of his questions to me.

3901. That is the only explanation you give of that, is it?—Yes.

3902. Now, then, tell me, you say you told Sir Richard that you had been spending a great deal of money; was that true?—Yes.

3903. It was true, was it?—Yes; expending and loss of time.

3904. One thing at a time; you said you told Sir Richard that you had been spending a great deal of money; was that true?—Yes.

3905. What money had you spent?—The money that I had put by for to go down and see my relatives.

3906. First of all, what was the amount of it?—Well, getting on for 2*l*.

3907. How had you spent the money?—Why, going about in different places.

3908. But what had Sir Richard Glass got to do with your spending money going about to different places; do you mean you had been spending money in any unlawful manner?—Oh, no; nothing at all to do with that.

3909. Then, tell me what you meant; I do not understand, when Sir Richard Glass talked about Lord Derby's Government, what that had got to do with your spending about 2*l*.?—Well, the loss of time.

3910. One thing at a time; I want to know about the 2*l*.?—Of course when you lose your time, and you are about at different public-houses, you are spending your money.

3911. Do you mean, then, that you had spent his 2*l*. at different public houses?—Well, nearly.

3912. How came you to spend the 2*l*. at different public houses?—Why, for refreshment.

3913. For refreshment for yourself?—Yes.

3914. Entirely for refreshment for yourself?—Entirely for refreshment for myself.

9.

3915. Not for other people?—Not for other people; I never treated any one at all.

3916. That does not seem an explanation, because if you refreshed yourself to the extent of 2*l*., one does not see what Sir Richard Glass had got to do with that; can you explain how you came to mention the spending of this money?—Yes; because it was only about a week previous to the election that I was called and brought forward before Sir Richard, and the electioneering had been going on for such a long period of time.

3917. Do you mean, then, that you had spent this 2*l*. in electioneering?—Yes.

3918. You mean that you had spent it in electioneering?—I had; there was the time and money that I had spent during the beginning of the election up to the time that I was solicited by Sir Richard; I had spent that money.

3919. In refreshment for yourself?—Yes.

3920. That is the only explanation you can give me about the 2*l*.?—Yes.

3921. Now, can you tell me this; you said something about the loss of time; what time had you lost?—Well, I cannot tell you exactly, for—

3922. What had you been doing to cause this loss of time; had you been electioneering?—I had been agitated by one and the other; drawn out by one and the other.

3923. How did the agitation cause you to lose your time?—Why, the same as all electioneering does.

3924. How does it cause you to lose your time?—Through agitation.

3925. Were you agitating?—Of course.

3926. Of course you were agitating?—Yes; we were all interested.

3927. I want to know what you mean by agitation; how did you agitate?—We are interested in a cause that we are for or against.

3928. What did you do?—What did I do! I spoke.

3929. Did you make speeches?—I did.

3930. I do not object to it; which way did you make speeches?—I spoke, as I informed you before, respecting Martin Luther.

3931. You spoke about Martin Luther, and you agitated on the Conservative side, and you were a member of the Conservative Association, and you got half a sovereign to vote for Glass, and you voted for Lloyd?—Yes.

3932. When did you change your mind; how came you to change your mind?—I will tell you for why; I had an interview with my son, that is a member of the Established Church, and he says to me, "Father, if you will explain your mind, I will give you my ideas respecting of it."

3933. When was that?—That was when I went down to Liverpool to see him.

3934. When was that?—Some time in October.

3935. Was it before or after you got the 10*s*.?—Before; but I was not regular decided.

3936. May I ask you this; ultimately, when you did vote for Mr. Lloyd, you did it I suppose, entirely on conscientious and religious grounds?—I did it for this—

3937. Just answer that question first?—I thought—

3938. Answer that question first; did you vote for Mr. Lloyd on religious and conscientious grounds?—I did.

3939. Upon what grounds did you take the 10*s*.?—Upon what grounds! I did not take it at all; it was pushed into my hand however.

13

3940. And

S. Fort.

21 January
1869.

- S. Fort.* 3940. And then you gave it to your wife?—
 Yes.
 21 January 1863. 3941. Just tell me what time of the day, about, was it that this interview took place when the half-sovereign you say was pushed into your hands?—About 11 o'clock.
 3942. In the forenoon?—In the forenoon.
 3943. How long do you suppose you were at the house where it took place altogether?—About an hour.
 3944. I am not quite certain whether you told me what day it was that this happened to you?—The day previous to the election.
 3945. The nomination day?—Yes.

Re-examined by Mr. Chandos Leigh.

3946. You said something about a demonstration in Roger's field?—Yes.
 3947. Were you present at the demonstration?—No; I was not.
 3948. Had you a ticket sent you for it?—

Mr. Giffard objected to the question as not arising out of the cross-examination; the demonstration having only been mentioned incidentally.

Mr. Justice Blackburn was of opinion that the question was inadmissible.

3949. Mr. Chandos Leigh (to the Witness). You say your son converted you, and that you voted according to conscientious motives?—

3950. Mr. Giffard.] You did not say that quite?—No.

3951. Mr. Chandos Leigh.] Had that son who had had a good education been in Ireland?—Yes.

3952. You say you spent the 2*l.* in electioneering?—Yes; or near on it.

3953. How long were you electioneering?—Two months, I suppose.

3954. And how did the 2*l.* go?—By bits and drabs; the same as money does go.

3955. At public-houses?—Yes.

3956. For eating?—No; drinking.

[The Witness withdrew.]

JANE FORT, sworn; Examined by Mr. Sturge.

- J. Fort.* 3957. ARE you the wife of Stephen Fort?—
 Yes.
 3958. Do you remember going with your husband towards the railway station at Stourport on the day before the election, the day before the polling-day?—Yes.
 3959. What day was that?—On the Tuesday, the polling was; it was on the Monday as I was with him.
 3960. How long before the election?—One day.
 3961. The day before?—Yes.
 3962. As you were going along, was your husband called in anywhere?—Yes; we were called in as we were by James's public-house.
 3963. When were you called?—At James's "Railway Tavern."
 3964. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] You were going along with your husband, and then something happened?—We was called by a person at James's "Railway Tavern."
 3965. Mr. Sturge.] Do you know what money your husband had when you went in there?—He had a few shillings, I believe, in his pocket, as far as I could speak.
 3966. Had he any gold?—No, I am quite sure of that.
 3967. Did you go into the "Railway Tavern"?—Yes, I did.
 3968. While you were there, did your husband go out of the room?—Yes, the back way.
 3969. Did he go out alone, or was any one with him?—A person of the name of Taylor was with him; I saw them pass through.
 3970. Did you see your husband afterwards?—Yes; he came back into the room.
 3971. Did you then go away together?—He finished his glass as he had, and he had, after, another glass or two of brandy and water or rum and water, or whatever it was.
 3972. And after that, did you go home?—Yes, we went on our way for home.
 3973. After you got outside, what happened then?—After we got outside, he showed me half a sovereign.
 3974. Did you go to this demonstration we have heard of?—Yes.

3975. Where was it?—Over at Mr. Rogers's over the bridge.

3976. What Mr. Rogers is that?—I do not know what they call him.

3977. Is that the gentleman (pointing to a gentleman on the opposite side of the table)?—Yes, that is the gentleman.

3978. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] When was this?—I could not recollect.

3979. Mr. Sturge.] In what month was it?—I could not recollect the month at all.

3980. Was it in the summer time?—In the summer.

3981. How many people were there?—I could not say.

3982. About?—A great many.

3983. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] What is the period you are now speaking about; is it a time in May, June, July, or August?—

3984. Mr. Sturge.] Do you remember at all what month it was?—No, I do not.

3985. Do you know when Sir Richard Glass first came down here?—No; I have no recollection of that, not when he did come down here.

3986. Before you had been to this demonstration, had you seen Sir Richard Glass?—Yes; I saw him once before that.

3987. Where?—I saw him when he came to my house; he called at my house at one time.

3988. How many people do you say there were at this demonstration?—I could not say the number.

Mr. Giffard stated that the demonstration was on the 5th of September.

3989. Mr. Sturge.] Can you say how many people were there?—No.

3990. One hundred, do you think?—Yes, more than that.

3991. Two hundred?—Yes, I should think more than that.

3992. Were there 500 people, do you think?—There might be that number there.

3993. Were there tents there?—Yes.

3994. And music?—Yes.

3995. Was there anything to eat?—We partook of bread and butter, cakes, and tea.

3996. Was

3996. Was there any beer there?—Yes, and porter.

3997. Were speeches made?—Yes.

3998. Who made speeches?—I could not say who the gentlemen was; I was rather hard of hearing that; I did not go to pay any attention to that.

3999. Do you know Sir Richard Glass by sight?—Yes.

4000. Was he there?—I did not go near where he was; I was outside.

4001. Did you see him there?—I could not say that I did.

4002. How long did you stop there?—We stopped for our tea.

4003. And you say you know John Taylor?—Yes.

4004. Was he there?—I did not see him.

Cross-examined by Mr. Giffard.

4005. One word about this demonstration; was there a party from Kidderminster that came over?—Yes.

4006. On the nomination day, the day before the polling, on the Monday, what time was it you were with your husband at the “Railway Inn”?—Between 12 and one.

4007. What time do you usually have your dinner?—One o’clock.

4008. Where were you going when you went into the “Railway Inn”?—We were going for a walk.

4009. How came you to go inside?—There was three young men as stood outside, and they asked him to go in to have something to drink.

4010. Asked who to go in and have something to drink?—My husband; and I told him where he went I should go too.

4011. Did you go in and have something to drink?—I went inside, but I did not take anything to drink.

4012. Did you sit with your husband?—Yes; I was in the room with him.

4013. What did they talk about?—They was talking over the election.

4014. Do you remember your husband saying anything about this: that he was going to vote for Sir Richard Glass?—That was what they was passing.

4015. You do not answer my question; do you remember your husband saying anything about his going to vote for Sir Richard Glass?—From the way in which they put it to him, I never heard them pass what he was going to do.

4016. You were in the room with him?—Yes, I was on one side of the room.

4017. Attend; did you hear your husband say anything about his going to vote for Sir Richard Glass?—Not at that time.

4018. You did not hear him say one way or the other, whether he would or not?—I did not hear him say one way or the other; not at that time.

4019. Did he say anything about it?—No, not as I heard.

4020. I am speaking of what you heard when you were sitting at the same table; did you hear anyone ask him to vote for Sir Richard Glass?—No, I did not hear anyone ask him.

4021. How do you know what money your husband had in his pocket?—I am quite sure that he had no gold with him before he left home.

9.

4022. That is not my question; you said you thought he had 2s.; how do you know that?—Well, it is a thing I very often does, to see in the morning whether he has any money by him.

4023. You have not yet answered my question; you say it is a thing you very often do?—Yes, I very often do so.

4024. How did you know on that day what he had in his pocket?—I know he had some silver.

4025. How did you know?—By what I saw.

4026. How did you see it?—I saw in the morning before he left home that he had some silver.

4027. How did you see it?—I had seen it in his small clothes.

4028. Did you see him put it in, or did you look at it yourself after it was in?—I looked at it before it was in.

4029. Where was it before it was in his pocket?—In the room where I was; I had it myself.

4030. Where had you it?—In the room.

4031. Where?—In the bed-room.

4032. That is very likely; I ask where?—In my own bed-room.

4033. Whereabouts in the bed-room?—Well, by my bedside.

4034. Whereabouts by your bedside; do you mean on the bed, or on the floor, or what; come tell us where you saw it; there is no mystery about it?—I have told you by the side of his bed.

4035. On the floor?—No, not on the floor.

4036. Where?—In the small clothes.

4037. You told me you saw it before it got into the small clothes, and you saw it beside the bed; what I want to know is where you saw it; where did you see it?—I saw it when I took it out, and I saw it when I put it back again; I saw it as I put it back again after I had taken it out to see that he had it.

4038. What you mean is, that you put your hand in the small clothes; you took it out, and then put it back again, and then supposed he had no money but what he had in the small clothes?—I do not think he had.

4039. As you put it back, you can tell what it was?—I think, as near as I can speak, it was 2s.

4040. Do you remember what coin it was in?—In silver; no copper at all.

4041. What coin was it; was it in one 2s. piece?—No, in two separate shillings.

4042. That is the reason you supposed your husband had no more?—Yes, that is why I suppose he had no more.

4043. After your husband had shown you the half-sovereign, what did he do with it?—He gave it me, and told me that that was what he had had given to him by Taylor.

4044. What did you do with it?—I took it home.

4045. What did you do with it then?—I took it to the shop which I generally use.

4046. What shop was that?—Stanley’s in High-street.

4047. What is Stanley?—A grocer; Mrs. Stanley it is.

4048. When did you take it to Mrs. Stanley?—The next day.

4049. That would be the polling day?—Yes.

4050. What did you do with it when you got to Mrs. Stanley’s?—Pay for the grocery I had received.

4051. And you spent it?—Yes.

J. Fort.
1869.

4052. Then when you took it and kept it, it was not to keep and show to anybody, it was to spend?—No, he gave it to me; and I thought it was proper to make use of it.

4053. Did he tell you it was for his vote?—He told me he had it given him by that young man Taylor.

4054. For his vote?—For his vote.

4055. Were you very much shocked?—Me!

4056. Yes?—Sometimes I am short, I do not say I am not short sometimes, as well as other people.

4057. Did you think it was very wrong to take it?—No, I did not think it any harm; not at all.

4058. You did not remonstrate with your husband of course, for taking money for his vote; if you did not think it was any harm you did not say anything against his taking 10 s. for his vote?—I thought no harm of it myself.

4059. Did you know he had promised to vote for Sir Richard Glass?—He said he had promised him; he said at our house he should do so, but Mr. Lloyd, he said, he should give his vote to from the first.

4060. From the first he said he should give his vote to Mr. Lloyd?—From the first he said he should give his vote to Mr. Lloyd, and that was my wish that he should give his vote to Mr. Lloyd; that was my wish from the first.

4061. Your wish is very important at home, no doubt, but what I asked was, what your husband said; what I understand is, that your husband said from the first, that he would vote for Mr. Lloyd?—Yes.

4062. What do you mean by from the first; as early as the demonstration you spoke of?—When we went to the tea party, I certainly went there, but I did not think any harm of it.

4063. Will you attend; I ask about the time; was it as early as the time you went to the demonstration, that your husband had said that he would vote for Mr. Lloyd?—From the very first, I told him I hoped if he could, he would vote for the one he wanted to.

4064. And that was from the very first, Mr. Lloyd?—Yes.

4065. Had he spoken to you about voting for Mr. Lloyd as early as the time you went to this demonstration, which we agree is the 5th of September?—(The Witness remained silent for some time.)

4066. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] What do you say; had he said it as early as that or not?—I could not say whether it was as early as that or not.

4067. Mr. Giffard.] I thought you said "from the very first"?—From the first he said he should vote for Mr. Lloyd; I told him I should wish him to do so.

4068. Do you happen to know whether your husband was at the "Swan" on the nomination day?—Yes; he was in front of the "Swan."

4069. What was he doing at the front of the "Swan"?—The words he said at the front of the "Swan," I could not say; but I was with him at the front of the "Swan."

4070. I want to know what you and your husband were doing in front of the "Swan" on the nomination day?—On the day when Mr. Lloyd was up and spoke, he got into the front there with him and spoke, but I was not near enough to hear what he said.

4071. Who; your husband?—Yes; because he left me at the time Mr. Lloyd was up and speaking.

4072. That was a meeting of Mr. Lloyd's?—Yes.

4073. And your husband went there?—Yes, he went there.

4074. About what time was it?—Some time late in the evening, after the polling day.

4075. Were you inside the "Swan"?—No; I was outside, on the further side.

4076. But were you inside at all?—No, not then; I have been inside.

4077. I mean then, you know. How long did the meeting last?—I could not say how long.

4078. How long were you there?—I should say half-an-hour.

4079. Was your husband there longer than you?—Yes; longer than me; I came home before him.

4080. What time did he come home that night?—I could not say the time.

4081. About what time; cannot you tell me about what time your husband came home that night?—No.

4082. Did he come home that night?—Yes.

4083. Then you can tell me about the time?—No; for I never noticed the time.

4084. About?—It was some time before 10 or 11, I think, when he came in.

4085. What time did you leave the "Swan"?—I was home before it was dark.

4086. What time did you leave the "Swan" is my question?—I was home before it was dark, I tell you.

4087. What time did you leave the "Swan," will you answer my question?—I could not say exactly the time.

4088. I do not ask you exactly; I will not ask you to an hour; what time did you leave the "Swan"?—I left home before it was dark, you know.

4089. Twelve o'clock in the day would be before it was dark?—Before eight o'clock, I believe, as near as I can speak.

4090. About what time did you get there?—It was some time after I took my tea; but I could not say exactly the time.

4091. What time do you take your tea?—Four o'clock.

4092. That is the nearest that you can give me, between four and eight?—Yes.

4093. Did you go with your husband to the "Swan"?—No, he was there before I got there.

4094. How came you to know he was at the "Swan"?—A person told me that he was there.

4095. What person?—A neighbour of mine.

4096. What was his name?—Henry Mabel.

4097. He told you that your husband was at the "Swan"?—His wife told me.

4098. And how came you to go to him?—I was like many more; I went to hear what I could; I went up the road to hear what he said, and to hear Mr. Lloyd speak.

4099. I thought you told me you did not go and hear Mr. Lloyd speak?—I heard a part of what was said.

4100. I understood you to say you did not go to hear Mr. Lloyd speak, that you stood out and did not go to hear Mr. Lloyd speak at all?—Not inside the house; Mr. Lloyd stood on the front of the house to speak.

4101. Is it the fact that you did not go to hear hear Mr. Lloyd speak?—Yes, I heard him speak outside.

4102. Is there a balcony at the “Swan”?—Yes.

4103. And Mr. Lloyd suppose?—Yes.

4104. Was your husband listening to Mr. Lloyd speaking, when you saw him?—The last I saw of him he was.

4105. Pray, did you speak to your husband from the time you got there to the time you left?—Yes, I spoke to him, and wished him to stop with me, but he would not stay with me.

4106. You did speak to him?—Yes.

4107. Have you been in court while your husband was giving his evidence?—Not to-day.

4108. Are you sure of that?—I am quite sure; you can ask the police at the bottom of the stairs; the police will tell you at the bottom of the stairs that I was not in the room.

Re-examined by Mr. Chandos Leigh.

4109. You were asked about searching your husband's smallclothes; where were the smallclothes when you searched them?—On his bed.

4110. Did you search them more at election time than at other times?—Not at one particular time; I am in the habit of doing so when I can get the chance.

4111. You were also asked about a party going from Kidderminster to this demonstration; do you know if a party went from Bewdley; a procession?—I cannot say that I saw any one go from Bewdley, but I saw some from Kidderminster.

4112. Mr. Giffard (by permission).] Did you go to Lick-hill, to Sir Richard Glass, to ask for money?—No.

4113. Never?—I never asked for money.

4114. Did you go to Lick-hill?—No.

4115. Never?—No.

4116. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] Did you go to Lick-hill at all, whether to ask for money or not?—Where might you call Lick-hill, if you please? I do not know.

4117. Mr. Giffard.] Do you mean to swear you do not know where Lick-hill is?—Yes, I have been in the port now very near 10 years, and I do not know.

4118. You have heard of such a place?—Yes.

4119. But you do not know where it is?—No.

4120. Have you no notion?—No.

4121. Have you ever been to the place where Sir Richard Glass lives, whatever its name is?—No, not that I know of.

4122. Do you mean to swear that you cannot tell whether you have been to Sir Richard Glass's place, where he was living during this election time or not; just answer the question?—I do not know.

4123. You do not know?—No; I do not know.

4124. Do you know where Mr. Craven used to live?—Yes, I know where the farm was.

4125. Did you go during the time that Sir Richard Glass was in the neighbourhood, to Mr. Craven's house?—No.

4126. Did you go past Mr. Craven's house; I am told it is not the same house; did you go past Mr. Craven's house, to where Sir Richard Glass was living?—No.

4127. There can be no doubt about this. Did you apply to Sir Richard Glass for money, and state that you were very poorly off, and that you had a daughter who was starving?—No, I did not.

4128. Nothing of that sort happened?—Nothing of that sort happened to me.

4129. Did you speak to Sir Richard Glass at all about anything?—No, about no money at all.

4130. About anything?—No.

4131. You never spoke to Sir Richard Glass at all?—No, not upon that point, I never did.

4132. Did you speak to him at all?—He spoke to me at my door, to ask if my husband should vote for him, that is all.

4133. Is that the only time you spoke to him?—That is all.

Re-examined by Mr. Chandos Leigh.

4134. When was that that you spoke to Sir Richard Glass?—When he called for the vote.

4135. When was that?—Some time in the morning before the dinner-time. I told him he would see my husband at one o'clock at his dinner.

4136. That was the only time you spoke to him?—That was the only time.

Mr. Fitzjames Stephen stated that further inquiry had been made with reference to the case of alleged bribery of Smetham; and that the Petitioner was satisfied that what was given to Smetham was given as charity, and not in respect of his vote, and wished to withdraw that case.

JOHN MILWARD, sworn; Examined by Mr. Sturge.

J. Milward.

4137. Do you live at Stourport?—Yes.
4138. What are you?—A rug weaver.
4139. Are you a voter?—Yes.
4140. How did you vote?—For Mr. Lloyd.
4141. Before the election, did anybody come to you and ask you for your vote?—The first man that came to me was Mr. Rogers and three or four more gentlemen.
4142. Who were the other gentlemen?—Well, Mr. Glass was one, but I do know none of the others' names.
4143. Did Mr. Rogers say anything to you?—He asked me if I had promised my vote.
4144. Had any of them a book?—Mr. Glass had a book with some writing on; I think it was the voters' names. He referred to it by my side.
4145. Did you see anybody make any mark in the book?—No.

Mr. Giffard stated that he would admit that the Respondent did go round in the way that had been described, accompanied by Mr. Radford and Mr. Rogers, but that he did not wish to prevent the other side from proving, if they could, that there was canvassing by Mr. Radford or Mr. Rogers in the presence of the Respondent.

4146. Mr. Sturge (to the Witness).] Do you know Mr. Danks?—Yes.
4147. Have you ever seen him with Sir Richard Glass?—I have seen him.
4148. Did they come to your house, Sir Richard Glass and Mr. Danks?—No, Mr. Danks did not.
4149. What have you seen them doing?—I have never seen Mr. Danks canvassing, but I have seen Mr. Danks once or twice with the party; Sir Richard Glass, Mr. Rogers, and several others, and a clerk.
4150. What were the party doing?—Going from house to house, the same as they came to mine.
4151. Canvassing?—I never stopped to see whether they asked for any particular votes or not.

Mr. THOMAS, RICKABY sworn; Examined by Mr. Chandos Leigh.

Mr.
T. Rickaby.

4165. WHAT are you?—I am a veterinary surgeon.
4166. Where do you live?—In Bewdley.
4167. Have you seen Sir Richard Glass about Bewdley?—Yes; several times.
4168. Do you remember when you first saw him?—Yes.
4169. When?—The day after he came to Bewdley; the night after he came to Bewdley.
4170. The 7th of July?—Yes.
4171. Where was he?—I saw him opposite Mr. Pardoe's house.

Cross-examined by Mr. Giffard.

4152. How many times have you seen Mr. Danks?—Two or three times I might have seen him.
4153. With the party, as you call it?—Yes, the Tory party; we said the Tory party were out.
4154. You have seen Mr. Danks two or three times?—Yes, I have seen Mr. Danks two or three times, it might have been; I did not take that particular notice.
4155. Do you mean that on each occasion when you did see Mr. Danks, whether it was two or three times, Sir Richard Glass was with him?—Yes, and Mr. Rogers here (pointing to a gentleman beside him), and this young man (pointing to another gentleman at the table), and so on.
4156. You were canvassed for your vote, you say?—Yes.
4157. What answer did you make?—I said I did not know Mr. Glass when I was asked first, and then he said, "Here is the man, then."
4158. Did you say that if you were to promise your vote you would have no peace at your work?—Yes, I did say so, or something like that. I said I worked with Liberals, all Liberals.

Re-examined by Mr. Chandos Leigh.

4159. You say somebody said, "Here is the man"; who was it said, "Here is the man"?—This gentleman.
4160. Mr. Joseph Rogers?—Yes.
4161. You have pointed to a gentleman next to Mr. Rogers?—He was with them when they came to my house.
4162. What is his name?—George Andrews, or Anderson, I do not know which.
4163. George Anderson?—Yes; I believe it is.
4164. Mr. Crowther, Lawyer Crowther's clerk?—Yes; I believe it is.

[The Witness withdrew.]

4176. Whilst

Mr.
T. Rickaby.
1869.

4176. Whilst that party were there, did any one of them speak to you?—Yes; I was passing by with my father, and Mr. Nicholas came and spoke to me.

4177. What did he say to you?—He asked me if I had a vote, and I told him that I had not then, but I expected to have one, and that I had promised it to Mr. Hemming; and he said, “Well, if anything happens to Mr. Hemming, perhaps you will give it to Sir Richard Glass;” I did not promise that.

4178. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] I thought you said that when Mr. Nicholas asked if you had a vote, you said you had not got a vote, but you expected to have one, and had promised to give it to Mr. Hemming?—Yes.

4179. You were then proceeding to say something more; will you repeat that again?—Mr. Nicholas said, if anything should happen to Mr. Hemming, would I think of Sir Richard.

4180. Mr. Chandos Leigh.] How did you vote?—I voted for Mr. Lloyd.

4181. Were you at the “Anchor Inn” some time during Sir Richard Glass’s canvass?—Yes.

4182. When was that?—I have been there several times; on one occasion when I went in, Sir Richard Glass was there.

4183. When about, was that?—That was shortly before the election, after Mr. Hemming had given way.

4184. After Mr. Hemming had retired?—Yes.

4185. Do you say Sir Richard Glass was there?—Yes.

4186. Did you see any other people there?—Yes.

4187. Where was Sir Richard Glass?—He was in the bar of the “Anchor.”

4188. What was he doing?—He had sat down, and when I went in, he was talking to William Hunt, Richard Knowles, and Francis Buntney.

4189. Do you know what he was talking about?—He was talking something about the Irish Church, or something of the kind to them.

4190. Did you hear him ask anybody for their votes or not?—No; I did not.

4191. Who was with him then?—There was Mr. Gardener; they were in the kitchen.

4192. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] Who were in the kitchen?—Mr. Gardener.

4193. Mr. Chandos Leigh.] The people you are going to name were in the kitchen, not Sir Richard Glass?—Yes.

4194. Who else?—Mr. Gardener, Mr. Herbert Pardoe, Mr. Landon, and Mr. Acton Pardoe.

4195. What were they doing in the kitchen?—Mr. Gardener was talking to Mr. Pountney in the kitchen; Mr. Pountney, senior, was sitting in the kitchen.

4196. Did you hear what Mr. Gardener said to Mr. Pountney?—I did not hear; Sir Richard Glass was talking; I did not hear much what he said.

4197. What Mr. Gardener said to Mr. Pountney?—Yes; I overheard him make this remark, “You would not vote for a quaker, would you?”

4198. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] What was it he said?—He was talking to this Mr. Pountney, and he said “You would not vote for a quaker, would you?” that is all I heard; I overheard that.

4199. Mr. Chandos Leigh.] You were not in the kitchen, but in the bar, with Sir Richard Glass at that time?—Yes.

4200. How long did Sir Richard Glass stay in the bar?—Ten minutes, I should think.

4201. After that, where did he go?—He went into the kitchen.

4202. When he went into the kitchen, what did you see him do?—He commenced talking to Mr. Pountney, but I did not hear what he said to him.

4203. Did he talk to anybody else?—He said something to Mr. Pountney; then he remarked to Mr. Herbert Pardoe, who had a book in his hand, and he asked him how he had got Mr. Pountney down in the canvass book, what he had got against him, and Mr. Herbert Pardoe said, “Neutral.”

4204. Did Sir Richard Glass and those other gentlemen leave after that?—Yes; they left after that.

4205. Did they leave together?—Yes, altogether.

4206. Have you on other occasions come across Sir Richard Glass during this canvass?—Yes, several times in the street.

4207. Was he alone or with other people?—He was generally accompanied by several.

4208. Can you give us any of the names?—Yes; Mr. Gardener, Mr. Bury, Mr. Baugh, Mr. Parsons, Mr. Osman Pountney, Mr. Webster, Mr. Chellingworth, Mr. Charles Chellingworth, Mr. Landon, and Mr. Shaw generally were with him, and Mr. Boucher.

4209. Do you know a man called Jackson?—Yes, I know him very well.

4210. Did you see him with him?—No, I never saw him with him.

4211. Do you know a Mr. Thomas Baugh?—Yes, I know him very well.

4212. Did you ever see him with Sir Richard Glass?—Yes.

4213. What have you seen him doing with Sir Richard Glass?—I have seen him walking with him, while he has been on his canvass; that is all.

4214. How many times have you seen that?—I could not say.

4215. More than once?—I should think, at the least, eight or ten times.

4216. Have you watched those people that you name upon their canvass?—No, I never watched them much.

4217. Have you seen whether the whole party went into a house, or some stayed outside?—I noticed that when they have been going from house to house, perhaps two or three of them would go in with Sir Richard Glass, and the others would remain outside.

4218. Have you seen the people who remained outside do anything?—Yes; I have seen them, when anybody was coming down, stop them and begin talking to them, and several times I have seen them keep a man, as it were, I suppose, to introduce him to Sir Richard Glass.

[The Witness withdrew.]

JOHN HUMPHERSON, sworn; Examined by Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.

- J. Humpherson. 4219. Do you act as Reporter for the "Birmingham Daily Post"?—I am local reporter.

4237. Did you report the meeting?—I did.
 4238. And I suppose a correct report of the meeting, and what took place there, was printed in the paper with which you are connected?—Yes.
 4239. Have you got that report here?—No.
 4240. Just see; is that a correct copy of it (handing a paper to the Witness)?—No.
 4241. It is not?—No, it is a report of the same meeting from the "Gazette."

Mr. Justice Blackburn.] I dare say they do not substantially differ.

4242. Mr. Giffard.] Is that so, that they did not substantially differ?—They do not substantially differ.

[The Witness withdrew.]

JOSEPH ROWLEY, sworn; Examined by Mr. Chandos Leigh.

- J. Rowley. 4243. ARE you a voter?—Yes.
 4244. At Stourport?—Yes.
 4245. Whom did you vote for?—Mr. Lloyd.
 4246. What are you?—A boat builder.
 4247. Whom do you work for?—Messrs. Danks and Saunders.
 4248. Did you ever see Sir Richard Glass?—Yes.
 4249. Where?—At the place where I work.
 4250. At Messrs. Danks' yard?—Yes.
 4251. About when was it?—It may be three weeks previous to the election.
 4252. Did he speak to you?—Yes.
 4253. Was he alone?—No.
 4254. Who was with him?—Mr. Joseph Rogers, Mr. Parsons, and Mr. Anderson.
 4255. Is your father a voter?—Yes.
 4256. Did you see them speak to him?—Yes.
 4257. What is your father's Christian name?—George.
 4258. Did he vote for Mr. Lloyd?—Yes.
 4259. When they spoke to you, what did they say?—They solicited me for my vote, Sir Richard Glass did.
 4260. Did you hear what they said to your father?—Mr. Rogers solicited my father for his vote.
 4261. Is that the only time that you saw Sir Richard

J. Rowley.
22 January
1869.

Richard Glass;—No, I saw him twice besides that.

4262. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] When you saw him at the other times, had you conversation with him?—One time I had.

4263. Mr. Chandos Leigh.] Where was that?—By Mr. James Hill's house.

4264. Who is Mr. James Hill?—Foreman of the yard where I work.

4265. Did you speak to Sir Richard Glass then?—Yes.

4266. Was he alone, or with other people?—With other people.

4267. What did you speak to him about?—About politics, or political affairs.

4268. Was anything said about your vote then?—No, not then.

4269. Who were the people with him?—Mr. Radford, Mr. Rogers, Mr. Anderson, Mr. Crowther, the lawyer, and Mr. Blundell.

4270. Was Mr. Danks with him?—Not at that time.

4271. Did you see them at any other time?—Yes.

4272. When?—Once when I was at work at the blacksmith's shop.

4273. Is that a blacksmith of the name of Staunton?—Yes.

4274. Did you speak to Sir Richard Glass then?—No, I did not.

4275. Was Sir Richard alone when you saw him?—No.

4276. Can you tell us who he was with?—With Mr. Radford, Mr. Parsons, Mr. Anderson, and Mr. Danks.

4277. Did you see where they went to, or what they did?—I was at work outside of the shop, and Sir Richard, and the rest that were with him, went into the blacksmith's shop; I was at work outside. My master stayed outside, and was talking to me respecting the work I was doing.

4278. Your master, Mr. Staunton?—No; Mr. Danks.

4279. Who was in the shop at the time?—A man named Beech, the foreman for Mr. Staunton.

4280. Is he a voter?—Yes, he had a vote, but he did not vote.

4281. Did you see them speak to him?—I did not.

4282. Did Beech make a communication to you afterwards; never mind what it was?—Mr. Beech told me afterwards —

4283. Never mind what he told you.

Cross-examined by Mr. Giffard.

4284. You say you had a conversation with Sir Richard Glass before he came to canvass your father; when was that?—

4285. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] No, I do not think he said before—It was during the time.

4286. Mr. Giffard.] Then you had not seen Sir Richard Glass before that time?—Yes, once before that time.

4287. When was it you say you had any conversation with him about your own vote?—Respecting my own vote, at the yard where I work.

4288. Was that before or after he came to canvass your father?—At the same time that he came to canvass my father, or, rather, at the same time that Mr. Rogers canvassed my father.

4289. It was the same time, was it?—Yes.

4290. Do you mean that nothing had passed between you and Sir Richard Glass before that?—Only conversation respecting political affairs.

4291. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] The conversation respecting political affairs was before he came to the yard to ask for your vote?—Yes.

4292. Mr. Giffard.] How long before?—It may be the week previous to his canvassing me for my vote.

4293. Where was it?—At Mr. Hill's door, the foreman of the yard where I work.

4294. I believe you said very decidedly you would not vote for him, did you not?—No, I did not give him a decided answer.

4295. I think you showed that you did not like him, and did not like his politics very decidedly, did you not?—Yes; he could see from what I said that I did not like his politics.

4296. I think you said something that was not very civil to him, did you not?—Well, I did not blackguard him.

4297. We may differ about what that means; at any rate he could see that you were no friend of his?—Yes, he could.

4298. When he afterwards came to canvass your father, he did not ask for your vote at all, did he?—He did. He did not canvass my father at all in my presence.

4299. Did he not say, "I will trouble you to hold your tongue; I am not come to canvass you, I am come to ask your father for his vote"?—No, he did not.

4300. Did he say nothing of the kind?—No.

4301. Take care; you have told me that you had already exhibited by your manner that you were no friend of his?—Yes.

4302. Do you mean to say that he asked you for your vote at this conversation we are speaking of now?—He solicited me for my vote.

4303. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] What did he say that you call "soliciting you for your vote"?—He asked me if I would promise him my vote.

4304. Mr. Giffard.] Do you mean to swear that he said, "Will you promise me your vote"?—Yes.

4305. Did you say anything to him when you saw him come in?—Not till he asked me if I would promise him my vote.

4306. That was the first thing that happened?—Yes.

4307. Did you speak to your father at all about it; I mean then and there; I do not mean either before or after?—Did I speak to my father? Yes.

4308. What did you say?—I said, "Father do not promise that man your vote."

4309. Was that before or after you say Sir Richard Glass had asked you for yours?—That was after Sir Richard had asked me for mine.

4310. At any time during the interview did Sir Richard say to you, "I will trouble you to hold your tongue; I have come to speak to your father, not to you"?—Not that I heard.

4311. Or any words to that effect?—No.

4312. You are sure of that?—I am sure of that.

4313. You had, I think, called after him in the street, had you not, before then?—I had not.

4314. Take care; will you swear you had not called after him in the street, and asked him about "game and rabbits," and so forth?—I have not called after him. That was when I saw him at the foreman's door.

J. Rowley. 4315. That was before this interview with your father you know?—Yes.
 22 January 1869. 4316. What did you say to him?—He asked me my reason for not going that way; I told him that I would not. I did not like his principles; he asked me why; I told him I was for the dis-establishment of the Irish Church.
 4317. Was that all?—I told him I did not like to support a man of his principles.
 4318. Did you say anything about rabbits and game?—Yes I did.

4319. Did you say anything about rabbits?—I told him, that I thought a man of his principles was so strict in making up laws respecting these things, game laws and fish laws, and those sort of things.

4320. You said it just as you are saying it to me now in an argumentative quiet sort of way?—Yes.

[The Witness withdrew.]

MR. MICHAEL O'BRIEN, sworn; Examined by Mr. Sturge.

Mr. M. O'Brien. 4321. You are assistant to Mr. Gabb?—Yes.
 4322. He is a surgeon in Bewdley?—Yes.
 4323. Are you a surgeon?—No, I am not.
 4324. I believe your business takes you about the town a good deal?—Yes.
 4325. Have you ever seen Sir Richard Glass canvassing previous to the election?—Yes.
 4326. Many times?—Several times.
 4327. Has he generally been alone or accompanied by others?—Accompanied by others.
 4328. Can you tell me who has been with him?—Mr. Landon, Mr. Boucher, Mr. Parsons, young Mr. Pardoe—that is Mr. Herbert Pardoe, Mr. Webster.
 4329. Do you know Mr. Bury?—Yes, Mr. Bury.
 4330. Do you know Mr. Chellingworth?—Yes, Mr. Chellingworth also.
 4331. Mr. Todd?—Yes, and Mr. Todd.
 4332. And Mr. Boucher?—Yes, and Mr. Boucher.
 4333. Have you seen them with him?—Yes.

4334. Mr. Acton Pardoe?—I do not remember Mr. Acton Pardoe.

4335. Mr. Parsons, you said?—Yes.

4335.* Do you know William Jackson?—Yes.

4336. Have you ever seen him?—No, not to my recollection.

4337. Have you seen those people more than once?—Several times.

4338. How many times should you think?—I cannot say.

4339. A dozen times?—Perhaps I have.

4340. In company with Sir Richard?—Yes.

4341. What had they been doing?—Going about canvassing, I suppose.

4342. Going from house to house?—Yes.

4343. Did you see them go into the houses?—Yes; but I cannot swear to that positively.

4344. Have you seen them speaking to people in the streets?—I have.

[The Witness withdrew.]

JOSEPH HUMPHERSON, sworn; Examined by Mr. Chandos Leigh.

J. Humpherson 4345. What are you?—A horn turner.
 4346. Where do you live?—In Dog-lane.
 4347. At Bewdley?—Yes.
 4348. Are you a voter or non-voter?—Non-voter.
 4349. Did Sir Richard Glass ever come to your shop?—Yes.
 4350. When was that?—I believe at the first commencement of his canvassing.
 4351. Whom did he come with?—There were several gentlemen with him.
 4352. Do you remember their names?—Mr. Acton Pardoe, Mr. John Bury, Mr. Henry Chellingworth; I remember those.
 4353. Is your shop next door to Price's tanyard?—Yes; at the same entry.
 4354. Did Sir Richard speak to you first?—I do not know that he spoke to me first; there were others in the shop.
 4355. Did he introduce himself, or were you introduced to him?—Mr. Pardoe introduced me to Mr. Henry Southern, I think, first.
 4356. Is he the landlord of the "Old Mug"?—Yes.
 4357. After the introduction had taken place, did you hear anything said?—They was talking some time.
 4358. Who was talking?—Each one was talking, one after another; and Sir Richard Glass said he hoped Mr. Henry Southern would vote for him; and he promised him his vote.
 4359. Had Mr. Acton Pardoe a book in his hand?—He had a book in his hand.
 4360. Did he make a mark then, or anything?—I did not see him make a mark.

4361. Did the party leave the "Old Mug" then; did the gentlemen leave after that?—Yes.

4362. Did any of them remain?—Mr. Bury was in the shop last.

4363. Was anything said to Mr. Bury?—A person of the name of John Darks made his obeisance to him, and said he hoped he should be able to drink Mr. Glass's good health.

4364. Is Darks a voter?—I would not swear he was.

4365. After the obeisance was made, and the drink asked for, what happened?—Mr. Bury gave him 2 s. 4 d.

4366. What became of the 2 s. 4 d.?—He spent it.

4367. What in?—In beer.

4368. Where was the beer fetched from?—From Mr. Henry Southern's; the "Mug House."

4369. Who drank the beer?—All of us.

4370. Who else were there besides yourself and Darks?—Henry Southern, and Joseph Taylor, and Adam Danby.

4371. Is that Adam Danby, of Sandy Bank?—Yes.

4372. And Joseph Taylor?—Yes.

4373. Is that Joseph Taylor of Lax-lane?—Yes.

4374. Anybody else?—Several others in the shop; the shop men.

4375. Do you know any of their names?—William Carter; he is not a voter.

4376. Anybody else?—Thomas Johnson; he is not a voter.

4377. Was

4377. Was this man's name Darks, or Danks?

same person?—Oh! no; the one is a nephew of the other one.

4391. Have you ever had supper at the reading room?—No; not at the reading room.

4418. You say you never heard her?—I never heard her mention the name of Sir Richard Glass.

4392. Have you ever had supper at Mr. Christopher Pountney's?—I have had dinner there.

4419. Were you ever spoken to by your master about Sir Richard Glass and the election?—I have heard him speak some words.

4393. Do you remember having supper at Mr. Christopher Pountney's house before the election?—Yes; I have had my supper there several times.

4420. Were you ever asked by Mr. Pountney how you were going to vote at the election?—Yes.

4394. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] You had supper at Mr. Christopher Pountney's house?—Yes; I had my supper there several times, and breakfast.

4421. When was that?—I cannot tell what day it was on; I cannot tell exactly which day it was.

4395. Mr. Chandos Leigh.] Do you remember shortly before the election having supper there with some other people; men?—Not supper.

4422. Were you asked more than once?—Yes; I was asked two or three times.

4396. What was it?—Dinner.

4423. What did he say to you?—He asked me who I was going to vote for; I told him, "No one."

4397. I thought you said you had supper there several times?—Yes; I have had many meals there.

4424. Did he say anything else?—He said he thought I ought to vote his way, being as I worked for him; but he did not compel me in any way.

4398. Did you ever have a supper there?—Not then; never.

4425. Anything else?—No.

4399. Do you recollect the week before the election having supper at Mr. Pountney's house?—Not a week before.

4426. Was anything said about paying?—No.

4400. A fortnight before, was it?—No.

4427. Was anything mentioned about money?—No; not about no election affair.

4401. Then you did have a supper there?—I never had a supper there then.

4428. But something was said about money?—Yes.

4402. Do you remember, a week before the election, having something to eat in the evening at Mr. Christopher Pountney's house?—No, not in the evening.

4429. What was said about money?—I asked him to lend me 5 l. on my work.

4403. When was it?—In the morning, at dinner time; it was a rearing that he give his men for the building of a house at the "Squirrel"; it was the rearing of a house up at Hardley that Mr. Pountney gave his men.

4430. When did you ask him to lend you 5 l. on your work?—On the election day.

4404. When was that?—That he gave the rearing. I cannot particularly tell which day it was.

4431. Where was it that you asked him to lend you 5 l. on your work?—At the "Sheaf."

4405. Was it before or after the election?—Before the election.

4432. Is that the "Wheat Sheaf"?—Yes.

4406. How long before the election?—About two or three days; I cannot say exactly.

4433. In what room?—It was one room upstairs, but which room I cannot tell.

4407. You say that he gave a rearing to his men?—Yes.

4434. At what time during the election day was it?—About one or two o'clock, I suppose, as near as I can guess.

9.

4435. When you asked him to lend you 5 l. on your work, what did he say?—He said he would.

4436. What happened after that?—Why, he gave me the 5 l.; at least, he lent it me on my work; he lent me the 5 l. on my work. It had been wet, and I could not make no time at work.

J. Hunt.
—
1869.

It had been so very wet that I could not make above two days a week. I had got no money, and I asked him if he would please to lend me 5 l. upon my work. Of course, I was to work to pay back.

4437. You say he did lend it you on your work?—Yes, he did.

4438. Did he give it you into your hand?—No, he put it on the table.

4439. Are you sure it was put on the table?—Yes.

4440. Did he say anything at the time he put it on the table?—No, he did not say anything to me.

4441. He said nothing?—He did not say anything to me.

4442. Did he speak at all?—Yes.

4443. What did he say?—He said, "Here is the money."

4444. Did he, before he put this money down upon the table, say anything then?—He said he would lend it me when I asked him.

4445. Did he use the words, "awkward business"?—No.

4446. He said nothing of the sort?—No.

4447. What was the money in?—On account of work.

4448. What was it in: gold, or a 5 l. note, or silver, or what?—In five sovereigns.

4449. Did you say anything after he put the money down on the table; what did you do?—I picked it up.

4450. What did you do with it?—I spent it.

4451. What did you spend it upon?—Oh, lots of things, for I had got none; I was obliged, else I should not have asked him.

4452. Did you say anything when you picked up the money, and put it into your pocket?—Yes, I said, "I have got to work it out;" and he says, "Of course you have, in the summer."

4453. Did you say anything about what the money was given you for?—He did not give it me; he lent it me.

4454. Did you say anything about what the money was lent you for?—I did not say anything about what it was lent me for.

4455. Did you say about voting then?—No.

4456. You say you had worked for Mr. Pountney, did you show the money to anybody?—Yes.

4457. Who to?—I gave it to my brother.

4458. You say you have worked for Mr. Pountney?—Yes.

4459. As a bricklayer?—Yes.

4460. What wages had you?—At Mr. Pountney's?

4461. Yes?—3 s. 4 d. a day.

4462. When were they paid?—Every week.

4463. How long had you worked for Mr. Pountney?—I cannot tell exactly, but it is above twelve months.

4464. Had he ever advanced you money before?—Yes, he had lent me money before.

4465. How much?—Not so much as that.

4466. How much?—He has lent me 10 s. before.

4467. He has lent you 10 s.; is that the largest sum?—Yes.

4468. When was that?—I cannot tell.

4469. Think when it was?—I cannot tell when it was.

4470. Was it six months before this?—I cannot tell.

4471. He had lent you 10 s. before?—Yes.

4472. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] Had you at any time before this promised Mr. Lloyd, or anybody for Mr. Lloyd, that you would vote for him?—No.

4473. Did anybody ask you to come and vote for them?—No.

4474. Have you never been canvassed on their side?—Mr. Glass came to my house —

4475. I am not talking about Sir Richard Glass. Had nobody come for Mr. Lloyd to ask for your vote?—No.

4476. Had you never been canvassed by them at all?—No.

4481. About the time of the election, do you remember your brother, James Hunt, coming out of the "Wheatsheaf"?—Yes.

4482. Did you meet him there?—No, I met him at the bottom of Lax-lane.

4483. How far is that from the "Wheatsheaf"?—Just round the street.

4484. One hundred yards off?—It is further than that; a quarter of a mile, I should think.

4485. When you met your brother, did he give you anything?—Yes.

4486. What?—I asked him —

4487. Never mind what you asked him?—He gave me five sovereigns into my hand.

4488. Did he ever give you five sovereigns before?—No.

Cross-examined by Mr. Giffard.

4489. Were you in Bewdley upon the polling day. I suppose you were, by what you have just said?—Yes.

4490. What time was it that you got this money from your brother?—Between 11 and 12 o'clock.

4491. Was not it later than that?—No.

4492. Are you quite sure of that?—I am quite sure of that.

4493. At that time Sir Richard Glass was a long way ahead, was not he, on the poll?—Yes.

Re-examined by Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.

4494. How do you know what the poll was at that time?—I saw the state of the poll not long before.

4495. What was the state of the poll?—I cannot say exactly now.

[The Witness withdrew.

THOMAS HUNT, sworn; Examined by Mr. Sturge.

4496. ARE you the father of James Hunt?—
Ycs.

4497. What are you?—A shoemaker.

4498. Do you live in this town?—Yes.

4499. Does James Hunt, your son, live with you?—No.

4500. Do you remember seeing him about the time of the election?—Yes.

4501. Was that near the “Wheatsheaf”?—
Yes; I saw him go into the “Wheatsheaf.”

4502. Did you see him come out?—I saw him come out.

4503. Do you remember what day that was?—
The polling day.

4504. What time of day was it?—About 11 o'clock in the day.

4505. When he came out, did he give you anything?—No, he did not give it me; he gave it to my son.

4506. What was it?—Five sovereigns he had in his hand.

4507. Did you see him give it to your son?—
No, I did not see him give it to my son, but I saw it in his hand as he passed by; it was five sovereigns.

[The Witness withdrew.]

T. Hunt.

1869.

JAMES GEORGE GRIFFIN, sworn; Examined by Mr. Chandos Leigh.

4508. ARE you Landlord of the “Fox Inn,”
Bewdley?—I am.

4509. Are you a voter?—Yes.

4510. Did you vote at the last election?—I did.

4511. Who for?—For Mr. Thomas Lloyd.

4512. In the month of July last, were you ill?
—I was.

4513. Were you kept to your bedroom?—Yes.

4514. Did anybody come to see you when you were ill in your bedroom?—Not in the bedroom; I had left my bedroom that evening, and gone in a front room.

4515. Did anybody come to you in the front room?—Yes.

4516. Who?—Dr. Webster.

4517. Did anybody come with him?—No.

4518. Is Dr. Webster your doctor?—Yes, he is.

4519. When he came to you, did he say anything?—He gave me Sir Richard's card.

4520. Sir Richard Glass's card?—He asked me if I would support him.

4521. What answer did you make?—I told him that I was a Liberal.

4522. On the day of nomination, did anybody come to you?—That was the polling day; yes.

4523. Who came to you?—Charles Pountney and Christopher.

4524. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] Christopher Pountney?—Yes; two brothers.

4525. Mr. Chandos Leigh.] Where did they come to?—Into the front place.

4526. Was anybody with them besides?—Yes, a lot of their roughs.

4527. What did they do?—They jumped up at my window, and damaged my wire blinds, and waved their colours in the street through my window.

4528. Was that all that happened?—No; there was a tremendous row, but after that I thought they were gone, and went out of my front door, and then afterwards I was called up-stairs.

4529. Whom did you see when you were called up-stairs; anybody?—I saw my wife; Charles Pountney and Christopher.

4530. What happened then?—We went into the front room.

4531. What happened then?—Well, they says, “Now Mr. Griffin, you had better make up your mind and vote for Sir Richard Glass; you know very well it will not do for you to offend the gentlemen, for it is the gentlemen that have granted you your license, and if you do not do it they will take it away again.”

4532. Was that all that passed?—No.

4533. What else passed?—Some other conversation; they said, “You had better make up your mind;” I says, “I do not see how you can reasonably expect me to vote for Sir Richard Glass; I told you I was a Liberal, and for another thing, I have never had any ‘do’ at my house the same as the others have had.” He says, “Never mind that, if yours is the last ‘do’ it shall be the best.”

4534. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] Who said this?—Charles Pountney; he says, “Make up your mind, and I will give you 5*l*., and you shall draw a hogshead of ale to-night.”

4535. Did he say anything about other people having 5*l*?—No.

4536. What answer did you make to that?—I told him, “No, not for five hogsheads at the back of it.”

4537. Did Sir Richard Glass ever come to your house?—Yes.

4538. When was that?—Well, I believe that was on the 8th of July.

4539. Did he ask you for your vote?—Yes, after Mr. Webster left the room; he came up afterwards.

4540. That was when you were up-stairs?—Yes.

4541. Did he say anything to you then?—Yes, he solicited me for my vote; I told him I was a Liberal.

4542. He solicited you then for your vote for the first time?—Yes.

4543. Did he come to you on the nomination day?—Yes, he did.

4544. In November?—Yes; the day before the polling day.

4545. Who did he come with then?—There was this Charles Pountney, Mr. Tart, Mr. Bury, and several other gentlemen.

4546. What happened then?—He says, “Now Mr. Griffin, the time is approaching to decide this.” I said, “Yes, I am aware of it.” “Well,” he says, “I suppose you will favour me with your vote,” and I says, “I do not know about that.” I told him that he could not hardly expect me to give him my vote when I had had nothing at my house the same as the others had.

4547. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] You said that to Sir Richard Glass?—To Sir Richard Glass himself.

J. G. Griffin. himself. "Oh," he says, "I never gave anything at any house."

22 January 1869. 4548. Mr. Chandos Leigh.] Did anything else pass?—Yes; I said, "Well, it does not matter what colour it is done under, we know who has to pay for the lot." Other conversation took place, but Mr. Tart and Charles Pountney was left with me alone.

4549. Did Sir Richard say anything else?—He pressed me for my vote; I could not exactly tell the conversation.

4550. Was anything else said about a treat?—Yes; it was named before Sir Richard at the time I complained that he could not hardly expect me to give him my vote; "Never mind," he says, "if yours is the last, it shall be the best."

4551. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] You mean that that was said when Sir Richard Glass was there?—Yes, in his presence.

Cross-examined by Mr. Giffard.

4552. Then that observation was made upon two occasions?—Yes.

4553. Almost in the same words?—Yes, something of the same sort.

4554. When Sir Richard went to you first, which was, I think you say, early in July, you say you told him you were a Liberal; are you quite sure of that?—I am quite certain of that.

4555. Let me remind you; did you say you were a Conservative, but your wife was a Liberal?—No; I said I always was a Liberal.

4556. Just content yourself with answering my question first, and then explain afterwards if you wish to; did you say that as you and your wife did not agree you should be neutral?—No.

4557. Anything to that purport or effect?—I did not say those words.

4558. Anything to that effect?—Sir Richard Glass went on to explain upon the subject of the disestablishment of the Irish Church, and he said it was an inroad towards doing away with the Church of England and the institutions of the country; and I said, if I could satisfy my mind upon that point I would not vote against him.

4559. And was that truly the state of your mind at that time?—Yes.

4560. Then your mind was not affected either then or afterwards, I suppose, by other people having "dos." or treats at their houses?—There was not any doings at that time, as I knew of.

4561. That did not affect your mind at any time, did it?—No, I told him that of course he could not reasonably expect me to give him my vote when he had not served me the same as he had the others.

4562. How long do you suppose this conversation between you and Sir Richard Glass took; I mean early in July?—I dare say a quarter of an hour we were together.

4563. And you are quite sure that in the result you did not say, you were not neutral, but only that you would be neutral if you could satisfy your mind about the effect of the disestablishment of the Irish Church?—Yes, only if I could satisfy myself of its going to do away with the institutions of this country.

4564. Then he left you?—Yes.

4565. Did you see him again from that time to the time when you say you saw him, and complained of your house not having been used like the others?—No, he called at our house, but I did not see him.

4566. You have said that that observation about the last one being the best, was made in his presence?—Yes.

4567. Whereabouts was Sir Richard at that time that this observation was made?—Up by the fireplace.

4568. Who was the person speaking?—I could not say, but Charles Pountney made that remark to me afterwards when he was left alone with me.

4569. Never mind about afterwards; at that time I mean?—I could not say who made it.

4570. You knew everybody who was present, did you not?—I knew the greatest part of them, not all.

4571. Why could not you say who made the observation?—I could not tell. I should not like to say it was a party if I was not confident it was the party.

4572. You say you heard it, and it was said near enough for Sir Richard Glass to hear it?—Yes.

4573. Yet you do not know who it was made it?—No, I do not.

Re-examined by Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.

4574. Did you vote at the municipal elections?—Yes.

4575. Who did you vote for there?—All the Liberals at the last election.

4576. Who had you voted for in former elections?—Sometimes the Liberals and sometimes the Tories, but generally for the Liberals.

[The Witness withdrew.]

SOPHIA GRIFFIN, sworn; Examined by Mr. Chandos Leigh.

S. Griffin. 4577. ARE you the wife of the last witness, James George Griffin?—Yes.

4578. Do you remember seeing Sir Richard Glass in this canvass?—Yes.

4579. Did he come to your house?—Yes.

4580. When was that?—On the 8th of July.

4581. Whom did he come with?—Mr. Acton Pardoe and Mr. Boucher, I believe, was with him and several gentlemen, and Mr. Webster the doctor.

4582. Were any of the Pountney's with him?—Yes, Osman Pountney was with him.

4583. Where was your husband?—Up stairs.

4584. Did Dr. Webster go up stairs to your husband?—Yes, he did.

4585. Did Dr. Webster say anything at the time when he went up stairs?—When he came in he said, "How is your husband?" and I said, "He is not much the better for you, sir, for you are so full of electioneering you cannot see your patients."

4586. Did Dr. Webster go up stairs?—Yes, he did.

4587. Did anybody go up with him?—No.

4588. Did anybody go up after him?—Yes.

4589. Who was that?—Mr. Glass.

4590. Did the others remain down stairs?—Yes.

4591. When Sir Richard came down did he say anything?—He spoke to Dr. Webster, and he he said he hoped he would do him as much good as he could, and soon get him well.

4592. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] What did he say?—He said he hoped the doctor would do him good and soon get him well.

4593. Mr. Chandos Leigh.] Had he any conversation with you?—No, not as I am aware of.

4594. Did anything happen after that?—Yes.

4595. What was it?—Before that, while Sir Richard Glass was up stairs, Mr. Acton Pardoe directed my attention to something that was at the fireplace, and I went to the fireplace, and he put 5 s. in my hand.

4596. Who put 5 s. in your hand?—Mr. Acton Pardoe.

4597. The father?—The old gentleman.

4598. On another day had you a call at your house from Osman Pountney?—On the 31st of August.

4599. Who came?—Mr. Osman Pountney came with another man.

4600. Do you know a man of the name of Trow?—Yes, he came with him.

4601. He came with Osman Pountney?—Yes.

4602. What happened then?—He came in and he asked for Mr. Griffin. I told him he was gone to Kidderminster. He said "I am sorry, for I wanted him to go with me to the Tory Association;" and after that I said he was gone to Kidderminster; and he said, "Do you know who he is going to vote for?" I said "No, I did not know anything much about his affairs at all;" and he said, "Well, you know he cannot go against the gentlemen, for if he does they will take his old license off him." I said, "Well, I do not see as they can do that if we do not do anything to have it taken off for," and they said "You know how the gentlemen put Miner on; they will put Fisher on just the same." The gentleman that was by heard it.

4603. Who is Fisher?—The policeman.

Cross-examined by Mr. Giffard.

4604. Were you in court or just outside the court when your husband was being examined?—No, they ordered me out of court.

4605. When did you go out of court?—Soon after my husband came in they ordered me out of court.

4606. Are you and your husband of the same politics?—Yes.

4607. Have you always been so?—Yes.

4608. Has he always voted with the Liberals at the municipal elections?—I cannot say which way he voted at the municipal elections, but I believe on the Liberal side.

4609. Always?—I believe so.

4610. Tell me about this 5 s. you speak of having received from Mr. Acton Pardoe. Tell me exactly how that happened; tell it me again?—Mr. Acton Pardoe called my attention to something at the fireplace.

4611. You say he called your attention to something. What did he say or do?—He said "This is a pretty paper at your fireplace, Mrs., Griffin," and I said, "Yes, it is, rather," and then he put the 5 s. in my hand.

4612. Without more?—Yes.

4613. Had you asked him for anything?—No, indeed, I had not.

4614. Had any one asked him for money in your presence?—No, no one ever asked him for money in my presence.

4615. So that the 5 s. was given without saying anything either before or after?—Yes; he called my attention to something at the fireplace, and put it into my hand.

4616. Attend to my question; was nothing said about the 5 s. either before it was given or after it was given?—He said, "Here is 5 s. for you;" that is all he said to me.

4617. Did you say, "What for, sir."—No, I asked no questions.

4618. What was done with the 5 s.?—I do not know what was done with it; I put it in my pocket with the other money.

4619. Do you mean that you spent it?—I do not know whether I spent it or any one else spent it. I put it in my pocket with the other money.

4620. Do you mean that you put it into your pocket with the other money, and that when you had put it there, and that as you spent the other money you may have spent this?—I do not know how I spent it.

4621. You mean to say you did not keep it for yourself, and spend it for yourself?—No, I put it in my pocket.

4622. Did you keep it for yourself or spend it for yourself?—I did not keep it for myself. I put it in my pocket. And when Sir Richard Glass came down stairs, and they were all going away, Mr. Osman Pountney says to Mr. Pardoe, "You must leave something here." He says, "Yes, I have, 5 s." He turned round and said "Has he given you 5 s.?" and I said "Yes."

4623. Sir Richard Glass was present then?—Yes; he was going out of the door.

4624. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] Just say that over again?—As Sir Richard Glass, when he came down stairs, and the others were going out, Osman Pountney says, "We must leave something here," and Mr. Pardoe says, "I have," and he says, "What has he given you Mrs. Griffin?" and I said "5 s."

4625. Who said that?—Osman Pountney, and then Osman Pountney says, "You can let them have a quart or two of beer, and put the other in your pocket."

4626. Mr. Giffard.] Was Sir Richard Glass present then?—Yes; at that time.

4627. So that he heard it?—He must have heard it; he was in the place.

4628. He was near enough to hear it?—Yes.

4629. You understood, I suppose, that that was money to be given in drink?—He said that I was to give a quart or two away, and put the other in my pocket.

4630. Did you do so?—I drew five quarts of ale.

4631. I should have thought you would have been able to tell me just now, when I asked you what became of that 5 s., had you forgotten that?—I told you as soon as I recollected it.

4632. Then you had forgotten it when I first asked you the question, had you?—I had not exactly forgotten it.

4633. Had you partly forgotten it?—No; I had not forgotten it all.

4634. Why did not you tell me then?—Because I did not think I should have to say it until you began to question me.

4635. Why did you not like to say it?—I did not mind; I thought I would not say it until I was asked.

S. Griffin.

1869.

S. Griffin. 4636. Why not?—I had not any reason for it.
 4637. I asked you what became of that 5s. you know?—I put it in my pocket I told you.
 4638. I asked you whether you kept it for yourself?—I did not keep it for myself, I put it in my pocket.
 4639. You have reason for thinking that that particular 5s., or any part of it, was spent in beer?—No.
 4640. What was the price of the beer you drew?—Sixpence a quart.
 4641. Who got the beer?—Gillam's, at the "Vine," son got part of it; they wanted me to draw more; I said "I shall not draw any more; they are not my regular customers;" he said "They left 10s. with father, I am sure they must have left 10s. with you."
 4642. I asked you who got the beer when you put upon me this conversation?—There was several in the house that had it.

4643. Give me their names?—There was one "Jemmy the Lad," that is what they call him; I do not know his name, and Mr. Pountney's son was another, and there was several other people.

4644. They had names, I suppose?—I could not call to mind who it was.

Re-examined by Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.

4645. You say you served the beer to those people you have mentioned?—Yes.

4646. What time was it?—Some time in the afternoon; I could not say at what time exactly.

4647. Did they pay you?—No.

[The Witness withdrew.]

JOHN TILLMAN, sworn; Examined by Mr. Sturge.

J. Tillman. 4648. WHAT are you?—Shoemaker.
 4649. Where do you live?—Bewdley.
 4650. Do you know John Hamer?—Yes.
 4651. Do you work for him sometimes?—Yes.
 4652. Is Hamer a voter?—Yes.
 4653. Do you remember going to Hamer's on the 16th of November?—Yes.
 4654. The day before the election?—Yes.
 4655. Did he ask you to do some work for him?—Yes.
 4656. What did he ask you to do?—"Sole me a pair of boots for young William Fowler."
 4657. Who is William Fowler?—The clerk of this Bewdley chapel.
 4658. After some time did Hamer go away?—Yes.
 4659. Did he tell you where he was going?—To take the work home that I had been doing.
 4660. To Fowler's?—Yes.
 4661. Did you stay behind him?—I stayed in his house talking to his wife a considerable time.
 4662. Did somebody come for him?—No.
 4663. Did you go up to Fowler?—Yes.
 4664. Did you want him?—I was tired of waiting for him.
 4665. What time was it you went to Fowler?—About seven o'clock as near as I can guess.
 4666. Did you find Hamer there?—Yes.
 4667. Did he come away with you?—No.
 4668. What did he tell you to do?—He said I was to go on and he would follow me in a few minutes.
 4669. Did you go on, or did you wait?—I went on the narrow footpath there leading to the road; at the bottom of the footpath there is a wicket gate; I stood outside the gate for about ten minutes.
 4670. Did Hamer come out of the house after a bit?—Yes.
 4671. Was anybody with him?—Mr. Fowler.
 4672. Did you hear them say anything?—Yes.
 4673. Tell us what was said?—They came within about three yards of the gate, as far as I can guess; I cannot say to half a yard; Mr. Fowler asked him plain if he would vote for Sir Richard; and he said that he could not.
 4674. What then?—Then he said "For what reason?"

4675. Who said?—Mr. Fowler said for what reason; is it money that you want.

4676. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] What answer did he make him?—I did not hear what answer he made him.

4677. Mr. Sturge.] What next?—Mr. Fowler asked him if 5l. would be of any use to him in his small way of business.

4678. What was said then?—He said "Yes it would."

4679. Who said that?—Mr. Hamer said, "Yes it would be;" get me more if you can; that was the last that was said, I believe.

4680. Did Mr. Fowler go away then?—They both came through the wicket where I was standing at. Mr. Fowler left him and he came home with me.

4681. They saw you?—They saw me, and I went off with Mr. Hamer then, and received my money for the work I had done.

4682. Were you at work at Hamer's the next day?—Not for work; I was at the shop.

4683. Early in the morning?—Not very early, eight o'clock, something like that.

4684. Do you know Mr. Thomas Betts?—I know him when I see him; I did not know that was his name when I saw him in there.

4685. Did some one come in the morning?—I saw Mr. Betts come three different times.

4686. When did he come?—About eight o'clock; but I cannot say exactly.

4687. What did he want?—I cannot say; he wanted to see Mr. Hamer of course.

4688. Did he see him?—Yes.

4689. Did you hear him say anything to Hamer?—I heard him asking Hamer different questions, and heard him say if he would do so-and-so he would give him his interest.

4690. Did you hear what he said?—If he would go for Sir Richard.

4691. Did you hear him say that?—Yes; he promised him all his work and all his interest, if he would do so.

4692. What did Hamer say to that?—He promised him he would.

4693. Did Betts come back again?—Not after them; not that I saw.

4694. He did not come back again?—Not that I saw.

4695. Do you know Edward Lucas?—Yes; that is him opposite.

4696. Did

4696. Did he come over?—No, he did not; but he called Mr. Hamer across to him.

4697. And did you hear what he said to Hamer, or did he say anything?—He called him across certainly, and asked him, "I suppose you two have settled it; I suppose you have not had any breakfast."

4698. Had Hamer gone then?—Yes; "Never mind any breakfast," he said; "you can have breakfast with me;" and then Mr. Hamer came across and did not stop to have any breakfast, but put on his hat, and away they went together.

4699. When did he come back again after he had gone away?—I cannot say.

4700. When did you see Hamer again?—The next time I saw him was in the "Swan" Hotel.

4701. Did he call you in?—Yes.

4702. You were in the street?—Yes, going down; passing down by the door.

4703. What time of day was it?—Ten o'clock; about that.

4704. Did you go in?—Yes.

4705. Did you have anything to eat?—Yes.

4706. Was Hamer eating?—He had been eating; so he told me, but not when I went in.

4707. Did you pay anything?—No.

4708. Did you see anybody else paying?—No.

4709. What had you for breakfast?—Well, I had a bit of bread and meat cut me off a leg of mutton.

4710. What had Hamer?—He said he had just had the thing that I had got.

4711. Did you go anywhere else with Hamer during that day?—Not with him, but I followed him; he left me and his wife following together; he ordered me to follow him up to the "Malt Shovel."

4712. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] Did you follow him, and where did you follow him?—I followed him up to the "Malt Shovel;" he ordered me to do so.

4713. Mr. Sturge.] Then, did you go into the "Malt Shovel" with him?—Followed him, it may be an hour afterwards; I cannot tell.

4714. What did you do when you got in there?—Of course I was asked to have some beer.

4715. Who asked you?—Mr. Hamer; he fetched me some in a pint cup.

4716. Did you see him pay for the beer?—No.

4717. Do you know who paid for it?—No.

4718. Did you see Osman Pountney there?—Yes; I did see him there that morning.

4719. Did you see Hamer with him?—Yes, I saw him.

4720. Did you say anything to him?—I asked Mr. Hamer if he would lend me a shilling; he said he had not one in his pocket, but he would fetch me one.

4721. Did he fetch you one?—Yes; I had a shilling of him.

4722. Do you know where he got it?—He asked Mr. Osman Pountney for some money.

4723. In your presence?—I was in the door leading to the kitchen, and Osman Pountney was at the bar door; I cannot say whether he gave him a shilling or five; I cannot say, but I received the shilling I asked for.

Cross-examined by Mr. Giffard.

4724. As to this first conversation which you overheard between Fowler and Hamer, how came you to be there?—Of course I was going after 9.

the money I had earned that afternoon, for the work which I had been doing.

4725. Just let me hear what you mean?—I had done the work that Mr. Hamer had been taking home, and I was waiting to receive the money I had earned for work.

4726. Where were you waiting?—At the bottom of the gate.

4727. Had you knocked or rung, or anything of that sort, to show that you were there?—No.

4728. Why did you not go in?—Into Mr. Fowler's? I had no authority; I knocked and asked if the gentleman was there that I wanted.

4729. How far is the gate from the door?—I could not say; it may be 40 yards, or something like that; that gate is next the turnpike road; the wicket I was standing at.

4730. And where were Fowler and Hamer standing at the time the conversation took place between them?—About three yards off the gate; they were inside, and I was outside.

4731. I misunderstood you; I thought you said they were at the door?—No.

4732. Was it dark?—Yes; very dark.

4733. Did you know whether they were aware at that time of your being there?—No, they were not.

4734. You think they were not?—I am sure not.

4735. You listened to see what they would say to each other?—I stood, and of course I heard their conversation; I was not particular to hear what they said, but I was standing, waiting for him.

4736. I suppose there is a path or road up to the door of the house?—A small narrow path.

4737. Had you seen Hamer go in?—No; I did not see him go in.

4738. Had you seen Fowler go in?—No; I did not see him go in.

4739. Did you hear voices which you recognised, or how was it you knew who was speaking?—Mr. Fowler's house?

4740. I want to know whether you knew the voices, or whether you saw the people?—That were talking inside? Of course I had been to the house to ask for Hamer, and when they had done their conversation they came through the wicket by me, and Hamer spoke to me. Mr. Fowler did not know me. Hamer spoke to me in a minute, and said, "I suppose you have heard what we have said;" I said, "Yes."

4741. Did you know them by hearing the voices?—I knew Hamer's voice very well.

4742. You did not know Mr. Fowler's?—Not when he was talking I did not.

4743. The only way in which you knew it was Fowler was when he passed you afterwards?—When he came through the gate.

4744. The next time you overheard a conversation was in Hamer's house, I think you say?—Who was that?

4745. With Mr. Hamer, Mr. Betts?—Yes.

4746. Was it by accident you heard that conversation also?—I was in the back kitchen and they were in the front.

4747. That was by accident also; you did not listen then?—No; of course if I go in the front kitchen, and any one is there, I always leave them.

4748. You left them in private?—Yes.

4749. I am afraid I must ask you some questions

J. Tillman. tions about yourself; have you been in trouble?—Yes.
 22 January 4750. What?—Several times.
 1869. 4751. How many?—I could not say; not particular.
 4752. How many?—I cannot say, not to once or twice.
 4753. About how many times, do you think?—Perhaps a dozen; never for no capital offence though, I think.
 4754. Your appearance here shows that it is not for any capital offence. I may ask you, have you had penal servitude?—Yes.
 4755. Are you on a ticket-of-leave now?—No.
 4756. Were you ever on a ticket-of-leave?—Yes.
 4757. When last?—I came home three years last July.
 4758. And how many years did that ticket-of-leave get you off?—I had three years, and I gained eight months for conduct out of the ticket-of-leave.
 4759. Since you came back three years ago, have you been in trouble since then?—Yes; not for felony.

4760. You are a criminal lawyer, I see?—Misdemeanour.

4761. What sort of misdemeanour?—For family affairs.

4762. What do you call “family affairs;” did they say you had stolen some fowls?—No.

4763. Or some lead?—No.

4764. Do you mean to swear that; take care?—Yes.

4765. What did they say you had been doing since this three years?—Nothing at all, but a family affair, falling out.

4766. Just explain how many times you have been in trouble, and then I will ask you what it is for?—Since I came home for the three years?

4767. Yes?—Only once; I have been in trouble once, and I had three months for that.

4768. What was that for?—Striking my wife; family affairs.

[The Witness withdrew.]

DAVID HOBBS, sworn; Examined by Mr. Chandos Leigh.

D. Hobbs. 4769. WHERE do you live?—At Coal’s Quay, Bewdley.
 4770. Are you a voter?—Yes.
 4771. For whom did you vote at the last election?—Sir Richard Glass.
 4772. What are you?—A waterman.
 4773. Do you live next door to a man of the name of Richard Mosely?—No.
 4774. Do you live near him?—No.
 4775. Do you know him?—Yes, a quarter of a mile off.
 4776. Do you know Mr. Giles Shaw?—Yes.
 4777. Did you at any time see Mr. Giles Shaw talking to Richard Mosely?—No, never.

4778. You know Mr. Giles Shaw by sight?—I do.

4779. Did you ever see them together?—No, never.

4780. Do you mean to say that you never saw them together at all?—Never in my life.

4781. Is your name David Hobbs?—Yes.

Mr. Fitzjames Stephen stated that it was probable that this was not the David Hobbs whom the Petitioners had intended to call.

[The Witness withdrew.]

SAMUEL SMITH, sworn; Examined by Mr. Sturge.

S. Smith. 4782. WHAT are you?—A coal-dealer and fisherman.
 4783. Are you a voter?—Yes.
 4784. Whom did you vote for?—Sir Richard Glass.
 4785. Do you know Mr. Thomas Baugh?—Yes.
 4786. He is a magisistrate, is he not?—Yes.
 4787. Do you remember his coming to you some time before the election?—Yes, I spoke to him before the election.
 4788. How long before the election was that?—I cannot say.
 4789. A week?—It may be a week.
 4790. About a week, was it, or longer?—It may be a little longer, I cannot say.
 4791. Did he ask you about voting?—He asked me who I was going to vote for.
 4792. What did you say?—I told him I could not say.
 4793. What did he say then?—He said he should be glad if I would vote on the same principle as he did; I think that was all he said to me.
 4794. Have you been engaged in a case about the salmon fishery?—Yes.
 4795. Did he say anything about that?—Not word.

4796. Not a word?—Not a word to me.

4797. Did he say anything about 10 s.?—Not then.

4798. Did he at any time?—That was a long while before; long before anything of the election was brought up at all.

4799. What did he say?—I had a brief from a party of gentlemen; the gentlemen thought they would assist me in this affair.

4800. Do you mean that you were a plaintiff in a case?—Yes; it was a subscription list.

4801. When was it you had this?—I think it was about July.

4802. Upon that occasion, did you see Mr. Baugh?—Yes.

4803. What did he say to you?—He promised me something towards it.

4804. What did he promise you?—Ten shillings.

4805. Did he give it you?—Not then. He told me I could have it any time.

4806. Have you had it since?—I have never been to ask it.

4807. Had he said anything about the election?—No, any more than that day.

4808. What did he say?—Who I was going to vote for; and I said I could not tell.

4809. Has

4809. Has he said anything more about the 10s.?—No.

Cross-examined by Mr. Giffard.

4810. Was this a subscription list to enable you to pay the cost of this action?—Yes.

4811. And did other gentlemen subscribe?—Yes, a great many.

4812. Among others, did Mr. Baldwin the petitioner subscribe?—Yes.

4813. And you say you do not now remember the exact date, but it was before the election business came on at all?—Yes, a long while before then.

4814. Were you at any time at a meeting of Mr. Lloyd's at the "Anchor"?—Yes.

4815. Who took the chair?—Mr. Baldwin, I believe it was.

4816. That was Enoch Baldwin?—No, Mr. Alfred Baldwin.

4817. Was his brother present?—Yes.

4818. And were there a large number of Mr. Lloyd's supporters there admitted by ticket?—Yes, I believe there was.

4819. You knew them, I suppose, as Mr. Lloyd's men; you knew these things at election time?—Yes, part of them.

4820. After the meeting was over, did you see some of these same people drinking beer?—Yes, I had some myself as well.

4821. Did you pay for it?—Yes.

4822. Did others pay for it?—Some that was along with me; several of us. I believe that we had a cup each.

4823. But did you see beer produced, and put on the table for everybody that was not paid for?—I saw several cans brought in; I do not know who paid for it.

4824. What was done with the cans?—It was poured out, I believe.

4825. For the company?—Yes.

4826. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] I thought you said you paid for what you got?—One cup when I came downstairs.

4827. Mr. Giffard.] Did you have more than one cup?—I drank out of the can.

4828. But did you pay for that?—No; I do not know who did.

4829. How long did this drinking go on?—I cannot say.

4830. I mean, how long were you there?—I should think till about half-past 10; it may be very near 11.

4831. What time did the drinking begin?—After the meeting.

4832. What time?—I should think it must be going on for 10 o'clock against the meeting was closed.

4833. It would be about an hour that the drinking lasted?—That I stopped there.

4834. Was the drinking going on when you left?—I cannot tell; I had some as long as I stopped there.

Re-examined by Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.

4835. How many people were there in this place?—I should think there would be 150 in the room. I am not a particular good judge in the quantity; more than 100.

4836. And that was at the meeting, was it?—Yes.

4837. Where was the room where you had the beer?—The kitchen.

4838. How many people were there in the kitchen?—I should think about a dozen.

4839. That was after the meeting was over, was it?—Yes.

4840. Do you know whether the municipal elections were on at that time?—No; that was over by that time, I believe.

4841. There were about a dozen you say in the room, in the kitchen?—Yes; I ask your pardon, I do not think it was over at that time; I am not quite confident.

4842. You think it was going on then?—It may have been; I do not know the date.

4843. Did you vote at that?—Yes.

4844. Perhaps that would remind you?—No, not of the date.

4845. Who were these men who were drinking in the kitchen?—I almost forget who they were now. I dare say I could mention one or two who sat with me when we came down the stairs.

4846. Had anybody told you to go in, or did you go in of your own accord when you came down from the meeting?—I went in of my own accord, and paid for my cup of beer.

[The Witness withdrew.]

Mr. Chandos Leigh stated that he proposed to give some evidence with reference to the accounts of the election expenses.

Mr. Justice Blackburn called the attention of Mr. Fitzjames Stephen to the fact that there was a want of evidence to connect with voters the payments alleged to have been made to watchers by a disguised person.

Mr. Fitzjames Stephen pointed out to his Lordship that the item for watchers in the accounts was a very large one.

Mr. Giffard stated that his case would be that not a single voter had been employed as a watcher.

Mr. Chandos Leigh stated that while the accounts were being fetched he would examine John Davis.

JOHN DAVIS, sworn; Examined by Mr. Chandos Leigh.

4847. ARE you a labourer?—Yes.

4848. Do you live at Wribbenhall?—Yes.

4849. Do you work for Mr. Hemming, Spring Grove?—Yes.

4850. Are you a voter?—Yes.

4851. For whom did you vote?—Mr. Lloyd.

4852. Did the other side ask you for your vote?—Yes.

4853. Who asked you?—Mr. Glass.

9.

4854. Was he alone at the time?—No, there was some one else with him.

4855. Who else was with him?—Mr. Gardener was with him for one.

4856. Anybody else?—Mr. Jackson.

4857. Is that Mr. William Jackson?—Yes, I believe it is; I do not know his name.

4858. Did anybody come to your house again afterwards

S. Smith.

1869.

J. Davis.

J. Davis. afterwards about your vote?—No, besides Mr. Jackson, he come.
 22 January 1869. 4859. When did Mr. Jackson come?—It was after Mr. Glass come.

4860. Did he come twice to your house?—Yes.

4861. The second time, did he come alone or with other people?—He came to the house alone.

4862. What did he say to you?—He tapped me on the head like this here (describing it), and said, "I want you outside."

4863. Did you go outside?—Yes.

4864. Did he say anything to you when you got outside?—Yes; he said, "How is it you cannot promise your vote to Mr. Glass?" and he put his hand in his pocket, and he pulled out 3 d., and he gave me a pint of beer.

4865. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] Do you mean that he gave you a pint of beer to drink, and 3 d. to get a pint of beer with?—He gave me the 3 d. to get a pint of beer with.

[The Witness withdrew.

JOHN PAGETT, sworn; Examined by Mr. Chandos Leigh.

J. Pagett. 4866. ARE you under-gardener to Mr. Hemming at Spring Grove?—Yes.

4867. And are you a voter?—Yes.

4868. Whom did you for vote?—Thomas Lloyd.

4869. Were you invited to Mrs. Hinton's, at the "Coach and Horses," during the election?—Yes.

4870. Who came to you about that?—William Jackson.

4871. And where did he come to you?—In the garden.

4872. At Mr. Hemming's?—Yes.

4873. What did he say?—He asked me if I would come down and enjoy myself at night, along with a party that was going to meet there.

4874. Enjoy yourself where?—At Mrs. Hinton's.

4875. At the "Coach and Horses"?—Yes.

4876. Did he say anything else?—No, I do not think he said anything else.

4877. Did he say what was going on at the "Coach and Horses" to afford you enjoyment?—No; he merely said there was a meeting there, and some drink to be had, and I was to come down and enjoy myself along with the rest.

4878. Did you go to the "Coach and Horses"?—No.

Cross-examined by Mr. Giffard.

4879. Who is that you are speaking of that said this, "Come down and enjoy yourself"?—No one said I was to come down; he came in and invited me.

4880. Who is "he"?—William Jackson.

4881. When was this?—I could not tell the date.

4882. About?—I think it was the beginning of November; some time then.

4883. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] Was Sir Richard Glass's name mentioned?—Yes; he said that it was likely Sir Richard Glass would meet me there.

[The Witness withdrew.

ALEXANDER FAULKNER, sworn; Examined by Mr. Chandos Leigh.

A. Faulkner. 4884. WHO are you?—Gardener to Mr. Hemming.

4885. Gardener to Mr. Hemming, at Spring Grove?—Yes.

4886. Is Spring Grove at Bewdley?—Near Bewdley.

4887. Are you a voter?—Yes.

4888. For whom did you vote?—Mr. Lloyd.

4889. Were you ever canvassed for Sir Richard Glass?—Yes.

4890. Who by?—Mr. Bury.

4891. Did you ever see Mr. Jackson during the canvass?—Yes.

4892. Where?—At Spring Grove.

4893. Did he say anything to you?—He came to invite me to meet some friends at Mrs. Hinton's, at the "Coach and Horses," in Wribbenthal.

4894. Did he say anything?—Merely invited me to meet some friends at Mrs. Hinton's; that is the only thing he said to me.

4895. Did he mention Sir Richard Glass's name?—Not to my remembrance; I do not think he did.

4896. Did you go there?—No.

4897. Did he say what was to go on at Hinton's?—No; I objected to go there, and I did not ask him any questions.

[The Witness withdrew.

WILLIAM NICHOLS MARCY, Esq., further Examined by Mr. Chandos Leigh.

W.N. Marcy, Esq. 4898. HAVE you the accounts furnished to you by Sir Richard Glass's agents?—Yes (handing them in); that is all I have received.

4899. Have you looked them over?—No, I have not.

4900. Is that a detailed statement?—Yes.

4900.* Are the bills and the vouchers there?—All that came in; that is all that I had.

4901. The last page, I see, is an abstract, not a detailed statement?—Yes; it is not made by me; I have nothing to do with that whatever.

Mr. Chandos Leigh called the attention of his Lordship to the fact that, by the 4th section of the 26th & 27th Vict. c. 29, a detailed statement is to be sent in, together with bills and vouchers.

4902. Mr. Chandos Leigh (to the Witness).] You cannot say; you have not looked it through, and you cannot say whether the bills and vouchers have been sent in?—No; I have not looked through either of them, for they were only delivered to me the very last day.

Cross-examined by Mr. Giffard.

4903. I suppose the other side, Mr. Lloyd, sent you in his?—Yes.

4904. Let me see those?—That came within the prescribed limit (handing a batch of papers in). I have had a supplemental list since, with a note (handing it in): “Mr. Lloyd thinks the next account should be filed with the others, to verify the general statement; I think it is not usual to do so.”

4905. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] That list was sent in after the prescribed date, as I understand?—Yes.

W.N. Marcy,
Esq.
22 January
1869.

HENRY HUNT re-called, and further Examined by Mr. Sturge.

4906. Before the day of the election, had you seen any people watching in the streets?—No.

4907. Never saw anybody?—No.

4951. William Pountney?—No.

4952. Did you see any of these people at Mr. Pardoe's house afterwards?—No, not that I know.

4953. Did you see them at all afterwards?—I see them about after the election was over inquiring about pay, that was all.

4954. What were they doing?—They were standing together when the others had been paid, and wanted to know when they were going to be paid.

4955. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] Standing together where?—On the bridge, talking about being paid.

4956. Mr. Chandos Leigh.] Standing together on the bridge?—Yes.

4957. Did you ever see any standing round at Mr. Pardoe's office?—Yes, a good many there were.

4958. At Mr. Pardoe's office?—At Mr. Pardoe's door.

4959. When was that?—Two days after the election, I think it was, as they were being paid; there was a great quantity, a regular crowd for the two or three days in front of the office.

4960. Who was standing there?—I could not possibly say, but they were men, women, and all together.

4961. Did you see any of the people whom you had seen watching, standing there?—Yes; I met Field by the door of the front office several times, and saw him go and talk to the others, but he did not stop particularly, because he was in work after the election.

4962. You say you saw a great number of people there?—Yes.

4963. Were they voters or non-voters?—I could not say that.

4984. In whose employment is Rowley?—In Mr. Rogers's.

4985. Is that Mr. Joseph Rogers?—Yes, I think so.

4986. Of Bewdley?—Of Stourport.

4987. Did Rowley ever work as a waterman?—Yes.

4988. Whom did he work for then?—I cannot say.

4989. Did Rowley come to you?—Yes; he came on to Bristol Quay.

4990. Did he say anything to you?—He did not say anything to me; he only said he was come for one or two men on the vessel, he did not say on what occasion.

4991. To take them where?—He told me that he wanted them to go to Stourport.

4992. Did he say that to anybody else?—He did not say that particularly to me, he said it to some others.

4993. Did you hear him?—Yes; I did hear him, but he did not mention my name.

4994. Was there a man called Burton there?—Yes.

4995. Did he mention it to him?—Yes.

4996. What was done after that; was there another vessel there?—Yes.

4997. Did you go with Rowley to the other vessel?—Yes.

4998. Did you find any men there in the other vessel?—Yes, there were some men there.

4999. How many?—Two.

5000. Whose employ were those men in?—Mr. Danks's.

5001. Were they Bewdley voters?—One was.

5002. What was his name?—Parmenter.

5003. Did you go to the railway?—Yes.

5004. Who did you go to the railway with?—Along with the other two men and Rowley

5005. Did you take a ticket at the railway?—I did not take any ticket; the ticket was given to me outside, I did not go in at all.

5006. Where was the ticket for that was given you?—To Gloucester.

5007. By whom was the ticket given you?—I cannot say who gave it me, I was outside, I did not take particular notice who gave it me.

5008. Some one came up and gave you a ticket of whom you took no notice?—No.

5009. Was that Rowley?—No, it was not Rowley.

5010. Was it one of the lot you were with who gave you the ticket?—Yes.

5011. What time was that?—About two o'clock.

5012. Did you get into the train?—Yes.

5013. Did you go to Gloucester?—Yes.

5015. And did Rowley go with you to Gloucester?—Yes.

5016. Did you stop at any public at Gloucester?—Yes.

5017. Did you have anything to eat or drink when you were at that public?—We had some beer.

5018. Did the other men have some beer?—Yes.

5019. Did you pay for the beer you had?—No.

5020. Did you see anybody pay for it?—No, I did not see anyone pay for it.

5021. Who ordered the beer?—One of the men in the company.

5022. What was his name?—I did not take particular notice who it was called for the beer.

5023. Did you see any other man pay for the beer?—No.

5024. Where was Rowley; was he there?—No; he was gone out.

5025. Where was he gone to?—I do not know where he went to.

5026. Did Rowley come back afterwards?—Yes, he came back.

5027. Did you go to the railway station again after that?—Yes.

5028. The same lot?—Yes, the same lot.

5029. With Rowley?—Yes.

5030. Did you get a ticket then?—Yes.

5031. Did you take that at the ticket-office?—I did not go to the office only on the platform. I did not go into no office at all.

5032. How

5032. How did you get the ticket?—One of the men gave me a ticket off the platform again.
 5033. Was it the same man who gave it to you at Bristol?—No, it was one of the others.
 5034. Was it one of the same lot as gave it you before?—Yes, it was one of the same lot.
 5035. Where was the ticket for?—For Stourport.
 5036. Did the train stop at Worcester?—Yes, it stopped at Worcester.
 5037. Was there any refreshment taken at Worcester?—A drop of beer.
 5038. Did you pay for it?—No.
 5039. Did you see any man pay for it?—No, I did not see any money pass at all.
 5040. Did you come to Stourport then?—Yes.
 5041. That same night?—Yes.
 5042. Did you vote the next day?—Yes.
 5043. Whom did you vote for?—Mr. Glass.
 5044. Have you always voted on the Tory side before?—Never voted before.
 5045. Have you voted at the municipal election?—I have never voted in my life before.
 5046. Just tell me this; were you canvassed for your vote?—No; I never was canvassed by no one; not to be forced to vote; not at all.
 5047. Did anybody ask you to give your vote for anybody?—That morning?
 5048. No; at all during the election?—Yes.

I saw Mr. Rogers, and he asked me if I had any inclination to vote as I had not voted before, and I told him I did not wish to vote for either party.
 5049. Anything else?—No, nothing.
 5050. How long before was that?—I cannot say; a month.
 5051. Where was that?—On a wharf at Stourport; on the wharf where I was at work.
 5052. Did you see Mr. Rogers asking others of your men?—No, never spoke to Mr. Rogers after.

I. Leverton.

 1869.

Cross-examined by Mr. Giffard.

5053. Did you ever promise to vote for Sir Richard Glass?—No.
 5054. Not at any time?—Not at any time.
 5055. Then you came up and voted for him of your own accord?—On my own accord.

Re-examined by Mr. Chandos Leigh.

5056. You say you came up and voted for him of your own accord?—Yes.
 5057. Should you have come if you had not been fetched?—No, I should not have come to have voted; not on any side.

[The Witness withdrew.

RICHARD MILLINGTON, sworn; Examined by Mr. Chandos Leigh.

5058. WHERE do you live?—At Stourport.
 5059. What are you?—A waterman.
 5060. In whose employ?—Mr. Danks and Saunders.
 5061. Are you a voter?—Yes.
 5062. For whom did you vote at the last election?—Mr. Glass.
 5063. On the 16th of November were you at Bristol?—I was there the day before the poll.
 5064. Where were you?—At Bristol.
 5065. On a vessel?—Yes.
 5066. Were there any other men in the vessel with you?—Yes.
 5067. Who?—Three more.
 5068. What were their names?—Two Darks, I cannot say the other name.
 5069. Were the Darks voters?—No.
 5070. Were you the only voter on the vessel?—For all I know.
 5071. Was the third man a voter, the other man?—Not that I am aware of.
 5072. Do you know a man named Rowley?—Yes.
 5073. Did he come to you on the vessel?—Yes.
 5074. Did he say anything to you when he came to you on the vessel?—He was talking about the election; he asked me who I was going to vote for; I told him Mr. Glass.
 5075. Did you say anything else?—I said I had no money to come up, not to pay my expenses; he said he would lend me some to pay my expenses if I would return it again; I promised him that I would.
 5076. Did he lend you any?—Yes.
 5077. How much?—About 25 s. altogether.
 5078. Have you paid it him back again?—No, not yet.
 5079. Has he asked you to pay it back again?—Yes.
 9.

5080. When?—I told him I would pay it when it was convenient.
 5081. When did he ask you to pay it back again?—A week ago.
 5082. Where was it that he asked you to pay it back again?—At Stourport.
 5083. Where were you when he asked you to pay it back again?—At Stourport, in the road.
 5084. Was he alone when he asked you to pay it back again?—Yes.
 5085. Is that the only time he has asked you to pay it back again?—Yes.
 5086. What did you do with the 25 s. he lent you?—Paid the trainage up, and expenses down again.
 5087. Where did you take a ticket from?—From Bristol.
 5088. Did you take a return ticket or a single?—A single.
 5089. What class did you go?—Third.
 5090. What was your fare?—Eleven and eleven-pence altogether, the trainage.
 5091. Eleven and eleven-pence, there and back?—No, up to Kidderminster.
 5092. From Bristol to Kidderminster was 11 s. 11 d.?—Yes.
 5093. Did you go alone or in company with other men?—There were other men in company.
 5094. Do you remember any of their names?—No, I cannot say their names now.
 5095. Were they fellow-workers of yours?—Some were.
 5096. Was a man called Leverton there?—Yes, he was one in company.
 5097. Was Burton there?—Yes, Burton was in my company.
 5098. Did you go together, Burton, Leverton, and yourself?—We was together some of the time.

R.
Millington.

R.
Millington.
—
22 January
1869.

509t. Did you go in the train together, did you go by the same train?—Yes.

5100. Did Rowley go with you?—He was in company.

5101. In the same train, was he in the same carriage?—No, not in the same carriage as I was.

5102. Did the other men take their tickets themselves?—I do not know.

5103. Did you see any of the other men take their tickets?—I did not see them at all take their tickets.

5104. Did you stop anywhere on the road?—We stopped once.

5105. Where?—At Gloucester.

5106. Did you have anything to eat or drink there?—We had some beer.

5107. Did you pay for the beer?—I paid for some.

5108. Did you pay for all the beer you had?—I did not pay for all; I paid for some; I do not know what I had.

5109. I now ask you, did you pay for all the beer you had?—No, not all I had.

5110. Who paid for the beer, that you did not pay for?—I cannot say.

5111. Did you see it paid for?—No.

5112. Was Rowley with you at the time?—No.

5113. Had he stopped with you at Gloucester, had he stopped with you when you stopped at Gloucester?—Yes, he stopped.

5114. Did he come to the house with you when you had the beer?—No.

5115. Did he come there at all?—Not as I see.

5116. Did you see him after?—Not to my recollection.

5117. Now just understand my question; did you see him after the time that you left the place where you had the beer till you got to Stourport or to Kidderminster?—I see him once during the time.

5118. Where?—At Kidderminster.

5119. How much money did you pay for the beer?—Oh, I cannot tell.

5120. About?—I cannot tell how much I paid for the beer.

5121. Was it a shilling, or two shillings, or what?—It may be more than that.

5122. Might it be three shillings?—It may be three shillings, I cannot say.

5123. Did you drink all that three shillings worth of beer, or all the beer you paid for yourself?—No.

5124. What you did not drink yourself, whom did you give it to?—Them that was with me.

5125. Do you remember any of the names of those to whom you gave beer?—No, I cannot.

5126. Where they your fellow-workmen?—They was in company with me.

5127. But were they Danks's men?—Yes.

5128. You say you gave beer to those who were in company with you, and those were Danks's men, and you say you work for Danks?—Yes.

5129. Now, can you say any of the men to whom you gave the beer?—I cannot say that I gave it them, because we were drinking together.

5130. Did they drink any of the beer that you paid for?—Yes.

5131. Now, can you tell us any of the men who drank any of the beer that you paid for?—No.

5132. Was Leverton there; did he take any?—I do not know; I cannot say.

5133. Was Burton there?—I cannot say.

5134. Did any of the others order beer besides yourself?—Yes.

5135. Did they pay for it?—Yes.

5136. Did you see them pay for it?—Yes.

5137. Now, you say you saw Rowley again before you got to Stourport; you saw him at Kidderminster, you told us?—Yes.

5138. What happened at Kidderminster?—I cannot recollect now.

5139. Did Rowley speak to you at Kidderminster?—I do not know particularly.

5140. Did you stop at Worcester?—Yes, we stopped at Worcester.

5141. Did you have any beer at Worcester?—A little.

5142. Where was that?—At Worcester.

5143. At the station, or in an hotel?—In the town.

5144. Did you pay for that beer?—Some of it.

5145. How much did you pay at Worcester?—I cannot say.

5146. Can you say about; was it one or two shillings?—I cannot say what it was for certain.

5147. Did other men have beer there?—Yes.

5148. Did you see them pay for that?—Not to my recollection.

5149. Was Rowley there then whilst you were having the beer?—I do not know; I did not see him there.

5150. Had you seen him at Worcester station?—I see him at the station.

5151. Now you told us that you paid 11s. 11d. for your trainage; did that include the money you paid for the beer, or was that the ticket alone?—The ticket alone.

5152. When you got to Kidderminster, what happened; did you come on to Stourport?—Yes.

5153. Did you vote at Stourport?—Yes.

5154. Did you stay at Stourport all night?—Yes.

5155. Where did you stay?—At my own home.

5156. How did you come over from Kidderminster to Stourport?—I met with a friend on the way; he asked me to ride in a cart.

5157. Who was the friend?—I do not know.

5158. You called him a friend; was he a person that you had seen before?—Yes.

5159. A person you had seen, but whose name you did not know?—Yes.

5160. Did the other men who came with you from Bristol meet with friends too?—I do not know.

5161. Did any other of the men come with your friend in a trap?—I cannot say; I have nothing more to say.

5162. Were you alone with your friend in a trap?—I do not know.

5163. Where was it that you met with your friend?—Coming on the road.

5164. How far from Kidderminster?—Just out of the town.

5165. At the railway station, or at the other end?—At the railway end.

5166. Your friend in the trap met you at the railway station; can you answer that question?—I have no more to say.

5167. I want to hear a little more; did your friend in the trap meet you at the railway station?—No, he did not.

5168. Where did he meet you?—He was going along the road, and so was I.

5169. How

R.
Millington.
1869.

5169. How far from the railway station?—I cannot say; half-a-mile perhaps from the station.

5170. Were you walking alone then, or other of the men walking with you?—Others in company.

5171. Was Rowley with you?—I cannot say.

5172. Was Leverton or Burton with you?—I cannot say.

5173. Was a man called Bishop with you?—I cannot say.

5174. Can you tell me anybody who was with you by name?—I cannot say; not now.

5175. Did you get into the trap; was he driving along, or was the trap standing still?—Driving along.

5176. And your friend pulled up?—Yes.

5177. And offered to give you a lift?—Yes.

5178. You say you do not know who it was?—No.

5179. Can you tell us this; did you get into the trap alone, or did any of the other men you were walking with get into the trap with you?—There were one or two got in; I cannot recollect.

5180. Did Rowley get in?—I do not know.

5181. You say you went to Stourport; where did you stay at Stourport?—At my own home.

5182. Did you poll the next day?—Yes.

5183. For Sir Richard Glass?—Yes.

5184. After you had polled for Sir Richard Glass, did you go anywhere?—I walked about.

5185. Did you have anything to eat and drink?—No.

5186. Did you go back to Bristol again?—Yes.

5187. When did you go back to Bristol again?—On the Wednesday after.

5188. The next day, that would be?—The next day after.

5189. How did you get back to Bristol?—Went back by the train.

5190. What class did you go back by?—Third class.

5191. Did you take your own ticket?—Yes.

5192. What did you pay?—I cannot tell now how much it was.

5193. You cannot tell how much it was?—No.

5194. Did you take a through ticket to Bristol?—No; part of the way.

5195. Where did you take it to?—From Gloucester to Bristol.

5196. How did you get to Gloucester?—Went down by the steamer.

5197. What steamer?—One of the tug boats.

5198. Had you anything to pay for going by the tug boat?—No.

5199. Will you tell us what you paid for Gloucester to Bristol, third class?—I cannot say how much it was now.

5200. Were your full wages for the week paid?—I do not work by the week.

5201. How do you work?—By the trip; so much for the voyage.

5202. Were your wages for that voyage paid?—Yes.

5203. Who by?—By Mr. Danks.

Mr. Giffard stated that he would not ask this Witness any questions.

[The Witness withdrew.]

GEORGE ANDERSON, sworn; Examined by Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.

5204. You are Clerk to Mr. Crowther, I think?—I am.

5205. He is the paid agent of Sir Richard Glass in this matter?—I believe he is.

5206. Is that your hand-writing (handing an envelope to the Witness); look at the stamp on the envelope?—Yes.

5207. That is your hand-writing?—Yes, I believe it is.

5208. You do not doubt it, I suppose?—No; I think it is mine.

5209. Now look at that circular which it contains?—Yes.

5210. Did you send out that circular to that address from your office?—Yes.

5211. Did you send out other copies of that circular?—Yes.

5212. Give me a notion how many you sent out?—Perhaps 60 to 70.

5213. Is that "John Taylor" your hand-writing?—Yes; I first consulted Taylor, and asked for his permission, and he said, "I am not a good writer myself."

5214. You wrote it by his authority?—Yes.

5215. Were you authorised by Mr. Crowther to send out that circular?—No; I am not aware that I was.

5216. Did you do it as Mr. Crowther's clerk?—It was handed to me to be sent out, but I did not know in what way it was.

5217. It was in Mr. Crowther's office, I suppose?—Yes; I sent them out from the office.

5218. And on his paper, his envelopes?—Some of them perhaps; we use several sorts of envelopes, and I catch hold of the first I come to.

5219. How came you to send out this thing?—At the request of Taylor. (A circular was handed to his Lordship.)

5220. In this circular, Taylor is described as the chairman of the working men's committee?—Yes.

5221. What committee was that?—A committee of the Working Men's Conservative Association.

5222. But that is a different thing; look here, just read this; read it to yourself (handing a circular to the Witness); now you see that that circular is about establishing a Conservative Working Men's Association?—Yes.

5223. Then that working men's committee must have existed before?—I am not aware of that.

5224. You see there is Taylor's signature to that?—Yes.

5225. And it describes him as chairman of the working men's committee?—Yes.

5226. And it asks the person to whom it is addressed to help in establishing a Conservative Working Men's Association?—Yes.

5227. Then the working men's committee must have existed before the Conservative Working Men's Association?—That committee I know nothing at all about.

5228. Do you know Taylor?—I know Taylor.

5229. Did you get that circular printed?—I believe Taylor brought them to me over-night.

5230. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] Brought them printed overnight, do you mean?—I believe he brought them overnight, and asked me to sign them as he was a very bad writer.

M 3

5231. Mr.

G. Anderson.

12 January
1869.

5231. Mr. Giffard.] My Lord asked you whether it was printed?—Printed.

5232. Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.] Do you know any other members of that committee, the working men's committee; I want to know what it was?—There was no working men's committee.

5233. Then why did you send out a thing with "Working Men's Committee" on it?—It was brought to me to be sent out.

5234. Why did you send out a thing of that kind, simply because it was brought to you?—At Taylor's request, I sent it out.

5235. Did you know Taylor before?—Yes.

5236. Why did you send it out at Taylor's request; you would not send it out at anybody's request?—Because Taylor, I believe, was to be appointed chairman of the association.

5237. He was chairman of the working men's committee before that?—The committee I know nothing about.

5238. Do you know about the association?—Yes.

5239. Were you a member of that?—I am.

5240. Was Taylor a member of that?—He is.

5241. Was he chairman of that?—He was.

5242. Mr. Giffard.] Of the association or of the committee?—The association.

5243. Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.] Were you present at the meetings?—Some of them.

5244. Were you secretary of it?—I am.

5245. Was that association intended, amongst other things, to further the election of Sir Richard Glass?—No; I should think not.

5246. Had nothing to do with the election?—Not that I am aware of.

5247. Do you mean to swear that the association took no part in Sir Richard Glass's election?—Not that I am aware of.

5248. But you must know, because you are secretary?—Yes; but I had very little to do with the getting up of it.

5249. You are secretary to it?—Yes; I was appointed secretary to it, but I was not helping to get it up at all.

5250. I did not say you were; but, as secretary, did you know its business?—No.

5251. Have you got the rules?—Yes.

5252. Have you got the accounts?—Yes.

5253. Now, let us look at the rules?—(The Witness handed a book of rules to Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.)

5254. I see the president is Joseph Rogers, Esq.?—Yes.

5255. That is Mr. Rogers, there (pointing to a gentleman)?—Yes.

5256. And then Mr. Radford, whose name has been mentioned, is one of the vice-presidents?—I believe he is.

5257. You say there is a committee of 14 members?—Yes.

Mr. Justice Blackburn observed that the rules, if handed to him, would speak for themselves.

5258. Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.] The object of the association are "the furtherance and maintenance of Conservative principles; to attend the borough registration; partial relief in sickness, and to support by every fair means the Conservative cause"; now the object of this association is the furtherance and maintenance of Conservative principles?—Yes.

5259. Did it not seek to further and maintain Conservative principles by procuring the election of Sir Richard Glass?—I should think not.

5260. Do you mean to say it took no notice of the election?—It made no difference to it, that I am aware of.

5261. Do you mean to swear it took no notice at all in furthering the election of Sir Richard Glass?—I should think not.

5262. Will you swear it did not?—No.

5263. You will not swear it did not?—I will swear it did not, to the best of my knowledge.

5264. Does your knowledge go far enough to enable you to say it did not?—My knowledge does not go far enough.

5265. Then it may have done so, for what you know?—It may have done so, for what I know.

5266. And you are secretary?—I am secretary.

5267. Did you ever see Sir Richard Glass in connection with that association?—No.

5268. Or at its meetings?—No.

5269. Do you remember a meeting at Mr. Rogers's park; Mr. Rogers's grounds?—I do.

5270. That was a great meeting; a large number of persons?—Yes.

5271. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] What was the date?—I believe it was the 5th of September.

5272. Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.] Was not that meeting at the time that this association was established?—Yes.

5273. It was given in connection with the establishment of the association?—It was given; yes, in connection with the establishment of the association.

5274. And was Sir Richard Glass present at that meeting?—He was.

5275. Did he make speeches?—He made a very short speech.

5276. You are treasurer, are you?—I am not.

5277. You have got the accounts and things?—Yes.

5278. Let me look at it?—(The Witness handed in an account book to Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.)

5279. It appears from this cash account that the funds of the society were 7 l. 8 s. Is this the whole?—No; there are several honorary members. I believe some of them promised five guineas, some more, towards paying for the administration, but at present the secretary has not had time to get them in.

5280. The book shows 7 s. 6 d. creditor, and 6 d. expenses.

5281. Mr. Giffard.] I see; "To entrance fee refunded by Wright, 6 d."?—Yes.

5282. Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.] That is all you ever spent?—Yes.

5283. Were there any other accounts connected with the society than that?—Not that came into my hand.

5284. Do you know, as secretary, what the condition of the society was?—Mr. Radford was honorary secretary; he had to get in the subscriptions.

5285. Then were you paid, as he was the honorary secretary?—No.

5286. You mean Mr. Radford was honorary treasurer?—Honorary secretary for the time being.

5287. Have you heard this Mr. Taylor make speeches?—Yes, I have.

5288. Where?—At one of our meetings at the "Lion."

5289. Who was in the chair there?—Well, I think think Mr. Rogers, when he had this meeting. I think he made a speech then.

5290. When was it Taylor made the speech you speak of?—When we sent to invite these men to join, Taylor made a speech then.

5291. When was it you sent to invite these men?—

Mr. Justice Blackburn.] The circular shows that the circular is dated, Friday the 28th of August, and this asks them to be at a meeting held this evening at the "White Lion" hotel.

5292. Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.] Who was present at the meeting at the "White Lion" hotel?—Taylor was there.

5293. Was Mr. Rogers there?—I think he was.

5294. Mr. Radford?—I think he was.

5295. Were there speeches made?—I think Taylor made one.

5296. Was Sir Richard Glass there?—No.

5297. Had the speeches made any reference to the election?—Some Kidderminster friends came down and made a speech.

5298. Did the speeches made, and Taylor's speech in particular, have any reference to the election?—No.

5299. What were they all about?—He was talking about Bright, and various other things; I cannot recollect now.

5300. I dare say about Mr. Gladstone and the Irish Church?—Probably it may be; I cannot recollect now.

Cross-examined by Mr. Giffard.

5301. I suppose you heard a good many speeches on somewhat similar subjects during the period from August to November?—Yes.

5302. You do not remember them all?—No; it would be impossible to remember them all.

5303. Tell me about this demonstration; we have heard it was held on the 5th of September?—It was.

5304. Was there a large number of persons who came over from Kidderminster?—Yes.

5305. How many?—800 or 900.

5306. After what we have heard, I may take it that the majority of the persons there were Kidderminster people?—They were.

5307. There was a contested election at Kidderminster also?—There was.

5308. And was the intending Member for Kidderminster, the candidate, present?—Yes.

5309. He made a speech?—Yes; and the county Member, Mr. Knight, was there.

5310. Did he make a speech?—Yes.

5311. One word about the cash accounts my learned friend referred to; is that an account simply of what comes through your hands as secretary?—Yes.

5312. In that account that you have given is there any notice of disbursements made by the treasurer, or receipts by the treasurer?—No.

5313. Perhaps I ought to add one other question about the demonstration; had you any representatives from the Conservative Constitutional Union of London?—Yes, Mr. Edwards, I believe; I am not certain now.

5314. I am told that you are in error about that; was it Mr. Clark or Mr. Edwards?—Mr. Clark; Edwards came from Birmingham, I believe.

9.

Mr. Justice Blackburn.] Is this 28th of August meeting one at which there was alleged treating?—

Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.] We do not say that there was treating at that meeting.

5315. Mr. Giffard.] That meeting was in consequence of the circular that has been put in?—Yes.

5316. And the object of that was the demonstration?—Yes.

5317. Now the demonstration itself, and what it cost, or its accounts, those would not appear in that book that you speak of?—No.

5318. From time to time, I think, it is said that you went about with Sir Richard Glass?—Yes.

5319. And is it a fact that you did?—I did.

5320. How often do you suppose you went about with Sir Richard Glass?—Oh, several times.

5321. You cannot tell how many?—No.

5322. Did Sir Richard Glass himself canvass the voters?—He did.

5323. And did the gentleman who went with him simply introduce the voters to him to be canvassed?—Yes.

5324. I think it has been attributed to you that you had a book, in which you noticed the results; I suppose that is a fact also?—Yes.

5325. Did Sir Richard keep a book of his own as well as yours, or not?—I cannot say.

5326. Now I think it is alleged that on one occasion after you were attending Sir Richard Glass in his canvass, a Mrs. Lucas exhibited some money; let me ask this question, which will get rid of the doubt; did you ever canvass with Sir Richard in Bewdley, or only in Stourport?—Only in Stourport.

5327. I think there was some question about Radford ordering three tons of coal from Paget; were you present at any such transaction?—No.

5328. You have been asked about this man Taylor; now, so far as you know, did your employer, or did you, employ Taylor about the matter of the election at all?—No.

5329. Is Taylor in Birmingham now?—I believe so.

5330. When did you last see Taylor?—I think about Stourport on Monday.

5331. Did you see him about at Mr. Watson's or his clerk's?—No; I heard Mr. Watson—

5332. I must not ask you that; you saw him in Stourport?—Yes.

5333. Mr. Watson is the gentleman who acts for Mr. Lloyd?—I believe he is.

5334. With whom did you see this man Taylor the last time when you saw him?—He was by himself when I last saw him.

5335. Did you see him at any time since the election with Mr. Watson, or any of Mr. Watson's people?—Not that I recollect.

5336. Whereabouts in Stourport was he when you saw him on Monday last?—Walking in the street.

5337. What time of day was that?—About five o'clock.

5338. In the evening?—It may be.

5339. He was not out of the way then at all events?—No.

Re-examined by Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.

5340. Do you know whether there are any other

G. Anderson. other accounts kept of the society besides that cash account that has been put in?—Not to the best of my knowledge.

22 January 1869. 5341. To the best of your knowledge there were no other accounts kept besides this?—No.

[The Witness withdrew.]

Mr. Fitzjames Stephen called the attention of his Lordship on the point of agency to a bill for Mr. Burnish's expenses at the "Wheatsheaf."

Mr. Justice Blackburn observed that this bill only showed that Burnish was staying at the "Wheatsheaf" on business affecting the election.

Mr. Fitzjames Stephen stated that he hoped shortly to be able to produce a witness who could throw light on the question of the disguised person, and asked his Lordship to allow him to interpose that witness when he should arrive; and he stated that with that exception the case for the Petitioners was concluded.

Mr. Giffard submitted that the interposition of this witness ought to be only allowed within a reasonable time.

Mr. Fitzjames Stephen stated that the person in question was five miles off and had been sent for an hour ago.

Mr. Justice Blackburn stated that when Mr. Fitzjames Stephen was able to produce this person he (Mr. Fitzjames Stephen) must make a special application to him, and satisfy him that his evidence would throw light on the matter.

On Mr. Giffard's rising to open the case for the Respondent, Mr. Justice Blackburn, stated that the case which Mr. Giffard had specially to grapple with was that of treating, as connected with Sir Richard Glass's paid agents or their clerks.

Mr. Justice Blackburn inquired whether Mr. Giffard had a recriminatory case against Mr. Lloyd.

Mr. Giffard stated that he was not instructed in any way except upon a scrutiny.

Sir RICHARD ATWOOD GLASS, sworn; Examined by Mr. Poland.

Sir
R. A. Glass. 5342. ARE you the Respondent in this case? —I am.

5343. And in July last year did you come down to Bewdley?—I did.

5344. What was the day that you came down? —I do not remember the exact date.

5345. The 6th or 7th of July?—Somewhere about that time; the early part of July.

5346. Did you come to Kidderminster?—I did.

5347. And did you then drive from Kidderminster to Mr. Shaw's?—I did.

5348. At that time had you determined or not to become a candidate for Bewdley?—I had, subject to seeing some of the gentlemen in the neighbourhood.

5349. Consequent upon their report you intended to stand?—I did.

5350. Whose carriage was it met you at the station at Kidderminster?—Mr. Giles Shaw's.

5351. And on the way from Kidderminster to his house did you pass Mr. Pardoe's?—I did.

5352. Were you at all aware that there was any entertainment to be got up there to meet you on your arrival?—Oh, no.

5353. When you got to the gate we have heard that there were some people who cheered?—Yes, all the way, nearly from the turnpike at Wribbenhall.

5354. When the people cheered you at the gate at Mr. Pardoe's we understand you bowed; you did not get out of the carriage?—I bowed constantly all the way; I do not recollect at that particular spot.

5355. You did not get out of the carriage at Mr. Pardoe's?—No.

5356. You drove on straight to Mr. Shaw's?—Yes.

5357. Whatever the entertainment there consisted of, were you any party to it?—Oh, dear, no; I did not know at that time it was Mr. Pardoe's house.

5358. After you arrived you attended a meeting, we have heard, at the Town Hall?—I did.

5359. And you spoke there?—I did.

5360. And we have heard that a committee was nominated?—There was some committee nominated to which I was no party.

5361. You were at the meeting?—I went there for the purpose of addressing the electors.

5362. Did the persons at that meeting who were named as the committee act for you as a committee afterwards, or not?—Oh, dear, no.

5363. Why was that; what did you do with regard to the committee?—I made up my mind before I left London that if I undertook this contest I should only take it upon my own personal responsibility, assisted by three of the most respectable solicitors I could find in the neighbourhood.

5364. In what way was the authority of the committee determined?—After the result of my address I went to Mr. Pardoe's office, as the agent for the Conservative cause; I had a conversation with him in which I explained to him that I should only undertake this contest in the particular way which I had made up my mind to before I left London, which was that I would see every voter personally, learn from himself his own views, explain my views to him as nearly as I had an opportunity at each voter's house, and with a view of letting every one make up their minds upon which side they thought they ought to vote.

5365. Did the committee ever meet and act for you in the way that committees do generally?—Oh, certainly not.

5366. You never acknowledged them after the meeting at the town hall?—Not as a committee. I may remark with a view of going further in this matter, when these gentlemen met I addressed them at Mr. Pardoe's office, "Gentlemen, some of your names are familiar to me at present, some of you are comparative strangers. I wish you perfectly to understand that I shall be very glad to receive your interest and support at this election, but as regards my canvass, it will be from house to house, and my own affair."

5367. Was there any regular committee-room where the committee met after that?—Oh, dear, no, it was considered dissolved.

5368. Your

Sir
R. A. Glass.
—
22 January
1869.

5368. Your proposition was agreed to?—It was agreed to.

5369. Were your three agents, Mr. Acton Pardoe of Bewdley, Mr. Gardener, and Mr. Crowther of Stourport?—Yes. I may say that in the first instance I had only seen Mr. Pardoe. But I suggested, was there any other solicitor in the place that I could rely on in the event of Mr. Pardoe being called away on other business? The name of Mr. Gardener was then mentioned, and I thought it right to retain him as my agent.

5370. Those three were your paid agents?—Yes.

5371. What was the date of the issuing of your address; do you remember the date?—No, I do not; probably a newspaper, or something else will call my attention to it, or the address itself might.

5372. How long was it after you came down that the address was issued?—I think within 24 hours, almost.

5373. Did you afterwards take a house down here?—No; when I found some difficulty in pursuing a personal canvass I objected to living at hotels, and a gentleman of the name of Craven was going to Scotland, where I believe he has a residence, and he very kindly offered to put his house at my disposal.

5374. You afterwards lived there?—Yes.

5375. And brought down your establishment?—I brought down my establishment.

5376. Had you any other agents but the three gentlemen whose names you have mentioned?—None but those three.

5377. What instructions did you give them?—“Gentlemen, I have employed you for the purposes of this election, and I wish you to understand now, for the first time, and I hope throughout this election, that any legitimate expenses that you consider necessary for my return I am quite prepared to pay; but bear in mind, anything that will risk my election, as a man of the world, first or last (of course the first would be the last), I hope you will not incur the slightest expense for, except for legitimate purposes such as you do know.”

5378. Did you go about canvassing regularly yourself?—I did.

5379. Both here and at Stourport?—Yes.

5380. How many of the electors do you think you saw?—If you will give me my book I will show you; it is rather dilapidated (the book was handed to the Witness). I think I must have seen at Bewdley probably three-fourths. From my ticks in it, and memoranda, I think I must have seen three-fourths, if not more.

5381. You had a register?—I kept this original document, which was a copy of the register of the voters. My agents had a book they called a canvass book, I believe. I merely put down my own private remarks here, as to my opinions of the voters' views.

5382. How many voters did you see at Stourport?—At Stourport I saw comparatively few. I may say that my presence at Stourport was not acceptable to the Stourport people, and I was so hooted and yelled at that I felt it quite hopeless to see any of the people.

5383. How many promises had you before going to the poll; did you reckon any majority?—Sometime before the poll I felt that I had virtually concluded my canvass in my own mind; I find I made at that time a calculation which, if his Lordship wishes, I will give in.

5384. A majority of about how many did you reckon?—I reckoned a majority of 83, taking the worst complexion, putting it in the worst sort of way.

5385. Did you head the poll at Bewdley from the beginning?—I believe so, from the returns I received.

5386. Was there a large majority in your favour at one o'clock?—I think the largest was then.

5387. We have heard you had a majority of 100?—Yes; I heard 125 majority; I do not know what time. I believe in the middle of the day.

5388. As far as you yourself are aware, was any act of bribery, either directly or indirectly, committed by you or your agents?—Oh, dear, no; it is a thing that never entered into my mind.

5389. We have heard of meetings at public-houses where the tap was on and was stopped; you have heard the evidence offered with regard to that?—I heard that evidence.

5390. Did you in any way pay for the articles consumed at those meetings?—Oh, dear, no; I was not aware, till I had heard the evidence, that such a state of things had gone on.

5391. Did you sanction the expenditure in any way?—Not at all; I had no notion of that till I came into court.

5392. Did you know Mr. Burnish at all?—I knew him as Mr. Pardoe's clerk. I knew his name was Burnish, and that he was his clerk.

5393. Did you know that he was in the habit of ordering the beer tap to be on at these meetings, and stopping it after a certain time?—Not the slightest idea of any kind; if I had, I think I should have very soon retired from the contest as far as Mr. Burnish, Mr. Pardoe's clerk, had been concerned.

5394. Did you know a person of the name of William Jackson?—I never heard of the man. I did not know him till I heard his name mentioned in court.

5395. You have heard that he was a plumber and glazier?—Yes, from the evidence.

5396. But you say you did not know him at all as acting in the election?—Not at all.

5397. Amongst the electors had you any difficulty in finding the men at home at their houses when you went to canvass?—Oh, considerable difficulty.

5398. In consequence of that difficulty what did you do?—After calling some four or five times at all hours of the day, I suggested that as there were so many that only came home on Saturday night, if arrangements could be made that I could meet them on any Saturday night, provided it were confined to one or two meetings, I would see them and ask them their views with reference to the election; their wives having told me it was impossible I could see them unless it was on a Saturday night.

5399. Had you any difficulty, amongst others, in seeing Mr. Hemming's servants?—Oh, a great difficulty; Mr. Hemming objected to my canvassing his servants.

5400. Did you on any occasion go to any public-houses in the evening in Bewdley?—I have no recollection of going. Do you mean for the purposes of canvassing people?

5401. Yes?—No; I may, perhaps, say, with reference to that, if I were walking in the street with any one who knew the people, they would

Sir
R. A. Glass.

1869.

draw my attention, and say, "There is John So-and-so, he has just gone into such a house, it will save you time if you can see him"; and I may have gone into the passage.

5402. Do you remember going on one occasion to the "Rising Sun" and the "Waggon and Horses"?—Perfectly well.

5403. What day was that, or what night was that?—I think it would be a Saturday night.

5404. Do you remember what date?—I do not remember the exact date.

5405. Can you say about the time?—I should suppose sometime in October; I should fancy so. I cannot be certain, but I know that it was after I had nearly exhausted my canvass I went there.

5406. Did you go to the "Rising Sun" and the "Waggon and Horses" both on the same night?—On the same night.

5407. And when you went there what did you do?—When I went there I went to a private room.

5408. Which did you go to first?—The upper house; I do not know the signs of these houses.

5409. That is the "Rising Sun," I believe?—I believe it is.

5410. You went there first, and you went into a private room?—Yes.

5411. And what did you do there?—I saw one or two voters, who, I was given to understand, were there by appointment to see me.

5412. Did you canvass them?—I canvassed them in this private room.

5413. Do you remember at all who they were there?—I cannot say from memory, but I believe they were some of Mr. Hemming's dependents, and one or two of Mr. Sturge's, I fancy. I cannot recollect their names, but my impression is, that they were men of that class.

5414. Did you have anything to drink at the "Rising Sun"?—I may have had a bottle of soda-water in it which I generally take at that time, perhaps with a little sherry or brandy in it.

5415. When you were on that occasion there, did you sanction the expenditure of any money in providing drink for the voters?—Oh, dear, no.

5416. You say you afterwards went to the "Waggon and Horses"?—After I had seen the people that were there, as I understand, by appointment, I walked down to the next house which I believe was the "Waggon and Horses."

5417. What did you do there?—Precisely the same thing occurred.

5418. And did you at that house sanction the expenditure of any money in treating any voters there?—Oh, no; certainly not.

5419. You say both these places you went to on the one night; do you know whether you went to these places on any other night?—Not that I am aware of, unless it might have been as I have told you before, that I was out late. I might have gone in for half a bottle of soda-water, or anything of that sort; nothing more. I found it was rather fatiguing process walking about the place.

5420. Can you remember how many times you went to these houses; are you able to say?—I am not aware of going in to either, except I may by accident in passing. If I felt fatigued, I might have gone in, but I have no recollection of going in to any house in particular for that purpose. I might have gone in to any house in Bewdley, for all I know, during those four months, but I am not aware of going in except for a little refreshment of that sort.

5421. Did Jackson on any occasion in your presence give some rum and water to any voter, or any person, at either of these houses?—Not to my knowledge.

5422. You heard the evidence with regard to what Jackson did about the rum and water; is it, so far as you are aware, true or untrue?—Oh, untrue, so far as I am personally concerned. I never thought or dreamt of such a thing. I should have thought it very strange if he had done such a thing in my presence.

5423. You have been in court all the time this case has been going on?—With the exception of one morning, I think, when I was 10 minutes late. I think only one witness had been examined; with the exception of that I have been in court the whole time.

5424. I will take you through one or two matters; did you hear the evidence of Stephen Fort and his wife?—Yes.

5425. Is that evidence so far as it affects yourself true or untrue?—As regards some portions of it, it is perfectly true; as regards other portions of it it is totally false.

5426. Was anything said by Fort about money?—The observation he made to me about money was this.

5427. You canvassed him?—I canvassed him and he got talking to me about Luther and Cranmer, and other people. I said, "If you have any question to ask me, I am here to answer it. I only want to know whether you are going to vote for me, or Mr. Lloyd." He began to tell me some rigmarole story about going into the country.

5428. Was Radford or Rogers present?—Radford was there, I think; my impression is, that Mr. Rogers had left just before; he went over to his mother's, I think; he had been with me before, but I do not think he was in the room at the time this man was there; in fact, I am sure he was not.

5429. Where was this you saw him?—In the office of my agent, Mr. Crowther, or rather in an upper room which seemed to be used.

5430. At the son of old Mr. Crowther's?—Yes; a large room which appeared to have been used as a court.

5431. When he spoke about money to you did you say in reply that you could have nothing to do with that, but that Mr. Rogers and Mr. Radford would make it all right?—Certainly not.

5432. Did you make use of any expression of that kind at all?—Nothing of the kind.

5433. Did you make any intimation whatever to him that Mr. Radford and Mr. Rogers would give him money?—Nothing of the kind.

5434. Was Taylor an agent of yours in any way?—Not at all. I did not know the man.

5435. As far as you are concerned, did you give any authority for a half-sovereign being given to Fort in any way, or any money of any kind?—Nothing of the kind.

5436. Did you canvass on one occasion at Mr. Price's yard?—In Bewdley?

5437. Yes?—You mean the tanner's?

5438. Yes?—No, not in the yard. I canvassed the men; some few men that were standing there, I think, outside at their dinner-hour. I made a point of never going into any of the works. I did not consider it fair to the men.

5439. Did you on that occasion give anything to the men to drink, or sanction anything being given?—No.

5440. Or

5440. Or were you aware that any was given to them?—No.

5441. Did you know a Mrs. Lucas?—Yes.

5442. Did you go to her house at any time?—I have seen her constantly at the door. I think I went in once to ask Lucas for his vote, or something of that sort.

5443. Did you either give or sanction a half-sovereign being paid to Mrs. Lucas?—No. With regard to that half-sovereign to Mrs. Lucas, have you fixed any time as to that, because there is a circumstance in the case which may be named: I think it was the first or second day I canvassed, or went up Wyre Hill; would that be the time that you allude to?

5444. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] Just state the circumstance you allude to now?—The first day I went up that hill, I was surrounded by a number of old women, who, many of them, I should think, were 70 or 80 years old, who came round me and said that they were widows, and so on, and would I give them a cup of tea. I said to Pardoe, my agent, who was with me, "How am I to get rid of these people; are they voters; would it be right or wrong that I should give these old people any tea?" Pardoe's reply was, "I think the Act of Parliament will not prevent you from giving these old people anything moderate, like a cup of tea, if they ask you." Upon which I said, "But how am I to understand whether these are people who are voters, or really people such as they represent themselves; old widows who are receiving relief and want a cup of tea." Upon which Mr. Pardoe said, "The only way to do it is, if you think of giving these old people anything, I should give it to some one here who knows them." I believe there was something given on that occasion; whether I gave it to Mr. Pardoe, I do not exactly recollect; but I said, "We must get rid of these people in some way and give some tea." Whether Mrs. Lucas was the party that I gave it to on that occasion I do not know; that is the only occasion of my doing what I have since found was a stupid act.

5445. How much did you give?—It might be 10s.

5446. Was it to Mrs. Lucas?—I do not know whether it was to Mrs. Lucas.

5447. Is that the only time that you personally gave any money when you were engaged on the election?—I do not say that. I think about the same time when I was coming; in fact, the day after I arrived, there were some three or four of these old ladies waiting at Mr. Giles Shaw's house, and they asked me the same question about this tea. I said to Mr. Shaw, "Who are these people?" and he said, "Oh, they are some of the poor old people of Bewdley, who have come to see you, I suppose." I said, "Well, do you know them to be what they represent themselves?" "Oh," he said, "Mrs. Shaw is in the habit of relieving them." I said, "Well, I suppose in that case I may give them a few shillings." I happened to have a few shillings in my pocket, and I said, "There, do not bother; go away." That was the morning I arrived, I think; after which, if I may go on to explain, I had a letter from Miss Havergill, informing me that my liberality with respect to tea, she found out had been spent in something else, and hoped I would not relieve anyone in the street; and from that time I have not done so.

9.

5448. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] The lady who was called here, you mean?—Yes.

5449. Mr. Poland.] Did you ever say that you had 4,000 l. to spend among the poor of Bewdley?—No.

5450. That was attributed to you; you never made any such statement?—Oh, dear, no.

5451. Did you hear any evidence to-day with reference to Mr. Pardoe and 5s.?—Do you mean the "Fox" affair?

5452. Yes; Sophia Griffin?—Yes.

5453. Was there any person with Mr. Pardoe?—I went into the "Fox." I believe Mr. Pardoe was with me, as he always was. I always had either Mr. Pardoe or Mr. Gardener, or one of my solicitors with me.

5454. Was anything said in your presence by Osman Pountney: "Here, Mr. Pardoe, you must have something here"; and did Mr. Pardoe say in your presence, "I have given her 5s."?—Not in my hearing, certainly.

5455. You have heard the evidence; did anything of the kind happen, to your knowledge?—Nothing of the kind, to my knowledge.

5456. Was anything said about Gillam, of the "Vine," that he had had 10s. left with him?—Nothing of the kind.

5457. Gillam said, they had left 10s. with his father?—Nothing of the kind.

5458. Was there anything said in your presence that there had been a do at the other house, and not at the "Fox"?—Yes.

5459. What was it that was said about that?—The landlord, Griffin, upon my asking him whether he had made up his mind as to which way he was going to vote, stated, "How can you expect me to vote for you, Sir Richard, when none of your side use my house?" Upon which I said, "I can have nothing to do with that. I do not dictate. Of course, where my friends choose to meet, I have no control over them; they meet and do as they please; I have nothing to do with it."

5460. Was any observation made in your hearing that the last should be the best?—No; I never heard any such observation.

5461. Did anything of that kind take place at that house?—Nothing whatever.

Cross-examined by Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.

5462. May I ask by whom you were introduced to the borough of Bewdley?—By my late partner's son; he was the first who mentioned it to me, Mr. Elliot, now member for North.Durham.

5463. I am speaking rather of the friends whom you first applied to in the town of Bewdley or Stourport itself?—I did not apply to friends in either.

5464. I mean to whom did you first address yourself; you must have had some one to introduce you to the voters?—My present agent, Mr. Pardoe.

5465. You used, we have heard, to canvass regularly in company with Mr. Rogers?—Mr. Rogers sometimes; it all depended upon whether he was at liberty.

5466. When he was at liberty you canvassed with him?—He came round with me, introducing me to the people.

5467. And Mr. Radford?—Mr. Radford, sometimes.

5468. And Mr. Herbert Pardoe?—He came round with his father and had a book.

Sir
R. A. Glass.

 1869.

5469. He and his father and you used to be together?—His father and I were together generally; that is to say, Mr. Herbert Pardoe acted as his father's clerk; he never spoke on any matter connected with me; all my observations in canvassing were addressed to the father.

5470. And Mr. Gardener?—And Mr. Gardener.

5471. And Mr. Bury?—Mr. Bury occasionally went with me.

5472. And Mr. Boucher?—In fact, they all went with me, all the names you have mentioned, from time to time, and a hundred more. When I was in the street they used to congregate, and I did not know sometimes who they were.

5473. Generally speaking, when you were going about the street canvassing, you had a certain number of other persons accompanying you?—Always.

5474. With respect to this committee that was formed; you were present at the meeting?—I addressed the electors for the first time.

5475. And you, of course, heard the resolution that was moved and carried with regard to the formation of the committee?—That was at the window, I think, or something of that sort. I heard that there was a committee appointed.

5476. And a report of the proceedings, which was afterwards circulated?—It appeared in the newspapers, I believe, a report of what took place at that meeting; it was an open-air sort of meeting. I addressed the people.

5477. And you moved a vote of thanks to the mayor?—I moved a vote of thanks to the mayor.

5478. Did you in any way dissent from the proposal that a committee should be formed for the purpose of conducting your election in the words of the resolution?—I did not read the resolution; I never intended personally to do anything of the sort.

5479. Whatever your intentions were, you did not at any time express your intentions to the public?—No; to tell the truth, I was thinking of something else.

5480. However that may have been, the effect of it was, that this resolution was put and carried in your presence, and you did not object to it?—Not at that time, certainly; but at that time I did not attach much importance to it.

5481. Were placards afterwards posted about the town specifying the names of the committee?—Not to my knowledge.

5482. I think I can refresh your memory?—I should hardly think they were, from my protesting to my friends; I really did not know these gentlemen at that time.

5483. There was a print, a newspaper report of this meeting, containing this resolution; was that the print circulated in and about the town (handing a paper to the Witness)?—Very likely; it was, I should think.

5484. Did you ever see that (handing a handbill to the Witness)?—Yes, this I saw in London; this was what I saw when I met Mr. Pardoe.

5485. And that was placarded about the town before your arrival?—In fact, I had not made up my mind to stand for the place; but I had seen Mr. Pardoe; I saw no one but Mr. Pardoe and a gentleman who lives in the neighbourhood here.

5486. That placard was posted about in anticipation of your arrival?—I do not know that; I presume it was, from the appearance of it; of course, it was before I knew Bewdley, or anything about it.

5487. Then there was a meeting at the Town Hall, at which that resolution was carried; and then, after that, that print or the report was circulated in the town and neighbourhood?—I do not know when that was circulated; I do not know of my own knowledge that it was circulated, but I presume it was.

5488. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] You arrived on July the 6th?—Yes, I believe so.

5489. Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.] As for that placard being published by you, if you look at that item in your accounts, it refers to that (handing the accounts to the Witness)?—"July 4th." I do not know; have I paid that?

5490. Yes?—Then I was not aware of it; I am very glad you have drawn my attention to it.

5491. Do I understand you that you never at any time during your canvass had your attention in any way called to the fact that a great deal of drinking was going on at the public-houses?—Certainly not; of course, I need not tell his Lordship that I saw it at all hours of the day, from the time I arrived to the time I left.

5492. You saw it?—I saw people at public-houses.

5493. Did you see large numbers of people, for instance, at this "Rising Sun," or "Waggon and Horses," where you were?—When I say "large numbers," not so many there, I think; the only place that I saw, where I saw a large number, was at Mrs. Hinton's, I think, in Wribbenhall.

5494. What was the name of that place?—I do not know the sign of the house; it is Mrs. Hinton's; I think that was the only time I ever was at one of these meetings in public-houses.

5495. I thought I understood you to say just now that you were only at the "Waggon and Horses" and the "Rising Sun," and nowhere else?—Oh, yes, Mrs. Hinton's.

5496. You were at Mrs. Hinton's?—Yes; but I do not know the name of the sign.

5497. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] Do you mean the "Coach and Horses," Wribbenhall?—Yes, I think that is the name of the house.

5498. Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.] You told me just now that you saw a great deal of drinking going on in the town as you went about?—What I mean by a great deal of drinking is, that there was not a public-house I went into where there were not half-a-dozen or eight men drinking.

5499. Was there a degree of drinking in the town that attracted your attention?—No; beyond this, that I never can understand how it is that men can sit in public-houses as they do in Bewdley, and I am sorry to find them doing so; it is an unfortunate thing that the lower orders do so.

5500. Do you mean merely to make a general remark, that it is an unfortunate thing that people should sit in public-houses, or a special thing in Bewdley?—There was nothing remarkable except about that house of Mrs. Hinton's.

5501. What did you notice there in particular?—I noticed there that there was a room full of people, and they appeared to be having a sort of meeting.

5502. Did you address them at all?—I addressed them at that time; that is the only house I went to in that way; I set my face against these speechifyings at public-houses; I did not think it was a proper thing, and I never at any time time addressed the electors at any public-house except on this occasion, which was a special one, and under special circumstances.

5503. What were the special circumstances under which you addressed the people on this occasion?—The special circumstances were these: I went to Mrs. Hinton's at the request of many of the people in the same way as I visited the "Waggon and Horses" towards the latter end of the canvass, when people could only be got together at a certain time; I saw the people who were appointed to meet me upstairs in a private room and canvassed them as I did at the "Waggon and Horses" and the other house. While I was leaving, one of my friends (I do not know who it was, whether Mr. Gardener or any one else) said to me, "Sir Richard, the people of Bewdley have a notion that you cannot speak." I said, "Indeed, I am sorry for that; I think I can if there is any necessity, but I have a very great objection to speaking in public-houses, and if people want me to speak it will be only on one condition, and that condition will be, that if they will range themselves round the room, or in such a way that they can listen to me, I have no objection to say a few words.

5504. And you accordingly did?—They did; they were all standing up round the room: I entered the room after I had finished the canvass; I addressed them very likely for a quarter of an hour.

5505. You say it had been arranged that you were to meet some people you could not otherwise meet at these three places you have mentioned?—Yes.

5506. Will you tell me how that arrangement was made; who made the arrangement?—I do not know at all.

5507. When you say an arrangement, did you leave word at the men's houses with their wives, or did you ask Mr. Pardoe to make an arrangement?—No.

5508. Give me some notion of what you mean by its being arranged?—In this way: I was told after visiting these people's houses four or five times —

5509. May I ask by whom you were told?—I had so many advisers it is impossible to say who it was told me; they said, "Sir Richard, you must give up one evening if you possibly can to Catchem's End, and one evening to Wribben-hall." I said, "Well, I do not like leaving my house in the evening when I go in, but if it is necessary I will"; and on those two occasions I had my carriage out after dinner and drove there by appointment.

5510. With whom did you make the appointment?—Probably with my agent; he would be the man that I should convey it to.

5511. Who would convey it to the public-house?—That I do not know at all.

5512. Then you went to the public-house and found a large number of persons, and what you have informed us of took place?—Yes.

5513. There is an item in your account of election expenses, a very large item for watchers, 209*l.*?—There is; an item that very much astonished me, I assure you.

Mr. Giffard.] It is "watchers, messengers, &c."

5514. Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.] I think in the detailed statement there are about three bills for messengers, making 6*l.* or 8*l.* between them; do you know how many watchers were employed?—I have not the slightest idea.

5515. Do you know who employed the watchers?—I have not the slightest idea.

5516. Do you know what the use of the watchers was, when they were employed?—I have learnt it subsequently; I wanted to know what this watching meant, and they said you are not aware perhaps that it has been a custom here on both sides to watch one another's voters.

5517. May I ask you who told you this; some of these many advisers?—I really cannot identify any particular one; it is such a laughable thing, and I really could not understand what it meant. "If you had been here in olden time you would have known more about it," they said. I found the custom was to take people away and hide them, and each side kept people out night and day to watch them.

5518. I will ask you straightforwardly, had you any idea at all that there were attempts made on Mr. Lloyd's side to take voters away from you?—I am not aware of the least attempt on either side; certainly we had no intention of the sort.

5519. You have no idea who these watchers were?—I had no information who those watchers were; I saw them.

5520. How many did you see?—I saw two or three at the top of a fire in an avenue leading down from Mr. Essington's; I said, "What are those men doing there at the fire?" "Oh, they are watchers there." That was the first I heard of it, and knew of it.

5521. Then of course you do not know now who put the watchers on?—I have not the slightest idea.

5522. You introduced an original memorandum book of your own just now; allow me to look at it one moment. (The Witness handed it to Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.) You see it is one that was published on the 1st of November?—So far as I was concerned I would not deal with anything except the authorised register. When I got this book I went through this with Mr. Pardoe's book, who before that had taken down observations as to when I could see people, and as I called on them I made up my mind what observation I wanted inserted by Mr. Pardoe, that I might keep alive the various answers, and so on, I received from the different voters, to prevent my calling on them again as much as possible. When I got that book I then went through it, and you will see these marks, ticks, and so on. That I transcribed from an earlier book with the exception that I made these marks, rather putting my own construction on them, because I did not take everything for granted.

5523. Of course you did not take for granted everything that everybody said to you?—No, I should not have troubled myself with a personal canvass if I had.

5524. You have heard in the course of the evidence a good deal about William Jackson?—Yes.

5525. Do you tell me you do not know him?—I did not know him by name, and after the examination I had him fetched, to know who he was.

5526. Have you seen him since?—I have seen him since.

5527. Was he a man who was in the habit of forming one of your party?—No; I never saw him to my knowledge except one night up at the

Sir

"Waggon and Horses"; I did not recognize him, except that when I saw him I had some recollection that he was one of the men about there.

5528. Did you see him canvass Goodwin?—No.

5529. Do you remember canvassing Goodwin yourself on that occasion?—Yes, I think I did; I must confess I cannot recollect people's faces though they gave me the credit of it; he was so altered I should not have known him; they were principally labourers in Mr. Sturge's and Mr. Hemming's employ.

5530. You heard Holder's evidence about the "Wheatsheaf"; he was the one who said he went up with you into a room in the "Wheatsheaf," and had some brandy and soda water?—Is he a stout man?

5531. Rather; an oldish man, I think?—That astonished me very much; I had not the slightest recollection of it; but I think the explanation that is to be given is this: one night I had been canvassing very late, and not being very strong, walking up and down these hills, I felt very much fatigued, and, as my custom was, the "Wheatsheaf" being a house that I occasionally lunched in before I went home, I generally took a bottle of soda water and sherry alone, or brandy in it, as the case may be—

5532. And he may have come in?—He may have come in.

5533. And had soda water and brandy also?—Not to my knowledge; he may have had it; there were many people who came in.

5534. What he described was that in coming to the room there was soda water and brandy on the table, and that he took a bottle of soda water with some brandy in it, in the course of conversation, and went away. That might have been so?—That might have been so without my knowing.

5535. Hardly without your knowledge?—Certainly.

5536. You were sitting in the room?—Not sitting; I was standing in the way I explained to you. Having returned from my evening's canvass, while my coachman was putting my horses to, I would go into the house and take a bottle of soda water; it was a public room.

5537. I think the "Wheatsheaf" was the house to which you principally went?—Not principally.

5538. Generally?—When I first came here I was anxious to get the most comfortable house I could get. At that time Mr. Hemming had secured the "George," and I got the second best house.

5539. You put up there?—I did not put up there; my horses put up there.

5540. You secured the "Wheatsheaf"?—I secured it, or rather I used it as my house.

5541. You said that Miss Havergill mentioned to you that the 10s. you gave to Mrs. Lucas (if it was Mrs. Lucas) had been applied in a way she did not approve of?—Yes.

5542. Do you know Mr. Giles Shaw?—Yes; I was staying with him for some time.

5543. And Mr. Giles Shaw was the chairman of this committee?—Well, he was one of the gentlemen in the neighbourhood. I staid with Mr. Shaw, and I looked upon him as one of the leaders of the Conservative party here.

5544. Did not Mr. Shaw ever tell you what Miss Havergill had told him about the drinking at the "Wheatsheaf"?—Never to my knowledge.

5545. Can you speak with confidence to that?—Certainly, he never alluded to any drinking at the "Wheatsheaf."

5546. It never came to your knowledge?—No; what Miss Havergill alluded to is sometime ago; I had no knowledge of this until I heard the evidence in court.

5547. Then Mr. Shaw did not communicate the matter to you?—No, not to my knowledge; certainly, if he did, it would be something I should not have remembered. It never operated on my mind except in connection with the affair on Wyre-hill.

5548. Surely, if Mr. Shaw had mentioned such a fact to you you would have remembered it?—Certainly not, as regards anything connected with my house, the "Wheatsheaf," if that is what you mean.

5549. Miss Havergill has told us that she spoke to Mr. Pardoe, and said that his father was responsible for that she supposed, and that she the next day (in general terms) told her brother-in-law about that; did her brother-in-law tell you?—No, certainly not.

5550. You heard nothing about that?—No, nothing about that; the only thing I recollect was with reference to my first entry in the town, when I foolishly gave these old people something.

5551. When you gave them half-a-sovereign?—Yes.

5552. Did you have two communications with Miss Havergill about people drinking, or only one?—Only one that I am aware of.

5553. Was not that something about Wyre-hill?—I think it was.

5554. Was not Miss Havergill's communication that people who had been drinking at Wyre-hill, women, afterwards went down to the "Wheatsheaf" and drank there?—I do not know; I have no idea.

5555. When was it that this took place; can you give us about the time?—It was early in the day. Miss Havergill's communication to me was that she was afraid I was deceived by these women who she had known had asked me to relieve them, by giving them tea, and that she had found out that my contribution, or whatever I had given them, had been misapplied, and hoped that in the future I would give nothing in charity.

5556. But where does this Lucas live; he lives in Welch Gate, I think, Edward Lucas?—I hardly know.

5557. Edward Lucas, I am instructed, lives at Welch Gate?—I do not know the names of the streets; I merely give that as an explanation of what might be.

5558. Then you will not say that you did not give the money to Mrs. Lucas?—I have no recollection of that.

5559. Then you may have done so?—If I did I have no recollection of doing anything of the sort.

5560. As I understand, at any rate, you gave half-a-sovereign to some women?—No, I think you misunderstood me; I said I wanted to get rid of some of these old people. I turned round to Mr. Pardoe and said, "Is there any way of getting rid of these old people, they are all clamouring for tea; do you know them?" "Yes, they are all Bewdley women." "Then get rid of them in some way, but do not do anything that may prejudice us."

5561. The

Sir
R. A. Glass.
—
1869.

5561. The end of it was that you or Pardoe gave 10*s.*?—What I meant to convey to them was, that if 10*s.* could be properly applied amongst these women, having regard to my position, my object in employing these gentlemen was, that I might not do some silly stupid act that might be misconstrued.

5562. The short of it was, that some people got 10*s.* to distribute?—To distribute amongst these people in the way of charity.

5563. That person, for all that you know, may have been Mrs. Lucas?—May have been Mrs. Lucas, or may have been some one else.

5564. Then, with regard to the Wyre-hill women; was that the only occasion on which you gave money for purposes of that kind?—Yes, there was only one occasion.

5565. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] A letter written in July could have no reference to what occurred in November?—There is one other case which I allude to. It was a case when I was canvassing a man who had met with an accident. I went to his house, and the poor fellow was lying almost in a dying state; he had just been brought in with his leg broken, his arm or leg, and his wife was sitting on a chair nursing a child with fever, or something of that character; she had another by her side with St. Vitus's dance, and—

Mr. Justice Blackburn.] It is unnecessary to explain that, as it is not relied on.

5566-7. Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.] You gave the men half-a-sovereign, I suppose?—I did not give the men half-a-sovereign; I wish you to understand that.

5568. To whom did you give that?—I gave it to the doctor to relieve him in the event of his requiring it.

5569. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] That was more prudent, but it comes to the same thing?—I gave it upon those grounds.

5570. Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.] You are quite sure, as I understand you, that Miss Havergill's letter was early in the day?—It was very early in the day.

5571. Not so late as November?—Oh, certainly not.

5572. Are you a member, or an honorary member of the Conservative Association at Stourport?—No.

5573. Or Bewdley?—No. I have given a donation to the Bewdley Institution.

5574. What donation did you give?—I gave a donation of 10*l.* to it.

5575. To which of them?—To Bewdley.

5576. Did you give any donation to Stourport?—No.

5577. When was the donation of 10*l.* to the Bewdley Association?—Some time; I do not recollect the date; but I came down here, and I went to the rooms and saw the nature of the institution, and I said, "I quite approve of this; if we could get these meetings more frequently, men would understand a little more than they do at present, and I saw the style of thing that was there; books and newspapers, and other things, and a comfortable room.

5578. About when was this?—That would be, I should think, when I came back from Scotland some time in September.

5579. Are your election expenses paid?—I do not know. I have paid my agents sums on account; they have not rendered me any account yet.

9.

5580. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] You have not yet finally settled with them?—No.

5581. Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.] May I ask what sums on account you have paid on account altogether?—I have paid Mr. Crowther two sums of 300*l.*, and Mr. Pardoe 500*l.*; that is all.

5582. And you say those were on account?—All on account.

5583. Are you aware of any further expenses?—I am not at all aware of any more; in fact, I considered those expenses were rather large, considering.

5584. You know Mr. Pardoe's final account delivered as the election account, amounts to 759*l.* 5*s.*, and you have paid 1,100*l.* already on account. That makes 341*l.* more than there is any account rendered of to the public?—I hope I shall get it back again. There are three attorneys, remember.

5585. When did you pay these sums, may I ask?—I have not the dates.

5586. Then were they paid before the election, or since the election?—£.600, I think, before, and 500*l.* since; but I had no application in writing from Mr. Pardoe. I had from Mr. Crowther; those are the letters with my letter enclosing (handing them to Mr. Fitzjames Stephen); on the 26th of August I paid one sum.

Mr. Giffard stated that his Lordship would see from the letters that expenses of registration were included.

5587. Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.] Then you have not got the final statement yet from your agent?—No, I have had no account from him at all; and I had not seen these accounts until you showed them to me.

5588. Then your agents, in fact, can explain that matter better than you?—I know nothing of it at all.

5589. I do not suggest that it is so, but I ask you do you know or have you any reason to believe that there were any other payments paid by persons on your account in regard of this election?—Not that I am aware of.

5590. Have you personally received any bills respecting the election?—No.

5591. None?—None.

5592. You do not know in fact; they would be sent to your agent?—I have not the slightest knowledge of it.

Re-examined by Mr. Giffard.

5593. You were a novice, I believe, as a candidate for a constituency, or you would not have paid that 10*s.*?—No doubt I would have known.

5594. I do not know whether you remember, in the month of July or August, your attention being called to the settling of the register as being important?—Oh, very important.

5595. Do you know how many persons were employed in looking up who were or were not favourable persons to put on the register?—I have no idea. I merely drew my agent's attention to it on advice that the register was a thing that he must look after, and I found here that, in fact, there was no register. Nothing was handed to me as correct until the revising barrister had been.

5596. Do you know how many voters were put upon the register?—No, I never dealt with that. I had conversations, but I said I cannot deal with that till I see the revised list.

N 4

5597. When

Sir
R. A. Glass. 5597. When was your canvassing principally conducted; in the day time or night?—In the day time.

22 January 1869. 5598. After your day's work at canvassing, where did you go, as a rule?—Home.

5599. As a rule, did you stay there in the evening?—Yes, at home; Lady Glass was with me at my establishment.

5600. When you were out at Bewdley or Stourport in the evening, was that exceptional?—Yes, to meet certain voters. Their wives told me they were out, and if I thought it was important I went out to see them.

5601. How many times do you think you were out in either Stourport or Bewdley at night, during the whole time of your canvass?—It might have been a dozen times altogether. It was much cooler than in the day, and I much preferred taking this work in the evening.

5602. I want you to tell me the maximum number of times you were either in Bewdley or Stourport at night?—I should think a dozen times; it might be more; it was not my general practice.

5603. How often were you at public-houses at night?—Oh, very rarely.

5604. Out of that dozen times do you suppose you were half-a-dozen times at public-houses?—Oh, dear, no; and then, as I tell you, I may have gone in for a bottle of soda-water, or something of that kind, when I was feeling fatigued.

5605. As I understand it, Mrs. Hinton's was the only occasion when you attended anything in the nature of a meeting?—Yes.

[The Witness withdrew.]

Mr. THOMAS RADFORD, sworn; Examined by Mr. Giffard.

Mr.
T. Radford. 5606. I BELIEVE you are a carpet manufacturer, at Kidderminster?—Yes.

5607. But you live at Stourport?—Yes.

5608. Upon the occasion of Sir Richard Glass coming here to address the electors, did you agree to support him?—Yes.

5609. And you did support him, I believe, all through the election, and finally voted for him?—Yes.

5610. A man of the name of Foit has been examined here. Did you hear his examination?—I did.

5611. I will not take you through the earlier interview with yourself, because I think you and he are agreed about it; but on the second occasion, at Mr. Crowther's office, is it true that in your presence Sir Richard Glass told him that though he could not do anything himself, it would be made all right by either you or Mr. Rogers, or words to that effect?—Certainly not.

5612. Of course, you will understand me as asking not for particular words, but whether anything to that substance and effect passed?—Nothing of the kind.

5613. Do you know a man who has been called of the name of Benjamin Ainsworth?—Yes.

5614. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] I wish to ask not merely was there nothing of the sort said by Sir Richard, but was there anything of the sort said by yourself, or, to your knowledge, by Mr. Rogers?—Mr. Rogers was not present.

5615. Was nothing of the sort said by you?—Not a syllable.

5616. Mr. Giffard.] Mr. Rogers was not there, and you did not say anything to that effect?—Certainly not.

5617. This man named Benjamin Ainsworth, a blacksmith, has been called?—Yes.

5618. Is it true that in any words (I do not care about the particular words) you promised him a month's work if he would vote for Sir Richard Glass?—Certainly not.

5619. Or anything to that purport or effect?—I did not canvass his vote even upon that occasion.

5620. Just explain what did happen?—Mr. Rogers, Mr. Gardener, and myself had called upon him to know if we could bring down Sir Richard Glass to see him for his vote; and Mr. Rogers went in with Mr. Gardener; I stood on one side (it was a very small house); they had some little conversation respecting the vote. In the course of conversation he said he had been out of work a long time, which I very well knew; but at that time I had an impression that Mr. Baldwin had employed him; and after some conversation which Mr. Rogers and Mr. Gardener had had with him respecting his vote, as to whether he would sanction Sir Richard Glass coming to get his vote confirmed, he said he had not made up his mind, and he would consider about it. I did not myself speak to him upon the subject of his vote; but, as we were leaving, I said, "Ainsworth, if you really want two or three weeks' work, we have been putting up some new sheds, and if you like you can come and have three weeks' work upon the gas fittings. You can come in the morning if it is of any service to you." He told me that Mr. Baldwin had not given him any employment, and he told me that he would come in the morning.

5621. Did you in any way connect that with his voting either the one way or the other?—That was as we were leaving.

5622. Just answer my question; yes or no?—Certainly not.

Cross-examined by Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.

5623. When was this when you talked about the three weeks' work; can you give me the date about?—It was about 10 days previous to the election; 10 or 12 days; I could not name the date.

5624. That would be early in November?—Yes, I know. I say early in November, because Sir Richard Glass was anxious to close his books definitely to know the exact number of voters he had promises from.

5625. You on that occasion had not asked him for his vote, you say?—No.

5626. But Mr. Rogers and Mr. Gardener had been asking him?—I think they had been speaking to him.

5627. They had been speaking to him about his vote?—Yes.

5628. And you had gone with them?—Yes.

5629. You had all three gone together in order to canvass him, I suppose?—Yes; we had gone to see him respecting his vote.

5630. Sir Richard Glass had not made up his books at that time?—No. Some of the voters were were not settled; it was the same day we saw Fort.

5631. You and Mr. Rogers and Mr. Gardener went?—Yes.

5632. Did you go to see any other people about votes that day?—I really could not say; I forget at the moment.

5633. You and Mr. Rogers and Mr. Gardener were out together, you know, upon that occasion, and you were canvassing Ainsworth?—Yes.

5634. Did you canvass anybody else that day?—I did not canvass Ainsworth myself.

5635. You did not personally, but you three went to his house to canvass him; did you canvass anybody else?—This was late at night.

5636. Did you canvass anybody else that day?—I could not say which day it was; the same evening, I do not recollect calling upon anybody else; seeing the voters.

5637. You three were calling upon voters, together, that evening?—Seeing them.

5638. If you called upon them you saw them, I suppose?—No; we did not always.

5639. At all events, you three were out together canvassing that evening?—Yes.

5640. I think you told me you had seen Ainsworth before?—He worked for me some eight or nine weeks previously.

5641. Had you spoken to him about his vote before?—I do not know that I had.

5642. Will you speak positively about that?—I do not know for certain, but I have very little spare time at night; for my business is in Kidderminster, and I do not get home till late.

5643. You will not be sure whether you had spoken to him about his vote before or not?—No; I really could not.

5644. Do you know whether Mr. Rogers had?—I have not the least idea.

5645. Did Mr. Rogers say to him several times, "May I put down your name?" or anything of that sort?—I do not recollect the remark at all: the room was so small that I really was not in it. I was just in the doorway only.

5646. How long were you there altogether; the party, I mean?—Three minutes, I should think; or four minutes, perhaps.

5647. Do you know a man named Taylor?—Yes, John Taylor.

5648. Have you seen John Taylor preside at meetings; take the chair?—No, not that I am aware of.

5649. Do you know a body called the Working Men's Committee?—I know a body called the Working Men's Conservative Association Committee.

5650. Was Taylor chairman of that?—Yes.

5651. Have you been present at the meetings of that committee?—Not at the committee; at the general meetings of the association I have been present.

5652. Not at the meetings of the committee?—No, I do not believe I have attended one. That committee was composed of working men only; that is to say, the members who were of the upper classes were only honorary members.

5653. You were one of the honorary members?—Yes.

5654. Have you seen Mr. Taylor canvassing?—No.

5655. He never went with you when you canvassed?—Certainly not.

5656. Was there supper at your house one night with a quantity of voters?—Yes.

5657. How was that; what voters were there?—I don't know; there were five or six there, but that was before Sir Richard Glass came down.

5658. What time was it?—I believe it was on the 3rd of July.

5659. That was only two days before he came down?—I had not heard Sir Richard Glass's name then at all.

5660. Who were the people there?—I really forget who they were.

5661. Think?—I could not, really; it was a mere passing event of the moment.

5662. On what occasion was that supper given?—The object was to see and get information as to what spirit there was really in existence in the carpet manufacturers' sheds; the Conservative element.

5663. You wanted to test the Conservative element?—Yes.

5664. So you gave them a supper?—I invited them to come to my house; I think four or five; I do not know who they were.

5665. Several Conservatives, and you do not know who they were?—I really cannot say now who they were.

5666. Do you know the men in Mr. Danks's employment?—I cannot say that I know one.

5667. You knew that he had men in his employment?—I only reside at Stourport, and, of course, during the whole of the day I am absent.

5668. You knew that he had men in his employment who were voters?—Yes.

5669. Did you know that many of these voters would be absent, in the course of business, at Bristol and Gloucester and elsewhere?—I did not.

5670. Do you know a man named Rowley?—Yes, he is a workman for Mr. Rogers; I presume you mean William Rowley.

5671. Yes, I mean William Rowley; did you have anything to do with Rowley going to Bristol?—Certainly not.

5672. You knew nothing about it?—Not a syllable.

5673. Nor about men being brought up from Bristol?—Certainly not.

Re-examined by Mr. Giffard.

5674. There is a man named William Paget, of the "Red Cow," at Stourport, who has been called here, and he says that you ordered three tons, I think, of coals of him; is that the fact or not?—It is the fact.

5675. It is a fact that you did?—Yes, under these circumstances: Sir Richard Glass and Mr. Gardener were out canvassing, and I had not been canvassing with them, but I was anxious to find them, if I could, to join them, and I followed them from place to place; thinking they would be likely to go to Paget's, as I was passing the yard I looked in there, and I saw the old man in the yard, or the young man, I forget which; and I said, "Has Sir Richard Glass been here?" and he said "No." I said, "I was in the habit of having coal from you; how is it you do not supply me now?" He said, "I really do not know, sir." I said, "You may send in three tons if you like"; that is all that passed.

5676. Was it a fact that you had been in the habit of ordering coals from him before?—Yes, I was surprised we had not continued it.

O

5677. How

Mr.
T. Radford.
22 January
1869.

Mr.
T. Radford.
—
1869.

5677. How long was it that you had not had coals from him before?—I really do not know; my servants order the coals; since then we have had coals from them; I should say it was four or five weeks before.

5678. There was nothing unusual or extraordinary about your having these coals there?—No.

5679. Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.] Did you expect to find Sir Richard Glass, though you were looking for him?—I expected to find him somewhere on the way; I was going to Upper Milton.

5680. Had you canvassed this man for his vote?—No.

5681. At that time or afterwards?—No.

5682. Never?—No.

5683. You were anxious to find Sir Richard Glass, to join him?—Yes, I was looking for him; it was a fine afternoon, and I thought a walk would be beneficial to my health.

[The Witness withdrew.

[Adjourned to To-morrow, at Ten o'clock.

Saturday, 23rd January 1869.

CHARLES POUNTNEY, sworn; Examined by Mr. Poland.

5684. WHAT are you?—A Comb Manufacturer.

5685. Do you carry on business at Bewdley?

—Yes.

5686. You are a master, are you?—Yes.

5687. Do you know Mr. Griffin, the landlord of the “Fox”?—Yes.

5688. Is it true that you ever said to him that you would give him 5*l.*, and that he might draw a hogshead of ale?—No.

5689. Did you say anything to him about his house, and about any entertainment at his house; anything like this: “If yours is the last it will be the best, so you had better make up your mind”?—No.

5690. Did he make any reply to you, that he would not make up his mind for five hogsheads; or did any conversation of that kind take place between you?—No.

5691. Did you say anything to him about his license?—No.

5692. Or threaten him in any way that his license would be taken away?—I did not.

5693. Did any conversation take place in your hearing, or did he make any statement in your hearing, complaining that nothing had been done at his house with regard to the election?—I do not recollect anything of the kind.

5694. You are a member of the town council here, are you not?—Yes.

5695. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] You had better see whether he was there at the particular place and time when all this is said to have taken place.

5696. Mr. Poland.] Were you at his house on the polling day?—Yes.

5697. Whom did you see there on that day?—When I went in I saw Mr. — (I forget the gentleman's name, but I know the man by sight). This gentleman, here, with the spectacles, the Birmingham lawyer; I do not know his name (pointing to Mr. Morgan).

5698. Mr. Morgan was there?—Yes, I saw him there.

5699. Did you see Sir Richard Glass there?—I did not.

5700. You being there on that day, you say, no such conversation as I have put to you took place?—It did not.

Cross-examined by Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.

5701. You say you saw Mr. Morgan there, did you?—Yes.

5702. There was a considerable crowd of people there, I think?—Very likely there was.

5703. Was not there?—There might be some, for all I know.

5704. Was there not a considerable number of people there?—There was three or four people there, I believe.

5705. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] How many did you say?—There might be three or four, for aught I know.

5706. Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.] Was there not a larger number than that a great deal?—Then they must have come in after I went out.

5707. No; I mean when you saw Mr. Morgan there?—I know when I saw Mr. Morgan there there was four or five, I should think.

5708. Were there not more than that?—No, I should not think so.

5709. Will you swear there were not 50?—Nothing of the kind.

5710. Do you recollect seeing Mr. Morgan pushed about?—I do not recollect seeing Mr. Morgan pushed about, not at all.

5711. You have no recollection of it?—Not at all.

5712. Will you swear that he was not, in your presence, pushed about and bonnetted?—Not that I am aware of.

5713. That is not an answer. Will you swear that he was not, in your presence, pushed about and bonnetted?—I do not see it.

5714. You must have seen it, if there were only three or four people there?—I saw nothing of it.

Mr. Justice Blackburn.] Griffin said he was upstairs. I understood his evidence to be that on the polling-day the two Pountneys came, with a lot of roughs, and they were upstairs, and it was upstairs that this conversation took place; but this witness does not say that he saw Mr. Morgan upstairs.

5715. Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.] Were you there more than once upon the polling day?—No.

5716. Did you go upstairs at all when you were there?—My brother and me went in —

5717. Did your brother and you go upstairs?—Yes. As soon as ever I went into the room —

5718. Only answer the questions. You and your brother did go upstairs?—Yes; at least Mr. Griffin took us up there.

5719. It does not matter who took you up; but did you go upstairs together?—Yes; Griffin was first, and took us up together.

5720. When you got upstairs together, what did you say to Griffin?—I asked him if he had made up his mind, and how he was likely to vote; and he says, “I do not know exactly how I shall go; I want money.”

5721. What did you say to that?—He said he wanted money. I said, “I know nothing about money.” He said, “Give me 10*l.*, and give me an order for a hogshead of beer, and I will vote for Sir Richard.”

5722. He said, “Give me 10*l.*”; and what about the beer?—“And give me an order for a hogshead of beer.”

5723. What else did he say about the beer?—I know nothing more than that. As soon as ever he said that I came down stairs, and I left.

5724. Did not he say that others had had beer?—Not to me.

5725. Did not you hear him say so, in your hearing?—No.

5726. Was Christopher with you?—Yes.

5727. Did Christopher stay after you were gone?—Not that I am aware of; I believe we both came away together.

O 2

5728. Can

C. Pountney.

23 January
1869.

C. Pountney. 5728. Can you be sure of that?—I think so; quite sure.
 23 January 1869. 5729. You came away together?—Yes.
 5730. As soon as ever you heard about this?—Yes.
 5731. At the time you went upstairs, was any disturbance going on downstairs?—I did not see any disturbance.
 5732. Were there people knocking about?—There might be some people at the door, for aught I know, making a noise.
 5733. There might be?—Yes.
 5734. You went in at the door, and came out?—Yes.
 5735. Then if there had been people at the door making a noise, you must have seen them?—Yes; but they rushed in after I came in.
 5736. You were upstairs, you say?—When I went into the room first, they rushed in after; and Griffin says to me, “Pountney, come upstairs”; and he took me upstairs.
 5737. That was because the people rushed in?—I do not know about that.
 5738. How many people rushed in?—I cannot tell you.
 5739. Did they fill the house?—I cannot tell; I was upstairs.
 5740. Did you hear a noise?—Out of doors, I thought I heard a noise.
 5741. Did you not hear a good deal of noise in the house?—I thought it was out of doors; not in the house. It could not hold many, that front place of his.
 5742. When you were upstairs you heard a noise, at all events?—Yes, outside, somewhere.
 5743. How did you know it was outside?—From the sound.
 5744. After you came in, you say, people rushed in?—Yes.
 5745. How long behind you were the people?—I was not there many minutes.
 5746. How long behind you were the people?—They followed me directly.
 5747. Where had you come from?—I came up the street.
 5748. When you came up the street were those people following you?—Not particularly behind me. I saw some parties about the door before I went in there.
 5749. Do you mean to say there were none following after you that rushed in when you went in?—I was not aware that they followed me at all, any of them.
 5750. Were they near you in the street?—They were round the door when I went in there.

5751. Did you see them come?—No, I did not.

5752. What were they doing round the door. Was the door shut or open?—I cannot tell you exactly now.

5753. Yes, you can?—I cannot. I cannot say whether the door was shut or open.

5754. Who opened the door?—I do not know.

5755. Was it opened for you, or was it open when you got there?—I cannot pretend to say whether it was open or shut.

5756. Where was Mr. Griffin; was he at the door?—Mr. Griffin was at the tap when I went in.

5757. People, you say, rushed in after you?—Yes; just so.

5758. Was the door shut when you came up?—Not that I am aware of.

5759. It may have been shut for what you can say?—No; I could not say now exactly.

5760. You cannot say now whether it was or not?—No; I cannot say whether it was or not.

5761. What did you go there for?—Just merely to know if he had made up his mind; that was all.

5762. And, if you could, to bring him to the poll?—If he liked to vote, he could please himself about it.

5763. Still you went to get him to the poll if you could?—To ask him if he would like to go.

5764. You went to get him to the poll if you could?—If he liked to come.

5765. You wanted to get him?—I should have liked to get him to poll for Sir Richard Glass, of course.

5766. What time of day was this?—About three o'clock.

5767. Did you watch?—No.

5768. Did you walk up and down a good deal at night?—Very little indeed; after I had done my work I went home; I was not out one night, I think, at 10 o'clock, during the election; not a quarter past 10.

Re-examined by Mr. Poland.

5769. At this time, three o'clock, was Sir Richard Glass much a-head?—I should think he was 80 or more a-head then, no doubt about it.

5770. Did you vote for Sir Richard Glass?—I did.

[The Witness withdrew.]

CHRISTOPHER POUNTNEY, sworn; Examined by Mr. Poland.

C. Pountney. 5771. What are you?—A Builder.
 5772. Are you a voter?—Yes.
 5773. Did you vote for Sir Richard?—Yes.
 5774. You live at Bewdley?—Yes.
 5775. Are you a brother of Charles?—Yes.
 5776. Were you with your brother on the polling-day at Griffin's, at the “Fox”?—Yes.
 5777. Did you see Mr. Griffin?—Yes.
 5778. What time of the day was it?—About three o'clock, I should think, as near as I could tell.
 5779. What did you say to him?—Me and my brother went in, and we saw Mr. Lloyd's solicitor there in the room.
 5780. What room?—The front room.

5781. Did you speak to Mr. Griffin?—My brother did.

5782. In your presence?—Yes; in my presence.

5783. What did he say to him?—“Well, Pountney,” he says, “Come upstairs.”

5784. Did you go upstairs?—Yes.

5785. All three; you and your brother, and Griffin?—Me and my brother, and Griffin.

5786. Mr. Justice Blackburn. No one else?—No one else was in the room besides us three.

5787. Mr. Poland. What was said in that room upstairs?—My brother says to him, “Well, Griffin, which way are you likely to go?” “Well, he says, “I think I shall go for Lloyd.” He says, “What is the reason you will not come upon upon our side"? And he says, "I do not know." He says, "I want money." He says, "I want 10 pounds and a hogshead of ale."

5788. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] What was said then?—And so my brother says to me, "Christopher, come on down, we will leave them at it, for I shall have nothing at all to do with it."

5789. Mr. Poland.] Was anything said by you, or by your brother, in your presence, to this effect: that he had better not offend the gentlemen, that they gave the license, and would take it away again?—Not a word; that is, not in my presence.

5790. Did he make any complaint, in your presence, that his house had not been treated the same as the others?—He did say that. We said, we had nothing at all to do with it; we had not to give orders at all whatever.

5791. Did your brother say, "If yours is the last, it will be the best; make up your mind; I will give you five pounds, and you shall draw a hogshead of ale to-night," or anything to that effect?—No.

5792. And did he make any reply to the effect that he would not, for five hogsheads, at the back of it, or any expression of that kind?—I do not remember hearing anything of the sort.

Cross-examined by Mr. Fitzjames Stephens.

5793. Did you see Mr. Morgan that day?—I did.

5794. Did you see him go into the "Fox"?—I did not see him go in the "Fox."

5795. Did you see Mr. Lloyd about the same in the street?—I see Mr. Lloyd in the street.

5796. And Mr. Morgan?—I did not see Mr. Morgan in the house when I went in.

5797. Was not Mr. Morgan, in your presence, forced into the house by the crowd outside?—He was not.

5798. Was not there a crowd in the street?—There were some parties in the street; I did not see no crowd particular; I did not see that.

5799. Did you see a number of people who rushed in after you?—There was some people came in, but there was not that rush of people.

5800. Your brother said there was?—There was not such a rush; there was some people followed in.

5801. Was not a great disturbance made in the house by those people who came in?—There was not much of a disturbance as I heard.

5802. Then there was some; what disturbance was there?—I do not know of any disturbance as was there.

5803. You said just now there was not much disturbance?—Not as I was aware of, there was not.

Mr. Justice Blackburn inquired the object of this cross-examination with reference to the disturbance.

Mr. Fitzjames Stephen stated that it went to the credit of the witnesses.

5804. Mr. Fitzjames Stephen (to the Witness).]—Then he did say that his house had not been treated the same as others?—I did not hear him say so; I told you before.

5805. You said so just this moment?—I did not hear him say so.

5806. Your words, as I took them down, were, "He did say that; he said his house had not been treated the same as the others"?—Yes, Griffin did say that; but I said I knew nothing at all about that; I did not know you were speaking of Griffin at first.

[The Witness withdrew.]

THOMAS POTTER CHARLES, sworn; Examined by Mr. Poland.

5807. ARE you Postmaster at Stourport?—I am.

5808. Do you carry on business there as an ironmonger?—Yes.

5809. Is a man, named William Jones, a messenger attached to the post-office?—He is.

5810. What you call a rural messenger?—Yes.

5811. On Sunday morning before the election did he come to the office at his regular time?—No, he did not.

5812. How much late was he?—He was an hour late.

5813. Did he come then of his own accord, or had you to send for him?—I had sent for him.

5814. What time was it when he came; it was rather late, was not it?—It was a quarter to seven.

5815. In the evening?—No, in the morning.

5816. In what state was he?—He appeared to me very much suffering from the effects of drinking the over-night; in what I should call a muddled way.

5817. When you saw he was in a muddled way, what did you say to him?—I asked him why he was late, and where he had been; I supposed he had been to the "Swan" over-night and got drunk.

5818. You said that to him?—I said that to him; and he said, "It is no use telling a lie, for I was there."

9.

5819. What did you say then?—I said, "I suppose they extorted a promise from you."

5820. What did he say to that?—He said they did.

5821. Did you vote for Sir Richard?—I did.

5822. Is the "Swan" a public-house at Stourport?—Yes.

5823. Is it used by the other party?—By the Liberal party.

5824. When he said that about the promise being extorted from him, did you say anything to that?—I said, "Oh, very well"; that was the end of it.

5825. That was the end of it you say?—Yes, that was the end of it.

5826. Did you threaten him in any way?—Not at all.

5827. Did you say, "If you vote that way, that is, for Mr. Lloyd's side, the Liberals, it will be worse for you?—I did not.

5828. Or did you use any language of a threatening character?—No.

5829. Anything of that description?—Not at all.

5830. Did you say anything about plenty of waiting for his job?—No.

5831. Did you say anything about reporting him, and that he would lose his place?—No, not at all.

5832. Had you seen Mr. Rogers on that day?—No.

O 3

5833. Did

—
23 January
1869.

5833. Did you give a breakfast to the persons in the employment of the post-office on the polling-day?—Oh! no, most assuredly not.

Mr. Fitzjames Stephen stated that the Petitioners had never stated anything of the kind.

Cross-examined by Mr. Chandos Leigh.

5834. You say that Rogers was not with you on that day?—Yes, I do.

5835. Had Rogers been to your place before during the election?—Yes, he had been to my shop on business many a time.

5836. Had you and Rogers ever seen Jones together?—No.

5837. Do you know of your own knowledge whether Rogers had ever seen Jones to speak to?—I do not know that he had ever seen him. I should suppose he had before then; yes, he had before then; I remember it.

5838. Can you say when?—I cannot.

5839. Was that shortly before the election?—No, I do not suppose it was very, but I do not remember the time; it was not worth my recollection at all.

5840. Did you vote at the election?—Yes.

5841. For whom did you vote?—For Sir Richard Glass.

5842. How many letter carriers have you in the office?—I have only one letter carrier.

5843. What is the rest of your staff?—They are rural messengers, the others.

5844. How many of those have you got?—I have four of them.

5845. Are you the superintendent in chief?—Yes, I am.

5846. You all got votes for the first time; I believe this time?—Yes, those that are in a position to vote.

5847. How did your messengers vote?—I have only one messenger that did vote, and that was the William Jones.

5848. When this conversation is alleged to have taken place between William Jones and yourself, which you contradicted as to its being the worse for him, was there anybody else present?—No, there was not.

Re-examined by Mr. Poland.

5849. How long have you been postmaster?—How long; well really 10 or 11 years; but upon my word I could not say exactly without referring to my memoranda.

[The Witness withdrew.]

Mr. JOSEPH ROGERS, sworn; Examined by Mr. Poland.

*Mr.
J. Rogers.*

5850. Do you carry on business at Stourport?—Yes.

5851. What as?—As a tanner and leather merchant.

5852. I suppose you have done so for some years?—Yes.

5853. Did you vote at the last election?—Yes.

5854. For Sir Richard Glass?—Yes.

5855. Were you all through one of his supporters?—Yes.

5856. Do you know a man named Fort?—Yes.

5857. Was there anything said in your presence by Sir Richard Glass to him, or in your presence at all, that you and Mr. Radford would make it all right for Fort?—I was not present when Sir Richard Glass saw Stephen Fort.

5858. Had you any authority from Sir Richard in any way to make promises or to give bribes to voters?—Sir Richard told me he would not allow any one to canvass for him but his agents.

5859. You had no authority to make it all right, or to treat or to bribe for Sir Richard?—No, I had not.

5860. Did you see Mr. Radford and Sir Richard with Fort?—I did not. I saw Fort coming along the street. I said, "Will you speak to Fort; I will go to my mother's; I have not seen her for some time; she lives just over the way."

5861. Was Sir Richard Glass out canvassing then?—We had just started from Mr. Crowther's office.

5862. Was Mr. Radford with him?—Mr. Radford was with him.

5863. I believe you have been in court nearly all the time during this inquiry?—Most of the time.

5864. Did you hear a man of the name of Jones examined?—I did.

5865. That is the rural postman?—Yes.

5866. Did you canvass him?—I met him; I went into Charles's one night, as I very frequently do; I was going down the street, after leaving my office, on my way home, and I went into Charles's shop, the postmaster's, as I frequently do. I believe, on that occasion, I went to ask about some asphalt I wanted for roofing.

5867. Were Jones and his wife there?—They were not. On my coming out of the shop, Jones came in with his bags.

5868. What did you say to him?—I said, "Oh; Jones, I want to see you to ask whether Sir Richard Glass can see you about your vote."

5869. What more was said?—We walked across the street, and at the top of the street his wife met him.

5870. When you saw his wife, did she say anything?—"Jones has been summoned from the 'Swan' house to see you."

5871. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] Can you tell us what day this was; you said it was on one occasion?—I cannot tell you; it was shortly; I should think a fortnight or three weeks before the election.

5872. Mr. Poland.] What did the wife say?—"Some one from the 'Swan' has been down to our house to see you," and I laughed. I said, "Shall I speak to you here or go down with you." They live close by.

5873. What did she say to that?—She said, "You may as well come down."

5874. Did you go down?—I did.

5875. Where to?—To Jones's house.

5876. What was said there?—They asked me to take a seat there, which I did.

5877. Go on?—Jones's wife said, "We are very poor."

5878. What did you say to that?—I said, "I know you are, but whose fault is it; is it not your own conduct that has got you into trouble several times." She said, "Yes, it is, but we mean to be better in future." I said, "I hope you will." She then said, "We have been offered money by the other party."

5879. What

5879. What did you say to that?—Jones said, “Shut your mouth you damned fool, you will get yourself into trouble.”

5880. What more was said?—Jones said, “I want a new arm very badly, I wish you would give me one.”

5881. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] What was it he wanted?—A new arm; he is a one-armed man.

5882. Mr. Poland.] What did you say to that?—I said I should be very happy to do so, but not at election times.

5883. What more passed?—“If I gave you one, they would say I had given it you for your vote.”

5884. What more was said?—He said, “Oh, the Baldwins have been very good to me.”

5885. What did you say to that?—I said, “I know they have.”

5886. What more?—“They got you your place before you went to the post-office, and you lost it through your bad conduct.”

5887. I do not understand that; was not he then in the employment of the post-office?—Yes, before he went to the post-office.

5888. What did you say to that; what more was said?—He said, “Oh, they are very good friends to me now for all that.”

5889. What did you say to that; did you say anything about the post-office?—I said, “You have been reported several times to the post-office, and you had better be steady; your wife has had a summons once or twice for you, and once, I believe, for attempting to cut her throat. If you get off drinking this election, you will very likely get into trouble again.”

5890. Anything further?—He says, “Can you do anything for me; it is all very fine talking.”

5891. What did you say?—I said, “No, I cannot do anything for you; will you promise me one thing, that you will not promise your vote until you have seen Sir Richard Glass.”

5892. What did he say to that?—“I do not know about that.”

5893. Anything more?—I got up to leave, and at the door I said, “Do not go to that man at the ‘Swan’ again; you will very likely get into trouble if you do,” and then I left him.

5894. Had you known anything of Jones’s family before; did his father work for you?—His father, or his (pausing).

5895. Some relation?—There was a woman named Jones who had had several children by different people, and she married a man——

5896. Never mind about that?—I believe his father had worked for us for 40 or 50 years.

5897. Is it true that you said to him that it would be worse for him if he did not vote for Sir Richard; that he would lose his situation in the post-office?—

Mr. Chandos Leigh.] I do not think he said so.

5898. Mr. Poland.] Did you say anything to the effect that he would be reported, and lose his place if he did not vote for Sir Richard Glass?—I did not.

5899. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] In speaking to Jones about his vote, did you say anything to the effect that if he offended Charles he would lose his situation?—I did not.

5900. Mr. Poland.] Who is the Mr. Baldwins who was referred to in the conversation?—They are ironfounders in Stourport, and strong supporters of Mr. Lloyd.

5901. Are they related to one of the petitioners?—He is one of the firm, I believe.

5902. And it was in the service of the firm that this man lost his arm, was it not?—It was in their employ, but not the present firm.

5903. Did you, during the election or before the election, ever give a treat to anybody at any public-houses?—I did not.

5904. I believe a demonstration we have heard spoken of was at your house, was it?—Yes; in my grounds.

5905. That was on the 5th of September?—I believe it was the 5th of September.

5906. Mr. Poland.]—Do you know a man named Ainsworth?—I do.

5907. Did you see him some time in October?—I believe I did. I did.

5908. What part of October was it?—The latter end of October, I believe.

5909. Was Mr. Radford present?—He was standing at the door.

5910. Was anybody else with him?—Mr. Gardner.

5911. Anybody else?—George Anderson was near there.

5912. Anybody else; was Sir Richard Glass there or not?—No, he was not.

5913. What was said?—We knocked at the door; some one came, and we went in: “Well Ben,” I said, “I have come to see whether you can see Sir Richard about your vote”; he said, “I do not know, I have not made up my mind.”

5914. What did you say to that?—I said, “Well, I wish you would make up your mind and let me bring him to see you.” He said, “No, I shall not make up my mind at present.”

5915. What more was said?—I cannot remember that anything more was said about the election; we were talking about different things not connected with the election.

5916. Was anything said by Mr. Radford in your presence about work?—When I left I said, “Just come out of the house”; Mr. Radford had just come in; he said, “Where are you at work now?”

5917. Were you present?—I was outside the door; Mr. Radford was inside; it was a very small room; it was the back kitchen where they were sitting; Mr. Radford came in, and he said, “Oh, Ben, where are you working now”; he said, “I have no work; I wish I had.”

5918. Did you hear what Mr. Radford said then?—“I want some one to fit my new sheds up with gas works. If you like to go and do it you can do it, or can you tell me any one that can do it.” As far as I remember he said, “I do not know”; Mr. Radford says, “Well, if you like to go you can go, and you can go to-morrow morning.” I did not hear Mr. Radford say anything at all to Ainsworth about his vote.

5919. Do you employ many men yourself?—Fifty or sixty, sometimes more.

5920. Did some of them vote for Mr. Lloyd?—Three of them, I believe.

5921. Did you allow either side, either Mr. Lloyd or Sir Richard Glass, to canvass your men while they were at work at all?—Sir Richard Glass to the best of my belief never went into my works to canvass the men at all, and I was never asked by Mr. Lloyd; Sir Richard Glass never canvassed any of my men while they were at work.

Mr.
J. Rogers.
23 January
1869.

Mr.
J. Rogers.

Cross-examined by Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.

23 January
1869.

5922. Sir Richard Glass told you he would permit no one to canvass on his account except his agents?—Yes.

5923. You have told us about your conversation with Jones and with Ainsworth; I suppose in other cases you went and ascertained whether they could see Sir Richard Glass about their votes?—I asked when Sir Richard Glass could see them; when they would like to see Sir Richard Glass.

5924. You went and asked people when they could see Sir Richard Glass about their votes?—Yes.

5925. And I suppose you went and told Sir Richard Glass when those people could see him?—He generally drove down to Stourport from Sick Hill to know if there was anything to report.

5926. Where did he go in Stourport?—He went to Mr. Gardner's office.

5927. You went to Mr. Gardner's office, I suppose, also to report?—Sometimes I was there, and sometimes I went sometimes to Mr. Crowther.

5928. You would report either to Mr. Gardner or Mr. Crowther, as the case might be, when the voters you had seen could see Sir Richard Glass?—Yes, or to George Anderson, the clerk.

5929. And how many voters do you suppose you saw in that manner?—A good many, because the works were all closed to Sir Richard Glass; he could only get at the working men to canvass them at night, and at meal times, and it was then a very great risk, because he was hooted and so insulted.

5930. He was the unpopular candidate at Stourport?—He was the unpopular candidate at Stourport, because I believe it was hinted to them that they were to insult him.

5931. The result of your answer was for the reason you have mentioned; you had to go to a good many persons upon this errand?—I did ask several other people.

5932. You went, I suppose, practically to ask this question: "When can you see Sir Richard Glass," of most or a large proportion of the voters round Stourport?—A good many of them.

5933. Did you afterwards, on many occasions, go with Sir Richard Glass to introduce him?—I introduced him at first when he came into—

5934. You went about with him, but I mean after you had ascertained that a given man would see Sir Richard Glass at a particular time; was it your practice to go round afterwards?—Sometimes I did, and sometimes I did not.

5935. Now of course, I suppose when you asked a man whether he would see Sir Richard Glass, you had conversations with him like these, varying according to circumstances, but those you have given us are more or less a specimen?—There was a good deal said generally when I went to see them.

5936. Some of them would tell you that they had made up their minds, and a great many that they had not?—Some shut me up at once.

5937. Not many I know. There would be conversation upon those occasions?—Many of them told me they would vote for Sir Richard if they dared.

5938. That they would if you dared?—That they would if they dared.

5939. Did you advise them to dare and be courageous; did you point out to them the duty of giving their vote according to their conscience?—Yes; I tried to get out of them who threatened them, but I never could do it. Some of them said that their children would lose their work if they voted for Sir Richard Glass.

5940. How many people in your own employment were voters; three, you say, voted for Mr. Lloyd?—I think there were 18 or 20. Mr. Wat-son, I dare say, can tell you. Mr. Morgan has got it on paper behind you; I have it only in memory; about 18 or 20.

5941. Eighteen or twenty voters who voted for Sir Richard Glass?—No, altogether.

5942. Then there would be from 15 to 18 who voted for Sir Richard Glass out of your works?—Yes.

5943. Did you introduce Sir Richard to them?—At their homes I did.

5944. Did you call at their homes in the first instance, to ask when they could see him?—No, I did not, because I went at dinner-time.

5945. You knew that they could see him, then?—I knew they would be at home at dinner-time.

5946. Amongst other people, of course you know Mr. Danks?—Yes.

5947. You conversed with him at various times about the election?—Yes.

5948. Did he introduce Sir Richard to voters, and inquire when and where voters could see Sir Richard?—Not to my knowledge.

5949. Did you ever go with him on any occasion?—I believe, to the best of my belief, I never canvassed with Mr. Danks.

5950. You never canvassed with Mr. Danks?—Not with Sir Richard and Mr. Danks.

5951. Did you ever canvass with Mr. Danks without Sir Richard?—No.

5952. Mr. Danks has a good many men in his employment who are voters?—I believe he has.

5953. Did he tell you, or did anybody in his establishment or connected with him tell you, where those men were?—Yes.

5954. Did he tell you?—Yes, Mr. Danks told me.

5955. Did he tell you that some of them were at Bristol?—Yes.

5956. And others at Gloucester?—Yes.

5957. In consequence of what he told you, did you send your man, William Rowley, down there?—I asked him if he would go.

5958. He is a labouring man, is he not?—He is a labouring man; he works for me, and he does other jobs too.

5959. I mean he is a poor man?—I do not know that he is a poor man.

5960. Did you ask him if he would go to Bristol and Gloucester?—I did.

5961. Did you pay his expenses?—No, I did not.

5962. Do you know who did?—I do not.

5963. He did go, did he not?—I believe he did go.

5964. Was he working for you at that time?—He was.

5965. How was he paid at that time; by the day or by the week?—By the week.

5966. Did you pay him his week's wages the time he was away?—I paid the whole of my men in my employment the whole of the time they lost during the election, whether they were voters or not, those who voted for Mr. Lloyd included. Some of them said, "We do not want it"; then I said, "I shall give it to the poor;" but you will all have your full time.

5867. So

5967. So Rowley came in with the rest?—Yes.

5968. You asked him to go?—Yes.

5969. Did you tell him who he was to find?—I did not mention any names.

5970. Did you tell him of Mr. Danks's men, and where they were?—I did tell him that some of Mr. Danks's men worked at Gloucester and Bristol.

5971. Did you tell him to bring them back?—To ask them if they would like to come back.

5972. Suppose they liked to come back, what was he to do then?—I did not give him any orders what to do with them; if they liked to come back, they might come back.

5973. You could not authorise Mr. Danks's men to come away from their work, you know; you were not their master; had Mr. Danks given you leave to say so?—Yes, he had; he said, "Any men that like to come back to vote at the election may do so."

5974. You asked Rowley if he would go, and Rowley agreed; Yes.

5975. Do you happen to know from Rowley, or otherwise, how many of Mr. Danks's men were brought back; I will not say, were brought back, but came back?—I cannot say.

Mr. Justice Blackburn observed that that would not be evidence.

5976. Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.] Do you know any of Mr. Danks's men personally?—I know several of them.

5977. Were you at the poll at Stourport to see the people voting?—I was in and out a good deal most of the day.

5978. Did you see any of Mr. Danks's men come up to vote?—I might have seen them; I must have seen many of them come up with the others to vote; but I did not take any particular notice, nor to the best of my belief speak to any of them; oh, yes, I did though.

5979. Did you see Rowley with any of them?—I cannot say that I did; I did speak to one of Mr. Danks's men; two of them, in fact.

5980. I shall not ask what you said to them?—I will tell you, if you like.

5981. I will not ask you?—I went down to his house.

5982. Have you been down sometimes on a Sunday; do you know that Mr. Danks's men, and Mr. Danks's boats, or whatever you call them, are used to come up on a Sunday to Stourport?—I do not know that they do; they may, or may not; I do not notice Mr. Danks's boats.

5983. Have you not been down there sometimes on a Sunday with Mr. Danks?—No; I have not.

5984. Have you not been down to the boats when they came up on any day of the week with Mr. Danks?—Not with Mr. Danks.

5985. With Mr. Radford?—I may have been with Mr. Radford.

5986. Have you not spoken to the men and canvassed them; I give you your own word?—I have asked them—

5987. Whether Sir Richard Glass could see them?—Yes.

5988. And whether they had made up their minds?—Yes.

5989. Used Mr. Radford to go with you on these occasions when you called at people's houses, as you have described?—Yes.

5990. And used he to report at Mr. Crowther's office?—I believe not; Mr. Radford was very little at Stourport, not to my knowledge; he may have done so.

5991. Did you go up at night with Mr. Radford ever to see these men?—Not Danks's men.

5992. But any voters?—I cannot say; I am not sure; I may have done so, I may not.

5993. Just a word about the "Monstration"; it was a very handsome "Monstration," was it not?—I do not know what you call handsome.

5994. There were a great number of people there?—There were a great many people there.

5995. And distinguished personages made excuses for not coming, and so on?—I believe so.

5996. And there was a good deal of eating and drinking going on there?—Yes.

5997. Was it at your expense?—No.

5998. Whose?—I cannot say.

5999. Did Sir Richard Glass pay any of it?—Not a shilling; not that I know.

6000. You do not know who paid it?—I do not; I gave my grounds.

6001. Refreshments came quite unknown to you?—They were brought on the ground; I did not pay for them, nor order them.

6002. Who did you give your grounds to?—The Kidderminster Conservative Men's Association.

6003. But who are those; what were their names?—They are most of them strangers to me, and the association sent to me and asked me if I would go and see them at their rooms in Kidderminster.

6004. Did you know the name of any person whom you authorised to use your grounds at any time?—Longmore; some such name I authorised; they asked me to see a flag they had, a new flag.

6005. I dare say it was very pretty?—They thought so, and were very anxious to get a piece of it.

6006. When you asked Rowley whether he would like to go to Bristol, and he went as far as you know, have you ever spoken to him about that since?—He has begun to speak to me, and I have said, "Say nothing at all about it; you will be called in court, and you can say what you like there." Is that all, Mr. Stephen?

Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.] That is all.

WILLIAM FOWLER, sworn; Examined by Mr. Poland.

6007. WHAT are you?—Carpenter and Joiner.

6008. Where do you live?—Oaklands-row.

6009. Is that at Bewdley?—Yes.

6010. Are you a voter?—Yes.

6011. Did you vote for Sir Richard?—Yes.

6012. Do you know a person of the name of Hamer?—Yes.

6013. Did you ask him to vote for Sir Richard?—No.

9.

6014. Did you say to Hamer when you asked him to vote for Sir Richard, "Will 5 l. be of any use to you in a small way of business"?—I never asked him to vote, but I asked him if 5 l. would do him good in any way of business, and he said 5 l. or 6 l. would be of use to him.

6015. Tell us what you had to say to him; how did the conversation begin?—He came up to my house for some work, and I paid him for it,

J Rogers.

23 January
1869.

W. Fowler.

it, and walked down the garden walk with him, and he was talking about business; he wanted some money to begin the shoe trade, and I asked him if 5 l. would be of any use to him: that is all that was said.

6016. Did you lend him the 5 l.?—No.

6017. What did he say when you asked him if 5 l. would be of any use to him?—He said 5 l. or 6 l. would be of use to him in his trade.

6018. How came you not to lend it to him?—Because I had not got it, and I did not intend if I had.

6019. What made you say that, then?—I only asked him if it would do him any good.

6020. Did you in any way offer him 5 l. if he would vote for Sir Richard?—No.

6021. Or hold out any inducement to him?—No, I never asked him to vote for any one.

6022. How far were you from the street when this conversation took place?—Five or six yards, or more perhaps.

6023. What is Hamer?—A shoemaker.

6024. How long have you known him?—Five or six years perhaps.

6025. Are you parish clerk?—Yes, at St. Anne's in the street here.

Cross-examined by Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.

6026. Whom did you vote for?—Sir Richard Glass.

6027. Have you spoken to any of your fellow voters about voting for Sir Richard Glass?—Perhaps I may.

6028. Of course you may, but have you?—Yes, I may have asked them, but I never asked him.

6029. But you have spoken to others?—Yes, I have.

6030. How many others do you suppose you have spoken to?—I cannot tell, three or four perhaps.

6031. After you had asked them, did you tell anybody what they had said?—No.

6032. Do you know Mr. Betts?—Yes.

6033. Did you ever tell Mr. Betts about what the voters had said?—Not to the best of my knowledge.

6034. You are sure you did not?—I cannot say, perhaps I may.

6035. Do you know Mr. Gardener?—Yes.

6036. Did you ever tell Mr. Gardener?—Not that I know of, perhaps I may, I cannot say.

6037. Do you know Mr. Pardoe?—Yes.

6038. Did you ever tell Mr. Pardoe?—I might have told him.

6039. You said nothing to Hamer about voting at all?—No.

6040. Did you mention to anybody at all that you had asked Hamer whether five pounds would do him any good?—No.

6041. You kept it quiet to yourself?—Yes.

6042. Did you mention it to Mr. Betts?—No, not to the best of my knowledge.

6043. May you have mentioned it to Mr. Betts?—I may, I will not be certain.

6044. Did you see Mr. Betts?—No.

6045. Are you sure you did not?—No, not that day after I had seen Hamer.

6046. When did you see Mr. Betts; did you see Mr. Betts on the day of the poll?—Yes.

6047. What time of the day of the poll did you see Mr. Betts?—Between 9 and 10, I believe about nine.

6048. When you saw Mr. Betts on the day of the poll about nine o'clock, did you tell him what you had said to Hamer?—No.

6049. Quite sure?—Certain.

6050. When you say you may have spoken to Betts about it, when may you have done so?—I do not recollect that I did; if I did, it was on the day before the poll.

6051. And you are not sure that you did not speak to him?—No, I am not sure that I did not.

6052. How came you to ask Hamer whether 5 l. would do him any good?—I do not know.

6053. Give a reason?—I had no reason at all in particular; we were talking about business affairs, and I asked him whether 5 l. would do him any good, and he said 5 l. or 6 l. would.

6054. You knew he was quite a poor man?—Yes, because he told me so himself.

6055. Then you knew 5 l. or 6 l. would of course do him good?—Yes.

6056. Then why did you ask him?—I do not know, I had no particular reason.

6057. Had you ever talked to Hamer about the election?—No.

6058. At all?—I never did.

6059. Where had you seen him last before this talk about the 5 l.?—On the Saturday night, I think.

6060. Where did you see him on the Saturday night?—At my house.

6061. What was he at your house about, on the Saturday night?—What brought him there; some business work.

6062. Looking for work, was he?—No.

6063. Did he come for work that he had done?—Yes work, he had done on the Monday, the nomination day.

6064. How long was he at your house that night?—Perhaps an hour, I do not know.

6065. You were talking together, I suppose?—No, I did not talk much, I had a brother who was talking to him.

6066. Were they talking about the election?—I do not know what they was talking about, they was talking to themselves.

6067. Did you not hear anything they said?—No.

6068. Were you all in one room?—Yes.

6069. What were you doing?—Nothing.

6070. Did you join in the conversation?—No, I did not.

6071. Was it a large room, or was it a small one?—Not a very large one, nor a very small one.

6072. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] When was it that your brother was speaking to him?—Saturday night.

6073. What Saturday?—Saturday before the election.

6074. Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.] Then you could hear what was said?—I did not.

6075. You could?—I did not want to hear their business; it was not my business, they was not talking about me.

6076. You could not help hearing if these people were talking in the room, when you were doing nothing?—Yes, I could, if they were not speaking loud enough.

6077. Were Hamer and your brother speaking very low?—Yes, they was, I did not hear all they said.

6078. You did not hear all, but part of it?—Yes.

6079. Tell us anything they said?—I do not know what it was about now.

6080. Was

6080. Was it about the election at all?—It was not.

6081. Or about politics?—No.

6082. Or about Sir Richard Glass?—No.

6083. Then if you know it was not that, tell us what it was?—I cannot tell what it was about.

6084. How do you know it was not about the election?—I cannot tell what it was about.

6085. Then, why did you say positively just now that they were not talking about the election?—I do not know what they were talking about.

I cannot say positively that they was not.

6086. When did you see Hamer last?—I saw him as I came up here.

6087. Did you see him last night?—No.

6088. Did you not see Hamer last night, between 11 and 12?—No.

6089. Not in the course of the evening?—No.

6090. Were you at your own house last night all the evening?—Yes.

6091. What time did you go to bed?—Ten o'clock, soon after.

6092. And you were not up after that?—No.

6093. Have you spoken to Hamer?—No.

6094. Yesterday, I mean?—No.

6095. Were you up an entry with him last night?—No, I was not.

6096. Near the churchyard?—No, I was not, and I did not see Hamer last night.

6097. You might speak to a man without seeing him?—I did not see him.

6098. Nor speak to him?—No.

6099. You have voted before in elections, I take it?—No, this is the first election I ever voted at.

6100. The first time you ever had a vote?—Yes.

6101. I see we have got amongst the election bills here that you made a ladder: "To William Fowler, to making a ladder, 6s."?—Yes.

6102. When was that?—I do not know; you got it there; perhaps you can tell.

6103. Who gave you the order to make a ladder?—A man of the name of Thomas Poole.

6104. Who is Thomas Poole?—A man who lives in the town here.

6105. Why did you charge this to Mr. Pardoe?—I was ordered to do so.

6106. What was it for?—I did not know what it was for. I did not ask the question; I do not ask questions like them.

6107. Who ordered you to charge it to Mr. Pardoe?—Poole.

6108. Did you see any people watching about?—I may have.

6109. But did you?—Yes, I did.

6110. Did you see Poole watching?—No, I did not.

Re-examined by Mr. Poland.

6111. Did you see the ladder being used afterwards for posting bills up against the wall?—I never saw it.

6112. You never saw it used?—No.

[The Witness withdrew.]

Mr. BENJAMIN GARDNER, sworn; Examined by Mr. Poland.

6113. ARE you a Solicitor?—I am.

6114. Do you practice at Bewdley?—Yes.

6115. You have done so for many years, I believe?—More than 30.

6116. Were you one of Sir Richard's agents?—I was.

6117. And was Mr. Pardoe also one of his agents here?—He was.

6118. What were your instructions from Sir Richard?—I do not know that I had any particular instructions. Sir Richard, in meeting his friends, said that he would do nothing but what was straightforward and right, and that he would have nothing to do with treating or bribery.

6119. Was there anything said about canvassing?—He said he would see every voter himself.

6120. Have you received any money for your services?—Some, I have.

6121. How much have you received?—£. 50.

6122. Is that on account?—Yes.

6123. Did you know, at some of the public-houses, of beer being served without being paid for?—I did not.

6124. And at a particular time, what is termed the tap being stopped?—I did not.

6125. Were you in the court, and did you hear the evidence with regard to that part of the case?—I have heard a great deal of it.

6126. As to what was done at these public-houses; serving beer for nothing, and Burnish, Mr. Pardoe's clerk, stopping the tap; were you a party to that in any way?—I did not know till I had heard the evidence given in court that there had been meetings at one-half the houses that have been mentioned.

6127. Had you anything to do with the watchers?—Nothing at all.

9.

6128. Did you either engage them or pay them?—Neither; nor did I know them.

6129. Have you been engaged in other elections?—Never.

6130. So far as you are concerned personally, are you aware of any corrupt practice taking place on behalf of Sir Richard, for the purpose of procuring votes?—I am not.

6131. Did you see a man named Ainsworth?—I did.

6132. Were Radford and Mr. Rogers present?—They were.

6133. Will you shortly state what your memory is upon what took place?—I accompanied Mr. Rogers and Mr. Radford, or they accompanied me. Mr. Rogers was the principal spokes man; he told Ainsworth that he wished to know when Sir Robert Glass could see him respecting his vote.

6134. Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.] Who told him?—Mr. Rogers was then speaking, and he hoped that he would allow him to put his name down for Sir Richard. Ainsworth said that he did not know, he must consider about it. Mr. Rogers said the time was getting near now, and they wanted to make up their books to see how they stood. Well, he said, he must consider about it; and then I urged his making up his mind, and told him that Sir Richard Glass, I thought, was quite the poor man's friend, and that he had been a great employer of labour, and would make an excellent representative. Still he would not say that he would allow us to put his name down. I believe then we were leaving, and Mr. Radford said, "Ainsworth, who are you at work for now; is it Mr. Baldwin?" he said, no, he was out of work, he wished he could get some. Mr. Radford ford said that he wished some gas fittings put up at Kidderminster, if he liked to go there, and he could go the next morning, and it would take him perhaps three weeks or a month.

6135. Mr. Poland.] What did he say?—He did not say that he would go.

Cross-examined by Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.

6136. I think you were not an advertised agent, were you?—No.

6137. Was any agent advertised except Mr. Pardoe?—I believe not.

6138. I suppose you have not finally made out your bill; you said you had got 50 £ on account?—No, I have not made out my bill.

6139. As one lawyer to another, can you give me a notion how much it will be?—No, I cannot; there was never a word said to me about paying, and I have never asked any one about paying.

6140. I need not ask you, you know very well that you cannot charge him beyond the amount that you charge to the election agent within a given time, and yet you say that you have not sent in any bill?—None.

6141. You have charged 50 £ there?—I have not charged it, I have been paid it.

6142. You delivered no bill?—I have not.

6143. Have got no receipt?—No.

6144. You consider you still have a claim?—I have no doubt I shall get further paid, but I do not care whether I do or not. I did not wish to be an agent.

6145. And you know that you cannot recover it?—Yes, I do.

6146. You heard it mentioned in evidence that you were at several public-houses?—Yes.

6147. Without going through the names of them, were you, in fact, at those public-houses? I was at three.

6148. Well, I think your name was mentioned at three; two of them were the two that Sir Richard Glass was at?—Yes.

6149. And one was one where he was not?—Yes.

6150. What were their names; there was the "Rising Sun"?—The "Rising Sun."

6151. And the "Waggon and Horses"?—Yes.

6152. And, I think, the "Coach and Horses"?—No, the "Rifleman."

6153. How long were you at the "Rifleman"?—Perhaps an hour and a half.

6154. What were you doing there?—Well, first of all, I had my dinner there.

6155. You live in the town?—No; I live three miles away, and I had to walk about three miles home at night afterwards.

6156. Are you then in the habit of dining at a place like the "Rifleman"?—No; but I had been canvassing the whole day at Stourport, and I came up by the train that arrived between seven and eight, and I went to the nearest place to have something to eat; I was very hungry.

6157. You were at the "Rifleman" for the purposes of refreshment?—Yes.

6158. Entirely?—No; I had arranged to go there.

6159. Had you arranged the meeting?—No; I had not arranged the meeting. I heard there was to be one.

6160. From whom?—Elcock invited me.

6161. And you accepted his invitation?—Yes; not certainly.

6162. Conditionally?—Yes.

6163. I need hardly ask you, did Elcock ever before invite you to his house?—No.

6164. And I need not ask you, a gentleman of your position in life, you never associated with him in any way?—I did not; he assigned a reason why I should go; he said, in all probability I should see two or three fresh supporters of Sir Richard Glass.

6165. Did you canvass when you were there?—I did. I think I saw two persons.

6166. Were other supporters of Sir Richard Glass present besides yourself, I mean of his regular supporters, when you were canvassing at the "Rifleman"?—No, I think not.

6167. Was Mr. Boucher there?—Yes, he was; but he was not in the room where I was canvassing.

6168. Mr. Boucher was in the habit of going about canvassing, was he not?—I saw him with Sir Richard Glass several times.

6169. Frequently?—Yes.

6170. And Mr. Bury too?—Yes.

6171. Do you know William Jackson?—Yes.

6172. Have you seen him with Sir Richard Glass?—No, not canvassing with him.

6173. Have you seen him in his company?—Yes.

6174. How often?—Not many times.

6175. A dozen times?—I saw him in his company that evening at the "Rising Sun."

6176. Did you see him in his company on any other occasion besides the "Rising Sun"?—Well, he called at the "Waggon and Horses" coming back. I do not know that I have seen him in his company at other times.

6177. Have you seen Jackson canvassing at other times?—No; I do not know that he ever did canvass.

6178. Have you ever spoken to Jackson about the election?—Yes, I have asked him where the electors lived; he is a Wribbenhall man, and knows almost all the electors there, and I do not.

6179. When you asked him where the Wribbenhall voters lived, did he go with you to show you?—He did once or twice; but if you will allow me to consider it, I do not know that he has done so.

6180. Will you say he did not?—Well, I hardly know what to say to that. I have met him, I may say, at the "Rising Sun," but I do not know that he ever went with me to any place; I do not recollect that he did; I do not think he did.

6181. He went with you from the "Rising Sun" to the "Waggon and Horses"?—That was coming home.

6182. It was not after Sir Richard Glass had left?—No; I came with Sir Richard Glass.

6183. You heard Mr. Goodwin give his evidence?—No, I did not.

6184. He was the man who said he was canvassed?—Yes.

6185. Did you see Jackson speak to and canvass any others that evening?—I did not; I saw a lot of people in the room, and could not recognise any one.

6186. And you cannot say whether or not what Goodwin stated about Jackson canvassing him was correct?—I did not hear of his being canvassed.

6187. You cannot say whether it was correct?—No.

6188. Do

6188. Do you know John Parsons; Mr. Parsons?—Yes.

6189. Has Mr. Parsons ever gone canvassing with you?—Yes.

6190. How often?—I have seen Mr. Parsons once or twice at Stourport; he attends there about once a-week, and I have seen him there once or twice, and here once or twice; not more, I think.

6191. Sir Richard, you say, carried on a personal canvass?—Yes.

6192. Did you make reports to Sir Richard of the results of your canvass?—Always.

6193. Do you know whether Mr. Boucher made reports?—I cannot say.

6194. Where used you to make reports?—Mr. Pardoe had a book which, if he was not with me, I took.

6195. You must have had some place where you talked over these things; where used you to meet?—At Mr. Pardoe's office.

6196. And there you discussed from time to time the results of the canvass?—Yes.

6197. Whom have you seen discussing the results of the canvass, at Mr. Pardoe's office, besides Mr. Pardoe and yourself?—I have seen Mr. Shaw there.

6198. Have you seen Mr. Herbert Pardoe there?—Yes.

6199. I believe Mr. Herbert Pardoe is an admitted attorney?—Yes.

6200. And did Mr. Herbert Pardoe communicate the results of canvassing?—I think he took it down rather than communicated it.

6201. Do you know whether he ever canvassed himself; have you seen him canvassing?—No; he has gone with us, but I never heard him canvass a person.

6202. He took down what passed?—Yes.

6203. With reference to Mr. Burgess, have you seen him at Mr. Pardoe's office?—Yes.

6204. And have you heard him state the results of canvassing?—Yes.

6205. Dr. Webster?—Yes; I have seen Dr. Webster there.

6206. You have heard Dr. Webster communicate the results of canvassing?—No, I do not know that I have.

6207. Have you heard him talking about the election?—He has been present while we have been talking.

6208. I suppose the conversation would be general?—Yes, it would.

6209. And did Dr. Webster take part in it?—Yes.

6210. And, as a matter of course, the conversation would turn upon the election and on Sir Richard Glass's prospects?—Oftentimes.

6211. As a rule?—I do not know that.

6212. You met there for business; to talk over the business of the election?—Of course.

6213. You used the expression, in the course of your evidence in chief, "I did not know, until I heard the evidence, that there had been meetings at half the houses I heard mentioned?"—I did; I said so.

6214. Then you did know that there had been meetings held at a considerable number of houses?—I attended two myself, as I tell you.

6215. And you heard of others?—Yesterday and the day before.

9.

6217. You know Mr. Weaver, of the "George Hotel"?—Yes.

6218. Did you make an arrangement with Mr. Weaver, for the use of his house for Sir Richard?—Yes.

6219. You did engage with Mr. Weaver for the use of the "George"?—I did.

6220. Was it used by Sir Richard?—Yes, many times.

6221. At that time were any terms mentioned; any price mentioned?—None.

6222. What was the arrangement; how long was Sir Richard to have the house; just tell us what the arrangement was?—Mr. Hemming, in the first instance, had engaged the house, and I had asked for it before Mr. Hemming had asked for it positively; as soon as I wished to take the house for Sir Richard Glass, Mr. Hemming was then applied to, to know whether he would have it, and Mr. Hemming took the house; he occupied the house as long as he was a candidate; and on his retiring from his candidature, I applied for it again.

6223. And got it?—And got it.

6224. Naturally?—Naturally.

6225. You wanted to prevent Mr. Lloyd from having it?—No; we wanted it because it was the most convenient house; we wanted it in the first instance.

6226. What was it engaged for; what was it used for?—We went in sometimes to have lunch; those sort of things.

6227. Did you see people there, about the business of the election?—Not except those who were canvassing with me.

6228. Those who were canvassing used the "George"?—Mr. Herbert Pardoe and myself, and Sir Richard and myself. We had not much use for it till we got towards polling time.

6229. Which rooms did you use; the large sitting-room in front?—One of the rooms in front.

6230. You know the room I mean, I dare say; the large room in front?—Upstairs?

6231. Yes?—We did not use that, I think, till the nomination day; I think not.

6232. You used the best room in the house?—Yes; we should have had it certainly.

6233. You received no bill from the "George"?—No.

6234. Do you know whether any has been sent in?—I believe there has.

6235. Do you know the amount?—No.

6236. Was the "Wheatsheaf" engaged in that manner?—I do not know in what way the "Wheatsheaf" was engaged; I had nothing to do with that.

6237. But have you not been in the habit yourself of going to the "Wheatsheaf," and having lunch there, and so on?—Yes.

6238. I mean in connection with this business?—Yes.

6239. Was that on the business of the election?—Yes.

6240. And of course you would not pay for that?—No, not when I was there.

6241. Then the "Wheatsheaf" was used also?—Yes; I think more commonly Sir Richard put his horses there.

6242. But you also occasionally used the "Wheatsheaf," and you yourself have had refreshment there?—Yes.

6243. And the canvassers, I suppose?—I have seen two or three there.

6244. Having refreshment?—Yes.

6245. Mr.

Mr.
B. Gardner.
—
23 January
1869.

Mr. B. Gardner. 6245. Mr. Boucher and Mr. Barry?—Yes, I am not quite sure about one of them.
 6246. And Mr. Pardoe?—Mr. Herbert Pardoe.

23 January 1869. 6247. Do you know whether any bill has been sent in, in respect of the "Wheatsheaf"—No.

6248. About these watchers; you know nothing about that?—I do not.

6249. That they were put on?—No, I knew there were such persons.

6250. Can your memory enable you to give me the names of any of the watchers?—I did not know any of them. I dare say, if they were pointed out to me, I should be able to give some of the names, but I do not know any of them.

6251. You did not know them personally?—No.

Re-examined by Mr. Poland.

6252. Did you know there were such persons as watchers on both sides?—Yes.

6253. Do you know of your own knowledge whether the bill for the "George" has been sent in?—Yes.

6254. I believe the "George" is the only hotel in Bewdley?—It is the chief hotel.

6255. The others are more like ordinary public-houses?—Yes; the "Wheatsheaf" is a house at which commercial travellers stop.

6256. You were asked about William Jackson being with Sir Richard; are you able to state with any degree of certainty whether you have seen William Jackson with Sir Richard on more than two occasions?—I do not think I ever did.

6257. Mr. Herbert Pardoe you have been asked about is the son of Mr. Acton Pardoe?—Yes.

6258. And he is not in partnership?—I believe not.

6259. He is a clerk in his father's office, as far as you know?—I suppose he is.

6260. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] I rather gather from what has taken place, but I want to know for certain; had you anything to do with the payment of any of these expenses yourself?—Not a bit.

6261. Neither for yourself nor your clerk?—No.

6262. So that you do not know who paid the sums that are made up?—I do not.

[The Witness withdrew.]

Mr. WILLIAM ALFRED CROWTHER, sworn; Examined by Mr. Poland.

Mr. W. A. Crowther. 6263. ARE you a Solicitor?—I am.

6264. Practising at Stourport?—Practising at Kidderminster, with a branch office at Stourport.

6265. Were you one of Sir Richard's agents in this election?—I was.

6266. We have heard you had two sums of 300 l.; 600 l. in all?—I had.

6267. Perhaps you can give us the dates now readily; what is the date of the first one?

Mr. Fitzjames Stephen stated that the letter showed that one sum was sent on the 28th August, and the other on the 9th of November.

6268. Mr. Poland.] There is Sir Richard's letter accompanying the first?—Yes.

6269. Did you attend to the registration in your district?—I did.

6270. It was the first registration under the new Reform Act?—It was.

6271. Now I will ask you this: In spending this money, did you apply any of it for the purposes of bribing or treating, or corrupting in any way any of the electors?—Not a penny.

6272. This money was sent you for strictly legal expenses of the election, and for legitimate expenses; professional services?—Yes; I have Sir Richard's letter sending it me.

6273. As far as you know, was any portion of that money applied illegally?—None.

Mr. Justice Blackburn desired that Mr. Poland should ask how it was applied.

6274. Mr. Poland.] How was it applied?—The first sum of 300 l.: 100 l. I gave to Mr. Pardoe, and the other I applied towards general expenses of the registration.

6275. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] That is the other 200 l.?—Yes.

6276. As to the second 300 l.?—As to the second 300 l.; at the time I had it. I was under the impression that I should have the payment of the bills connected with Stourport. I have not; and therefore that second 300 l. I have, with the exception of my own claim for professional services. Mr. Pardoe paid the Stourport bills.

6277. Then have you still got the 300 l. in your possession?—Yes.

6278. Mr. Poland.] Is Stourport a large district of the electoral area?—Yes, it is a large district.

6279. Were you at all aware of the houses at Bewdley being kept open at certain times for the persons to have beer without paying for it?—I had not the slightest knowledge of that.

6280. Did anything of that kind take place at Stourport?—No.

Cross-examined by Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.

6281. Did you put on any watchers at Stourport?—None; I had better explain that I was principally engaged at Kidderminster.

6282. But you were an agent?—I was an agent.

6283. You were not an advertised agent, I think?—As far as I am aware.

6284. Mr. Pardoe was the only advertised agent?—As far as I am aware; I am not aware that it has ever been advertised at all.

6285. Were you not at the hustings?—No.

6286. The day of the election?—No.

6287. At all events, you are acquainted with the Act under which it is necessary to have an advertised agent?—Yes.

6288. And you are acquainted, of course, with the provision that no payment shall be made, and no advance, loan, or deposit found on behalf of any candidate at an election before or during or after such election in respect of it, otherwise than through an agent or agents, whose names and addresses have been delivered in writing to the returning officer on or before the day of nomination?—Well, I had not studied that before the election.

6289. You see it is an irregularity on your part spending any money at all?—It appears so.

6290. Then all the money you have received, with the exception of 200 l. for registration, you have have either got or have handed over to Mr. Pardoe?—Yes.

6291. And how much have you got?—I have not made out an account, therefore I cannot tell you.

6292. Not made out the account?—No.

6293. Then you have paid some expenses?—I have not made out my own account; I do not know what I may be allowed for my own services.

6294. You have not made out your bill for your own services?—No, I have not.

6295. Have you got any bills to pay?—I have got the check clerks and the slip clerks; I think they look to me for payment.

6296. Have you received any bills from anybody?—Yes; I have received, I think, the check clerks' bill.

6297. And any other?—I think a bill of 28*l.* for the advertising.

6298. From whom?—From the “Kidderminster Times” newspaper.

6299. Have you received any other bills whatever?—I have received a bill for the inspectors, and for the services of a gentleman who managed the election on the nomination day and the polling day; I could not be there; I was at Kidderminster.

6300. What is that gentleman?—Mr. Jeffreys Humphrey, of Halesowen.

6301. What is the amount of that bill?—I think it is 20 guineas.

6302. You have received bills for 28*l.* and 20 guineas; have you received any from any inns or hotels at Stourport?—No.

6303. Anything for the “Bell”?—No.

6304. So that the whole amount for which you have received bills, apart from the registration, is 49*l.*?—There would be the check clerks.

6305. The check clerks, whatever they would be?—Yes; a guinea each, I think it is.

6306. How many check clerks?—I think two checks and two slips.

6307. That would be 5*l.*, say?—Yes.

6308. So that altogether you have received bills of between 50*l.* and 60*l.*?—It would be so.

6309. Have you made out a detailed statement in the account here of the registration expenses?—I have not.

6310. Have you paid them all?—Yes, with the exception of a little bill for printing.

6311. How much would that be?—A very small amount.

6312. Something trifling?—Quite trifling.

6313. Have you ever made out an account of the registration expenses?—I have not; any time that Sir Richard requires an account, I shall be prepared; it is a work of great labour, and I have not gone into it; I have not made out a bill.

6314. Now, will you tell me what the registration expenses were?—They were expenses of getting information.

6315. What kind of expense; now, first of all, whom did you employ to get information?—Well I did not employ anybody; there were several working; working men volunteered to get information, and I did get it.

6316. Then, you did not have to pay them?—Yes, I had to pay them something.

6317. How much did you pay them?—They were paid differently; I did not pay them myself.

6318. Who did pay them?—My clerk.

6319. What is his name?—Anderson.

6320. How many of them?—I think, ten.

6321. Give us an idea what kinds of sums were paid?—I think the majority were paid 3*l.* each, that is, so far as I know; I think all were paid 3*l.* each except one, who had not attended so much as the others; I do not know what he was paid.

6322. Ten men, who volunteered their services, were paid 3*l.* a-piece?—No; nine 3*l.* a-piece.

6323. Who were the volunteers; give their names?—I cannot give them; I can give you some of them.

6324. Give us some of them?—If you can give me a list of voters, I could tell them.

6325. You shall have a list of voters?—I did not pay them myself.

6326. Your clerk paid them?—Yes.

6327. It is within your knowledge of office business; now take the list, and tell us?—John Taylor was one; I do not know whether I can recollect all the names.

6328. The list of voters will enable you to say, you say?—Yes.

6329. Therefore they were all voters?—Most of them were, I know; I am not quite certain whether they were all voters or not.

6330. When was this?—That I cannot tell you.

6331. You must recollect; we all know when the registration was this year; it was early in September?—Yes, it would be after the revision.

6332. It would be before the revision?—No, after the revision. I mean it was after the revision when the monies were paid. Of course these parties would be getting information up to the very time of the day of revision.

6333. Perhaps you can give me the date of revision at Stourport?—Well, I cannot.

6334. About?—I do not know whether it would be about the middle of September; in fact, I cannot say.

6335. Was it in September or October?—I think September; I should think about the 25th.

6336. Then there were these sums of 3*l.* paid to the nine volunteers, most of whom were voters, shortly after the registration?—After the revision.

6337. Who attended the revising barrister's court?—I did, and a gentleman from Hereford who acted as advocate.

6338. How long; was it all got through in a day?—Yes, that is the business before the revising barrister was all got through in a day.

6339. Now, what did the gentleman from Hereford charge for coming down specially as advocate on that occasion?—I believe it was between 22*l.* and 23*l.*

6340. Give me the benefit of the shillings, and make it 23*l.*?—Yes.

6341. What did you charge?—I have made no charge at all.

6342. Besides the acquiring information, and the expense of attending the revision, what other expense was there of registration?—None except the forms and stationery, and small matters of that sort.

6343. How much would that come to together?—Not 5*l.*, I should think.

6344. Then we have got now about 50*l.* for the matters you mentioned, and 5*l.* for the check clerks, and 23*l.* for the advocate; that makes 82*l.* altogether, I am told?—I have not followed the calculation.

6345. I want to know now what the other 120*l.* were. You spoke of 200*l.* which you paid for expenses of registration; you have only given me 82 l.?—I know. I shall be prepared to render an account any time of my disbursements. I shall have to make out a bill, and it will be for Sir Richard Glass to determine whether it is a fair bill. I do not know whether it will be, but the labour was immense, I may say. For nearly a fortnight I was engaged from perhaps between seven and eight until between 10 and 11, night after night. I only want what is fair and reasonable.

6346. Then it is 120 l. for your own personal services, to make up the 300 l.?—No, what I say is this: I have to make up a fair and reasonable bill. I have received 300 l. on account of registration expenses, and it is for me to account for that; I shall debit myself with that 300 l., and make my bill on the other side.

6347. And the disbursements, the money out of pocket, is about 80 l.?—I have not calculated it.

6348. Whatever it is, the difference between what you have mentioned and 300 l. is for your own personal services?—I do not say so.

6349. You have to account for that?—Yes; I have to account for that; against which I shall have the debit of my services.

6350. Your business was confined to Stourport; you had nothing to with Bewdley?—Nothing at all.

6351. What is the constituency of Stourport; come, with these immense labours, you know, you must have found out that?—Between 500 and 600, I think. I do not know; the register speaks for itself.

6352. Is it 400?—I am sure I do not know.

6353. I am told it is between 400 and 500?—Well, whatever it is, it speaks for itself.

6354. You were Sir Richard Glass's agent at Stourport, you know?—Yes.

6355. You can tell us how many votes were given for Sir Richard Glass at Stourport?—I think, 143.

6356. How many for Mr. Lloyd?—Two hundred and eighty-one, was it?

6357. How many did you put on the register as the result of your exertions?—I do not know that I can tell you them now; we struck off a great many of our opponents and put on a great many of our friends.

6358. I want to know the numbers?—I cannot say without the papers.

6359. You can tell me about?—I do not know that I can, because the papers were very elaborate: the information was very elaborate. I believe that no Liberal voter who had not a qualification was allowed to remain on, and that no Conservative who had a qualification was omitted.

6360. What I want is, to get an idea of the numbers that you struck off and put on?—I cannot tell you; I have not got any materials here.

6361. Can you tell us whether you put on a hundred?—No, certainly not.

6362. Did you strike off a hundred?—No, I should think not.

6363. Did you put on 50?—No, I should think not.

6364. Did you put on 30?—A good many were re-claims.

6365. Did you put on 20 contested votes?—No, I should think not, perhaps.

6366. Did you put on ten?—That I cannot tell you.

6367. Did you put on five?—Oh, I should think so.

6368. You think five?—I should think considerably more because a number of the re-claims were contested.

6369. Never mind about the re-claims, but tell me how many objected votes you will swear that you put on to that register, and how many new claims were put on?—I cannot tell you without the books.

6370. Independently of the question of re-claims, will you swear that you put 10 new votes on that register?—I think so.

6371. You can either swear or not?—I cannot swear.

6372. Can you swear that you put on five, independently of the re-claims?—I should think so.

6373. Can you swear that you put on three?—Certainly; yes.

6374. You can swear that you put on three?—You are really taking me at a disadvantage; I have not the papers here; the papers will speak for themselves.

6375. You can swear that you put on three, and you cannot swear that you put on five?—I do not wish to say what is untrue; the papers will speak for themselves.

6376. I am perfectly well aware you speak the truth, and applaud you for it; I want to know whether you will swear you put on three votes, independently of re-claims, at that time?—I should think so, and considerably more.

6377. Will you swear positively that you did?—Yes, I think I can swear positively that I did; I was thinking of some of the names.

6378. Take your time, and tell us when?—William Jones was one; my impression is, that 10 were put on.

6379. Will you positively swear that you put on anyone besides William Jones?—Yes.

6380. Will you swear that you put on two besides William Jones?—I do not wish to state that which is untrue.

6381. It might be untrue to say you put on three?—Certainly not; I have no difficulty about swearing that.

6382. Then you will not swear to five?—I should think 10, or more than 10, when I come to consider; I would not tell you I thought so, unless I believed so.

6383. You think about 10; you cannot be positive beyond about three?—No.

6384. With regard to objections and votes you struck off; how many votes did you strike off the other side; I do not want to take you all through the 150, but tell me how many votes you can positively say you struck off on the other side, and how many you think you struck off?—I should think we struck off between 30 and 40.

6385. One more question about the registration. I do not ask you to go into particulars, but I ask you this question?—That was rectified at Stourport that you are asking about.

6386. You had a prevision of what I was going to ask about?—Yes.

6387. Perhaps you know about Bewdley, then?—No, only by rumour. I heard of wonderful success.

6388. When did you pay, if you please, this hundred pounds to Mr. Pardoe; you paid over a hundred of the first three hundred to him?—I received that on the 28th of August, and it would be paid over three or four days after.

Re-examined by Mr. Poland.

6389. Do you know the number on the old register at Stourport, whether it was about 150?—One hundred and fifty I think would be the old register.

6390. Since the new Reform Act, I see altogether about 424 voted. I suppose there were more on the list?—Yes, more on the list; I think something like 500 on the list altogether.

6391. With regard to the registration it is all important that you should get accurate information with regard to the opinions of the voters, I suppose?—Yes; Sir Richard Glass said that must be done thoroughly and done well.

6392. I suppose you cannot get that information without paying for it, not even at Stourport?—No; I find I cannot get any good information at Stourport without paying for it.

6393. Do Messrs. Baldwin employ a large number of hands at Stourport?—Yes.

6394. The petitioner, Mr. Baldwin?—The petitioner Mr. Baldwin.

Mr. Justice Blackburn stated that it was unnecessary to pursue this line of examination.

6395. Mr. Poland.] Mr. Humphrey you say

WILLIAM JACKSON sworn; Examined by Mr. Poland.

6401. What are you?—Plumber and glazier.

6402. Do you live at Bewdley?—Live at Wribbenthal.

6403. Before the election did you assist the Conservative party at all?—I did.

6404. You had no vote yourself?—No vote myself.

6405. What did you do?—Merely gained information, what I could, and made a report.

6406. And did you on one or two occasions point out the places where some of the voters lived at Wribbenthal?—I did.

6407. I suppose, like most people, you saw Sir Richard in the course of his canvass?—I saw Sir Richard in the course of his canvass.

6408. Now what I want to ask you about first is this; after the election was over did Mr. Pardoe employ you to pay the watchers?—He did.

6409. Is that Mr. Acton Pardoe?—Mr. Herbert Pardoe.

6410. Had you a list given to you?—I had a list given to me; I have it with me.

6411. Just produce it?—(The Witness handed it to Mr. Poland.)

6412. How much money had you given to you?—173 l. 12 s. at three different times; you will find the total on the back of that.

6413. And were you to pay the persons mentioned in this list?—I was to assist in seeing the paying of the persons mentioned in that list.

6414. Where were they to be paid?—At Osman Pountney's, the "Malt Shovel."

6415. How were they to be paid there?—There was two appointed to assist me.

6416. Who were those two persons?—I do not know.

6417. Were they strangers to you?—Entirely so.

6418. Where did you first see them?—In a bed-room, up in Mr. Pountney's.

attended for the registration to assist you?—No; Mr. Garold of Hereford.

6396. Who is the gentleman who attended on the poll-pay?—Mr. Humphrey on the nomination day and the poll-day; I was engaged elsewhere.

6397. You were engaged at Kidderminster; was the election the same day?—The same day.

6398. As to these men that you paid for the information; did you make any arrangement with them when you paid, that they were to vote for Sir Richard Glass?—Not the slightest; they were about the staunchest supporters we had at Stourport.

6399. They gave you information, and you paid them for it?—Yes; they were engaged at my office every night till 10 or 11 o'clock.

6400. Was 3 l. in your judgment a fair sum?—Some of our party thought it too little; but I considered it sufficient. Complaints were made that I had not paid them sufficiently.

On the application of Mr. Fitzjames Stephen, Mr. Justice Blackburn stated that the witness must find out the names of the persons whom he had paid.

[The Witness withdrew.]

M. W. A.
Crouther.
—
23 January
1869.

W. Jackson.

6419. Did they wear any disguise?—Yes.

6420. What was the disguise?—A wig.

6421. Both of them each had a disguise?—I will not swear both; one had a wig.

6422. Anything else; any other disguise but a wig?—One had a false beard; I should imagine it false.

6423. I dare say your imagination is accurate; where were the watchers when they were paid?—They were called one by one up the stairs into the room where we were paying.

6424. Who was at the door?—Osman Pountney.

6425. The landlord?—The landlord.

6426. And were they let in one at a time?—Let in one at a time.

6427. Who had the money?—These two strangers.

6428. You had given it to them, had you?—I had put it on the table.

6429. Did you keep the list?—I kept the list, and called the names over.

6430. What did you do as each was paid?—I called the next name over, taking them in rotation, according to the list.

6431. What did you do with the list; how did you know each had been paid?—By crossing the name off, you will find.

6432. Did you cross out the whole of the name, or only the surname?—Surname and Christian name; scored right across them; erased altogether.

6433. Just look (handing the list to the Witness)?—That was my intention.

6434. You crossed out only the surname in almost all the instances; just look at that?—Yes, on the other list I crossed out both (pointing to another part of the list); I knew I had done it on some portion of it.

6435. When you had the list had any of the names been already crossed out from it?—No.

Q

6436. Are

W. Jackson.

23 January
1869.

6436. Are you aware whether you paid any person who was a voter?—I did not pay any voter.

6437. Was any voter paid in your presence?—No voter was paid in my presence.

6438. I do not want to lead you; are you quite sure that before you had that list, some of the names had been crossed out?—They had not.

6439. You are sure about that, are you?—I am sure about that.

6440. Who was this disguise used by; did you pay them up at the "Malt Shovel," can you say that?—I cannot say.

6441. You do not know?—I do not know. I was not in disguise.

6442. Did you know nearly all the men?—I did not many. I did not know.

6443. But many you did know?—Many I did know.

6444. And many knew you?—And many knew me.

6445. How many times was this gone through, this mode of payment?—Three different times.

6446. And did you use the same list?—No. I can point out to you three different lists; you will find them in different handwritings. That is the first payment (pointing to a list), the first four sheets.

6447. Which was the second lot; that one where the adding up is?—Yes; you see the total amount at the bottom, 30 l. 5 s.

6448. The first one adding up is 123 l.; just see if those are the three separate lists now (handing three separate batches of papers to the Witness)?—Yes, they are.

6449. Are they in the order now, number 1, 2, and 3?—They are.

6450. And were the same two mysterious strangers there on each occasion?—Only the first occasion.

6451. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] Were they all three at Osman Pountney's?—No, only the first payment.

6452. Mr. Poland.] What interval was that after the election?—On the Friday following. The first payment.

6453. When did you make the second payment?—On the Monday following.

6454. And where?—At my shop in Wribben-hall.

6455. And the third?—At my shop on the day following; on the Tuesday.

6456. How was it these watchers came to your shop, do you know?—They felt dissatisfied at the first payment; said they wanted more money.

6457. Did you arrange that with them, that they were to come to your shop?—I arranged that they were to meet at Mr. Pardoe's next morning at the office, and see what he said, as I could not do anything more.

6458. What did they do at Mr. Pardoe's the next morning?—Had their names put down for more money.

6459. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] Were you there?—I were not.

6460. Mr. Poland.] After the money had been paid by the strangers, what became of them, do you know?—I do not know. I left them in the room and went home; at least I went down to the office.

6461. Did you know their names, or were they to be found;—I did not know their names.

6462. Do you know?—I do not; entire strangers to me.

6463. Did you see them without the disguise?—I did not.

6464. Did they tell you where they came from?—No; I never asked them.

6465. I do not know that I asked you before; but was any reason given to you why the payment was to be made in this way?—There was not. I beg your pardon. Mr. Pardoe said very likely they would not be satisfied, and there might be a row; and if they knew the parties that paid them, they might beat them. Mr. Pardoe said I should meet with two strangers up at Mr. Pountney's. The reason of that was because they would very likely not be satisfied with the payment, and they would probably kick up a row, and waylay the two strangers very likely.

6466. Are you able to state positively that no other men than those on the list were paid?—I do.

6467. One of other matters; do you know a man named Goodwin at all?—I do.

6468. Did you see him one night at the "Waggon and Horses"?—I saw him outside the door.

6469. Did you give him any rum-and-water?—Not as I am aware of.

6470. Do you remember whether you had any rum-and-water yourself that night?—I had not.

6471. Did you see Goodwin at all with Sir Richard that night; did you see Sir Richard that night?—I did.

6472. How were you paid for the services you rendered in pointing out the places where the voters lived?—Never was paid at all; never expected anything.

Cross-examined by Fitzjames Stephen.

6473. Did Mr. Herbert Pardoe give you those three lists at once, or at different times?—At different times.

6474. When did he give you the first list?—On the Friday after the election.

6475. Do you know whose handwriting the list was in?—I did not.

6476. And you say that you paid or saw paid, a number of persons whom you did not know?—A number of persons who I did not know, and a number that I did know.

6477. Then those whom you did not know for what you knew may have been voters?—I had a proper list given me on which there were no voters at all.

6478. What you did was to call over the list?—What I did was to call over the list.

6479. And then the men appeared?—The men appeared one by one.

6480. When a man had appeared he went forward and the disguised person paid him?—The disguised person paid him.

6481. Many of the persons so paid were people whom you did not know?—Yes.

6482. All you do know, in fact, is, that the people so paid, were people answering to the names of persons in the list who received those sums of money?—Yes.

6483. And Mr. Pardoe told you not to pay voters?—He said that there were no voters in that list.

6484. Did Mr. Pardoe give you the money?—Mr. Acton Pardoe? Mr. Herbert Pardoe gave me the list.

6485. Were they both together then?—No, they was not.

6486. Whom

6486. Whom did you see first?—Mr. Herbert Pardoe.

6487. He gave you the list?—He gave me the list.

6488. And then Mr. Acton Pardoe gave you the money?—Gave me the money.

6489. How much money did Mr. Acton Pardoe give you the first time?—£. 120.

6490. What did he give it you in?—Gold and silver.

6491. Now, then, about the second list; who gave you the second list?—Mr. Herbert Pardoe.

6492. At his father's house?—At the office.

6493. And exactly the same thing took place each time did it, except that there were no strangers at the other places?—Except that there were no strangers. I paid the money myself the second time at my shop.

6494. Do you know Mr. Herbert Pardoe's handwriting?—I do not.

6495. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] Whose peculiar figures are those at the end summing the two up?—Burnish's.

6496. Mr. Fitzjames Stephen] Now, in respect to the third list; on the third list nobody is struck out at all?—You will find some ticket at the end, the same meaning.

6497. The tick means the same as striking out?—Yes.

6498. So that they were all paid there except —?—One or two.

6499. Gecage Gillam of the "Vine"?—He never attended.

6500. He did not come?—He did not come.

6501. Is that the man who keeps the "Vine," or his son?—His son, I believe.

6502. Then there is John Tolley?—John Tolley never came.

6503. You say you made an arrangement with these voters that they were to go down to Mr. Pardoe's next day; they were dissatisfied?—Not voters.

6504. Watchers, I meant to say?—Watchers.

6505. You made an arrangement with them?—I told them they had better apply at the office the next morning and see Mr. Pardoe himself.

6506. Did you see them at the office?—I did; a portion of them standing outside.

6507. Were there any men standing outside there who had not been at the place, where you had paid them at the "Malt Shovel"?—Yes, there were.

6508. Were any of the persons that came down that you saw at Mr. Pardoe's, voters?—That I saw the next morning?

6509. Yes?—Not that I am aware of.

6510. Could you say they were not?—I could venture to say they were not.

6511. None of them?—None of them.

6512. None of those who came down?—None of those who came down.

6513. Did you see any paying go on at Mr. Pardoe's?—I did not.

6514. Anybody paid there?—No, I did not. I beg your pardon, I did pay one in there myself.

6515. Who is that?—One named Bishop, William Bishop of the "Swan"; his mother keeps the "Swan."

6516. You paid William Bishop of the "Swan"?—Yes, at the office.

6517. How much did you pay him?—I think it was a sovereign; you will find it on one of those lists, I think.

6518. The men themselves who were paid, gave no receipt, did they?—No, they did not.

6519. Now about this man Goodwin; you saw him the night you were with Sir Richard Glass?—I did.

6520. Did you ask him for his vote?—I did not.

6521. Nor speak to him about his vote?—I told him Sir Richard wished to see him; he was coming down the road. I was not walking with Sir Richard.

6522. How far off was Sir Richard when you said that?—Twenty or 30 yards.

6523. Where did you go with him afterwards?—I left him in the road talking to Sir Richard; I left them in the road; I went into the back kitchen, and had some beer.

6524. Did you go into the parlour at all?—Yes.

6525. Was Sir Richard there?—Yes.

6526. Did you sit down in the parlour, at the table?—I sat down in the parlour.

6527. Had you anything to drink there?—Yes, a glass of brandy and cold water.

6528. Did you see Goodwin there?—Not to my recollection.

6529. You say you are not aware that you gave him rum and water; can you swear that you did not give him anything?—I could venture to swear I did not give him anything.

6530. Do you mean then to swear you did not give him anything?—I do swear it.

6531. Could you say whether he was drinking or not?—He had been in the parlour when I went in; I went into the back kitchen first.

6532. Had he a glass before him?—I did not notice; there were many sitting there.

6533. Had most of them sitting there, glasses before them?—Most of them had glasses before them.

After a short adjournment,

6534. Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.] I understand that of your own knowledge, you know nothing about these watchers?—No, I did not.

6535. You did not know how long any particular man had watched?—I did not.

6536. You did not put them on?—I did not put them on.

6537. You said you got 173*l.* I think, from Mr. Pardoe?—I did.

6538. Did you give him any back?—No, I did not.

6539. You paid it all away?—No, I have not paid it all away; there is some to be paid if they like to apply for it.

6540. How much have you got in your hands still?—I could not say.

6541. Can you say whether you have got 10*l.* in your hands?—No, I have not.

6542. How much?—£. 5 perhaps.

6543. Have you ever been asked for the balance?—No, I have not.

6544. Let me just understand about these ticks and crosses on these lists; did you pay any other men besides those who are crossed out on that list; did you pay Horton, who is not crossed out?—No, I did not pay him; I do not know any of those who are not crossed out.

6545. Did you pay those two people, in pencil, scratched out?—Yes.

Mr. Justice Blackburn.] Who are those?

6546. Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.] Thomas Slater, and

W. Jackson. and Henry Carter.—(To the Witness.) You added up all those sums, including Slater and Carter, to make 25*l.* 8*s.*?—I did not add them up.

23 January
1869.

6547. Who did?—Mr. Pardoe.

6548. Then what is the meaning of 5*l.* at the bottom, making up 30*l.*?—I want to see No. 1 list.

6549. What does that mean (handing the lists to the Witness)?—He only gave me 120*l.* at first, but the first list comes to 123*l.*; he ran it up roughly, I suppose; I asked him for 5*l.* more when I went there the next day—not the next day, the Monday, and that he gave it me to make up the 30*l.*

6550. Had you paid 123*l.* on the first list?—No, I did not pay 123*l.*

6551. How much did you pay; look at the figures?—Let me look—(after looking at the paper) 117*l.* 9*s.* 6*d.*

6552. I thought you told me he gave you 120*l.* the first day?—I did tell you that he gave me 120*l.* the first day, and so he did.

6553. Then you had a balance in hand?—I had a balance in hand.

6554. What did you want of the 5*l.* extra then?—There is some not paid upon that list.

6555. You say these pencil figures are Mr. Burnish's?—Yes, Mr. Pardoe asked him to run over the list when I made objections (at least not objections); but the next morning I told him I had not enough money to pay had they all applied the first day. He called Mr. Burnish up stairs and said, "Just run over that first list," it comes to 123*l.*

6556. Do you know the Asherofts?—I do not.

6557. Do you know William Hughes and John Hughes?—I know William Hughes and John Hughes.

6558. Are they the sons of John Hughes, of the "Ruuning Horse"?—I believe they are.

6559. Do you know Henry Payne, Walter Payne, and William Payne?—I would not say I did.

6560. Do you know James Payne, of Lax-lane?—No, I do not.

6561. Do you know Charles Crump?—Charles Crump; yes, I do.

6562. And John Crump?—And John Crump.

6563. Are they the sons of Thomas Crump?—No, they are the sons of Stephen Crump.

6564. Do you know Edward Collins and John Collins?—I do not.

6565. Do you know William Carter?—No.

6566. Do you know Thomas Darks?—There are so many Darkses, I cannot say I know him personally.

6567. Is there a Thomas Darks who is the son of Benjamin Darks?—That I cannot say.

6568. I mean Benjamin Darks of Lax Lane?—No, I could not say I know him; I do not know much of Bewdley.

6569. You do not know much of Bewdley?—Not of those sort of men at least.

[The Witness withdrew.]

OSMAN POUNTNEY SWORN; Examined by Mr. Poland.

O. Pountney. 6570. Do you keep the "Malt Shovel"?—Yes.

6571. How long have done so?—About 11 years.

6572. Are you a voter yourself?—Yes.

6573. For whom did you vote?—Sir Richard Glass.

6574. After the election, do you remember William Jackson and two other men paying the watchers?—Yes.

6575. How were they paid?—I loosed them in, one at a time, in my room up-stairs.

6576. Who were inside the room?—Jackson and two strangers.

6577. Did you see the strangers?—Yes.

6578. Were they disguised?—They only had wigs on.

6579. Nothing else?—Well, I think the one had a bit of a beard on, but I could not exactly say for certain; but I think he had.

6580. How were the men let into the room?—One at a time.

6581. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] First of all, tell us how the two men with the wigs were brought there?—They were taken up-stairs, my missis loosed them into the room; I was called up-stairs to mind the door. I said I thought it was my place to be there. There might be a disturbance, and they might break the things, or something.

6582. Mr. Poland.] What did these people say they had come for?—Jackson said there was two come to pay some men with him.

6583. How were the men let in; who called their names?—Jackson called their names, and I admitted them in.

6584. Were you actually inside the room or outside?—I was inside the room.

6585. Those men were paid; did you know them as watchers?—I knew them.

6586. What were you at the door for?—To mind the door, and to take care that they did not break the things.

6587. Out of the persons who were paid (you say you have lived in your present place for about 11 years), are you able to say whether there was a single voter amongst them?—I am sure there was no voter among them.

6588. After the men had been paid, what became of the strangers?—They went away.

6589. Do you know at all who they were?—No; I do not.

6590. Nor where they have gone to?—Nor where they have gone to, nor where they came from.

6591. Do you think you would know them again if you saw them?—No, I do not think I should.

6592. Do you know the "Fox," kept by Grif-ford?—Very well, and so ought everybody.

6593. Were you there on an occasion when Mr. Pardoe was there?—I was.

6594. What day was it, do you remember?—I could not tell exactly, but it was some time in July; I could not exactly say.

6595. Did you see Mr. Pardoe on that occasion?—Yes; I saw him there.

6596. Did you see him call attention to anything at the fireplace?—I did not.

6597. Did you see him give any money to Mrs. Griffin?—No, I did not see him give her anything.

6598. Did you say "Now, Mr. Pardoe, you must leave something here"?—I did not say so.

6599. And did he say in reply "I have given her 5*s.*"?—He did not; not as I heard, and I was close by him.

6600. Did

6600. Did you see Sir Richard there on that day?—Sir Richard was up-stairs at the present time we are talking about now, when we were by the fire.

6601. Sir Richard was where?—Sir Richard was upstairs at the time.

6602. Was anything said that out of any money that was to be given to her, she was to give a quart or two of ale away, and put the rest in her pocket?—There was nothing named of the sort.

6603. Did Mrs. Griffin say anything to the effect that Gillam, of the "Vine"—?—She never named him.

6604. Was anything said about Gillam, of the "Vine," having had 10s.; and there ought to be 10s. left at the "Fox"?—They never named nothing of the sort, as I heard, any of them.

6605. Had you seen any other persons at the "Fox" that day that you are speaking of?—Mr. Pardoe, me, and Mr. Webster was there, and Sir Richard.

6606. Did you see Mr. Pardoe give anything to anybody upon that occasion, or upon any other occasion, there?—I did not.

6607. Was there an old man of the name of Rogers there?—I believe there was.

6608. Who is he; a man who lives at Bewdley?—Yes; he has lived at Bewdley ever since I can remember.

6609. What is he?—He is an old pensioner.

6610. Did you see anything given to him?—I did not see anything given to him.

6611. On the 31st of August, were you present at the same place; the "Fox"?—Yes, I was.

6612. What took place then?—Me and a man named Trow went in and we called for a pint of ale, and I asked Mrs. Griffin if the master was at home, and she said, "He is gone out." At that I just asked her how she thought Mr. Griffin was going to vote, and she says, "I do not know, for he has got a wife and family to look after; he must take care of himself"; at that Mr. Trow just drank up the drink and off we went to our Conservative Association room.

6613. Had you previously said anything about voting?—No, I did not, but a fortnight before the election Griffin stopped me going up the street, and I asked him how he was going to vote, and he said he should vote for the man as give him the most money.

6614. On the occasion you have referred to, the 31st of August, was anything said by you or in your presence about the gentlemen taking away the license?—Not a bit of it; there never was named such a thing.

6615. Have you seen these lists?—No.

6616. Just look at them (handing the lists of watchers to the Witness). If it is wished can you state who those different people are upon that list, so that we can tell whether there is a single voter amongst them?—Yes, I do not believe there is a voter here, I do not see that there is; I kept the door and there was no voter allowed in.

6617. You are a member of the town council are you not?—Yes.

Cross-examined by Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.

6618. There is no voter on these lists you say?—I do not believe there is.

6619. There are some names of voters, I suppose they are the names of sons?—No doubt about that.

9.

6620. There is a man named John Parminter I think?—Parmenter. O. Pountney.

6621. Is he the son of Parmenter, the voter? 23 January 1869.
—I believe he is.

6622. Did you personally know all those people who came to be paid?—Yes, I knew them when I admitted them in at the door.

6623. You let no man in whom you did not know?—No, I did not.

6624. Did you let in four Ashcrofts?—Yes.

6625. George, William, Samuel and John?—Yes.

6626. What relations are they to Thomas Ashcroft?—I cannot say.

6627. Do you know whether they are relations?—I believe they are, there is Thomas and John, and Samuel; there are several Ashcrofts, four or five of them; I cannot tell exactly their names.

6628. Are they sons of Thomas Ashcroft?—I do not know, there are so many Ashcrofts I cannot tell which you mean.

6629. To put it in another way, then: there is a George Ashcroft mentioned in that list, you know him because you let him in?—"Pinkey" as they call him, that is a nickname.

6630. What is the name of his father?—I am sure I cannot tell you.

6631. Where does his father live?—I am sure I do not know, I cannot tell you where his father lives.

6632. Where does he live?—Him, he did live up at the Holloway; that is the plain for Venus Bank.

6633. And do not know there is a Thomas Ashcroft that lives at Venus Bank?—There is two Thomas Ashcrofts living there.

6634. The Thomas Ashcroft that lives at Venus Bank?—They live close together, it is not 15 yards from the one to the other.

6635. Do you know whether this George Ashcroft is the son of Thomas Ashcroft of Venus Bank or either of them?—I do not believe he is.

6636. Do you know whose son he is?—No, I do not; he is almost as old as the other, the Thomas Ashcroft, and therefore he cannot be a son.

6637. Do you know what relation he is; is he a brother?—It is not a brother I am sure, I cannot tell what else he may be.

6638. William Ashcroft; do you know what his father is?—No, I do not.

6639. Where does he live?—I cannot say.

6640. What time of day was it when these people in wigs came into your house?—I did not say as they did come in with wigs on into the house; my misses admitted them in, not me.

6641. Can you say what time she admitted them?—Most likely it would be five or six; six o'clock, perhaps; I cannot tell to a little, but I should say about six o'clock.

6642. And what time was it when the paying took place?—Well, soon afterwards.

6643. Had you had any orders about it from anybody?—Mr. Jackson come up and said there was two men coming up here, and he was going to pay some watchers, and asked if I had got a room: I said, "Yes."

6644. It was Jackson who spoke to you?—I was not in the room when the strangers came, but I got it ready for them.

6645. You got the room ready and waited to see that no mischief was done?—Certainly.

6646. And you let the people in one by one?—I did.

q 3

6647. Did

O. Pountney.

23 January
1869.

6647. Did you take special notice to see that they were not voters that were paid?—I took notice of that; I was not going to let them in there without they was all right.

6648. Had anybody told you to take care that no voters came in?—Certainly not.

6649. Why did you do it?—I did it upon my own responsibility.

6650. You had no instructions about it at all?—Certainly not.

6651. Did you know it was illegal to employ voters as watchers?—Certainly not.

6652. If you did not know it was illegal to employ voters as watchers, why did you take care that none but voters came in?—Because I did not know there were any voters on, and I should not have admitted them, anyhow.

6653. Why would not you have admitted them?—I cannot tell you any more, than that I should not have admitted them in.

6654. Why not?—Because I knew myself as voters must not be allowed to have any money, and even if they had been on I should not have admitted them in.

6655. How did you know that?—Because I found it out by my own experience.

6656. What experience have you had?—I have read a little bit, and I know that no person has a right to have money for his vote.

6657. Then you thought that if any voter was paid for watching, it would be paying him money for his vote did you?—Certainly, I should think so.

6658. Therefore you watched to prevent anybody receiving money for his vote, in that form?—I did in my own house.

6659. And without any instructions?—Yes, without any instructions.

6660. As you have so much legal knowledge, I will ask you do you know anything about an Act of Parliament, which was passed last summer, about employing voters?—I do not know much about Acts of Parliament at all, but I know a little bit when I think.

6661. So I see; you did not know anything about an Act of Parliament, forbidding voters to be employed?—I considered a little about it myself, I did not consider that a voter ought to be employed or paid as a watcher.

6662. And therefore you wished to prevent its taking place?—Certainly.

6663. You have talked about your own experience, have you been concerned in election matters before?—Only in town council affairs.

6664. Have you ever been a watcher?—No, never in my life, nor do not want to be.

6665. You say you got a room ready?—Me and the misses got it ready.

6666. How did you get it ready; did you put the table in?—There was a table in; we put the table on one side, instead of quite in the middle.

6667. Did you put a pen and ink there?—There was a pen and ink there; I did not put the pen and ink on the table, but I believe the misses did, I do not know.

6668. Was that after Mr. Taylor had spoken to you; Mr. Jackson, I mean?—Yes, certainly.

Re-examined by Mr. Poland.

6669. I think you said there are three Thomas Ashcrofts?—There are two as I know of, the one is a voter and the other is not, and the one voter was asked yesterday by one of the gentlemen to come and swear they put him on as a watcher, and he would not do it, I believe—

6670. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] You must not tell us anything, except what you are asked.

6671. Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.] Did you put the watchers on?—I did not.

6672. Do you know who did?—No, I do not.

Mr. JOHN BURY sworn; Examined by Mr. Poland.

Mr.
J. Bury.

6673. ARE you a Solicitor?—I am.

6674. Do you practice in Bewdley?—I do.

6675. Did you vote for Sir Richard Glass?—I did.

6676. Do you remember seeing John Darks on one occasion?—Yes.

6677. On what occasion?—On the occasion of having canvassed (I saw it this morning in the newspaper, I think) a person of the name of Humpherson, Joseph Humpherson, for his vote.

6678. Where was this?—It was on Mrs. Hopkins' premises, I think.

6679. Were you alone?—I was with Sir Richard Glass in the workshop.

6680. What took place?—Sir Richard Glass had a long conversation with Joseph Humpherson in his workshop, where he was turning a lathe; and he, being an intelligent man, Sir Richard stopped and talked to him for a long while upon the working classes; and it ended in his turning out he had not a vote at all; but while we were there somebody else was brought in to be canvassed, and Sir Richard canvassed him; I forget who that man was. He was asked for his vote. I do not remember the result, but I know that on leaving the premises I was the last down the wooden stairs, the flight of steps, a kind of ladder from the workshop. I was the last down, and I was asked by a man for money to drink

Sir Richard's health. I said, "Are you a voter, and what is your name?" He said, "My name is Dark." I said, "Very well; if you are no voter I suppose there is no harm in giving you something," so I gave him a couple of shillings and something, I forget what it was, odd money, I believe, but what it was I do not know.

6681. Do you know his name?—He said his name was Dark; I did not know the man before, and I do not know the man now.

6682. Do you know what he did with the money at all?—Not a bit.

6683. Did you believe at the time that he was not a voter?—Most certainly. I asked him the question before I gave him the money; thinking that the man having been no voter that we had been talking to for a long while, very likely he was not a voter either; I asked him, and he said he was no voter: he asked me for something; I said, "Very well, here is something to drink his health with."

Cross-examined by Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.

6684. What month was this in?—It was early in the canvass.

6685. Of course, as a solicitor, you knew that the register was not then made up?—The November register was not out; no.

6686. Did

Mr.
J. Bury.
—
23 January
1869

6733. I will read it; "That the Committee
Q 4 deeming

Mr. G. B.
Burnish.

1869.

deeming it expedient that every effort should be made to secure the return to Parliament of Sir Richard Atwood Glass for the borough, hold meetings." I cannot make sense of this. What I have seems to have been miscopied, will you read from the minutes?—"That the Committee deeming it expedient that every effort should be made to secure the return to Parliament of Sir Richard Atwood Glass, for the borough, hold meetings on Tuesdays and Fridays in each week until the day of election, for the purpose of voluntarily aiding him in his canvass of the electors, and that the place of each meeting be from time to time appointed by the committee: the first meeting to be held at Mr. Osman Pountney's at half-past seven punctually.

6734. That is the "Malt Shovel"?—Yes.

6735. After the passing of that resolution were meetings held?—Yes.

6736. Whereabouts?—In several parts of the town.

6737. In different public-houses?—Yes.

6738. Just name some of them?—The "Running Horse"; the "Hawthorn Bush."

6739. The "Coach and Horses"?—Yes, the "Coach and Horses."

6740. The "Rising Sun"?—Yes, the "Rising Sun."

6741. Just think of any more you have got?—The "Black Boy."

6742. At these meetings who used to be in the in the chair, generally?—I believe I occupied the chair, generally.

6743. And used you to order drink?—Yes.

6744. Were persons allowed to come in and partake of the drink without paying for it?—Yes.

6745. Was there any secrecy about this; did anybody mind the door or could anybody come in?—For a certain time it could be secret.

6746. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] What do you mean?—The committee invariably would meet in the room first before anyone else came in.

6747. The members of the association would meet in the room first?—Yes.

6748. And then after that?—After that the friends of members of the committee would be admitted in.

6749. Mr. Poland.] Who used to call for the drink, generally?—I generally called for it.

6750. And who used to stop it generally?—I did.

6751. You used to what is termed stop the tap?—Yes.

6752. Can you tell whether any meetings were held besides those on the Tuesdays and Fridays?—Yes, there were afterwards.

6753. What days were those?—They would be most evenings afterwards.

6754. Can you tell how many meetings altogether were held?—No, I could not.

6755. Could you say about from the 12th of October when this resolution was passed?—I should think about 20.

6756. Who paid for the drink?—No one.

6757. Was it paid for at any place?—It was paid for at two.

6758. Where were the two places where you paid for the drink?—The "Peacock," and, by my orders, at the "Waggon and Horses."

6759. How much was paid?—There was 3 l in one instance, and 4 l in the other.

6760. In whose name was the drink ordered at the other places?—In my name.

6761. I should have asked you, out of what funds did you pay the moneys you have mentioned, the 4 l. and the 3 l.?—The funds of the association.

6762. And in what way do you intend to pay for the other beer that has been had?—From the same fund.

6763. When you took the chair and gave the orders, and so on, were you acting in any way as the clerk to Mr. Pardoe?—Certainly not.

6764. Only as secretary to the association?—Certainly.

6765. An observation has been attributed to you about six months on the round stairs; was anything of that kind said by you?—I believe I did make use of that expression.

6766. To what had it reference?—It had reference to the general talk of the town at that time.

6767. In what way?—Nearly every one was chaffing one another with having six months; I frequently was chaffed myself, and made use of that expression, copying what was told me by others.

6768. What are the subscriptions to this association?—Honorary members half-a-guinea per year.

6769. Honorary members, that is not working men, half-a-guinea a year?—Yes, and the other members 1 d. per week.

6770. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] Have you got a list of the number of the honorary members, I do not care so much about their names; how many honorary members are there?—Twelve.

6771. How many common men are there?—There are 115.

6772. The income was something like 5 l. a year, and you have paid 7 l. out of the funds already?—The honorary members, some of them paid more than the half-guinea a year.

6773. Mr. Poland.] There were some donations?—Yes, some donations.

6774. Can you tell me accurately at all as to how much you owe for the drink at the other places?—No, I could not.

6775. Had you anything to do, as Mr. Pardoe's clerk, with putting watchers on?—No.

6776. Did you pay them at all, or see them at Mr. Pardoe's office?—I saw some about the office.

6777. Have you seen these lists; just look at them; I think you will find some pencil figures of your own (handing the lists to the Witness)?—Yes, I have.

6778. When did you see these lists?—I saw them to add them up.

6779. Was that previous to the persons being paid by Jackson?—I believe it was after.

6780. Were you cognizant of that arrangement which had been made to pay the watchers?—I was not.

6781. Or do you know, of your own knowledge, why they were to be paid up at Mr. Osman Pountney's?—No, I do not.

6782. Tell me this; during the time that the canvassing was going on, and so on, were you aware of any payment; did you make any payment or give any treat to voters out of the money of Mr. Pardoe?—No.

6783. As his clerk?—No.

6784. Are you personally aware of any payments made by Mr. Pardoe for bribery or treating?—I am not aware of any.

6785. Used you to use the expression "stopping the tap" when you cut off the supply of beer?—Yes, I have said so.

6786. Did you assist in the registration?—A little.

6787. Do you remember any transaction about Mrs. Winwood's beer?—Mr. Draper asked me about a bill that was owing to Mrs. Winwood.

6788. What was said about that?—He saw me in the street, and called me in, and said there was a bill owing to Mrs. Winwood; would I see that I was paid to her, and not to Benjamin Carter? I said if there was a bill, and I had to pay it, she should have it instead of Benjamin Carter.

6789. Did you know anything about the men at the "Malt Shovel"?—The strangers?

6790. Yes?—No, nothing at all.

6791. You do not know who they are?—No, I do not; I never saw them.

Cross-examined by Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.

6792. Mrs. Winwood keeps the "Hop Pole," does she not?—She does.

6793. And it was at the "Hop Pole" that you made use of this expression about the round stairs?—It was, I believe.

6794. Was that one of the places at which you had ordered beer?—No.

6795. Who ordered the beer there?—I do not know.

6796. You took the chair there?—That was at a supper at which we each paid our own expenses.

6797. Did you pay for that?—No, we paid out of our own pockets; each individual person paid.

6798. You are sure each person paid?—Yes.

6799. Have you got the books of this Working Mens' Association?—Yes (handing in a book).

6800. Under the 8th rule it says that "the secretaries shall receive all monies and pay the same to the treasurer, and shall, together with the treasurer, keep accounts of all monies received and expended by him, and they shall be responsible for all monies and property in their possession belonging to the association; the accounts to be audited before the annual meeting." Have you got the accounts?—Not of what has been received and paid by the treasurer; I have not.

6801. Did you receive monies?—Yes.

6802. Have you an account of the monies which you have received?—I have.

6803. Let me see it?—Here it is (handing it in).

6804. Are these all the accounts that were ever kept?—No, there was a subscription book which was not posted into the cash-book (handing it in).

6805. This, in course of time, ought to have been posted up into this?—It ought to have been posted.

6806. Is this a list of the donations?—Yes, it is one list.

6807. "Sir Richard Glass 10*l*, John Bury two guineas, R. Acton Pardoe one guinea, Herbert Pardoe, a guinea, Whittington Landon, a guinea, Cecil Webster a guinea, W. Boucher a guinea, Benjamin Gardner a guinea, S. Price a guinea, and Mr. Mills a guinea." These monies were received by you?—Yes.

6808. Are these the lists of working men on this first page; are these all the subscriptions you ever received from working men—ordinary members (handing the book to the Witness)?—No.

6809. What are they, then?—They are in another part of the book (turning over the leaves, and handing back the book to Mr. Fitzjames Stephen).

6810. That page, I suppose, and that page taken together would show the full amount which you received from ordinary members, would it not?—I think you will find some more on a third page.

6811. There is very little there?—Yes.

6812. These three would together?—Yes.

6813. You are more familiar with the books than I am; will you tell me, from just looking at that, how much you ever received from members altogether?—Very nearly 5 l.

6814. And from honorary members 12 guineas, I think it is entered here?—Twelve guineas.

6815. And from donations it would be according to the list handed up just now?—Yes.

6816. Here is a subscription on this list from Sir Richard Glass of 10*l*, and there is no "paid" against it; but was it paid?—It was paid.

6817. As far as I make out, there were 20*l* altogether, or between 20*l* and 21*l*, received from the donations, and 12 guineas from the honorary subscriptions, and somewhere about 5 l, you say, from the ordinary members?—Yes.

6818. Here you have the expenditure; is that all the expenditure which ever took place, except the drink; that is all the account that you have got?—I have several invoices and other matters that I have had to pay, when I have had to go to Kidderminster and elsewhere.

6819. Several matters for your own expenses to Kidderminster and elsewhere?—Yes.

6820. But no large matters?—Not very large.

6821. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] I thought you had stated you had taken a house and bought a library?—A library has been presented.

6822. But you have got a house?—Yes.

6823. Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.] I see nothing put down for paying for that; it was not given in gratis, was it?—Yes; the house was given in gratis.

6824. Who gave the house gratis?—Mr. Pardoe.

6825. And who presented the library?—Several gentlemen in the town.

6826. Just mention their names?—Mr. Chellingworth.

6827. Did Mr. Pardoe give any books?—No.

6828. Or Mr. Herbert Pardoe?—I do not think Mr. Herbert Pardoe gave any.

6829. Just tell us some more; Mr. Bury?—Mr. Bury gave some.

6830. Mr. Gardener?—Mr. Gardener did not; Mr. Haycock.

6831. Mr. Boucher?—Mr. Boucher did not.

6832. Who gave most of them?—Most of them were given by Mr. Chellingworth.

6833. You take in newspapers, you say?—Yes.

6834. There is no entry here of expenses for newspapers?—They have not been paid.

6835. Can you tell me how much is owing for the newspapers?—No, I could not.

6836. Would you be good enough to give me the date of the resolution that you have mentioned?—Which resolution?

6837. The one about expending the money in the way in question?—The 12th of October; that was the last in that book.

6838. I see you had a rule that there were to be four quarterly meetings in the year, on days stated, on which occasions 3*d*. a member should be expended in refreshment?—Yes.

R

6839. Is

Mr. G. B. Burnish.

23 January 1869.

Mr. G. B.
Burnish.

23 January
1869.

6839. Is there any furniture in the room?—There is some in.

6840. Whose is it?—It belongs to the Association.

6841. Who gave it them?—They ordered it.

6842. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] Is that paid for?—No.

6843. Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.] Have you received bills from any of these people at whose houses the beer was drunk; whose houses were thrown open, to speak plainly?—Yes.

6844. You know Mrs Henton, of the "Hop Pole," in Wribbenhall?—Yes.

6845. Has she not sent you in a bill?—I have not seen it.

6846. You have received no bill from her?—No.

6847. You have received no bills from any of them?—No.

6848. What business were you doing when you were staying at the "Wheatsheaf" in July and August?—The business of the office.

6849. Yes, and also of the election?—What little copying may be required I did in the office.

6850. I suppose, generally, you walk to and fro, or come to and fro somehow, from Kidderminster?—Generally I do.

6851. But during this time it was more convenient, in consequence of your services being wanted here, to stay here?—Yes; because I could not see Mr. Pardoe for his own private business until he returned.

Re-examined by Mr. Poland.

6852. The reading-room is still open, is it?—It is.

6853. You have the newspapers taken in regularly?—Yes.

6854. How many newspapers do you take in?—Three daily papers, and four or five weekly papers, besides some monthly magazines.

6855. Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.] Pray, when were the last weekly payments made of this association during the present year 1869; have those weekly payments continued to be made?—No, they have not.

6856. When were they made last?—The last weekly payment was made a little before Christmas, I think.

6857. Do you, then, go on taking in papers now?—Yes; we expect to pay about every month chiefly.

6858. However, you have had no weekly payments since the week before Christmas?—No.

6859. Mr. Poland.] You say you propose to have the weekly payments made monthly?—Yes.

6860. And you have been paid up to about Christmas?—Up to a few weeks before Christmas.

6861. Did you say a few or two?—A few, I said; it is about two.

6862. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] I have not seen any resolution by which you were to hold additional meetings at different public-houses; is there one?—There is none entered; it was resolved by a committee afterwards.

6863. It was resolved by them, but not entered?—No, not entered.

6864. I do not see, by any resolution here, that the entertaining of friends of the committee was to be paid for out of the funds?—It was decided at the same time, but it was not entered.

6865. I have not seen in your account-book any entry of the money paid for drink, or of the liability incurred for drink?—There is no entry.

6866. No entry of any kind whatever for them?—No; I have not received the bills.

6867. You paid two, you told us?—Yes; two were paid; one by my order.

6868. But the two you have paid I do not find entered at all?—They will come in.

6869. But they are not there yet?—No.

6870. You ordered all this quantity of drink at the different places, without inquiring how much it was; you have kept no accounts of how much was supplied?—Not thoroughly.

6871. Have you at all?—Not at all, except from memory.

6872. You ordered drink in large quantities upon your own responsibility, as you tell me, relying upon the funds of the Working Men's Association, which were to come in hereafter; is that what you say?—Yes.

[The Witness withdrew.]

Mr. ROBERT ACTON PARDOE sworn; Examined by Mr. Poland.

Mr. R. A.
Pardoe.

6873. ARE you a solicitor?—Yes.

6874. How long have you practised in Bewdley?—About 30 years.

6875. At the last election were you Sir Richard Glass' agent?—Yes.

6876. One of his agents?—Yes.

6877. Just a word as to when Sir Richard came into the town; when he first arrived, had you some supper; some entertainment at your place?—I believe there was, but I did not see it or order it.

6878. Did you go to meet Sir Richard?—Yes.

6879. Who got up this entertainment, whatever it was?—I believe it was Mrs. Pardoe.

6880. Do you know what it cost?—No; some very trifle, I suppose.

6881. Did you meet Sir Richard at the station?—Yes.

6882. Did you get out of the carriage at your own door?—No.

6883. You went on with him to Mr. Shaw's?—Yes.

6884. Do you know of your own knowledge at all, how many persons there were in your garden?—I never saw them.

6885. We have heard that you had from Sir Richard, 500 l. I think?—Yes.

6886. Does that include the 100 l. from Mr. Gardener?—Mr. Crowther you mean; no.

6887. Then you have had 600 l. altogether?—Yes; 100 l. I had for Mr. Crowther towards the registration.

6888. Were the other 500 l. for the purposes of the election?—Yes.

6889. Were you aware of these open houses where drink was supplied for nothing?—No.

6890. Did you know that your clerk was in the habit of ordering drink at these public-houses, and allowing people to consume it without paying for it?—No.

6891. You say you were not aware of that?—No; I never attended one meeting.

6892. If anything of that kind was done by Mr.

Mr. Burnish, was it by your authority?—Mine! certainly not.

6893. Was he acting for you in any way, for the purposes of the election?—No; except as my clerk in the office.

6894. Of course he was your clerk at the time; but was he acting as your clerk, disbursing your money with your knowledge in ordering this drink, and people being allowed to consume it without paying; was that with your knowledge, sanction, or consent? No.

6895. Did you attend the registration?—Yes; partly.

6896. Have you finally made up your accounts? No.

6897. Have you applied any of this money to the purpose of corrupt practices, either bribing or treating, or any corrupt practice connected with the election?—No; certainly not.

6898. Did you employ watchers?—I employed my own man.

6899. How many watchers were employed on your side?—I could not tell.

6900. About?—(The Witness proceeded to count the lists.)

6901. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] Who retained the watchers, if you yourself did not?—I cannot tell.

6902. Whoever retained them, was it done with your knowledge?—No; it was a most extraordinary thing; I could not find out about it.

6903. Mr. Poland.] Has it not been the custom; you have known former elections in Bewdley, have you not?—Yes.

6904. Has it not been the custom at the elections here, on both sides, to employ watchers?—Yes.

6905. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] Did you say that you employed any watcher at all?—I employed my servant.

6906. For what purpose?—To act as a watcher.

6907. And him only?—Yes.

6908. Only one man, and that your own servant?—Yes.

6909. Mr. Poland.] Did you not know that, whoever retained them, there were a number of watchers?—Yes.

6910. There were a number of watchers acting on the side of Sir Richard Glass?—Yes.

6911. And there were watchers on the other side, were there?—Oh yes.

6912. Do you really mean to say that you do not know who appointed them?—I do not (referring to the lists).

6913. Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.] Never mind those lists?—There were some parties came to my office to report that improper practices were going on; and they asked me what was to be done; I said, "You must do what you like."

6914. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] When was this; was it before the election, or after the election?—Before.

6215. Mr. Poland.] To whom did you say they must do as they like?—There were several persons came to speak to me about it.

6916. But who were they; you were the agent, having the control of the election, and you allowed them to do as they liked; who was it; do you remember who it was?—(The Witness remained silent.)

6917. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] Attend to the question?—There was Charles Pountney, I think, called.

6918. Mr. Poland.] When did he call, and and what did he say about it?—He said that the electors were being carried away; being taken away, I think; something of that sort.

6919. Go on; what else did he say?—That unless the electors were looked after, some of them would be lost.

6920. After the election, did some persons claim to be paid as watchers?—Yes.

6921. Where did they make the claim?—At my office.

6922. How many of them?—A great many; I cannot tell; my office was surrounded; and I was greatly annoyed; I was very much annoyed indeed; I could not go on with my business; there was a great excitement.

6923. What did they do?—They demanded payment.

6924. In what way?—They were very riotous, and made disturbances in the street, and I consulted with Mr. Gardner what was the proper thing to do, and I had an account of the names of the parties taken.

6925. The parties who claimed to be watchers?—Yes.

6926. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] Whom did you get that account from?—They came into my office, and I had their names put down as far as I could make them out.

6927. Mr. Poland.] Then what did you say to them about payment?—I said, "If there are any of them that are voters, I shall not pay them."

6928. You said that, did you?—Yes.

6929. What arrangement did you make about paying those who were not voters?—Then, seeing the excitement and disturbance, I thought it better to have a couple of strange men for my own protection, to protect me from paying any improperly; and I sent to Mr. Goldingham, of Worcester, to send two persons to pay those men, with Jackson.

6930. You sent to Mr. Goldingham, of Worcester, to send two men?—Yes.

6931. Who is Mr. Goldingham?—He is an attorney at Worcester.

6932. What next?—Then when the list was cast up—

6933. Did you arrange for two strange men to come from Worcester?—Yes.

6934. Where were the two strange men to go?—They went to the "Malt Shovel."

6935. To whom did you give the money?—Jackson.

6936. What directions you give to the watchers as to going there to be paid?—Nothing more than that they were sent up there to Mr. Pountney's.

6937. They were sent up there to be paid?—Yes.

6938. To whom was the list given?—To Jackson.

6939. And the money?—And the money.

6940. Do you know the names of those two men, the strange men?—No, I never saw them.

6941. You never saw them yourself?—No.

6942. Have you sent to try and find them?—Yes, every effort is being made.

6943. Will they be here either to-day or on Monday?—Yes, if possible, they will be here this evening.

6944. You have received some information?—Yes, there is no mystery about it.

6945. Did Jackson report to you what he had done?—Yes.

Mr. R. A.
Pardoe.

23 January
1869.

Mr. R. A.
Pardoe.

23 January
1869.

6946. Did the men afterwards come down to your office; some of the watchers?—Yes.

6947. What did they do there?—They were very dissatisfied.

6948. They were dissatisfied with the payment they got at the “Malt Shovel”?—Yes; they were very noisy and riotous.

6949. When they were noisy and riotous?—Then I ordered that the names of those parties should be taken down.

6950. And what was done then?—They were taken down.

6951. What then?—The list showing those that were dissatisfied, and another list that were not on the original list, and I gave him the money to pay that amounting to 30*l.* 8*s.*, I think.

6952. Besides the additional list, were some of those who were dissatisfied also paid at your office further sums?—Yes; I gave it to Jackson; I could not stand the noise and nonsense; I would not put up with the unpleasantness of having them at my office, and I gave Jackson the money.

6953. And how much altogether was paid to these watchers?—Altogether, 173*l.* 12*s.*

6954. Have you looked through those lists?—Yes.

6955. Is there a single voter on those lists?—Not that I know of; they have been gone through very carefully.

6956. As far as you know, is there a single voter on those lists?—No, not to my knowledge.

6957. Are you aware of any payment being made to any watcher who was a voter?—No; I declared that I would have nothing to do with any parties who chose to go on what they call watching, if they were voters.

6958. Did people go on watching of their own accord?—Yes.

6959. Do you know Mrs. Sophia Griffin?—Yes, I have seen her; I do not know her.

6960. Did you go to her house on the 8th of July?—I believe I did.

6961. Did you see her?—Yes.

6962. Did you direct attention to the fireplace, where there was something said about pretty paper, and did you put 5*s.* in her hand?—No.

6963. Did you say, “Here is 5*s.* for you”?—No.

6964. Did anything of this kind take place: did Osman Pountney say, “Mr. Pardoe, you must leave something,” and that then you gave her 5*s.*?—No.

6965. Did anything of that kind take place?—No.

6966. Do you remember whether you gave any money to any person on that occasion?—Yes; there was an old man in the house named Rogers, who was constantly asking me for money for something to drink, and so on, and I gave to Mrs. Griffin 1*s.* 6*d.*, and told her to give him some beer.

6967. Had the old man said anything to you?—Oh yes, he asked for some beer.

6968. Did you know the old man?—Oh, all my life; an old pensioner, constantly asking me for charity.

6969. Either on that occasion, or on any other, did you give any money for the purpose of procuring votes?—No.

6970. When you gave this 1*s.* 6*d.* where was Sir Richard Glass, do you know?—Upstairs with Griffin; Griffin was an invalid.

6971. Did you say to Mrs. Griffin, she was to give a quart or two of beer away, and put the rest in her pocket?—No.

6972. Was anything said about 10*s.* being left there; that Gillam, of “The Vine,” had had 10*s.*, and there must be 10*s.* left there?—No, there was no one there but myself, Mrs. Griffin, Osman Pountney, and old Rogers.

6973. Had Mr. Webster been there canvassing at that time?—He was with Sir Richard upstairs with the invalid.

Cross-examined by Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.

6974. It was Charles Pountney, you say, who first spoke to you about the improper practices on the other side?—Yes, you may put it in that way if you like.

6975. That is the way you have put it, you know; did Charles Pountney tell you that you must have watchers on your side?—Yes.

6976. And then you said, “You must do as you like?”—Yes.

6977. Was that all you said about it to him?—I was against the practice altogether; I left him to do as he liked.

6978. Still you told him to do as he liked?—Yes.

6979. And, although you were against the practice, you afterwards paid 170 odd pounds for people who had done it?—Yes.

6280. Now I suppose your accounts that you have returned as election agent are correct?—I spent the money.

6981. The election accounts which you have returned, are they correct?—Yes; the money is spent.

6982. Now you returned 209*l.* odd shillings for watchers and messengers, &c.?—Yes.

6983. You say in your accounts that there are 209*l.* 17*s.* 11*d.* for watchers, messengers, &c.; now I find, looking to the vouchers, there are only seven guineas vouched for messengers?—There is another account of 11*l.* 12*s.* for watchers brought in by Benjamin Carter.

6984. I am speaking now of what you have returned as election agent, you know?—Yes.

6985. Now you have returned the name of W. H. Chellingworth; Mr. John Percy acknowledges the receipt of 3*l.* 13*s.* 6*d.* as a messenger, which he received from Mr. Chellinworth?—I paid it to the man.

6986. Then Mr. Chellingworth also paid one Thomas Barrett 3*l.* 13*s.* 6*d.*, a messenger?—The same thing, a horse messenger.

6987. That makes up therefore seven guineas for messengers?—Yes.

6988. That leaves 202*l.* for watchers?—I do not know.

6989. Yes; you say 209*l.* for watchers and messengers together?—Yes.

6990. Seven guineas off that is for messengers?—Yes.

6991. Therefore 202*l.* is for watchers?—There are messengers, 4*l.* 10*s.*, besides.

6992. There is no voucher for them?—No.

6993. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] Can you give the items of that 209*l.* which is returned as one lump sum?—Yes.

6994. Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.] Do not ask questions of anyone near you; just give me the items of that 209*l.*?—202*l.*, did you say.

6995. It is 209*l.* 17*l.* 11*d.*?—I cannot, without getting information.

6996. Is

6996. Is that your handwriting there (handing a paper to the Witness)?—Yes.

6997. There you see is 209 l. 17 s. 11 d.?—Yes.

6998. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] Can you give now the particulars; when you wrote that 209 l. 17 s. 11 d., you must have got the figures somehow; can you tell us now how you made out that amount with the items there.

6999. Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.] That was on the 15th January you know, just a week ago?—I must refer.

7000. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] To what?—Some data at my office; no, I have got them in my pocket.

7001. Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.] I will just tell you my difficulty, and perhaps you will explain it to me; if you add the sums mentioned in those lists as being paid to watchers, to the sums for messengers mentioned in these vouchers, you will find a difference of about 28 l.; I want to know what those 28 l. were laid out in?—I make out 15 l.

7002. Well, how do you explain the difference, at all events; were there any more watchers paid besides those referred to in that list?—Yes, I told you, Carter 11 l. 12 s.

7003. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] Who was Carter?—Benjamin Carter brought me this list of watchers that he had employed.

7004. In addition to the 173 l.?—Yes.

7005. Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.] Let me look at list?—(It was handed to Mr. Stephen.)

7006. You paid Carter that, did you?—Yes.

7007. Were there any more besides that?—Mr. Radford, 6 l. 16 s.

7008. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] That also for watchers?—At Stourport.

7009. Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.] Anybody else?—Samuel Clark, 1 l. 13 s.

7010. Did you pay him yourself?—Yes.

7011. As a watcher?—As a watcher; young Samuel Clark; Samuel Clark's son.

7012. Through whom did you pay him?—I paid him myself.

7013. Who employed him?—I do not know.

7014. Did he come and ask you?—Yes, he came up into my office and asked me.

7015. When?—I could not say.

7016. More than a week ago?—Yes.

7017. Why did you not put that down amongst the election expenses?—It is here.

7018. No it is not here; are those the only vouchers you have got for these watchers?—Yes.

7019. You said you employed your man Oakes as a watcher?—Yes.

7020. Did you pay him anything?—No.

7021. Now those lists that you have been referring to, not the one before you, but this list and those other lists; whose handwriting are they in; whose handwriting is that (handing a paper to the Witness)?—That is in Herbert Pardoe's.

7022. In whose handwriting are the other three lists?—One is Burnish's, I think; two of these appear to me to be Herbert's.

7023. You say one of them is Burnish's, one of them your son Herbert Pardoe's, and whose are the other two; there are four lists in all?—That is Burnish's (pointing to it).

7025. How many of them are Burnish's; three?—Two are in Burnish's, and one part of the first and two others are in Herbert's handwriting.

7025. Then two of the lists are in Herbert

Pardoe's handwriting, and two in Burnish's?—Yes; the latter part of this one appears to be not quite like Herbert's; I think it is my younger son's.

7026. Where is Mr. Radford's list?—It is in my office.

7027. The list of the voters that Radford employed?—It is in my office.

7028. I should like to see it.

Mr. Justice Blackburn directed the Witness to send for it.

7029. Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.] When all these things are put together, I make it only 202 l. 2 s. 6 d.; there is still 7 l. short; look here, 173 l. on the lists, you know; 11 l. 12 s. Benjamin Carter's list; 6 l. 16 s. some other list; 1 l. 13 s., 1 l. 5 s.; that is what you paid yourself, the 1 l. 5 s.—No; one guinea.

7030. And 4 l. 10 s.?—Yes.

7031. That makes, if you add it up, 195 l.—There is 1 l. 19 s. 11 d. also.

7032. What is that for?—Messengers.

7033. What messengers?—Not one alone, but a variety.

7034. Now in addition to that there are 7 l. 7 s. for two messengers whose names are in the vouchers?—Yes; and posting bills, Millward, 5 s., and Clark 1 l.

7035. That makes 1 l. 5 s.?—Yes.

7036. That only makes 205 l. 5 s. instead of 209 l. 17 s. 11 d.; can you tell me this; was Millward a voter?—He lives in an almshouse.

7037. Is he a voter?—No.

7038. And Dark, is he a voter?—It is Clark.

7039. Is he a voter?—Yes.

7040. Is that Samuel Clark?—Yes.

7041. Is that the man who posted and distributed bills?—Yes.

7042. Is not that the receipt (showing a paper to the Witness)?—Yes.

7043. He is a voter, is he not?—Yes.

7044. That does not make it right, you know?—I think you will find it if you put the figures together.

7045. I think not; give me your items?—173 l. 14 s., 11 l. 12 s., 6 l. 16 s., 1 l. 13 s., 1 l. 1 s., 4 l. 10 s., 1 l. 19 s. 11 d., 7 l. 7 s., 5 s., 1 l.; 209 l. 17 s. 11 d. altogether.

7046. That is a question of arithmetic; now we come back to these lists. You say that you authorised Charles Pountney to do as he liked about watchers; did you get any list from Charles Pountney of the watchers he had employed?—I do not remember.

7047. But think; did Charles Pountney ever give you any statement of the watchers whom he had employed?—I never saw it.

7048. Did he ever, to your knowledge, give anyone any statement of the watchers he employed?—He might.

7049. I know he might; but I want to know whether he did?—I cannot say.

7050. Did you ever ask him for any?—No.

7051. Nor ever have any conversation with him about it beyond what you have told us?—I told him that I would not pay for any voter that was employed.

7052. You told him that?—Yes.

7053. But did you ask him for any list or statement of the persons whom he had employed?—I think so.

7054. Did you get such a list from him?—I do not remember seeing it.

R 3

7055. Did

Mr. R. A. Pardoe.

23 January 1869.

Mr.
R.A.Pardoe.
1869.

7055. Did you hear of its existence from any one; did you hear from any one that Charles Pountney had made out any list, because you know you think you had asked him for it?—I do not remember seeing it.

7056. But do you remember hearing of it; did you hear of any such list made out by Charles Pountney?—I do not think I ever saw it, and that is all I can say.

7057. That is no answer to my question; did you ever hear of its existence from anybody, because you had asked about it?—I cannot say that I did.

7058. Can you say that you did not hear of its existence from any one?—No, I do not think that I had.

7059. Then you do not think you ever got any list from Charles Pountney of people he employed?—No.

7060. Is that so?—Not to the best of my knowledge.

7061. Really as a man of business you must know whether you did or not?—I did not make out the lists.

7062. I know you did not; but I ask you whether you ever got any list from Charles Pountney of the persons whom he employed?—I cannot say.

7063. You cannot get beyond that?—No.

7064. Did you tell Charles Pountney what they were to be paid?—No.

7065. Did you ask Charles Pountney what he had agreed to pay them?—No.

7066. Did you get any kind of evidence as to whether they had really watched or not; come?—(the Witness remained silent.)

7067. Did you get any evidence as to whether they had watched?—I endeavoured to do so.

7068. What steps did you take to find out whether they had watched or not?—Parties came to the office and had their names put down, and my clerks made inquiries.

7069. Which of your clerks inquired?—Those that made out the lists.

7070. Did Burnish?—Burnish.

7071. Burnish and your son?—Yes.

7072. When you say they inquired, do you mean that they asked the people who came to the office how much they had watched?—What their time was.

7073. Then all that you knew about it was this, that a number of men came to your office, and said that they had watched; told your son and Burnish that they had watched for a certain time?—Yes.

7074. And did they also tell you what they were to be paid for that time?—They asked; made demands of large sums.

7075. What sums did they demand?—I think some of them wanted 5 s. and 6 s. a night.

7076. Did you take any means to find out what had been promised them, or whether anything had been promised them?—There was the difficulty.

7077. I should have thought it was very difficult to refuse to pay?—I did refuse.

7078. Then why did you pay 173 l.?—Because the town was in a state of uproar.

7079. Then you paid this money under terror, in fact?—To keep the people quiet.

7080. Did you apply for protection to the mayor?—No.

7081. Did you send for the police when all these men were round your house in this riotous condition?—The policeman, I believe, was there.

7082. But did you send for the police force?—No.

7083. You paid the money simply because you were frightened; is that your answer?—I cannot say that altogether, but I believe that there was a good deal of watching done, and I took the best account I could get.

7084. The best account being the account that these men gave to your clerks?—Yes.

7085. These lists, as far as I can see, look to me as if they had been copied from something; was there ever any other list made out from which these were copied?—I should think it must have been copied; it looks like that.

7086. Then what was it copied from?—A rough draft.

7087. And who prepared the rough draft?—Oh, the clerks.

7088. Either your son or Burnish?—Yes.

7089. And I suppose they will be able to tell us whether that rough draft is in existence; do you know whether the rough draft is in existence?—I have seen it; but I do not know now.

7090. When did you see it?—Some time ago. I cannot tell when.

7091. Where did you see it; in your office?—Yes.

7092. Is it in existence now?—No, I do not think it is.

7093. When did it cease to be in existence?—I cannot answer the question.

7094. But try; you say you think it is not now in existence; I want to know where it is; why you do not think it is in existence?—It is possible to be lost.

7095. Of course it is; but have you looked for it?—You have not asked me till this moment.

7096. When did you see it last?—I cannot tell; some time ago.

7097. And you do not know whether it is in existence or not?—No; I do not.

7098. Well, I wish you would look for it, then?—Very well.

7099. Now, you took down the names of the people who came to the house?—Yes.

7100. Were there any voters amongst the people who came to the house?—That I do not know.

7101. Will you say there were not?—I will not.

7102. Were there the names of any voters on that rough list which I have spoken of?—I would not undertake to say.

7103. Give me an idea how many people came down to your house; a couple of hundred?—They were in groups, about; I cannot say.

7104. There might be a couple of hundred; a larger number than you have got on these lists here?—I could not undertake to say; I did not count them.

7105. But you looked out, naturally?—I did.

7106. Then you can tell me whether you believe that these four lists which have been put in evidence contain the names of all the men who came to your house asking to be paid?—I cannot.

7107. Do you believe that these lists contain the names of all the men who asked to be paid; is that your belief?—I gave this direction—

7108. You can answer that by yes or no; do you you believe that these lists contain the names of all the persons who came to your house asking to be paid?—No; I should not think they did.

7109. Now, do you not think that other persons, being voters, came to your house demanding payment; and that you refused to pay them, and took a list of the non-voters only?—I have no doubt that there were voters came; I have no doubt of it.

7110. Came demanding to be paid?—Yes; they came to be paid.

7111. It comes to this, then; your belief about the matter is that you took a list of the non-voters, and got them paid, and refused to pay the voters; is not that it?—I would not pay any voters.

7112. Then it is as I say—a number of people, voters and non-voters, came to your house to be paid, and you took a list of the non-voters and paid them, and refused to pay the voters; is not that so?—Yes, you may say so; I declined to pay any voter.

7113. Did it occur to you to make a list of the voters whom you refused to pay?—No.

7114. Would any of the names of these voters who wished to be paid appear upon that original rough list, from which you say these copies were made?—It is possible.

7115. Then I want that list and Mr. Radford's list?—

Mr. Justice Blackburn here inquired whether Radford's list had been sent for.

Mr. Herbert Pardoe stated that he could not find it.

Mr. Fitzjames Stephen requested Mr. Herbert Pardoe to look in his father's office for the rough draft also.

Mr. Justice Blackburn desired that Mr. Herbert Pardoe should bring any other papers that could be wanted.

7116. Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.] Now I do not understand how you were protected, by having disguised men to pay these men?—I did not ask for disguised men.

7117. Well then strangers?—They were strangers.

7118. What protection was it to you to have it paid by strangers?—If any had been paid improperly.

7119. It would have been more difficult to prove it then?—Yes, of course it would.

7120. You were engaged for the former election petition for this town?—Yes.

7121. And there was a great question of watchers on that occasion?—Yes.

7122. And a Committee of the House of Commons passed a Resolution condemning their employment; is not that so?—I do not recollect it.

7123. On your oath, you do not recollect that a Committee of the House of Commons passed this Resolution?—I do not.

Mr. Justice Blackburn inquired in what year it was that the Committee in question reported.

Mr. Fitzjames Stephen stated that it was in 1851.

7124. Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.] You were concerned in that election?—Yes.

7125. And called as a witness?—Yes.

7126. We will not go into old stories, especially before my Lord, but however do not you recollect, now that I put it to you, the resolution of the Committee?—I do not; it is so many years ago.

7127. It is an important thing; that it was proved before the Committee that a practice prevailed at the borough of Bewdley in the last election, as well as in that of 1841, of carrying away and treating electors, and that in consequence of this system large bodies of men were employed on both sides, for the alleged protection of voters; that almost every public-house and beer-house in the borough was kept open during the week of election, and drink given away to a large extent. Now I read it to you, do you not recollect, or is it quite passed from your mind?—It has; for I have not read the report for a good many years.

7128. You were agent for Sir Thomas Winton?—I was not.

7129. You were agent for Mr. Ireland?—Yes.

7130. And he was unseated?—Yes.

7131. And you conducted the proceedings before the Committee?—I did not.

7132. Your agent did?—Some other person.

7133. You were the principal witness on the occasion?—I was not.

7134. You were there?—I was there; I was examined for one minute.

7135. We have been told that you were a member of this Conservative Association?—Yes.

7136. And found the house?—Yes.

7137. I was just going to ask you about another matter; in the accounts you have got here I see "Sundries for registering, stationery, postage stamps, telegrams, clerks, and incidentals, 54*l.* 7*s.* 2*d.*"?—Yes.

7138. If you look at the vouchers you have put in you will find that the total amount of "Sundries" comes to 11*l.* 17*s.* 6*d.*, and I should like the other items; it leaves a difference of 42*l.*; if you will take the vouchers I will give you the amounts; show me the items from which you have made out the total of 54*l.* 7*s.* 2*d.*?—Shall I read them?

7139. I suppose they are all written down?—Yes.

7140. Then I may as well look at them as you, if you have got them in writing?—(A paper was handed to Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.)

7141. Here you have amongst other things, under the head of "Refreshments, Weaver, 19*l.* 6*s.*; 'Wheatsheaf,' 9*l.* 15*s.* 6*d.*;" when were those refreshments at the "Wheatsheaf" supplied, and to whom, because there is no bill for them?—It was a small bill sent in for what was supplied to Sir Richard and the canvassers.

7142. Have you got the bill here?—No; not here.

7143. Why is it not annexed to the account?—It ought to have been.

7144. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] Have you made out these accounts yourself, or did you trust it to some one else to make them out?—I made them out.

7145. Then when you made them out, why did you not comply with the Act of Parliament, and give the vouchers?—I understood it was not necessary.

7146. Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.] You did not understand that I think from the Act of Parliament, because that says it is necessary; did you refer to this Act to see what you had to do?—Yes, I think I did once.

7147. Now this Act says that a detailed statement ment of all election expenses incurred by or on behalf of any candidate, including such excepted payments as aforesaid, shall, within two months after the election, be made out and signed by the agent, and delivered, with the bills and vouchers relative thereto, to the returning officer; and the returning officer for the time being shall, at the expense of the candidate, within 14 days, insert, or cause to be inserted, an abstract in the newspaper," and so on; then there is a penalty, "any agent or candidate who makes default of delivering to the returning officer the statement required, shall incur a penalty not exceeding 5 l. a-day; and any agent, or candidate, who wilfully returns an untrue statement shall be guilty of a misdemeanour." Now, why did you not furnish that detailed statement; you have made it out, and you have not furnished it to the returning officer; why?—I did it as well as I could.

7148. But you have got it in your hand; you did not furnish that thing to the returning officer?—No.

7149. I ask you to show me, on these accounts, where the detailed statement is which, under Act of Parliament, you returned to the returning officer?—This is the detailed statement (pointing to it).

7150. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] Why did you not furnish a detailed statement to the returning officer?—I must plead ignorance.

7151. Let me see that detailed statement (it was handed to his Lordship)?—I did not know that a detailed statement was necessary; I understood it was a short statement.

7152. Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.] Have you received any other bills respecting this election?—Yes.

7153. Many others?—No.

7154. What did the bills which you have received amount to?—One from the "George."

7155. What does that amount to?—It is something, I think, about 120 l.

7156. Why did you not say anything about that in your statement?—I have not paid it.

7157. That is just what I want to know: what you have got to return are expenses incurred. Did not Sir Richard Glass take the "George." You have heard Mr. Gardner say that he did?—Yes.

7158. Then you mean to pay that, I suppose?—No, I do not know that I do.

7159. No part of it?—Some part of it.

7160. Why did you not make any statement in your accounts with regard to Sir Richard Glass's liability for the "George," whatever that may be?—I did not know that.

7161. You are to make a detailed statement of any election expenses incurred by or on behalf of any candidate; now you admit that Sir Richard Glass has incurred expense in respect of the taking of the "George," and you have not mentioned that?—No; it is not paid.

7162. I know it is not; but the expense is incurred?—I do not think it is incurred.

7163. Surely something is incurred?—Something is.

7164. Then why did you not make any mention of what was to be paid for the "George"?—Because I could not settle the account, I think it is so large.

7165. I dare say you do, but at the same time you ought to have put in what you omitted; you have put in 19 l. 6 s. to Weaver for refreshments?—That was a small bill that was paid.

7166. Why did you not put in any notice in your election expenses of the expense incurred in taking the "George"?—Because I did not know it was necessary.

7167. Now, is there a bill also still due at the "Wheatsheaf"?—Yes.

7168. And no notice of that. How much is there there?—I do not know.

7169. Has that been sent in?—No.

7170. Are there any other bills that have been sent in, and of which you have taken no notice in this statement?—I have none.

7171. The only two are the "George" and the "Wheatsheaf"?—Yes, that Sir Richard Glass is liable to pay.

7172. But have any other bills been sent in which you think he is not liable to pay?—I have not had any.

7173. No bills at all?—No.

7174. From anybody?—No.

7175. Do you know of any person who has had bills sent to him claiming money from Sir Richard Glass; have any bills upon Sir Richard Glass been sent to any one, so far as you know?—Not that I know of.

7176. Now, there is a man of the name of Plevey, to whom you seem to have paid several sums of money?—Yes.

At this point Mr. Herbert Pardoe returned, and stated, in answer to Mr. Fitzjames Stephen, that he could not find the rough draft.

7177. Mr. Fitzjames Stephen (to the Witness).] There are three payments on account to this man Plevey; those are payments on account?—Yes.

7178. What is outstanding in respect of Plevey's charges?—It was over-charged, and I gave him the bill back to have it rectified.

7179. Where is his bill?—He has got it.

7180. What was that bill?—Posting.

7181. Carriages and horses?—Yes.

7182. What were these carriages and horses for?—Conveying me and my son about during the canvass.

7183. Were there any during the day of polling?—No; I would not have it.

7184. Now, what did the registration cost you in Bewdley?—A great deal of money.

7185. I want to know how much?—I cannot say; I have not made an estimate yet, but I have no doubt it will be from 100 l. to 150 l.

7186. How do you make that out?—By the days that I have been engaged and my clerks in it.

7187. You did not have any advocate down here from Hereford or anywhere?—Yes, we had one.

7188. Was he not paid out of that 28 l. that Mr. Crowther paid?—Yes.

7189. What other expenses were there?—None but what I and my sons and clerks have earned.

7190. Did you attend the revising barrister's court?—I was in the court.

7191. How many new votes did you put on the register that were objected to?—Very few.

7192. Ten or twenty or something of that kind?—Do you mean with the claims?

7193. No, I mean how many votes did you put on the register that were objected to on the other side?—What you mean is, "sustained"?

7194. Yes?—A good many.

7195. How

Mr.
R.A. Pardo.
23 January
1869.

7195. How many did you sustain against objections, I mean?—Oh, a great many.

7196. How many?—I should think about 90 or upwards.

7197. I must just ask you for another purpose; was there not a large batch of voters who were objected to, about matters connected with poor law relief?—Some.

7198. A large number?—No; what do you mean by a large number?

7199. Were there not 30 or 40?—Thirty, there may have been.

7200. And an objection taken to the form of the notice which was over-ruled by the revising barrister?—Yes.

7201. All the voters so objected to remained on the register?—Yes, some of the objections were withdrawn, and the others were decided by the revising barrister.

7202. How many voters are there in Bewdley alone, apart from Stourport?—Five hundred and sixty-eight.

7203. How many of them voted for Sir Richard Glass?—I think it is 510.

7204. No, not at Bewdley alone, it could not be?—Oh, no.

7205. I am told you had 285 votes here at Bewdley, and the balance at Stourport. Now I will just ask you one or two more questions; how long before the election did you see Charles Pountney?—I cannot tell.

7206. A fortnight before?—Yes.

7207. Would it be three weeks before?—I said a fortnight.

7208. Do you mean that it was a fortnight or that it was more than a fortnight before?—I should think it was less than a fortnight.

7209. About a fortnight then we may take it; now, did you not see that placarded about the town just before the election, on the day before the nomination.

Mr. Fitzjames Stephen handed to the witness the following notice, "Borough of Bewdley.—Notice.—By Statute 30 and 31 Victoria, Chapter 102, Section 11, it is enacted, that no elector who, within six months before or during any election for any county or borough, shall have been retained, hired, or employed, for all or any of the purposes of the election, for reward, by, or on behalf of any candidate, at such election, as agent, canvasser, clerk, messenger, or any other like employment, shall be entitled to vote at such election; and if he shall so vote, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanour."

—No, I do not think I did; never saw it, that I know.

7210. Was not that extensively placarded about the town?—I never saw it.

7211. Will you swear you never saw it?—I swear I never saw it.

7212. Was that placard or the substance of it never mentioned to you, called to your attention?—Not at this election; I have seen the purport of it in a newspaper.

7213. You saw the purport of this placard in a newspaper?—No.

7214. When did you see this thing in a newspaper?—I did not see that, I saw the purport of it.

7215. When did you see this newspaper with the purport of it?—Oh, I cannot tell.

7216. How long before the election; a few days?—I do not know, I will not undertake to say.

7217. You will not undertake to say when you saw it?—No.

7218. Did you see a purport of it in the newspaper, as you say, before or after you spoke to Charles Pountney?—I cannot say.

7219. You were the honorary solicitor of this Working Men's Association, were you not?—I believe I was appointed.

7220. You believe you are so still, I suppose, and one of the objects of that was to attend to the borough registration?—Oh!

7221. Did you in your capacity of honorary solicitor, attend to the borough registration?—No.

7222. Well why did not you?—Why should I?

7223. Because the object of the association was to attend to that, and you were their solicitor?—Then I had neglected it.

7224. Did you ever discharge any duties as the honorary solicitor?—No.

7225. What did you mean by being honorary solicitor of this thing, then?—I cannot tell; some business might arise out of the association.

Re-examined by Mr. Poland.

7226. You were ready to give them your valuable advice, were you, in case the association required it?—Yes.

7227. Do you know anything of this bill, this placard; was it issued by you at all?—No, I did not issue such a bill.

7228. You have mentioned a list of Carter's. 14 l. 12 s. for watchers?—Yes.

7229. Just look at that list (handing a list to the Witness), are any of those voters?—No.

7230. As I understand you, as far as you know, not a single voter was paid for watching?—No.

7231. I see there is some charge for a ladder; what was that for?—For climbing up and pasting the bills; the other party were constantly pulling down our bills.

7232. You had a ladder made to paste yours higher?—Yes.

7233. How old are you?—I am about 60.

7234. Did you look at this Act of Parliament before you made these returns?—Certainly I did; but I did not study it.

7235. Can you give any further explanation why you did not make these accounts more complete?—Well, I asked the town clerk for information, and the mode in which it has been done heretofore was under certain heads, and I thought it might be done the same again; I thought it might be done this year.

7236. Can you give me at all, the names of the watchers for which Mr. Radford was paid?—No; M. Radford is here.

7237. I suppose before the revising barrister, no question was gone into of parochial relief?—One was decided.

7238. And no evidence was taken on the other cases?—No.

7239. I understand you, those papers that are produced, those lists are the identical lists that Jackson had?—He has produced them.

7240. You had better look for the rough draft and see if you can find it?—I will; there has been great confusion among my papers.

7241. And any other documents relating to this matter?—Yes.

7242. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] You paid Jack-

Mr. son 120*l.* you say, for these watchers the first time?—Yes.

23 January 1869. ——— 7243. Of course before you paid him the 120*l.* you had some reason to think it was 120*l.* you were to give him; did you make the inquiries yourself, or delegate them to some of your clerks?—My son Herbert and Burnish.

7244. It was upon their reporting to you that that was the sum, you did that?—Yes.

7245. Will you find all the original documents and accounts in any way relating to this, and have them ready, if any questions are wished to be added?—Yes.

[The Witness withdrew.]

Mr. Justice Blackburn desired that Mr. Radford should be re-called.

Mr. THOMAS RADFORD, re-called; Examined by Mr. Justice Blackburn.

Mr. 7246. WE understand, from your evidence, given when you were examined before, that there has been an account, for which you have been paid, of 6*l.* 16*s.* for watchers, messengers, and so on, at Stourport; is that so?—Yes, 6*l.* 16*s.* 3*d.*

7247. When did you make out that account?—I really cannot say when I made out the account, but I received the money, I believe, yesterday.

7248. What did you receive it for?—For watchers we had from Kidderminster for Stourport.

7249. Have you any copy of the account you sent in?—I have not; I left the documents behind me to-day; the men I engaged were all from Kidderminster.

7250. What were they engaged to do?—Watching.

7251. Were any of them voters?—Not at all; they were not resident in the neighbourhood.

7252. Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.] Was the name of a man called Allen Gould upon this list?—No.

7253. Are you sure of that?—Quite sure.

7254. Where is the list?—I have not the list; it is not by me; I could supply you with the names, if you desire them.

7255. You say that they were Kidderminster people?—All Kidderminster people.

7256. Can you say whether Allen Gould was a watcher at all?—I cannot say; I only employed these Kidderminster men myself.

7257. Did you see watchers about the street at Stourport?—I cannot say; I was myself exposed to violence.

7258. Mr. Poland.] Were there watchers employed on the other side at Stourport?—I suppose 200 at least.

7259. And how many did you employ?—I really could not say; I only know of the men who came from Kidderminster myself.

7260. It has been the custom in former elections to employ watchers?—Yes, there has been a custom of carrying away the voters in Stourport and Bewdley too; and the object of employing the watchers is merely to prevent their taking them away. The men were from Kidderminster whom I employed as watchers.

[The Witness withdrew.]

Mr. Justice Blackburn desired Mr. Poland to give instructions that all Mr. Pardoe's books and papers in any way relating to this election should be brought into the Court on Monday morning.

[Adjourned to Monday next, at Ten o'clock.]

Monday, 25th January 1869.

1869.

Mr. Giffard stated that the Respondent was anxious that the Court should be informed that he had given a sum of 5*l.* to a person who had been injured in one of the attacks made upon himself and his party; he added that this case had not been mentioned.

In reply to Mr. Fitzjames Stephen, Mr. Giffard stated that he was quite willing to call Mr. Herbert Pardoe.

Mr. HERBERT PARDOE, sworn.

Mr. Giffard stated that he did not wish to ask the Witness any question.

Cross-examined by Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.

7261. DID you go to Kidderminster to meet some men who came down from London?—Yes.

7262. And bring them across here?—Yes.

7263. What was the date of that?—It was on the Sunday previous to the polling day.

7264. Without meaning anything offensive to those men, were they what you would call "roughs"?—Yes.

7265. How many of them were there?—Twenty-nine.

7266. The gentlemen lived in Whitechapel, did they not?—I do not know at all.

7267. They were brought over in case their services should be required?—Yes.

7268. And their services were not required?—No.

7269. I suppose either you or your father paid their expenses?—No, I did not.

7270. But they must have been paid?—I had nothing to do with them in that way.

7271. Who had?—I do not know.

7272. Who told you to go and meet them?—My father.

7273. Then you know nothing about whether those men were paid or not?—I do not.

7274. Where did they live when they were in Bewdley?—Ten of them were at the "Acorn," eight at the "Swan," and eleven at the "Peacock."

7275. When did they go home?—I do not know.

7276. When did they leave Bewdley, after the election?—The night of the nomination.

7277. How did they leave, which way did they go?—They went underneath Ribbesford Wood, a bye-way to Stourport.

7278. They went by a bye-way to Stourport; did they walk?—Yes, they walked.

7279. Did they go by railway afterwards?—I cannot say.

7280. Did anybody go with them to take charge of them?—Yes.

7281. Who?—Detective Warren.

7282. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] I suppose that bye-way you spoke of is some footpath, is it?—A public road on this side of the water.

7283. Is it the towing path?—No; they went by a road, a turnpike-road.

7284. Then why did you call it a bye-way?—There are two ways.

7285. Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.] It is the less public of the two?—Yes.

7286. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] There is an extremely pretty road I saw yesterday, from which the church is upon your right hand, is that the one you mean?—Yes.

7287. Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.] You were at the nomination?—Yes.

7288. There was a great deal of noise and a great deal of screaming of women among other things, was not there?—I believe there was.

7289. Did not a great number of those screaming women come to you to be paid for screaming?—No.

7290. Did they not send you in a bill for women screaming?—Certainly not.

7291. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] Not in those terms?—No.

7292. Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.] Did they not send in any bill in respect of women?—Not that I am aware of.

7293. To the "Wheatsheaf"?—No.

7294. To anybody. Do you know of any bill being sent in?—I do.

7295. To whom was the bill sent in?—To my father.

7296. In respect of women?—I believe the women sent it in.

7297. Do you know in respect of what services it was sent in. Was it for screaming, substantially?—I could not say.

7298. I ask your belief; what do you believe?—It might have been so.

7299. Do you not believe that it was?—I should think it is very probable it was.

7300. Have you any doubt about it?—I have a little doubt about it. I do not know exactly how they put it.

7301. Do you know that any bill was sent in for women screaming at the election?—I do not know it.

Mr. Justice Blackburn inquired the bearing of this evidence.

Mr.
H. Pardoe.

Mr.
H. Pardoe.
25 January
1869.

Mr. Fitzjames Stephen stated, that his object was to show the character of the election accounts.

7302. Mr. Fitzjames Stephen (to the Witness).] Do you recollect having a conversation with Mr. Watson on Monday, about a week or 10 days ago at the "Swan Inn" at Stourport, in reference to the election expenses?—I do.

7303. Mr. Baldwin was there, I think?—Yes.

7304. And several other people?—I believe so.

7305. Did you not say upon that occasion that you believed that your election expenses, that is Sir Richard Glass's, would be between 2,400 l. and 2,500 l.?—I said this: Mr. Watson said, "Have you sent in your account of the expenses of the election?" I said, "I do not know." He said "What were the expenses; what do you think?" I said, "I do not know. They may be 2,000 l. or 3,000 l. for what I can tell." That was the conversation that passed between me and Mr. Watson; and I believe I said at the same time, "They may be between 800 l. and 900 l." I could not tell what they were.

7306. Did he not mention to you, what Mr. Lloyd's expenses would be, about 600 l. or 700 l.?—I do not recollect that.

7307. Did he not mention what Mr. Lloyd's expenses would be; and did not he go on to ask you Sir Richard Glass's, as he said, to save himself the trouble of looking at the accounts; do you remember his saying that he wanted to save himself the trouble of looking at the accounts?—I believe he said it jokingly.

7308. Did you not say in answer to that, that you believed they would be between 2,400 l. and 2,500 l.?—No, I did not. I said they might be, for all I knew.

7309. And you named that sum?—I do not know that I said "between 2,400 l. and 2,500 l." I said, "between 2,000 l. and 3,000 l."

7310. Have you looked through the accounts that have been filed?—I have not.

7311. Your father said in evidence, on Saturday, that you were commissioned to inquire about the watchers?—I was.

7312. When they came down to your office?—Yes.

7313. Did you inquire of them?—I did.

7314. Can you tell us, did you take a list of all the persons who came?—I did.

7315. And claimed to be paid?—I did.

7316. Has that list been destroyed; the rough draft?—I believe it has, or lost.

7317. Have you a copy, a fair copy?—Yes.

7318. When did you make the fair copy?—The same day, I believe.

7319. Is that the copy?—Yes (handing in a paper).

7320. And does this contain the names of all the persons that came?—I believe it does.

7321. And of what they asked for?—No; not what they asked for.

7322. Then, of what you consider they ought to be paid, upon their statement?—Yes.

7323. You asked each man, I suppose, how long he had watched, and asked him the circumstances?—Yes.

7324. And then you put down the amounts against the names, as that which you considered was the proper charge?—Yes.

7325. I ask you generally (it speaks for itself), if there are voters amongst these?—Yes.

7326. And the voters were afterwards excluded from the list, and you made out the other lists?—Yes; I believe lists were made out.

7327. Mr. Burnish and you made out the lists which have been put in, as Jackson's warrant for paying the money?—Yes.

7328. Were there any names of voters upon that rough draft which do not appear in that copy?—I believe that that is fac simile of the rough draft.

7329. Can you swear positively that it is?—To the best of my belief it is.

7330. Are all those in red who are struck out, voters?—I believe they are.

Mr. Justice Blackburn inquired how many names on the fair copy of the list had a red ink mark against them.

Mr. Fitzjames Stephen stated that there were four struck out in red ink, and several others with red ink marks against them.

Re-examined by Mr. Giffard.

7331. Just one question about this gentleman, Mr. Watson; is he an attorney?—I believe he is.

7332. The attorney for the petitioner?—Yes.

7333. What aged gentleman is he?—Fifty.

7334. I mean, he is a gentleman of experience and standing?—Yes.

7335. And was this a casual conversation between you and him at a meeting, casually at a public house?—Yes; quite so.

7336. Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.] A question upon this list; why have you headed it "Boys," &c., what does it mean (handing the list to the Witness)?—A great many of them were boys; it was on some scale; the able-bodied men you gave more. If it was a boy, you gave him less.

7337. Were the boys merely to give information; what was your scale, pray?—When I saw the man and the number of days and nights he was watching, I—

7338. What did you take for a healthy grown-up man who watched all day; how much did you allow him?—Four shillings a day.

7339. And how much a night?—Four shillings.

7340. And how much for a boy?—Two shillings; sometimes 3 s.

7341. According to size?—Yes.

7342. A good many of them were voters, I suppose, were they not?—I cannot tell.

7343. What?—I do not know.

7344. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] In fixing the price for them, what were they supposed to do?—To prevent voters being taken away.

7345. In the first place, what reason was there to suppose any voters were going to be taken away; and, secondly, how were they to prevent it?—They were in the habit of stopping all flies and conveyances going about the neighbourhood, and seeing if voters were inside them.

7346. Was there any instance that you are aware of, in which a voter was carried off in a fly, and in which any of these watchers stopped it or prevented it?—I believe, one morning, there was a man named Charles Southam was attempted to be taken away by the other side, about two o'clock.

7347. One case of that sort, and to prevent that, 200 l. was paid for boys and people to walk up and down the street?—I think that was on the nomination morning.

Mr. Giffard asked his Lordship to inquire how many were employed on the other side.

Mr. HERBERT GEORGE GOLDINGHAM, sworn; Examined by Mr. Giffard.

7348. WHAT are you?—Solicitor at Worcester.

7349. Were you applied to by Mr. Pardoe at any time to send over some persons from Worcester to Bewdley to make payments?—I was.

7350. Have you got the letter which he sent you?—I have not.

7351. What has become of it?—I handed it to the party, a man in my employment, who eventually came over to Bewdley, at his instruction.

7352. What is the man's name?—Russen.

7353. Is he here?—He is not.

7354. Where is he?—I have no idea.

7355. Have you endeavoured to find him?—I have.

7356. What is his christian name?—Joseph, I believe; I will not be certain.

7357. Did you give him any other instructions than those that were in the letter?—I gave Mr. Pardoe's letter, told him to go by a particular train to Bewdley, and that I would write to Mr. Pardoe to that effect, that he would be there met.

7358. Did you send two or one?—Mr. Pardoe's letter, to the best of my recollection, was to this effect, that he had some refractory voters, refractory people at Bewdley and he wanted a trusty person to pay them; he simply handed this letter to the man I allude to, and he afterwards said that if I had no objection he himself would go, but that as he was a stranger at Bewd-ley, he should like to take a friend; I afterwards understood that he did take a friend, but who that was, I have no idea.

7359. Did you give him anything, or were you aware he was going there disguised in any way?—I had seen some accounts of the rows that had taken place in the Bewdley election and I told him he had better be prepared to get away in the event of another row taking place; and to show that I was perfectly justified in my view, a row did take place, and the man was very nearly lynched.

7360. Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.] You were not there?—No; that was his report to me upon his return.

7361. Mr. Giffard.] Did you give any instructions whether he was to be disguised or not?—I told him he had better adopt the means by which he would be prevented being known; and I may further say that he afterwards told me (in fact he showed me in his carpet bag) what he was going to take, which was a simple wig.

Cross-examined by Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.

7362. I will just ask you who was Mr. Russen?—He was a man employed by me during the City of Worcester election and the Eastern and Western division of the County, in the habit of paying all sorts of people.

Mr. R. ACTON PARDOE, recalled; further Cross-examined by Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.

7363. YOUR son has told us in your absence, that 29 men came down from London and stayed here two days and went back on the night of the nomination day?—Yes.

7364. Who paid their expenses?—I did.

7365. How much did you pay them?—Ninety odd pounds.

7366. Where is that in your election expenses; in your return that you gave to the Returning Officer, show me any notice of it; did you take any receipt from them?—No.

7367. Did you pay each man so much a head?—I did not pay them.

7368. Who did, then?—I found the money,

7369. But who paid them?—That I do not know.

7370. Who did you give the money to?—I think to one of the men that came down.

7371. Do you know that man?—No.

7372. You gave 90*l.* to a man whom you did not know and took no receipt?—Yes.

7373. Show me where that item of 90*l.* appears under the head of the election expenses (handing the accounts to the Witness)?—It is not here.

7374. It is only fair to ask you why you did not put it there; it does not matter its being there amongst those papers in your hand, but why did you not put it here in the accounts furnished to the returning officer?—Because I should think such payments are not usually put there.

Re-examined by Mr. Giffard.

7375. Just one question; had you applied to the Home Office for additional assistance from the police?—Yes.

7376. And I believe you received that letter from the Home Office (handing a letter to the Witness)?—Yes.

7377. Was it, then, after the receipt of that letter that these men were employed?—Yes.

7378. Was it for the purpose of protecting Sir Richard Glass's voters?—Yes; in consequence of the threats from the other side, and they not only threatened, but came here in great force, determined to do mischief.

7379. Where did they come from, do you know?—I heard that they came from Wednesbury.

7380. Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.] You have got a quantity of papers there in your hand, are they bills or vouchers connected with the election?—Some of them are.

7381. Show me those that are; show me any vouchers vouchers or bills relating to the election that you have got in your hand, and I want to see your detailed statement?—I am in a situation to state that I pulled out a draft out of my pocket that was not cast nor put in order, and it was impounded by the Court, and I have made out another statement which I think I will explain—

7382. Just hand it to me (the Witness did so).

7383. About that roll of bills you had in your hands just now, show me any of them that relate to the election, bills or vouchers about the election?—Here are some of them (producing some).

7384. Mr. Gardner told us he received 50*l.* on account?—Yes.

7385. And you received 50*l.*; was that on account?—On account.

7386. You had not made out your own bill to Sir Richard Glass?—No.

7387. Are those other bills that you have got there, matters that have nothing to do with the election at all; I mean those that you had in your hand just now, because you have not shown us the bill from the "George," you spoke of; are those bills that you have received connected with the election?—Yes.

7388. Will you let us see them? (The Witness handed them to Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.)

7389. Have you disputed this "Wheatsheaf" bill; 123 l. 2 s. 6 d.?—I have only just had it.

Mr. Giffard.] I see "use of rooms" is 81 l. 12 s. of that.

7390. Mr. Justice Blackburn.] This account of 123 l. 2 s. 6 d., as I understand, does not appear in the election expenses at all?—No; I have only just had the bill.

7391. When do you mean by "Just had it"?—Since I was here last.

7392. Mr. Fitzjames Stephen.] Now then, with regard to this John Taylor; who is that; a bill for refreshments, 35 l. 19 s.?—"Use of room 30 l.," I see.

7393. Who is the man?—John Taylor is the landlord of the "Black Boy" in Wribbenhall.

7394. Is not that one of the houses where these men who were brought down from London were kept?—Not that I know of.

7395. Then, what happened there with all these lunches, and brandy, and dinner, and refreshments, and those things; what took place at the "Black Boy"?—Why, Sir Richard Glass had his lunch there occasionally.

7396. Is that all; Sir Richard Glass cannot have drank nine shillings worth of rum, whisky, and gin, on the 3rd of November; what else happened at the "Black Boy"? Look here; I will give you some items. Here is one item, "Lodgings and refreshments, use of commercial room from July the 11th to November the 20th, 30 l." Now what does that item refer to?—I cannot tell.

7397. Do you swear you do not know anything about it?—I have never looked at the bill.

7398. When did you receive it?—On Saturday evening.

7399. You received it after you had given your evidence?—Yes.

[The Witness withdrew.

The following is a copy of the letter from the Home Office, referred to by the Witness:

My dear Sir, 12 November 1868.

I must apologise for not having written to you before to say that Mr. Hardy is sorry it will be out of his power to send any of the Metropolitan Police to assist in keeping the peace at Bewdley and Stourport during the election.

Since you called, several requests have been made from different quarters, and the same answer has been given in all cases.

Believe me, &c.

(signed) E. R. Perceval.

P.S.—I was unable to answer your telegram last night.

The following are copies of certain letters relating to the payment of monies on account by Sir Richard Glass, referred to in the course of the evidence.

Kidderminster,

26 August 1868.

Dear Sir Richard, I shall be obliged by a cheque for, say 300 l., in respect of registration and other legitimate expenses and professional services.

Yours, &c.

(signed) William Alfred Crowther.

Sir Richard Glass.

My dear Sir, 28 August 1868.

I am favoured with yours of the 26th instant asking for a cheque for expenses of registration, &c.; I have the pleasure to inclose you a cheque for the sum you ask, but I must beg that no part be applied to other than lawful purposes and legitimate expenses; please acknowledge receipt. I need not remind you of the importance of the registration, and although attended with considerable expense it must be thoroughly watched, and I hope you are agreed with Mr. Pardoe as to your course of action.

I hope to be with you next week.

Yours, &c.

Mr. Giffard was heard to sum up the case on behalf of the Respondent.

Mr. Fitzjames Stephen was heard in reply on behalf of the Petitioners.

Mr. Justice Blackburn asked Mr. Fitzjames Stephen whether he thought that he could strike off votes enough on a scrutiny to make it worth while to proceed with that part of the case?

Mr. Fitzjames Stephen replied that he would be better able to answer that question if his Lordship would indicate the general nature of his decision.

Mr. Justice Blackburn stated that he had no doubt that he must declare the election void.

Mr. Fitzjames Stephen stated that he was authorised by Mr. Lloyd to state that, inasmuch as the majority in this case had been very large and the difficulty of proof in each instance would be very great, and inasmuch as his (Mr. Lloyd's) object object in claiming the seat was to obtain a full inquiry, he would not withdraw that claim.

Mr. Justice Blackburn.] There are one or two small matters that I must reserve till I have read the notes carefully, and to which I shall refer a little later. But as to the general question, and the general grounds on which my decision proceeds, I can state them at once without any delay.

With regard to the case as it affects Sir Richard Glass, I do not think that anything has been brought forward here that would justify me at all in saying that Sir Richard Glass was personally cognizant of, or individually a party to, illegal practices. I think that Sir Richard Glass wished to be returned, and wished to be returned purely, and that he intended that everything should be done properly. There is some evidence that would go against Sir Richard Glass on that point, but I do not think it is by any means enough to lead me to the contrary conclusion. But Sir Richard Glass, like every other candidate who employs persons for him (agents to use the general term), is of course answerable (although penalties would not attach to him for the act unless it was authorized by him), to the extent of losing his seat if any person employed in the election as an agent for him was guilty of a corrupt practice.

Now, as to that, it is a matter of general importance that it should be known what would constitute evidence of being an agent or being employed. And upon that I can only say in general that I think one could not lay down a precise rule. I think that every instance in which it is shown that, either with the knowledge of the Member or candidate himself, or to the knowledge of his agents who had employment from him, a person acts at all in furthering the election for him, in trying to get votes for him, is evidence tending to show that the person so acting was authorised to act as his agent. I do not think it is by any means essential that it should be shown that a person so employed, in order to be an agent for that purpose, is paid in the slightest degree, or is in the nature of being a paid person. But I think it is a question what is sufficient evidence upon that point. I should apprehend that where there is evidence given, as in this case, that when the candidate is going about canvassing, a gentleman goes previously and requests voters, in some such way as this, "Will you meet Sir Richard Glass in such and such a place?" and then when he comes to that place says, "Here is Sir Richard Glass come to ask for your vote," or says to the person, what would certainly be implied or understood, "Here is Sir Richard, for whom I wish you to vote," all that is evidence to show that that person was an agent. And I take it that the question for the Court sitting to try the case comes ultimately to be, whether, upon the aggregate of all these things taken together, of which each in itself is little, but is certainly some evidence, the person is shown to have been employed to such an extent as to make him an agent for whom the candidate would be responsible. That I apprehend will be the point upon which Judges will find the greatest difficulty, where there is some evidence, which, if there was a jury, you could not withdraw from it; cases in which everyone would agree that there was some evidence; the question is whether that evidence is sufficient or not. In each case the Judge must decide, treating himself as a jury or an election committee. I take it that in each case the Judge must bring common sense to bear upon it, and satisfy himself whether it is sufficient or not. I do not think that such a question as that would turn upon minute particulars as to what particular words were used or what particular thing was done, but upon the common-sense broad view of it.

In the present case I feel no difficulty whatever about it; because, in the present case, it is clearly proved, and not a disputed fact, that Sir Richard Glass deposited a considerable sum, 11,000 l. altogether, in the hands of Mr. Crowther and Mr. Pardoe, directing them in his letters (and I see no reason to doubt directing them bonâ fide) that they should apply that money to honest and good purposes, but giving that money to them, and not exercising, either personally or by anyone else, any control over the manner in which that money was to be spent, and not, in fact, knowing how that money was spent. Upon that I can come to no other conclusion than this: that he did make these two persons (it applies principally to Mr. Pardoe, but it applies to Mr. Crowther also) his agents for the election to almost the fullest extent to which agency can be given; and I think that a person proved to be an agent to this extent does not merely himself stand as an agent to the candidate (in this instance Sir Richard Glass), but also that a person proved to be agent to this extent makes those agents whom he employs. The extent to which a person is an agent differs according to what he is shown to have done. I take it that an agent employed so extensively as is shown here does make the candidate responsible, not only for his own acts, but also for the acts of those whom he, the agent, did so employ, even though they are persons whom the candidate might not know or be brought in personal contact with.

The analogy which I put to Mr. Giffard in the course of the case I think is a strong one, but it would convey my meaning more to a lawyer than to the general public, the analogy of the liability of the sheriff for the undersheriff, where he is not merely responsible for the acts which he himself has done, but also for the acts of those whom the undersheriff employs, and not only responsible for the acts done by virtue of the mandate, but also for the acts done under colour of the mandate, matters which have been carried very far indeed in relation to the sheriff. I need not enter upon the extent to which that goes in law, but to a lawyer that would indicate at once to what extent the responsibility for an agent who was shown to be so extensively employed as those agents who had funds put into their hands for the purpose of the election does fix the candidate.

Then it comes to this question. Is it shown that there was any corrupt practice on the part of the agents thus employed, or on the part of those whom they employed for them? Now upon that the first question is the question of treating. The statute which now regulates treating, the 17 & 18 Vict., c. 102, s. 4, "The Corrupt Practices Act," makes it a distinct matter. "Every candidate at an election who shall corruptly by himself, or by or with any other person, or by any other ways or means on his behalf, at any time either before, during, or after any election, directly or indirectly give or provide, or cause to be given or provided, or shall be accessory to the giving or providing, or shall pay wholly or in part any expenses incurred for any meat, drink, entertainment, or provision, to or for any person, in order to be elected, or for being elected, or for the purpose of corruptly influencing such person, or any other person to give or refrain from giving his vote," &c. Looking at those words, it is plain that those who prepared the Act have endeavoured to take in almost everything that could possibly be taken in, but they have very properly and wisely, I think, governed it all by the word "corruptly." And upon that word "corruptly," I think there can be no doubt at all that the true construction of the Act is that which was stated by Mr. Justice Willes in giving his opinion in the House of Lords in the case which has been referred to, Cooper v. Slade, that "corruptly" there does not mean wickedly, or immorally, or dishonestly, or anything of the sort, but with the object and intention of doing that which the Legislature plainly meant to forbid. In fact, giving meat or drink is treating when the person who gives it has an intention of treating, not otherwise; and in all cases where there is any evidence to show that meat or drink has been given, it is a question of fact for the Judge to try the matter whether he thinks that the intention is made out by the evidence, which, in every individual case, must stand upon its own grounds, and upon which I can only remark, as I did in the course of the inquiry, when speaking to Mr. Giffard; but I state it now deliberately, that although each individual case may be a mere feather's weight by itself, and so small that one would not act upon it, yet, if there is a large number of such cases, a large number of slight cases will together make a strong one; and consequently it would always be a very important inquiry what was the scale, the amount, and the extent to which it was done. To illustrate my meaning, I will take one of the small cases that were pointed out. I cannot doubt at all the fact that when Sir Richard Glass had been speaking for some time to a man (I believe Dark is his name), who I think was not a voter, one of the people in the company of Sir Richard Glass did give that man a shilling to drink Sir Richard Glass's health, and that was evidence tending to show treating. But if that stood alone, and if I were considering whether such a thing fell within the meaning of and proved "corrupt treating," I should not think so. I think that in considering what is corrupt treating, and what is not, we must look broadly to the common sense of the thing. There is an old legal maxim, "Inter apices juris summa injuria." To go by the strict letter of the law often would produce very grave wrong. I think that if we were to say that an election was void upon a single case of that sort we should be going to the "apices juris," and that the result would be "summa injuria." Therefore, the inquiry must be as to the extent and amount of such cases.

But the evidence here shows that a large number of public-houses, very nearly 20 (I think 19 or 20) were at many times during the election habitually open, and whoever went in there to get drink got drink. When we find that done, it would be a perfect mockery if one were to say that he doubted that that was done with a corrupt intention, with an intention that it might produce the mischief which the Legislature intended to forbid under the name of treating, and that it was consequently corrupt treating.

Then comes the question by whom was it done? Was it done by any agent for whom Sir Richard Glass is responsible? We had at first a great deal of circumstantial evidence about that; but now it comes at last to this, that Burnish, Pardoe's clerk, who was very considerably employed during this election as Pardoe's clerk, did order all this drink and control the beer. That he gave it, and that he did so from a corrupt motive, I think there can be no question at all.

Another question which seems material is, whether or no Pardoe, his employer, was at all cognizant of or responsible for this. But as far as avoiding the election goes I have no hesitation whatever in coming to the conclusion that Pardoe himself being employed as he was in the election generally, and money put in his hands to distribute (I do not rely so much upon his being election agent to pay money alone, because it might be given to a person to pay against vouchers, who was in no way connected with the election at all,) as an agent of Sir Richard Glass, and that every person whom he employed in the election is also an agent of Sir Richard Glass. Then comes the question is there evidence here, which I can reasonably doubt, that Burnish was so employed for the purposes of the election? I find that he was Pardoe's clerk, and that during almost all this time he seems to have been busily engaged, chiefly about election matters, although he appears to have done some other things also. Among the few expenses paid by the election agent, there is a bill for some weeks, I think it was, for Burnish's residence, and board and lodging in the neighbourhood, showing that he was, during all that time, employed on election business. Taking all those circumstances together I consider that, even if Burnish had ordered all this drink and all this treating with his own hand, without authority from anybody, and paid for it out of his own pocket, that of itself would have been sufficient to avoid the election. I mention that because I think it is desirable that it should be known how far I go, and what the law is, upon the evidence. But I think, as a matter of fact, it is impossible to doubt that Burnish did not mean to pay it out of his own pocket, and did not mean to pay it out of the funds of what is called the Conservative Working Men's Association, and that he did mean to pledge, when he ordered these large quantities of drink, and that it was understood by those who were furnishing it that he was pledging the election funds; that he was pledging Messrs. Pardoe and the other people who paid the election money, and that this was intended to be paid out of the funds.

And here it becomes a material thing to see how the election expenses were returned. Mr. Pardoe was examined, and upon Mr. Pardoe's evidence it would seem that he himself, whether it was suggested by Mr. Stephen, was wilfully ignorant, or whether it was as Mr. Giffard rather explained it, as I gathered from something he said, that he had got somewhat superannuated, did not personally do much, but that he trusted everything to his clerks, including Burnish. Burnish is one of the persons who make out the list of the watchers to be paid. Burnish is the person who goes and attends all these meetings. Burnish is at the public-houses, and there is great force in Mr. Stephen's remark, that it is not credible that a man who has a salaried clerk would let that salaried clerk spend his time in public-houses and such places, and get remuneration for it unless he intended him to do so. I therefore can have no doubt in coming to the conclusion that Burnish was acting there as an agent for the purposes of the election of Sir Richard Glass, being being employed by Mr. Pardoe for that purpose, and authorised by Mr. Pardoe for that purpose; and in consequence the corrupt treating which is clearly proved to have been done by Burnish, is clearly proved to have been done by Mr. Pardoe also. That seems to me important, because, when I report, as I shall in my certificate, to the Speaker, that Pardoe and Burnish are guilty of corrupt treating, that will render it impossible for them to act in any election matter, or to be employed in any election matter, for seven years to come; a thing which, of course, I should not do unless I were quite satisfied of the fact.

Another matter I must remark upon, and which weighs with me very much, is the mode in which the election expenses have been returned. At present I have not to do with the very stringent provisions of the Act of Parliament, or to say how far they may subject either Sir Richard Glass or Mr. Pardoe or Mr. Crowther to the penalties of that Act, nor how far they will practically prevent those people who have given credit for election expenses, and have not sent in their bills within a month, from being paid and recovering the money afterwards; all that will be for others to consider amongst themselves. I can only say, that if the practical result be that the keepers of the different public-houses, who have supplied the beer for the purpose, lose their payment, and find that instead of making money out of it they are losers of so much, I shall not regret it. But whether that is so or not I have nothing at present to do with that.

But I have to do with this; and I think it is a very important matter of evidence to see whether it would show anything corrupt, personally, on the part of Sir Richard Glass, or of his election agents. Now it is quite true that Sir Richard Glass, as Mr. Stephen pointed out, in paying money to Mr. Crowther, did, in the most direct terms, act contrary to the Election Auditors Act. He did then pay it to a person who was not declared to be the election agent. Then comes the question, does that show that Sir Richard Glass, when he paid that money into the hands of his agents, had a personal knowledge or intention that it should be bestowed in corrupt practices. Now upon that I cannot in the slightest degree doubt, myself, that the fact that a fund was placed in the hands of an agent by a candidate, if it is shown that that agent expended it in corrupt practices afterwards, is evidence tending to show that the candidate paying into those hands the money which was spent in corrupt practices, was himself intending that it should be spent in corrupt practices. I do not suppose that there has ever been in a corrupt election of any sort a candidate who was foolish enough, when he paid a large sum of money into the hands of a person to say, "Bestow this in corrupt practices," he would hand over a large sum of money to a person and say (I think I have seen this in novels) "On no account let there be any bribery, but bestow all this five or six thousand pounds on the poor." I should not doubt, if such a case came before me, in which the five or six thousand went in bribery, that the candidate did intend it to be done.

Then it seems to be a question to what extent it was shown, if the money was bestowed for corrupt practices, that the candidate who gave the money was aware of it; and in that case, also, the extent to which it was shown that there were corrupt practices would be very material. I think if it were shown that there had been here, as in many other boroughs in former times, and it may be now, extensive bribery, a large number of people bribed, corrupt clubs paid money, and so forth, it would be a very serious question whether the candidate, in putting money into the hands of his agents, was not personally cognizant of it. But it does not come to any such question here. Corrupt treating is shown, but I do not think it is shown that Sir Richard Glass expected it. Therefore I do not think that the evidence is enough to show that Sir Richard Glass, I will not say did not exactly mean the money to go in corrupt practices, but was willing that it should go in corrupt practices, when he paid it into his agents' hands. I do not think there is sufficient evidence in the case to make me find anything against Sir Richard Glass personally. I rather think that the very severe penalties that are attached to a candidate for being a party to a corrupt practice do not extend to all corrupt practices, but only to bribery. In the present case, however, there is nothing to show that any of this amount was bestowed upon bribery in such a way as to subject Sir Richard Glass to those penalties, even if personal knowledge were brought home to him; but I do not think that personal knowledge was brought home to him.

When you come to the other question, whether the money was properly bestowed, and whether Pardoe properly bestowed it, it is impossible to avoid coming to the conclusion, when you look at the mode in which these election expenses were returned, carefully avoiding returning very considerable items that had been actually paid before, sums which you cannot possibly suppose were omitted by accident, such as 120 £. and 90 £., and then the not complying with the Act of Parliament, which I should have thought any person must have distinctly understood who looked at it, by returning what were the expenses incurred, whether paid or not (for instance, the bill at the "George" of 120 £. could not have been left out by accident; I can hardly imagine that any person should have thought that that 120 £., though not actually paid, should not have been returned), that all that was done simply for the purpose of baffling the Act of Parliament, and rendering it a nullity, and not letting it be known what the money was spent for. All that is evidence leading to the conclusion that Mr. Pardoe knew perfectly well that the money was bestowed for purposes which would not bear the light of day. Though he may have frequently committed folly in the matter, the evidence leads to the conclusion that he knew that the money was so bestowed.

As I said before, I must, therefore, find and return distinctly that there was corrupt treating by Sir Richard Glass's agents, and that that corrupt treating extensively prevailed in the borough. I think I should say, in fairness there, that though there is some evidence that there were some on Mr. Lloyd's side who got drink, there is no evidence to show that there was any extensive giving of drink on his side, though there may have been some. There being this practice of treating to this extent in the borough, I think I must say, moreover, that Mr. Pardoe and Mr. Burnish were personally guilty of it. There was quite sufficient treating to upset the election. That is enough on that point.

Then comes another question on which I must make some observations, and that is the employment of watchers. Now, I think, that the fair result of what I gather from the evidence leads me to this conclusion, that it has been a long established practice in Bewdley to pay men for what is called watching, but in reality is doing nothing. It has been an old practice which, I suppose, people consider a sort of perquisite of elections, and, therefore, it has been continued. This has been done, as far as the evidence goes, more extensively on one side than on the other; but it appears to have been done on both sides, and it is a very mischievous system. It comes within all the mischief of treating; in the first place, it indirectly influences the men whether voters or not: if they are not voters it indirectly influences all their friends and other voters. In the second place, when it is given to voters, it would in all human probability lead to an expenditure by them in public-houses and elsewhere, which would indirectly influence voters. In that way it falls within all the mischief of treating, but no statute has yet been passed rendering it of the same effect as treating. Whether the Legislature will think proper to interfere with it hereafter it is not for me to say. It is quite true that where a voter has been employed, no matter whether he has been paid or not, where he has been retained with the expectation that he is to be paid, whether paid or not, his vote would be void. That several people here on this occasion acted as watchers, in the expectation and hope that they would afterwards be paid, I think, is pretty clearly made out. A warning having been given that if they were paid, their votes would be altogether void, that those people were not, in fact, paid is also perfectly plain. If it came to a scrutiny it would be material of course to see how many were actually employed; but on the present inquiry, the scrutiny having been abandoned, the question only is, whether or no the payment made to people for this work of watching, which I must say was not work at all, was with a view of procuring their votes so as to give them employment under this form, in which case it would be bribery. As to that, the evidence has not succeeded in bringing home any particular cases to that extent which would justify me in finding it; I think, therefore, upon this occasion I can only mention that this corrupt practice, for I think it is a corrupt practice, has prevailed. After the warning now given, I should think in the next contested election, whenever it takes place, people will be very cautious to avoid doing this, because otherwise the remark upon its being really bribery would be very strong. I must, then, report to the Speaker that there has prevailed such a corrupt practice to this extent.

The only other thing for me to consider is this, I think, as I have already pointed out, that the practice of watching has an indirect tendency towards bribery and this practice does exist very extensively. But, upon the evidence before me, I think that, although it may have occurred in isolated cases, there is no ground for supposing that direct general bribery has prevailed to any extent in the borough. That being so, I shall mention that also, which is an important element to be considered.

Then there comes the question as to specific instances of bribery. The Act of Parliament requires me to mention every instance in which it has been proved before me that any particular person has been guilty of bribery or any corrupt practices. I must mention, therefore, what persons have been proved to me to have been guilty in those respects. There is nothing in this part of the case in regard to specific persons that would turn the general result at all. The effect could only be to avoid the election, and that is done already. I do not think that any evidence has been given to prove a person to have been bribed by an agent for whom Sir Richard Glass would be directly responsible. I do not think therefore, that I need at present inquire into that branch of the case. Three or four persons have been mentioned who are alleged to have been bribed, and some evidence has been given upon those cases. I reserve for my consideration, before I make my certificate, which of them I shall mention as having been bribed. My decision will be known, of course, when I send in my certificate; but at present I do not enter into these individual cases or give the results beforehand.

The only thing remaining is the question as to the costs of the election petition. Now, as Mr. Lloyd has succeeded in showing that the election has been avoided by the acts of persons for whom Sir Richard Glass is responsible, the prima facie general rule, that the successful party has his costs, prevails. If it appeared that there was anything particularly vexatious or annoying I would deduct that from the costs; but at present I do not see that there is any head which I can strike off. I will hear any remarks which may be made upon it; but at present I must say that it seems to me that Sir Richard Glass must bear the costs.

Nothing further occurs to me as requiring to be said now. If there is anything which I have omitted, or which I am supposed to have omitted, I should be glad if either side would mention it.

Mr. Giffard submitted that the costs of preparation for the scrutiny ought not to fall upon the Respondent.

Mr. Justice Blackburn stated that inasmuch as the words of the Act in relation to the costs were, "And shall be defrayed by the parties to the petition in such manner and in such proportions as the Court or Judge may determine;" and inasmuch as it might be fairly presumed that if the Petitioners had proceeded with the scrutiny, they would not have been successful in it, his decision was that the costs of the Petitioners should be borne by the Respondent, except those incurred solely and exclusively for the scrutiny.

Mr. Fitzjames Stephen reminded his Lordship that Bewdley and Stourport were independent places, and asked him to Report that treating had not extensively prevailed at Stourport.

Mr. Justice Blackburn stated that he could not enter into that distinction, but must confine his Report to the borough as a whole.

R E P O R T S.

PETITION AGAINST HENRY WILLIAM RIPLEY.

THE PARLIAMENTARY ELECTIONS ACT, 1868.

To the Right Honourable the Speaker of the House of Commons.

I, Sir Samuel Martin, Knight, one of the Barons of the Court of Exchequer, and one of the Judges for the time being for the trial of Election Petitions in England, do hereby, in pursuance of the above Act, certify that upon the 25th day of January 1869, and several days following, I duly held a court at Bradford, in the county of York, for the trial of, and did try, the Election Petition for the borough of Bradford aforesaid, between John Haley and others, petitioners, and Henry William Ripley, respondent.

And in further pursuance of the said Act, I certify that at the conclusion of the said trial I determined that the said Henry William Ripley, being the Member whose election and return were complained of in the said petition, was not duly elected, and that his election was void, because he by his agents was guilty of treating at the said election, contrary to the statutes in such case made and provided; and I do hereby certify in writing such my determination to you.

And whereas charges were made in the said petition of corrupt practices having been committed at the said election; in further pursuance of the said Act, I report as follows:—

That upon the trial of the said petition, no corrupt practice was proved to have been committed by, or with the knowledge or consent of, any of the candidates at the said election.

And in pursuance of the said Act, I further report that the persons who were proved at the trial to have been guilty of corrupt practices, are Edward Kitcheman, Jeremiah Ryan, William Bowen, Michael Lamb, Michael Coyne, William Luby, Patrick Dwyer, John Young, James Corkran, John Hoare, Richard Duffy, John Bray, James Rowney, James Tidswell, Robert Conroy, William Hinnigan, James Burke, Bryan O'Neile, Michael Manton, John Walsh, Patrick Murphy, William Handy, Samuel Abel, and Joseph Gibson.

And in further pursuance of the said Act, I report that, upon the evidence before me, there was no reason to believe that corrupt practices extensively prevailed at the election to which the said petition relates, except as stated in my special report.

And in further pursuance of the said Act, I make this special report, as to matters which arose in the course of the said trial, an account of which ought, in my judgment, to be submitted to the House of Commons.

It was proved that the said Henry William Ripley had opened an unlimited credit at his bankers in favour of his agent, who availed himself of it to the extent of upwards of 7,200 l., and who sent in to the returning officer a mere abstract of totals of outlay, unaccompanied by vouchers; and that this was knowingly done, contrary to the Statute 26 & 27 Vict. c. 29, s. 4. That in one ward of the said borough, inhabited principally by Irishmen of the working class, large numbers were influenced by corrupt practices, committed by the agents of the said Henry William Ripley, and that upwards of 100 public-houses and beerhouses were opened as committee-rooms, or pretended committee-rooms, in the interest of the said Henry William Ripley, where drink without payment was supplied to voters, which was afterwards paid for by the agents of the said Henry William Ripley.

SAMUEL MARTIN.

PETITION AGAINST WILLIAM EDWARD FORSTER.

THE PARLIAMENTARY ELECTIONS ACT, 1868.

To the Right Honourable the Speaker of the House of Commons.

I, Sir Samuel Martin, Knight, one of the Barons of the Court of Exchequer, and one of the Judges for the time being for the trial of Election Petitions in England, do hereby, in pursuance of the above Act, certify that upon the 29th day of January 1869, and several days following, I duly held a court at Bradford, in the county of York, for the trial of, and did try, the Election Petition for the borough of Bradford aforesaid, between Samuel Storey and Thomas Garnett, petitioners, and William Edward Forster, respondent.

And in further pursuance of the said Act, I certify that at the conclusion of the said trial I determined that the said William Edward Forster, the Member whose election and return were complained of in the said petition, was duly elected and returned; and I do hereby certify in writing such my determination to you.

And whereas charges were made in the said petition of corrupt practices having been committed at the said election; I report in further pursuance of the said Act, as follows:—

That upon the trial of the said petition, no corrupt practice was proved to have been committed by, or with the knowledge or consent of, any of the candidates at the said election.

And I further, in pursuance of the said Act, report that upon the trial of this petition, there was not evidence before me that corrupt practices prevailed at the said election.

Mr. Giffard, Q.C., Mr. Metcalfe, and Mr. Mellor appeared as Counsel for the Petitioners. Mr. Charles Mills and Mr. James Hargreaves appeared as Agents. 26 January 1869.

Mr. Overend, Q.C., Mr. Price, Q.C., and Mr. Littler, Q.C., appeared as Counsel for the Respondent. Mr. David Little appeared as Agent.

Mr. Giffard was heard to open the allegations of the Petition.

Mr. WILLIAM BOWEN, sworn; Examined by Mr. Metcalfe.

1. I THINK you stand upon the Register of Voters as "Bone"?—Yes.
2. No. 267?—Yes.
3. You live at 5, Paperhall-court, Great Horton?—Yes.
4. Are you a tailor?—Yes.
5. About five weeks before the election took place, did you come in contact with Jeremiah Ryan?—Yes.
6. What is he?—He was an agent of Mr. Ripley's.
7. Where did he live?—He is a labouring man.
8. Where did he live?—He lives in Loom-street, Bradford.
9. Did he take you some five weeks before the election to Mr. Kitcheman?—Yes.
10. Is that Edward Kitcheman?—Yes.
11. What is he?—He was an agent for Mr. Ripley.
12. What was he?—He was a stuff merchant, I believe.
13. Does he live in Bradford also?—Yes.
14. Did Ryan introduce you to Mr. Kitcheman?—He did.
15. Was Mr. Kitcheman taking a part in the election?—Yes.
- 28.

16. For whom?—Mr. Ripley.
17. Do you know whether he was acting as chairman or vice-chairman, or had you seen him so acting?—Yes.
18. Was he acting in any capacity as chairman or vice-chairman that you saw?—Kitcheman's mission was through the East Ward.
19. Mr. Overend.] What have you seen him do?—He was not particularly confined to one house.
20. What have you seen him do?—I have seen him address people several times on behalf of Mr. Ripley.
21. Mr. Metcalfe.] And you say his "mission" was through the East Ward?—Yes.
22. What do you mean by his "mission"?—He was canvassing for Mr. Ripley; he was working for his return as Member for the borough.
23. And addressing people on his behalf?—Yes.
24. You say that you were introduced to Kitcheman; what took place then?—Mr. Ryan introduced me to Kitcheman as one of a neutralizing committee, that is, to keep the Irish people from voting for Mr. Miall, or to vote for Mr. Ripley at the close of the canvass for his return.

Mr. W. Bowen.

Mr.
W. Bowen.
—
26 January
1869.

25. First of all, did they neutralize them?—Yes.

26. You were introduced to him as a member of the neutralizing committee?—Yes.

27. What did he say?—He said that he thought that Mr. Ripley would be as good, as far as his sympathy went towards my county, and that he thought that if the Irish people would only support him, he would make a superior Member in preference to Mr. Miall.

28. Did Kitcheman tell you what you were to do, or say anything to you?—He told me when the show of hands would be in any meeting I was to support —

29. Mr. Baron Martin.] Whose friend were you in the election?—Previously to being intimidated I would support Mr. Miall.

30. Mr. Metcalfe.] At the show of hands, what were you to do?—To hold up my hand for Mr. Ripley.

31. Where were those meetings to take place?—They were principally through the East Ward.

32. Did he ask you to do anything about the Irish?—He told me to counsel with them, and to keep them from voting for Mr. Miall, and at the end to vote for Mr. Ripley.

33. The second night after that introduction did you again see Mr. Kitcheman?—I saw him on the same evening of that day.

34. Where did you first see him?—At the “White Swan,” in Bank-street.

35. Was there any committee-room sitting there?—Not then.

36. And you saw Kitcheman the same night, where was that?—At the “Manor House,” in Darley-street.

37. Was anyone with you?—Yes; Mr. Lamb, Mr. Kelly, Mr. Hooley, and Jeremiah Ryan.

38. Were they all Irishmen?—Yes.

39. Did Kitcheman on that occasion give you anything?—Yes.

40. What did he give you?—He gave us a sovereign each.

41. To you and those men whom you have described?—Yes.

42. Did he say what it was for?—It was to keep the Irish from voting, and when it came to the week of the election, to ask them to vote for Mr. Ripley.

43. Some short time after that, did you again see Kitcheman?—Yes.

44. At the “Junction” Hotel?—Yes.

45. In the Leeds-road?—Yes.

46. Was anyone with you then?—Yes.

47. Who was with you?—There was Mr. Michael Lamb, Mr. Michael Coyne, Mr. William Kelly, and Mr. Timothy Hooley.

48. Then you met Kitcheman; was anyone with him?—No.

49. Was Ryan there?—Yes, he was with us.

50. What took place then?—Mr. Kitcheman said something with reference to keeping the Irish from voting, and after then he gave us 30 s. each.

51. Did he give you 30 s. first, or was anything said?—We got a sovereign first, and then 10 s., an advance after that.

52. Why did he give you 10 s. further?—To clear expenses.

53. Did anyone say anything about that?—Yes, Mr. Michael Coyne.

54. Mr. Baron Martin.] You do not mean the sovereign you had before?—This was a second pay, my Lord.

55. Mr. Metcalfe.] On this occasion you got first a sovereign, and then somebody said something, and you got 10 s. more each?—The same night.

56. Was there any paper produced on that occasion?—Yes.

57. Who produced it?—Mr. Kitcheman.

58. What was done with that paper; what did he say about it?—He wanted us to sign our hand as a committee, or to sign our names.

59. Was anything said, or any alteration suggested?—Yes.

60. Who suggested that alteration?—Mr. Michael Coyne.

61. Was the alteration made?—Yes.

62. By whom?—By Mr. Michael Coyne.

63. After that alteration had been made, did you sign it?—Yes.

64. All of you?

Mr. Overend.] Produce the paper.

65. Mr. Metcalfe.] Who took that paper?—Ryan took it.

66. Was that in the presence of Kitcheman?—Yes, and in the presence of them all.

67. Did Ryan go away with you or Kitcheman?—We all went out together.

68. Did you ever sign that paper, since I mean?—No.

69. How soon after that did you again see Kitcheman?—The week following.

70. Did you again, or when was the next time that you received any money after that 30 s.?—I believe it was on that day week.

71. How much did you receive then?—30 s. more.

72. Who was with you at that time?—There was the same party, William Kelly, Timothy Hooley, and Michael Lamb.

73. Was Coyne there on that occasion?—Not the second time.

74. You received 30 s. each, from whom?—From Mr. Kitcheman.

75. Did he say what it was for?—It was for the same purpose.

76. To neutralize the Irish?—Yes.

77. Did you afterwards receive any further money?—Yes; I received another 30 s.

78. Where was that?—In Longcroft-place, I believe.

79. Is there any hotel or public-house there?—Ryan was there; we went to see Ryan, and he was in a beerhouse.

80. Do you remember the name of that beerhouse?—I do not know exactly the name.

81. In what street was it?—In Longcroft-place.

82. How much did you then receive?—Thirty shillings more.

83. From whom did you receive it?—From Jeremiah Ryan.

84. Was Kitcheman present then?—Not then.

85. What was that 30 s. for?—For the same purpose as before.

86. Was it 30 s. each?—Yes.

87. Was anybody with you on that occasion?—Yes; Kelly and Hooley.

88. Again, after that, did you receive any money?—Yes.

89. When next; how long after?—The week following.

90. From whom did you receive it?—From Mr. Kitcheman.

91. How

Mr.
W. Bowen.
26 January
1869.

91. How much did you receive?—I received 6 l., a 5 l. note, and a sovereign in gold.
92. Did he tell you what you were to do with it?—Yes; I had to pay the other men with it.
93. The same men?—Yes.
94. Mr. Overend.] At the rate of 30 s., I suppose?—Yes.
95. Mr. Metcalf.] That would be 30 s. each again?—Yes.
96. For the same purpose?—Yes.
97. After that, did you receive any money?—Yes.
98. Do you remember where; the last was the 6 l. from Kitcheman?—It was at the “Eastbrook” Hotel, in Peckover-walk.
99. Was there a person of the name of Moses Quigley with Kitcheman at that time?—Yes.
100. Was Jeremiah Ryan there also?—Yes.
101. After that did you receive anything further?—Yes.
102. When you received it, was anything said about a speech being made at the “Oak” Inn?—Yes, there was.
103. Who was to make the speech?—Mr. Ripley was at the meeting there that night, and Mr. Lamb was to go and say something at the meeting.
104. Who said that?—Kitcheman.
105. Who was to go and make the speech?—Mr. Lamb was to go and say something.
106. Did you go that night to the “Oak” Inn?—Yes.
107. Was Mr. Ripley there?—Yes.
108. Did he make a speech?—Yes; he was speaking when we went in.
109. Did Lamb also make a speech?—Yes.
110. Who took you into the meeting?—I and Lamb, and Kelly and Hooley went in together.
111. Was Kitcheman there?—He came in after we went in.
112. Who was in the chair?—I believe it was Alderman Simeon.
113. After that, did you receive any money?—Yes.
114. Where was that?—I believe it was in Bank-street.
115. Do you remember the name; did you go to the “Mason’s Arms”?—Yes; it was at the “Mason’s Arms.”
116. What did you receive there?—I received a 5 l. note.
117. From whom?—From Mr. Ryan.
118. What were you to do with that?—I was to give 50 s. to Lamb, and keep the other myself.
119. That night you got 2 l. 10 s. each?—Yes.
120. Was there any other note paid to anybody on that night?—Yes; another 5 l. note to Mr. Kelly and Mr. Hooley.
121. Mr. Overend.] Did you see it paid?—No; Mr. Ryan sent out for me, and I went in, and he gave me a 5 l. note, and Mr. Hooley went in and he got the first 5 l. note.
122. Mr. Metcalf.] When Hooley came out, did you see him with a 5 l. note?—Yes.
123. You went in and got a 5 l. note?—Yes.
124. After that, did you again receive any?—Yes.
125. Was that near the “Church Steps” public-house, in Bolton-road?—Yes.
126. What did you receive there?—I got no money there, but I got, I believe, the night following.
127. What was said; did you see Kitcheman there?—Yes.

128. What did he say?—He axed us how things were getting on, and I said, of course with the rest, they were “As usual,” I suppose.
129. Did he say anything about your going to see Michael Mahony?—Yes; he asked us what passed.
130. Was Mahony one of Mr. Miall’s friends?—Yes.
131. He asked you what you had been to see him for?—Yes.
132. Did you tell him?—I went in with Lamb, and heard all the talk that went on between Mahony.
133. We do not want to know that; did you tell Kitcheman why you went to Mahony?—Yes.
134. What took place?—He said we had to be “True to our colours till the election was over, and he would see us all right.”
135. Did he say anything about wages?—He said he would give us more next week.
136. Did he say how much more?—Fifty shillings more.
137. You had 2 l. 10 s. the week before?—Yes.
138. Was it to be raised to 5 l. or 50 s.?—Our wages were to be doubled.
139. As to the amount of 5 l. which you received, was that the week before the election?—Yes.
140. Mr. Overend.] That is 5 l. during the election week?—During the week before the election.
141. Mr. Metcalf.] In that same week did Kelly, Lamb, and you see Kitcheman at the “Junction” Inn?—Yes.
142. Did Kitcheman give you anything there?—Yes, he gave us a sovereign each.
143. Was that as part of the wages, or extra?—It was a part of what he called the “rise.”
144. On the Saturday before the election, did Ryan give you anything at the “Fleece” Inn?—He gave me two 5 l. notes.
145. On the Saturday before the election, at the “Fleece” Inn, Mr. Ryan gave you two 5 l. notes?—Yes.
146. Did he tell you what to do with them?—Yes; I was to pay myself and Kelly, and Lamb, and two more men.
147. Were you to do anything else?—All the money he gave me I paid; he said that he had business on his hands, and he could not attend to all.
148. Was anything said about Patrick Rowney?—Yes; I had to give him a sovereign.
149. What for?—To vote for Mr. Ripley, I suppose.
150. Did he tell you what was said; was he a voter?—Yes.
151. Did he tell you why you were to give it?—I know that Mr. Rowney was a voter.
152. He gave it you to give to Rowney?—Yes; and I did as I was told.
153. Was Thomas Darmody mentioned?—Yes.
154. What were you to do with him?—I was to give him 2 l.
155. Was Patrick Kilmartin mentioned?—Yes.
156. Mr. Baron Martin.] Was Darmody a voter?—I think not, my Lord.
157. What was he to have the 2 l. for?—For his work, I suppose; his canvass.
158. Mr. Metcalf.] Was he canvassing?—I believe he was.
159. Were you also to pay Patrick Ryan?—Yes; I gave him a sovereign.

- Mr. 160. Was he a voter?—I do not know.
 W. Bowen. 161. Did you pay these men?—Yes.
 — 162. You paid them the sums you have men-
 26 January tioned?—Yes, I did.
 1869. 163. On the Monday after the election what took place; did Lamb and you go to Kitcheman's house?—Yes, we did.
 164. Was that in consequence of some message that you received?—Yes.
 165. What did you find; did you find Kitcheman
 there?—Yes.
 166. Did he give you anything?—Yes; he paid us 4 l. each.
 167. Did he pay it himself; did he give you the 4 l.?—He paid me and Lamb 4 l. each, or he gave us a note to get 4 l. each at the "Old Hall."
 168. Did he write that note in your presence?
 —Yes.
 169. Did you go to the place that he directed you to go to?—We were not to go there till seven o'clock that evening.
 170. Did you go to the place?—Yes.

Mr. Overend.] I suppose you have traced the note.

171. Mr. Metcalfe.] Wait a moment, if you please. (To the Witness.) As I understand, you went to the place that Kitcheman directed you to go to?—Yes.
 172. And you took the note with you?—Yes.
 173. To whom did you go?—I do not know.
 174. Whom did you find there when you got there?—I found Mr. Terry, and he was paying money.
 175. Where was that?—At the "Old Hall"
 Hotel.
 176. Besides Mr. Terry, was anyone else there that you knew?—Yes; Mr. Mark Dawson and Mr. Whitehouse.
 177. Is Mr. Mark Dawson an old gentleman?
 —Yes.
 178. Was anybody else there that you saw?
 —There were several people there, but I did not know them.
 179. What was Mr. Terry doing there?—He was there for the purpose of paying the agents.
 180. Was he actually paying them; did you see people paid?—Yes, he paid me and Lamb.
 181. Did you present the note there?—I sent it in by Shuttleworth.
 182. After sending it in by Shuttleworth, were you admitted?—No, not for an hour and a half afterwards.
 183. At the end of that time, when you were admitted, did you then receive the money that you had asked Kitcheman for?—It was certified on the note.
 184. Did you then receive the money you had asked Kitcheman for?—Yes.
 185. From whom did you receive it?—From
 Mr. Terry.
 186. Did you see that note again?—No.
 187. Who was Shuttleworth?—I believe he is a detective belonging to this borough.
 188. Was he standing at the door?—Yes; and several more policemen were there.
 189. Were there other people going in and out of that room?—Yes; there was people inside, and I got in before any of them.
 190. Were there a number of people going in and out at that time?—Yes.
 191. Was anything said at the time about paying you 4 l. each?—Yes; Mr. Whitehouse did not want to give us so much; he said that it was too much, and he wanted to give us only 3 l. 10 s.

192. Was that at the time when you were in before Mr. Terry?—Yes.
 193. But you stuck out for the other and you got it?—Yes.

Cross-examined by Mr. Overend.

194. You are a tailor, I believe?—Yes.
 195. And a voter?—Yes.
 196. Did you vote at the election?—No.
 197. Do you know whether Lamb, who has been mentioned, is a voter?—I cannot exactly say.
 198. Is Kelly a voter?—Yes.
 199. Did he vote at the last election?—I think not.
 200. Were you not expressly told by Ryan and Kitcheman that if you were employed for the party, that is for Mr. Ripley's party, as a canvasser, you were not to vote?—I was told by the lawyer not to vote, and by Kitcheman too.
 201. Was the same thing said to the other people, that is to say, to Kelly, Hooley, Ryan and Coyne, that they were not to vote?—Coyne is not a voter.
 202. But to those persons who were voters, did not you not hear it said that they were not to vote if they were employed?—Yes; they said that we were not to vote, because they said that we should put ourselves in the power of the law.
 203. And to all those persons who were voters, and to whom you gave money, was not the same thing said?—I gave no money.
 204. But it was through your hand that it came, and to every person to whom you paid money by the direction of Jeremiah Ryan or by the direction of Kitcheman; to all those persons who were voters, was it not said that they were not to vote?—I cannot account for anybody but those who were in the committee with me and Ryan.
 205. How many persons did you pay?—I paid
 Kilmartin, Rowney, and Lamb, and Kelly.
 206. Was Kelly a voter?—Yes, he was.
 207. Did you hear him told not to vote?
 —Yes.
 208. Whom besides did you pay?—I paid
 Kilmartin.
 209. Was he a voter?—I do not know.
 210. Did you hear him told not to vote?—Not in my presence; then I paid Ryan and Rowney.
 211. Did you hear whether they were told not to vote?—I did not hear that, but they had nothing to do with me.
 212. Are they voters?—I believe that Rowney is a voter, but I cannot say for the rest.
 213. When about was it that you were first spoken to by Ryan or Kitcheman?—It was about five weeks before the election; I cannot speak exactly as to the date.
 214. What had you been doing up to those five weeks before the election?—I attended meetings in the evening.
 215. On whose behalf did you attend those meetings?—I was supposed to attend them on behalf of Mr. Ripley.
 216. Did you go to those meetings professing to be a supporter of Mr. Ripley's?—I went in, but I never supported one or the other.
 217. Did you profess to be a supporter of Mr.
 Ripley's?—

Mr.
W. Bowen.
26 January
1869.

Ripley's?—I was supposed to be a supporter of his.

218. You gave it out, did you not, that you were a supporter of Mr. Ripley's?—I did not say anything about it.

219. You went there, did you not, as one of his supporters?—Kitcheman supposed that I was one of his supporters.

220. But you said that you were a supporter of Mr. Ripley's?—That is the reason why he gave me the money.

221. You told him that you were a supporter of Mr. Ripley's, did you not?—No; I did not tell him; he axed me.

222. When he asked you whether you were or were not in favour of Mr. Ripley, you said, "yes," did you not?—No; I never held my hand up.

223. Then how came Kitcheman to think that it was so?—It was by the recommendation of Ryan; they thought that I had some influence over my countrymen.

224. Did you tell Ryan that you were in favour of Mr. Ripley?—No; Ryan knew my principles before that.

225. And he knew the uprightness of your character?—Yes.

226. Mr. Baron Martin.] Were you selling your principles?—As far as the election was considered I was.

227. Mr. Overend.] But before you got anything, did you not tell Ryan that you were in favour of Mr. Ripley?—Ryan knew that I was in favour of Mr. Myall.

228. But before you got anything, did you not tell Ryan that you were in favour of Mr. Ripley?—I did not.

229. Where is Ryan?—I do not know.

230. He is not here is he?—I do not know whether he is here or not.

231. How came Ryan first to speak to you; what did he say?—He asked me if I would go on a neutralising committee.

232. Was it supposed at that time that the Irish were against Mr. Ripley?—The majority of the Irish in the borough were.

233. You were an Irishman, and Jeremiah Ryan wanted you to go and canvass the people and bring them over and make them think favourably of Mr. Ripley?—He did not ask me to go and ask them to do that.

234. But it was to persuade them to abstain from voting?—Yes.

235. Did he say that he should require you to give all your time to it?—No.

236. Did you give up all your time to it?—No.

237. Did you go about?—My time was principally devoted to it by night; going from one meeting to another.

238. Were you out almost every night for Mr. Ripley?—I was supposed to be so.

239. You said that you were working for him, did you not?—I never told anyone.

240. But you were supposed to be working for him?—Yes.

241. Did you keep a canvass book?—No.

242. What did you do?—I went with Mr. Lamb and Mr. Kelly.

243. Where did you go to?—We went to the different meetings.

244. Did you see the Irish people?—Yes; I saw them wherever they were.

245. And you tried to persuade them, did you not?

not, to vote for Mr. Ripley?—No; I never tried to persuade anybody; I never asked a man in the borough to vote for Mr. Ripley; neither Irishmen nor Englishmen either.

246. But you were supposed to be doing that?—That was what I was getting my money for.

247. Although you were getting your money for going, as it was supposed, to get votes, you never asked a single man for his vote?—No.

248. The first payment that they gave you was 1*l.*?—Yes.

249. Then it was 1*l.* 10*s.*?—Yes.

250. Then it was 50*s.*, was it not?—No; I got three sums of 30*s.*

251. You received 1*l.*, and three sums of 30*s.*, and one sum of 50*s.?—£.* 5 and then 4*l.*

252. That was for other people, was it not?—No, it was myself; I received 16*l.* altogether.

253. And the payment to you was for the purpose of being useful to Mr. Ripley, in order that you should go about and canvas those voters?—Yes.

254. And for no other purpose?—No; Kitcheman told me not to vote a week before the election.

255. Now, about the 5*l.*, where did you get that?—It was a week before the election; I did not get it altogether.

256. Were you to do more work in that week than you had done before?—No.

257. How came you to have a rise of from 1*l.* to 30*s.*?—Because Kitcheman promised it to us.

258. Did you insist upon having it?—No.

259. Did you ask for it?—Not personally, I did not.

260. How do you mean; what do you mean by "personally"?—I did not ask for it for myself.

261. What did you ask for?—The rest of the men of the committee asked for it, and if I got the money, I was not going to refuse.

262. Who were the men of the committee?—Lamb and Coyne, and Kelly, and me.

263. They pressed for an increase of pay, did they?—Yes; Lamb and they said the nearer it was to the election the more money we asked for, the more we should get.

264. I suppose you made an arrangement among yourselves that one was to ask for all the rest?—Not particularly, we did not.

265. However, that was the plan you adopted; that one went in and asked for the remainder?—We saw that there was money flying, and we thought that we should have our share; I did not.

266. You got the other men to go in for you?—They got it, and so I did.

267. And you got them to go in for you?—Yes, it was understood.

268. It was understood that you were all to have some?—Yes.

269. At first it was 1*l.*, then it got up to 30*s.*, and nearer to the election you insisted upon having 50*s.*?—Yes.

270. They paid you then?—Yes.

271. How was it that you were to get 5*l.*?—I do not know; it was to make us work more energetically among the Irish people.

272. You told them, did you not, that you had a great deal of influence over the Irish people?—No; I did not.

273. What did you say; did you say that you could be useful?—Ryan, I believe, did all that part of the work; he introduced me to Kitcheman,

- Mr. man, and he said we were the men who had influence among the Irish people in the town.
- W. Bowen. 274. And with that view you were to canvass them?—I was not asked to canvass them.
- 26 January 1869. 275. But you were to influence them, I suppose?—Yes.
276. You did not go and talk about it?—I never spoke at all.
277. Not to any one?—No.
278. Then you took the money, and pretended to be doing your best, and you did nothing?—Nothing that I am aware of.
279. Except the money?—No.
280. Do you know that hand-writing (handing a paper to the witness)?—Yes.
281. Whose writing is it?—The two latter names are mine; I cannot say for the others; I signed this; this is my own; I signed this on behalf of Lamb.
282. By whose authority did you sign Lamb's name?—By Lamb's authority.
283. Then I suppose he cannot write?—I suppose not.
284. Is it true that Kitcheman never gave you any money to pay voters not to vote, or to neutralize them?—That note has been signed after the election, I believe.
285. I did not ask you that; but you signed it of your own free-will, did you not?—Yes; I signed it to get what money was coming to me; I was employed under contract.

Re-examined by Mr. Giffard.

286. When was it that you saw that document, which has been shown to you before?—I believe it was the week after the election.

287. In whose possession did you see it then?—Mr. Kitcheman brought it into his own parlour; I believe he made it out there, and he got me to sign it, and Lamb.
288. Is the body of that paper in Kitcheman's hand-writing?—I did not see it; he did not let me see it; I did not see it; but I think I could nearly tell Kitcheman's hand-writing.
289. Did you leave it with Kitcheman?—Yes.
290. Were you ever asked for any return of what has been called your canvass?—No.
291. Were you provided with any canvass-book?—No.
292. Mr. Overend.] I wish to ask this question; have you been paid anything?—Not for the evidence.
293. Have you been promised anything?—No.
294. Have you not received anything for coming here?—Not a farthing.
295. And not even a promise?—No.
296. Not by the attorney nor by anybody on behalf of the petitioners?—I have not received a farthing, either directly or indirectly.
297. Nor the promise of a farthing?—No.
298. Mr. Giffard.] You say that you were supposed to go and neutralize your countrymen; was there any person to whom you made any written report or any verbal one of what you had been doing?—Not that I am aware of.
299. You have stated that you did nothing in the way of neutralizing or of canvassing for votes, how then did you spend the money?—The money that I received I spent most part of it in knocking about from public-house to public-house.

[The Witness withdrew.]

Mr. BENJAMIN TERRY, sworn; Examined by Mr. Giffard.

- Mr. 300. WHAT are you?—I am an attorney.
- B. Terry. 301. Were you, at any time during last year, retained in any capacity for Mr. Ripley?—I was retained by Mr. Little, Mr. Ripley's legal agent, on the 5th of November last.
302. What were you retained to do?—To attend to the election in the East Ward.
303. From that time down to the present time, have you made any payments in respect of what you were employed to do?—I made payments after the election.
304. At any time, was my question, after the retainer?—Yes.
305. To what amount?—I have not added them up; I have my clerk in attendance with me.
306. Mr. Baron Martin.] Tell us what the first payment was?—Two hundred and some pounds, my lord.
307. Mr. Giffard.] Have you received the money?—Yes.
308. From whom?—My clerks have got that; I believe part from Mr. Little, and part from Mr. Holt, a clerk in Mr. Little's office at the central committee.
309. Have you an account of the sums you have disbursed?—This is an account written out by my clerk in my presence at the places where I paid.
310. Just hand it to me (the same was handed to the Learned Counsel); have you the vouchers in respect of which those payments were made?—I have not the vouchers; I believe they were sent up to Mr. Little.
311. Mr. Little is here; you had better produce

- them at once; you are aware, I suppose, that the vouchers ought to have been returned to the receiving officer?—All were returned, or ready to be returned at any time; I told my clerk to hand everything over to Mr. Little that he asked for.
312. You are not responsible, but they were handed over to Mr. Little?—Yes.
313. What means did you take to ascertain that the persons who put forward those claims were entitled to the money?—There were gentlemen from the different district committees who took the trouble to attend at Eastbrook House, where I sat, and I got the best information I could from those parties.
314. What were those gentlemen's names?—Alderman Mark Dawson was there one or two nights, and Mr. Whitehouse was there one or two nights, and several gentlemen that I know, who have been taking an active part.
315. Did Mr. Michael Moran come?—I saw Mr. Michael Moran; I think so; he was a canvasser; he came one time; I saw him.
316. Did he give you a list?—I believe there would be one list of his.
317. Was Kitcheman one of the gentlemen who were there?—I saw Kitcheman there several times; when I attended to make payments he was there.
318. Was he one of those persons giving you information, and upon whose information you acted?—Several times he was; he did not attend every night.
319. Was he vice chairman of the East Ward committee?

committee?—No, I do not know that he was, but he took an active part there.

320. You had the management of the East Ward, as I understand; was not he the vice chairman of the East Ward committee?—I have a list here, and I will refresh my memory upon that point.

321. By all means; is that a list of all the committees?—This is a list of the committees, all of which had been formed before I began, with the exception of one, two, or three; I do not see his name there, and I did not look upon him as the vice chairman.

322. Does a vice chairman look differently from another man?—I do not find his name in the list.

323. Is there any list later than this?—I think that is the last.

324. Are you sure of that; just look at it again; this was the list before you began, as I understand; just remember, was not there a list subsequently to that, that would comprise all the houses in that ward; the "British Oak," for instance, of which Michael Moran was chairman; you will not find that there?—There was a committee at the "British Oak," I remember, but I forget whether a list was printed.

325. You will not find it there; perhaps you will remember that there was another list besides that afterwards?—Will you be good enough to name it.

326. That is what I am asking you for?—I know that there were two printed.

327. Looking at that, and finding that the "British Oak" is not in it, do not you believe that that is an earlier list?—A list was printed, and I believed this to be the list.

328. That is the last one?—No; one of the first lists.

329. Have you got a later one?—I have got two lists.

330. Have you got the one in which the "British Oak" appears?—No; I see that a committee was formed after the last list was printed.

331. Did you keep any accounts?—I kept none whatever till after the election.

332. I will begin at the weekly payments; did you make any payment until after the election?—I am not aware that I paid a penny to anybody except my own clerks, whom I had to pay at the committee rooms.

333. Did you devise any system by which the expense in your ward should be checked; I mean was it ascertained what it was when you had to pay it?—None whatever, except asking the gentlemen who had been committed with a different committee to attend and see the parties who applied for payment, and assist me in determining what should be paid.

334. Did you contrive no system to ascertain, while the expense was going on, whether, for instance, a publican charged for more days than his house had been used for, or any other expense?—I did not consider that I had anything to do with that; that was left entirely to the gentlemen who formed the committee.

335. Then, upon their instructions afterwards, you paid?—Yes.

336. Do you remember receiving a note from Kitcheman, directing you to pay two persons whom he had employed?—I believe Mr. Kitcheman sent several notes.

337. Have you got them; if so, just produce them?—I suppose Mr. Little has them.

338. He will hand them to you, I dare say?—

Mr. Little.] I have not anything of the sort.

Witness.] I offered to show all that I had; I have a memorandum, "Please pay so-and-so so much."

339. Is that signed by Kitcheman?—There were several notes of that sort.

340. Let us have them during the proceedings; is that Kitcheman's handwriting (handing a letter to the Witness)?—I believe that to be Kitcheman's handwriting; I dare say I have several.

341. Did you pay 9*l.*, in pursuance of that direction?—Whatever I paid will be in that list; I did not always pay what appeared on those notes.

342. Look at that receipt; you produced that as one voucher?—If you find the name in that list, I paid that; I paid all the names at Eastbrook House, except perhaps a couple of pounds to several clerks who—

343. These two are signed by Mr. William Bowen, and the other by Mr. Michael Lamb?—I believe I did; I believe you will find them in the list.

344. In pursuance of directions from Kitcheman?—Yes; or some of the gentlemen of the committee; I believe those would be paid by direction of Kitcheman.

345. Did you inquire whether any of those different persons were voters?—I had a clerk, or two persons who sat with voting lists before them, and everybody was asked particularly as to whether he was a voter, and you will find that one or two names are entered in that list which I first handed to you; I very shortly ascertained that they were voters, and had got paid in mistake, but the money was handed back, and the names crossed out, I think, in two instances.

346. But that was after the election?—Yes.

347. Just look at that one (handing a paper to the Witness); Mr. Patrick Darcy, in the East Ward?—A man of the name of Darcy did attend, and I paid him some money.

248. Has he not a vote in the East Ward?—I do not know; I cannot remember; I have been there for the purpose of looking at the list.

349. Who were the people who attended there for the purpose?—Two of my own clerks, Mr. William John Ingham and, I think, Mr. William Gilyard attended there one or two nights, and a person of the name of John Bennett.

350. Did Mr. James Tidswell also attend from the "Bricklayers' Arms"?—I remember a man of that name being there.

351. Of course there were public-house bills in the East Ward which you had to discharge?—Yes, there were public-house bills sent in, but I had made no arrangement whatever with the innkeepers; I forwarded all those bills to Mr. Little that came in to me.

352. Those you did not pay?—I did not pay them, not one; one man sent in a small bill for two small casks of beer which the clerks at the committee rooms had on the day of the election; it is 1*l.* 12*s.*, I believe.

353. The bills from the public-houses you forwarded to Mr. Little?—Yes.

354. So that this payment is not included in the gross sum of 200*l.* and odd?—Not there.

355. Is it anywhere else?—Not in any account.

356. What is the general character of the payments which you made there for canvassers?—Some for canvassers, and some for messengers, clerks,

Mr.
B. Terry.

26 January
1869.

Mr.

clerks, and porters, and people of that description.

357. Are they distinguished in your accounts, which is a canvasser, and which is a messenger, or shall I only find the name?—I believe you will only find the name. The canvassers were paid about 6 s. a day; there were many boys; many of them had 5 s. a day, and some had 7 s. 6 d.

358. Who decided what they were to be paid?—It was generally left to me, and sometimes some of the gentlemen of the committee would say whether they should have more or less.

359. Was the arrangement for the payment of those canvassers and messengers one which was made before their employment or after the election?—I do not know of any arrangements being made before the election. I had nothing whatever to do about the payments till after the election, when at the request of Mr. Little, I attended at the place to make payments.

360. Had you anything to do with the employment of the canvassers?—I did not employ a single canvasser myself.

361. Who did employ them?—I believe that most of them had been employed before the 5th November.

362. Who employed them?—They were generally employed by the parties who attended at the respective committees.

363. The gentlemen who attended at the respective committees employed the canvassers?—Yes.

364. What was your function during the period that you were employed from the 5th of November till after the election?—The canvass books had been made out before I began on the 5th of November. I believe they were put into different forms, and I had them put into a different form by some of the clerks at the committee room, and after that I attended at the committee room from time to time in the evening and took a report as to how the canvass stood in different parts of the ward.

365. Was that what you were supposed to be doing in the interval?—Yes.

366. Did you send in your own account?—Yes.

367. What does it amount to?—For myself, clerks, and a professional man whom I had to employ in a part of the town, I think it is 103 l.

368. That is not comprehended in the 200 l., as those are only the disbursements?—Yes; in connection with the East Ward.

369. Where did you get the money for the disbursements?—From Mr. Little or Mr. Little's clerk.

370. Did you send for it as you wanted it, or did you have it in a gross sum?—It was arranged by some of the parties that the men who had been employed should meet at Eastbrook House on a certain night, and I got first 120 l., and then after that my clerk, I think, got two several sums of 100 l. each.

371. Who was it in your ward who selected the committee room?—That I really cannot tell. I did not.

372. Nor do you know who did, I suppose?—I do not.

373. Did bills come in from all of them to you?—I could not say whether they came all to me, but I believe most of them.

374. And you forwarded them on, I suppose, to Mr. Little?—Yes; I told my clerk to put them in a bag, I went through the bills for all the public-houses in the East Ward.

375. We had better have them.

Mr. Overend.] Very well.

376. Mr. Giffard.] Just be good enough to hand them to the witness. (Some papers were handed to the Witness.)—I believe these are the papers.

377. You mentioned a gentleman of the name of Moran?—Yes.

378. Did he apply to you for payment in December?—In November or December.

379. I believe he applied for a large sum in the first instance?—Yes.

380. In the first instance, did you refuse to pay it?—He asked a guinea per day. I had paid persons who had been employed as I understood he had been employed, at 6 s. a day, and I did not, of my own responsibility, like to pay a guinea per day.

381. You refused to pay him in the first place?—Yes, and I am not aware that he has been paid yet.

382. Have you since agreed to pay him?—I have not.

383. Are you aware that an agreement has been since made to pay him?—Yes, I am aware that there has.

384. Did you hear that it was made within the last few days?—No; I have a letter from Mr. Frederick Jones, the Registrar for the Huddersfield County Court about it, and I replied that I would mention the matter to Mr. Little, but I am not aware that it has been paid.

385. Have you written to him or any one on his behalf since then?—If he had written a letter to me, probably I might have acknowledged it. I wrote in reply to Mr. Jones.

386. Is that your letter to Mr. Jones (handing a letter to the Witness)?—Yes.

Cross-examined by Mr. Overend.

387. When did your agency cease?—I have been in communication with Mr. Little ever since. That is the letter which I sent in reply (handing the same to the Learned Counsel).

388. Mr. Giffard.] Just look at your letter; you requested him to keep quiet for the present; what was that for?—I thought that it might serve him better, and that I might get him more than 6 s. a day.

389. But why was he to keep quiet?—I did not want him to conceal anything, but not to press for payment just then. I had not had an opportunity of seeing Mr. Little just then, and I said that I would mention it to Mr. Little.

390. Had you from time to time communications with Mr. Ripley on the subject of payments?—I am not aware that I have spoken to Mr. Ripley on the subject of payments.

391. Just look to your letter?—I have never spoken to Mr. Ripley about it, or any payment.

392. Are you quite sure about that?—Yes.

393. Have you had any conversation with Moran during the last few days?—No.

394. Have you seen him?—Yes, in Court; but I have not seen him to speak to him in the last few days.

395. You have not written to him in the last few days?—Certainly not.

396. You can probably inform me as to that circular which was sent out with reference to the election election (handing the circular to the Witness)?—One was printed, I know.

397. Is that the one; identify that if you can?—Yes.

398. Do you see that there is an allowance made for canvassers; just read it down to the bottom?—I recollect all about it.

399. Was there one like that in all the wards?—I do not know for the other wards.

400. You observe that the canvassers are to be instructed in their duties, and the word "duties" is in italics. On the polling day, what were to be the duties of the canvassers?—To get up the voters for them to poll early.

401. Who was to instruct them?—The chairmen and the secretaries for the respective districts.

402. Who was it that framed that circular?—There was one suggested from another ward, and I framed this for the East Ward.

403. And you put the word "duties" in italics?—They did that for me.

404. Was that distributed to the persons employed, and comparatively treated as a confidential document?—No, it was open in the committee-room.

405. Was it published; was it not stuck on the wall?—It was not put on the wall; one or two were sent to each committee-room, I believe.

406. Were there captains who were employed to superintend the canvassers?—Yes.

407. Who were the captains in the East Ward?—That I cannot tell you.

408. I suppose that some account of them was kept?—Yes, at the different committee-rooms.

409. I want to know where, and when?—I had none, and therefore I cannot tell you.

410. Who had the appointment of them?—The chairmen of committees.

411. Do not you know who was the captain in your own ward?—I do not know.

412. Do you think that Jeremiah Ryan was one?—I do not know him, I do not know that I ever saw him.

413. Am I to understand that you cannot tell me who was captain of the ward?—There were a great many captains in the different districts.

Mr. Overend.] I should like now to have the letter which has been referred to read.

Mr. Baron Martin.] Very well.

(Letter from Benjamin Terry to Mr. Jones was read.)

414. That was in answer to an application that was made by the attorney, was it not?—Moran had troubled me several times.

415. As I understand, you went down to manage the election?—I went to "Eastbrook House," in the East Ward, the central committee-room.

416. Is that where there are a great many Irish?—Yes, there are in Wapping, which is a part of it.

417. Were there persons employed to go among the Irish people?—Many persons had been employed before I had anything to do with the election, and most of them were quite strangers to me; I had never seen them before.

418. Were they Irishmen?—Some were Irish, and some were English.

419. They were employed, were they not, to go about among them and get their votes, if they could?—They had been employed by others, but of the duties I know nothing.

420. Do you know who they were, or can you give me their names?—I only know them from the list; there was one or two of them that I might know. I recollect when Darcey was named, that came, but whether he was employed or not, I do not know.

421. Who besides; you do not know anyone else who paid them, do you?—I had money given to me by Mr. Little, and according to what I thought they should have, I paid them, just as it was represented to me by a person who had seen what they had done.

422. On the occasion of paying, that was so, but did you employ persons as canvassers who were voters?—Not any.

423. No, but you paid them?—I believe you will find that there are two names struck out there; before there got out of the room, I ascertained that they were voters, and the money was returned. I did not know that they were voters when I paid them the money.

424. Mr. Baron Martin.] As I understand you, you made no illegal payments?—Not so far as I know.

425. Mr. Overend.] Had you anything to do with the payment of 1 l. or of 50 s.?—No, except what may appear there as having been paid after the election; who the parties were I do not know.

426. For what purpose were the 2 l. paid?—I should suppose for canvassing.

427. In this list what were they for, there is a sum of 5 l. 10 s. to "Corry"?—Tidswell and Corry had the management of a certain committee-room, and I should think that that would be divisible amongst a number of canvassers.

428. Then there is a sum of 3 l. 10 s. to William Wilkinson; what was that for?—Probably, but I really do not remember; people were there who told me what they had done, and as they told me what they had done, I paid the money and took a receipt, or my clerk did.

429. Have you on any occasion paid money except for actual services rendered by persons as canvassers?—Certainly not, or clerks, or messengers, or something of that sort. I took every precaution to ascertain what the parties had done, and many people were present. There were many whom I refused to pay at first, and then the parties would go away and bring a committee-room clerk from the place where it was held, and if he said that the person had rendered service, I heard what he had to say, and then paid him to the best of my judgment.

430. Did you pay the first man who has been called to-day?—I do not recollect to have seen him before to-day in the box. If I had got his name, I should pay him, I have no doubt.

431. Do you know the average amount that you paid for canvassers per day?—It was 6 s. a day, but some were paid a great deal less.

432. The average sum was 6 s. a day?—Yes, that was considered the price for the canvassers, 6 s. a day.

433. How long did this last?—There were some employed before I was there; I do not know how long.

434. How long were you employed?—I was employed from the 5th November until after the election.

435. For only a fortnight?—No.

436. Were you at any of the public-houses; we

Mr.
B. Terry.

26 January
1869.

- Mr. B. Terry. have heard that there was a good deal of drinking going on?—I called in at some of them.
- 26 January 1869. 437. What was your experience of them, what did you see?—I stayed there a very short time.
438. What did you see while you were there?—At some places they were having something to drink.
439. And at others, nothing at all?—Yes, nothing at all.
440. Now, about these bills, just let me see the bills of the innkeepers?—

Mr. Overend.] If my learned friend will be good enough to take some one case, I shall be glad.

Mr. Giffard.] I shall give you one as an example. I will take the first one: "Refreshments received each day, item by item, from the committee-rooms; messengers and clerks formed on the 6th November 1868, for the return of Mr. Ripley."

Mr. Baron Martin.] Where does that come from?

Mr. Giffard.] That is from the "Harp of Erin," and the important matter appears to be this. "6 November, 13 gallons of the best ale, at 2 s. per gallon, ordered by Jeremiah Ryan. 8th November, 27 gallons, at 2 s. a gallon, and bread, cheese, and tobacco, ordered by Jeremiah Ryan. Then, Sunday, 8th November, 28 gallons, at 2 s. per gallon, and bread, cheese, and tobacco, ordered by Jeremiah Ryan and J. Lyons."

Mr. Baron Martin.] Just put in one of them.

Mr. Giffard.] The bill states that the refreshments were unlimited.

Mr. Overend.] Just let me see that.

Mr. Giffard.] The total is 48 l. 13 s. 7 d.; and then there is another item. "The above is a correct account of the refreshments given at the "Harp of Erin," committee-room, 72, Bolton-road; ordered by Mr. Kitcheman and Mr. Jeremiah Ryan, and others, on account of Mr. Ripley."

Mr. Overend.] Is that the only one?

Mr. Giffard.] No; there are many of them but I give you that as a specimen.

Mr. Baron Martin.] I understand Mr. Giffard to say, that that is one; but he believes that there are several others of the same character in the bundle.

Mr. Giffard.] Just so.

441. Mr. Overend (to the Witness).] Are you aware that Timothy Lyons is the son-in-law of the landlord?—I do not know that.

442. Are you aware that 10 l. has been received in full discharge of the whole amount?—I have heard that 10 l., but I do not know it of my own knowledge.

443. You do not know, perhaps, that this sum of 48 l. is a larger amount than would cover what he had actually got from his brewers during the whole year?—I know that that was objected to; I know that it was said, what beer he could have had from his brewers at that time; and I believe that since then the brewers' account has been examined.

444. You know nothing about whether these things were ordered by this man Kitcheman?—No; I do not know by whom they were ordered at all.

445. You know nothing about it?—No.

446. This is simply a claim?—Yes; that was the claim.

Re-examined by Mr. Giffard.

447. A letter has been put in and read, and in that letter, I observe that you use the phrase, "the party," who employed Moran; whom do you refer to?—It was Kitcheman, I believe; I applied to him about him, and asked him.

[The Witness withdrew.]

Mr. MICHAEL LAMB, sworn; Examined by Mr. Mellor.

Mr. M. Lamb. 448. Do you live at No. 11, Hopwood-street, Bradford?—Yes.

449. I believe you are not a voter?—No.

450. Some time before the election, do you remember being at the "Hope and Anchor" public-house, in Bank-street?—Yes.

451. Did you see Mr. Kitcheman there?—Yes, I did.

452. Who was there besides Kitcheman?—Jeremiah Ryan.

453. What did Kitcheman say to you?—He introduced me to Mr. Kitcheman there, and Mr. Kitcheman said to me, "I understand, Mr. Lamb, that you are a man who has great influence among your countrymen;" and he talked considerably about the qualities of both candidates, Mr. Miall and Mr. Ripley: he said that Mr. Miall had left the church, and so he reasoned on, and talked that way; and that Mr. Ripley was the better candidate. I said that I was not aware that I had a great deal of political influence among my countrymen.

454. What did he want you to do?—He wanted me to go round to neutralise the votes.

455. Mr. Baron Martin.] Do you mean to get them not to vote at all?—Yes; that was the understanding then.

456. Mr. Mellor.] Did he give you anything on that occasion?—Yes; he said that he was aware that it was rather expensive, as I would have to slip out at a leisure hour at night, to mix up with my countrymen, and that it would be rather expensive; he then gave me a sovereign to defray those expenses.

457. After this, when did you next see Mr. Kitcheman?—I next saw him at the "Junction Inn."

458. Who asked you to go to that inn, or were you asked to go?—Yes, Jeremiah Ryan asked me to go.

459. Was Mr. Kitcheman there; He was.

460. Who else was there?—There was Jeremiah Ryan, William Kelly, Timothy Hooley, and William Bowen, Michael Coyne, and me.

461. Did he give you anything on that occasion?—Yes, he gave us four a sovereign each.

462. After you had received this sovereign, did you go anywhere?—Before I left the "Junction Inn," Timothy Hooley put in a claim for an advance of wages, and was supported by Michael Coyne,

Mr.
M. Lamb.
26 January
1869.

Coyne, and consequently, I received another 10 s. in gold, before I left the "Junction Inn" that night.

463. Did anyone else receive it?—Yes, four of us exactly alike.

464. You received 10 s. more?—Yes.

465. After that, did you go to the school-room at Broomfield's?—Yes, the night after, I did.

466. What was that for?—Mr. Kitcheman asked me to go to attend a meeting; Mr. Ripley was to speak there that night, and I was to ask him some questions.

467. Did you go?—Yes, I did.

468. Did you see Mr. Ripley there?—Yes.

469. Did you make a speech on that occasion?—Not there; I asked him some questions.

470. The next night, did you see Jeremiah Ryan again?—Yes, I saw him very often that week.

471. Did he give you anything that week?—No, it was just a week's pay, from week to week.

472. Did you see anything more?—Not that week.

473. The next week did you receive anything?—Yes.

474. Where was that?—At the "Junction Inn."

475. What did you receive?—I received 30 s.

476. Who paid you that?—I am speaking now of that week, the second week; we did not receive our second payment at the "Junction Inn."

477. Who paid you this money?—Benjamin Ryan paid me that; we all met in the "Junction Inn" on this night expecting payment, but we did not get paid that night; he said that he was short of money, I think, and Michael Coyne wrote down some remarks on paper, and asked Mr. Kitcheman if he had paid the money, and he said "No," but that either he or Mr. Ryan would pay us the next night; and on the next night, I did receive 30 s. at the "Plasterers' Arms" in Old.

478. From whom did you receive it?—From Ryan.

479. Who else was there then?—There was none of our party there at all; no one saw me getting it but myself.

480. After this, did you meet Kitcheman at a public-house in Peckover Walk?—Yes.

481. How long after that was it?—It was a week after.

482. Did he give anything to anyone in your presence?—Yes; he gave 6 l. to William Bowen.

483. Who else was there?—When we entered the room, which was a small apartment behind the bar, there was William White, Moses Quigley, William Kelley, Timothy Hooley, Jeremiah Ryan, Mr. Kitcheman, and me.

484. Did you go to the "Oak Inn" at the meeting of Mr. Ripley's?—Yes, I did.

485. Who asked you to go?—Mr. Kitcheman.

486. You went and you made a speech, did you not?—A sort of one.

487. Who asked you to do that?—Mr. Kitcheman.

488. And Mr. Ripley was there, was he?—Yes.

489. On the 7th of November, did you go to Blake's liquor vaults?—Yes; I did not take notice of the date, but I did go to Blake's.

490. How long after this meeting was it, that you went to Blake's liquor vaults?—I do not know exactly.

491. Can you tell me about how long it was?—I should say about a week perhaps.

492. When you were there, did you see Jeremiah Ryan there?—Yes; it was on a Saturday evening that I saw him there.

493. Did he say anything to you then?—Yes; he called me out of the drinking vaults (there is a small room where people drink), and he said that he would give me on the Monday evening following, a 5 l. note.

494. Did you next meet him at the "Masons' Arms"?—Yes; about 10 o'clock at night.

495. Was Bowen there?—Yes.

496. Did Ryan give Bowen anything in your presence?—A 5 l. note.

497. Did he give anything to you at that time?—Not to me.

498. Did you afterwards go to the "Wellington Arms" in High-street?—Yes.

499. Was that the same night?—Yes.

500. In your presence did he give any money there to anybody; I mean Ryan?—Bowen gave me 2 l. 10 s.

501. Did he give anything to Kelly and to Hooley?—No; Hooley went in himself and got a 5 l. note from Ryan, and they divided the money between them at the same table.

502. Hooley and Kelly, you say, divided that money between them?—Yes; 2 l. 10 s. each.

503. Do you afterwards recollect meeting Kitcheman near the "Church Steps" public-house?—Yes.

504. Did you go into the "Church Steps" public-house with him?—Yes.

505. What did he say to you there?—He asked us if it was true that we had had an interview with Mr. Michael Mahony or not.

506. What did he say to you?—Mr. Kitcheman asked me whether I had had an interview with Mr. Michael Mahony that day, and I said "Yes; me, Bowen, and Kelly."

507. Upon that what did he say?—He asked us to give him the nature of the interview, and I did not do so.

508. Mr. Baron Martin.] You did not tell him?—No.

509. Mr. Mellor.] What did he say then?—He told me and the other men to "stick to our colours" and we should be all right, that if there was any difference in the way, he would make it all right.

510. Did he mention any sums of money?—Yes.

511. Did he mention any amount; what did he say?—We told him that Ryan had promised us 5 l. each, me and Bowen, on the Saturday previous, and that we did not get it; he said, "Suppose I meet you to-morrow night at the 'Junction Inn' and give you the other 2 l. 10 s. each; will that make it right?" We had some drink (I drank port wine at the "Junction Inn"), and we said "Yes, it would be right."

512. Did you meet him next night at the "Junction Inn"?—Yes; at seven o'clock.

513. Who was with you?—William Bowen and William Kelly.

514. Did he give you any money there?—Yes; a sovereign each.

515. What did he say?—He said that he was short of money, and asked us whether we would take his word for the balance, 30 s., which he

Mr.
M. Lamb.
26 January
1869.

would pay on the Saturday; it was altogether 5 l. for that week.

516. The next Saturday did you and Bowen meet Ryan at the "Fleece Inn" Yard?—Yes.

517. Did Ryan give Bowen anything there in your presence?—Two 5 l. notes.

518. From there, did you and Bowen go to the "Black Bull Inn" in Westgate?—Yes.

519. What did Bowen do there?—He changed a 5 l. note and gave Thomas Dermody the promised 2 l. in silver; I counted the 2 l. myself.

520. Who was Thomas Dermody?—I suppose he was a labouring man.

521. Do you know what he is; is he a voter?—I cannot say.

522. After this, did you meet Kilmarten, Rowney, and Patrick Ryan?—Yes; we went in the direction of the "Ring of Bells," and met them one by one.

523. What are those three men?—I suppose they are labouring men; I do not know what they work at.

524. Did Bowen give them anything?—A sovereign each.

525. After this, did Bowen give you any more money?—He gave me 30 s., and that made up the 5 l.

526. Afterwards did you, on one occasion, go to the old hall after the election?—Yes.

527. Did you see Mr. Terry there and Mr. Whitehouse?—Yes.

528. Who were there when you were in the hall?—There was a great many gentlemen sat round a table, but I did not know know their names.

529. Did you see Patrick Ryan there?—I saw him outside, not in the place where Mr. Terry was paying them.

530. Were you paid then?—Yes.

531. What where you paid?—4 l.

532. By whom?—By Mr. Terry.

533. Do you know Sam Abel's pulic-house in George-street?—Yes.

534. Before the election, had you ever seen Mr. Ripley there?—Yes.

535. And young Mr. Ripley, his son?—Yes.

536. Have you been there more than once?—Yes.

537. What has been going on when you have been there?—The night that Mr. Ripley spoke there, after he had done speaking, and him and his friends left the place, there was lots of drink.

538. How many men were there?—I should think about 30 or 40.

539. Were there any people there who had been with Mr. Ripley, and that remained?—Really, I cannot say; I cannot swear to it.

540. Did you see any man pay for the ale?—No; not a half-penny.

541. Did you partake of it?—I took some peppermint and ginger beer.

542. Did you pay for the peppermint?—No.

543. Or the ginger beer?—No.

544. At the other public-houses had you seen refreshments?—Yes.

545. How many public-houses?—I got refreshments myself and some of my friends, in the "Junction," and at the "Ivy Hotel."

546. At the "Junction Inn," did you pay for what you got?—No.

547. Were there other persons drinking there besides you?—Yes.

548. Did you see anybody else pay while you were there?—Yes, I saw Jeremiah Ryan pay or a bottle of wine for us.

549. Was that tho only payment you saw at the "Junction Inn"?—No; more than that.

550. Who paid on other occasions?—I forget the names of the gentlem, but there were five or six of us in there, and two gentlemen came in (I could tell them if I saw them) and asked me what I was taking, and I said "A glass of wine;" "What are your friends drinking," and so they called according to their own way of drinking; the bill came in, and we did not pay anything for it.

551. Mr. Baron Martin.] Those gentlemen treated you?—Yes.

552. Mr. Mellor.] Which was the next public-house where you had refreshments?—It was the Friday night before the election; it was in the "Ivy Hotel," off Bradford Moor, Barker End-road; I was there with William Bowen and William Kelly, and Mr. Ripley made a speech there that night through the window; he addressed a large audience outside; Kitcheman did so too, while we were waiting, me, Bowen, and Kelly. Mr. Whitehouse came in and asked us, if we had had any refreshment, and we said "No;" he said "You must call for anything you require;" I had a glass of port wine, and my friend Mr. Bowen I think, had a glass of wine, and the other whisky but we did not pay for it.

553. Did you hear Mr. Whitehouse say anything to the landlady while you were there?—He told her to bring us in the refreshment that we required.

554. Were there other persons there besides you?—Two more and me, Bowen and Kelly.

555. Can you mention any other public-house at which you were present?—Not that night.

556. On any other occasion before the election, had you been to the "Harp of Erin"?—Yes; and saw this kind of refreshment; lots of ale, and bread and cheese, and tobacco.

557. Were there many people there at the time?—A great many.

558. Was refreshment brought in for everybody?—For everybody that was there.

559. Did you pay anything?—No.

560. Did you see any money paid?—No.

561. Did you see that on more than one occasion?—Yes; every time that I was there.

562. How often were you there before the election?—About, as near as I can say, three or four times.

563. And this went on on every occasion when you were there?—Yes; there was drink on every occasion.

Cross-examined by Mr. Price.

564. Was it after you made this speech or before that, they gave you this mixture of pepper mint or ginger beer?—Which speech?

565. You have stated that you made a speech for Mr. Ripley; was that the same night?—

Mr. Baron Martin.] No; he said that he asked questions.

566. Mr. Price.] Where did you make the speech for Mr. Ripley?—It would be about a fortnight or three weeks before the election.

567. Was it at the "Oak Inn"?—Yes.

568. You went about I suppose to canvass for him?—No, I did not.

569. Never?—Never.

570. You did like Bowen, did you not; you go got paid for canvassing and did nothing?—I did not get paid for canvassing.

571. What were you paid for?—I got paid for neutralising the Irish voters.

572. You were to go round, were you not, and see the Irish voters?—At my own leisure at nights, after I had done work.

573. Did you go round and see them?—No; I attended meetings.

574. That was all you did, was it?—Yes.

575. Mr. Baron Martin.] Whose meetings did you attend?—Mr. Ripley's.

576. Did you attend any meetings of the Irish voters?—No; I did not, my lord.

577. Mr. Price.] You never did anything to neutralise the votes?—As far as words went, I did.

578. How were you to neutralise them?—I was to counsel them not to vote at the coming election as far as my influence went, with neighbours and friends.

579. You were a man of influence, were you not?—No; I do not presume to be a man of influence.

580. Do you mean to say that you had got this money not to canvass?—Yes.

581. But to neutralise?—Yes.

582. You cannot write your own name, can you?—No.

583. Do you remember having a paper read over to you?—Yes; I do.

584. Was that true?—Where was it at?

585. I do not know; do you remember Bowen putting your mark to a paper after it had been read over to you?—Yes; in Kitcheman's front sitting room.

586. That was true, was it not; did you put your name to that which was true?—I put my name to it so as to receive money that was coming to me.

587. Believing it to be true?—No.

588. Then did you put your hand to a lie, in order to get the money?—Not with that impression.

589. With what impression did you put your hand to this paper, or let your mark be put to it, believing it to be false or true?—I first want to know the paper.

590. No, no; who was it that read it over to you?—Mr. Kitcheman read it.

591. Was it in Mr. Kitcheman's office or in his presence?—This Kitcheman wrote upon it himself. I saw him write it in his own front sitting room.

592. Was it read over to you?—Yes.

593. Did you believe it to be true?—No.

594. Did you know it to be false?—I did.

595. Then you put your hand to a lie?—Yes, but I am not prepared to swear to it; he asked me to give my evidence to that effect, but I knew I was not under the obligation of an oath.

596. You put your hand to that which you knew to be a false statement?—Mr. Kitcheman asked me to do so.

597. And you did it, knowing it to be false?—But I am doing justice here to-day, I hope.

598. Do you know Mr. Arnold?—Yes, I do.

599. Who is he?—Mr. Arnold.

600. That is no answer to do justice; who is he?—I do not know what his business is.

601. Do you know what he is in politics; whom did he support?—He is Mr. Myall's supporter.

28.

602. Is he secretary to the Liberal Electoral Association?—I am told so.

603. Did you take a message from him to Mr. Ryan?—Yes.

604. What was the message from him to Mr. Ryan that you took?—I do not remember that.

605. Now, recollect Ryan is here, and on Saturday, November 28th, did you and Bowen tell Ryan that the secretary Mr. Arnold wanted to see him, Jeremiah Ryan?—Jeremiah told me to introduce him.

606. Never mind that, did you tell Ryan that Mr. Arnold wanted to see him?—Yes, but let me remark this before as to my bringing this message from Arnold.

Mr. Baron Martin.] I do not know what it was yet.

607. Mr. Price.] What was the message that you took from Mr. Arnold to Ryan?—He wanted an interview with Ryan.

608. Did you afterwards go on Monday to Mr. Hargreaves' office; you, Bowen, and Ryan?—Yes, we all three went.

609. Who is Mr. Hargreaves?—He is a lawyer.

610. On which side is he in politics?—I cannot say which side he is on.

611. Which side did he act for at the election?—I do not know what side in politics he took, but I know what side he is on now; he is solicitor for the petitioner; Mr. Miall's petitioner.

612. Did Mr. Hargreaves offer in your presence any sum of money for the evidence to be given?—I never heard him offer any money for evidence, but I heard him—Ryan said that he would bring in all his statement for a certain amount of money.

613. Did you not hear Mr. Hargreaves offer a specific sum of money, if you and Ryan and Bowen would give evidence?—Me, Bowen, and Ryan?

614. Yes?—No.

615. To whom did he offer the money?—He did not offer me any.

616. Did he offer any money to anybody?—To nobody in my presence.

617. Did not Mr. Arnold in your presence offer 50 l.?—No, he did not.

618. Nor any sum?—No, he did not. He named no certain sum of money in my presence.

619. What do you mean by a certain sum of money?—No sum.

620. Did you hear any sum named?—Not by Mr. Hargreaves.

621. Then by whom?—I heard Mr. Arnold say that if he brought in his statement, he would be paid for his trouble and his time.

622. Did Mr. Arnold offer him 50 l.?—For his information?

623. Did he offer him 50 l.; was Mr. Arnold there?—Yes.

624. At Mr. Hargreaves' office?—Yes.

625. Was it Mr. Arnold who offered the money?—Yes.

626. Did he offer 50 l.?—Yes, he asked Ryan if he would take 50 l. for the information that he (Ryan) could give him connected with Mr. Ripley's election, and Ryan said that he would not take it; he said that he would take nothing short of 100 l., with a guarantee for 100 l. afterwards.

wards. Mr. Arnold said, "Would you not take 50 l.?" and he said, "Nothing short of 100 l." Mr. Arnold then said, "When can you bring these papers in?" "By to-morrow at one o'clock," said Ryan. On my oath I did not hear Mr. Arnold or Mr. Hargreaves, nor any other man, promise him 100 l. when he brought the papers.

627. You and Bowen were there, and you heard this?—Yes.

628. Was any money paid?—I never saw any money paid.

629. You are not to have any of it, are you?—I do not expect any of it.

630. You are not to have any of it?—I never expect any money.

631. Are you to have any?—What?

632. Money?—For what?

633. For what you are doing now?—I do not expect it. I made no agreement to that effect; I give my statement voluntarily, without putting any price upon it.

634. Are you one of the gentlemen who went down to Ryan's house to see if he had got this 50 l.?—I never asked him for any money.

635. Did you go to Ryan's house at two o'clock in the morning for that purpose with Bowen?—Never; I went there about 11 o'clock at night, but I did not go for money.

636. Then what did you go for?—He gave me an order for a coat, and as I had heard that he was going to leave the town, I wanted to enter into some arrangement or other about this coat, because if he had left the town of course it would be a serious loss to me if the coat was thrown on my hands, and that was the reason why I went to his house.

637. Did you not knock him up from his bed?—No, I did not.

638. Were they not all gone to bed when you went to his house?—I do not know, but the door was fast when I got there; I heard that there were people inside the house.

639. Did not Ryan's wife threaten you?—No, she did not. I asked her whether Ryan was there, and she told me that she did not know. I asked her again, and she told me worse than that.

640. What did she say?—The answer was, "You can kiss my backside, and Ryan's, and all." She got a summons for me.

641. She is not the only woman, I believe, who has got a summons out against you?—I do not know never a woman who got a summons for me before.

642. Not your own wife?—Never.

643. Not for ill-treating her?—Who informed you of that?

644. Never mind that?—I never stood in this court.

645. Is there not a summons against you now?—By whom?

646. Your wife?—Certainly not.

647. Did not Ryan make a bargain for you, that you were to have 50 l., you and Bowen?—I protest against that, and there are gentlemen in court who know it.

648. You would, of course, not think of taking it?—I told them that I did not want anything.

649. Ryan proposed it, did he not?—Yes.

650. That you and Bowen should have 50 l., and the other was for Ryan?—Yes.

651. Mr. Arnold agreed to it, did he not?—I do not know.

652. Did you go to Mr. Kitcheman that night, and threaten him that you would have some money as your share?—No, I did not.

653. Did you not go there?—No, I did not; not that night.

654. Did you go on any other night?—The same night that I was at Ryan's, his wife told us that he was at Mr. Kitcheman's, and we went there, and Ryan was not there; Kitcheman was there, and we went with two policemen.

655. You and Bowen went there to demand some money, did you not?—No, we did not ask for any money.

656. What did you go there for?—To see if Ryan was there.

657. Did you get any answer to your inquiry?—Mr. Kitcheman said he was not there, nor had not been there that night.

658. Did you tell Mr. Kitcheman that you wanted to see Ryan in order to get some money from him?—Nothing of the kind.

659. With regard to the "Harp of Erin," how many were there there; I mean, where you had the glass of ale and the bread and cheese; how many were there there?—I saw as many as 20 people there.

660. Was that a committee house?—Yes, I understood so about 8 or 10 days before the election.

661. Was this in the committee-room?—Yes.

662. Did you know some of the men there?—Yes, I knew some of them.

663. Were they canvassers?—I do not know whether they were or not.

664. Do you know whether the canvassers who went out at night were allowed to have refreshments when they came in at night to make their reports?—I saw no men there in the capacity of canvassers; I saw no men there with books.

665. Do you know that the canvassers for Mr. Ripley, when they came to the committee-rooms that night, were allowed refreshments?—Of course.

666. Did you get any refreshments, because you had been out as a canvasser?—No, I did not.

667. Did you pretend that you had been so out as a canvasser?—No, Ryan asked me to go there, but not as a canvasser.

668. But you went as a neutralizer, did you not?—Yes, if you like.

669. You have stated that Mr. Whitehouse said that you were to have refreshments; did he know that you were a neutralizer?—I suppose he did; he must have known that I took some part in it.

670. Did you, like your friend Bowen, go about from public-house to public-house, and expend the money that you had received?—I disposed of the money in many ways.

671. How much did you get altogether?—About 16 l.; the same as Bowen.

672. Did you give Ryan a list of names of persons whom you said you had canvassed, or at all events neutralized?—I gave him a list of 11 names the week after I joined the committee, and Mr. Kitcheman asked me if we were making any progress in counselling the people against voting; I gave the names to Ryan, and Ryan handed them to Mr. Kitcheman.

673. He asked you, I suppose, what progress you had made, and did you make a report to him?—I gave him a list of 11 names of parties who had promised to keep out of the election.

674. At Sam Abel's, how many persons were there there just before the election; I mean, when Mr. Ripley and his son were there?—When he addressed that meeting there was above 100.

675. Did he address the persons there outside?—No, he addressed them out of the window at Sam Abel's.

676. How long was Mr. Ripley there?—I cannot say exactly, perhaps about an hour.

677. He was speaking there, I suppose, to his supporters and his committee?—He was speaking to all the people who were present there.

678. When you made a speech, I suppose it was in favour of Mr. Ripley?—What I said was this; I gave them to understand, as I told the people there, that they were to look upon me as an unpaid canvasser of Mr. Ripley's.

679. Then you told them a lie there?—I told them I was not a canvasser.

680. That was not a lie, was it?—No, it was not.

681. Were you a canvasser?—I was not; I told the people to keep neutral, and I said they were not to understand me as a paid canvasser, or as a canvasser of any description.

682. What else did you tell them? (No answer.)

683. What did you mean when you said that you were an unpaid canvasser for Mr. Ripley?—I gave them to understand so; I told them that I was not a canvasser under any circumstances.

684. You stated just now, "I told them that I was an unpaid canvasser for Mr. Ripley?"—I said that I was not a canvasser.

685. That was your meaning, was it?—That is my meaning. I said that I was not a canvasser; that is how I intended to put it.

686. Did you intend them to believe that you were an unpaid canvasser?—That I was not a canvasser under any circumstances.

687. Just tell me this; what was your speech about?—I do not know that it was exactly for Mr. Ripley.

688. Was it about yourself?—No.

689. Was it for Mr. Miall?—It was not. I think it was generally against Mr. Forster, and asking the Irish people to vote solid against him.

690. That was how you tried to neutralise them?—Yes.

Re-examined by Mr. Giffard.

691. The document that my learned friend has put into your hand, I propose to have read before I ask you any question.

(Letter, dated 23rd November 1868, was read.)

692. What was said before you were asked to sign that document?—Mr. Kitcheman asked me if we had heard about a note that Thomas Lawlor had sent him, and we said no, we had not, and he took the note out of his pocket and read it for us. He said that there had been some disputes between Mr. Kitcheman, or Mr. Whitehouse, and this Lawlor about some person that should have received money from Lawlor, and he sent back this note. I think the note, if I recollect rightly, was sent to Mr. Whitehouse, and from him to Mr. Kitcheman, and Mr. Kitcheman read the note for us. It stated, as near as I can recollect, that he had never received any money to pay non-electors, but that he (Lawlor) received money to pay electors, and that he was prepared to prove.

693. Then who wrote this out; was it already written for you?—Mr. Kitcheman wrote it himself.

694. On the 23rd November?—Yes, a week after the election.

695. Was it at that time that he gave you and Bowen a note to take to Mr. Terry?—Yes, the same day.

696. Was it at the same time?—Yes.

697. Had you been in communication with this gentleman, Mr. Arnold, before that time?—That very day, that was the first day.

698. Before you went to Mr. Terry, did you show the note that Mr. Kitcheman had given you for Mr. Terry to Mr. Arnold?—I did that evening.

699. After that you delivered it to Mr. Terry?—Yes.

700. How long after this was it that you and Ryan were at Mr. Hargreaves' office?—A week afterwards.

701. How came you to be at Mr. Hargreaves' office?—Me and my friend Bowen gave in the first part of our statement connected with it.

702. Did you find Ryan there when you got there, or did he come in afterwards?—No, Mr. Ryan asked me to introduce him to Mr. Hargreaves.

703. Did you do so?—I did.

704. Mr. Hargreaves saw you and Ryan, as I understand, together, at Ryan's request?—Yes.

705. What passed; who first suggested the payment of any money?—Ryan.

706. What did he say?—He said he knew it was dishonest, and could not be honourable, and he wanted to persuade me that I was not acting an honourable part in it.

707. Dishonourable about what?—About supposing the part that we had taken.

708. Well, when you got to Mr. Hargreaves' office, who first suggested the payment of any sum of money for information?—Jeremiah Ryan, to the best of my recollection.

709. What did he say?—He asked Mr. Hargreaves to let him look at the list of names of the various committees, and he did so.

710. What happened next?—I scarcely remember.

711. What did he say about a sum of money being paid?—He said that he would give him all the information connected with the whole affair, from his first engagement with Mr. Ripley's election, for 100 l. down.

712. Was it after that that Mr. Hargreaves said anything about 50 l.?—It was Mr. Arnold, I think, that said so.

713. You are quite right; what did he say about 50 l.?—Mr. Hargreaves told us to call in that evening at seven o'clock, and he would consider it.

714. Did you go with him again?—That night I did.

715. It was on the second occasion, was it, that 50 l. was mentioned?—Yes.

716. What was said about that?—Mr. Arnold asked him if he did not think that 50 l. was sufficient.

717. What did he say to that?—He said that he would take nothing short of 100 l. down, and a guarantee of 100 l. afterwards; and he said, "As my two friends, Bowen and Lamb, have been with me from the commencement, I would also put in for 100 l. for them, too;" but there are gentlemen in this court who know that I objected to that part of the proposition.

B 4

718. Was

Mr.
M. Lamb.
26 January
1869.

Mr. 718. Was that agreed to at Mr. Hargreaves' office, or did Mr. Arnold agree to give any one of those sums?—Mr. Arnold asked him how soon he could prepare the papers and documents.

26 January 1869. 719. Mr. Baron Martin.] You mean, a statement of his evidence?—Yes; and so he said that he could get them ready by one o'clock next day; "Very well," says Arnold, "bring them in at one o'clock."

720. Mr. Giffard.] What has become of Ryan since; my learned friend says that he is here?—He is in court.

721. When did you see him last before to-day?—I have not seen him; not since the day and the same night that we went up to his place; me and Bowen.

722. You have not seen him from that time till now?—No.

723. I think you say that you and Bowen had made your statement before that?—A portion of it.

724. Before anything had been said about money at all?—Yes.

725. Have you received from that time to this any promise of money at all?—No.

726. Mr. Baron Martin.] You say you got 16*l*. at the election?—Yes.

727. What did you get it for?—We got it to bear our expenses.

728. What expenses?—In going amongst our countrymen to counsel them not to vote.

729. Have you anything else to add?—No, my Lord; that was the agreement between Kitcheman and me.

[The Witness withdrew.]

The Court adjourned for a quarter of an hour.

MICHAEL COYNE, sworn; Examined by Mr. Giffard.

M. Coyne. 730. WHAT are you?—I am a stuff warehouseman by trade.

731. Are you a voter for the borough?—No.

732. You are an Irishman, I believe?—Yes.

733. And you have a considerable acquaintance among the Irish voters in the borough?—I am very well known amongst my countrymen, and I know a great number of them, both voters and non-electors.

734. Do you remember being introduced to Mr. Kitcheman?—Yes.

735. About what time was that?—It may be remembered by some of the gentlemen in this court, that Mr. Ripley called a meeting of the Irish voters.

736. About when?—To the best of my knowledge, it was the first Monday after that, that being on a Thursday.

737. Cannot you give me some notion with reference to the election; about how long was it before the election?—To the best of my knowledge it was on the 12th of November as well as I can judge.

738. I am told that the meeting was the 9th, so that that would be about it; were you in company with Jerry Ryan when you were introduced to Mr. Kitcheman?—Yes; I happened in accidentally, where they were both sitting, at Mr. Blake's vaults, under the Exchange.

739. Ultimately did Mr. Kitcheman speak to you about the Irish voters?—Yes, he did.

740. What did he say?—Oh, the substance of it; about the commencement of his discourse to me was about the meeting that Mr. Ripley had had at the Mechanics' Institute; he did not believe that it was the fault of the Irish people why he did not get a hearing. I said that I concurred in that; that it was the English supporters of Mr. Miall to the right and left of the platform that kept up a disturbance, but I said I also understood, and I felt convinced, that if the Irish were left alone at that meeting to manage their own affairs, Mr. Ripley would have received a greater discomfort at their hands than he had at the meeting. Mr. Kitcheman said he doubted that.

741. We need not go through the politics of the town; I want to come to what is more material; just go on, will you?—I wrote the affair down at the time, and it is so long ago that I have not a copy of it; I gave it up at the time, and I cannot rehearse it.

742. Just give us the substance of it exactly, if you can?—Will you please to assist me.

743. Mr. Baron Martin.] It is not permitted to assist a man in his evidence; you must tell us yourself?—He said he doubted that the Irish voters were so much in favour of Mr. Miall as that they would put down Mr. Ripley without a hearing. Jerry Ryan said that he thought they were, but he was convinced also that it was not the Irish people who prevented Mr. Ripley going on at that place. The result of the conversation was this: it was nothing of any great importance occurred except this, that he said that Mr. Ripley had determined to call another Irish meeting in order that they might have fair play, and I said that he would be sure to have fair play, though they disagreed with Mr. Ripley, with both him and his party; and in order to show that the Irish people were impartial, and as capable of judging between the merits of people as any other men, I would assist him; I would not only go to the meeting, but would assist him to get it up. Thereupon it was arranged that we should meet the next afternoon, that being on the Monday; I think it was on the Tuesday it was arranged that we should meet at the "Manor House" in Darby-street, Mr. Kitcheman, Jerry Ryan, and myself to cull the Irish names from the Burgess roll of the East Ward; very well, we did so. I believe it was while we were in that conversation at the business at the "Manor House," that Mr. Kitcheman said he was chairman of the East Ward; chairman, or vice-chairman, I cannot say which.

744. Mr. Baron Martin.] The "Manor House" is a public-house, I suppose?—Yes, the "Manor House" is a public-house. Jerry Ryan confirmed that statement outside afterwards; I was out of employment then.

745. Mr. Giffard.] What more was said?—I was out of employment at that time, and I expected work that afternoon in the stuff warehouse line; there are a number of men called helping hands; they are only taken on when they are wanted, and turned off when they are not.

746. Mr. Baron Martin.] When was there an agreement made to pay you money?—I am coming

M. Coyne.

1869.

coming to that; it is simply this; I said I am a helping hand in the stuff trade; as a helping hand I was promised employment for that afternoon, and as I promised him to assist him to cull the names on the burgess roll, I stopped off my employment, and consequently I demanded 5s. for the afternoon, and I got it of Ryan, and any amount of drink and beef steaks to be eaten upstairs; Jerry Ryan was displeased with me for demanding so much, but I have since ascertained he was receiving 10s.

747. What happened thereupon?—When we had finished, and were coming away in the afternoon; I think it was that evening there was a meeting of Irishmen called at the “Cross Keys” on Bolton-road; I have since ascertained that it was called by the members of the Irish committee for securing the return, or rather not securing the return, but to neutralise the Irish votes; Jerry Ryan asked me to be on that committee. I am not an orator, gentlemen, but I am come here to give statements as well as I can.

748. Just go on and describe what was done about money; what was said about it?—At the “Cross Keys” on the Bolton-road, Kitcheman was there, I was there, and Jerry Ryan, Mr. Lamb, Mr. Bowen, and others; Ryan told me about this meeting, but he said he was only asked there himself, and I understood that it was a man of the name of James Shelley that called this meeting.

749. Never mind what you understood; do attend; I am asking you what took place, what was said, and what was done then, and then what was done since; will you just describe what you saw, what was done, and what was said, and then we will get on faster; we have got to the “Cross Keys” now, you know?—Mr. Kitcheman of course championed Mr. Ripley; Mr. Ryan and Mr. Lamb went in for the neutrality business, and I went on on neutrality, too, under certain circumstances. I did not believe that the Parliament of England would give Irishmen what they really required, and on that account I ignored any Irishman taking part in any election, for what good would come from the Parliament of England to Ireland. The reason I supported Mr. Miall was this, that there was a number of English Liberals in Bradford who had assisted the Irish people considerably, that had spoken and written, and even contributed in their behalf in their distress, and I found all those men on one side; they were all gentlemen, consequently they were above my countrymen in station, and they could not return them that compliment by any contrivance, except by assisting them to return the man of their choice. Mr. Ryan and Mr. Lamb went in for neutrality, and others there also.

750. Do you remember Mr. Kitcheman speaking to you at all about what you were to do among the Irish?—Yes; it was after this that that came about; the meeting happened to be at the Junction Hotel. Jerry Ryan asked me to go there under those conditions, that I said I would not on any account damage the candidate, Mr. Miall, with my countrymen, for he said that, without asking them to vote for Mr. Ripley, he thought Mr. Kitcheman would be quite satisfied if we neutralised the votes; he went and inquired of Mr. Kitcheman whether that would do, and he saw me again and said that would do, was suspicious of Ryan being engaged in Mr. Kitcheman’s service, and I went to Mr. Kitchman and I ascertained how many of my country men was doing what I termed the dirty work.

751. Did you use the words “dirty work” at the time?—Yes, I used the words “dirty work” at the time, and I used it inside afterwards when he asked me to go there, and, being suspicious that he was engaged at the time, though he told me he was not engaged, I went with him to see what the money really was and to pick out also how many were engaged. I met him on the Monday, I think, after this; it was on a Monday that I met him, and it was outside the Junction Hotel; Mr. Kitcheman was to be there, and before Mr. Kitcheman came he told me how many.

752. Who is “he”?—Mr. Kitcheman; before Mr. Kitcheman came I met Jerry Ryan at the time appointed, and he says, “You would be really astonished if you were to know all that are Irishmen that are engaged in this work of neutralising the Irish votes.” He says “Mr. Kitcheman has complimented me for being a good general, for,” he says, “I have brought them all in one by one unknown to each other, and of course,” he says, “you are not known to anybody.”

753. Mr. Baron Martin.] Just come to where you got the 1 l.?—Very well; it was at night.

754. Mr. Giffard.] Did you tell Jerry Ryan whether you would join or not?—I told Jerry that I would go in there that night.

755. Were there other persons besides you and Jerry at this place?—No.

756. Mr. Baron Martin.] At what public-house?—Mr. Kitcheman came in shortly afterwards to the Junction Hotel between one and two o’clock; Jerry Ryan and I and him were together in the back room at the Junction Hotel.

757. Mr. Giffard.] You say between one and two; was it day or night?—In the day; in the afternoon.

758. What happened?—He said that he was very happy to get me on Mr. Ripley’s side.

759. That is what Mr. Kitcheman said?—Yes, Mr. Kitcheman said that; although he heard me speak in favour of Mr. Miall at the “Cross Keys;” he afterwards told Jerry Ryan that he would like to have me on my side.

760. Was anything said between you and Mr. Kitcheman about money; about what it would cost, and what for?—I did not make any reply, to the best of my knowledge, except that I thought I could keep them from voting, however, meaning the Irish voters; Mr. Kitcheman said that would do.

761. What more was said?—Jerry Ryan told me to demand 3 l. a week at least.

762. Was that before this conversation with Mr. Kitcheman?—While we were outside.

763. Do keep to one thing at a time; what did you, in fact, ask from Mr. Kitcheman?—I said that 2 l. 15s. or 3 l. a week, I thought, would be wanted at the least.

764. Did you say at the time to Mr. Kitcheman what you wanted that for?—Yes, I did.

765. What did you say?—I told him it would take a deal of money to go amongst my countrymen, in case I was to treat them; I said I wanted it to spend amongst my countrymen, to keep them from voting.

766. I think I caught the word “treating”?—Treating did occur in it, and Mr. Kitcheman said he would not listen to it; he said he knew that

M. Coyne.

26 January
1869.

that the money was to spend there, but, of course, they were not allowed to go in directly for treating.

767. Was anything said about what the money was to be called, what it was to be for?—He did not say what it was to be for; he said it was to spend amongst my countrymen, that was all; it was not for myself, it was to spend amongst them. The money was not paid then; we were to see him at night.

768. Mr. Baron Martin.] Did he agree to give you the 2 l. 15 s. or 3 l.?—He did; he said he would see me at night.

769. Mr. Giffard.] When anything was said about the spending it among your countrymen, did you say whether it would cost much or little money to do that or anything of that sort?—Yes, I did. I said to get in amongst a lot of Irishmen, or a lot of the new working-class men, to get them to do anything at the election; it would cost a deal of money; 5 s., or 10 s., or 15 s. went away in beer or whiskey in a very short time, or perhaps 1 l. or 25 s., or something of that sort.

770. What said Mr. Kitcheman to that?—Mr. Kitcheman said that he knew that but too well, and I do not know whether it was on that night that he made a similar reply, that he had been hauled over the coals himself for treating by his own committee, or rather for expending of money.

771. Was there anything further, do you remember, that took place at that interview?—I cannot recollect.

772. What time were you to meet again in the evening?—After I came out from the warehouse.

773. What time would that be?—About seven o'clock.

774. Did you meet Mr. Kitcheman that evening again?—Yes, I met him that evening again and Jerry Ryan downstairs, in the same room, while he was paying me the money.

775. What money did he pay you?—£.2 15 s.

776. While he paid you the money, did you notice anything about Jerry Ryan's behaviour?—Yes.

777. What did you notice?—He went to the door; he faced the door; he went up to the door as if to go out in order that he might not see what money I got.

778. In the position in which he would be, he would not see the money you got?—No; I held the money in my hand.

779. You held the money in your hand till Jerry Ryan came back?—Yes.

780. Did you show it to him?—Yes.

781. What did you say?—I said, "Oh! Mr. Ryan, I said there were 2 l. 15 s. that I have got from Mr. Kitcheman for expenses." "Oh, no," said Mr. Kitcheman, "as wage." "Do not you see," says Ryan, "that they are not allowed to put this in as expenses; it would be treating." "Oh, I see," I said. "Of course," said Kitcheman, "that is understood; that is all right." Very well, he told me there was a meeting.

782. At that time, did Mr. Kitcheman say anything to you about Ryan, and what Ryan was to do, and what you were to do with reference to Ryan?—He complimented Ryan, and said he had done his work very well, and he hoped that I would stand by Ryan and take my orders from him, and that between us both we were to marshal all the Irish committee.

783. Did Jerry Ryan say anything to you at that time about there being other men upstairs?—Yes, he said that there would be a meeting there that night, and I objected at first going up amongst the meeting.

784. I am asking you about the time, the night after you had met there in the evening?—He told me that at dinner time.

785. At this conversation which you have been telling us, after the money was paid, did Jerry say anything about whether there were any men upstairs then?—Yes; he came back and told Mr. Kitcheman that the men had gone upstairs.

786. Did you go upstairs then?—Yes, he asked me upstairs; I partly objected.

787. Who went up with you?—Jerry Ryan.

788. Did Mr. Kitcheman go up or not?—Yes. Mr. Kitcheman followed up.

789. When you got upstairs whom did you see?—Mr. Kitcheman took the chair; before commencing the business, of course, he paid for wine and cigars all round.

790. Who was there?—There was Jerry Ryan, of course, came up with him, Timothy Hooley, Michael Lamb, William Bowen, and William Kelly.

791. Did Jerry Ryan tell you whether they were part of the Irish committee?—Yes; he said that they were formed into an Irish committee; that they were an Irish committee.

792. Did he say what for?—For neutralising the Irish votes; knowing that they were Irish people who had a prepossession in favour of Mr. Miall it was their duty to neutralise them.

793. Mr. Overend.] Is this fine talk of your own, or was that what he said?—Am I on my oath or am I not?

794. Mr. Giffard.] My learned friend wants to know whether what you have been telling us is what you heard then and there with your own ears?—Yes; Ryan told me down stairs that they were an Irish committee, and that the members of that committee would meet upstairs at seven o'clock where they were to meet Mr. Kitcheman, and also downstairs.

795. But was anything said at that time about what the committee was for?—For neutralising the Irish votes; Jerry Ryan told me that.

796. Mr. Baron Martin.] As far as we have got yet, he had got 2 l. 10 s. for the purpose of endeavouring to neutralise the Irish votes; in other words, that they should refrain from voting?—That is so, my Lord.

797. Mr. Giffard.] Let us go upstairs again if you please. You were upstairs, and you told me that Mr. Kitcheman first ordered something; I suppose you drank it?—Oh, yes.

798. While that was going on, and after it was going on, was there any discussion about whether a sovereign was enough; describe what the discussion was?—There was very little discussion.

799. First of all, what did you see done?—Mr. Lamb grumbled at the payment; he said it was insufficient.

800. Did you see the payment made?—Yes; after he had got a sovereign they all then got a sovereign each; I saw a sovereign paid to each of them. After receiving a sovereign Mr. Lamb found fault with the amount paid, and I supported him, and knowing that I had something to do afterwards before the committee broke up, I remained till Mr. Lamb was out; I thought that we should get more money.

801. What

801. What did you say or do?—I repeated what I said down stairs.

802. What did you say?—That to go amongst Irishmen, particularly the labouring men that were strong and healthy, you had to take a deal of money for to treat them all round; that 15s. or 1*l.* was lost in no time.

803. What said Mr. Kitcheman to that?—Oh, he fully concurred in that; he said that he really knew that it had cost him a deal of money going about; in fact, it had been mentioned by some of Mr. Miall's friends to their committee, and that he had been hauled over the coals for it again; as I said he repeated the same reply upstairs; one remark called forth another.

804. Was there any additional payment made?—Yes; after I supported Mr. Lamb in his proposition for more money, he gave us half a sovereign each.

805. Mr. Kitcheman did himself, did he?—I will not swear positively he gave it us in half sovereigns; but he gave 2*l.* out I know, because he says, "There is 10*s.* each more for you, gentlemen, that makes 30*s.*"

806. Mr. Baron Martin.] How much did you yourself get altogether?—I got 5*l.* 15*s.* altogether.

807. Mr. Giffard.] At that interview did Mr. Kitcheman produce a paper for you to sign?—Yes; after I had told him down stairs that I thought I could neutralise them; keep them from voting.

808. Don't go down stairs again. Keep to one thing at a time. I want you to tell me about the paper that was produced upstairs?—He brought forth a form out of his pocket. He said he had full confidence in the men; but he said that he wanted to show this to his committee, and it was necessary that we should all sign it, and the form run thus, as near as I can recollect.

Mr. Giffard.] We will call for it.

Mr. Overend.] We do not produce it.

809. Mr. Giffard.] Did you sign it, and did Mr. Kitcheman take it away?—We signed it, and Mr. Kitcheman took it away; he said he wanted to show it to his committee.

Mr. Giffard (to Mr. Overend).] You admit the notice to produce, I presume?

Mr. Overend.] You ought to call Mr. Kitcheman if it is proved to be in Mr. Kitcheman's handwriting.

Mr. Giffard.] I certainly do not mean to call Mr. Kitcheman.

Mr. Baron Martin.] You must trace it to Mr. Kitcheman.

Mr. Giffard.] That is rather an issue for your Lordship upon this. I have already given evidence showing Mr. Kitcheman's conduct and behaviour in the matter.

Mr. Baron Martin.] As far as the parties are concerned, there are three petitioners against Mr. Ripley, and there is notice to produce that will affect any document in the possession of Mr. Ripley, but will not affect any document in the possession of Mr. Kitcheman.

Mr. Giffard.] You will find, probably, that Mr. Kitcheman was so far identified with Mr. Ripley that it was presumably in his possession.

Mr. EDWARD KITCHEMAN was called; but not sworn.

810. Mr. Giffard.] Do you produce the document?—I believe I have it at home; I did not think it of importance or I would have brought it.

Mr. Baron Martin.] You have no right, Mr. Giffard, to ask him the question without swearing him.

Mr. Price.] He was subpoenaed, and told not to attend to-day.

Mr. Giffard.] But he is here.

Mr. Overend.] Then you make him your witness.

Mr. Giffard.] I do not, indeed.

Mr. Overend.] You have examined him already.

Mr. Giffard.] I have not, indeed. I simply ask him to produce the document upon his subpoena. I have taken very good care not to call him as a witness, and do not mean to.

Mr. Baron Martin.] Without swearing him, you cannot properly ask him any question.

Mr. Giffard.] I know that, my Lord. I simply call for the document, and it is not produced.

Mr. Overend.] Prove your notice to produce or your subpoena duces tecum.

Mr. Baron Martin.] You must produce it by voluntarily handing it over to Mr. Giffard, or by his sitting down without saying anything about it.

Mr. Overend.] That cannot entitle my learned friend to have secondary evidence about it.

Mr. Baron Martin.] Certainly not. He is not in a position to examine upon it. As I understand, Mr. Kitcheman has the document.

Mr. Giffard.] All I can do is to call for the document; I do not make him my witness; if he does not produce it hereafter it may be I can give secondary evidence upon its contents.

Mr. Overend.] No, you may prosecute or bring an action against him.

811. Mr. Giffard (to the Witness, Michael Coyne).] You signed some document which Mr. Kitcheman took away with him; is that so?—Yes, he took the document away with him.

812. For the purpose of showing his committee, I think, you said?—Yes.

813. Do not tell me what was in the document; but, before the document went away, did you make an alteration in it yourself?—Yes; I cannot explain that alteration unless you allow me to say what the document was.

814. Did you make an alteration?—Yes.

815. Did you get any more money that night, or not?—No, no more money that night.

M. Coyne.

1869.

*Mr. E.
Kitcheman.*

M. Coyne.

M. Cayne.

26 January
1869.

816. After this, did Mr. Kitcheman go away into another room?—Yes, he did.

817. Did you hear from him where it was, what the meeting was that he went to?—Yes; he said he had to attend to another committee in the house.

818. Did he tell you what committee it was; whether an English committee or an Irish committee?—He did not; but I understood it to be an English committee.

819. Did you afterwards ask Jerry Ryan what you were to do about the list of names?—Yes.

820. What did you ask him?—Before Mr. Kitcheman left the Junction Hotel that night, while he was still with us, he told us he would expect from each man a return of what he had done during the week about getting those men not to vote. I told Ryan on going in that I would never do anything for the money that I was receiving; distinctly I said so.

821. Did you tell him why?—Yes; I told him it was against my conscience—and he knew that.

822. Did you afterwards make out a list?—Yes, I made out a list, but it was under these circumstances.

823. Did you give it to Jerry Ryan?—Yes.

824. Did you direct Ryan to get any money for you?—Yes.

825. What money did you direct Ryan to get?—I told him to get 3*l.*; but he did not—I got it myself.

826. Where was it, and when was it you got the 3*l.*?—The first money I got was on a Monday night, the 12th, to the best of my knowledge—the next was on Wednesday the 21st, under the Exchange, in Mr. Blake's vaults; there was nobody present but Jerry Ryan and Mr. Kitcheman and I.

827. First of all, when was it—what month was this in that you are speaking of?—October, I think.

828. What passed at this meeting—or rather, first of all, what is the place where you met—what sort of a place is it?—It was in Mr. Blake's vaults.

829. What is that?—It is a public-house and restaurant.

830. Where was it you met—what part of the house was it?—Where the Irish committee used to meet.

831. What part of the house is it—is it a parlour, drawing-room, or a kitchen, or a garret?—No; there are two rooms on the floor, besides the dining-room—it was in a room next the "Fleece," in Bank-street.

832. I believe they are called vaults—are they underground?—Yes.

833. What passed at that meeting, when you three were present?—Jerry Ryan and I were there before Mr. Kitcheman came—he came in all flurried, and he said "Gentlemen, it has got to Mr. Miall's supporters that we are paying canvassers, and paying men not to vote—paying the Irishmen not to vote, Now," he says, "I can answer that there is not a single paid canvasser but those that are amongst the Irish, and as this has gotten down, Mr. Ripley and Mr. Little have positively refused to give another farthing."

834. What more was said?—That was all. Mr. Ripley had refused to give any more money for that purpose, and it had also gotten out that he had treated people at Bolton-road, the Wharf Hotel, and other places. Mr. Kitcheman came in all flurried after Ryan and I had been waiting there in the vaults, and he pulled out his purse paying me 3*l.* in gold, and giving Ryan gold and a bank note. I do not know how much for he remarked at the same time and he said "Gentlemen, it has oozed out and got to the supporters of Mr. Miall that we are paying canvassers, and paying the Irish for to not vote, and it has gotten back to our committee—consequently, Mr. Little and Mr. Ripley have positively refused to give another farthing. It has also gotten out that I spent money in treating for people in Bolton-road, which I knew he had been very foolish in doing—because I saw him do it myself. He said he knew he was foolish enough to do it, and for that reason he would pay no more money to any Irish, nor treat none of the committee any more anywhere, but that Jerry Ryan would have the paying of the Irish committee from that house, and handing him the money at the same time.

835. After that were you taken to see Mr. Ripley himself?—No, I think it was before that.

836. How long before?—If I do not mistake the first Monday night that we met, I saw Mr. Kitcheman coming out with Ryan.

837. I ask you when you were taken to see Mr. Ripley?—I am coming to that. Like everybody else I thought I would ask the question as to what Mr. Ripley would do for Ireland, and the Irish people. Mr. Kitcheman assured me that he would do as much as Mr. Miall, and more, and for that reason he would take me on to see him at the Victoria Hotel, and I feasted my eyes on that beautiful building—I was never in it before.

838. Just tell me, did you at any time endeavour to neutralise the votes of your countrymen?—No, never; I opposed it all through, in the presence of Ryan, everywhere we met them.

839. Who introduced you to Mr. Ripley?—Jeremiah Ryan, assisted by Mr. Ripley.

840. I will ask you in plain terms; did you accept this money and this employment with the express object of defeating and betraying those who employed you?—Yes, I did, most undoubtedly, and I sent the money to the Bradford Infirmary.

841. I believe you wrote a letter to the newspaper, about the 12th of November, and sent the 5*l.* 15*s.* to the Bradford Infirmary?—Yes.

842. Is that the letter you wrote to the "Bradford Observer" (handing a paper to the Witness)?—That is my letter.

Mr. Overend.] This is not the way of proving it; I have no doubt it is so; but I would rather like to see the letter.

Mr. Giffurd.] Then I withdraw it.

Cross-examined by Mr. Price.

843. Who wrote the letter?—I wrote it.

844. Who dictated it; who composed it?—I wrote the letter.

845. Who composed it?—I tell you I wrote it.

846. Who composed it?—You do not catch an old bird with chaff; speak up, if you please.

847. I will ask, my Lord, if that is a proper way to speak to me?—I told him I could not hear him.

848. Who composed the letter?—That gentleman who was employed for Mr. Miall and Mr. Forster.

849. Mr.

849. Mr. Hargreaves?—No.
 850. Mr. Arnold?—No, the law agent.
 851. Mr. Wade?—Yes, Mr. Wade.
 852. When did he compose it?—He composed it a day or so before I wrote it.
 853. Where?—In Mr. Michael Mahoney's office.
 854. Who is Mr. Michael Mahoney?—He is a woolstapler in this town.
 855. Were you present?—I was in the building when it was written.
 856. You were not in the room when he composed it?—No.
 857. Were you sent for to Michael Mahoney's to come and sign this letter?—I learned deliberately —
 858. How did you know you would meet Mr. Wade there?—I went to see Mr. Mahoney there, to take his advice on it.
 859. Take his advice on what?—On what course I should pursue; whether it would be lawful to expose the letter, or not.
 860. Expose what letter?—To write this letter.
 861. Did you expect to see Mr. Wade there?—No.
 862. Did Mr. Mahoney tell you that Mr. Wade was there, and would write the letter for you?—No.
 863. How did you know that Mr. Wade was there?—I saw Mr. Wade there.
 864. Then Mr. Wade advised you upon it?—Yes, I took his advice upon it.
 865. Was Mr. Wade there by appointment before you?—I do not know about that; he was there when I got there.
 866. Who is Mr. Mahoney, and what part did he take in the election?—I cannot tell you that; only he was a staunch supporter of Mr. Wade and Mr. Forster.
 867. And a great friend of yours?—No, no particular friend of mine.
 868. You went to consult him about the law?—He is a countryman of mine.
 869. You went to consult him about the law?—Yes.
 870. Is he a lawyer?—He is a more intelligent man than me.
 871. The letter was composed by Mr. Wade, and then you signed it?—He dictated a letter which he thought would be lawful to put in the paper; he asked me if that would suit me, and I said, Yes; and I re-wrote it myself, and sent it.
 872. Did you buy a watch about this time?—Yes.
 873. Where did you get the money from to buy a watch about this time with?—I had it of my own.
 874. How long had you had it; what did you give for the watch first?—I think it is a bargain; it cost seven guineas, and I got it for three.
 875. When did you buy it?—I bought it on or about that time.
 876. Of whom did you buy it?—The watch was in the pawn-office, and I bought the ticket off a man for a sovereign; afterwards I released it.
 877. I thought it cost you three guineas?—It did, thereabouts; there was 2 l. on it in the pawn-office.
 878. You gave 1 l. to the man for the ticket; what had you to pay the pawnbroker?—£. 2, and the interest.

879. What were you earning at that time; you said that you were out of employment; where had you any money to get except what you got from Mr. Kitcheman?—As well as being working in a warehouse, I sell tea Friday night and Saturday night, and I can make as much as I do at the warehouse whether I work or play.

880. When had you sold any tea to anybody, on any Saturday night at this time?—I could not exactly say to how many.

881. Tell me one?—I sell about 20 lbs. of tea a-week.

882. Tell me any one, man or woman, to whom you sold 20 lbs. of tea about that time?—I made up the tea in small parcels, in quarters and half-pounds and 2 ounces, and sold it to each family that wanted it.

883. Tell me any family that you sold it to about that time?—I sold to two families of the name of Walches, where I live, in Wild Boar-street.

884. About what time?—I have sold it for 18 months.

885. Between the 12th of November and the 21st?—On the Friday night; every Friday night and Saturday night.

886. I take it between the 12th and 21st of November; tell me anybody whom you sold tea to?—There are two in Wild Boar-street.

887. What time in November did you sell it to them?—On the Friday night.

888. How much did you sell?—I cannot tell you exactly what they take; some weeks they take a quarter of a pound.

889. This time in November, how much did you take for tea?—I dare say it would make perhaps 18 s. a-week.

890. What did you take at this time?—One week I would not take much, and the next week I would pull up for it.

891. Have you a license to hawk tea?—Yes, I have.

892. Are you sure of that?—Yes, I am sure of that.

893. Do you mean to swear that you have a license?—I have a license to sell tea.

894. You swear that?—Yes, I swear that.

895. A license to hawk it about; a licensed hawker?—To sell it.

896. You have no tea-shop?—Yes; I sell it at the house.

897. At your own house?—Yes.

898. Have you any license stuck up there to sell tea?—No; I asked the exciseman what would be legal on that point, and he told me, and I acted according to his directions.

899. Where do you buy your tea wholesale to sell it?—I buy some at Mr. Tordoff's and some at Mr. Scott's.

900. How much do you buy at a time?—I have had half a chest at a time.

901. How long before this had you got any quantity of tea?—I used to get half a chest at a time.

902. How long before this had you got half a chest?—I got tea every week.

903. Half a chest every week?—No, not half a chest.

904. How long before this had you got any quantity of tea to go and sell; we can inquire at Mr. Tordoff's about it you know. By-the-bye, are you the gentleman with a conscience?—Yes, I have a conscience; I hope I have.

M. Coyne.

1869.

905. You mean to say that having got a conscience, you deliberately went to these people to get Mr. Ripley's money, intending to betray him?—Yes.

906. And telling them that you would do a certain work which you intended not to do?—I never told them I would do anything. I never told Ryan who asked me to go there.

907. You gave him a list?—Yes, I did.

908. Was that intended to represent that you had been round to those voters?—Yes, it was.

909. And it was a lie?—It was a lie.

910. And you went there intending to tell lies of that kind?—I went there to comply with orders to a certain extent. I took Mr. Kitchenman upon his word; when he said I had to be directed by Ryan before I made out that list, and I went to Ryan and asked what I was to do. I said I would not go to any man to ask him to change his vote, and Ryan said, "What will any of us do but have to make out a list the best way we can." Consequently I went to the most rampant Miallists I could get, and I got the names of 12 and attached them to the report.

911. Do you represent to be a sample of your countrymen in this town as to conscience?—No; I wish they were all as good as me in conscience.

912. We have got about the letter now; tell us how the money went. How did the money go to the infirmary?—I gave the letter and the money to a man called James Gillan.

913. What was the money in?—It was in gold and silver.

914. You gave it yourself?—Yes, I gave it myself; I put it into his hands.

915. Took it out of your pocket?—Yes.

916. And told him to take it to the infirmary?—Yes; and gave him a letter at the same time.

917. And do you mean to say now that you kept that 5 l. 15 s. by you, a man out of employment, except what you could make by tea, in your pocket, with your conscience pricking you all this time, and sent it back in that way?—No.

918. Where had you got the 5 l. 15 s. from?—I did not mean to say that—

919. Where had you got the 5 l. 15 s. from?—I got it from Mr. Ripley.

920. I ask you do you mean to say that the 5 l. 15 s., which you got from Mr. Kitchenman, you kept by you and then gave it up in that way?—No, I did not mean to say that.

921. Where did you get that 5 l. 15 s. from?—I borrowed that 5 l. 15 s. from this other man.

922. What man?—James Gillan.

923. Borrowed it of him, and gave it to James Gillan to take to the infirmary?—Yes.

924. Who is James Gillan?—He is an Irishman, in the town; he works at Maurice Goggin's.

925. Where does he live?—I do not know where he lives; he works at Mr. Goggin's.

926. Is he a friend of yours?—Yes; he is a friend of mine.

927. Had he ever lent you any money before?—No; we have drunk together.

928. Do Irish people, when they drink together, lend one another 5 l. 15 s. in this way?—I think it is possible for an Irishman to have 5 l. 15 s. to lend to another man.

929. What is he by trade?—He is a clerk.

930. What kind of a clerk?—Something in a shop; bookkeeper at Mr. Goggin's, in the Market-place.

931. You borrowed from him, and you had every reason to believe it was his money?—It did not matter to me whose money it was.

932. Was he a voter for Miall?—I do not know whether he was or not.

933. Which side was he in politics?—He was a supporter of Mr. Miall's.

934. Where did you borrow it of him; where was he when you borrowed it of him?—I forget now rightly where it was I got it of him.

935. Was it in gold or a note?—Gold and silver.

936. Have you paid him back?—No, not yet, I have not.

937. Does your conscience prick you at all about that?—Yes.

938. Were you employed ever as a canvasser for Mr. Ripley?—No; never.

939. Were you never discharged because you would not do your work?—No; never.

940. Will you swear that?—who from?

941. By Ryan, because you would not do your work as canvasser?—No; certainly not.

942. You swear that?—I swear that most distinctly.

943. Do you know a man of the name of Clarke?—Yes; John Clarke.

944. He has something to do with the Liberal Association, has he not?—I know nothing what he has to do, except I know he is an Irishman.

945. Do you not know that Gillan got that 5 l. 15 s. from Clarke, and gave it to you?—I know nothing about it.

946. You swear you do not?—Yes; I swear I do not.

947. You never heard of it?—I never heard of it before now.

948. Is there not an understanding that you were never to pay that 5 l. 15 s. back again?—No; there was never anything of the kind.

949. You owe it now to Gillan?—Yes.

950. Did you give him any acknowledgment?—No; nothing.

951. It is left to your conscience?—Yes; it is left to my conscience, and he shall not be deceived.

952. Are you what is called the captain in the town now?—No.

953. Or captain of the town?—No; I never knew anything about it.

954. A head centre?—Ask me if I am a robber.

955. Are you a head centre?—A head centre of what?

956. You know?—No, I do not know anything at all about it.

957. You never heard the word head centre, and do not know what it means?—Yes; I know.

958. Are you a head centre?—No; certainly not.

959. Are you what is called a captain?—No; I am not.

960. Are you in any employ now?—No, not now.

961. Are you a centre?—No, I am not a centre; but if I was, I would not be ashamed of it.

962. I should be surprised to find anything you are ashamed of; you are not in employment now; have you been in any employment whatever

ever since the election?—Yes; I was in employment since the election.

963. Whose employ?—Leo Schuster, Brothers & Co.

964. How long?—I cannot tell exactly how long; it might be a week, or a fortnight.

965. It might be a month?—It might be a month, or it might be a few days.

966. Will you swear it was more than a few days?—I can very soon ascertain.

967. What have you been living upon since the election; what have you had to live upon?—I have had a few days work, and I have had the tea.

968. What did you get for the few days?—Six shillings and sixpence a day is the rate of pay.

969. How many days?—I cannot tell how many days.

970. Will you swear you had two days?—Yes; I had two days.

971. Had you a week's work?—I dare say I had three weeks' work, or a fortnight, however.

972. Will you swear you had more than three days work?—I am not accustomed to take oath to what is not true.

973. How long have you had the tea to live upon?—I had the tea to live upon up to a fortnight since.

974. How much have you sold since the election?—I cannot tell.

975. What profit do you make upon a pound of tea?—I cannot exactly say; there are different prices.

976. Did you buy any earrings at all during the election?—No; I did not.

977. Nor since?—No; nor since.

978. You never said so, did you; you never boasted of it at Leo Schuster's?—Yes; but I was not on my oath then.

979. You say that you went down and you saw Mr. Ripley, and assisted by Mr. Little, they managed to get you introduced to Mr. Ripley?—I was introduced by Ryan, assisted by Mr. Little.

980. Did you say to Mr. Ripley, that having now heard Mr. Ripley, you were perfectly satisfied, and would do all in your power to support him?—On my oath, I never said I would do anything to support him.

981. I ask you again?—I said I was perfectly satisfied with the answers he gave me; but I never promised him, nor no man living to support him.

982. Did you tell Mr. Ripley that you were perfectly satisfied?—Yes.

983. With what he said to you?—Yes.

984. And you would do all in your power to support him?—No, nothing of the kind, bad, good or indifferent, to any man. I defy a man to prove it—I told him distinctly I would never assist him, because it was against my conscience.

Re-examined by Mr. Metcalfe.

985. My learned friend asked you whether you were a centre, or anything of that sort—have you great influence amongst the Irish people?—I have a certain amount of influence, I dare say.

986. Did Mr. Kitcheman, and Jeremiah Ryan in particular, know that?—Yes, because after I said in support—

987. Was it in consequence of that, that Jeremiah Ryan found you out and engaged you?—Yes, according to his own account, at Mr. Kitcheman's solicitation—at his asking.

[The Witness withdrew.]

WILLIAM LOOBY, sworn; Examined by Mr. Metcalfe.

988. Do you live at 44 Craven-street, Wapping?—Yes.

989. Are you a voter on the register of the East Ward?—Yes.

990. Did you vote at the last election for Mr. Ripley?—Yes.

991. On the 9th of November did you meet Mr. Edward Kitcheman?—Yes.

992. Were you with James Corcoran, John Young, and Patrick Dwyer?—Yes.

993. Was that near the Three Tuns?—No; it was at the bottom of Queen's Gate.

994. Did you say anything to Mr. Kitcheman?—Yes.

995. What was it?—To tell him we were canvassing for Ripley, and we asked him for some money to treat our friends when we would meet them.

996. What did he say?—He told us he dare not give no money since Michael Coyne's letter.

997. That was a letter in the paper—had you seen the letter in the paper?—No, I did not.

998. What then did he say?—He told us that he understood that Jeremiah Ryan gave money, and he told us Ryan might be at Mr. Blake's, under the New Exchange.

998*. That is what is called the Exchange vaults?—Yes; we left Jeremiah Ryan and Mr. Kitcheman about six o'clock in the evening, on Bolton-road, and when Mr. Kitcheman saw us going to Jeremiah Ryan he went away from us about 20 yards.

999. Had Mr. Kitcheman been with you up to that time?—No.

1000. Did you see him with Ryan, or what?—Yes.

1001. Where were they coming from?—They were coming from James Muller's.

1002. Is that the "Harp of Erin"?—Yes.

1003. Then Mr. Kitcheman went away—what did you do?—We told Jerry Ryan that Mr. Kitcheman sent us to him for money, and he gave us half-a-sovereign each of us.

1004. Did you say anything about who you were, or what you were?—Not at that time.

1005. Did you say whether you were voters or not?—He knew we were voters; we told him we were voters before that.

1006. He gave you that—then what took place?—We parted from him at that time, and we met him on the 10th, and he gave me and John Young and Patrick Dwyer a half-a-crown between us three, and on the 14th Ryan went to the "Bricklayers' Arms," and he came into the committee-room of Mr. Ripley's, and he called me over to him to sign my name in his book.

1007. Did you do so?—Yes.

1008. Did you write your name in his book yourself?—Yes.

1009. What sort of a book was it?—It was like like one of those on the table—it was a large book.

1010. You signed your name in it—did Ryan keep the book?—Yes.

1011. What did you sign your name there for?—Because he asked me.

1012. Did he say what you were to be, or what you were to do?—No.

1013. Having signed your name what then took place?—He called me out into the back yard of the “Bricklayers’ Arms,” and he gave me a sovereign.

1014. Did he say what you were to do with the sovereign, or why he gave it you?—I was to do what I like with it.

1015. Did he say why he gave it you?—He gave it to me vote for Mr. Ripley.

1016. Mr. Overend.] Did he say so?—No, he did not.

1017. Mr. Metcalfe.] What did he say?—He told me that I was to vote for Ripley, and do all that lay in my power to get him into the House of Commons.

1018. When was that—was it just before he gave you the sovereign, or after he gave you the sovereign?—Both before and after.

1019. Then, what took place after that?—He left us then.

1020. Where did you go to?—I went into the committee-room again.

1021. Was this at the “Bricklayers’ Arms”?—Yes.

1022. What was going on in the committee-room?—Drinking and smoking—ale and tobacco.

1023. What was the liquor brought in in—glasses or jugs?—It was brought in in half-gallon pitchers.

1024. Many of them?—One at once—sometimes two.

1025. And were they often re-filled?—Yes, as often as they were empty.

1026. How many people were there there?—Sometimes from nine to 10, and up to 16, and so on as far as 20.

1027. Did you see anybody pay for it?—No.

1028. Do you know who gave the order for the beer, and so on?—Our chairman gave orders for the liquor.

1029. Who was the chairman?—James Tidswell.

1030. Was that the only night you had seen drinking and that sort of thing going on there?—No.

1031. How many nights had you seen it—that was the 12th of November, I think—were you often there before the election took place?—Yes, I attended it regularly.

1032. Did that take place every night?—Yes.

1033. Did you ever see anybody pay for the beer that was brought in?—No.

1034. Or anything that was brought in?—No.

1035. Was there as much brought in as you wanted?—Yes, as much as we required.

1036. Was there any distinction made between the voters and those that were not voters?—No, very little.

1037. Were there other voters there besides yourself?—Yes.

1038. Did they have this refreshment as much as they liked?—Yes.

1039. Was there any other place where refreshments were to be had besides this “Bricklayers’ Arms.”

1040. Where?—At the “Union Cross.”

1041. Was that a committee-room?—Yes.

1042. Were there refreshments going on in the same way there?—Yes.

1043. Was there anything besides beer?—There was potatoes and beef and bread; there was supper one night in my time.

1044. How near was that to the election?—It would be about eight or nine days from the election.

1045. And the other nights only beer, was that so?—Beer and tobacco other nights.

1046. Did you see anybody pay for it at the “Union Cross”?—No.

1047. Were there voters besides yourself there also?—Yes.

1048. Who ordered there?—Emanuel Teale; he was chairman, and he ordered it.

1049. And at any other public-house?—Yes, at the “Oak Inn.”

1050. Was there beer to be had there?—Yes.

1051. Anything else besides beer?—And tobacco.

1052. Any eating?—Yes, I had some eating in the morning of the election.

1053. What was to be eaten there on the morning of the election?—I had some beef sandwich and a cigar.

1054. And the beer that you speak of; was it only once or was it going on every night?—I was not there every night; I was only there one night, and upon the morning of the election.

1055. And when you were there the beer was going, was it?—Yes.

1056. Who ordered the beer at the “Oak”?—William Crowther.

1057. Was there any other place that you speak of, besides those three?—Yes; I was at the “Friendly Inn” two nights.

1058. Was beer going there?—Yes.

1059. Anything besides beer?—And tobacco.

1060. Anything besides beer and tobacco?—There was a little raspberry wine.

1061. I should think very few people drank it?—There was a few.

1062. Who ordered those things there?—The chairman, I suppose.

1063. Mr. Overend.] Did you hear him do it?—No, I did not.

1064. Mr. Metcalfe.] Did anybody pay for it?—No, not that I saw.

1065. Did you pay anything?—No.

1066. Were there other voters there as well at the “Friendly Inn”?—Yes.

1067. Was beer brought in, in half-gallon pitchers or not?—Half-gallon pitchers.

1068. Was it generally in half-gallon pitchers?—In my time it was.

1069. Did they sometimes get as far as a gallon; have you seen gallon pitchers brought in too?—I will not say for that.

1070. Have you told us all the places that you went to; you have mentioned four?—I have been in none, only those.

1071. You say you had breakfast on the polling-day at the “Bricklayers’ Arms”; were there many other voters there besides you, who had breakfast?—I had not breakfast on the polling-day at the “Bricklayers’ Arms;” it was at the “Oak Inn.”

1072. Were there many other voters besides yourself, who had something for breakfast there on the polling morning?—Yes, there would be about half-a-dozen there besides me.

1073. Were

W. Looby.

1869.

1073. Were there others besides voters there?—I cannot say for that.

1074. What time was your breakfast there?—Half-past six.

1075. Then did you go up to the poll directly after breakfast, and directly you could register your vote?—Yes, I went to the poll at eight o'clock, but I did not vote.

1076. What time did you vote?—About half-past three in the afternoon.

1077. Did anybody go up from the "Oak Inn" to the poll with you but those who breakfasted at the "Oak"?—Yes, there was one man went with me.

1078. Did the chairman or anybody from the committee go up with you?—There was one man went up with us; he was a voter.

1079. Did you go straight from the "Oak" Inn to the poll?—Yes.

1080. I am not quite sure that I got from you the date when that sovereign was given you?—On the 14th of November.

1081. That was on the Saturday before the election?—Yes.

1082. On the nomination day, the Monday, was there anything going on at the "Bricklayers' Arms"?—I had my dinner there on the nomination day.

1083. Were there other voters who had their dinner there too on the nomination day?—Yes.

1084. About how many, do you remember?—There was one voter besides me.

1085. Did you pay anything?—No.

1086. I suppose you had beer with your dinner too?—Yes.

Cross-examined by Mr. Overend.

1087. As I understand you, the first time you met Mr. Kitcheman near the "Three Tuns" was on the 9th of November?—Yes.

1088. You are quite clear as to the date?—Yes; I am quite clear as to the date.

1089. You are quite sure that the day was the 9th of November?—Yes.

1090. There is no mistake about it?—No.

1091. You are quite sure that on that 9th of November he told you that he could not and are not give any money on account of Coyne's letter?—Yes.

1092. Now, my friend, I will tell you that that letter was not published till four days afterwards?—That was the reply I got from Mr. Kitcheman.

1093. It is dated the 12th of November; it is published in the paper of the 13th of November.

Mr. Giffard.] As a matter of fact, it was not put in upon your objection; you may have it in if you like; it was objected to and withdrawn.

1094. Mr. Overend (to the Witness).] Supposing this letter to bear date the 12th of November, how do you explain this: you say he told you that it was in consequence of Coyne's letter; if it were written on the 12th of November, how do you explain that, if this which you talk about was the 9th, three days before?—That was the answer that I got that he dare not give any money since Michael Coyne's letter.

1095. But he could not have said that if Michael Coyne had not written his letter?—That is what he said.

1096. You still stick to that?—Yes.

1097. About the drinking; you were a voter, were you?—Yes.

1098. And you voted?—Yes.

1099. When you were asked to do the work that you were asked to do, were you not told by Ryan that you must not vote?—No.

1100. Did nobody tell you that you were not to vote?—No.

1101. Did you not know that, if you were employed as a canvasser, you could not legally vote?—I was not employed as a canvasser.

1102. Did you not know that it was not lawful for you to vote if you were employed in any way as an agent for Mr. Ripley?—Could not I canvass for him and vote?

1103. No; if you do you are liable to be imprisoned?—I did canvass for him.

1104. But were you not told at the time when you were asked to canvass for him, that it would not be lawful for you to vote;—No, I was not.

1105. Did you not know that you could not legally vote for him after you had been canvassing?—No, I did not.

1106. With respect to this drinking, you say there was drinking and smoking at the "Bricklayers' Arms" on the 14th of November?—Yes.

1107. And who ordered it, do you say?—James Tidswell, the chairman.

1108. Did you hear him give the order?—Yes, I did.

1109. And what did you hear him say?—He told them to bring it in.

1110. What did he order in?—Ale and tobacco.

1111. How much?—As much as was required.

1112. How much did he order?—Half-a-gallon at once.

1113. Whom did he speak to?—To the landlord.

1114. What is the name?—Robert Halton.

1115. Then he said to Robert Halton, "Bring half-a-gallon"?—Yes.

1116. You say there were several non-voters as well as voters?—Yes.

1117. How many non-voters were there?—I cannot exactly say.

1118. Were there quite as many non-voters as voters?—No; there was more non-voters than voters.

1119. There was no distinction, then; you all got it whether you were voters or non-voters?—No; there was no distinction.

1120. Then, the persons who got money, had they all been employed in the same way as you had?—I do not know.

1121. But they might have been?—Yes, for anything I know.

1122. With respect to the "Union Cross," were they also non-voters as well?—There was non-voters there as well.

1123. And they got refreshment also?—Yes.

1124. And the "Oak" Inn?—Yes.

1125. Are you quite sure that James Tidswell gave the order to the landlord?—Yes.

1126. If I tell you that the landlord was in bed, would you still say so?—He was not always in bed.

1127. Was he ill?—No, not always.

1128. Was he at that time ill?—No.

1129. Did you hear James Tidswell give the order on the 14th of November to William Halton for beer on that day?—Yes, I did.

1130. You stand to that?—Yes.

1131. At

W. Looby,
—
26 January
1869.

1131. At the "Union Cross" do you know whether they were persons who had been engaged by Mr. Ripley to go about and do their best for Mr. Ripley?—They were engaged by Mr. Kitcheman.

1132. The persons who got this refreshment were persons engaged by Mr. Kitcheman, were they?—Yes.

1133. And were the persons at the "Oak Inn" persons who had been engaged by Mr. Kitcheman also?—I do not know.

1134. Were they non-voters as well?—Yes, non-voters and voters.

1135. And at the "Friendly Inn" also?—Yes, at the "Friendly Inn" also.

1136. At the "Bricklayers' Arms" also?—Yes.

1137. That other man who was there, was he a person who had been engaged with you; you said that on the nomination day you dined at the "Bricklayers' Arms," and there was another man with you that voted?—Yes.

1138. Was he a person who had been employed also for Mr. Ripley?—Yes.

1139. Then they knew you at the "Bricklayers' Arms" as a person engaged in the cause?—Yes.

Re-examined by Mr. Metcalfe.

1140. My learned friend seemed to assume that you were employed; were you employed for any purpose, either by Mr. Kitcheman or by Ryan, to do anything; had you any work to do?—I was employed by Mr. Kitcheman.

1141. What did he tell you to do?—By canvassing.

1142. What did he tell you to do?—He told me to canvass for Mr. Ripley, and do all I could, and I should be right.

1143. Did he tell you anything about payment?—No.

1144. Did you get any payment whatever, excepting £1 that you have spoken of, which was given you by Jerry Ryan?—No, I only got what I got from Jeremiah Ryan.

1145. Which was got on that Saturday before the election?—Yes, £1 10s.

1146. Did you send in any account for canvassing to Mr. Kitcheman or anybody; did you send in any letter?—Yes, I sent in my name to Mr. Terry.

1147. Did you put it on paper at all?—It was drawn on the paper, but I did not write it.

1148. Did you receive anything from Mr. Terry or anybody?—No, only Jeremiah Ryan.

[The Witness withdrew.]

PATRICK DWYER, sworn; Examined by Mr. Mellor.

P. Dwyer.

1149. Do you live at no 23, Craven-street, Wapping?—Yes.

1150. You are on the register of voters for the East Ward?—Yes.

1151. On the 9th of November did you go and see Mr. Kitcheman?—Yes.

1152. Did you see him?—Yes.

1153. Where did you see him?—At the back of the Exchange.

1154. Did he give you any directions?—Yes.

1155. What did he tell you to do?—He asked us if we knew Jerry Ryan, and we said yes; he told me he had heard that Jerry Ryan gave brass away, and that we had to go to him for it, and if he gave us no brass we were to come back to him again.

1156. What did you do upon that?—We were seeking Jerry Ryan for upwards of five hours; we found him, and Mr. Kitcheman with him, in Bolton-road.

1157. Who were you with when you saw Jerry?—With William Looby, John Young, and James Corcoran.

1158. Was anybody with Ryan when you met him?—There was Mr. Kitcheman and those people walking on the road.

1159. Did Ryan give you anything?—We told him that Mr. Kitcheman had sent us to him, and he said he had now't to do with it, because we was not on his committee; so he put his hand in his pocket and pulled four half-sovereigns out, and gave us one a-piece.

1160. After this, on a Saturday, did you and James Corcoran go to Ryan again?—Yes.

1161. What did you go to him for?—We went to him, as he told us to go to him on Saturday, for this brass; he said he would see us right on the Saturday.

1162. What did he give you on the Saturday?—He gave us £3; 30s. a-piece.

1163. Mr. Overend.] Was that the Saturday before the election?—Yes.

1164. Mr. Mellor.] Did you vote?—Yes.

1165. Whom did you vote for?—For Mr. Ripley.

1166. Before you voted, had you said anything to Mr. Kitcheman about it?—Yes; me and James Corcoran met him at the "Union Cross," and stopped him at the door as he was going out; we asked him how it would be if we voted, and he said we had to go and vote; he would see us all right, and we would be all right, and we would be well satisfied.

1167. Who said that?—Mr. Kitcheman.

1168. Where was it that he said that?—At the "Union Cross."

1169. Who were there besides yourselves?—James Corcoran.

1170. Was anybody else, at the time he said that, at the "Union Cross"?—There was lots inside, but we was outside in the passage.

1171. Did he say any more at that time?—No, he went away.

1172. Did he say any more to you about it, on any other occasion before the election?—He kept coming to us frequently, and telling us to go on and work hard for Mr. Ripley; we would be all well satisfied and well done to all right.

1173. Did he say anything about Mr. Ripley?—He said Mr. Ripley had plenty of money; we were at the right side; he was not particular to 30,000 £. or 40,000 £.; he said 10,000 £. or 20,000 £. was not in his road.

1174. Did Ryan give you anything besides what you have told us; did you get any more?—I met him on the Monday, and he gave me and James Corcoran a shilling a-piece.

1175. Was that the Monday before the election?—No; the week before the election, on the Tuesday;

P. Dwyer.

1869.

Tuesday; me and John Young and Bill Looby, we met him, and he gave us half-a-crown.

1176. When was that?—On the Tuesday night.

1177. Mr. Baron Martin.] How many times did you get money from him altogether?—Five times; I got 2*l.* 4*s.* out of him.

1178. Mr. Mellor.] Before the election, were you in the habit of going to the “Union Cross”?—Yes.

1179. How often did you go to the “Union Cross”?—Every day and every night.

1180. What did you do at the “Union Cross”?—We went there and sat down; sometimes they went out canvassing some of them, and when they was not canvassing they were drinking ale and porter, and smoking tobacco.

1181. Did that go on every night at the “Union Cross”?—Every night; the last fortnight they met every night at 7 o'clock, and they went on drinking and smoking up to 11.

1182. Did you pay for it?—No, it was all for nowt; I was standing at the door one night, and Mr. Kitcheman went to the bar to the missus, and the missus told him she did not know what to do, and he said, “It is getting too late now, you must let them go on; you must not stop them.”

1183. How many people were there generally at the “Union Cross”?—Sometimes 10, sometimes 17, sometimes 20, and so on.

1184. Did they all have as much as they wanted?—Yes, they all had as much as they wanted; they had a sandwich every night for the last fortnight.

1185. Sunday as well?—They did meet there on Sunday; they met there about 8 o'clock on Sunday night and went on drinking, and they were getting rather drunk some of them.

1186. Who was chairman at the “Union Cross”?—Emanuel Teale.

1187. Did you ever go to the “Friendly Inn”?—Yes.

1188. How often did you go to the “Friendly Inn”?—Perhaps four or five times.

1189. What went on at the “Friendly Inn”?—They were just drinking, when I was there, the same as at the “Union Cross.”

1190. Did you ever pay for anything at the “Friendly Inn”?—No, I never paid for anything, as I was not drinking, but what I called for I might get.

1191. Who was the chairman there?—Patrick Darcey.

1192. Did you ever go to the “Oak Inn”?—Yes.

1193. And what was going on there?—They were drinking there the same way.

1194. How many people did you see in the “Oak Inn” drinking?—I have see 14 or 15.

1195. Did you drink yourself at the “Oak Inn”?—I did not drink none; I am a teetotaller, and I drink pop.

1196. Did you pay for the pop?—No, I got it for nowt, and much more if I could drink it.

1197. Was there anything besides ale; was there tobacco there?—Yes, plenty of tobacco.

1198. On the polling day where did you get your breakfast?—At the “Union Cross.”

1199. Did you pay anything for it?—No.

1200. What time did you have your breakfast in the morning?—About 6 o'clock.

1201. Where there any other persons breakfasting there at the same time?—Yes.

28.

1202. How many?—I believe there was about eight of us in.

1203. What had you for breakfast at the “Union Cross”?—We had some beef and cake.

1204. And what else?—Ale; anyone that wanted it.

1205. Did you go up from the “Union Cross” to the polling booth?—No, when I went to the polling booth, I went from the “Union Cross.”

1206. You went to the “Union Cross” before you went to the polling booth?—Yes.

1207. Who went with you to the polling booth?—John Reed, Andrew Mahoney, John Young, and James Corcoran.

1208. Did you see Mr. Kitcheman on the morning of the poll?—I saw him about 10 o'clock, I believe.

1209. Were there many people with him?—When I met him there was no one with him; he was coming on but in the morning the first thing, and this would be about 1 o'clock, Mr. Kitcheman and happen 20 people were walking about the street; they were knocking at all the doors, calling all the people up, going all round from one house to the other; this was to get them up ready for to go.

1210. On Saturday, the 14th November, did you and Looby meet Mr. Kitcheman on the Otley-road?—Yes.

1211. Did you ask for anything?—Yes.

1212. What did you ask him for?—We asked him for some money.

1213. What did he say?—He said he durst not give us money to have a glass of ale, but if we could borrow any brass he would see us right when the election was over.

1214. After the election was over, did you go and see him?—Yes, we went to see him.

1215. How long after the election was that?—I cannot rightly say to a day or two; a week or so.

1216. When you saw Mr. Kitcheman after the election, what took place?—I went into the house, and there was William Hopkinson belonging to the “Union Cross,” and there was four of them. I got in, and William Hopkinson wanted brass for his voters. When I went into the room Mr. Kitcheman and him was talking. Mr. Kitcheman said he thought all things would be right as soon as these petitions would get settled. I said that I would tell everyone that I knew that had got any brass. He tapped me on the shoulder and told me to take my time, and it would be all right.

1217. Mr. Baron Martin.] You had 2*l.* 4*s.*; did you want more than that?—I was agait six or seven weeks; he kept telling me it would be all right, and to go on.

1218. How much did you expect?—I expected for the time I was agait.

Cross-examined by Mr. Overend.

1219. What were you agait at?—Canvassing.

1220. Then you were canvassing for seven weeks and you got 4*l.*?—No, 2*l.* 4*s.*

1221. Did you think you ought to have more, or were you satisfied with your money?—I thought I should have more.

1222. You have been talking about this; did they not tell you that if they employed you as a canvasser you could not vote?—No.

1223. Nobody?—No.

1224. Did

P. Dwyer.
26 January
1869.

1224. Did you not ask for books and pencils to go out canvassing?—I never asked for none.

1225. Were you supplied with any?—Sam Enoch, the agent, was with them, and they were to go with him.

1226. Do you know that gentleman there (pointing to Mr. Marshal Hanby)?—Yes.

1227. Did you apply to him for a canvass-book?—The last fortnight we did.

1228. Did you apply to him for others?—No; Sam Enoch applied to him.

1229. And you were with him?—Yes.

1230. And you did go and canvass about?—I went with Sam Enoch.

1231. You were canvassing those Irish voters; are you an Irishman?—Yes.

1232. Had you not a book and pencil given to yourself?—A book and pencil were of no use to me because I could not write.

1233. Were they given to you notwithstanding; did not Mr. Hanby give you into your hands a book and a pencil?—No.

1234. Mr. Hanby is there; take care what you say?—No, he gave me no pencil, nor book neither.

1235. Did you ever tell Mr. Hanby you could not write?—Yes.

1236. Are you sure about that?—Yes.

1237. It was foolishness altogether for him to give you a book if he knew you could not write?—I told him that Sam Enoch and me would go together, because I could not write.

1238. Did you and he make reports to Mr. Hanby of what you had done?—No.

1239. Did not you yourself make reports to Mr. Hanby of what you had done?—No.

1240. Never?—No.

1241. At Eastbrook House; have you never at Eastbrook House come to Mr. Hanby alone, not in company with those other men, and reported to him what you had done?—No, I was never with Mr. Marshal Hanby myself alone.

1242. Did you bring names on pieces of paper?—Sam Enoch brought them, but not I.

1243. Did you?—No.

1244. Never alone?—No.

1245. You say you and Looby, and Young and Corcoran, on the 9th of November, met Mr. Kitcheman?—Yes.

1246. You are sure it was the 9th of November?—I cannot really know the day, but I think it was; it was on a Monday.

1247. On the Monday week before the election?—Yes.

1248. And what did he tell you; did he say anything about a letter?—Yes.

1249. What did he say?—He said he dare not, since Coyne's letter, give us nowt.

1250. That you say was on the Monday week before the election?—Yes.

1251. Are you sure about that?—Yes.

1252. It was not the Monday before the election, but the Monday week before the election?—The Monday week before the election.

1253. He told you then about Coyne's letter?—Yes.

1254. You are quite sure about that?—Yes.

1255. You say that when you went up to Ryan and told him that Mr. Kitcheman sent you, he said he had nothing to do with you, but gave you each half-a-sovereign; what did he give you each half-a-sovereign for?—He said we was not on his committee.

1256. What did he give you anything for if you were not on his committee; why did he give you anything at all?—He gave it to us to vote for Mr. Ripley.

1257. Did he say anything about what you were to do?—He said we were to go and put our names down on his committee, and he would see that we were right.

1258. Is that what he said, that you were to put your names on his committee?—Yes, and that he would see us right.

1259. Did not you give your names in to Mr. Kitcheman in connection with three men named Looby, and Charles Riley, and James Corcoran, and did not you say it was better you should all go in a body, the four together; it was safer?—No; we said the four could go together, and William Looby said that that would be too much for one book, and Mr. Kitcheman said, No matter if there was six to a book, so much the better.

1260. How long were you engaged to canvass after you had given in your name to Mr. Kitcheman?—We were agait 10 days.

1261. Were you engaged six weeks?—We had been engaged six weeks; then they took the books and gave them out again fresh again, and took all the other books in when we were engaged 10 days.

1265. You were engaged altogether about six weeks?—Six or seven weeks; I cannot rightly say to a week.

1263. With respect to this; are you sure you were never told that if you were employed as a canvasser, you were not entitled to vote at all?—No, I never was.

1264. Did not you apply to Mr. Kitcheman for wages for what you had done?—No, we never asked him for any wages at all.

1265. Had you been canvassing for him before you applied to Mr. Kitcheman?—Yes.

1266. Having been employed to canvass before you applied to Mr. Kitcheman, I ask you again, Did you not ask him to pay you for what was due to you?—No.

1267. Did he not say no, it was not him that was to pay; you must go to Ryan?—He said he dare not give us since Coyne's letter; he asked us if we knew of Coyne's letter; he said Ryan had done such things.

1268. What do you mean by such things?—Gave brass, and if he did not give us any we were to come back to him again.

1269. And you were to have brass for going canvassing the people on the other side; Mr. Kitcheman never spoke to you about your vote at all; he merely asked you to work as well as you could for Mr. Ripley?—Yes; work for Mr. Ripley and vote for him.

1270. Do you mean to say that he said a word about voting?—Yes, many times he asked me to vote for Mr. Ripley, and no one else.

1271. In whose presence did he say that?—There was James Corcoran there; John Young, William Looby, me, and several people besides.

1272. And you say that was when he asked you for your vote, do you?—Yes, he asked me to vote for Mr. Ripley, and no one else.

1273. You were to do your best to get votes for Mr. Ripley?—Yes, we were to do our best to get votes for Mr. Ripley, and to vote for him ourselves.

1274. Were you all voters, you, this man Looby, and Young, and so on?—Yes.

1275. Did they all vote?—Yes.

1276. Every

1276. Every one of them?—Yes.

1277. Did you go up with them to vote?—No, I went with one of them, James Corcoran.

1278. Mr. Baron Martin.] What o'clock did you vote?—As soon as the door was opened we went in.

1279. Mr. Overend.] At eight o'clock in the morning?—Yes.

1280. You were one of the first voters?—There may be happen 50 or 60 before me.

1281. But you were very early in the morning?—Yes.

1282. About this drinking; were all the men that were canvassing about there in the public-houses drinking?—Yes.

1283. They were all canvassers; every one that was there was a canvasser?—There was a room for them to go in, and when they got into the room they were welcome to drink as long as they liked.

1284. Those were canvassers?—Yes.

1285. That was in the committee-room?—There was plenty drinking there that was not canvassers.

1286. There was no distinction made between voters and non-voters?—No, voters and non-voters alike.

1287. Were there a good many non-voters there?—Very fair.

1288. What is your name?—Patrick Dwyer.

1189. Did you ever tell Ryan that you had been canvassing for five or six weeks, and you wanted to get more?—I told him I had been engaged for five or six weeks.

1290. Did you tell him you had been canvassing for five or six weeks?—I told him I had been canvassing for four or five weeks.

1291. Did you not ask him how a person in your situation could be likely to be going on canvassing without being paid for it?—Yes.

1292. You told him you must be paid for it?—I did not tell him I was forced to be paid for it, but I said we could not go on without getting some money.

1293. You say you were a voter; what name did you go under at the time you were engaged?—Patrick Dwyer.

1294. Have you ever gone under any other name?—No; my name were put Patrick Dwyer.

1295. Have you ever gone under any other name than Patrick Dwyer; they call me another name about the street; Patrick Cowdy.

1296. Is that the name you go by?—No, I go by the name of Dwyer.

1297. Are you known amongst your friends as Cowdy?—Yes.

1298. Mr. Baron Martin.] Is that your mother's name?—Yes, my mother's name.

1299. Mr. Overend.] Were you not known to Ryan as Cowdy?—I do not know whether I was known to Ryan or no.

1300. Did he not call you Cowdy when he spoke to you?—Yes.

1301. Did not Mr. Kitcheman speak to you as Cowdy too?—No, he called me Dwyer.

1302. Did he call you Cowdy?—If he called me so, I never heard him; never, to my knowledge.

1303. Do Corcoran and your associates always call you by the name of Cowdy?—Yes.

1304. And you pass by that name?—Yes.

1305. Have you a father called Patrick Dwyer, in Craven-street?—No.

1306. Is there no Patrick Dwyer but yourself in Craven-street?—No.

28.

1307. What is it you live in?—I live in 48.

1308. Is it a house you live in?—Yes, it was a house I lived in then.

1309. Had you a father at that time?—No.

1310. Did you ever tell Ryan that you had a father living there, and that it would influence him?—No.

1311. You say all this drink was going on, and Ryan had ordered things, and so on; had you seen him?—I do not know what Ryan ordered; I never saw Ryan order nowt.

1312. Was he present when the drinking was going on?—No, he was not with them.

1313. Was Mr. Kitcheman there?—Yes, many times.

1314. You said you asked Mr. Kitcheman for money, and he said he dared not ask you in; but if you could borrow the money, he would see you righted after the election?—Yes.

1315. This was the man that was supplying food and drink, and those kind of things, to all those people all the time?—I do not know whether he was supplying them or no.

1316. That was the man who said 40,000*l.* was no object to Mr. Ripley?—He said Mr. Ripley had plenty of money; we were at the right side, and so on, and it would be all right.

1317. Still, for all that, he told you he dare not ask you into the house, and you would have to borrow the money if you spent it?—Yes, he said if we could borrow the money he would see us righted after the election.

1318. You were agait, you say, altogether about seven weeks?—As near as I can tell you.

Re-examined by Mr. Giffard.

1319. You say you voted early in the morning, with a number of others?—Yes.

1320. Did you see Mr. Kitcheman early that morning?—Yes, I seen him, perhaps, about one o'clock in the morning, as near as I can tell you.

1321. From that time to the time you voted, were you going about the place?—I went about happen one hour.

1322. What time were you up in the morning?—About two o'clock.

1323. You saw Mr. Kitcheman at one; did you see Mr. Kitcheman in his sleep, or was Mr. Kitcheman with you at the public-houses?—I went home and went to bed after I had left Mr. Kitcheman.

1324. What time did you get up in the morning?—We should have stopped up all night.

1325. I do not ask you what you should have done, but what did you do?—I went to bed about 11 o'clock, and then I got up about half-past 12 or so.

1326. Did you see Mr. Kitcheman about one o'clock?—About one or two o'clock; I cannot say to an hour.

1327. Did you go to bed again, or remain up all night?—I went home when I left Mr. Kitcheman, and went to bed, and then I came down about five o'clock to the "Union Cross."

1328. What did you get there; did you get anything to eat and drink?—Yes, we got some beef and cake, and sandwiches.

1329. Were there others there besides you?—Yes, about eight.

1330. Did you go to the poll together?—There was four or five of us went together.

1331. And did you plump for Mr. Ripley?—Yes.

1332. When did you last see Mr. Kitcheman that that morning?—I left him at the "Masons' Arms," I think they call it.

1333. About what time was that?—I cannot rightly say.

1334. About when; I don't mean exactly?—It may be happen four o'clock or so; I cannot rightly say what time it was.

1335. Had you been with him to any other house besides the "Masons' Arms"?—Yes.

Mr. Baron Martin.] He said they were employed in knocking up the voters.

Mr. Giffard.] Would it be convenient if I should put in the papers that have been given to me. The gentleman, Mr. Terry, is here, and the witness speaks to particular sums?

Mr. Baron Martin.] Yes.

Mr. Giffard.] Then I now put in the papers he has given me with reference to the "Union Cross." The first is the following:

1336. Mr. Price (to the Witness.)] Do you know Mr. Arnold?—Yes.

1337. And Mr. Hargreaves?—Yes.

1338. You had a bit of talk to them about your evidence?—Yes.

1339. How many times?—Not but once.

1340. Where was that?—Let us see; at Hargreave's office.

1341. When was that?—I cannot tell.

1342. Yes. Come, was it a fortnight ago?—No, I cannot rightly say.

1343. A month?—Three or four weeks ago.

1344. Did they say you should be well paid?—No.

1345. They would see you righted?—No.

1346. Who has been supporting you since you have been to their office; who has been finding you money to live?—I have been working.

1347. Where?—At home; when I went to their office I was working.

1348. But since that time have you been out of town?—Yes.

1349. Where have you been?—At Morecambe.

1350. By the sea side?—Yes.

1351. Who has been keeping you, or who paid your fare; who sent you there?—I cannot tell who sent me there; I got a ticket from the fellow I went with.

1352. Has the fellow been paying there for you; who is the fellow?—I do not know his name.

1353. Did he go with you?—Yes.

1354. Has he been keeping you there all the time?—I never saw him before.

1355. Has he been with you all the time?—Yes.

1356. Watching you every day?—He has not been watching me.

1357. Has he paid the bill?—I do not know whether he has paid or has not.

1358. Did you live well?—Yes.

1359. Something better than ginger pop, I hope; who was with you besides; who was the party?—William Looby and him and me.

1360. And this fellow?—Yes.

1361. Is the fellow to be seen here?—No; he has been here to-day.

1362. Look round there; do you see him?—No; I have seen him outside to-day.

1363. What name does he go by; has he two names, like you?—He has four for what I know; we call him Bill.

1364. What is his other name?—I do not know.

1365. How long have you been at Morecambe?—Near hand a fortnight.

1366. Mr. Giffard.] I dare say none of the gentlemen on that side from Bradford knew where you were during that time?—No.

1367. Were you cautioned not to allow them to know?—Yes.

1368. And when were you brought back to Bradford?—I came back yesterday night.

Mr. Giffard.] This witness has also spoken about about the "Oak" inn. The following is the bill :

JOHN YOUNG, sworn; Examined by Mr. Giffard.

1370. ARE you a voter for the South Ward?—Yes.

1371. I believe you voted for Miall and Forster?—Yes.

1372. On the 9th of November last, did you, Patrick Dwyer, Looby, and Corcoran, meet Mr. Kitcheman at the "Fleece Arms"?—Yes.

1373. What time in the day?—Between three and four o'clock in the afternoon.

1374. Did you tell him that you wanted something?—Yes.

1375. What did you tell him that you wanted?—We told him that we wanted some money, and that we were all four voters.

1376. Just tell me exactly, as near as you remember, the words you used to him?—I said we wanted some money; we were all four voters; we could not go round and seek voters unless we had some money to spend upon them.

1377. What said he?—Mr. Kitcheman said he had nothing to do with money; he said, "I understand that Jerry Ryan does," and such like.

1378. Did he say anything about what you were to do after you had been to see Jerry Ryan?—No, he said nothing; he said we were to see him again if we did not see Jerry Ryan. We seed him in the evening after six o'clock, and Mr. Kitcheman were with him.

1379. Do you remember him saying anything to you about eyes being upon him, or anything of that sort?—Yes, he said there was eyes upon

John Arnold, Secretary.

Mr. Giffard.] We have called for the others, and I should put in here the "Friendly Inn," and the "Bricklayers' Arms" bills, but they are not among those handed to me, so I cannot do it. If my learned friends have got them, they have been omitted by mistake. I ask for them now.

Mr. Overend.] I believe we have refused to pay anything at those places; we have disallowed them.

Mr. Giffard.] You can produce the bill if you have not paid the money. I mean the one signed by the chairman of the committee. I will not ask your Lordship to stay for that, but will go on with the next witness.

him every place that he went, and he durst not ask us in to have a glass of beer nowhere.

1380. Mr. Baron Martin.] Did he give you anything at that time?—No, he gave us nothing.

1381. Mr. Giffard.] Did you afterwards see him again?—Yes.

1382. Was Ryan with him at that time?—Yes, at six o'clock in the evening he was with him.

1383. Did you follow him till you got opposite Heaton's shop, in Bolton-road?—Yes.

1384. Did you then tell him that you had been looking for Ryan all the afternoon and had not met with him until then?—Yes.

1385. Just tell me what Mr. Kitcheman said then?—We said we had been seeking for Jerry Ryan all the afternoon and we had not seen him; then Mr. Kitcheman said, "I have nothing at all to do with you, as I have told you before," he says, and he walked away from Jerry Ryan.

1386. What happened next?—We told Jerry Ryan we had been canvassing three weeks and we had got no money yet; he says, "I have not anything to do with you;" he said, "You do not belong to my committee."

1387. After he had said that, did he give you anything?—Not just then, he did not.

1388. Shortly after then?—Yes.

1389. What did he give you?—There was four of us served half a sovereign each.

J. Young.
 26 January
 1869.

1390. Mr. Baron Martin.] Who gave you this?—Jerry Ryan.

1391. Mr. Giffard.] The next day, I think, did you meet Ryan and Bowen in the back yard in Otley-road?—Yes.

1392. Do you remember hearing Ryan ask Bowen anything?—Yes, he met me and asked me was I then laking, and I said I was, and he put his hands in his pocket and told him to give me a two-shilling piece.

1393. Who spoke to the others to give you anything?—Jerry spoke to William Bowen to give us 2 s. a piece.

1394. Did Bowen do so?—Yes.

1395. That same day did you and Looby and Dwyer meet Ryan in Loom-street?—Yes, on the 10th of November he was there, and he served 2 s. 6 d. between us, Dwyer, Looby, and Young.

1396. Who gave you 2 s. 6 d.?—Jerry Ryan.

1397. Did you then go to the committee-room at the "Union Cross"?—Yes.

1398. How long did you stay there?—About 11 o'clock.

1399. What were you doing all that time to 11?—Drinking and smoking, all the pack of us.

1400. Did you pay anything?—No.

1401. Who ordered the drink and tobacco?—The chairman, Emanuel Teale.

1402. Were you afterwards at the "Bricklayers' Arms"?—Yes.

1403. Do you remember Jerry Ryan calling you into the back yard?—Yes.

1404. What did he do after he called you into the back yard?—He paid me a sovereign and 1 s.

1405. Did he tell you to send Looby to him?—Yes.

1406. And did you send Looby to him?—Yes, I did.

1407. On the nomination day did you do anything, or did you remain at home all day?—I was at home all day.

1408. On the polling day what did you do?—I voted for Forster and Miall.

1409. What else did you do?—I came home then.

1410. And did nothing else?—No.

1411. Where did you breakfast that morning?—At home.

1412. Did you ever canvass anybody?—Never a man in my life.

Cross-examined by Mr. Overend.

1413. But you told him that you were going to canvass somebody, and had canvassed for three weeks?—I was supposed to canvass, but I did not do so.

1414. You told him you had been canvassing for three weeks?—Yes.

1415. And you have had the money for it?—I had it for to vote as well, of course.

1416. But you told him that you had been canvassing?—Yes.

1417. You never did intend to canvass?—No.

1418. But you intended to get that money and cheat him?—Yes.

1419. And then vote against him?—Yes.

1420. I suppose you voted conscientiously for Forster and Miall on account of your principles?—Yes.

1421. Mr. Baron Martin.] Did you get anything for that?—I did not get a farthing.

1422. Mr. Overend.] Have you been to the sea side?—No.

1423. Morecambe is a pleasant place, I believe?—Yes, a very nice place.

1423*. Have you been there?—No.

1424. Have you asked for some little money to go there with?—No, I have asked Mr. Kitcheman.

1425. Mr. Kitcheman would not give it you?—He went to the solicitor to try and get 10 l. for me.

1426. But you never asked the other side?—Never for a farthing.

1427. But you thought you had not had enough, and you would like to have 10 l. more from Mr. Kitcheman?—Yes; 20 l. if I could get it.

1428. You have been rather in low water, have you not?—I do not understand that.

1429. You have been in poor circumstances, have you not?—I am poor now.

1430. Have you ever pledged any of your clothes?—Many a time.

1431. About the month of November did you get them out of pawn?—No.

1432. Were they in pawn?—No.

1433. You never got them out of pawn at all?—Yes, they have been in many a time, but I have got them out.

1434. What had you been doing for a livelihood at all during the time this canvassing was going on?—I had been looking out for work.

1435. How long were you engaged on behalf of this gentleman, as you said?—I was on from the 7th of November up to the 14th.

1436. You were only a week again?—That is all.

1437. How much did you get altogether?—Thirty-three shillings and sevenpence halfpenny.

1438. You got 33 s. 7½ d. for doing, with great propriety, nothing?—Yes.

1439. Did you not go to Mr. Kitcheman and tell him that you should like to go away if he would give you 10 l.?—Yes, I wanted a little more information, and I thought he had sent some of them away; William Looby and Dwyer.

1440. Did you not tell Mr. Kitcheman that they had been sent away by Mr. Miall's party, and they had left you out?—I told him I was certain Mr. Miall's party had sent them away, or Mr. Riplev's.

1441. Did you not tell him that Mr. Miall's party had sent off those other men, and had left you out?—I thought they had sent them away; or the others had sent them away; there were two parties.

1442. You knew nothing about it?—Not a ha'porth.

1443. Have you not written to Mr. Hargreaves?—Yes.

1444. Have you asked him to send you out?—No.

1445. Never?—No.

1446. What did you go to Mr. Hargreaves for?—To give my statement.

1447. Has he paid you for it?—No, never a halfpenny.

1448. Was that after the 10 l. had been refused you?—Yes; I had been before.

1449. Did you not say that Mr. Kitcheman refused to give you any money?—He would go to the attorney to try to get it for me.

1450. Did he not take you to Mr. Little, to take down your statement in writing?—But Mr. Little did not take it down in writing.

1451. Did he not take you there?—Mr Kitcheman took it down.

1452. Did

J. Young.
—
26 January
1869.

1452. Did Mr. Kitcheman, in Mr. Little's office, when he took you there, take down your statement?—I did not give it down there; it was in Mr. Kitcheman's house I gave it.

1453. Was not it then that you asked for the 10*l*.?—Yes, at Mr. Kitcheman's house.

1454. And you have never got it?—But he came to say he had got it for me.

1455. But you never got it?—No.

1456. You said you wanted it, but he never gave it to you?—I wanted some little more information; I thought Mr. Kitcheman had sent Looby away.

1457. But you wanted to go too?—I would not have went if I had got the money; I would have stayed here.

Re-examined by Mr. Giffard.

1458. You went to Mr. Kitcheman's house, as I understand, and made the statement?—Yes.

1459. And was it taken down in writing?—Yes; he asked me what did I vote for Mr. Forster for, and I said I thought he was the best man.

1460. What was said about 10*l*. at Mr. Kitcheman's?—I said, "There is Corcoran and me want to go away." Corcoran were poorly, and he told me to go and see Mr. Kitcheman, and see if he had sent Looby and Dwyer away, and to give my statement and get just a bit of information there; and I did so. Mr. Kitcheman asked me how much money Dwyer wanted, or Corcoran; and I told him I did not know what they wanted. I told him I wanted 10*l*.

1461. You wanted 10*l*., to do what?—To go to America; I said I would go that day if I had got it.

1462. What did Mr. Kitcheman say to you then?—Mr. Kitcheman wrote it down, and then took it before these here solicitors.

1463. Did he take you to these solicitors?—Yes.

1464. What happened there?—He told me he would not give me a penny.

1465. And did you tell him all you have told us to-day?—Yes.

1466. It was taken down in writing?—Yes.

[The Witness withdrew.]

JAMES CORCORAN, sworn; Examined by Mr. Metcalfe.

1467. Do you live at 14, Carver-court, Bradford?—Yes.

1468. You are a voter, are you not?—Yes.

1469. And did you vote for Mr. Ripley on the last occasion?—Yes.

1470. Did you see Mr. Kitcheman?—Yes.

1471. Who was with you when you first saw him?—Patrick Dwyer, William Looby, and John Young.

1472. What did he say to you?—He told us we were to go to Jeremiah Ryan.

1473. About what time was this; how long before the election?—A fortnight, happen.

1474. Did he say why you were to go to Ryan?—He said that he did such things.

1475. Did what things?—That he gave money.

1476. Was anything said about money; did you ask Mr. Kitcheman for money?—I went to him and asked him for a bit to get some allowance with; and he said that he dare not do such things since Coyne's letter.

1477. You were to go to Ryan; he said so, did he?—Yes.

1478. Did you go to Ryan?—Yes.

1479. When you first saw Ryan, was Mr. Kitcheman with him?—Yes, he was.

1480. What took place when you got to Ryan?—It was on the Bolton-road; Ryan gave us, all four of us, half a sovereign each.

1481. Did he give you anything else; did he stand anything to drink?—No, not then he did not.

1482. Did he afterwards?—Yes; I met him up at Anthony—

1483. Did you meet him in New-street?—Yes; a week after he gave Dwyer three sovereigns, and Dwyer gave me 20*s*. of it.

1484. What did you get that for?—I cannot tell; they never told me what they did give it me for yet.

1485. Was anything said about voting?—No, voting was never mentioned.

28.

name down, or was it written for you?—I cannot write my name. J. Corcoran.

1487. Did anybody write it for you, do you remember?—There was a man wrote it for me; but I could not write.

1488. Where was that?—It was in an office close upon the Exchange.

1489. Close to the vaults, do you mean?—Yes; "Hargreaves," I think they call it.

1490. You do not know who the man was that wrote your name for you?—Yes; that is the man there (pointing to a person in the court).

1491. You are speaking of when you saw the man after; but before the election I mean?—No, there was never no man put my name down before the election; not on the committee.

1492. You got that 30*s*. and 10*s*. Then where did you go; did you go on the committee?—I was on the committee when I did get it.

1493. Where did your committee sit?—At William Hopkinson's, at the "Union Cross."

1494. Did they supply you with beer or anything?—They gave us a little refreshment at nights.

1495. Only one night?—Yes; several times.

1496. Every night was it?—Every night that I went.

1497. Was there refreshments for everybody who liked to go?—No, I cannot say that there was; only for those that was on the committee.

1498. You did not pay anything for it, did you?—No, I paid nothing for it.

1499. Where did you breakfast the morning before you plumped for Mr. Ripley?—At the "Union Cross."

1500. What time did you vote?—Happen half past nine in the morning I was there ready to vote as soon as the doors was opened.

1501. Did you go up from breakfast in order to vote?—Yes, I did.

1502. Then you had delayed a little before you voted; what sort of a breakfast did you get?—They called it "muffin."

1503. Had you not meat?—Yes, there was meat;
E

J. Corcoran. meat; it was cut in two, and meat put in between.

26 January 1869. 1504. Did you get beer or coffee, or what?—I got some beer.

1505. The others had coffee, or what they liked, I suppose?—I see nobody there getting any coffee.

1506. Did you say anything to Mr. Kitcheman at the "Union Cross" about canvassers?—There was me and Dwyer went to Mr. Kitcheman, and we said that we canvassers would not get paid if we were voters. He told us to go on; he would see us all right.

1507. Did you ask him to give you anything at all?—No, Mr. Kitcheman never gave anything at all.

1508. Did Ryan?—Yes, I received something after that from Ryan.

1509. Mr. Baron Martin.] What did you get from Ryan after that?—I got all this from Ryan after. I had received nothing at that time.

1510. What did you get altogether?—I got 2*l*. altogether, and there was 3*s*.; Dwyer got 3*s*., and he gave me 1*s*. 6*d*. of it.

1511. Mr. Giffard.] There was 30*s*. then given you by Ryan after you had said this to Mr. Kitcheman about canvassers?—Yes, there was.

1512. You said, "I understood canvassers would not be paid;" is that what you mean you said to Mr. Kitcheman?—We went to Mr. Kitcheman and told him that we heard that canvassers would not be paid, and he said that we were to go on, he would see us all right.

1513. Was there supper also at the "Union Cross" on the 16th?—Yes, there was supper at night, sometimes.

1514. On the night of the nomination, Monday night?—Yes.

1515. What sort of a supper did they give you?—There was some bread and meat.

1516. Hot or cold, or what?—It was not so hot, nor it was not so cold.

Cross-examined by Mr. Overend.

1517. As I understand you, what you have been talking about is a conversation that you had with Ryan, in company with those other friends of yours; who were they?—William Looby, Patrick Dwyer, and John Young.

1518. And you first saw Mr. Kitcheman?—Yes.

1519. And you were all together?—Yes.

1520. And you remained in the same company standing together during the whole conversation?

—Yes, we were all in one company when Mr. Kitcheman was talking to us.

1521. So that what one heard the others would hear?—Yes, for anything that I know.

1522. And all could have heard what passed?—Yes, they should do; but I cannot say whether they did or not.

1523. You say that voting never was mentioned?—No; voting was never mentioned to me.

1524. You say that you were told that canvassers did not, or would not, get paid for voting?—Me and Dwyer heard that canvassers would not be paid if they were voters. We went and asked Mr. Kitcheman, and he said we were to go on; he would see us all right.

1525. Did they not tell you that if you were canvassers and were paid you could not vote?—No.

1526. Did not they tell you that if they paid you anything you could not vote?—They never told me nothing of the sort.

1527. Was not that what you heard, that if you were paid anything as canvassers you could not vote?—What I heard was this, I heard that no canvassers that were voters would get paid.

1528. Not only that you would not get anything, but that if you were paid anything you could not vote?—No, I heard nothing of the sort.

1529. Who spoke to you about not getting anything if you voted?—I could not say.

1530. Was not it Ryan?—No, he never said anything about it to me.

1531. Can you read?—No, I cannot.

1532. Did not you hear him read at your committee this, "No elector who within six months before or during any election for any county or borough shall have been retained, hired, or employed for all or any other purpose of the election for reward, by or on behalf of any candidate at such election as agent, canvasser, clerk, messenger, or in other like employment, shall be entitled to vote;" did they not read that to you?—No, I never heard it.

1533. Nothing to that effect?—I never heard it.

1534. Were you not told that the canvassers, if they were hired or retained to canvass, were liable to be punished if they voted?—No; we never heard a word of that, else I would not have had nothing to do with it.

1535. No you know whether Dwyer had a canvass book or not?—Do, I cannot say whether he had or not, I am sure

[The Witness withdrew.]

JOHN HOARE, sworn; Examined by Mr. Mellor.

J. Hoare. 1536. ARE you a Painter, living at 15 Palladium Buildings?—Yes.

1537. And are you a voter for the East Ward?—Yes.

1538. On the 7th November, did you meet Mr. Kitcheman?—Yes.

1539. Near Harris's Old Bank?—Yes.

1540. Had you known him before?—Yes, I had known him before.

1541. When you met him, what did he say to you?—He came over to me, and shook hands with me; he was in company with another gentleman. There was two of Mr. Ripley's canvassers canvassed me the first thing in the morning, and asked me if I would vote for Ripley.

1542. What did you say the first time he saw you?—I said I would not. "Then," said he, "I will ask you another time if you will vote for Mr. Ripley;" and I said, "I will not." "Well," he said, "if I can put a few pounds in your way you will be all the better; you have a lot of little children, the same as myself." He said, "You can please yourself who you will for vote for when the day comes, if you will give us your name name to put down in the canvass book." "Well," I said, "if that be the case, you can put my name on; but," says I, "I shall not vote for him."

1543. Did this take place in the morning?—Yes. I was in bed at the time when they came in. Then I got up and dressed myself, and got my breakfast, and took a walk up town; and I met Mr. Kitcheman outside Harris's Old Bank committee-room, and he came and shook hands with me. He was in company with another gentleman; and he says, "What are you going to do?" "Well," I says, "there have been two of your canvassers in this morning, and wished me to join the committee." He spoke in favour of Mr. Ripley for a good bit, and told me to go and join the Irish committee. "You will be all right," he said; "you know what I mean. I cannot give you no money; but if you go and join the committee you will be all right." He pointed with his hand, and left me; and I went into the committee-room.

1544. Did you go from there to the "Friendly Inn"?—I went up to the "Friendly Inn."

1545. Who was the chairman at the "Friendly Inn"?—Patrick Darcy.

1546. Did you go out with Darcy?—Yes, he asked me to go and canvass with him that afternoon. I told him I did not like to, as I knew the neighbours were all for Miall.

1547. How long were you out with him?—About an hour altogether.

1548. What did you do then?—We never got no one to vote.

1549. Did you go back to the "Friendly Inn"?—Yes.

1550. Had you anything to eat and drink at the "Friendly Inn"?—No, only drink on that day.

1551. Did you pay anything for the drink?—No.

1552. Did you afterwards go to the "Oak Inn"?—Yes.

1553. While you were there did Jeremiah Ryan come in?—There was a good many of us assembled there first, and there was a deal of beer allowed.

1554. Did you pay at any time for it?—No.

1555. Who ordered the beer?—I do not know who ordered it; there was 19 or 20 of us there; the room was so small that we went upstairs into a larger room; both beer and tobacco came up.

1556. Did everybody there have beer and tobacco?—Yes; then Patrick Darcy, the chairman, threw up the chairmanship that night, which caused a deal of confusion.

1557. When did Ryan come in?—He came in in the evening, some time between 9 and 10, and Mr. Kitcheman.

1558. Had you been sitting there drinking from the time you went back?—Yes; up to 11 a.m.; the other parties, too.

1559. Did Ryan give you anything?—Yes; he gave me a sovereign.

1560. Where did he give it you?—He gave it me outside the room on the lobby; I did not expect anything; he brought me outside and put one of his hands round my neck and talked to me a bit; he said "You must work for Ripley and vote for him," and he slipped this into my hand; I said, "What is this for?" and he said "You must vote for Mr. Ripley," and I says, "All right."

28.

1561. Did he say any more at that time?—No; I left him, and I sent another man to him and he gave him a sovereign.

1562. Who was the other man?—Brian Connolly.

1563. Was Patrick Ryan there?—Yes; there was happen 20, they were all expecting money, waiting for it.

1564. Did Patrick Ryan get any money?—Yes, a sovereign.

1565. Did you see it?—No; he came out and told me so.

1566. You saw the sovereign in his hands?—Yes; he came out and showed it me in his hands.

1567. Mr. Baron Martin.] Where did he show it?—In the committee-room.

1568. Mr. Mellon.] Was that Patrick Ryan of Sun-street?—Yes.

1569. You said that James Corcoran was there?—No, not James but Daniel Corcoran.

1570. Where does Daniel Corcoran live?—In Sun-street then.

1571. Did you see him with any money?—No; I did not see him, but he came and said he got money.

1572. Had he anything in his hand?—No, I did not see him with anything in his hand.

1573. Did you see Ryan give anything to the landlord?—He asked for the bill for the evening, and the landlord brought up a note.

1574. What was the amount of it, do you know?—It was 19s. 10d. or 19s. 2d., I am not sure; but it was one or the other.

1575. Did he pay it?—I do not know; he did not that night; he said he would see it all right.

1576. Did you see Ryan give him any money?—No.

1577. On the Monday morning following did you meet Ryan in the Bolton-road?—No; he sent for me to the house, and I went down and met him on the Bolton-road; he spoke to me and told me he would set me on day and night, and he gave me 6s., in three 2s.-pieces for expenses for to go and work for Mr. Ripley.

1578. On the 10th of November did you meet Mr. John Berwick?—Yes.

1579. Who is Mr. John Berwick?—I think he has been an agent of Mr. Ripley's; he is a Scotchman.

1580. Do you know if he was on any of his committees?—I think he belonged to the central committee; but I am not sure.

1581. Did he ever give you anything?—He gave me 5s. in the committee-room, and Patrick Darcy was with me, and I gave him 2s. 6d. of it.

1582. What room was that?—In Harris's Old Bank.

1583. That is the central committee-room is it?—Yes.

1584. What part of the central committee was it; the lower or the upper room?—The lower room.

1585. When you had the money in the lower room, did you go into the upper room?—That was after I came down from the upper room.

1586. Then, did you go into the upper room before?—No; I was never up before that day.

1587. Did you go into the upper room that day?—Yes.

1588. Whom did you see there?—I saw Mr. Ripley, Mr. Semon, Mr. Archibald Neill, Mr. Armitage, and Mr. Berwick.

1589. Mr. Berwick was the gentleman who had given you 5s.?—Yes.

1590. Did

J. Hoare.
1869.

1590. Did you speak to them?—They were speaking together, and me and Mr. Darcy stood on one side; Ryan was speaking to them, and then I was introduced over to them; I produced a canvass book that was given to me and let them look at it; and they said we was doing good work, and we were to go and do our best, and they would see us all right when the election was over.

1591. The next day, Wednesday, did you meet Mr. Berwick again in Blake's vaults?—Yes.

1592. Did he give you anything more?—Yes; 2s. 6d.; Mr. Kitcheman was there also, and he was speaking to him; it was on the Thursday, and Mr. Bowen told him not to go to the Irish meeting; but we were all to go.

1593. The same day that you met Jerry Ryan?—Yes; I met him nearly every morning.

1594. Did he give you anything?—He gave money to Patrick Darcy and me one day to get our dinners, and paid for refreshments at Mr. Blake's vaults every morning, either whisky or wine, whichever we had a mind to drink.

1595. On the Thursday did you meet Jerry Ryan in front of the Exchange?—Yes.

1596. Did he give you anything on Thursday?—He gave me nothing, only Patrick Darcy.

1597. How long before the election was this Thursday?—The Thursday before the election. There was a large Irish meeting at St. George's Hall the same night.

1598. Did you get any more money that night from anybody?—I got a shilling from Mr. Edward Dobson, to distribute tickets to Mr. Ripley's voters to go into the hall.

1599. On the Saturday before the election, the 14th of November, did Ryan give you anything?—Yes he gave me 2 l. in gold.

1600. Mr. Baron Martin.] What did he give it you for?—I do not know what he gave it me for except for my vote.

1601. Mr. Mellor.] Where did he give it you?—In Mr. Blake's vaults under the New Exchange; there were several others waiting besides me.

1602. Where did he take you to?—To the cellar next to where they sell the liquors underneath.

1603. Did he give you money in the room or did he take you anywhere?—He give it me where he stood, near the water-closet. He took a man named Lawrence and gave him money in the water-closet, and when he came out he gave me 2 l.

1604. On the same evening did you meet Ryan again?—Yes.

1605. Did he give you anything that evening?—I had seen him in the Old Bank, and he brought me out and paid for my dinner. First he gave me 8 s. for another man who was not a voter, and that was all the money he had. Then he took me into a cookshop and paid for my dinner, he changed a 5 l. note.

1606. Mr. Baron Martin.] How much did you get altogether?—I got 3 l. in gold, and the other was in refreshments, half-crowns, shillings and so on.

1607. Mr. Mellor.] What did he do with the change out of the 5 l. note?—He gave me 3 l. 10 s. out of it to give to the men on the Irish committee that were not voters, but non-voters.

1608. Were you in the habit of going to the "Friendly Inn"?—Yes.

1609. How often?—Nearly every night when I was on.

1610. What went on at the "Friendly Inn"?—Plenty of beer and tobacco was going on, on that and every night. On one occasion we had a leg of mutton cooked and eat it.

1611. Did you ever pay for it?—No. The Saturday morning before the election there was a lump of beef ordered to be cooked in there for the voters by Patrick Darcy.

1612. That is the chairman, I think?—Yes.

Mr. Giffard.] I might as well ask my friends whether they have got that bill now; I mean this one that was missing?

Mr. Price.] It was not returned because it was repudiated.

1613. Mr. Mellor (to the Witness).] Did you see anybody else pay?—No, I did not.

1614. Has Mr. Berwick said anything to you about either the "Friendly Inn" or any other?—No, only I was recommended to him as being a man he thought would do a deal of work.

1615. Did you see Mr. Berwick at all at the "Friendly Inn"?—Yes.

1616. More than once?—Yes, I had seen him order a gallon of ale; on the 14th, Darcy took the chairmanship again. There was a lot of gentlemen, Dr. Smith and several other gentlemen. The meat was not eaten that day, it was cooked for Saturday; it was not eaten on account of the election.

1617. On the Friday before the election were you at the "Bricklayers' Arms"?—Yes.

1618. What was going on there?—Mr. Tidswell was the chairman, and he ordered in, I think it was, 2 s. worth, and some bread and cheese.

1619. Who was the chairman there?—Mr. Tidswell.

1620. Anything else; did Mr. Tidswell order anything?—He ordered that on the Friday, and a ham and bacon was cooking at the same time.

1621. Any tobacco?—Yes, plenty, and a box of cigars.

1622. Did you pay for any of them?—No, I paid for nothing.

1623. Did you see anybody pay for it?—No.

1624. How many people were there altogether, do you suppose?—Happen six or seven.

1625. Did you have a share in this?—Patrick Darcy and me had a feed off it on Saturday morning the first thing, and some drink, and some cigars; and then as we came down they ordered this lump of beef to be cooked at the other beer-shop and sent in. The landlord was standing at the door, and he told him to roast some beef for the men.

1626. Did you hear Tidswell say anything about roasting beef?—Tidswell did not then.

1627. Did you hear anybody say anything to the landlord about payment?—He said he was ordered to open his rooms; he was authorised to have a room open as a committee-room at the "Bricklayers' Arms," and if he did he would be paid, and it would be all right when the election was over.

Mr. Giffard.] I have called once or twice for the bill at the "Friendly Inn;" does my learned friend's client say he cannot find it?

Mr. Price.] He is looking for it, he—

Mr. Little.] I have no doubt I have got it in my hand.

Witness.] There were two committees at the "Friendly Inn," one upstairs, and the other downstairs.

1628. Mr.

1628. Mr. Price.] One Irish, and the other English?—Yes.

Mr. Giffard.] The Act of Parliament says, that all vouchers are to be sent in.

Mr. Overend.] I know that; but if a man makes a charge which we say is illegal and we will not pay him sixpence, we do not hand it in; that is one in the category where we say we are not liable for anything.

The bill was handed to Mr. Giffard.

Mr. Giffard.] "Friendly Inn" committee-rooms, Mr. Ripley's Committee: To Alfred Dewhurst; expenses of first committee, from Friday the 13th of November to the 17th of November."

Mr. Overend.] How do you make this evidence?

Mr. Baron Martin.] As coming from you, I suppose.

Mr. Overend.] We say this: that he is entitled to have the accounts, but he is not entitled to have a claim which has been made, but which has been resisted.

Mr. Baron Martin.] He can put it in, and you can give any explanation of it afterwards; any document coming from you he has a right to use as evidence.

Mr. Price.] Certainly it is not binding against us; it is an account which has been sent in, but because it is sent in, and received by Mr. Little in course of post or by messenger, it does not become evidence against us because a man makes a claim.

Mr. Baron Martin.] I apprehend Mr. Giffard is entitled to call for any document in your possession, and upon that document being produced it is evidence in the cause; it may be that you have evidence which shows that it is worthless, but prima facie it is evidence as a document coming out of your possession and produced by you.

Mr. Price.] Strictly speaking, my learned friend ought to have shown, by calling the landlord, that such a claim has been sent in to us, and trace it into our possession.

Mr. Baron Martin.] Mr. Giffard is doing precisely what he might do at Nisi Prius; he may call for the document, and upon your producing it he may use it.

Mr. Price.] Your Lordship does not take that as any evidence that we have authorised this to be done.

Mr. Baron Martin.] I have taken it as a document out of your possession; it may be strong evidence, or it may be utterly worthless, but what I am to look at now is simply to see whether it is evidence in this cause.

Mr. Price.] We have never recognised it in this way.

Mr. Avery.] This is headed, "East Ward 'Friendly Inn' committee-rooms." The first amount is, "Total, 29*l*. 17*s*. 9*d*." Then there is a second amount, "Total, 37*l*. 4*s*. 7*d*." Nothing brought over. This first amount is "Mr. Ripley's committee: expense of Irish committee from Friday the 13th of November to the 17th of November, Patrick Darcey, Secretary. To refreshments, 17*l*. 16*s*. 6*d*. Expense of English committee for the same dates. To refreshments, 12*l*. 1*s*. 3*d*.; total, 29*l*. 17*s*. 9*d*., Joseph Haley, Secretary." The other account is—

There is no receipt and no signature to the second account. It is Patrick Darcey's account for the Irish committee. Mr. Haley, secretary for the English committee.

Cross-examined by Mr. Price.

1629. What did you say your name was?—John Hoare.

1630. Have you another name?—No, not that I am aware of.

1631. Are you ever called Murphy?—Yes, but that is not my name.

1632. Your friends call you so?—Sometimes.

1633. They like the name better?—Perhaps they do.

1634. As I understand, you told Mr. Kitchen at once that you should vote for Forster and Miall?—Yes.

1635. And you stuck to it and did vote for them?—Yes.

1636. And he knew that perfectly well, and you never disguised it from him, how you were going to vote?—No.

1637. Had he ever asked you whether you would canvass?—No, he never asked me.

1638. You were going to vote against his candidate; what were you to do?—I suppose he thought I would vote for Mr. Ripley. Patrick Darcey, the chairman, belonged to the committee, and another man came. Symons came and asked me in the morning if I would vote for Ripley, and I said "No, I shall never vote for him;" I promised my vote a month before that. "Well," he says, "but will you give us your name, or canvass with us if I can throw a few pounds in your way; you have a lot of children like myself." I said, "If that is all, you can put my name in your book, but I shall not vote."

1639. What you were to do for your money was that you were to canvass?—Yes; I went with him for about an hour.

1640. Did you show Mr. Ripley a book, and tell him you had canvassed?—Yes, I did show him a book, but I never set no names down upon it;

J. Hoare.

it; the book was filled up before I got it by other parties.

1641. You shewed it to Mr. Ripley, and told him that was the result of your canvass?—I told him that was the canvass book.

1642. Did you tell him that it was your canvass book?—Yes, I told him that was the book that was handed to me by Darcey.

1643. Did you tell him it was your canvass book?—Yes, I told him it was my canvass book.

1644. Did you give him to understand that that was the result of your canvass for him?—I did not canvass.

1645. Did you intend him to believe that you had got this return for him?—No, I did not.

1646. What did you show it him for?—Mr. Semon asked me for it to look at it.

1647. What did Mr. Semon ask; did he ask you to show the result of your canvass?—No, he did not.

1648. What did he ask for?—He did not ask at all; it was Mr. Semon.

1649. Did Mr. Semon ask for the result of your canvass?—No, he did not; he said we were to go on as we were doing very well.

1650. Why did you show him the book?—Because he required to see it.

1651. What did he say?—Mr. Semon said, "Let us look at your canvass book."

1652. Then you pulled it out, but you knew that you had done nothing?—Yes.

1653. And you knew that you were getting this large amount of Mr. Ripley's money, and you knew you were going to vote dead against him, and you left him under the impression that that was what you had done for him?—Yes; and the chairman knew it as well.

1654. Did you tell Mr. Ryan that you would go into the West Ward and open an Irish committee?—I was asked to go.

1655. Did you tell him you would?—No, never; I did not wish to do it; it was not safe for me to go into it.

1656. Why not?—For fear I might be killed.

1657. Who by?—The Irish party.

1658. You were for Miall and Forster; what were they going to kill you for?—If I went to canvass for Mr. Ripley I am sure I would be killed.

1659. And you never did; that was the reason you did not?—No, I did not; I was asked to go, but Darcey would not let me go; he said I was to stop where I was with a man called Hanigan.

1660. It was stated that nobody dare go and canvass for Mr. Ripley in the West Ward without the fear of being killed?—It was not safe.

1661. Why was not it safe to canvass for Mr. Ripley?—Because the Irish party were all canvassed a month before the time of the election.

1662. Who by?—By the canvassers of Mr. Miall and Mr. Forster.

1663. They had been canvassing there for a month before?—Yes.

1664. Were the public-houses opened?—No, not that I am aware of; I never was up amongst them.

1665. You dare not go?—No, I did not.

1666. You were a Miall and Forster man; you might have gone before you were asked to canvass for Mr. Ripley?—I never went up to that quarter; it was only a week before the election that the committee-room was opened; one of the men left our committee, the Irish committee at the "Friendly Inn," for the other one; and two of them, a man named Hannigan and a man called Symons, went up and opened one at the "Shamrock."

1667. How was it that the Irish had been got up into this fierce state against Mr. Ripley?—It was their principle, I suppose, to vote for Miall and Forster.

1668. When the Irish are friends to one party, do they kill those on the other side?—I said it was their principle.

1669. The principle of Miall and Forster was to have their enemies killed, was it?—No, they were the best men for their country.

1670. And their principle was to have the others killed, do you say?—There generally is a row at election times.

1671. About Mr. Berwick; did not you complain to Mr. Berwick that you had not had enough for the work you had done as a canvasser?—He spoke to us after we came down stairs.

1672. Did you not tell Mr. Berwick, and complain to him when he gave you this money, that you had not had as much as you ought to have for the work you had done as a canvasser?—No, we did not.

1673. Mr. Berwick is here, and I caution you; he then gave you this 5s.?—He gave me 5s., and I gave Patrick Darcey 2s. 6d. out of it.

1674. What did he give you that for?—I suppose to get what we had a mind to.

1675. Did he not say anything?—No, he slipped it into my hand; he came over and spoke to Darcey.

1676. What did he say?—He said nothing, only he seemed pleased, and he slipped it into my hand this way (describing the same).

1677. Do you mean to tell my lord that that is what happened; that Mr. Berwick said nothing to you, but seemed pleased with the look of you and gave you 5s.?—He slapped 5s. into my hand; two half-crowns.

1678. What was there about you that could possibly please anyone with your appearance?—I suppose he thought we were doing good work for Mr. Ripley.

1679. Did you not tell him you had been canvassing for Mr. Ripley?—Yes; about an hour.

1680. You told him you had been canvassing for Mr. Ripley, and had not been paid enough?—No, I never told him nothing of the sort; I never asked no money from him.

1681. Did you say to Mr. Berwick that you had been canvassing how long?—I did not tell him nothing of the sort.

1682. Did you tell him that you had been canvassing for Mr. Ripley?—Yes.

1683. And you had not been canvassing for Mr. Ripley?—Not that day.

1684. Not at all?—No.

1685. Did you tell Mr. Kitcheman that you would go into the west ward, because you had more influence there?—No, never.

1686. Never?—I did not; I had very little talk with Mr. Kitcheman.

1687. Where had you any influence?—About the neighbourhood where I live, in the east ward.

1688. Have you been away to Morecambe?—No, I have not; I have been at home with my wife and children.

[The Witness withdrew.]

Mr. MICHAEL MORAN, sworn; Examined by Mr. Gifford.

Mr.
M. Moran.
—
26 January
1869.

1689. You are not a voter, I believe?—I am not a voter.

1690. In consequence of a letter you received, did you come over on the 4th November last to Bradford?—No.

1691. What day did you come over to Bradford?—I came over on the 8th.

1692. Did you first go to Mr. Mark Dawson's place?—No.

1693. Where did you go first?—I went first to see Mr. Kitcheman.

1694. And did you see him?—Yes.

1695. Did you tell Mr. Kitcheman what you came about?—Yes.

1696. What did you tell him?—I told him that as I resided in Bradford some years ago, I thought I would have influence with some of the electors, and asked him to set me on; he asked me whether I knew the people, and what part of the borough I lived in; whether I resided here, and so forth; after answering the questions, he told me I might go and canvass.

1697. Was anything said to you about forming a committee?—Not that day; afterwards there was.

1698. When afterwards was anything said to you about forming a committee?—I believe it was on the 10th or the 11th.

1699. Did you do so?—In conjunction with another person I did.

1700. What was that other person's name?—Charles Pickard.

1701. Of how many did the committee consist?—Perhaps, 18 or 20.

1702. You gave a statement to Mr. Mills, did you not?—Yes.

1703. When did you give the statement to Mr. Mills?—I believe it was last Wednesday.

1704. Just remember how many the committee consisted of?—Sometimes there were more, and sometimes less.

1705. What was the maximum number?—Perhaps 20.

1706. Did you tell Mr. Mills that it was 35 or 40?—

Mr. Overend.] That is not evidence; it is not a hostile witness.

Mr. Baron Martin.] The same thing occurred at Norwich. If you call a witness, you must call him and deal with him, as if it was at nisi prius.

Mr. Giffard.] Yes, but in order to lay a foundation for asking to be allowed to treat him in a different manner to ordinary evidence in the cause, I tender his evidence for your Lordship to consider whether he is a hostile witness.

Mr. Baron Martin.] When I see that the man is an adverse witness, I will deal with him accordingly, but you must not ask him any such questions at all.

Mr. Giffard.] I thought it was one means of convincing your Lordship that he was an adverse witness.

Mr. Baron Martin.] I don't see anything adverse in the man yet.

1707. Mr. Giffard (to the Witness).] Is that your handwriting (handing a document to the Witness)?—Yes.

1708. Mr. Baron Martin.] How many did the committee consist of?—About 20, but there were sometimes more and sometimes less; sometimes there was only half that number.

1709. Did you call every man that came into the room a committee-man?—Those who came there, who came there and professed themselves favourable to Mr. Ripley, I called a committee man if he was a voter.

1710. Mr. Giffard.] Did you receive any instructions from Mr. Kitcheman with reference to what was to be done, and what was to be ordered at the committee-rooms?—Yes.

1711. What instructions did you receive?—There was to be refreshments, reasonable refreshments.

1712. Do you mean that he used the word "reasonable refreshments"?—I will not say that he used the word "reasonable refreshments;" that was the meaning of it—moderate refreshments.

1713. How many days was the committee-room open altogether?—Seven or eight.

1714. How soon did you open it; you did not begin until the 10th or 11th?—I think it was open on the 10th or 11th of November and was closed the day of the election and the day after.

1715. Do you know how much he ordered altogether during that time (moderate and reasonable refreshments, you know); but before we come to that, let me ask you was the "British Oak" the name of the house?—Yes, that was the name of the house.

1716. Who took the room?—I believe the room was taken before I went down.

1717. Did you know from Mr. Kitcheman whether he had taken it or not?—He said he had taken it, but he wished me to go down there.

1718. What is the name of the landlord?—James Smithies.

1719. I called for the account at the "British Oak;" but while that is being looked for, I will ask you did you see Mr. Whitehouse in the course of your superintendence of this committee-room?—Yes, many times.

1720. Did he give you any instructions about what refreshments were to be supplied?—Yes.

1721. What did he say?—He said I was to take care and let them have plenty.

1722. Do you remember the word "stingy" being used at all?—He said something to that effect that there was no occasion to be stingy; that the accounts would be paid.

Mr. Price handed the bill to Mr. Giffard.

1723 Mr. Giffard (to the Witness).] Did you see Mr. Ripley and his son at that public-house?—Yes.

1724. And Mr. Mark Dawson, the chairman of the ward, was he there too?—I believe he was.

1725. Did you see him?—Mr. Ripley was accompanied by two gentlemen.

1726. Did you see Mr. Mark Dawson, the chairman of that ward?—I did not know him personally.

1727. Did you hear a person called by the name of Mr. Mark Dawson?—I remember one gentleman address another as Mr. Dawson.

1728. Did you see that person at the committee-room?—He was standing close to the door.

1729. Just tell me, is that your writing (handing a bill to the Witness)?—Some of it; it is my signature.

Mr. 1730. The signature to the different items, refreshments and employment?—The writing itself is the writing of the secretary, and my signature is to it.

M. Moran.
26 January
1869.

1731. I take it, that you certified it as correct, as the quantity of refreshment supplied?—Yes.

Mr. Baron Martin.] What is the amount?
Mr. Giffard.] £. 24. 15. 6.; the bill is as follows:—

Michael Moran.

1732. Mr. Giffard (to the Witness).] On the nomination day was there any beef there?—Yes.

1733. How much?—30 lbs. or 40 lbs.

1734. Was there a ham?—Yes, a whole ham.

1735. On the polling day were there any breakfasts?—Yes.

1736. How many?—There were messengers connected with the committee-room; there were some eight or ten of them on the watch during the night.

1737. First answer my question; about how many breakfasts?—I think there were only three or four of them.

1738. Do you mean three or four sitting down at a table that was replenished each time, or what?—There were only three or four breakfasts on that morning.

1739. Do you mean only three or four persons who breakfasted there, or what?—Only three or four persons who breakfasted, not including the runners and persons who were watching that night.

1740. How many people altogether did you see breakfast there?—I should say there would be, perhaps, 12

1741. Was that 12 renewed from time to time, so that different persons sat down?—No.

1742. There were only 12 altogether you mean?—About 12 altogether.

Cross-examined by Mr. Overend.

1743. Who is the landlord of this "British Oak"?—James Smithies.

1744. His name does not appear on this paper of ours?—I do not know about that.

1745. Whose handwriting is this?—Mr. Pickard's signature.

1746. And all further signatures which are given here, your signatures?—Yes.

1747. What business had you to give your signatures?—I had to sign for everything.

1748. What had you to do with it?—The landlord asked me for the signatures.

1749. Therefore you signed at the request of the landlord?—Yes.

1750. Not by any authorised person by Mr. Ripley, or anything of that sort?—No.

1751. This was done at the request of the landlord?—Yes.

1752. You are not aware that Mr. Ripley disclaims his liability to pay 6 d. of it?—I am not aware.

1753. Your friend the landlord has not told you that?—He told me he had not been paid.

1754. Do not you know that Mr. Smithies does not expect to get paid?—He has not told me that.

1755. Not that they had refused to pay him?—He said he had not got paid; he did not say they had refused to pay him.

1756. Who wrote those words "refreshments" and so on?—Mr. Pickard.

1757. What is he?—A shopkeeper, and he acted as secretary.

1758. Who made him secretary?—As far as I know it was Mr. Kitcheman.

1759. Do you know anything about it?—Mr. Kitcheman told me that I was to go to the "British Oak," and I was to be chairman of the committee there, and that Mr. Pickard was to be my secretary.

1760. When did he tell you that?—I think it would be on the 10th.

1761. What are you by business?—A land surveyor.

1762. Where do you live?—At Huddersfield.

1763. What were you doing at Bradford?—I came over to take part in the election.

1764. Did you get paid?—No.

1765. Did you do it out of love for the cause?—Yes.

1766. So you canvassed did you?—Yes, I canvassed.

1767. Did you canvass amongst the Irish or the English?—The Irish chiefly.

1768. You are not an Irishman are you?—Yes I am.

1769. Are you the person who applied for some money through Mr. Jones?—A friend of mine in Huddersfield applied to Mr. Terry for me; telling him I wanted something for my services at the Bradford election. He said he would send a letter to Mr. Terry.

1770. Mr. Jones wrote to you?—Yes; Mr. Jones the solicitor wrote.

1771. Mr. Terry replied that if you would only keep quiet, he would do his best for you?—Quite so.

1772. Is this your handwriting (handing a letter to the Witness)?—Yes.

1773. Mr. Baron Martin.] Is it Frederick Jones the old man, or the young man?—Frederick Jones the younger.

1774. Is the old man alive?—Yes.

1775. Mr. Overend.] Is that your handwriting?—Yes.

1776. Did you write this? "Mr. Kitcheman—Sir, My funds are now exhausted, and this is to request a little aid to day; I have spent in the cause one way or another since last Sunday about 30*s.*; therefore I hope you will give me something to go on with, for I do not live at home the same as all the others, Yours, &c., &c.; Michel Moran;" is that your writing?—Yes.

1777. You wanted to be repaid the expenses that you yourself had been put to?—Yes.

1778. Did

1778. Did you write this letter (handing another letter to the Witness)?—Yes, that is my writing.

1779. When was the first letter written?—The Friday before the election.

1780. How long had you been in the town at that time?—From the Sunday.

1781. You had been working from the Sunday till the Friday?—Yes.

1782. And living at your own costs and charges in the town?—Not altogether.

1783. How not altogether?—I came from home and I had some refreshments with me, and I had something that was included in the bill.

1784. Besides that you had 30s. which you had incurred as expenses?—Yes; that was my own money.

1785. When you say expenses incurred, what do you mean; travelling about and going in cabs?—No; there were no cabs employed by me at all.

1786. It was in provisions, lodgings, and so on?—Yes.

1787. Did you afterwards hear of Coyne having written a letter to the paper?—Yes.

1788. Had you at that time made an application for the payment of money for your services?—I had made application to Mr. Kitcheman, and on the letter of Michael Coyne being published wrote to him, saying I would not except anything.

1789. Is this your letter; “Mr. Kitcheman—Sir, In consequence of what has appeared this morning in the paper, relative to the charge the fellow Coyne brings against you, I withdraw the request I made by letter left at your warehouse this morning, Yours truly, Michael Moran;” when was this letter written?—I do not recollect exactly; I dare say about Friday or Saturday; about the same date as the former letter.

1790. Then you had first applied for 30s.; then you subsequently sent a letter on to the warehouse for money; then you saw this letter of Coyne’s in the newspaper, and you withdrew your claim?—Yes.

1791. Then the persons to whom those provisions were supplied that we have heard about, which you certified for as you say, were persons who were engaged for Mr. Ripley, or canvassing for him; messengers, and so on?—Yes, they were.

1792. Were there voters and non-voters also?—There were voters there, and non-voters also.

1793. And equally paid alike?—No; there was no voters paid.

1794. I mean refreshments were given equally every morning; every person who was on the canvass had a right to come in and get refreshment?—Not every one.

1795. Such as you ordered, I mean?—Voters as a rule did not get any.

1796. It was non-voters?—It was the non-voters and the canvassers.

1797. And in your judgment was it mere ordinary refreshment that a man would take if he came into a public-house to spend the evening?—There was nothing excessive at all; I saw nobody drunk at all.

1798. No drunkenness and nothing excessive?—I only saw one drunken man, and it was not at our committee-room that he got the drink.

1799. During the whole election, you mean?—I am only referring to the room where I was chairman.

1800. Was there much drunkenness in the town that week or not?—Yes, there was a good deal.

1801. Both sides?—I dare say it was both sides to a certain extent; the friends of both parties, I dare say, they were.

1802. There was a great deal of excitement, and they came together in public-houses and talked and drank?—Yes.

1803. At their own cost?—I do not know that.

1804. Now about the breakfast; upon the morning of the election were those the persons who had been out all night, trying to look after the voters, that had the breakfast?—Yes, they had been out all night, trying to look after the voters, and I ordered coffee for them; there were seven or eight who came in to have breakfast.

1805. Now about the nomination-day; what was it about the beef; there was some beef and ham; who were those for?—Messengers running from the central committee-room to the others; it was for them.

1806. And you say there were a committee of 18 altogether during the time you were there?—The total is, how much?—About 17 l. for refreshments, and the remainder for the use of rooms.

1807. Seventeen pounds in a week; that would be 1 l. a head, according to what your committee was; but did the committee get the whole of it, or were there runners besides?—There were runners.

1808. What was the extent of the runners that came to your committee-room?—Sometimes, I should say, there were a dozen there.

1809. And they were in the habit of coming day by day, were they?—Nightly and daily too.

1810. Therefore, adding a dozen to 20, which were the committee, you have got 32?—Sometimes there were 50 in the place.

1811. All engaged in Mr. Ripley’s behalf, were they?—Yes.

1812. Those were the persons to whom the drink and other things were given?—Yes, that was reasonable refreshment.

Re-examined by Mr. Giffard.

1813. Have you been paid, or have they agreed to pay, your entire claim?—No, they have not.

1814. Have you not received any promise of payment of the entire claim?—I have not received any promise otherwise, further than in the letter which has been read.

1815. Is it the fact, that some person acting on the part of Mr. Ripley has promised to pay you the whole of your claim, or not?—No person has promised me.

1816. Do just look at that again (handing a letter to Witness).

Mr. Baron Martin.] What is that letter?

Mr. Giffard.] I ask him, my Lord, to look at it with reference to what I before put to him. I do not ask him any question now, after what my Lord has said; but as one mode of testing whether this gentleman is adverse or not, I ask him to look at that letter, which he says is his handwriting.

1817. Mr. Overend (to the Witness).] Is that your handwriting?—Yes.

Mr. Overend.] That has only reference to the the letter of Mr. Terry; it is only an application.

Mr. Giffard.] He says he has received a promise.

Mr. Overend.] Mr. Terry said he would try to get him something.

Mr. Giffard.] I say it is a promise.

Mr. Baron Martin.] I do not think there is anything in that letter.

Mr. Giffard.] Your Lordship has heard his last answer, that he has received no agreement or promise to receive the amount in full.

1818. (To the Witness.)] Do you adhere to that answer?—I have received no promise to have it paid in full from Mr. Ripley, or Mr. Terry, or anybody else.

1819. You say that you found Mr. Pickard as your secretary when you went there. Just look at that bill, and see whether you received that bill from the central committee (handing a handbill to the Witness)?—I received it by a messenger; from what committee I know not.

1820. It was displayed in the committee-room, I suppose?—Yes; he left half a dozen of them on the table.

1821. It was there, I suppose, when Mr. Ripley came and Mr. Kitcheman came?—Yes, there were three or four of them hung round the room.

1822. You told my learned friend that voters generally were not permitted to partake of the refreshment?—They were not there; there were a few persons came in that were favourable to Mr. Ripley; they said they would not have anything to drink, and there were a number of persons came that got drink.

1823. Were there any precautions taken by you, as chairman, to prevent voters getting food or drink?—Precaution was taken by me to prevent other persons coming into the room. I instituted a password or two.

1824. What was that pass-word?—“Two pence.”

1825. Then, anybody who came to the door and said “Two-pence,” he was allowed to go in.—Yes.

1826. And then anybody who once got in might help himself if he liked?—Yes.

[The Witness withdrew.]

Mr. Giffard.] Will your Lordship allow me to get the returns from the mayor?

EDWARD WEST, Esquire, made his solemn Affirmation; Examined by Mr. Giffard.

E. West,
Esq.

1827. You are the Mayor of Bradford; are those the returns which you have received?—Yes, they are both here. This is the return of Messrs. Forster's and Miall's expenses, and this is the return of Mr. Henry William Ripley's expenses.

1828. Will you give me the amount of Messrs. Forster and Miall's expenses?—£. 3,397. 14. 4.

1829. Have you got to that a detailed statement of expenditure?—Yes; a detailed statement of expenditure, with about 1,000 vouchers.

1830. Comprehending how many folios in that detailed statement?—Fifty-four.

1831. Will you show me Mr. Ripley's return on that one sheet of paper?—£. 7,211. 10. 7. on one sheet of paper.

1832. And no vouchers at all, I think?—No vouchers.

The returns were handed in.

[The Witness withdrew.]

Adjourned to To-morrow,
at Ten o'clock.

Wednesday, 27th January 1869.

JOHN HALEY	}	- - - - -	Petitioners,
CHARLES HASTINGS
ANGUS HOLDEN
TITUS SALT, Jun.
AND
HENRY WILLIAM RIPLEY	- - - - -	Respondent.

Mr. Price stated, that he wished Michael Coyne to be re-called, in order that he might ask him whether he did not state to Mr. Ripley that he was a Fenian, and represent himself as having an influence amongst the Fenians, and whether he did not sign a certain document which it was necessary to sign before he became a member of the committee, previously to making any alteration in it.

1869.

Mr. Baron Martin stated, that the latter question might be put, but not any question relating to Fenianism.

Michael Coyne was re-called, but did not answer.

RICHARD DUFFY, sworn; Examined by Mr. Giffard.

1833. WERE you a member of the Irish committee that used to meet at the "Friendly" inn?—Yes.

1834. Do you know a man of the name of Jeremiah Ryan?—Yes; I know him well.

1835. Did you get anything from him at any time before the election?—Yes.

1836. What did you get from him?—I got a sovereign from him, and he sent a sovereign by another man to give me; he gave me half-a-sovereign.

1837. What did you first get yourself?—He gave me half-a-sovereign first, at the Exchange-buildings.

1838. At that time, was any more money paid in your presence and sight, besides the half-sovereign to you?—He paid another man, but I did not see him give him it.

1839. How do you know he paid it?—He told me.

1840. Jeremiah Ryan?—No; John Brereton told me.

1841. You yourself received half-a-sovereign; did you see John Brereton there at the same time?—Yes; we both went together.

1842. Did you see anything with Brereton afterwards?—Yes.

1843. What did you see with him?—I seed a few half-crowns.

1844. Do you remember the Wednesday before the election?—Yes.

1845. Did you see Jeremiah Ryan that night?—No; I cannot say that I did.

1846. Were you at the bar of the "Wild Boar"?—Yes; I was.

1847. Who was chairman at the "Wild Boar"?—In the bar, I think, Mr. Thomas Wood.

1848. What was going on at the "Wild Boar"?—There was talking about this election affair.

1849. Was there any eating and drinking?—Yes; there was something to drink.

1850. From what time to what time did you see that?—It was about half-past eight when I went in.

28.

1851. Did you pay anything for it?—For the first glass, I did.

R Duffy.

1852. After that, did you pay anything?—No.

1853. In what ward was it?—It was in the North Ward on the left hand side going up.

1854. Did you see anybody else pay?—No, sir, I did not.

1855. Who was there; tell me the names of some of the persons who were there?—I seed Mr. Terry, the solicitor, just coming out as I was going in, and there was Mr. Thomas Wood there, and a good many more.

1856. Did you see any people whom you knew as voters?—Yes; there was James Passable.

1857. Was a man of the name of Barker there?—Yes; Benjamin Barker.

1858. Was Timothy Hanorth?—Yes.

1859. Do you remember any other persons who were there?—Yes; I remember other persons being there, but I did not exactly know them by sight.

1860. Do you remember a short time after the election receiving some money from a man of the name of Hoare?—That was before the election.

1861. Tell me what it was?—He gave me a sovereign.

1862. He was the man who was called yesterday as a witness?—I suppose so.

1863. About how long before the election, was this?—A week.

1864. Mr. Baron Martin.] How much did you get altogether?—I got 3 l. 10 s. altogether.

Mr. Giffard stated, that he wished now to have the accounts for refreshments at the "Wild Boar" inn, and that if Mr. Little would kindly put them all in, he and his learned friends could find them for themselves. That one account commencing on October 19th, was for refreshments for committee-men, messengers, and canvassers; on the 22nd, 23rd, 26th, and 27th of October,

R. Duffy.
27 January
1869.

November 2nd, 3rd, 4th, 5th, 7th, 9th, &c., the amount being 15 l. 15 s. 4 d.

Mr. Price stated, that he should ask his Lordship only to take down that the treating from the 8th to the 17th November amounted only to 4 l. 7 s. 7 d.

Mr. Giffard stated, that he wanted all the accounts applicable to the "Wild Boar."

Mr. Baron Martin stated, that they had better be handed to Mr. Giffard at once.

1865. Mr. Giffard.] You went to the "Friendly" inn regularly, I believe?—Yes.

1866. Used there to be anything to eat and drink there?—Yes; there was something to drink going on, and something to eat besides; they sat down to it, the same as they were going to devour a donkey.

1867. Did you pay anything?—No, I did not.

1868. Did you see anybody else pay anything?—Yes; I saw some gentleman pay.

1869. Who were they?—Mr. Berwick; I saw some gentlemen pay once.

1870. How many people used to be there?—Some 30 some nights, and some nights as high as 40.

1871. You say that as many as 30, or as many as 40, from time to time were there?—Yes.

1872. What was the largest number that you have ever seen there of an evening?—I should say about 16.

1873. How used the drink to go on?—It went on while the committee was retired.

1874. For an hour or two hours?—Two hours or three hours.

1875. Was that the sort of thing that used to be done there?—Yes.

1876. From what time to what time did you attend?—I attended there every day.

1877. For how long before the election?—For many a month before the election; it was the house I generally go to.

1878. I mean, as a member of the Irish committee?—A month.

Mr. Baron Martin.] How many Irish votes were there?

Mr. Price.] About 1,500, my Lord, I am told.

Mr. Giffard.] In that ward?

Mr. Price.] No; altogether in the town.

Mr. Giffard.] As I am told, it is 2,300.

Cross-examined by Mr. Price.

1879. You are an Irishman?—Yes.

1880. Which is the house which has the honour of your patronage?—The "Friendly" inn.

1881. Are you a voter?—No.

1882. Do you know how many of your countrymen have the privilege of voting?—Many a hundred.

1883. Many a thousand?—Many a hundred.

1884. Ten thousand?—I do not know; between 400 and 500 had voted.

1885. What committee was it that you were upon; at which house; the "Friendly" inn or the "Wild Boar"?—The "Friendly" inn.

1886. You were on that committee?—Yes.

1887. And you were employed to canvass among your countrymen?—Yes.

1888. Was it from the 8th to the 17th November; who employed you first?—It was Mr. John Kilfoyne that proposed me to be one of the members.

1889. Was he a member of the Irish committee at this house?—Yes; Mr. Kitcheman was there the same night.

1890. He proposed you to be a member of this committee, and to be employed as a canvasser?—Yes.

1891. I dare say you valued the employment at that time?—Yes, I did.

1892. How long was that before the election?—I was laid up three months before the election.

1893. When were you first employed, when you say that Kilfoyne proposed you?—About a month before the election I was made a member; before the Irish committee was formed.

1894. Those men whom you used to meet at the committee at night, I suppose were men who, like you, were employed in the same way?—Some of them; not all.

1895. Some would be committee-men only and others would be canvassers as well as committee-men?—Yes.

1896. You got altogether for the month's employment 2 l. 10 s.?—Yes.

Re-examined by Mr. Giffard.

1897. Did you canvass anybody?—Yes; I canvassed a few.

1898. How long were you employed canvassing altogether; I mean by that, how long did you, in fact, canvass?—

1899. Mr. Baron Martin.] You canvassed a few?—Yes.

1900. Mr. Giffard.] How many do you think you canvassed?—I think about 20.

1901. You say that there were some other men like yourself canvassers at this Irish committee; were there voters among them?—They were mixed, voters and non-voters.

SAMUEL AINSWORTH, sworn; Examined by Mr. Metcalfe.

Samuel Ainsworth.

1902. Do you live at 105, North Wing?—Yes.

1903. Are you a voter?—I am not a voter.

1904. Were you the secretary of the committee which was held at the "Union Cross" inn?—Yes, I was.

1905. Who appointed you?—Mr. Kitcheman was there when the committee was formed. I was proposed and seconded, and ordered for it by the committee.

1906. Who was the chairman?—Emanuel Teall.

1907. Was Kitcheman present, when he was appointed, also?—Yes.

1908. When did you begin?—On the 1st of October the committee was formed.

1909. And did it continue to sit until the election was over?—Yes.

1910. When it was first formed, how often did you sit in a week?—Once a week.

1911. When did you increase the number of sittings?—On the 3rd November.

1912. How often did you then sit?—Every night.

1913. And

Samuel
Ainsworth.
—
27 January
1869.

1913. And day too; or what time did the sittings commence?—The men who were appointed to canvass were ordered to assemble every day.

1914. So that there was some portion of the committee sitting the whole day?—From 10 in morning till 11 at night.

1915. And sometimes later, I suppose; on the nomination day did they sit later than that?—They only sat till 11 o'clock at night; it is a beerhouse.

1916. Had you seen besides Kitcheman, Mr. Singleton, Mr. Kershaw, and Mr. Hick?—Yes.

1917. Did any of those give you directions as to what you were to do?—The order was brought to us on the 3rd November, when we were ordered to meet every night; they were to come in to audit the canvass books, and Mr. Kershaw, Mr. Hick, and Mr. Singleton were to appoint us every night in order to audit the canvass books.

1918. Was anything said about beer or refreshments?—We had plenty of beer from the first opening, and tobacco.

1919. Where you sat every night you had plenty of beer, did you?—Yes; and food.

1920. What sort of food did you get?—Beef and bread.

1921. And the refreshments were beer and tobacco?—Yes.

1922. How did it come in?—When one can was empty they ordered another.

1923. Did it come in in half-gallon cans?—Yes; on each table.

1924. Who ordered them?—There were four of them when it was ordered.

1925. Kitcheman, Mr. Singleton, Mr. Hick, and Mr. Kershaw?—Yes.

1926. To whom did they give the order?—To the landlord.

1927. What was the order given?—Some of the men were asking for something in place of having so much beer, and they went out and spoke to the landlord, and about eight o'clock at night some refreshment came in.

1928. How much have you seen in the course of one evening; how many half-gallons in those cans?—There were sometimes more and sometimes less.

1929. How many have you seen?—Between 20 and 30.

1930. Half-gallons?—Yes.

1931. In the course of the evening?—Yes.

1932. Was there always beef and bread?—Yes; after we began to meet every night.

1933. Did you get any mutton?—I do not remember mutton.

1934. Was anything said to you about keeping a check upon the refreshments which were ordered?—Yes.

1935. Did you do that?—Yes, I did.

1936. Who told you to do that?—I believe Mr. Kitcheman; but they were all together when I was ordered to do that.

1937. Did you furnish a duplicate to the landlord?—I did.

1938. Did you continue to check the accounts of the refreshments till the close of the election?—Yes.

1939. Did you subsequently make out an account with the landlord?—I did.

1940. Did you sign it?—I did.

1941. Did you hear on any occasion the landlord say anything to Kitcheman about the refreshments; about the quantities?—He complained that he thought that there was a heavy bill going on.

1942. Who did?—Mr. Hopkinson; he said that he thought that there was a heavy bill going on, and Mr. Kitcheman made answer and said that they must not stop it now, as it was too near the time.

1943. Did he say anything else; did he say why?—No, sir; I did not hear him say why.

1944. Was anything said about keeping together?—Yes; he said that the men must be kept together; we must keep the committee together.

1945. On the nomination day, when did the drinking commence?—It commenced before we went down to the hustings.

1946. Early in the morning?—About nine o'clock.

1947. Did it continue all day, or when did it close?—It continued all day.

1948. On the polling day; when did it commence?—At five o'clock in the morning.

1949. Did people come in to breakfast?—Yes.

1950. Did they go from the breakfast to the poll?—Yes.

1951. Was that included by you in the account?—The amount spent on that day was included.

1952. Were some of them voters, and some non-voters?—Yes.

1953. Upon each of those days that you have been speaking of?—Yes.

Cross-examined by Mr. Price.

1954. How do you know that some of those were voters on the polling day?—They were all neighbours. I had got the burgess list there.

1955. Were they members of the committee?—Yes.

1956. Who had been working there all the time?—Yes; they had been canvassing some of them.

1957. I suppose they went about during the day canvassing and getting up the voters?—Yes; on the polling day.

1958. They came there, I suppose, to breakfast in the morning; and then those who were voters polled, and those who were non-voters went to look for the voters.

1959. When the voters had polled, they went also to look up the others?—Yes.

1960. During the time that you were there, were you a paid man?—Yes; I received some pay.

1961. How much did you get; you were not a voter?—I canvassed 10 weeks, and I got 3*l*. 10*s*.

1962. And you canvassed?—I did.

1963. Did you make any application for permission to have refreshments at any time?—Yes; there was an application made.

1964. To Kitcheman?—Yes.

1965. And up to that time, until you had made those applications, had you had any refreshments allowed?—There was ale and tobacco allowed from the first night that we opened, and that was the 1st of October.

1966. Afterwards you applied, when the work began to be heavier, for permission to have a little food?—Yes.

1967. Did Kitcheman ever give you leave to have it?—There was somebody ordered it, and it came in.

Samuel Ainsworth. 1968. You applied to Kitcheman?—Yes, I applied for one; there were others that applied as well.
 27 January 1869. 1969. That is your letter, is it not (handing a letter to the Witness)?—Yes.

Mr. Baron Martin.] What is the date of it?

Mr. Price.] The 9th of November 1868. "Sir, it is the desire of the canvassers of this committee that they may have a little food during the day, as many of them have not the means of subsistence."

1970. (To the Witness.) Did you ever get any answer to that from Kitcheman, allowing you to have food?—I do not know.

1971. Did you get any answer to that?—No, not for the daily allowance of food; I never got any answer.

1972. Is that your's (handing another letter to the Witness)?—Yes.

1973. Do you remember the date of that?—I do not.

1974. Was that written after the other one?—I cannot say.

1975. This is it: "Our committee are assembled here, and they are anxious for some refreshment, and the landlord, Mr. Hopkinson, wishes a note from you. I am, dear sir, yours truly, Ainsworth, Secretary." Did you get any answer to that?—No; I got no answer to any letter.

1976. I understand that all you ever got in the way of information as to refreshments from Mr. Kitcheman was, that he ordered you to keep a check?—Yes.

1977. You were the secretary of this place, were you?—Yes.

1978. Do you know that a great part of the landlord's account has been disallowed?—I do not. I never heard anything about it since the checks were given into the landlord.

1979. You say you made out a bill with the landlord?—I did.

1980. How large was the majority when it was in the strongest force?—We have had as many as 46 there.

1981. Mr. Baron Martin.] Was every voter that came there called a committee-man?—They were all on the committee, the voters that were there.

1982. Mr. Price.] Were they put down on the list?—Yes.

1983. There was a number of non-voters also on the committee?—Yes.

1984. During the time that you were there, were refreshments supplied to anybody but the committee clerks and messengers?—Not that I am aware of.

1985. Kitcheman said that you must keep the committee together?—Yes.

1986. And a great number of those men were men who were literally without the means of subsistence?—Plenty of them had lost their work.

1987. You were out of work, were you not?—Yes.

1989. And a non-voter?—Yes.

1989. Have you been to Mr. Kitcheman with respect to this inquiry?—Mr. Kitcheman sent for me on Sunday evening.

Re-examined by Mr. Giffard.

1990. Did you go to him?—Yes, I did.

1991. Did anything pass between you?—He sent to me at Swift's public-house, the "Fox and Hounds," and when I went in he told me to sit down. I sat down there; I at last had a glass of whisky, and then he asked me to make out a list of the men who were reported to have taken bribes, and I did so.

1992. When was this?—It was on a Sunday evening.

1993. What time was it when this occurred?—It would be three weeks or a month since, now.

1994. And you did so?—Yes.

1995. And gave it to him (Kitcheman)?—Yes.

1996. Mr. Baron Martin.] Of the men who were said to have taken bribes?—Yes.

1997. Mr. Giffard.] What more passed between you?—He asked me to go to his house, and I did so. I had some more whisky there, and I got that drunk that a man had to take me home.

1998. Before that what passed between you and Kitcheman?—After I got fresh I cannot tell.

1999. But before you got fresh, what took place?—He gave me the list of the names, and told me to visit those men and to see how they stood.

2000. Just use his words if you can; is that what he said, to see "how they stood"?—Yes; to see how they stood towards us.

2001. Was that all?—Yes; and I went.

2002. I think you say that he sent for you again?—This man came for me; I went, and he asked me what progress I had made, and I told him.

2003. What did you tell him?—I told him that most of them were against.

2004. Mr. Baron Martin.] Hostile to you?—Yes.

2005. Mr. Giffard.] Did you have any whisky then?—No; I had two glasses of ale.

2006. Was that all that passed?—Yes; I have never seen him since till I saw him yesterday.

2007. Did you give him the list?—I gave him a list. I cannot understand which list you mean.

2008. Did you give him more than one list?—Mr. Kitcheman has got it; I left it with him.

2009. Can you tell me how many people you visited in consequence of his directions?—Eight or ten the first time.

2010. Did you visit any more afterwards?—I could only see two the next day until evening.

[The Witness withdrew.]

JOHN BRAY, sworn; Examined by Mr. Mellor.

John Bray. 2011. Do you live at No. 58, Cross Sun-street, in Bradford?—Yes.

2012. About three weeks before the election, did you join the committee at the "Friendly Inn"?—Yes.

2013. Who invited you to join that committee?—Patrick Darcy.

2014. What was he?—Chairman.

2015. Mr. Baron Martin.] Are you a voter?—No.

2016. Mr.

2016. Mr. Mellor.] About the 7th November, did you go to the "Oak" inn?—Yes.

2017. What did you go for?—There was a meeting of the committee there that night.

2018. What time did you get to the "Oak" inn?—About nine o'clock at night.

2019. Who were there at that time?—There was the Irish committee that night.

2020. The committee did generally meet at the "Oak" inn?—No; they met there that night.

2021. Did Kitcheman come in?—Yes.

2022. What time did he come in about?—About 10 o'clock.

2023. Did any body come in with him?—Jerry Ryan came in with him and Moses Quigley.

2024. After the meeting, did anybody give you anything?—Yes; I received a sovereign.

2025. Who from?—From Jerry Ryan.

2026. In the course of the evening did you see the landlord bring anything to Jerry Ryan; any account?—Yes; he brought an account of the refreshments that came in during that night.

2027. What was the amount of it, do you remember?—Either 19s. 10d. or 19s. 2d.; I cannot say which.

2028. How many people had been there that night?—About 20.

2029. Had there been drinking from the time you went in?—Yes; from the time I went in till shutting up time.

2030. When the landlord brought this account to Ryan, what did he say?—He told him that he would see to it, and it would be all right.

2031. Did Ryan take the paper?—Yes.

2032. Did he sign it?—Yes.

2033. About the 14th of November, did you meet Ryan near the Exchange?—Yes.

2034. Did he give you any thing there; any money?—Yes.

2035. What did he give you?—£. 3.

2036. Mr. Baron Martin.] What is this Ryan; what is his business?—He is a labouring man.

2037. Mr. Mellor.] Did he tell you what you were to do with it?—Yes; I was to divide it between another man and myself.

2038. What was the other man's name?—William Hogan.

2039. What did you give Hogan?—30s.

2040. That night did you go to a meeting of the committee at the "Friendly" inn?—Yes.

2041. Who was in the chair; was Darcy there?—Yes; Darcy was there.

2042. What time did you get there, about what time?—Seven o'clock.

2043. Did Berwick come in the course of the evening?—Yes, he did.

2044. Who came in with him?—I cannot say who came with him.

2045. When Mr. Berwick came in, how many people were there there?—They would be up to 18 or 19 men.

2046. What were they doing?—They were all sitting in the room; they were expecting some refreshments.

2047. Were they drinking?—Yes, they were drinking.

2048. Did Mr. Berwick say anything when he came in?—Yes; he asked us "How we were enjoying ourselves."

28.

2050. Was that before Mr. Berwick came in?—Yes; it would be before Berwick came in.

2051. You say that Mr. Berwick asked you how you were enjoying yourselves?—Yes.

2052. Did you say anything?—They said that they wanted some more refreshments.

2053. When they said that, what did he say?—He said he would see about it.

2054. What did he do when he said that; did he order any?—No.

2055. After he came in, was any ordered?—Yes, there was some ordered.

2056. Who ordered it?—I think it would be Mr. John Kilfoyne, the vice chairman.

2057. How much did he order?—Half a gallon of ale.

2058. What sort of glasses had you before Berwick came in?—It was tot glasses, and then it came to gill glasses.

2059. Are tot glasses smaller glasses than gills?—Yes.

2060. After he came in you had bigger glasses?—Yes, gill glasses.

2061. How long did he stay?—He went away and came back a second time.

2062. How long did you stay there drinking?—While 11 o'clock.

2063. Were the others drinking all the time?—Yes, all the time.

2064. Did you pay for any of it yourself?—No.

2065. After the election, did you see Darcy?—Yes; I saw him many times after the election.

2066. Were there any voters present on the evening we have been referring to?—Yes.

2067. Can you tell me their names?—Yes.

2068. Patrick Nolan, was he there?—Yes.

2069. Corcoran and Patrick Simmons?—Yes.

2070. James Foley and Patrick Rowney?—Yes.

2071. And Edward Day?—Yes.

2072. Richard Conroy?—Yes, they were all there.

2073. And they were all voters?—Yes.

2074. After the election, did you go to Mr. Terry?—Yes.

2075. Did he give you anything?—Yes, I got some money from him.

2076. How much?—It would be 12 l. altogether for seven of us.

Cross-examined by Mr. Price.

2077. Is that the whole that you got for your services?—I did not get it for my own services.

2078. You got 3 l. before?—Yes.

2079. Half of it was for you and the other half for Hogan?—Yes.

2080. How long had you been working before you got that 3 l.?—A fortnight.

2081. Night and day?—Yes.

2082. I believe you are not a voter?—No.

2083. Had Hogan been also canvassing?—I believe he was.

2084. And you were paid by Ryan for canvassing, were you not?—Yes; I was paid for work.

2085. When Mr. Berwick came, I think you say that he refused to order any refreshments; are you sure that the refreshments that were ordered later in the evening were ordered whilst he was present, or after he had gone out?—

John Bray.

27 January
1869.

John Bray.
1869.

There was half a gallon of ale ordered when he came in; he went away and came back, and then more refreshments were ordered while he was there during the night.

2086. Who ordered them?—Mr. Berwick.

2087. You said just now that he refused to order them?—No, I did not.

2088. Do you mean to say that he did order any?—He went away and came back again, and then ordered refreshments.

2089. Will you swear that there was any drink on the table when Berwick went in?—There was drink on the table when Berwick came in.

2090. Have you been to Mr. Hargreaves' office?—Yes.

2091. How many times?—Once.

2092. Have you been to a beerhouse kept by a man of the name of Richard Delaney; about a fortnight ago were you there?—Yes.

2093. And a number of other witnesses who have given evidence here, or are to give evidence?—None with me.

2094. You were there alone, were you?—No, I was not there alone.

2095. Who was with you, any of the witnesses?—None of the witnesses that gave evidence here.

2096. Any of those that are to give evidence?—I do not know.

2097. What did you go there for?—I went on business.

2098. What business?—Nothing of my own.

2099. What was it, then?—I went to two joiners that were doing work there.

2100. Had you plenty to eat and drink?—No.

2101. Did you have no drink?—No drink.

2102. What did you see of the joiners there, at Delaney's?—They went to be paid for their work, and I went with them.

2103. What were the names of those two joiners, and what was the work they had been doing?—They were putting a door up, and trying to make this house into a beerhouse, and a partition.

2104. And you went with them to see them do it?—I went to see them get paid for their wages for their work, that was all.

2105. What did you go to Mr. Hargreaves for?—I went to give him information.

2106. Were you sent for?—No, I was not sent for.

2107. You volunteered?—Yes.

2108. Did you hear that there was any money going about?—No.

2109. What made you volunteer; were you doing any work at this time?—Yes.

2110. What were you doing?—I was labouring with masons.

2111. When was the last work you did?—The last stroke of work was done on the Monday.

2112. Before that were you out of work?—It was a wet day; I was taking that day on account of being wet.

2113. Did you hear that Mr. Hargreaves was getting up this case?—Yes.

2114. Did you hear that there was money going about?—No.

2115. You swear that?—Yes.

2116. You heard that he was getting up the evidence?—Yes.

2117. Had you seen any advertisements in the papers asking for people to give evidence; advertising for people to come?—I think there was an advertisement in the ward; but I am not sure what it amounted to.

2118. Was it not that which made you go to Mr. Hargreaves?—No.

2119. Who told you that he was taking evidence?—I heard it myself; I heard men talking of it among themselves.

2120. What men?—Many men.

2121. Did Lamb and Coyne tell you that Ryan had got 100*l.*?—No, I was never speaking to them.

2122. Did Lamb or Bowen tell you that Ryan had got 100*l.*?—I was taken to Lamb, but he never told me what Ryan received; I have never seen Bowen.

2123. Did Lamb tell you?—He did not.

2124. What did he tell you about Ryan?—Nothing; only he heard that he was going away, and that he had given his evidence; that was all.

2125. Do you swear that he did not tell you that he had money?—Yes.

2126. Did you ask Mr. Hargreaves for any money?—None at all.

2127. Were you out of work at that time?—I was lagging that day.

2128. Were you out of work altogether?—No.

2129. Did you ask Mr. Arnold for any money?—No.

2130. Did you see him there?—Yes.

2131. Did you see any of the other witnesses?—I saw no one there.

[The Witness withdrew.]

WILLIAM STEWART, sworn; Examined by Mr. Metcalfe.

W. Stewart.

2132. ARE you a porter to the Midland Railway?—Yes.

2133. Were you at any time shortly before the election lodging at the "Friendly" inn?—Yes.

2134. When the election first began to be agitated here, was there a room taken at the "Friendly" inn by anybody?—Yes.

2135. Which party?—Mr. Myall and Mr. Forster, I believe.

2136. And there were papers in the window, I believe?—Yes.

2137. Some time after that did Mr. Kitcheman make his appearance at the "Friendly" inn?—Yes.

2138. What did he say or do?—He wished to to engage a room.

2139. Who was the landlord?—Alfred Dewhurst.

2140. Did he say anything about the price?—He asked him how much he would charge him for a room for the occasion that evening; and the landlord said 4*s.*, I think.

2141. Did Mr. Kitcheman take it?—He gave him 4*s.*, I believe.

2142. What took place then?—The landlord brought two gallons of beer in.

2143. Was anybody with Kitcheman?—One on each table.

2144. But

W. Stewart.

27 January
1869.

2144. But did anybody come in with Kitcheman?—No, he was there by himself.

2145. But he did not want two gallons for himself?—I mean with the men that were in the room; connected together in the room.

2146. There were men in the room, were there?—Yes.

2147. When did those men come in?—They had been there before.

2148. Was that the room that was used by Mr. Forster's and Mr. Miall's party?—No, this was in the tap-room.

2149. Then Kitcheman took it, and he ordered in two gallons of beer, and at last they were brought in; what took place then?—He spoke and discussed the qualities of Mr. Ripley.

2150. Was that Kitcheman?—Yes; at great length.

2151. I suppose he spoke of all his good qualities?—Yes; I did not mean any bad qualities.

2152. Was that said publicly to the men that were drinking there?—Yes.

2153. Then, what took place?—He wished them to favour him with their votes; those who had any.

2154. Did he ask them to hold up their hands, those that were in favour of Mr. Ripley?—Yes.

2155. That was after the beer was consumed, I suppose?—No; during the time it was being consumed.

2156. How long did this go on?—Until 11 o'clock.

2157. Did Kitcheman go at 11 o'clock?—

2158. Mr. Baron Martin.] When did it begin; at what hour?—I daresay about nine.

2159. From 9 to 11?—Yes.

2160. Mr. Metcalfe.] What became of Kitcheman?—He went down to the "Wharfe" hotel, after that.

2161. Did you go with him?—I followed; I did not go with him particularly.

2162. What took place there?—He spoke here again.

2163. Was there beer there, too?—Yes.

2164. Was that speaking in favour of Mr. Ripley?—Yes.

2165. Were they all again invited to hold up their hands?—Not that I know then.

2166. Was there beer there?—Yes.

2167. At either of those places did anyone say for the beer?—I did not see any.

2168. You did not pay, I suppose, for what you had?—I did not.

2169. While at the "Wharf" hotel, was there a person of the name of Clarke speaking in favour of Mr. Forster and Mr. Miall?—Yes.

2170. While that was going on, did Kitcheman say anything?—Yes; he called them into the best room.

2171. Who did he call in?—He called in Clarke, and I heard him say something, "as he would buy him over if it cost him 2*l*," or something of that amount.

2172. That was the man who was speaking in favour of Mr. Forster and Mr. Miall?—Yes; or some words to that effect.

2173. Was that before he took him into the best room or after?—It was before; at the bar.

2174. In what way was the beer brought in; in glasses?—I did not go into the best room.

2175. In the other room, where the drinking was going on, how was it brought in?—If I remember right, it was in half-gallon measures.

2176. Did you leave Kitcheman there?—Yes; he went into the best room with Clarke.

2177. How did you go on at the "Wharf" hotel?—I do not know. I cannot say any more after that. It was after 11.

2178. Did you make out the accounts for the landlord of the "Friendly" inn?—I remember making out one or two accounts for him.

2179. You assisted him in making them out?—Yes.

2180. Which were charged to the committee?—Yes.

2181. Shortly after that visit, you say that the "Friendly" inn was for Mr. Forster and Mr. Miall, and you have told us of Kitcheman, whose committee-room was there; which was it for; Mr. Forster and Mr. Miall, or Mr. Ripley?—Mr. Forster and Mr. Miall, previously to that.

2182. Shortly after that, which was it; was it Mr. Ripley after that?—It did not continue; it became Mr. Ripley's after that; some time after that.

2183. After that visit of Kitcheman?—Not immediately after the visit of Kitcheman, but shortly after that.

2184. Then, were Mr. Ripley's bills, instead of Mr. Forster's and Mr. Miall's bills, put on the house?—Yes; and the others were taken down.

2185. Did Kitcheman frequently come there, after that?—Yes.

2186. Did you see people in the committee-room, a number of people?—Yes.

2187. From time to time?—Yes.

2188. Did you see what went on there?—I saw drinking and sometimes eating go on.

2189. As to the accounts that you made out for the landlord; were they for the eating and drinking that you say was going on?—There was nothing else in the house.

2190. You made out the accounts for the landlord; were they for that eating and drinking?—Yes; for those refreshments.

2191. Did that continue till the election?—Yes.

2192. Who paid the bill, do you know?—I cannot say. As far as that goes, I saw one bill paid.

2193. Who paid it?—Marshall Hambly.

2194. What bill was that; how long was it before the election?—I made it out on the Sunday morning; the Sunday morning but one previous to the election.

2195. That would be the 6th?—Yes, about the 6th or 7th. I do not remember the date rightly.

2196. Did that pay for all up to that time, or was it merely for one day that Marshall Hambly paid?—As far as I understood it was for one night.

2197. Are you a voter?—No.

2198. When you have seen Kitcheman there, did he go into the committee-room?—Yes.

2199. Had you heard him say anything to people there about the drinking or eating?—No; nothing particular.

2200. Did you hear him say anything at all about eating or drinking?—Nothing. I did not hear him say anything, not very particular.

2201. Who gave the orders?—The landlady gave them.

G

Cross-

W. Stewart.

Cross-examined by Mr. Price.

27 January
1869.

2202. Did you say that you were a railway porter?—I was then.

2203. I thought so; when did you leave that employment?—About a fortnight ago.

2204. What did you leave it for?—I left it of my own accord, as I was not well. I can go back, I believe, if I like, but I am not well yet.

2205. What is the matter with you?—I have had a severe cold.

2206. Who has been keeping you since you left the Midland railway?—I met Colonel Horringe from Halifax, at the railway station, and he gave me a sovereign.

2207. Have you been to Mr. Hargreaves' office at all?—Yes; I remember being there.

2208. How many times have you been there?—I do not know how many times I have been there.

2209. You do know and you shall tell me; how many times have you been there?—I do not remember; but a few times.

2210. Have you been there 20 times?—No.

2211. A dozen times?—I might have been there a dozen times.

2212. Have you seen Mr. Arnold there?—Yes; I saw him there once or twice.

2213. Did you hear that there was any money going for evidence?—No, I did not.

2214. You never heard that?—No.

2215. Did you see any placards on the wall advertising for evidence?—No.

2216. How came you to go to Mr. Hargreaves' a dozen times?—I went on business.

2217. What business was it?—It was my own business.

2218. But what was it?—I went to see other men who were there.

2219. Who were they?—Such as other men.

2220. Do you mean other witnesses?—I do not know whether they were witnesses.

2221. What were their names?—I do not know their names.

2222. What were their names; was Conroy one of them?—Conroy might have been one.

2223. Was there anybody else there?—I am not aware of anybody else.

2224. What did you want to see Conroy for, at Mr. Hargreaves'; why not to go to his own house?—Because I could not find him at home.

2225. Were you told that he was at Mr. Hargreaves'?—No.

2226. What did you go the other 11 times for?—I did not say I had been a dozen times.

2227. You said you might have been a dozen times?—Yes. I might have been, and I might have been less.

2228. What had you been for on the other occasions when you went?—I do not know that I had been a dozen times.

2229. What have you been there for; what did you go for at other times?—I went to make a statement.

2230. What, the other times?—I went to see Mr. Arnold another time.

2231. What did you want to see him for?—About the letter.

2232. What letter?—That which I sent to the committee.

2233. To whose committee; Forster and Miall's?—Yes.

2234. What did you send a letter there for?—To let them know about the treating that was going on at the "Friendly" inn.

2235. When did you send this letter to Forster and Miall's committee?—I do not remember.

2236. You cannot remember when?—No.

2237. How long before the election; was it before the election?—No; it was after the election.

2238. Did you apply for payment to Mr. Terry as a canvasser?—I remember something about it.

2239. Did not he refuse to pay you and then you wrote to Forster and Miall?—Nay; I wrote before then.

2240. Will you swear that?—Yes.

2241. Did you not apply two or three times to Mr. Terry to be paid, and he always refused you?—Until afterwards.

2242. After what?—He did not refuse to pay me.

2243. You swear that, do you?—Yes; he said that I would be settled with eventually, and that he had no power to do it.

2244. Had you ever canvassed?—No.

2245. Do you mean to say that Mr. Terry ever said that he would let you have anything?—I had a book.

2246. Did Mr. Terry ever tell you that you should have anything?—I would not have gone to ask for it, but I was put up to it by the chairman.

2247. Did Mr. Terry ever hold out to you any promise that you should have a farthing?—He said that eventually everybody would be settled with.

2248. Did he ever hold out any promise to you?—Not particularly nor to anybody else.

2249. Was that after you had written to Forster and Miall?—It was before that.

2250. Why did you write to them if you had had a book from Mr. Ripley?—I did not consider myself a canvasser.

2251. Were you a spy?—No.

2252. Why did you write to Mr. Forster and Mr. Miall?—To let them know what was going on.

2253. But if you had had a book, was that honourable?—I was not a canvasser, but the chairman gave me a book.

2254. And you asked to be paid as if you had been a canvasser?—The chairman put me up to it.

2255. After you had written to Mr. Forster and Mr. Miall to give them information you applied to Mr. Terry to be paid money as a canvasser?—I was put up to it.

[The Witness withdrew.]

JAMES ROWNEY, sworn; Examined by Mr. Mellor.

J. Rowney.

2256. Do you live at No. 5, Carver's-court, on the Hartley-road?—Yes.

2257. You are a voter for the East Ward, are you not?—Yes.

2258. About three weeks before the election did you see Kitcheman at the "Oak" inn?—Yes.

2259. What

J. Rowney.
27 January
1869.

2259. What did he say to you?—He shook hands with me.

2260. What did he do then?—He was speaking to another gentleman.

2261. What did he say to you?—He said that he would see me “all right.”

2262. Mr. Baron Martin.] In what way?—I could not say.

2263. Tell us all about it?—He did not say anything more; not to me.

2264. Mr. Mellor.] Was that all that passed between you on that occasion?—He was talking to Jeremiah Ryan.

2265. They were talking together, you say?—Yes, they were.

2266. Did Ryan say anything to you?—No, he said nothing to me.

2267. How long did you stay at the “Oak” inn?—We were about two hours there.

2268. Were there other persons there?—There were about 20 persons there.

2269. What were you doing there?—Drinking some beer.

2270. Did you pay for it?—No; I did not see anyone pay for it.

2271. Were there any other voters there besides yourself?—Yes; there had been five or six voters there.

2272. Were they all drinking?—Yes; they were all drinking except one or two. I do not know whether they were voters or not. William Bowen was not a voter; he had a vote, but he did not vote; he was there.

2273. Before then, had you had any conversation with Ryan?—Not that day.

2274. What did he say to you?—He said that I should join him; he said that he should put my name down, but he did not put my name down at the time; it was not he that done it; it was a fellow of the name of John Kilfoyne and Maurice Malone.

2275. Did anybody say to you what you were to get?—No; they said that there would be money before the election; some brass before the polling day.

2276. Mr. Baron Martin.] Who said that?—Jeremiah Ryan.

2277. Mr. Mellor.] Did you ever get any brass?—Yes; I got 1*l.* from William Bone, at the “Ring of Bells.”

2278. Who was present when you got the 1*l.* from William Bowen?—Lamb.

2279. Was anyone else present?—No one else.

2280. Mr. Baron Martin.] When was that?—On the Saturday evening before the polling day.

2281. Mr. Mellor.] Where was it that you got the 1*l.* from William Bowen?—It was opposite the “Ring of Bells.”

2282. Did you see Ryan at all that day?—Yes; I saw him opposite the Exchange, standing on the street.

2283. Had you been inside the “Ring of Bells” before you got the 1*l.*?—I was not inside the “Ring of Bells,” not that day; I had not been that day.

2284. Had you seen Ryan before you got the 1*l.*?—Yes.

2285. How long before you got the 1*l.* had you seen Ryan?—An hour.

2286. Had he said anything to you?—Yes.

2287. What had he said to you?—He saw me standing at the Exchange; me and two other men, and he bid me to go to the “Harp of Erin,” to stop there, and take those two men with me; and he said he would see me in a bit; we did do so.

2288. How many people were there at the “Harp of Erin”?—About six.

2289. What were they doing?—They were doing nothing when we went in; we went upstairs and had two half gallons of ale.

2290. Did you pay for it?—No.

2291. Did anyone?—I did not see anyone pay.

2292. Did you see Ryan again?—Not that day; afterwards I saw him, on the Sunday.

2293. Did he say anything to you on the Sunday?—I had not seen him, not on the Sunday; I had not seen him until the night —

2294. How long after you had been to the “Harp of Erin” did you see Ryan?—Five or six times; six times.

2295. Mr. Baron Martin.] Did you ever get any more money?—I got 2*s.* of Jeremiah Ryan.

2296. Mr. Mellor.] How long before the election was that?—It was nine days before the polling day.

2297. Did you go to any other public-house?—I went to the “Wharf” hotel after getting the 1*l.*

2298. How many people were there there?—A good many.

2299. What were they doing?—They were drinking a good deal of ale or whisky, but they were paying for it, I suppose.

2300. Did you get any?—No; not only what I paid for.

Cross-examined by Mr. Price.

2301. The “Wharf” hotel was not Mr. Ripley’s house, was it?—No.

2302. Can you give me any idea of how many of your countrymen have the privilege of voting in this place?—I could not say.

2303. Mr. Baron Martin.] Have you been a committeeman?—Yes.

2304. Mr. Price.] Are there as many as 3,000 or 4,000?—I cannot say; I am not a scholar.

2305. Did you ask to be put on as a canvasser?—No.

Mr. Giffard.] We make the number 2,300, and I think we might agree upon that without troubling the Witness.

2306. Mr. Price.] Were you out of work at this time?—No; I was in work.

2307. Where were you working?—Down at Mr. Garnett’s mill.

2308. Were you in regular work?—Yes; I was working for a contractor to build some cottage houses.

2309. Mr. Baron Martin.] What are you?—I am a bricklayer’s labourer.

2310. Mr. Price.] Were you in employment at this time?—Yes; I was.

2311. Were you working during the day?—Yes.

2312. Did you ask to be put on as a canvasser?—I had not.

2313. Did you ask to be put on as a canvasser?—No, I did not; they put me on.

2314. Did you ask to be put on?—I could not ask as I could not write.

2315. But you could have asked; you were not dumb?—No.

J. Rowney.
27 January
1869.

2316. Did you ask to be put on?—Yes; the last week.

2317. Mr. Baron Martin.] Did another man ask you to be a canvasser?—Yes; a man asked me.

2318. Mr. Price.] Who was that?—The secretary.

2319. Did not you ask to be put on as a canvasser?—No.

2320. Were you not told by Ryan that if you were put on, as you were a voter, you must not vote?—I was not; nothing of the kind took place.

2321. Did you tell him that you were a voter?—He knew that.

2322. Did you tell him that you were a voter?—Yes; but he knew that.

2323. Did not Ryan tell you that if you were put on as a canvasser you must not vote?—No; nothing of the sort.

2324. Nobody told you that on Mr. Ripley's committee?—Nobody told me that.

2325. Are you in employment now?—Not at present; I have been poorly.

2326. Have you a cold; did you catch a cold in Mr. Hargreaves' office?—I have not been in only twice.

2327. Was the cold upon you when you went there?—No; I had not a cold then.

2328. Who introduced you to Mr. Hargreaves?—I cannot say who he was; I do not know him.

2329. Who introduced you to Mr. Hargreaves; who took you there?—I did not know the man; he was a strange man to me.

2330. How did this strange man pick you up?—He got me in the Bolton-road.

2331. Do you see him anywhere here to-day?—No.

2332. Had you seen him about the court yesterday, or did he come with you this morning?—No.

2333. When did you see your friend last?—I cannot say.

2334. Did he say that it would be a good thing if you would go down to Mr. Hargreaves' and make a statement?—He did not tell me anything of the kind.

2335. What did he say to you to take you down there?—He said that I was to go down or I would get two years if I did not go down.

2336. Then you went down, thinking that you would have two years if you did not go?—Yes; I thought that.

2337. The stranger told you that you would have two years if you did not go, and you went?—Several men told me so.

2338. Tell me the names of some of them?—

I do not know their names; they were strange men altogether; I do not know their names.

2339. Have you seen any of those men who told you that you would have two years if you did not go?—Not to-day; I have not seen one of them.

2340. Who told you that you would be wanted there?—Some of them told me.

2341. Do you know Bowen?—Yes.

2342. Did Bowen tell you that you would have to come?—He did not tell me anything of the kind.

2343. Did you have any talk with him about it?—No.

2344. Did you hear that there was any money going?—Yes; I heard tell of that.

2345. Did you hear that Jerry Ryan had got 100 l. for his evidence?—I do not know anything about that.

2346. Did you hear that somebody had got 100 l.?—No; I did not.

2347. Did you hear anything about any man getting any money for his evidence?—I never heard of any man getting money for his evidence.

2348. Am I to understand that you really cannot give any account of how you went to Mr. Hargreaves, except that two or three strangers told you that you would get two years if you did not go?—Yes; they told me that.

2349. And down you went like a lamb and gave your evidence?—Yes.

2350. Have you had any money given you since you have been there?—No; I have not had any money from any of them.

2351. How have you supported yourself?—I have two lads, and they are working for me.

2352. Where are they working?—I do not know; but one was at Mr. Elliott's, the dyer.

2353. Is he there now?—Yes.

2354. What age is he?—About 23.

2355. And he is your son?—Yes; that is, he is a step-son.

2356. He is keeping you, at all events?—Yes; he delivers up his brass to his mother.

2357. How many times did you go to Mr. Hargreaves, altogether?—Twice. I never went more than that.

Re-examined by Mr. Giffard.

2358. You say that you can neither read nor write?—Yes.

2359. Did you ever have a canvass-book given to you?—I did not.

[The Witness withdrew.]

PATRICK CONNOR, sworn; Examined by Mr. Giffard.

P. Connor.

2360. Is your name Patrick Connor?—Yes.

2361. Are you a voter for the East Ward?—Yes.

2362. Do you remember meeting Jeremiah Ryan early in November last?—Yes.

2363. Was it opposite the "Harp of Erin" that you met him?—Yes.

2364. What passed between you and Ryan?—He said, "Connor, you are the man I want to see;" and I said, "What for?" He said, "I want you to join a committee that is going to be opened to-day." I said, "Where?" He said, "At the 'Harp of Erin.'" I did not know at the time that it was a licensed house to sell out; an inn, but it had been that week; so I said that I agreed to join that committee.

2365. Did you hear anything from him as to what would be the result if you joined the committee; what would happen to you?—He said, "It will be better for you to have a few pounds in your pocket and join the committee, than have anything to do with Miall."

2366. And you consented, did you?—Yes.

2367. Did you become a member of the committee?—Yes; on the Monday following.

2368. Did you vote a plumper for Mr. Ripley at the election?—Yes.

2369. Did you receive any money from Jeremiah Ryan at any time before the election?—On the Saturday night before the election I received one half sovereign in the “Harp of Erin,” by himself and me; and I signed a document with my own handwriting, and I asked him what it did contain, and he said it was nothing, only a matter of form that he had paid me. After that, on the Sunday following the Sunday before the election, I went to Jerry Ryan on the Sunday night, and I asked him how was he going to do with me, and he said, “I promise you 30s. or 2l. to vote for Mr. Ripley;” and then on the Monday, the nomination day, I asked him again, and he said I should be underpaid from the time I joined 6s. a day; and he said, “You vote for Mr. Ripley, and I will see you all right.”

2370. How much did you get altogether?—Fifteen shillings.

2371. Now, go on and tell us what took place?—After the election was over I met Jeremiah Ryan, and I asked him for my money, and he said that he had not got it himself yet, and that he could not give it to me. On the Thursday after the election I met him again at the “Wellington” hotel, and I asked him there again for it, and he said, “There are so many bothering me; you as well as the rest; I have not got it myself, and I cannot give it you. When I get it, if you will only hold your noise, I will see your money right.”

2372. Did you go constantly to the “Harp of Erin” after you were on the committee?—Yes; but not so very often after.

2373. From the time that you were on the committee at the election, did you go to the “Harp of Erin”?—Yes; every night.

2374. What was going on there in the way of eating and drinking?—There was bread and cheese and beer, and tobacco and cigars.

2375. Did you pay for anything?—I paid for one quart of ale on the Sunday myself.

2376. Was that the only thing you ever paid for?—Yes; the only thing during that week.

2377. Did you see anybody else pay?—No; only on the Sunday.

2378. How many people were the company there when you were there at night?—There used to be from 15 to 20, and sometimes more.

2379. What did the committee-men do?—They did nothing; they only assembled there and talked things over.

2380. And something else, I think; I suppose they ate and drank?—Yes.

2381. And they smoked?—Yes.

2382. Was there any particular qualification for a committee-man?—I could never see any.

2383. It was anybody that liked to join?—Yes.

Cross-examined by Mr. Price.

2384. You could not see any qualification in yourself for a committee-man?—No.

2385. Mr. Giffard.] I wish to ask another question; did you afterwards get paid when you went down to Mr. Terry’s?—Yes.

2386. What did you get paid there?—I got paid there as a canvasser.

2387. How much were you paid?—Five shillings.

2388. How came you to go to Mr. Terry’s?—By the instructions of Jerry Ryan.

28.

2389. To put in your claim there as a canvasser?—Yes. P. Connor.

2390. Mr. Price.] You saw no qualification in yourself even for a committee-man?—No, any more than putting my name down there, and appearing there every night.

2391. And drinking?—Yes.

2392. And eating?—Yes.

2393. And taking money for it?—Yes.

2394. And then going and telling the other side what you knew; that was your qualification for a committee-man?—Telling what other side?

2395. Telling Mr. Hargreaves what had taken place?—Yes, I then told Mr. Hargreaves.

2396. You put yourself down for a committee-man without a qualification, and then you ate, and drank as much as you could and got money, and then you went and told the other side all about it?—Yes.

2397. Is that what your countrymen generally did at the last election?—I believe that a good many have done that way.

2398. And on both sides?—I do not know about both sides; I know about this side, but not about the other.

2399. Your principles were Miall, but your pocket was the other way?—Yes.

2400. You put your principles in your pocket, did you not?—Yes, I must have.

2401. Is that what your countrymen do?—It might have been that way.

2402. Who has given you money on the other side; who has been employing you?—Mr. Sutcliffe.

2403. Who is he?—He is a cotton spinner.

2404. Is he not a great Miall man?—I cannot tell you what he is.

2405. How came you to get into his employment; when did he take you on?—It was after the election.

2406. After you had been to Mr. Hargreaves?—Yes.

2407. Did Mr. Hargreaves give you a letter of introduction to him?—No.

2408. How did you get to Mr. Sutcliffe?—By a man they called Michael Lamb.

2409. He took you, did he?—No; before the election I was under notice where I was working; I can give you an answer to that; I was losing my work and I spoke to Lamb about it, and he said that he would see a certain party for me and get me a job; that was before the election at all; and then he got me work when there was a vacancy.

2410. And he got you work at Mr. Sutcliffe’s?—Not he; he spoke for me, and I went myself and got it.

2411. What are you; what is your employment?—I am a stripper and grinder in a cotton mill.

2412. When did you begin to work at Mr. Sutcliffe’s?—It would be almost two months ago.

2413. Was it not on the 1st December?—I cannot tell you.

2414. Was it not as late as the 1st December last?—It would be somewhere about that time.

2415. You put yourself down at 2l., did you?—Yes.

2416. What had you done for it?—I had done nothing.

2417. Did Mr. Hargreaves give you half-a-crown?—Yes, I believe he did.

G 3

2418. What

27 January 1869.

P. Connor. 2418. What was that for?—It was with regard to charity; I was out of work.
 27 January 1869. 2419. But you had a friend in Mr. Sutcliffe to go to; Lamb had got a place for you there?—No; he had not at that time.

2420. I thought he had promised you that before the election?—He promised me to get me work before the election, but there was no vacancy then; there was afterwards for me.

2421. Did you get that half-a-crown on the day after you went into Mr. Sutcliffe's employment?—Yes, I believe I did, but I cannot say whether I did or no; I cannot recollect the day, not exactly.

2422. You got 10s. from Ryan altogether, did you not?—Yes.

2423. Did you tell him that you had canvassed?—Yes, I might have told him so, but I did not.

2424. And yet you claimed money for canvassing?—No; I never told him any such thing, that I canvassed a man yet, and I never have.

2425. You stated just now that you might have told him?—Yes; but a man says many a thing that he does not recollect.

2426. Did you go with the other canvassers to Eastbrook House to be paid?—Yes.

2427. Have you not told Kitcheman since then that you had not been a quarter paid for the work you did?—No; I have never told him any such thing.

2428. Nothing of the kind?—Never.

2429. Not in Mr. Blake's office on Saturday night?—No; I never told him any such thing.

2430. That you swear?—Yes; I will swear it.

Re-examined by Mr. Giffard.

2431. When did you apply for work to Mr. Sutcliffe; you went there before the election, did you not?—Yes; it was Mr. Lamb.

[The Witness withdrew.]

JOHN MULLINS, sworn; Examined by Mr. Metcalf.

J. Mullins. 2432. ARE you the landlord of the "Harp of Erin"?—Yes.

2433. And a voter for the borough of Bradford?—Yes.

2434. Was there a committee held at your house?—Yes.

2435. A committee for Mr. Ripley?—Yes.

2436. Who came to engage the room for the committee?—My wife let the room to Jerry Ryan.

2437. Did you see him and Kitcheman?—No; I did not see him then; I was not there.

2438. Did you afterwards see there both Kitcheman and Ryan?—Yes.

2439. Do you see Ryan here?—Yes.

2440. Which is the gentleman?—(The Witness pointed out Ryan.)

2441. Was anything said to you about refreshments?—Yes; 10 l.

2442. What was said about 10 l.?—My wife said it; I gave it all to her, and she managed it.

2443. Did you see Kitcheman about it?—Yes.

2444. What did he say?—Jeremiah Ryan and Kitcheman told me to give them some refreshments.

2445. Did he say what quantity or how much, or what you were to give them?—No.

2446. How long was this before the election; how long was the committee sitting there before the election?—About nine days altogether; or 10 days; I do not know which.

2447. Did you send in any refreshments?—Yes; my wife did.

2448. Did you see them go in?—Yes.

2449. Your wife is unwell, is she not?—She is not well.

2450. Who paid you; has any one paid you?—I do not know; but two men at the house paid the 10 l.; and that is all I got.

2451. Mr. Baron Martin.] How much more do you expect to receive?—£. 38 more, making 48 l. altogether.

2452. Mr. Giffard.] Have you sent in a bill for that amount to the committee?—Yes.

2453. Who told you to send in your bill to the committee?—A man that took everything down in the book; he told me to send it to Mr. Terry.

2454. Who told you to do that?—A man that wrote it down.

2455. Who wrote it down; who is the man?—He lived in the house with me.

2456. What is the man's name?—Timothy Ryan.

2457. Was he chairman of the committee?—No; there was another man who was chairman.

2458. Is Mr. Burke, the doctor, attending your wife?—Yes.

2459. At the present time?—Yes.

2460. I thought you said she was not unwell?—No, sir; she is not well; she cannot get up; she has not been well for this fortnight or three weeks.

2461. How often did you see Kitcheman there during the time you have been speaking of?—Two or three times, I believe.

2462. How often did you see Ryan there?—He was there many times, but I could not tell you.

2463. Were they there when the refreshments were in the room?—Yes; the committee ordered me, or some of them; I cannot say who; Jeremiah Ryan and Kitcheman.

Cross-examined by Mr. Price.

2464. You sent in your bill for 48 l., did you?—Yes.

2465. Timothy Ryan is your stepson, as I understand?—Yes.

2466. And he made out the bill?—Yes.

2467. Was there any quantity consumed to represent 48 l.?—Yes.

2468. Have you paid your brewer for all the beer you had; and had you more than 7 l. worth of beer in the place?—I cannot say; my wife paid the brewer always when he came.

2469. Do you mean to say that you do not know whether you have had more than 7 l. worth of beer in your house since you began?—I cannot tell you that.

2470. Will you swear that you have had more than 7 l. worth of beer in your house up to the time of the bill being sent in?—The bill will tell you.

2471. You

2471. You know, and will you venture to swear, that you had had more than 7 l. worth of beer in your house before you sent this bill in from the brewers?—Yes; many times I got 15 l. and 20 l. worth of beer.

2472. In the “Harp of Erin”?—Yes; in my house many times; I did.

2473. How much had you in at the time of the election, when this bill was run up; had you as much as 7 l. worth in the house at that time?—Yes; sometimes I had 10 l. worth, and sometimes 20 l. worth.

2474. Who is your brewer?—Mr. Thompson.

2475. You will swear that at that time you had 10 l. worth of beer in your house?—Yes; and 20 l. worth; but I could not swear how much beer, because I did not count it.

2476. How many times up to the election did you have beer in during the six months before that?—I could not tell you, for I am no scholar to put everything down what it was; I would give an answer, but I am no scholar to write everything down in that way.

2477. The work began on Sunday night, did it not?—I do not know.

2478. You have charged for two days’ beer before the committee was opened at your house?—It was there every day and every night what they got.

2479. You have charged for two days’ beer before the committee sat in your house, have you not?—I cannot say.

2480. Did Timothy write for you?—Yes.

2481. Did you write and threaten, or get Timothy to threaten, that if they did not pay you your bill, this trial that was coming on would waken them up?—No, I did not tell him that at all; my wife told everything.

2482. This is the letter: “Dear sir, I have been to Kitcheman, and a man they have called Bennett; they have not given me any satisfaction for my stuff that I gave away. If they remain stupid, the coming trial will waken them up.” Was that what was written from your house; is that your wife’s handwriting (handing the letter to the Witness)?—No.

2483. Is it Timothy’s handwriting?—I do not know; I cannot tell you.

2484. Timothy signed all the orders, did he not?—Yes.

2485. Did Timothy write this for you: “Dear sir, My idea in sending you this note is, that I have tried all, and I mean to go to the fountain head. If they treat me fairly, I can do them a good service by saying nothing; if not, they will get the whole cause disgraced.” Did Timothy write that to Mr. Ripley?—I do not know.

2486. That was the fountain head, was it not?—I do not know; I could not tell you.

2487. Did not he sign all the accounts that were sent in for beer?—Yes.

2488. The bill for 48 l. was never passed by anyone but your stepson; no committee-man passed the account?—No.

[The Witness withdrew.]

EDWARD MALONE, sworn; Examined by Mr. Giffard.

2489. WHAT is your Christian name?—Edward.

2490. Were you chairman of the committee at the “Fire Brigade Inn”?—Yes.

2491. From what time to what time were you chairman of that committee?—From the Tuesday previous to the election.

2492. What ward was it in?—The east ward.

2493. When you first became chairman did you from time to time order refreshments at the “Fire Brigade Inn”?—Yes.

2494. What sort of refreshments did you order?—Ale and beer; ham and mutton; cigars, pipes, and tobacco.

2495. Was that every day or once a week?—Every day and every night, up to the closing time.

2496. Of how many persons did your committee consist?—Our committee was not limited; sometimes up to 18 or 20.

2497. Were they voters?—Some of them were voters, but the majority of them were non-voters.

2498. What qualification did you insist upon for a committee-man?—You will have to speak to me, for I am deaf.

2499. Did you find out whether a man was fit to do his duty when he was made a committee-man?—According to my instructions, I was to find out the men on this committee that would have the most fitting parts to go out as canvassers to receive votes.

2500. That is, among your countrymen?—Yes, the Irish committee; that was what I was selected for.

2501. Do you know what was the entire amount, in point of money, for the refreshments that you ordered during that time?—£.66 15 s. 3 d. E. Malone.

2502. Do you remember whether there was a great deal of that incurred on the polling day?—I am sure there was some of it on the polling day.

2503. Do you remember what proportion out of that sum of 66 l. 15 s. 3 d. was supplied on the polling day?—I cannot exactly say what the amount was on the polling day.

Cross-examined by Mr. Price.

2504. You say that a bill for 66 l. was run up?—Yes, 66 l. 15 s. 3 d.

2505. Who was the landlord of the house?—A man of the name of J. Haig; that is what he had over his door. I do not know anything else.

2506. Do you know whether one farthing of that bill has been allowed by Mr. Ripley’s committee?—I know, according to my instructions, it was from Mr. Ripley’s committee that I got an unlimited order for refreshments.

2507. Do not you know that his committee have repudiated the whole of that account, and have refused to pay it?—Then it must have been since. I do not know whether they have refused it; they always told me that as long as they gave me blank bills, and they told me to furnish Haig with some of those bills, and as long as he made up the bills, and told the amount of refreshment every day, when I signed it, it was to be paid as cash to Mr. Haig.

2508. Is that your handwriting (a letter being handed to the Witness)?—Yes.

G 4

2509. When

E. Malone. 2509. When did you send that letter?—Who is it to?

27 January 1869. 2510. It does not seem to be directed to everybody; just look at it and tell me. Was it not sent to Kitcheman. I am told it was; and you must remember, you know, a few days after the election?—Yes; it was sent to the committee by our messenger.

2511. This was all true, was it?—Yes.

2512. This is it: "Excuse me for trespassing on your precious time by writing to you. I wish to be settled with as speedily as possible"—Yes, according to the promise that was made that my wages were to be paid to me the same as if I was working on Saturday night.

2513. They did not pay you?—Yes; they did a certain amount.

2514. I hold in my hand a circular which appears to be on behalf of Mr. Ripley?—Yes.

2515. It says, "Hoping that you will accede to my wishes" (reading to the words)—"Malone, Chairman of the Irish Committee, 'Fire Brigade Inn'"?—That is right.

2516. They then threatened you?—Of course; several of the men told me that I should be paid out for taking the active part I did.

2517. Was that after you went to Mr. Hargreaves' office?—Yes.

2518. Having been told that you would be paid out, you went and made a clean breast of it to Mr. Hargreaves?—Yes.

2519. Do you mean by "paid out," that you would be hardly dealt with?—I depended upon the promise the gentlemen made to me, that if I worked for Mr. Ripley, and did all I could, they would see me right. I told the person who employed me upon that mission that I was a man that had a family and must live by my work; and I said, "If I employ other men we shall expect our wages." We did not get them, and that is the reason why I wrote that letter and sent it in.

2520. But it was not true that you were not safe if you stayed in Bradford?—Certainly it was, because I was told in the streets that I should be illused by my own countrymen for taking the active part that I did.

2521. Did you tell Kitcheman that you had been offered 10*l.* to give up the bills?—I did.

2522. Who offered you the 10*l.*?—I do not know the man in person, but a man came to me.

2523. What was his name?—He said, "Malone, if you give up your bills you will get a nice tidy Christmas-box." I said, "They are of no use to me." "If you give them to me," he said, "you shall receive from 5*l.* to 10*l.*"

2524. Did you not tell Kitcheman that Mr. Hargreaves had offered you that money?—No.

2525. Will you swear that?—Yes; I do swear it.

2526. At Mr. Little's office, and in his presence. Look at this gentleman (pointing to Mr. Little), did you not tell Kitcheman that Mr. Hargreaves offered you that money?—I told him that I could have got it.

2527. From Mr. Hargreaves?—No; I did not say Mr. Hargreaves.

2528. You swear that?—Yes.

2529. And that Mr. Hargreaves said he should then have a link in the chain?—No; I am on my oath, and when Kitcheman called me to Mr. Little I told Mr. Little that I could have got to the amount of from 5*l.* to 10*l.*, and he said that I ought to accept of it. I then said, "Shall I give up these bills for the money?" and he said, "No, certainly not, keep them." I said, "Haig has been sent for, or his case has been represented to Mr. Hargreaves, and he said that he would take Haig's case up, and add a link to Haig's chain."

2530. Were you to have a slice of anything that Haig got?—No.

2531. Who was to give you the 10*l.*?—I do not know the gentleman; he came to me.

2532. Who was to give it you?—I understood that it was some of Mr. Ripley's friends; some of his committee. I do not know half of the committee that I have been in company with on many occasions.

2533. You say that Mr. Ripley's friends were to give you 10*l.* to give up what?—The bills for refreshments.

2534. They had gone in to Mr. Ripley's committee, had they not?—I understood that Kitcheman and some of his friends were the party. I did not want the 10*l.*

2535. Did you think that the 10*l.* were to come from Mr. Ripley?—From his committee; I understood so from the man that came to me.

2536. When did you go to Mr. Hargreaves; was it after you had heard of this 10*l.*?—Certainly not: it was before I heard of the 10*l.* After I went to Mr. Hargreaves this person came to my house, 2537. And you heard Mr. Hargreaves say that he would take up Haig's case?—Yes; he said, if he could not get the money he would take the case into his hands to be another link in the chain, and I told Haig to give his case into Mr. Hargreaves' hands.

2538. You believed that you were to get the 10*l.* from Mr. Ripley?—Upon my oath, not from Mr. Ripley. A gentleman came to me and said, that if I gave up the bills to Kitcheman or Mr. Little, he would see that I got a Christmas-box of from 5*l.* to 10*l.*

2539. Did not Mr. Little tell you that if you could get 10*l.* from Mr. Hargreaves you must give up the bills?—He did; but I asked Mr. Little at the same time. I said, "Will I give up my bills if I get the 10*l.*," and he said "No." On my oath it was not Mr. Hargreaves. Mr. Hargreaves did not offer me money. I told Mr. Little, in the presence of Kitcheman, that I had been offered from 5*l.* to 10*l.* for these bills if I gave them up, and Mr. Little said, "Take the money." I said, "Shall I give up the bills if I get the money?" and he said "Certainly not; keep them."

2540. Did not Mr. Little tell you that if you could get 10*l.* from Mr. Hargreaves —?—I swear to the best of my knowledge he did not mention Mr. Hargreaves.

2541. Then the man who offered you the 10*l.*, whoever he was?—He said, "Take the money." I said, "Shall I give up the bills?" he said, "No." Kitcheman sent me home for the bills, and my wife was out.

2542. Did Mr. Hargreaves say that he would pay the bills?—He said that he would see them paid; he said that he would take the case in hand, and that there would be another link in the chain.

Re-examined by Mr. Giffard.

2543. You stated just now, that you had received from Mr. Ripley's committee tickets on which to put the refreshments?—Yes.

2544. Mr. Price.] I wish to ask another question.

tion. Did you not tell Kitcheman that there was not a single voter on your committee?—Never. I was told by Marshall Hambly, the man that first gave me instructions, that I might put voters on the committee, but that I could not put them on as paid canvassers.

2545. Hambly told you that, did he?—Yes.

2546. I ask you the question again, and take care how you answer it. Did you not tell Kitcheman that you had not a single voter on your committee?—On my oath I never did.

2547. Mr. Giffard.] These bills, I see, bear your signature and the signature of the secretary; were the refreshments provided that you signed for?—Yes, they were, and not only that, but when I produced a bill of items to Hambly, the man that sent me there; when the beef and potatoes appeared as items, he said “Never mind getting them into those items; let a total amount go down for refreshments, and as long as you sign your name at the bottom of the bill, it is correct.”

2548. Is that the placard that you referred to in answer to my learned friend (handing the same to the Witness)?—That is the one I referred to.

RICHARD SHERLOCK, sworn; Examined by Mr. Giffard.

2551. WERE you secretary at the “Fire Brigade Inn”?—Yes.

2552. Who appointed you secretary?—The committee.

2553. Did you see Kitcheman?—Yes.

2554. And Mr. Marshall Hambly?—Yes; the latter the first night.

2555. Did any one give you some note paper with writing upon it?—Marshall Hambly gave me some note papers with “South Ward” upon them, and I was to scratch out “South Ward,” and put “East.”

2556. What else did he tell you?—Anything that we got from the landlord, by being signed by the chairman and the secretary, to be payable.

2557. Then the chairman each night was to sign a paper for the refreshments that came in during the day, and give it to the landlord where the things were supplied?—Yes.

2558. I see on the polling day that there is a bill of something like 27 l.; how long were you eating and drinking on that day?—The polling day?

2559. Yes?—How long were we eating and drinking on that day exactly?

2560. Yes?—We had breakfast in the morning at six o'clock; then we had dinner, and at night there was another meal. I do not know what you will call it.

2561. And was there beer going on pretty well the whole day?—There was beer on all occasions.

2562. How many people had you there during that day?—There would be from 15 to 20, perhaps more.

2563. Was it only in the committee room, or was there drinking going on elsewhere in the house?—Downstairs.

2564. On the nomination day; did you do anything on that day?—Yes.

2565. Were there many people drinking that day too?—Very nearly the same people that were there the day afterwards.

28.

2549. Who got that printed?—Mr. Hambly took a copy of it.

2550. Were bills of that sort and the notes you signed supplied to you from Mr. Ripley's committee?—Yes.

Mr. Littler stated that he had found there had been 158 committee-rooms at public-houses for Mr. Ripley; that out of these there were 43 at which there was no refreshment whatever, leaving 115 at which there were refreshments. That of the sum of 1,900 l. and odd charged for the hire of rooms, 737 l. 8 s. 6 d. was for the rent of committee rooms and meeting rooms; 113 l. was charged for refreshments alone, and 805 l. was charged for refreshments and rent, which were mixed up together, and the balance of the 1,900 l. was for miscellaneous matters.

Mr. Giffard stated, that he did not object to what his learned friend had said, but that he was afraid he should have to dispute every item which had been enumerated.

2566. Had you supper on the nomination night?—Yes. R. Sherlock.

2567. And breakfast early in the morning?—I did not say that we had breakfast on the nomination day.

2568. But you had supper that night?—Yes.

2569. Were there voters there too?—Yes.

2570. Did they go to the poll directly after they had had their breakfast?—I did not see the voters going on the polling day, but I saw a card that a man got from Mr. Miall, brought back to the committee room, and one of the canvassers tore it in two, by the directions he had got to show what vote he had done.

2571. Did Mr. Ripley come there any time during the sitting of the Committee?—I have seen him myself once.

2572. Who came with him?—I do not know the gentleman's name who was with him.

2573. Do you know any of them?—No.

2574. Did Kitcheman come with him?—I saw Kitcheman once there with Mr. Ripley.

2575. Did Mr. Ripley make a speech?—Yes, he spoke a few words.

2576. Was he introduced to any one there?—I cannot recollect that he was introduced to any one; he was introduced to the chairman.

Cross-examined by Mr. Price.

2577. How long was Mr. Ripley in the house?—He would be there from 15 to 20 minutes.

2578. And the committee were all there, I suppose?—Not all, very nearly all; some of them were downstairs.

2579. That was the only occasion when you saw Kitcheman; how long was that before the election?—I could not be accurate to a day; I daresay it was about three days or so.

2580. You say that this 27 l. was spent on the polling day; you know, I suppose, that all the accounts which were sent in have been refused by Mr. Ripley's committee?—I believe so; but I do not know that.

2581. Are

E. Malone.

27 January
1869.

R. Sherlock, 2581. Are you the author of this precious production?—Not exactly the author of it; it was issued jointly between two of us.
27 January 1869.

2582. Who were the joint composers of this placard?—The men whose names are signed first; we were the joint composers; the last witness was the chief; he wrote it out, and I finished it out like.

2583. You polished up the periods?—Yes.

[The placard was handed in as follows:—]

“Fire Brigade Inn,
“Ripley’s Irish Committee-rooms,
“East Ward.

“Fellow-Irishmen of Bradford, we, the undersigned, in behalf of Mr. Ripley, wish it to be understood by all Irishmen that our sole reason why we consider that he would be the best man to represent our interest in the British House of Commons, we call your special attention to the following facts: Mr. Ripley promises, if elected, to support all measures for the good of our country, particularly the land question, the Irish Church question, and, what we as Irishmen should be all interested in, viz., the liberation of our Irish State prisoners. As Mr. Train is considered by every honest Irishman a friend to liberty, we believe in his honesty towards us; we consider Mr. Forster has acted every way wrong by refusing to answer Mr. Train’s letter, and not to support the petition on behalf of the release of our Irish State prisoners. As for Mr. Miall, when he endeavours, through the medium of his ‘Nonconformist,’ to cast a stigma upon our Irish patriots now immured in British dungeons, by calling them Irish firebrands, or cowardly assassins, we consider, by these unmanly expressions, that he would have no scruple in violating any promise or promises that he might make to us, no more than that vile political traitor, so help me God! Keogh. Therefore, as Irishmen, who should at the present time use the power in our own hands, we should not tolerate either Miall, Forster, or any other man, to call these patriots such names. Give Mr. Ripley a fair chance, and we believe he will act according to his promises when elected. Having the freedom of our country at heart, we wish a speedy and successful settlement of all Irish questions. We, on behalf of the Irish committee, remain yours, &c.

“Edward Malone, Chairman.

“Richard Sherlock, Secretary.

“God save Ireland.”

2584. That was the document that rendered it unsafe for you and Malone to go about, was it not?—Yes.

2585. Was it the publication of this bill that rendered your life and Malone’s rather in danger?—I do not see that my life was in danger.

2586. I thought you wrote this letter, signed “Sherlock,” in which you said it was not safe to remain in Bradford?—I did not say that my life was in danger.

2587. Then what did you say?—We took the side of Mr. Ripley, and the majority of my countrymen were on the other side, consequently we were in some danger. I do not exactly say that my life was in danger.

2588. But it was not safe to remain in Bradford, was it?—Yes.

2589. That shows that your life was in danger?—They might name a man, and not take his life away.

2590. Were you threatened at all?—I was not intimidated personally, but I heard of it.

2591. There have been threats used against you by your countrymen; was that very common during the election?—It was.

2592. It was a matter of common notoriety that the men for Mr. Miall and Mr. Forster threatened those who dared to vote for Mr. Ripley?—It was common enough.

2593. Can you tell me how many of your countrymen are voters here?—I do not know.

2594. Four thousand or 5,000?—I do not know; I cannot answer that question.

2595. There are about 20,000 Irishmen in Bradford, I am told?—I will not go into any figures.

Re-examined by Mr. Giffard.

2596. Were those green bills extensively circulated?—I do not know.

2597. What were you paid?—I was paid 2*l.* the night after the election; by going next day I got half-a-sovereign, and I signed a receipt for 2*l.* 10*s.*

2598. Are you a voter?—No.

2599. Was it young Mr. Ripley or the old gentleman that was at the place where you said you saw Kitcheman with Mr. Ripley?—Old Mr. Ripley.

Mr. Price.] He is quite mistaken.

JAMES MAHON, sworn; Examined by Mr. Mellor.

J. Mahon. 2600. You live at 35, William-court, Leeds-road, Bradford?—Yes.

2601. Are you a voter for the South Ward?—Yes.

2602. Did you join Mr. Ripley’s committee which sat at the “Fire Brigade Inn”?—Yes.

2603. Of which Malone was chairman?—Yes.

2604. How long before the election did you join the committee?—About nine or 10 days.

2605. How often did you go to the “Fire Brigade Inn”?—About four times.

2606. Had you any refreshments there?—Yes.

2607. Both eating and drinking?—Yes; eating and drinking.

2608. Every time you went did you have refreshments?—Not every time.

2609. Did you see other people there?—Yes.

2610. How many were there?—About 14 or 15.

2611. Were they eating and drinking too?—I did not see it; I saw at the time I was there eating and drinking.

2612. Did you pay anything?—No.

2613. Did Mr. Ripley come to the committee-room while you were there?—Yes.

2614. Mr. Baron Martin.] The young man or the old man?—They were both two young men.

2615. Mr. Mellor.] Did you see Mr. Ripley the father there?—I did not.

2616. When

2616. When young Mr. Ripley was there was Kitcheman there?—Yes.

2617. Was eating and drinking going on there?—Yes.

2618. What did young Mr. Ripley say?—He said he was very happy to see such a lot of them together of the committee, and he hoped they would make a good job of it for them.

2619. Did he say anything more?—He made a speech.

2620. Were there any of the green placards hanging in the room then?—Yes.

2621. Could Mr. Ripley see them?—I think he did.

2622. On the morning of the nomination day where did you have your breakfast?—I did not get my breakfast there.

2623. Where did you get it then?—I got no breakfast that morning; I was drunk.

2624. Had you anything to eat or drink?—I had “nought” but a bit of cheese and a glass of whiskey to it.

2625. I thought you said that you were drunk?—No, I was treated to a glass of whiskey and a bit of cheese. I got one at the Cemetery Hotel, Leeds-road.

2626. On the morning of the nomination day where did you get your breakfast?—I got it at home that morning.

Mr. Price stated that he had no question to ask the Witness.

[The Witness withdrew.]

JOSEPH HAIGH, sworn; Examined by Mr. Giffard.

2627. ARE you the landlord of the house they call the “Fire Brigade”?—I am.

2628. Did you see either of the Mr. Ripleys at your house during the time that this committee was sitting there?—I saw his son and himself.

2629. Was the amount of refreshments for which you charged 66*l.* 11*s.* 3*d.* supplied in fact?—It was in articles.

2630. I believe the greater portion of it was supplied on the polling day, the 17th?—Yes, what was had on the 17th is what was supplied on the 17th, 18th, and 19th.

2631. I think you will find 28*l.* is charged for the 18th?—It is charged in the bill rendered to Mr. Ripley’s committee; I bring this amended bill according to Mr. Little’s request; here is his circular; I sent him an amended bill, a copy of that.

2632. Did you receive that?—Yes; I did.

2633. Was that before you had sent in any account?—No, I sent one in, and he wanted an amended account.

2634. What was the difference between the two?—Nothing at all, not a farthing, only the particulars instead of a statement of the days, the 17th, 18th, and 19th.

2635. What was the amount of the first account you sent in?—£66 15*s.* 3*d.*

2636. I mean in respect of that bill which you first sent in; show the items consumed on the 16th, 17th, and 18th?—No, it was all dated the 17th.

2637. That was the polling day?—Yes.

2638. The amount of that account is spread over three days?—Yes, the 17th, 18th, and 19th.

Cross-examined by Mr. Price.

2639. Did you charge for things taken after two days after the polling day?—I charged nothing but what was correct; the parties were there after the polling day.

2640. You thought it right when the election was over to let them have whatever they liked to call for at Mr. Ripley’s expense, after the election?—The Chairman gave me—

2641. Answer my question; was it a right thing, after the election was over, to let these Irishmen have what they liked, and charge Mr. Ripley with it?—I did not think there was anything wrong in it.

2642. What was there had on the polling day?—On the 17th the amount was 6*l.* 7*s.* 3*d.* I believe.

2643. Sherlock said that on the polling day it was 27*l.*; it was in the original bill so charged, but what was really spent was 6*l.*?—Yes, about that; then there is the 18th and the 19th.

2644. Do you think that is honest?—Yes, when it is corrected.

2645. If it had not been corrected you would have allowed it to be believed that 27*l.* was spent on the polling day in your house?—The 27*l.*?

2646. If it had not been corrected you would have allowed it to be believed that 27*l.* was spent on the polling day in your house?—I was instructed by Malone to date the articles consumed on the 19th for the 17th day.

2647. And you thought that straightforward and honest did you?—I did.

2648. There is a Sunday charged for here?—Yes.

2649. £.11 10*s.* 6*d.* is charged on Sunday; do you mean to say that Mr. Ripley’s committee was sitting there on Sunday doing work?—Yes, they was, and Kitcheman assisting them; he was at our house also.

2650. That you swear?—I will swear that he came in in the evening and stopped all night with them, and he ordered beer at night and excited them to go on, and I said, “Mr. Kitcheman, do you know what day it is; it is the Sabbath Day.”

2651. Do you mean to say that Kitcheman had anything in your house on that Sunday night?—I do; I mean to say that he was there, and he had something.

2652. Did he ever have a glass of ale in your house, or a glass of anything in his life, will you swear that?—I saw him drink a glass of beer in the committee-room.

2653. On that Sunday night?—Yes.

[The Witness withdrew.]

J. Haigh.

JAMES TIDSWELL, sworn; Examined by Mr. Metcalfe.

J. Tidswell. 2654. Do you live at 13 North Brook-street?
—Yes.
27 January 1869. 2655. Are you a voter?—Yes.
2656. On the 7th November, were you at Mr. Nathan Atkinson's, the grocer?—Yes.
2657. You went to make a purchase, I suppose?—Yes.
2658. Did he say anything to you about the election?—He asked me who I was going to vote for, and I told him that I was undecided, and he asked me to meet him at the "Wild Boar" on that night; I did so, and I was entered on the committee at the "Wild Boar".
2659. Who asked you to be entered on the committee; who did that?—I think the chairman of the "Wild Boar".
2660. Did Atkinson go with you?—Yes, he introduced me into the room.
2661. Did Conroy also go?—Yes.
2662. Was he put on the committee also?—Yes.
2663. What followed when you were put on the committee?—We had plenty to drink; spirits and cigars.
2664. And beer?—Yes.
2665. Did you have anything to eat?—We had nothing to eat that night.
2666. Had you anything to do as a committee-man?—Yes.
2667. What was it?—Merely sit there, that is all I did, and drank away.
2668. Did you ever do any work as a committee-man?—I did a little as a canvasser; I canvassed about four people.
2669. That was on the 7th November; how long did the drinking go on; did it continue till the time of the election?—We left there on Monday the 9th; Mr. Kitcheman told me and Conroy that he wanted us to open a committee-room somewhere about Sun-street.
2670. Where did you go to?—To the "Bricklayers' Arms"; me and Conroy went ourselves.
2671. Was that the place that Kitcheman mentioned?—No, he said anywhere.
2672. Who was the chairman of that committee?—I was.
2673. And was Conroy secretary?—Yes.
2674. Did you get some other committee-men there?—Yes.
2675. Were they voters or non-voters?—Both.
2676. When you first went to see the landlord, did he object to you having a room, or say anything about your having it?—No.
2677. Did you go, after you had spoken to the landlord, back to Kitcheman and get an order from him?—Yes, when we found him; it took us two days.
2678. Did you get that order from Kitcheman and give it to the landlord?—Yes, at the "Ring of Bells"; I did not get it; Conroy got it. (The order was read.)
"We shall be glad to have your house as a committee-room for Mr. Ripley; any reasonable charge will be paid."
(signed) Edward Kitcheman,
Vice-chairman of East Ward.
Mr. Price.] The handwriting is not proved.
2679. Mr. Baron Martin.] I understand that he saw Kitcheman give it to Conroy.

Witness.] Yes, I saw him write it, and I saw him give it to Conroy.

2680. Mr. Metcalfe.] Having that, the landlord allowed you to have a room?—Yes; but of course we could not order anything to drink till we got some authority.

2681. After you got that authority did you then order from the landlord anything to drink?—Yes.

2682. Did any one pay for it?—No.

2683. Did you continue to order drink every night from that time till the day of the election?—Yes.

2684. Was that supplied to all people who came to the room?—Yes.

2685. Did you send in an account to anybody; the landlord's account?—Yes, Conroy made the account out.

2686. Against whom?—Mr. Ripley's committee.

2687. Who told you to do that?—I do not think that we were authorized to do it, but the man wanted his money he said.

2688. Besides that house there was the "Bricklayers' Arms"; on the nomination day was there any entertainment there?—Yes.

2689. Was there supper there on the nomination day?—We had supper every night.

2690. What did you have to eat on the nomination day?—I think bread and cheese.

2691. Nothing beyond that?—No.

2692. Had you breakfast on the polling day?—No, I should have been there at five, and I did not get there till ten on the polling day?—we had a few panfuls of steaks before I voted.

2693. Was there a breakfast ordered there for the polling day?—No.

2694. Did you come in contact with Ryan at all?—Yes, on the Saturday before the election.

2695. Where was that; were did you see him?—At Blake's vaults.

2696. Did you say anything to him?—Yes.

2697. What was it?—I told him that as I had been away from work all the week I should expect something; we had been given to understand that it would be all right.

2698. Did you get anything?—He gave me a sovereign there.

2699. Did he give Conroy anything?—I cannot swear what he got, but he gave him something.

2700. Did Ryan come to the committee-room at the "Bricklayers' Arms" that same night?—Yes.

2701. What did he say to you there?—He got us to sign for the money.

2702. Did he give you anything more there? Yes, 5 s.

2703. Did you complain about the money?—Yes; I did not think it was enough.

2704. What did he say upon that?—He said that he could not give us anything more till he saw Kitcheman; and we were to see him again on Monday.

2705. Did you see him again on Monday?—No; we could not find him.

2706. On the 20th November, did you and Conroy go to the Old Hall?—Yes.

2707. Did you find there Mr. Terry and some other gentlemen?—Yes.

2708. Did

2708. Did you get paid anything there?—
Yes.
2709. How much was it?—We got 2*l.* 15*s.*
each.
2710. Was that paid by Mr. Terry, there?—
Yes.
2711. Have you told us all that you had, making 4*l.*?—No; I went again on the Monday.
2712. How much did you get altogether?—I got 7*s.* 6*d.* after that; that was all.
2713. Having been in doubt at first, and having taken to those places, whom did you make up your mind to vote for?—Mr. Ripley.
2714. A plumper?—Yes.

Cross-examined by Mr. Price.

2715. You made a claim on Mr. Terry, for canvassing?—I did not make a claim for anything.
2716. Do you swear that?—Yes, I do; I mean to say that I went; I did not make a claim for anything.
2717. Did you ask for 5*l.*?—No; we gave in our bills.
2718. Did you give in a bill for 5*l.*?—It was given in jointly; Conroy's and mine, 7*s.* 6*d.*
each; 7*s.* 6*d.* a day.
2719. Was that for canvassing?—I did not make use of the word "canvassing," or anything else.
2720. Did you tell Ryan that you had been canvassing all the week, and that you had a large family, and you must be well paid for your time?
—Yes.
2721. That was utterly untrue, was it not, as to your canvassing?—I only canvassed about four.
2722. It was a lie told to get the money?—
Yes.
2723. What are you?—A groom.
2724. Are you in service now?—No.
2725. How long have you been out of service?
—Five months.
2726. What are you doing now?—I have been canvassing for an insurance office.
2727. What is the name of the office?—The Universal Provident.
2728. Who employed you to canvass for the Universal Provident Insurance Office?—The secretary.
2729. Who is he?—Mr. Robertshaw.
2730. When did he employ you?—On the 5th of October.
2731. What have you made out of that; anything?—Not much.
2732. How are you living now; who supports you?—The Universal Provident; I am on commission.
2733. What kind of commission are you on, a roving one? have you been away for two or three weeks on a roving commission?—Yes; I have been away at my own expense, at Leeds.
2734. Where did you get the money?—From the Universal Provident.
2735. How could you afford to go and travel about?—The business that I had at Bradford I gave up to another agent; I got a small salary, and a rather better commission to go away.

2736. How much commission did you get?—
Twenty per cent.
2737. You say that you have been earning your own living?—Yes.
2738. Mr. Baron Martin.] Do you get 20 per cent. for what you do?—Yes.
2739. Mr. Price.] What sum of money have you received; tell me any sum in the way of commission?—Who from?
2740. From the Universal Provident Insurance Office?—It just depends upon what business you get.
2741. What sum did you have till the 5th
October?—Ten shillings weekly.
2742. Have you had that every week since that time?—Yes.
2743. You swear that?—Yes; besides the commission.
2744. Who is Mr. Robertshaw; where does he live?—He is the secretary, and lives at Halifax.
2745. What is his Christian name?—Henry.
2746. Where does he live?—He lives at West
Hill Academy.
2747. Then the amount will be in his books;
did you get 10*s.* a week?—Yes.
2748. That is what you have been living upon; you told Ryan that you had a large family?—Yes.
2749. Have you a large family?—Yes; three children and a wife.
2750. And you have been keeping them all on this 10*s.* a week?—I had another trifle.
2751. Have you been to Mr. Hargreaves' office?—Yes.
2752. Have you had anything there?—Yes.
2753. How much have you had there?—I cannot say altogether.
2754. Have you had 10*s.* a-week from Mr.
Hargreaves?—Yes, I have had it for work done.
2755. What work have you been doing?—
Taking men in to give evidence.
2756. Does Mr. Hargreaves for universal providence towards you?—No, he has nothing to do with the Universal Provident.
2757. Where have you been to?—Leeds.
2758. What have you been doing there?—
Canvassing for the Universal Provident.
2759. Have you been, while canvassing for the Universal Provident, receiving 10*s.* a-week from
Mr. Hargreaves?—No, only while I was here.
2760. How many gentlemen did you take to
Mr. Hargreaves' office?—About a dozen.
2761. Who were they?—There was Martin
M'Andrew.
2762. And Conroy?—Yes.
2763. And Bowen?—No; James Marshall and John Scholar; I cannot remember any more of the names.
2764. Did you have to pay them any money?
—No.
2765. How much has Mr. Hargreaves given you altogether?—About 4*l.*

ROBERT CONROY, sworn; Examined by Mr. Mellor.

2766. You live at Victoria Terrace, in Bolton
Road?—Yes.
2767. Were you with Tidswell on the occasion when he saw Mr. Kitcheman, and got the written 28.

paper that has been spoken of?—I was present, and received a note from Mr. Kitcheman with my own hands. That is the note (handing the same to the learned Counsel).

R. Conroy.
—

R. Conroy.

27 January
1869.

2768. In what capacity did you act at the "Bricklayers' Arms?"—I was secretary to the committee.

2769. During the time the committee sat were there refreshments?—There were refreshments to any amount that the chairman was willing to order.

2770. Meat as well as drink?—Meat as well as drink.

2771. Did you keep an account of what was ordered?—I kept an account of what was ordered every night, and that I left with the landlord.

2772. What was the whole amount?—The whole amount came to 19*l.* 18*s.* 9*d.*

2773. On the Friday or Saturday, the 13th or 14th of November, did you and Tidswell meet Ryan?—Yes, we met him at the "Commercial," at Mr. Blake's vaults, I believe they call it.

2774. What did you say to him?—We asked him if he would give us any money, and he asked if we had any authority to get any from him. We told him who we were, and what we were; that we were the chairman and secretary of the committee at the "Bricklayers' Arms;" and he said, "I can only give you a sovereign now until I see Mr. Kitcheman."

2775. He did give you a sovereign, did he?—Yes, he did give us a sovereign each.

2776. Did you get any more money?—Yes.

2777. What more money did you get?—Altogether I got 3*l.* 10*s.* between Ryan and Mr. Terry.

2778. Mr. Price.] For your share?—For my share.

2779. Mr. Mellor.] When you went to see Mr. Levy, whom did you take with you?—On the first night that we went to see him, it was on the Friday after the election, and we met him at the "Eastbrook Hotel."

2780. Was James Marshall, James Burnham, Michael Burnham, and John Pearson with you?—Yes.

2781. Did you tell Mr. Terry who they were?—I told him that they were members of the committee, and they expected to get paid.

2782. Were they paid while you were there?—They were paid in my presence.

2783. Did you go with Tidswell and Crowther on either the nomination or the polling day?—Either the nomination or the polling day, I will not be positive; I will not swear which day it was; we went to Alderman Mark Dawson, and got a sovereign from him.

3784. Whom did he give the sovereign to?—He gave it to Crowther, and Crowther divided the money between us.

Cross-examined by Mr. Price.

2785. When was it you went to Alderman Dawson?—Either the nomination day, or the day of the election; I will not be positive which.

2786. Which was it, you do not get sovereigns every day of the week; what are you?—I am a shoemaker.

2787. Which day was it you went and got this sovereign from Alderman Mark Dawson?—It was either the day of the nomination, or the day of the election.

2788. Where?—In his office.

2789. What time of day?—In the evening; it would be, I think, between five and six.

2790. You got a sovereign from Alderman Dawson?—I did not get it.

2791. Who did?—Crowther got it.

2792. Did you see Crowther get it?—I saw it given to him; thrown on the counter to him, with the understanding that he was to divide the money between us.

2793. What did you go to Mr. Dawson for the sovereign for?—Because we wanted some money; we were hard up, and Crowther said he could make a point; he knew a man we could go to; I do not know exactly what it means, making a point.

2794. Are you in any work now?—No.

2795. How long have you been out of work?—Somewhere about three or four weeks.

2796. How have you been living for the last three or four weeks?—The best way I could.

2797. What is the best way; on Mr. Hargreaves?—No, not on Mr. Hargreaves.

2798. Who has given you any money, then?—Nobody.

2799. Are you living on the Universal Providence?—I did canvass for the Universal Providence Society.

2800. Good gracious! are you another of them?—Yes.

2801. Have you been taking men down to Mr. Hargreaves, then?—Yes.

2802. How many have you canvassed for this most benevolent association?—I refer you to Mr. Robert Shaw, of West Hill Academy, Halifax, and ask him whether I was canvassing for his society.

2803. How many have you led to the office for this Providence business?—I have got nothing to do with it now. Tidswell, I believe, has got an appointment as agent in Belfast; I believe so. I threw it up. I have nothing to do with it myself.

2804. Why did you throw it up?—It was not profitable enough for me.

2805. But the other man got 10*s.* a week from it?—Did he?

2806. He said so. How much did you get?—I got 5*s.* a week salary while I was working for him, and commission.

2807. How long were you working for him?—Somewhere about a month.

2808. Then you got 1*l.*; who has been supporting you besides that; 5*s.* a week would not keep a gentleman like you?—I am not much of a gentleman.

2809. You say you had 1*l.*; who has been keeping you since?—Providence.

2810. Do you mean to say that Providence has been keeping you; that is your answer to me?—Am I compelled to tell you who has been keeping me?

2811. I ask you, who has been supporting you?

2812. Mr. Baron Martin.] What the learned counsel means is, are you supported by persons who are promoting this Petition, or are you not; it is only material if you are?—I am not supported by persons who are supporting this Petition.

2813. Mr. Price.] I still ask, how are you getting your livelihood?—Am I compelled to answer that question?

2814. Mr. Baron Martin.] I do not say that you are?—I decline to answer it.

2815. Mr. Baron Martin.] You must answer any question that has any bearing upon the present issue.

2816. Mr.

2816. Mr. Price.] You are not a voter, I hope?—I am not a voter.

2817. I am glad of that; you were the secretary of this committee; did you tell Ryan, when you got the 1 l., that you had been canvassing for a week, and that 1 l. was not enough to pay you?—I did not.

2818. Did you then tell him you had been canvassing?—I did not; all I told him was, that I was secretary of the committee at the “Bricklayers’ Arms,” and that Tidswell was chairman.

2819. Did you tell Mr. Terry when you went for this money that the men had been canvassing?—What men?

2820. The men whom you went with, and for whom you got this 3 l.?—No; I merely said that they were members of the committee.

2821. You really mean to say that?—I really mean to say that. I am on my oath, and I know what I am saying.

2822. You have not got paid; have you asked?—No, I have not.

2823. What do you claim money for?—I claim money for my time and for my trouble, being the secretary to the committee.

2824. What trouble; what were you doing at the time you became secretary of this committee?—I was keeping accounts; taking minutes of the proceedings.

2825. Where at?—At the “Bricklayers’ Arms”; and on the day of election, I was there from eight in the morning till half-past three in the evening, and never moved off my seat.

2826. Then, there was committee work being done?—Yes.

2827. Real bonâ fide committee work?—As far as I know.

2828. You checked the returns that were brought in, I suppose?—Yes, I checked the returns of the voters.

2829. And during the days before that, you have done that kind of work?—Yes.

2830. Taking the accounts from the canvassers?—Yes.

2831. And you kept a minute-book?—Yes.

2832. And you returned that minute-book to the central committee, I suppose?—I did not.

2833. Where is it?—It is burnt.

2834. Who burnt it?—I did.

2835. Why did you burn it?—I thought there was no necessity to keep it. I thought it never would have been required, else I should not have burnt it.

2836. How many times have you been to Mr. Hargreaves’ office?—I should think I have been there somewhere about a dozen or 18 times.

2837. Have you taken witnesses there?—No.

2838. When was it you determined to go to Mr. Hargreaves; had you made any claim for money which had been refused?—No.

2839. Had you made any claim for money upon Mr. Ripley’s people, for any more money?—No, never made any claim.

2840. Never expressed yourself dissatisfied?—No, only the last time.

2841. When was the last time?—The last time was on the Tuesday following the election.

2842. And then you were refused, were you not?—Yes; but we got 15 s.; Tidswell and me together.

2843. You were refused to be paid what you demanded?—Yes.

2844. How soon after that did you go to Mr. Hargreaves, and get up evidence?—It would be in the month of December, a week before Christmas; somewhere about the 13th or 14th, I think.

2845. Then you decline to tell me who has been supporting you since then?—I decline to tell you.

[The Witness withdrew.]

ROBERT HALTON, sworn; Examined by Mr. Giffard.

2846. YOU are the Landlord of the “Bricklayers’ Arms”?—Yes.

2847. Have you got your bill here?—Yes.

2848. Just produce it?—Here it is (handing the same to the learned Counsel).

Mr. Giffard.] This is one of those not returned, and Mr. Little tells me not in his possession, and therefore it is to be added to the rest.

Mr. Avery.] The amount is 19 l. 18 s. 9 d. From Mr. Halton, 25th November, with regard to refreshment, bread, beef, cheese, tobacco, and a ham, of which note is enclosed, three guineas; ham, 15 s. 5 d.; ale, 14 l. 12 s. 1 d.; use of room, 1 l. 8 s. 3 d.; total 19 l. 18 s. 9 d.

2849. Mr. Giffard (to the Witness).] Were those goods supplied?—Yes.

2850. Are you a voter yourself?—Yes.

2851. How did you vote?—I voted for Mr. Ripley; I went out and voted for him.

Cross-examined by Mr. Price.

2852. I see that Messrs. Forster and Miall had rooms at your house?—They had a room one night.

2853. Are you a Universal Providence man?

28.

—No; they came one night, and never came no more.

2854. Did they pay you?—Yes, they did.

2855. How much?—£.1 2 s. 6 d. was the debt, and 1 l. I gained; the man that brought it to me said, “I will go and tell them myself,” and he brought me 1 l., and said that the men had no more change.

2856. What was the 1 l. for?—For what they had in refreshments.

2857. For one night?—Yes.

2858. Forster and Miall?—Yes, Forster and Miall.

2859. What had they?—Drink and tobacco, and all that stuff; cigars, and all such stuff as that.

2860. Ham?—No.

2861. Nothing but drink?—Nothing but drink.

2862. Why do you call cigars such stuff; pure cigars are good?—I do not know whether they are good or bad; I never used one in my life.

2863. So they had a pound’s worth of stuff in ale, cigars, and tobacco?—Yes.

2864. But why did they leave?—Because they went off, and never came no more; then Mr. Ripley’s party came, and asked me if they would have the room.

2865. Then you ran them up 19 l. besides?—I had them a deal longer than the other.

H 4

2866. How

R. Conroy.

27 January
1869.

R. Halton.

R. Halton.

2866. How long did you have them; I see your bill is made out on November the 25th; how long did you have them at your place?—I had them eight or nine nights and days altogether.

2867. They were night and day there, then?—No, they was not there night and day, but they came any time that they wanted.

2868. Did you send in an account of Forster and Miall's committee?—I sent in an account, and one of the committee said, "I will see you get the brass." A man gave me this sovereign, and said, "It is all but the change," and he left me a sovereign; and he said, "I can give you the 'tother afterwards."

2869. Who was the man who gave you the sovereign?—John Haley they call him.

2870. What is John Haley?—He lives in Sun-street, and he keeps a jackass and cart.

2871. Did you take your bill down to Mr. Hargreaves?—I took it down, but they made ifs and ofs, and the man said, "Give me the bill, and I will get it paid." It was not written for Mr. Hargreaves; it was made out for the 'tother.

2872. Which bill did you take to Mr. Hargreaves?—I took that bill of Forster and Miall's.

2873. But did you take this one as well?—Two committee-men came to me.

2874. Did you take this up to Mr. Hargreaves?—Yes; those two committee-men said I must come down to Mr. Hargreaves' office, and I thought it was Mr. Terry's.

2875. You thought you were going to Mr. Terry?—Yes.

2876. You got into the wrong box; did you go to Mr. Hargreaves?—Yes.

2877. What did they say?—They took and wrote it down.

2878. Was John Haley the secretary for Forster and Miall?—Secretary or book-keeper, or somewhat; I know not what they called him.

2879. When you got down to Mr. Hargreaves, and got into the wrong place, did Mr. Hargreaves make you take a copy of it?—He took a copy of it.

2880. Did he say it would be all right if you came here to-day?—I got a summons, and I came here.

2881. Did he say that it would be all right if you would come here to-day to the trial?—No, never said naught about that; they sent me this here summons (handing a summons to the learned Counsel).

2882. Did you get the sovereign immediately afterwards?—No; it was two or three days after, perhaps.

2883. You would like this bill again, I suppose?—That is what I got.

Re-examined by Mr. Giffard.

2884. This gentleman, Mr. John Haley, I think you say, who keeps a jackass and cart, he is not the gentleman who lives at Brunel House, I suppose, one of the petitioners?—No.

[The Witness withdrew.]

JAMES MARSHALL, sworn; Examined by Mr. Metcalfe.

J. Marshall.

2885. Do you live at No. 20, Wapping-road?—Yes.

2886. Are you a voter?—Yes, I am.

2887. And you voted for Forster and Miall, I think?—Yes, I did.

2888. Did Tidswell canvass you for Mr. Ripley?—Yes, he did.

2889. Did he take you to Mr. Kitcheman?—No, he did not.

2890. Did you see Mr. Kitcheman?—I did.

2891. Who introduced you to Mr. Kitcheman?—James Tidswell.

2892. Was that at the "Bricklayers' Arms"?—Yes.

2893. What did Tidswell say to Mr. Kitcheman?—I did not hear properly what he said to him; but I know what he said to me that Mr. Kitcheman had said to him; it is that way. I did not know the conversation that passed between him and Kitcheman.

2894. He said something to Mr. Kitcheman; what happened then; what was said then?—Just as he returned back I asked him, what did he say then.

2895. Tidswell went to Mr. Kitcheman, and then Tidswell came back to you?—Yes, that is it.

2896. And said something, and took you to Mr. Kitcheman, did he?—Yes, he did.

2897. And introduced you to Mr. Kitcheman?—Yes, he did.

2898. Then what did Mr. Kitcheman say to you?—He promised me, for my time there on that committee, 5 s. 4 d. a day.

2899. Why were you to have 5 s. 4 d. a day; what was the odd 4 d. for?—Because it was my wage.

2900. Did you say that?—Yes.

2901. You said you were earning that?—Yes.

2902. And you were to have therefore 5 s. 4 d. a day?—Yes.

2903. What were you to do for that 5 s. 4 d.?—I was to be on that committee.

2904. Did they know that you were a voter?—Yes, they knew that I was a voter.

2905. Had you told them what your views were, and for whom you were going to vote?—No, I did not.

2906. Did you say, in Mr. Kitcheman's presence, whether you were going to vote for anybody, or whether you had made up your mind?—No, I did not.

2907. You were to have 5 s. 4 d. a day, and be upon the committee; were you put upon the committee?—Yes.

2908. What did you do when you got upon the committee?—I may say as I did naught.

2909. Did you get anything to eat or drink?—I got plenty to eat and drink, but no brass.

2910. Did you ask for brass?—Yes, I did, but got none.

2911. You asked for brass but got none, but you got plenty to eat and drink?—Yes.

2912. On the nomination day did you get plenty to eat and drink there?—Yes, I did.

2913. You got rather too much to drink, I believe?—Yes, I did.

2914. You got rather drunk?—Yes, I got plenty.

2915. On the polling day what happened then?—We had plenty to eat and drink then also.

2916. When did you go up to the poll?—Happen about 10 o'clock.

2917. Did you tell Mr. Kitcheman on that day that

J. Marshall.

27 January
1869.

that you had voted for Forster and Miall?—No, I did not; I went of my own accord, when I thought proper.

2918. Did you go back to the committee room after you had voted for Forster and Miall?—Yes.

2919. Did you eat and drink again?—Yes I did, heartily.

2920. And then did you go up to be paid afterwards to Mr. Terry?—The Monday after the election I did.

2921. What did you get from Mr. Terry?—Fifteen shillings.

2922. You did not tell him that you had voted for Forster and Miall, I suppose?—He did not ask me.

Cross-examined by Mr. Littler.

2923. You were asked if you had voted?—No, I was not.

2924. Were not you asked at Mr. Terry's office whether you had voted?—No, I was not.

2925. Not by anybody?—Not by anybody.

2926. Do you mean to say that you were not asked by some one, at Mr. Terry's office, whether you had voted or not?—Yes, I do say so.

2927. By no one?—By nobody.

2928. You got 15 s. there?—Yes.

2929. What did you get that 15 s. for; for doing nought?—Yes, for doing nought.

2930. Did you tell him that you had done nought?—I did not tell him that I had done nought.

2931. You told him that you had been working very hard for Mr. Ripley?—I did.

2932. And you thought that 15 s. was not enough for you?—I would take more if I could get it.

2933. Did not you tell him that you wanted more?—Yes, I told him that I wanted more.

2934. How much did you want?—All I could get.

2935. Did you say how much you wanted?—No, I did not; I mentioned no sum.

2936. But you said you had been working very hard for Mr. Ripley?—Yes, I did.

2937. Do you keep a conscience?—Yes, right enough.

2938. You do keep a conscience; just tell me, do you know for what house you voted; how are you described upon the Register; did you live at the place you were described as living in?—I lived there for 32 years.

2939. Did you live there at the time of the election?—No.

2940. Where did you live at the time of the election?—I lived in Mill-street.

2941. Not at the place for which you were on the Register?—No.

2942. Where was it that Tidswell introduced you to Kitchenman?—In the committee room at the "Bricklayers' Arms."

2943. Do you mean to say that Mr. Kitchenman told you that you were to have 5 s. 4 d. a day?—I did not say he told me, but I said that Mr. Kitchenman told Tidswell that I was to have 5 s. 4 d. a day.

2944. That is what Tidswell told you?—Yes.

2945. You never spoke to Mr. Kitchenman about it?—I did not.

2946. Then they refused to pay you 5 s. 4 d. a day, did they not?—Yes.

2947. They said you had no authority?—Yes, they said they would not pay me; I did not trouble them till long after it was over; on the Monday after the election.

2948. Did you ever tell anybody in the committee-room that you had been canvassing for Mr. Ripley?—I told them nought.

2949. Did you not tell anybody in the committee-room that you had been canvassing for Mr. Ripley?—Yes, at the committee-room I did.

2950. And you used to come in and have your refreshments under the pretence that you had been canvassing for Mr. Ripley?—I had done.

2951. And that was why you got your refreshments?—That was why I got them.

2952. And you voted about 10 o'clock for Forster and Miall?—Yes, I did.

2953. Then you went back and eat heartily at Mr. Ripley's expense?—Whoever paid for it; I eat it 2954. Did you ever go to Ryan for money?—No, never.

2955. Do you know Ryan?—Yes, very well.

2956. You never asked him for money?—I never asked him for a penny.

2957. Ryan is here, you know?—I do not care; I never asked him for a penny.

2958. When did you first tell about having got this 15 s. and this drink?—I cannot say exactly how long since.

2959. Was it a fortnight or three weeks?—A fortnight happen.

2960. Whom did you tell?—Those two committee men came to me and told me I was forced to tell what was had at the "Bricklayers' Arms."

2961. Were they Forster and Miall's men?—No, they were Mr. Ripley's men.

2962. They said you were forced to tell, did they?—Yes, and I did tell.

2963. Do you know their names?—Yes it was Tidswell and Robert Conroy.

2964. They were the witnesses who were here to day?—Yes, that is right what I say.

2965. They took you down to Mr. Hargreaves?—James Tidswell did.

2966. You told Mr. Hargreaves this story, did you?—Yes.

2967. Have you been there more than once?—Never on that occasion but once.

2968. But how many times have you been altogether?—Twice.

2969. What did you go for, the second time?—When I got the summons I went.

2970. Why should you go when you got the summons?—Because I knew no better; but I had to go.

2971. The summons told you to come here?—Yes, but I went there to see what I had to do.

2972. What are you; are you a labourer?—I labour sometimes, and I mason sometimes.

2973. Are you a labouring now?—Yes.

2974. Where?—Up on the Otley-road.

2975. Whom for?—I work for John—.

2976. You do not know your own master's name?—No; I have been working for him nearly two years.

2977. You have been working for him nearly two years and you do not know his name; how do you find your way to your work if you do not know your master's name?—I know where my work is.

2978. Where is it?—On the other side of the Otley-road.

2979. Have you been working there for two years?—Yes.

2980. You have been working there for two

J. Marshall. years and you do not know your master's name?
—John Jackson; I remember now.

27 January 1869. 2981. How many days have you worked for him since the election?—I have worked for him all through since the election.

2982. Every day?—Yes, every day that people could work out of doors, I have.

2983. Mr. Baron Martin.] Are you a labourer or a mason?—I am a labourer.

2984. Mr. Little.] What do you do?—I am a mason's labourer.

2985. You have been working for Mr. Jackson for two years?—Yes, I believe I have, for all I know; I do not keep in mind what time I have worked for him exactly, because I have no occasion.

JAMES BRANNAN, sworn; Examined by Mr. Giffard.

J. Brannan. 2986. Do you live at No. 27 Wapping-street?
—Yes.

2987. You are a voter for the East Ward?
Yes.

2988. Did you join the committee at the "Oak" Inn; Mr. Ripley's committee?—Yes, first; I did one Friday night.

2989. Were you afterwards transferred to the "Bricklayers' Arms" committee?—On the Saturday night following.

2990. Had you drink there when you liked it without paying for it?—I had some, but not much.

2991. Had you been asked by any one to vote?—I never had until the polling morning about seven, when Mr. Terry came to me.

2992. Did you receive 15s. from Mr. Terry?
—Yes.

2993. For what?—For the four nights I had been upon the committee; I did nought else.

2994. Did you ever do anything else for it?
—Never nought else.

2995. You were on your ordinary employment all the time; you did your regular work all that time?—Yes I was; I was working in the day and that was at night.

Cross-examined by Mr. Price.

2996. You were put on as a canvasser, were you not?—No, I never had been put on as a canvasser.

2997. What were you put on as?—I was put on the committee, I expect.

2998. As I understand, they never asked you, before you were put on the committee, how you were going to vote or whether you were a voter?
—They never axed me nought about voting.

2999. You are a voter?—Yes.

3000. When you received this 15s. from Mr. Terry, did you tell Mr. Terry that you had been working?—No I never did.

3001. Did you go with another lot, a whole lot of you together, to Mr. Terry's?—I had been along with my own lot.

3002. To Mr. Terry's?—To the old Hall.

3003. Then you were all called up and paid?
—Yes.

3004. You made that claim for four nights?
—I made no claim in my life.

3005. How did you make up the 15s.?—They gave it me; I made no reckoning.

3006. Then Mr. Terry paid you 15s. and you said nothing, but put it in your pocket and walked away?—That is all.

3007. Who spoke for you; did anyone speak for you and say that you were one of the men that was to be paid?—No they did not.

3008. You say you said nothing yourself?—I said nought.

3009. Who said 15s. was owing to you?—No person that I know of.

3010. Then Mr. Terry, without knowing anything at all about you, handed you 15s. is that so?—I expect so; he knowed nought about me.

3011. For whom did you vote?—I voted for Mr. Miall and Mr. Forster.

3012. And your wife got 10s. from Forster and Miall's party, did she?—Yes, in my absence.

3013. Fifteen shillings and 10s. is 25s., you got 10s. for voting for Forster and Miall; your wife and you do not agree in politics?—I cannot help that.

3014. Did she tell you she had got the 10s.?—No.

Mr. Giffard.] I am not in that petition at all, and it is not evidence in this petition, but it will have no effect upon your Lordship's mind.

Mr. Baron Martin.] Not the slightest.

Mr. Giffard.] I am quite aware of that; but it has an effect out of doors.

Mr. Price.] It only goes a little bit to the credibility of the witness.

The Witness withdrew.

RICHARD CONROY, sworn; Examined by Mr. Metcalf.

R. Conroy. 3015. Do you live at No. 24, Irving-street, Bolton-road?—Yes.

3016. Are you a voter?—Yes.

3017. Were you on Mr. Ripley's committee at a house called "Richmond House"?—Yes.

3018. Who asked you to go on the committee?—Mr. Harcastle.

3019. Was Mr. Harcastle the chairman of that committee?—Yes, secretary and chairman.

3020. Who kept the house; Mr. Granger, was it not?—Mr. Granger.

3021. Did you do anything on the committee; what was your work?—Canvassing; I was a canvasser; I was employed for the last two days; they made me out a bit of a ticket to Mr. Harcastle, and he said I should be entitled to two days' wages, and I received 5s. of him.

3022. What was the work you had to do; was it anything?—On the day of the poll he sent me down to—I forget the street now—to look about and to see that all things was quiet.

3023. Then how long were you acting upon the committee?—I was on, I dare say, 14 or 15 days.

3024. Did you get plenty to eat and drink at the committee?—Yes, I got some refreshments.

3025. Beer, and beef, and bread?—I got a little of both.

3026. How

3026. How many other people were there on that committee?—A few more, but I cannot remember their names.

3027. Were they voters too?—Yes; I dare say there might be 20.

3028. Mr. Baron Martin.] What are you?—A labourer.

3029. Mr. Metcalfe.] Were you asked whether you were going to join Mr. Ripley?—They asked me who I was going to vote for, and I said I had not made up my mind at the time. I thought, of course, of the place where I was enjoying myself; I would go that side.

3030. On the nomination day was there refreshment there?—No.

3031. No refreshment?—I got none that I know on.

3032. On the day of the polling, had you any?—On the day of the poll I had refreshment the first thing in the morning, before I went to vote.

3033. That was pretty early?—Yes.

3034. How many breakfasted there?—It was about five or six o'clock; there was a deal of men getting refreshments when I was there; there was only me and another got refreshment together.

3035. How many went up to the poll together?—I dare say there were would be close on 20 of us went on together.

3036. Did all those 20 breakfast, one way and the other, before they went?—I was not a witness to seeing them.

3037. Who took you to the poll?—I went with Mr. Kitcheman, first thing in the morning.

3038. He came and took you all in a body?—He came and took us to the poll.

3039. Did you vote for Mr. Ripley?—Yes.

3040. A plumper?—Yes.

3041. How did the others vote?—I do not know.

3042. Mr. Baron Martin.] Did all the others go with you, or did you go alone?—Yes; there would be 20 of us went together.

3043. Mr. Metcalfe.] And did the others vote for Mr. Ripley, do you know?—I do not know; I do not know for no man but myself. I cannot tell who they voted for; we only went in one at once; and every man as he gave his vote, went out again.

3044. After plumping for Mr. Ripley, did you go back to Richmond House?—Yes.

3045. Did you enjoy yourself again there?—No; I did not.

3046. Was the tap stopped?—I do not know for that; there was nought for me. Mr. Thomas Hardcastle then sent me on duty.

3047. Did you get any money?—Yes.

3048. What did you get?—I received 22s. 6d. from three different parties.

3049. Who was the first?—There was Mr. Jeremiah Ryan; I received 7s. 6d. on him; and I received 5s. from Thomas Hardcastle; and I received 10s. from Mr. Terry, the solicitor.

3050. Where was that; at the Old Hall, I suppose?—Yes; that was after the election; after the day of the poll.

3051. When was it that you got the money from Ryan?—I got it before the election; but I cannot tell to two or three days; it might be happen four or five days before the election when I got it.

28.

Cross-examined by Mr. Littler.

3052. You did canvass for Mr. Ripley?—Yes; a little bit.

3053. You canvassed for 14 days, did you not?—Yes.

3054. You were engaged the whole of those 14 days, canvassing?—Yes; I was; me and another man both on one book. We got a book. The other man got a book, and we worked on it.

3055. You did your best to get voters for Mr. Ripley?—I did not do very much; I did not go so very often with him; but I went part of the time with him.

3056. And you claimed to have canvassed for Mr. Ripley?—I have claimed for wages.

3057. You have claimed wages for 14 days?—Yes.

3058. For canvassing for Mr. Ripley?—Yes.

3059. You claimed more than 7s. 6d. from Ryan, did you not?—Yes.

3060. You said you had got a wife and four children to keep?—Yes; I expected I was to get something like a week's wages, like I was earning at the time. Jerry Ryan told me he had no more money.

3061. Did you come to Mr. Terry about it?—Yes.

3062. And you claimed from him a week's wages?—Yes; I did.

3063. Did you claim from him for a week or a fortnight?—I was on the committee for 14 days, and I received 7s. 6d. from Jerry Ryan; and then I wanted to claim the remainder from Mr. Terry; he was paying the canvassers, as I understood.

3064. You wanted the rest of your wages for the 14 days?—Yes.

3065. And he only gave you 10s.?—That is all.

3066. Before you were engaged as a canvasser, did you tell Mr. Terry that you had a wife and four children; and you must have something to live on?—Yes.

3067. And you told Ryan that you were working all day long?—No; I cannot say I did; I cannot exactly recollect what I told him.

3068. Did you not try to give him the idea that you were working all day long for Mr. Ripley?—I might do so; I will not be sure of nothing but what I am sure of.

3069. Did you not say that you were working hard for Mr. Ripley?—I told him I was doing my duty as far as I could.

3070. Were you ever told that the men who voted ought not to be paid?—Yes.

3071. You were told that men who voted ought not to be paid before the election?—Yes; by many parties.

3072. Were you not told by some of Mr. Ripley's own people that anyone who was paid ought not to vote?—Yes; I was told by Ripley's party that them that had a vote was not entitled to nothing for it; and other parties told me it did not matter for that; if they had a vote they were entitled to be paid for their vote, so long as they were kept off their work.

3073. Then you made a claim, and you were told that you had voted, and you must not have any money?—No, when I made the claim I never told no party I had voted, except they asked me; If they asked me, I told them always.

3074. Did not Mr. Terry say, "You have voted, and I cannot pay you anything?"—No.

3075. Did you come on Monday night to Mr. Terry at the Old Hall?—It was on Saturday night I got this 10 s.; on the Monday night I came to get paid off, and there was a policeman outside. He said, "If you look for any more money they will lock you up;" I never went after.

3076. Mr. Baron Martin.] Was that after the election?—Yes.

3077. Mr. Little.] The police were there both Saturday and Monday, were they not?—I could not tell whether it was one policeman or more; I did not take that notice.

3078. Before you began to canvass for Mr. Ripley, did you see Maurice Maloney and Patrick Darcey?—Yes.

3079. Did you tell them that you were going to vote for Mr. Ripley?—Yes.

3080. That was before you came on the committee?—Maurice Maloney had put me on the committee along with Edward Day.

3081. Did you tell Maurice Maloney that you were going to vote for Mr. Ripley?—Yes.

3082. Did he ask you to come on the Irish committee?—I asked him to put me on.

3083. But before you asked him to put you on the Irish committee, you told him that you were going to vote for Mr. Ripley?—Yes.

3084. Where have you been living the last fortnight?—I have been one part of the time in Huddersfield, and another part in Bradford.

3085. Were you doing any work at Huddersfield?—Yes.

3086. What were you working at?—I was labouring for masons.

3087. Who sent you there?—Mr. Mills.

3088. That is Mr. Mills, of Huddersfield, one of the solicitors for the petitioners?—Yes.

3089. Did you see him at Huddersfield?—Yes, I saw him at Huddersfield the morning before I went to work; he sent a little boy up with me to a job.

3090. Who told you to go to Huddersfield?—Mr. Mills.

3091. Why did he tell you to go to Huddersfield?—To work.

3092. Was this after you had told him what you could tell about the election?—Yes.

[The Witness withdrew.

GEORGE LIMBACK, sworn; Examined by Mr. Mellor.

G. Limback.

3093. Do you live at 42, Barker's-court, Bolton-road, Bradford?—No. 2, Barker's-court.

3094. You are a shoemaker, I believe?—Yes.

3095. You are a voter for the East Ward?—Yes.

3096. On the morning of the polling, did somebody come for you?—Yes.

3097. About what time?—It was about five o'clock; perhaps a few minutes after five.

3098. Who was it?—I do not know.

3099. Did you go with him?—No, I did not; I went by myself.

3100. Where did you go to?—To the "Ring of Bells."

3101. When you got to the "Ring of Bells," how many persons were there there?—I do not know; I did not take notice.

3102. About how many?—About 20, I should suppose; I do not know how many were there; I did not take notice.

3103. Did you have anything there?—I got my breakfast in the morning; that is all.

3104. Were the other persons getting their breakfast too?—Yes.

3105. Did you see Mr. Kitcheman there?—I did not see him in the morning.

3106. Did you see Mr. Kitcheman at the "Ring of Bells" at any time?—I did see him the night before the election.

3107. Did you pay anything for your breakfast?—No.

3108. Did you go up to the poll from the "Ring of Bells"?—Yes, we went all of us together out of the house; but I left every one of them, and I went by myself.

3109. Whom did you vote for?—For Mr. Ripley.

Cross-examined by Mr. Waddy.

3110. Have you been on the committee?—Yes, I was there twice.

3111. Had you promised to vote for Mr. Ripley before?—Yes.

3112. Had you been canvassing for Mr. Ripley?—Yes.

3113. You had been doing all you could to get Mr. Ripley in?—On the contrary; all my meaning was for voting for Mr. Ripley, or for no one.

3114. You induced other people to vote as well?—No.

3115. Did you on that day take anybody to vote with you?—No, I went by myself.

3116. I understand you to say that you canvassed twice; where were you when canvassing?—I was in the "Ring of Bells" twice before the election, in the committee-room.

3117. In addition to that, have you gone about the streets to different people, and tried to get them to vote for Mr. Ripley?—No, not for no one.

[The Witness withdrew.

JOHN BROPHY, sworn; Examined by Mr. Giffard.

J. Brophy.

3118. WERE you secretary to Mr. Ripley's committee held at the "Mason's Arms"?—Yes.

3119. Was Mr. Jeffrey Heseltine the chairman?—Yes.

3120. I believe Mr. Whitehouse was one of the persons who asked you to belong to that committee as secretary?—Yes, he was.

3121. When did the committee begin to sit?—The committee began to sit on, as near as I can remember, the 7th of November, I think it was.

3122. From that day to the day of election, did it sit every day, or only at intervals?—It sat every week night.

3123. From what time to what time did it sit?—From 7 until 11 at night.

3124. Did you have to check what refreshments were given in the committee-room?—Yes.

3125. And did you also have to order them?—Yes, I ordered them.

3126. How came you to order them?—I was told by Mr. Whitehouse to let the committee have refreshment.

3127. Do you remember what amount was sent in that way up to the Saturday night before the election?—As near as I can tell, I think it was between 11 l. and 12 l.

3128. On the evening of the nomination day, did Mr. Whitehouse come to the “Masons’ Arms?”—Yes.

3129. Did he tell you that arrangements had been made about a breakfast?—He said that arrangements would be made for refreshments in the morning.

3130. Were those arrangements to be made by you or by himself?—It was not to be made by me, neither do I know who it was to be made by.

3131. Were you at the “Masons’ Arms” on the morning of the polling day?—Yes.

3132. Was there a breakfast there?—Yes, there was.

3133. What breakfast was there?—There was coffee, and bread, and boiled ham.

3134. And did people breakfast there?—Yes.

3135. Voters and others?—Yes, there was a number of voters among the number.

3136. Do you remember Luke Naylor; was he there?—Yes, I think Luke Naylor was there.

3137. Was Jeffrey Heseltine there?—Yes, he was there with me.

3138. Hardisty, was he there?—I am not very positive about Hardisty.

3139. Was John Hebblethwaite there?—Yes.

3140. John Ivisey, was he there?—I rather think he was there also.

3141. Robert Craven?—Robert Craven was there.

3142. Besides that, were beer and tobacco provided that day?—Yes, it was.

3143. On the Saturday after the election did you receive from Mr. Terry, at the Old Hall, any money?—Yes, I did.

3144. What did you receive?—I received 10 s.

3145. Do you know of any who were voters who were paid on that occasion?—No, I do not know one.

3146. Did you include any voters in the list that you sent to Mr. Terry for payment?—Yes, I did.

3147. How many?—I think I included two.

Cross-examined by Mr. Price.

3148. Did I understand you to say that you did not know of one voter that was paid?—I do not know of one voter.

3149. Then you say you included two voters in your list?—Yes.

3150. Were they struck out then?—One was struck out in my presence, and the other I know nothing of it, but as to whether he got it or not I do not know.

3151. When you went in before Mr. Terry, in inquiry made, when your list was presented, did you know whether any of them were voters?—Yes, I was.

3152. Then, upon one of them being pointed out by somebody as a voter, Mr. Terry struck him out?—Yes.

3153. You say there was another in your list who you know did not get paid?—I do not know whether he did or not.

3154. But he was a voter?—Yes, he was a voter.

3155. That was on the Saturday; were the police there on the Saturday?—Yes.

3156. There was a great crush of people I believe?—Yes, there was.

3157. Did you hear, before you went in, the policeman distinctly telling the people who came for their pay, that if they were voters it was no use their coming?—I heard it, both by the policeman and many others, and that was the reason why I did not put more down.

3158. Then you had heard that before you went to Mr. Terry?—Yes, I did.

3159. Was it in the room, or where had you heard it?—I had heard it before I went up to the Old Hall.

3160. Was it distinctly understood, so far as you knew of the conduct of this election, that the persons who were voters were told that if they received pay they must not vote?—No, I did not hear it at the commencement; it was before the polling day I heard that voters could not be paid legally.

3161. Before the polling day you had heard that persons who were paid could not vote, and that was generally understood, was it not?—It was not understood by the voters; not by all the voters.

3162. You were at this committee at the “Masons’ Arms;” at your committee-rooms were these instructions (handing the instructions to the Witness) laid down upon the table, or put about or stuck on the wall?—Yes, I think we had something like it.

3163. It is an extract from the Act of Parliament; his Lordship has got it. When the names were struck off, and you saw them struck off, did you see the clerks at the Old Hall, when you went to Mr. Terry, referring to the returns of the poll-book or to the register to see whether they had voted?—Yes; I believe they were referring to the burgess book or the register.

3164. To see whether they were down there as electors?—Yes.

3165. And then they were struck out of the pay list?—Yes; I believe they were.

3166. I did not catch whether you were a voter?—I am not.

3167. And you were told that refreshments were to be had, and you say that between 11 l. and 12 l., as I understand, were spent up to the Saturday before the election, from the date of the 7th of November; that would be 10 days?—The committee opened on the 7th, but there was a small account opened on the 6th.

3168. Just tell me how many canvassers; I will not ask whether they were all voters or not, but how many canvassers had you coming in on the committee and remaining from time to time at your committee, between the 7th and the election day?—I think I had something over 40.

3169. Of that 12 l. which you say was incurred, about how much was incurred before the election day?—The whole of that 12 l. was incurred up to the Saturday night before the nomination.

3170. And was that by persons who had represented, whether they had done it or not is another thing, but who had represented that they had

J. Brophy.

27 January
1869.

J. Brophy. had been working and canvassing?—Yes; they represented them as having canvassed.

27 January 1869. 3171. The canvassing was done a great deal at night?—Yes; and during the day too they worked through the town.

3172. And then they came in and had this refreshment?—Yes; that was during the sitting of the committee.

Re-examined by Mr. Giffard.

3173. Is that your handwriting; I see it is returned with the accounts (handing a paper to the Witness)?—Yes; this is my writing.

3174. I see you have got there a list of the persons who were voters and on the committee?—Yes.

3175. I may take it that those persons whom you describe in the list as being voters were voters; you have got the messengers and voters distinguished?—Yes; I have the voters down here, and there is one here that never attended the committee; his name was put down by a friend of his.

3176. With that exception, did those gentlemen attend the committee?—Yes.

3177. And did those gentlemen have the refreshment that my learned friend has been asking about?—Yes; those committee-men and the messengers had refreshments.

3178. There were something like 30 voters there, I think?—I think, if I recollect rightly, there were about 33.

3179. Mr. Price.] This is really new matter; perhaps your Lordship would allow me to ask whether these were the committee-men?—Yes; they were all on the committee.

3180. And the others were messengers?—Yes.

3181. Who were non-voters?—Yes; non-voters.

3182. Does that comprise the whole of your committee?—Yes, I think so.

3183. Just let us understand; are those all of them voters; have you compared that with the list, and are you able to say?—I will not be positive to one or two of them being voters; but with the exception of one or two, I think, they were all voters.

Mr. Price.] Perhaps his Lordship will allow this to be examined with the register. I will assume that they were voters for the present.

Mr. Giffard.] I will put in the account a the “Masons’ Arms” produced by my learned friend this morning.

Mr. Avory.] This is an account at the “Masons’ Arms,” kept by Anthony Mitchell, from November the 6th 1868; the account goes up to the 17th of the same month and the total is 25 l. 1 s. 5½ d., for ale, tobacco and cigars, from the 7th to the 13th; and then on the 13th refreshments, and the rest of the account seems to be ale, tobacco cigars, and refreshments; total, 25 l. 1 s. 5½ d. There is a note upon it, “10 l. tendered and refused.”

[The Witness withdrew.]

JANE RANKIN, sworn; Examined by Mr. Metcalf.

J. Rankin. 3184. You are a widow?—Yes.

3185. And were you employed as a charwoman at the “Masons’ Arms” during the election?—Yes.

3186. Had you anything to do with drawing the beer while you were there?—Yes, occasionally I had.

3187. On the nomination day was there much beer drawn there?—Yes, there was beer drawn, but I do not know the quantity.

3188. Was there a large quantity?—Yes; there was.

3189. And did it go into the committee-room?—Yes.

3190. Were there a number of people there backwards and forwards?—Yes, there was between 12 and 14 dined that afternoon, and had refreshments, taking bread and meat and beer, and they was there up till 10, and till shutting up time, 11 o’clock.

3191. Did others come in during that time?—Yes, there was strangers came in, and went out; they had beer and went out, but of course we could not see the refreshment inside you know.

3192. Did you fill the cans with beer?—Yes occasionally I did.

3193. What were they, gallons or half gallons or what?—Both.

3194. What quantity do you think; how many gallons do you think went in?—I have no idea.

3195. A good many?—I cannot say.

3196. On the polling day were many there also?—Yes.

3197. What time did it begin that day?—Five o’clock in the morning.

3198. How many breakfasted at five?—I do not know.

3199. About how many then?—I can form no idea, because they came in during the forenoon and had refreshments, and then went out to vote and then came back again; they came in, odd one and two and three together, strangers that I do not know.

3200. Bu

J. Rankin.

27 January
1869.

3200. But were there first of all several people who breakfasted at five o'clock?—Yes.

3201. What did they have for breakfast?—I am sandwiches and coffee, and those who did not like coffee took beer; we boiled two hams during the night.

3202. Were they consumed during the polling day?—Yes, during the polling day they were consumed.

3203. A number of people breakfasted there at five o'clock; what became of them after they had breakfast?—They came and went in and out during the day and had beer, and then went out and came back again.

3204. When they had breakfasted, was there another batch came in to breakfast?—Yes.

3205. Can you tell at all how many people breakfasted there that morning, or had something there?—There was a very great deal had something; I cannot tell how many.

3206. Do you know were they voters or not voters?—Yes, I know part was voters.

3207. I suppose after the breakfast they went up to the poll some of them?—Yes.

3208. And then came back again?—Yes.

3209. Mr. Price.] You did not go with them to the poll?—No, I did not.

3210. Mr. Baron Martin.] They went then as they liked?—Yes.

3211. Mr. Metcalfe.] How long did the beer go on the polling day; was it the whole day?—Between seven and eight o'clock Mr. Whitehouse came.

3212. Where did Mr. Whitehouse come to?—He came to the kitchen of the "Masons' Arms," and he said, have you stopped the tap, and she said "no"; he said "it is high time to stop now."

3213. That was seven o'clock after all the polling was over?—Yes, it was between seven and eight.

3214. Then it was stopped I suppose?—Yes.

3215. Did anybody pay for all that was sent as far as you know?—No, I never seed no money.

3216. Was the account of that sent in to the committee?—I do not know.

3217. At that house have you seen Mr. Ripley all?—Yes, I seed him one night.

3218. Where did he go?—Into the committee-room.

3219. Did he make a speech to them?—Yes, but we was in the kitchen, and we could not hear what it was about.

3220. But he did make a speech in the committee-room?—Yes.

3221. Did he come more than once?—No, I never seed him more than once.

3222. I believe he shook hands with you?—Yes, he did.

Cross-examined by Mr. Price.

3223. When did Mr. Ripley shake hands with you?—It was on the Saturday night before the polling.

3224. You did not enter that into the bill did you?—No.

3225. Mr. Baron Martin.] What did Mr. Ripley say to you?—He said he was proud of the ladies, that was the word.

3226. Mr. Price.] It is a positive fact that he was certainly talking of the ladies of Bradford?—He would be.

3227. And none of them liked Mr. Forster or Mr. Miall compared with him; do you remember the election before?—Yes.

3228. There is generally a good deal of eating and drinking at election times at Bradford, is there not?—Yes, there is.

3229. At the municipal election there was a good deal, was there not?—Yes.

3230. That was going on about the same time?—Yes, but there was not so much eating.

3231. They eat more at the borough election?—Yes.

3232. And they drink more at the municipal election, is that it?—Yes.

3233. You say they drink more at municipal elections; one of the petitioners in this case against Mr. Ripley was a candidate at the municipal election, was he not; I mean Mr. Titus Salt?—Yes.

3234. There was a great deal of drinking then, was there?—Yes.

[The Witness withdrew.

Mr. Baron Martin.] Is that your case Mr. Giffard?

Mr. Giffard.] With the exception of one witness, it is the case as applicable to the East Ward; there are seven other wards in the borough.

JAMES NELSON KENNEDY, sworn; Examined by Mr. Mellor.

*J. N.
Kennedy.*

3235. WERE you, on the 10th of November, the "Green Man" at Undercliff?—I was.

3236. Where a meeting of Mr. Ripley's committee was being held?—Yes, a public meeting.

3237. Who was in the chair?—Mr. John Thornton.

3238. Was any quantity of beer ordered while you were there?—There was about eight half-gallon pitcher sent upstairs.

3239. Thomas Taylor is the landlord of that house, is he not?—Yes, he is.

Cross-examined by Mr. Littler.

3240. There was a Forster and Miall committee at the same house, was there not?—Yes.

3241. Were you in there?—Not that night.

3242. You had been in there?—Yes.

3243. Have you a vote?—Yes.

3244. Which way did you vote?—Forster and Miall.

3245. Did you ever see any drinking in Forster and Miall's committee-room?—No.

3246. None at all?—Never.

3247. How many times were you there?—Every time there was a meeting.

3248. How many times were you in Mr. Ripley's committee-room?—Never.

3249. Then how do you know where this beer went to?—I was in the bar, where I saw it drawn and sent upstairs.

3250. That is all you know about it?—That is all I know, with the exception of those who came downstairs.

I 4

3251. There

J. N. Kennedy. 3251. There was Forster and Miall's committee-room upstairs, was there?—No.
 27 January 1869. 3252. Mr. Avory.] This is the account of the "Ring of Bells," commencing on the 2nd of November 1868, going down to the 17th of November; the total amount is 36 l. 18 s. 6 d. and there is a memorandum upon it "1 l. 17 s. 6 d. tendered and refused."

[The Witness withdrew.]

THOMAS NOCTON, sworn; Examined by Mr. Metcalfe.

T. Nocton. 3253. Do you keep a beerhouse at Bradford?
 —Yes.

3254. Called the "Bobbing Turner"?—No, the "Bobbing Turner's Arms," Silsbridge-lane, in the West Ward.

3255. Are you a voter?—Yes.

3256. And I think you voted for Mr. Ripley?
 —Yes.

3257. Was there a committee at your house?
 —Yes.

3258. For Mr. Ripley?—Yes.

3259. When did it commence?—Last October.

3260. Who took it?—Mr. George Poole.

3261. Who is he?—He is an auctioneer and valuer.

3262. Who was the chairman?—We call him Patrick Murry.

3263. There were a number of people on the committee, I suppose?—Yes, there was a few.

3264. Did you supply refreshments to the committee?—Yes, to a certain extent, I did.

3265. What was the bill you sent in?—I received 15 l. for my room.

3266. I did not ask you that; but what was the bill you sent in?—£ 21.

3267. Have you received 15 l.?—Yes.

3268. Mr. Baron Martin.] Did the 21 l. include the room and the refreshments?—Yes.

3269. How much refreshment was there, do you know?—I did not give any refreshment, only to messengers; no voters had anything.

3270. Mr. Metcalfe.] Were there refreshments supplied on the nomination day?—Yes.

3271. And the polling day?—Yes, but to none but messengers,

3272. They were called messengers; were any messengers voters?—No, nobbut; my father he was working at that time, but I received 15 l. on account of the rent of the committee-room, and refreshments for the messengers.

3273. Did Mr. Joseph Gibson use your house?
 —He was in once or twice.

3274. Is he a butcher?—Yes.

3275. Did he say anything to you about supplying refreshments?—No.

3276. Never?—No.

3277. Who told you to supply them?—Mr Jackson.

3278. Who is Mr. Jackson?—He is a broker; he is a shopkeeper and upholsterer.

3279. Did he tell you to send in the bill to the committee?—Yes.

3280. Not to Mr. Gibson at all?—No.

3281. What did Mr. Gibson come in there for?—He was there at the time when the committee was sitting; he came in just to see how they were going on.

3282. Did Mr. Archibald Neill come too?—Yes, he was there one night.

3283. Did you see Mr. Ripley at all during the election?—I seen him at the house above mine; the "Prince of Wales," another public-house.

3284. Which Mr. Ripley?—Both of them; both the son and the father.

3285. Did anybody introduce you to him there?—No.

3286. Did you speak to him there?—No.

3287. Did he speak to you?—No.

3288. Neither of them?—No.

3289. Did not Mr. Ingham say to Mr. Ripley "This is Tommy Nocton"?—No, that was no said.

3290. Did you speak to Mr. Ripley at all, or to either of them?—I did not.

3291. Did Mr. Ripley say anything about your allowing people to have anything to eat or drink?—Nothing.

3292. Neither of the Mr. Ripley's?—Neither of them.

3293. Did either of the Mr. Ripley's come to your house during the time the committee was there?—No, never.

3294. Be careful; just attend to that question did Mr. Ripley, the candidate, come to your house at any time while the committee was sitting there?—Never; he was never in my house in his life; neither of them; not to my knowing.

3295. Have you ever spoken to Mr. Ripley in the passage of your house?—Never in my life.

3296. Did Mr. Chapman come?—Yes, he came in one night when I was not in; I did not see him in the house; I did not know of it.

3297. On the nomination day did Mr. Chapman come?—No.

3298. Did you see Mr. Chapman at the "Eastbrook" hotel?—I do not know where it is.

3299. Did you see Mr. Chapman anywhere on the nomination day?—No, I did not see him on the nomination day. Yes, I saw him on the nomination day up where the gentlemen were, at the Old Park; I did not see him in any public-house at all.

3300. Did Mr. Chapman give you any money at any time?—Never.

3301. Did anybody give you any money?—No, not on Ripley's side they did not; nought but the 15 l.

Cross-examined by Mr. Littler.

3302. You say you did not receive anything on Mr. Ripley's side but 15 l.; did you get something from Mr. Hargreaves?—Yes, I got 16 s. and I got 13 l.

3303. Was that for coming here to give evidence?—I tell'd him a lump of lies, and he gave it me for telling him the lies.

3304. You got a great coat from him?—Yes.

3305. You got the one that you have on from Mr. Hargreaves?—No, I bought it out of the money he gave me; I am not telling lies now; I am on my oath.

3306. You received nothing from Mr. Ripley but the 15 l. that was paid on your bill?—Yes.

3307. Your bill was 8 l. for the room and 13 l. for the refreshments?—Yes.

3308. And

3308. And in discharge of that you have taken 15 l.?—Yes.

3309. Tell me next, did you know who were and who were not Mr. Ripley's committee at your house; did you know them by sight?—Yes, I did know them by sight.

3310. Did they sit in a room apart from your other customers?—Yes.

3311. Had they a room to themselves?—Yes.

3312. Did you ever receive any instructions from the chairman as to letting people into that room?—No.

3313. Did he tell you that no one was to go in but committee-men?—Nobody was allowed but the committee-men.

3314. The committee-men used to be there?—Yes.

3315. How many times a-week did they meet?—Perhaps three or four times a week.

3316. Did they seem to take any care about who got into the room; whether they were committee men or not?—I did not see that they were particular about any anybody coming in.

3317. Had they a messenger at the door?—No.

3318. Had they a messenger belonging to the committee-room?—Yes; but he did not always stand at the door.

3319. But he did sometimes?—Yes.

3320. And let people in and out?—Yes.

3321. Did you know at the time you got that 15 l. that Mr. Little was not in Bradford?—I did not get it from Mr. Little.

3322. You got it from one of his clerks—Yes, I got it from Mr. Colt.

3323. In the absence of Mr. Little?—Mr. Little was not there at all.

3324. You have been asked about Mr. Gibson being in your house; he lives next door to you, I believe?—Next door but one; there is a shop between me and Mr. Gibson's. He comes in regularly; he came in many times before the election, and after too.

3325. Is there any truth whatever in your ever having said one single word or syllable to either of the Mr. Ripleys?—Never in this world.

[The Witness withdrew.]

MICHAEL CONLAN, sworn; Examined by Mr. Mellor.

3326. Mr. Baron Martin.] WHAT do you know about the election?—There is no question that I were canvassing, for those two days, for Mr. Ripley; I got 10 s.; that is all I know about it. I worked very hard for those two days.

3327. Mr. Mellor.] You are a voter, are you not?—Yes.

3328. For the West Ward?—Yes.

3329. Whom did you vote for?—Mr. Ripley.

3330. A plumper?—Yes.

3331. Who employed you?—Thomas Nocton.

3332. Were you put on the committee at his house?—No.

3333. Can you read?—No, I can neither read nor write.

3334. Who paid you the money?—Thomas Nocton.

3335. What did you say when he paid you the money; did you make any complaint when you got the money?—Yes; I said I wanted more.

3336. What did he say?—Well, he said he would see and he would get me some more next week.

Cross-examined by Mr. Price.

3337. You wanted more; you worked very hard?—I did those two days.

3338. And you got paid for those two days?—I got 10 s.

3339. I call that getting paid; you think that was not enough?—I could do with more if I got it.

3340. Have you had any more from anybody else since?—I never received a halfpenny; never but that.

3341. From the other side?—No.

3342. Have you never been near them?—Which side do you mean?

3343. I mean Miall?—Yes, I did.

3344. You got some from him?—I got 10 s. from Mr. Hargreaves' office.

3345. Then you have had 1 l. with this 10 s. which you got from Mr. Hargreaves' office; but you worked hard for him?—I had done nothing for it. A man came where I was working to tell me to go to Mr. Hargreaves.

3346. You got 10 s. for walking the street out of Mr. Hargreaves?—Yes.

3347. That is the easiest day's job you ever had?—It was very easy.

3348. When you got your 10 s. from Mr. Nocton, did you not say that you were not a voter?—No, because Nocton knewed.

3349. Do you know Mr. Mossman?—Yes.

3350. He is clerk to the magistrates, is he not?—Thomas Nocton knew I was a voter.

3351. Mr. Mossman, the clerk to the magistrates, you know him?—Yes.

3352. Did you not tell him that you were not a voter when you got paid?—I never spoke to Mr. Mossman.

3353. Did you not say that to Mr. Armitage in his presence?—I never spoke to Mr. Armitage.

3354. Did you not say that you were not a voter?—No, I did not; I never spoke to no one in my life.

3355. Who gave you the money?—Thomas Nocton.

3356. Did you see Mr. Mossman about it?—Never; I never spoke to Mr. Mossman in my life.

3357. Or Mr. Armitage?—No, nor no other man with him.

3358. You never said that you were not a voter?—I never did, because I was a voter, and I could not say that I was not.

3359. But you canvassed?—I did those two days.

[The Witness withdrew.]

T. Nocton.

M. Conlan.

WILLIAM HINNIGAN, sworn; Examined by Mr. Metcalfe.

W.
Hinnigan.
27 January
1869.

3360. Do you live at Palladium buildings?—Yes.

3361. Are you a voter for Bradford?—I was a voter on the burgess list, but I did not vote.

3362. Were you first put upon the committee at the “Friendly Inn,” in the East Ward?—No, I was not put upon the committee; I volunteered myself to go.

3363. You were upon the committee at the “Friendly Inn”?—Yes.

3364. A short time after that did Mr. Kitcheman and Ryan say anything to you?—They sent for me. No, he did not send for me.

3365. Did Mr. Kitcheman say anything to you after that?—I met Mr. Kitcheman and Jerry Ryan, and they suggested it would be advisable to open a committee in Silsbridge-lane, and I volunteered to go.

3366. Where did you open the committee?—At the “Shamrock Inn.”

3367. Who was chairman?—We did not open it in the “Shamrock Inn,” we opened it at the “Beckett’s Arms,” but it was removed afterwards to the “Shamrock Inn.”

3368. Did you only remain at that place for a short time?—For a short time.

3369. Then you went to the “Shamrock Arms”—who was the chairman there?—I was the chairman.

3370. This was the West Ward?—Yes.

3371. Had you a number of people on the committee?—Yes, somewhere about between 20 and 30.

3372. Did Joseph Gibson go there?—Yes.

3373. And Mr. Armitage?—Yes.

3374. Was any refreshment supplied while you were there?—The night I went there they had a meeting at the “Beckett Arms” before that, and I went to Mr. Gibson and I asked him if he would furnish me a committee-room for Mr. Ripley, and he said he would.

3375. After you established the committee there, did you order refreshments into the room?—Not that night.

3376. But shortly after you established it?—The night after I spoke to Mr. Gibson, and I said that the men would not be satisfied to stop there all night without having some refreshments, so he asked me what would do. He said “would 5s. worth do,” and I said “I suppose it would.” There was happen about 40 men.

3377. This Mr. Joseph Gibson is a butcher, is he?—Yes.

3378. And a leading man in that Ward, is he?—I do not not know about being a leading man. He was chairman of that district, I expect.

3379. For Mr. Ripley?—Yes.

3380. After he told you that about the 5s. worth, did you order refreshments?—Yes.

3381. Did you afterwards increase the quantity of refreshments beyond 5s.?—No, not there.

3382. What did you do—did you continue at the “Shamrock” committee till the election?—No, that was at the “Beckett Arms.” We had no more than 5s. worth while we stopped there.

3383. When you got to the “Shamrock” what did you do then?—When we got to the “Shamrock” we got no orders at all. There the landlord gave us refreshment as we wanted it.

3384. Did you continue there till the election?—Yes.

3385. On the nomination day did the refreshments come in?—Yes; there was some refreshments—but not by anybody’s orders.

3386. Did the landlord send it in?—Yes; the landlord sent it in.

3387. On the polling day did the landlord send it in?—Yes; but then it was our orders on the polling day; it came in for workers and messengers.

3388. How many people partook of it?—Nay, I cannot tell.

3389. About how many on the polling-day?—There was about 39 on the committee—but then I do not say they all had partaken of it. They all partook of it sometimes happen.

3390. Were some of those 39 voters?—I cannot tell—but I saw a list kept.

3391. You were a voter?—Yes, I was a voter.

3392. A good many were voters?—Yes.

3393. Besides the 39 on the committee, did other people come in on the polling-day for refreshments?—They may have come, but I do not know that there was any strangers there excepting they belonged to the committee.

3394. Who paid for those refreshments?—Nay, you must ask Mr. Little about that; I do not know it was ever paid.

3395. You did not pay it?—No, I did not.

3396. Nor did the other members of the committee?—No, none of them paid, that I know.

3397. Just look at that, and see whether that is the account that you kept there with a list of the committee there (handing a paper to the Witness)?—Yes, this is a list of the committee.

3398. Is that your handwriting?—No, it is my secretary’s handwriting.

3399. Is it signed by you?—No.

3400. Is it your secretary’s writing; have you looked over it?—Yes.

3401. Is that a list of the committee that were there?—Yes, it is.

3402. Did Mr. Gibson come to the “Shamrock” as well as to the “Beckett Arms”?—I cannot swear that I have seen Mr. Gibson in the “Shamrock”; he may have been there, or he may not, but I cannot swear.

3403. Did Mr. Ripley come at all?—No.

3404. Was there a dinner there on the nomination day?—No, there was not; there was nothing to eat as I know of there on the nomination day.

3405. Was there on the polling-day?—The landlord gave me and my secretary and the messenger what we had.

3406. I ask you whether there was such a thing, and then you say the landlord gave it, which is extremely unlikely?—I am just going to tell you the cause.

3407. Will you stick to the question; on the polling-day did you and others eat it?—

Mr. Price.] Do ask what was done; he said the landlord on the polling-day did something, and you stopped him.

3408. Mr. Price (to the Witness).] What did the landlord do?—We had been there since eight in the morning, and he told us we would be hungry, and he sent us up something thing to eat; there was me, the secretary, and the messenger that was waiting on us.

3409. Mr. Metcalf.] What is the name of the landlord of the "Shamrock"?—Michael May.

3410. Did you see Jerry Ryan at all?—Yes, I have seen him often, but I did not see him there.

3411. Did you see him while you were holding that committee; did you apply to him at all?—Yes, of course I did.

3412. What for?—I applied to him for some wages; I said we were not working, and we could not afford to lose our time, me and my secretary.

3413. You and your secretary applied for wages, did he give you any wages?—No.

3414. Did he refer you to anybody?—No; he said Mr. Armitage would see us all right as to our wages, for he was the chairman of the ward committee there.

3415. Did you see Mr. Armitage?—Yes.

3416. Mr. John Armitage, was it?—Yes.

3417. Where did you see him?—I saw him at the "Rose and Crown," opposite the infirmary.

3418. Did he give you any money?—Yes; I applied to him for — 3419. Never mind what you applied to him for; did he give you any money?—Yes, he did.

3420. How much did he give you?—He gave me 2*l.*; that is, 1*l.* for me and 1*l.* for the secretary; but when he gave me the 2*l.* he asked me if I was a voter, and if either of us was a voter, and I said of course I was not.

3421. Of course you said you were not; you do not mean to say of course you told him what was not true, because you were a voter?—Because I was not a voter in the West Ward; I did not mean voting; I was a non-voter then.

3422. He meant a voter for the election; he was not talking about the municipal election; you got your 2*l.*, and you told him you were not a voter?—Yes, I got it for myself and for my secretary.

3423. Did you get anything afterwards?—Yes.

3424. What did you get?—I got 3*l.* afterwards, when the election was over.

3425. From whom?—From Mr. George Massman.

3426. Who is he; is he an attorney?—Yes.

Mr. Price.] I admit that Mr. George Massman was an attorney employed by Mr. Ripley.

3427. Mr. Metcalf.] Did the secretary get some money too?—Yes.

3428. Did they know that you had voted?—No; he asked me if I was a voter; Mr. Massman was paying me the money, and he said, "Are you a voter, Hinnigan?" and I said "No." He asked me how long I was working, and I told him I was working eight days, and he asked me what I charged a day for my time, and he said, "They would pay me 5*s.*;" I said, "5*s.* would not pay me my wages, as I worked very late."

3429. Who went with you to Mr. Massman?—Myself and my secretary.

3430. Did you see Mr. Little at all?—Yes.

3431. Where did you see Mr. Little?—Mr. Little did not go with me to Mr. Massman, but he went to see Mr. Massman to know whether I was entitled to be paid or not, because Mr. Little did not know me.

3432. Did Mr. Little refer you to Mr. Massman?—Yes.

Cross-examined by Mr. Price.

3433. On both occasions when you got any money, you stated that you were not a voter?—Yes.

3434. On the polling day, the landlord, as you had been there a long time, sent you up something to eat and drink?—Yes.

3435. What is your secretary's name?—Peter McDermot.

3436. Is he your private secretary?—What do you mean by private?

3437. Did you pay him for his services?—No; I wanted paying myself.

3438. Have you been down to Mr. Hargreave's office; you have had 1*l.* there and 2*l.* out of the other side, have you not?—Which side is that?

3439. Mr. Miall's side?—I never applied to Mr. Miall's side.

3440. Mr. Baron Martin.] Did you get any money for giving your evidence?—No, I cannot swear I never got any money for giving my evidence.

3441. Mr. Price.] You got 1*l.* at Mr. Hargreave's?—I got 2*l.*, me and my secretary; we did not get it for giving evidence, as I am aware of.

3442. What did you get it for?—Nay, you must ask Mr. Hargreaves what it was for.

3443. How much have you had altogether from him?—I cannot swear how much I had altogether.

3444. You have been helping to get up the case?—Yes, of course, I have been at work there; I was not going to work for nothing.

3445. You and your secretary?—I do not know about my secretary.

3446. How much have you had altogether from Mr. Hargreaves?—I had my wages.

3447. How much?—My wages per week?

3448. How much have you had?—If I tell you will you make it more?

3449. No, I am sure I will not. Are you to have something beside if Mr. Ripley is unseated?—I was never promised anything of that sort at all.

3450. How much have you had?—I have had 30*s.* a week, my wages and expenses.

3451. Mr. Baron Martin.] What are you?—A labourer.

3452. Mr. Price.] What do you earn ordinarily; what are your expenses?—It just depended upon what I did expend.

3453. What did you expend?—If you can give me 10*l.* I can go out and spend it immediately.

3454. You have had 30*s.* a week and expenses; how much have you had for expenses?—Sometimes I have got 5*s.* a day for expenses, and sometimes I have got nowt; that's just it.

3455. Did you get so much a head for the fellows you brought to Mr. Hargreaves?—No, I got nothing for the fellows that I brought to Mr. Hargreaves, because I was paid my wages; I never got anything of the sort.

3456. Were you to have so much a head for the men you could bring?—I do not know about other men; I am only answering for myself.

3457. But did they give so much a head?—You must ask Mr. Hargreaves about that; I cannot tell.

3458. Has it been generally understood that so much a head has been given?—Do you want me to swear to something I don't not know; I tell you I do not know it.

3459. Have you seen men paid, when you have been down at Mr. Hargreaves, so much for each witness they have brought?—No, I have never seen any men paid, only one man, I suppose they called him Michael Finnen. I do not say that he has paid him for that; he was paid for the trouble going there.

3460. How many times have you been down at Mr. Hargreaves?—I have been there every day since I have started working for him.

3461. When did you start working for him?—I cannot exactly say; within, as near as I can guess, it would be about a fortnight or better.

3462. Then you are doing nothing else now?—No, of course not.

3463. Did you take the door-keeper away from Mr. Ripley's rooms, and take him down to Mr. Hargreave's?—What do they call the door-keeper.

3464. John?—John what?

3465. Did you take any such man down there?—I want to know what John it is.

3466. John at the old post office?—What is his name?

3467. Do you know John at the old post office?—John Holdsworth they call him. I came for him and told him there was a gentleman wanted to see him.

3468. It was Mr. Hargreaves wanted to see him, was it not; and you took him down and he was the door-keeper of the committee-room, and you told him Mr. Hargreaves wanted to see him?—I said there was a gentleman wanted to see him. He said he did not know where he was going until he went to Mr. Hargreaves.

3469. You took him to Mr. Hargreaves?—Of course I did take him to Mr. Hargreaves.

3470. Did you get anything for taking him to Mr. Hargreaves?—No, I didn't get nothing.

3471. Did you get expenses for taking him that day?—I got expenses, many a day, when I did not take him at all.

3472. Did John go down with you?—Yes, of course he went with me.

3473. John could not tell anything, could he?—You had better ask John himself. I do not know.

3474. Did he not say that he did not know Mr. Ripley by sight, and did they not say you will not do for us?—I was not there, and I did not hear John talk.

3475. Was not it the fact, that when he said he did not know Mr. Ripley by sight they said, you will not do for me, and would not give him anything?—I know nothing at all about it.

3476. Did you get a retainer from Mr. Hargreaves?—What do you mean by a retainer? I do not understand it.

3477. I know what it is, but did you get one; you were to have so much if you would act for him; did you have the money down to act for Mr. Hargreaves. Cash on the spot; that's the best way to be retained, to have the money paid at once?—He has given me nothing but what I have told you here.

3478. There was some smart money paid at once; how much did you get paid at once; on the 29th December did you not get 1 l.?—I cannot tell you what time it was, but I have gotten it.

3479. Did you get 1 l. from Mr. Mill that day at Mr. Hargreaves' office?—Yes.

3480. Did you see it entered in a book?—No, I did not.

Re-examined by Mr. Metcalf.

3481. Did you get more from Mr. Hargreaves than paid for the work you were doing for him?—No. If I had to work the same time that I have worked for Mr. Hargreaves I would not be paid for my time at all.

3482. Did you do work for all that Mr. Hargreaves paid you for?—Yes. I do not know whether I have been at work for him or not, but I have been working.

3483. When Mr. Hargreaves told you to fetch a witness for him to see, you fetched him, did you?—Yes, of course.

3484. And Mr. Hargreaves, I suppose, was employed in getting up the case for the petitioner, just as Mr. Little and the other gentlemen are employed in getting up the case on the other side?—Yes.

3485. Just look at that; is that your signature to that bill (handing a bill to the Witness). That is the landlord's bill at the "Shamrock"?—No, I never wrote that at all. I have never signed it at all; that is not my signature.

Mr. Price.] How does that arise?

Mr. Metcalf.] We are going to put in that bill.

Mr. Price.] You should have put it in in the first instance, and I could have seen what it was.

Mr. Metcalf.] Those are two bills; the one is the "Beckett's Arms," and the other the "Shamrock" (handing the same to Mr. Price).

Mr. Avery.] Those are two bills, one from the "Beckett Arms," and one from the "Shamrock." The total amount of the "Beckett Arms" bill is 13 l. 6 s. At the "Shamrock" Inn there are two accounts; one is for refreshments, 17 l., and for the rent of the room, 10 l. Then there is written, total, 27 l. 4 s. 6 d.; that is dated November 20th. There is another account, dated October to the 17th November 1868; Michael May, for gas coal, and rent and the use of room, 20 l.

Mr. Price.] What I propose to ask this Witness is this: he being chairman of this committee, whether if he knew of any such expenditure being going on as is represented by those bills, because your Lordship knows those are amongst the class that we have repudiated; therefore, I should like to ask him about it.

3486. Mr. Baron Martin.] Do you know whether this is correct or not?—No; I would not swear to that account at all.

3487. Mr. Price.] There is one from Michael May, that is the "Beckett Arms;" no, that is the "Shamrock."

3488. It is 20 l. gas and rent. When did you go the "Beckett Arms," do you remember, or to the "Shamrock"?—To the "Shamrock," the Tuesday before the election.

3489. Is Michael May the landlord of the "Shamrock"?—Yes.

3490. Were

3490. Were you there in October?—No; the election was on the 17th of November.

3491. But were you there in October?—No.

3492. Mr. Baron Martin.] When did you begin to work at the “Shamrock”?—I went to work at the “Shamrock” the Friday night before the election.

3493. Mr. Price.] Mr. Ripley’s committee meeting, of November the 20th, “Shamrock” Inn, for refreshments, 17 l., and rent of room, 10 l. Do you know of any such refreshments amounting to anything like 17 l. whilst you were there?—No, I cannot swear to refreshments amounting to 6 l.

3494. Did the landlord ever come up to you, and ask you to pass any account for refreshments?—Yes, he told me what amount there was, but I kept no account; but I left the landlord to keep the account.

3495. Was it after the election he told you?—Yes, it was after the election.

3496. Did he ever come up, from time to time, to ask you to authorise those refreshments to be given?—Yes, I did authorise it; I kept no account of the bills, what the refreshments came to.

3497. At all events, you did not begin until Friday before the election. The election was on the Tuesday, and you began there on the Friday?—Yes.

3498. And a rent of 10 l. is charged, and 17 l. for refreshment?—I do not know about that.

3499. Mr. Baron Martin.] Are those two documents in your handwriting?—No, they are not; they are my secretary’s handwriting.

3500. That is McDermot’s?—Yes.

3501. Who are the people that are named there; are those the people whom you call the committee who come to the house?—Yes.

3502. Those are they, and you put them down by name?—Yes, those are the names.

[The Witness withdrew.]

JAMES BURKE, sworn; Examined by Mr. Mellor.

J. Burke.

3503. Do you live in Loom-street, Wapping, Bradford?—Yes.

3504. You work for a man named Patrick Ryan, do you not?—No, I work with him.

3505. Do you know Sam Abel, the landlord of the “Equity” Inn, in George-street?—Yes.

3506. Do you remember Abel coming there to you before the election?—Yes.

3507. How long before the election?—It would be four or five weeks.

3508. Did you form a committee at Abel’s house?—Yes.

3509. Who was the chairman of that committee?—There was not a chairman appointed for some time.

3510. Who was appointed chairman afterwards for Mr. Ripley?—Patrick Ryan was chairman.

3511. The committee was held at Abel’s house, was it?—Yes.

3512. Do you know Mr. Louis Ingham?—Yes.

3513. He was the secretary of the central committee of the ward?—Yes, as far as I know he was.

3514. Did you see him at Mr. Abel’s house when the committee was formed?—Yes.

3515. Do you remember being, about three weeks before the election, at Abel’s house?—Yes.

3516. Did Abel give you anything?—Yes.

3517. What was it?—He gave me about 6 l. or 7 l.; he gave me 7 l.

3518. Do you mean 7 l. then, or 7 l. altogether?—He gave me 7 l.; at least between 7 l. or 8 l.

3519. The first time how much did he give you?—He gave me 2 l.

3520. Mr. Baron Martin.] What did he give it to you for?—I do not know; he said he did not want us to do anything, only go there and form a committee; he should not ask us to do anything; that was Patrick Ryan and me.

3521. What was the 7 l. for?—I do not know; I was vice-chairman.

3522. Mr. Mellor.] You say you first got 2 l.; how long after that did you get any more?—In the course of the week, I think, I got some more.

3523. How much more did you get the next time?—I got 2 l.

3524. When did you next get any more?—

Well, there was a meeting in St. George’s Hall, and Sam Abel gave me a sovereign to get some rough fellows to go there with me and stand a little bother, if there was any.

3525. Why were you to go with the rough fellows and stand a little bother, if there was any?—It was a meeting called for Irishmen.

3526. Did you go to the meeting?—Yes.

3527. Who was in the chair at the meeting?—Mr. McNulty.

3528. Did you see Mr. Ripley there?—No.

3529. When did you get any more money after this?—I got 2 l. on the Saturday previous to the election.

3530. Mr. Baron Martin.] What was it for; was it for doing nothing?—For the same purpose.

3531. Mr. Mellor.] After the election did you get anything?—Yes.

3532. How much was that?—I got 10 s.

3533. Who was that from?—I got it from Mr. Louis Ingham.

3534. Mr. Baron Martin.] Are you a voter?—No.

3535. Mr. Mellor.] Did Mr. Ingham often come to the committee at Abel’s house?—Yes.

3536. Had you refreshments at Abel’s house?—Yes, abundance of it.

3537. How often were you at Abel’s house; how many times a week?—We used to meet twice a week.

3538. Had you refreshments every time?—Every time.

3539. How many people were there, as a rule?—There would be from 20 to 30; sometimes 40.

3540. And did they all get refreshments?—Yes, every one that was there; if there was a hundred they would get refreshments.

3541. Eating and drinking?—Sometimes eating.

3542. More generally drinking?—Yes, more generally drinking.

3543. As much as they wanted?—As much as ever they wanted.

3544. Were there voters there as well as non-voters?—Yes.

3545. Do you know the South Ward executive committee—

J. Burke.

27 January
1869.

committee-rooms?—I think the South Ward executive committee-rooms were at the "Junction Hotel."

3546. Have you ever seen Mr. Ripley there?—I have not at the "Junction."

3547. Where have you seen Mr. Ripley?—I saw him at Sam Abel's.

3548. And did they give you this list as a list of the committee (handing a list to the Witness)?—Yes.

3549. Who give you this list?—Sam Abel.

3550. There was an English committee at Abel's house as well as an Irish committee, I believe?—I do not know that.

3551. On the nomination night were you at the "Masons' Arms"?—Yes.

3552. Did you see Mr. Berwick?—Yes.

3553. And Jeremiah Ryan; was he there?—Yes.

3554. And did you have any conversation with Ryan?—Yes.

3555. What was it about?—About breakfast the next morning, and he introduced me to Mr. Berwick.

3556. What did Mr. Berwick say?—He said he would go with me; as long as it is in a good cause, it did not matter who done it, though he did not belong to that ward.

3557. Mr. Baron Martin.] Who said that?—Mr. Berwick said so.

3558. Mr. Mellor.] As you were coming away from the "Masons' Arms" did he say anything to you about inviting people to breakfast?—Oh, yes.

3559. Who said this to you?—Mr. Berwick, he said that I could invite any person I liked; and if they were voters I might charge them a penny or twopence for their breakfast; I might invite them, he said.

3560. What had they for breakfast?—I was not at the breakfast.

3561. Did you go with Mr. Berwick to Abel's house?—Yes.

3562. Did you hear him order breakfast?—He dictated a letter to a young man that was in the chair that night.

3563. What did you hear Mr. Berwick say?—I did not hear him dictate the letter.

3564. Did you hear him say anything to Mr. Redman about it?—No, I did not hear him say anything about that; I know the letter was written; to the best of my knowledge he did dictate the letter to Mr. Redman; he sat close to him, and held his head towards him while Mr. Redman was writing.

3565. And Mr. Berwick dictated it?—He dictated the letter to the best of my knowledge.

3566. Did you know whom the letter was directed to?—I did not.

3567. On the polling day were you in the committee-room at Abel's house?—Yes.

3568. Was any whisky brought in?—Yes.

3569. Who brought in the whisky?—Sam Abel.

3570. And did he say what was to be done with it?—Yes.

3571. What?—Give it to the voters when they would come in; it did not matter who I gave it to so as I did give it.

3572. How much whisky was there, about?—There was above a quart, I should say; it was in a jar.

3573. And did you give it to the voters and the people?—I give it to every one; it did not matter whether they were voters or non-voters.

Cross-examined by Mr. Price.

3574. What is Abel's, is it a public-house or a beerhouse?—Beerhouse.

3575. Where did you get the whisky from?—From Sam Abel.

3576. He has not a spirit license?—I do not think that he has, but I got the whisky of him, however.

3577. What are you?—I am a shoemaker by trade.

3578. Are you at work now?—Yes.

3579. Where?—At home in my own house.

3580. Do you work on your own account?—I work for a shop, and on my own account, and for Mr. Stead.

3581. When did you get the last payment from Mr. Stead?—I got 2 s. 6 d. out of him yesterday.

3582. Did you borrow it?—No.

3583. Had you earned it?—I had earned it.

3584. Did you tell Ryan that you had canvassed for some weeks, and it was very hard to be canvassing for some weeks and get nothing?—No.

3585. Nothing of the kind?—No, never.

3586. Had you canvassed?—I never had canvassed.

3587. Never said so?—No.

3588. What did you ask him for the money for?—I did not ask for it.

3589. What did you get it for?—I do not know; he gave it to me.

3590. It was a mystery to you?—It was no mystery to me, when he told me to go and spend the money on voters, and induce them to vote.

3591. Who told you that?—Sam Abel did.

3592. That you swear?—Yes.

3593. Did you never complain that it was not enough, and did you not tell Ryan that Abel had given you nothing?—He did not give me anything until last week or nearly so.

3594. He gave you 2 l. at first?—Yes, that was the Monday week previous to the election.

3595. Did you, notwithstanding you had received that 2 l., say to Ryan that you had had nothing from Abel at all?—I do not know anything about that.

3596. Did you complain that you had nothing after you had had 2 l. from Abel?—I told you I did not know anything about Ryan; I never had any conversation with him about it.

3597. Mr. Baron Martin.] After you had got 2 l., did you say you had not got anything?—No, I never said such a thing; if I got the money I would tell you at once, if I did.

3598. Mr. Price.] Are you a voter?—No.

3599. Have you been at Mr. Hargreaves' offices?—Yes.

3600. How many times?—I have not been half-a-dozen times.

3601. Have you been half-a-dozen times?—It is as much as I have.

3602. But you have been about that?—Yes.

3603. Who took you there first?—I went there myself.

3604. How came you to go to Mr. Hargreaves; did you know him?—No, I did not; not before this election.

3605. Did you hear that there was anything being given for evidence?—No, I did not.

3606. What

J. Burke.
—
27 January
1869.

3606. What did you go to Mr. Hargreaves for?—It was published in the paper that there was to be information laid, and I went and left the information.

3607. Have you had any money?—No.

3608. None?—None; yes, I had 5 s. one day for my trouble; that was for my day's wages.

3609. What wages?—I mean, I broke a day for to go.

3610. Wait a moment; where was the notice for you to go?—There was no notice for me to go.

3611. For anybody to go?—It was in the paper regularly.

3612. To go where?—To go to Mr. Arnold or any other gentleman who would take evidence; it did not matter, any gentleman at all, in fact.

3613. Then to whom did you go first; Mr. Arnold or Mr. Hargreaves?—I went to Mr. Hargreaves; I had heard some men talking that they had given information, and through them I learnt it was Mr. Hargreaves was taking evidence.

3614. Had they been paid for it?—No, I did not say so.

3615. Had you heard that they had been paid?—No, not a word.

3616. Had you made a claim for 10 l. on Mr. Ripley's committee before you went to Mr. Hargreaves?—Sam Abel told me that the money that he gave me—

3617. Had you made a claim on Mr. Ripley's committee for 10 l. before you went to Mr. Hargreaves?—Yes.

3618. And had been refused?—Yes; just let me explain. Sam Abel told me to go and spend this money on voters and treat them, and to use my influence on them to bring them to vote, and we should be well paid afterwards, and I showed Sam Abel a note that was written by the secretary, and he said it was very little indeed. I asked him to sign it, he said his hand was sore; he had got a rap with a poker at the election, and he said he could not sign it; but then I presented the note to Mr. Bray, and he said he would get it paid if Sam Abel would sign it, and he told me and Mr. Ryan to go on and we should not be underpaid, we should be overpaid sooner than underpaid.

3619. Mr. Baron Martin.] This was Sam Abel?—Yes.

3620. He started this committee at his own house?—Yes.

Mr. Giffard.] In the return which has been put in, Sam Abel has been returned as chairman of the English committee at this place.

Mr. Price.] I want to ask whether this 10 l. was a claim for services rendered.

Mr. Baron Martin.] Everything is a claim for services rendered.

3621. Mr. Price.] Then I want to ask him this: did not you say that if you did not get this 10 l. as you knew men were going to Mr. Hargreaves, though you should not like to go there unless you were compelled, if you were not paid you would do so?—No; I never said such a word.

3622. To Mr. Ingham?—I never said such a word to anybody.

[The Witness withdrew.]

PATRICK RYAN, sworn; examined by Mr. Giffard.

P. Ryan.

3623. ARE you a voter for the borough?—Yes.

3624. I will ask you at once for whom did you vote?—For Mr. Ripley.

3625. About three weeks before the election did you become chairman of a committee?—Yes.

3626. Was that a committee that met at Sam Abel's house?—Yes.

3627. About a fortnight before did Sam Abel speak to you about giving up your work, and devoting yourself to the election?—It was a week before; on the Monday week before.

3628. Tell me exactly what he said upon that occasion?—He told me I was to give my work up; that is, if I could, and that I would have to attend to the election on that week, and I told him that I did not know that I could altogether give my work up, but he said that I might go an hour or two; "You may work an hour or two at your trade, and give the rest of your time to us." Of course, I knew an hour or two would be no use to me, and that I should have to devote all my time to my trade or otherwise to the election.

3629. What was your trade?—I am a boot and shoemaker; then, of course, I left work and started with him on the Monday morning.

3630. What did you receive first of all?—He at first gave me 2 l. on the Monday week before the election.

3631. When next did he give you anything?—On the Wednesday night following he gave me 2 l. more.

3632. On the Saturday night before the election did he give you anything?—He gave me another 2 l.

28.

3633. Mr. Baron Martin.] What was this for?—When he first gave me the money on the Monday morning he told me I was to take it home, and go to a public-house and should treat parties such as I thought fit, and he said, "You need not be short; you can get money when you require it;" and he said, "After the election is over you shall certainly be well paid; we will rather overpay you than underpay you."

3634. Mr. Giffard.] Do you remember the same night a number of men waiting about the committee-room; the Saturday previous to the election?—Yes, I do.

3635. Were there any voters among them?—Yes; there would be a few.

3636. Did Abel come up to you that night, and speak to you at all about it?—He came and told me in the street that he could not get any money for the men; and the last Witness, Mr. Burke, and Mr. Davit, and me went on to the "Junction," and we saw Mr. Ingham.

3637. That was the central committee-room for the South Ward?—Yes; we up and we told him that we were at Sam Abel's, and we were going for our wages; Mr. Ingham told us to give Sam Abel directions, and we did; we came there for him, and Abel came down and met us in the street, and he said I have got a deal of money, and can pay the men to-night with it.

3638. On the Wednesday or the Thursday before the election, did Abel give you directions about forming an Irish executive for the borough?—It was not Abel; it was Jeremiah Ryan came to my house about it; he told me that I was to go to the "Junction Inn"; I cannot exactly tell what day that would be; he said I was wanted down at the "Junction"; that the chairman of the Irish committee would be required to attend there that night, and so of course I went.

3639. Did you see Jerry Ryan?—Yes.

3640. Did he give you anything?—On the Saturday before the election he gave me 2 l., and in the "Swan."

3641. That is an additional 2 l.?—Yes; that was before I got the money out of Abel on the Saturday night.

3642. Do you know at all what was the amount of the bill at Sam Abel's?—I do not; the secretary really kept the accounts; of course I was not a scholar; Thomas Davit was secretary, and he kept any account that was kept.

3643. Were there refreshments going on at this committee-room?—Yes.

3644. From the time you joined it till the election-day?—Yes.

3645. Did people order them and pay for them as they wanted them, or did everybody have them as they liked?—I never saw any paid.

3646. On the morning of the election did you see anything to drink brought into the room?—I was not there the first thing in the morning; during the day I did.

3647. Mr. Baron Martin.] Was that the polling or the nomination-day?—On the day of the election; the polling-day I saw whiskey divided.

3648. Mr. Giffard.] What was it from?—It was in a little jar.

3649. About how much do you suppose it was?—To the best of my opinion it would be half a gallon or very like, not quite so much; but that is as far as I can say.

3650. Did you receive anything after the election?—Yes, I got 12 s. 6 d.

3651. From whom?—I could not tell the gentleman who paid me; there was two gentlemen came and paid me.

3652. Where was it paid?—Up in Abel's room.

3653. In the Committee-room?—Yes.

Cross-examined by Mr. Price.

3654. Did you get any money from anybody but Abel?—Yes, I got 2 l. from his wife; that was to pay for the men on the nomination day at the cook's shop, because she said she could not provide them with dinner.

3655. Then you took people to a cook's shop and gave them refreshments?—Between 20 and 40.

3656. What are you?—I am a journeyman shoemaker.

3657. Are you in business now?—No, I work for a shop.

3658. Are you working now for anybody?—I gave over my work on last Monday morning.

3659. Before that had you been working?—I worked every day since the election up to last Saturday.

3660. Have you been to Mr. Hargreave's office?—I have been there about five or six weeks since.

3661. Have you had any money there?—I have not; I had not a farthing.

3662. You had voted for Mr. Ripley?—I did.

3663. How did you come to go to Mr. Har-greave's; I suppose you voted for Mr. Ripley on principle?—After I heard the petition was on, there was first one came and then another, and they kept telling me if I did not go down I should certainly drop in for it.

3664. Who told you this?—Different parties; none that I can see now, a man of the name of Steve Aiken.

3665. Is he an Irishman?—Yes, there were several told me.

3666. Did the Irishmen come and threaten that if you did not give evidence it would be worse for you?—The Irishmen came and said I had to come down and make a clean breast of what I knew.

3667. Did they not threaten you that if you did not come down and say what you could, it would be the worse for you?—They told me there was information laid against me, and my treating men in the cook's shop, and the drinking I had seen going on in Abel's. They threatened me, and I went down to see whether I would have any protection. I went down to Mr. Hargreaves and said I did not want any money, but I merely came to know if I would have any protection. Of course Mr. Hargreaves told me I would, and by means of speaking the truth I should get the protection of the law.

3668. Did it so happen that you had claimed 10 l. and had been refused?—I did not claim anything, but my bill was sent out.

3669. For 10 l.?—Yes, but of course I was not the party who made the bill out.

3670. Who made the bill out?—The secretary Davit; they call him Richard Davit.

3671. How did you make out the 10 l.?—Abel promised us he would pay us handsomely, and after the election was over we presented the bill to Abel.

3672. How long after you had been refused the 10 l. did you go to Mr. Hargreave's?—I did not go to Mr. Hargreave's with the view of getting any money.

3673. But you did go after you had been refused the 10 l.?—Yes.

3674. Did you see this gentleman here (pointing to a gentleman in court) three days before the election, at the junction?—I saw him in Mr. Abel's.

3675. At the junction?—No, I did not.

3676. Look again; did not that gentleman tell you that there was to be no treating on any account whatever?—No, I know Mr. Garnett; I never saw him at the junction, and he never said anything of that sort to me.

Re-examined by Mr. Giffard.

3677. Did I understand you that you saw Mr. Ripley at Abel's?—Yes, on two occasions.

Mr. Giffard.] These are the accounts (producing the same), and there are 2 l. professed to be paid by Abel to this man Patrick Ryan, and to James Burke in the account.

Mr. Avory.] This account is dated November 2nd, 1868. Mr. Ripley's committee to Samuel Abel.—Gas, room, and refreshments for six meetings, 6 l. 17 s. Then November 14th.—Gas, room, attendance, and refreshments, 8 l. 10 s. 7 d. The first was paid on the 9th, and the second was paid on the 14th of November. Then there is a separate paper paper. The 11 l. received of Mr. Ingham on the 14th of November was paid to the undermentioned canvassers: Patrick Ryan, 2 l., James Burke, 2 l. The others are immaterial. The total is 11 l. The receipt of the 14th of November is for the sum of 15 l. received from Ingham. They are both receipted by Samuel Abel.

P. Ryan.

[The Witness withdrew.]

BRIEN O'NEILL, sworn; Examined by Mr. Metcalfe.

3678. You live at 26, Eastbrook Lane, do you not?—Yes.

3679. Had you promised to vote for Forster and Miall?—Yes, I had.

3680. After you had done so did anybody come to ask you to go to Abel's?—Yes.

3681. Who?—A man called Samuel Abel.

3682. What did he ask you to do?—He asked me who I was going to vote for. I said I was going to vote for Mr. Forster and Mr. Miall; and he said that I must not do so; that I was to come with him and vote for Mr. Ripley, and that he would see me right.

3683. Did he say what he meant by seeing you right?—No, not exactly; he meant that I should have some money, I suppose.

3684. Did you then, after what he said, go with him?—I went to his house.

3685. And from that time did you attend his house?—Yes.

3686. Were you put upon the committee?—No, I was not.

3687. Did you partake of the refreshments at the house?—Yes.

3688. Did you get any money?—Yes, a little.

3689. How much did you get?—I got 2 s. at one time, 1 s. at another time, and 8 d. at another time, and 10 s. at the latter end.

3690. When was the 10 s. given to you?—I cannot say, after the election.

3691. Who gave you the other; did Abel give you any money?—Yes, he gave me 1 s.

3692. Did you get refreshments at Abel's?—Yes.

3693. Did you pay for them?—No.

3694. Did you see Abel pay anybody else?—No.

3695. Did you see anybody else receive any money when you did?—Yes, I saw several receive.

3696. Who paid them?—I believe he was a Mr. Ingham that paid at the Queen Hotel.

3697. Did you see it paid; you got the 10 s. yourself from Mr. Ingham?—Yes, and several others I saw besides get it.

3698. Who was Mr. Ingham?—I cannot exactly tell.

3699. Mr. Price.] He was the secretary of the South Ward.

Cross-examined by Mr. Price.

3700. You got your money as a messenger, did you not?—No, I did not go any messages.

3701. I do not care whether you went messages, but you got it and you asked for it as having been employed as a messenger?—No, I was not employed as a messenger.

3702. I do not care whether you were employed as a messenger or not, but you said so when you got your money; did you apply to be put on as a messenger?—No, I did not; but Abel said I would get this money at the Queen Hotel.

28.

3703. But did you get it on the statement that you had been employed as a messenger?—No, not that I know.

3704. What name did you give when you applied for your money?—I gave no name; Abel told me to go to the Queen Hotel and I should get 10 s.

3705. You gave no name?—He gave a name for me.

3706. What name did he give?—If I remember rightly, he said Thomas Brien.

3707. You heard him give a false name?—No, I did not hear him give the name at all; it was his daughter put the name down.

3708. Did Abel know your real name?—Yes, I lived close by, and he said, "You will draw 10 s. in Thomas Brien's name."

3709. You knew that that was not your name, and you went and drew 10 s. in Thomas Brien's name?—Well, sir, I did not think there was any harm in it.

3710. Was Thomas Brien's name called out by Mr. Ingham?—Yes, it was.

3711. Did you answer to it?—Yes, I did, and I got the 10 s. in it.

3712. Did Mr. Ingham, before he paid each man, ask whether they were voters?—Yes, I believe he did.

3713. Did you say you were not a voter?—Yes, Samuel Abel told me to say so.

3714. Has Samuel Abel such command over your conscience that you could put everything in his keeping?—I did not know it was wrong.

3715. You did not know it was wrong to give a false name?—I did not give a name at all.

3716. You answered to it, did you not?—Yes.

3717. You thought there was nothing wrong in that?—No.

3718. You thought when you were asked whether you were not a voter, that it was very wrong to say you were not?—No, he told me to say so.

3719. Do you know the difference between right and wrong; do you mean to tell me that you did not think it was wrong to tell a lie to get 10 s.?—I did not exactly tell a lie.

3720. You were asked if you were not a voter?—Yes.

3721. And you said you were not?—Yes.

3722. And you got 10 s. on the faith of that statement?—Yes.

3723. Although you were a voter?—Yes.

3724. Do you call that exactly telling a lie or not?—No.

3725. Had you voted?—Yes.

3726. According to your principles?—I voted for Mr. Ripley.

3727. And you had promised Forster and Miall?—Yes.

Re-examined by Mr. Giffard.

3728. Was any explanation given to you; did they tell you why you were to ask for the 10 s. in another name?—No; Samuel Abel told me,

B. O'Neill. me, you must go to the "Queen Hotel," and you will draw 10s. in Thomas Brien's name.
 27 January 1869. 3729. Is Thomas Brien a voter?—I do not know at all.
 3730. However, you were, and you were to draw the 10s. in Thomas Brien's name?—Yes.

 3731. You voted for Mr. Ripley, I think you told us?—Yes.

[The Witness withdrew.]

MICHAEL MANTON, sworn; Examined by Mr. Mellor.

M. Manton. 3732. Do you live at 75, George-street?—Yes.
 3733. Are you a voter?—Yes.
 3734. Who did you vote for?—Mr. Ripley.
 3735. A week before the election, did you see Abel?—Yes.
 3736. Did he give you anything?—He gave me 1l.
 3737. Did you get any more money?—I got 10s. the same night, about eight o'clock.
 3738. Did you get anything else?—I got 12s. 6d. at his house the Wednesday after the election.
 3739. Who paid you the 12s. 6d.?—I could not exactly tell you; it was at Sam Abel's house.

Cross-examined by Mr. Price.

3740. You voted, of course, according to your principles?—Yes.
 3741. You all seem to have done it; what was the 1l. for?—For work.
 3742. What work did you do?—Sam Abel told me to stop off my work, and go and work for him, and he would pay me on Saturday night.
 3743. Were you to work for Sam?—Yes.
 3744. What were you to do for Sam?—I canvassed for him.
 3745. How long did you canvass?—A week.
 3746. And you got 30s.?—Yes, I got 30s.
 3747. And you worked pretty hard?—Yes; I worked pretty hard.
 3748. Did you make a return to Sam of what you had done?—Yes.
 3749. Where did you draw the 1l.?—In his own house.
 3750. Did you go to Mr. Hargreaves?—Yes.

3751. How happened you to go there; had you made a demand for more money?—No.

3752. How was it you went there?—I was told that there was several parties came to my house.

3753. Who sent for you?—There was a man went down and told me that Mr. Hargreaves would like to see me.

3754. You knew that Mr. Hargreaves was getting up the case against Mr. Ripley, for whom you voted?—Yes, several came to see me, and wanted me to go down.

3755. Did they say it would be better for you to go?—Yes.

3756. That you would get a little money?—I got no money.

3757. They told you it would be better for you to go; how would it be better?—It would clear myself.

3758. How was it to clear yourself?—By saying it before my Lord, you see; he would clear me.

3759. You had taken money, and you had voted, and you thought that would clear you?—Yes; I worked for it.

3760. Were you not told you were not to vote if you were paid money?—I did not know anything about it; it was the first vote I had had.

3761. Did any one tell you before the election that you were not to vote if you were receiving pay?—No, not to my knowledge; I swear it.

3762. Can you read?—No, I cannot.

3763. Mr. Baron Martin.] What is your trade?—A labouring man.

3764. Mr. Price.] Did not Abel tell you himself that you must not vote, if you received any pay?—He did not.

3765. That you swear?—I swear it.

[The Witness withdrew.]

BARTHOLOMEW DURKIN, sworn; Examined by Mr. Giffard.

B. Durkin. 3766. ARE you a voter?—Yes.
 3767. Do you remember going to Abel's house sometime before the election?—Yes.
 3768. About how long?—A week.
 3769. Did you have any conversation with him as to how you were going to vote?—Yes.
 3770. What was it?—One agent asked me to go, or else he would send Sam to my house.
 3771. When you were there, had you some conversation with Abel; just answer what it was?—Yes, I told him if I went and voted for Mr. Ripley, I would be paid for it.
 3772. Did he reply?—I said I heard they were giving money to others.
 3773. What said he to that?—He said he would give me what I wanted if I would help him the last day or two.
 3774. When he said about helping the last day or two, did he say anything more about it?—No, he did not.

3775. Just tell me what words he used?—He used none; he said he would pay me if I worked the last day or two for him, and he brought me in and took my name down.

3776. Did he say anything about what he meant by helping him the last day or two?—No, he did not.

3777. Did he say anything about whether you understood what he meant, or anything of that sort?—No.

3778. What more happened?—I went upstairs, and they asked me if I would take a canvass book, and me and another man took a canvass book, both of us.

3779. What was his name?—John Loudman. They asked me if I would accompany him. We reckoned to work from the Friday following, the Friday before the election. We got no votes. He did not pay me then. Sam did not; we were upstairs on Sunday; we were drinking there; there; we had ale and bread and cheese all the time we were there.

3780. Did you ever pay anything all the time you were there?—I have not paid, and have not seen nobody pay.

3781. Were other people eating and drinking there as well as you?—Yes, they were eating bread and cheese, and drinking as much beer as they chose to drink. It was three o'clock on Sunday; when the people were turned out they left us upstairs; they filled it with beer what we wanted to about five o'clock; the mistress said there was somebody coming; Sam said he thought if we would take one pitcher away, and leave the other, they would soon take the one away, if he was a policeman that came; and they kept one filled with beer, and they kept filling it till five o'clock.

3782. That was closing time?—Yes; on the Sunday they close from three to five.

3783. Mr. Baron Martin.] Did you get any money?—No, I got no money.

3784. Mr. Giffard.] How was that?—He kept saying he would pay me day after day; he said on Sunday he would pay me on the Monday following, and on the Monday he said he would pay me on Tuesday.

3785. But you did not get any at all?—No; then on Monday between 11 and 12 I was going down George-street, there was three or four men with me, and there was a man came and asked me—

Cross-examined by Mr. Littler.

3786. Did you make any application to Mr. Ripley's people after the election for money?—No, not after the election.

3787. Did you make any application to anybody except Sam Abel?—Yes; I went down to the Junction in the Leeds-road before the election.

3788. And they would not give you anything?—No; their agent was there; I did not know him.

3789. What is your agent's name?—They call him Chriss; I do not know his name.

3790. Did you go to the "Queen" and ask for money there?—Yes.

3791. Did they refuse to give you any?—No, they did not; they said I would be paid afterwards.

3792. Did you go afterwards?—No, I went down to the "Queen," and they said we had to go up to the "Old Bank;" I went up to the "Old Bank," and I saw a young man there, and they said he was Mr. Storey's son.

3793. And he refused to give you anything?—No, he said I was to go back to the "Queen" again, and they would see me righted.

3794. Did you go back to the "Queen"?—No.

3795. You gave it up as a bad job?—Yes.

3796. Then you went to Mr. Hargreaves when you could not get any money?—Yes.

3797. Where do you live?—In York-street.

3798. Have you always lived there?—I lived in York-street at the time of the election; I have lived there going on five months now.

3799. Where did you live before?—Eastbrook-lane.

3800. Was it at No. 24?—Yes, I believe it was.

3801. What name did you vote in?—Bartly Durkin, or Bartholomew Durkin.

3802. You had left Eastbrook-lane when you voted?—Yes.

3803. When you went to Abel's, did you tell him that you intended to vote for Mr. Ripley, anyhow?—Yes.

3804. You always intended to vote for Mr. Ripley?—No, I did not.

3805. What made you change?—Because the agent axed me to go.

3806. And you went and talked to Abel, and then you had this beer?—Yes.

3807. Were you not told before the election that if you had any pay of any kind you could not vote?—No.

3808. Did not Abel tell you so?—No, he did not.

3809. You are certain of that?—I am certain of that.

3810. Where was Abel when he promised you this money?—In his passage.

3811. What time of the day was it?—At night.

3812. Was anybody else there?—Not in the passage, there was not; there were, further on, but they could not hear what we said.

3813. Were you asked whether you were a voter when you went to the "Queen"?—I cannot say.

3814. Will you swear that you were not asked whether you were a voter when you went to the "Queen"?—I cannot say whether I was or not.

3815. Were you not asked whether you were a voter, and did not you say that you were; and did not they then say, "You can get nothing;" be careful?—I do not recollect it.

3816. Do you know Mr. Ingham?—I do not.

3817. Look at that gentleman (pointing to Mr. Ingham). Did not that gentleman at the "Queen" tell you when you said that you were a voter, and had polled, that you could not have any money; I do not recollect seeing him at all.

3818. Will you swear that he did not tell you that?—No, I will not swear; I do not recollect it.

3819. Did not you tell that gentleman that you were a voter?—I do not recollect it.

3820. Did you tell anyone at the "Queen" that you were a voter?—I always told them I was a voter.

3821. Did you tell him at the "Queen" that you were a voter?—I cannot say.

3822. Will you swear that you did not?—I will not swear anything.

3823. Did not they tell you that as you were a voter, and had voted, that you could not be paid?—No; I cannot say that they did.

3824. Will you say that they did not?—No; I will only say what I believe to be the truth.

3825. Will you say that they did not?—No; I will not say anything of the sort.

3826. Did you act as messenger for Miall and Forster also; I did on the day of the election.

3827. Did you tell them that you were going to vote for them?—Yes; I did vote for them.

3828. You told me that you voted for Ripley?—No, I did not.

3829. You acted as messenger for Miall and Forster that day, did you not?—Yes.

3830. You were paid for that, I suppose?—No, not a farthing.

3831. Have you ever asked for anything?—

L 2

B. Durkin.

27 January
1869.

I have

B. Durkin.
27 January
1869.

I have axed was there any given, and they said there was not.

3832. Did not you get 5 s.?—I have not got a penny from them.

3833. Where were you a messenger?—Any-where; I were a canvasser and all.

3834. And notwithstanding that you were acting as messenger for Miall and Forster, and voted for Miall and Forster; you went afterwards and pretended you had been working for Ripley?—No, I did not.

3835. But you did go and ask for money at the "Queen"?—That was before the election.

3836. Did not you tell Mr. Ingham at the "Queen" that you had voted; be careful?—I will be careful and speak the truth; I did not ask Mr. Ripley's party after the election.

3837. Did you not go to the "Queen" and ask for money after the election?—No, I did not.

3838. That you will swear?—Yes; I will swear that I never asked them after the election, not for a farthing, and I voted for Forster and Miall.

3839 I thought you voted for Forster and Miall, because you could not get anything out of Ripley?—I promised them my vote six or seven weeks before; some money was going, and I thought I would go and see whether I could get any money.

3840. What day of the week was it that you were sent for?—It was on the Monday night before the election.

3841. To the "Queen," near St. George's Hall?—Yes, in the Wakefield Road.

3842. Whom did you see there?—I saw a good many people; I did not know them, only one, that was our agent.

3843. Who is your agent; what is his name? I do not know; they call him Chrissy.

3844. Is that his surname, or his christian name?—I do not know which.

3845. What do you mean by your agent?—He collects our rents.

3846. The landlord's rents?—Yes.

3847. In the place where you live now, York-street?—Yes.

3848. Just tell me the number?—62, York-street.

3849. What day did you go to the "Old Bank"?—The same night; there was not 10 minutes difference.

3850. Who was at the "Old Bank"?—There was a great many gentlemen; I did not know them.

3851. Did you go to Abel again after that?—On the Tuesday morning I did; I just saw him at his door, and he asked me to know what I was going to do.

3842. Did you tell him that you were going to vote for Forster and Miall?—I did.

3843. What did he say to that?—He told me I should not.

3844. He did not offer you any money?—He said nothing to me about any money the morning of the election.

3845. When did you first go to see Mr. Hargreaves?—It was last week; I seen him first at his own office.

3846. How many times had you seen him before then?—I do not remember ever seeing him in my life but once.

3857. When was that; since the election?—Yes.

3858. When was that?—Three weeks ago.

3859. What made you go to Mr. Hargreaves?—I was in the beershop, drinking, and I happened to see him.

3860. You happened to see him in a beershop?—Yes.

3861. Was he drinking?—I did not see him drink.

3862. What was he doing in the beershop?—I cannot say it was Mr. Hargreaves, but I think it was; I see him here.

3863. What was he doing in the beershop?—He were writing down; I gave my information as I am giving it in now; he was upstairs.

3864. How did you come to go upstairs to him?—I was axed to go up.

3865. Who axed you?—A man called John; I have seen him here as a witness.

3866. He took you up to see Mr. Hargreaves?—Yes.

3867. Did Mr. Hargreaves give you any money?—No.

3868. Has he not given you any?—No; he has given me money for support.

3869. What is the name of the beershop?—I do not know; the man's name is Dick Delaney.

3870. There were a good many people there that you have seen here to-day?—Yes, five or six.

3871. Did you have anything to drink there?—I had something to drink.

3872. Had you a good deal to drink there?—No; I had not so much.

3873. Did you pay for it yourself?—No; I did not pay for it.

3874. Who paid for it?—I see two or three paid for it, but I do not know who they was.

3875. They were not friends of yours at all?—No.

3876. How did they come to pay for your drink?—I do not know.

3877. Do you think that Mr. Hargreaves had anything to do with it?—I do not know; I cannot say.

3878. Did not they say that Mr. Hargreaves was standing treat for the lot?—I did not hear it.

3879. One or two of them had a little too much?—I did not see them; there was not so much drink going on that I have seen.

3880. There was drinking going on downstairs, and also in the room with Mr. Hargreaves?—Yes; but downstairs was the greater part; there were two rooms upstairs, and he was in one.

3881. Then the next room to him, where the drinking was going on, was where you went first?—Yes.

3882. There you had the beer?—Yes.

3883. When you had had your beer, you went and told Mr. Hargreaves?—Yes; I was called in; I had not above a glass when I was called in.

3884. Then you went out and had some more?—I had another glass or two, and then I went home.

Re-examined by Mr. Giffard.

3885. You told my learned friend that young Mr. Storey told you to go back to the "Queen;" how did he tell you to go back to the "Queen;" what had passed between you and him?—I told him that I were promised money, and I did not get it; and that I was told to go and see Mr. Storey, and that he would see me right.

3886. Mr. Storey was chairman of your committee?—I understood so; I do not know, and he told told me he were his son, and he called me into another room. Another gentleman was there; I do not know who he was, and this here gentleman said I had better go back to the "Queen" again, and I should get paid there.

[The Witness withdrew.

Mr. Baron Martin.] How many more witnesses have you?

Mr. Giffard.] I have a great many more, my Lord.

Mr. Baron Martin.] Then we will take them all to-night.

Mr. Giffard.] I can only say that I have 50 more witnesses; it would be impossible to take them all to-night.

Mr. Baron Martin.] I will not press you in the least; but if the matter adjourns itself from day to day it will go on here till probably Friday, or Friday week; and I shall write and tell them at Warrington that I shall not be there at the time appointed; but I shall go on and finish this case, and perhaps it will be over within a fortnight from this time.

Mr. Giffard.] I will go through the 50 witnesses carefully, and select some from each ward; probably we shall not call them all.

Yes.

3889. And were you put upon the committee at Mr. Abel's of the "Equity Inn"?—No; I was at the committee, I was not on the committee.

3890. Did you go to the "Equity Inn"?—
Yes, I did.

3891. How long before the election?—About a week.

3892. Did anybody ask you to go?—Yes, they came and brought me out.

3893. Who were they who asked you to go?—A man called Bernard Mahony and John Ryan.

3894. Did you go and see Abel that day?—I went to hear Mr. Ripley's lecture at Broomfield.

3895. On the Saturday night before the election did you see Abel; did he call you into a room?—Yes.

3896. Where did you go with him?—In a room in a passage, something like here; he gave me 5s.

3897. Mr. Baron Martin.] Who gave you 5s.?—Abel; John Ryan told me to go down and get some money.

3898. Mr. Metcalfe.] Did you find Abel in that room?—Yes.

3899. Was anybody else there?—Yes, a man standing at the door, a porter.

3900. Did Abel give you 5s.?—Yes.

3901. Did he say what it was for?—No.

3902. Had you done any work?—No.

3903. It was the Saturday night before the election that you voted for Mr. Ripley?—No.

3904. For whom did you vote?—Mr. Forster and Mr. Miall.

3905. Was anything said to you about voting for Mr. Ripley before that?—No.

3906. Were you asked whom you were going to vote for?—

Mr. Price.] I object to that.

3907. Mr. Metcalfe.] Were you asked whom you were going to vote for?—No.

3908. On the Tuesday after the election, did you go to a place where Ingham was; did you receive any money there?—No.

3909. Did you go with Burke anywhere?—Yes, on the Friday.

3910. Where did you go with him?—The "Queen's Hotel."

3911. Did you say it was after the election?—After the election.

3912. Whom did you find at the "Queen's Hotel"?—There was Pat Ryan and some men that I knew.

3913. Did you get any money?—Yes, I got 10s.

3914. Mr. Baron Martin.]—What was that for?—I do not know; they called my name out, and gave me 10s.

3915. Mr. Metcalfe.] Did Burke get 10s. also?—They gave Burke a sovereign, and he gave me 10s. out of that.

3916. Who gave it; do you know Ingham?—I have heard say it was Ingham; I do not know him.

3917. Is here?—I cannot say; I do not know.

3918. Look at that gentleman (pointing to a gentleman)?—I cannot say; I do not know him.

3919. Were there several other people there besides the gentleman who paid you?—Yes.

3920. What was happening to Pat Ryan?—He was chairman over the committee at Abel's.

3921. He was there?—Yes.

Cross-examined by Mr. Price.

3922. Were you put down at all on a list as a canvasser?—I was not a canvasser at all.

3923. You had voted the other way?—Yes.

3924. They never said a word to you about a vote?—No.

3925. Have you been to Mr. Hargreaves'?—Yes.

[The Witness withdrew.]

JOHN KILFOYLE, sworn; Examined by Mr. Mellor.

3926. You live in George-court, Bradford?—Yes.

3927. I believe you are a voter for the South Ward?—Yes.

3928. Rather more than a fortnight before the election were you at Patrick Ryan's house?—Yes.

3929. Did Sam Abel come in, the landlord of the "Equity Inn"?—Yes.

3930. What did he say to you?—He did not speak to me in particular.

3931. Were there others there with you?—There was others in the room.

3932. What did he say when he came in?—He said he wished us to go round to his house.

3933. What for?—For us to vote for Mr. Ripley.

3934. Did he say anything more?—He spoke some words to the effect of encouraging Mr. Ripley.

3935. Did you go down to his house?—We did not go down that day, we came out and went down next time.

3936. When he came again, what did he say?—He said if we would come down we should be treated, or something to that effect.

3937. Did you go down to his house?—Yes, we went down next night.

3938. How many of you went down?—I went with one man, John Divot.

3939. Was James Burke there?—That night he was, and Richard Divot.

3940. About how many were there?—About five or six at first.

3941. How many nights did you go there before the election; did you go pretty well every day?—I went very often.

3942. Had you any refreshments then?—That night, when we went down, we had some bread and cheese and ale.

3943. Had you bread and cheese and ale on other occasions?—At other two times I had.

3944. Did you pay for any of it?—No.

3945. Who ordered the refreshments?—Mr. Abel ordered the first night, and any other time his wife or daughter.

3946. Did you go to the nomination?—Yes, I did.

3947. After the nomination, did you go back to Abel's?—I did.

3948. Did you have anything to drink there? I had some drink in our committee-room that night.

3949. Where did you get your breakfast on the polling day?—I got it at Sam Abel's.

3950. Did you pay for it?—No.

3951. Whom did you vote for?—I voted a plumper for Mr. Ripley.

3952. After you had voted, did you go back to Abel's?—Yes.

3953. Did you have anything to drink there?

—Not just for an hour two; before the night was over I had.

3954. Did you have much drink?—I had as much as I could mind to sup; I had some, at all events.

3955. Did you stay there all day?—I stayed there till towards 10 o'clock at night.

3956. Were you drinking all the time?—I was not drinking all the time, I was making myself useful.

3957. But you did have some drink too?—Yes, I had some.

3958. Did you pay for any of it?—No.

3959. After the election, did you get a note from anybody?—I got a note at Sam Abel's house after the election.

3960. What were you to do with the note?—I got a note as a reason why I should go and draw the wages; I kept it for a while, for two or three days.

3961. Who did you give it to?—I returned it back again to Mr. Abel.

3962. Did you get any money?—No.

3963. Whose name was upon the note?—John Gintey.

3964. Was anything said to you when the note was given to you?—Mrs. Abel said that I should draw two days' wages under the name of John Gintey; but a voter could not draw money, so I did not draw it at all.

Mr. Price.] Mrs. Abel is hardly an agent for Mr. Ripley.

Cross-examined by Mr. Price.

3965. You never got any money, did you?—I never got any money.

3966. What is the matter with your eye?—A fellow knocked his fist agin it.

3967. You say you made yourself useful; did you go out to get up voters after you had voted?—Not another; we had them all up before.

3968. Then you had been canvassing before?—They were all canvassing but me.

3969. Why did not you canvass?—I never took the shop.

3970. Therefore you would not take any money?—No.

3971. Do you mean to say that you had any breakfast that morning at Abel's house?—I just tasted it, but I could not eat.

3972. Was any breakfast provided for you?—There was some left for me; I ate a bit, and supped a glass of ale, and set out and I voted; I could have had more if I could eat it.

3973. What did you have?—I had a mouthful of cheese and a mouthful of bread.

[The Witness withdrew.

JOSEPH PETTY, sworn; Examined by Mr. Giffard.

3974. I BELIEVE you are an engine fitter?—Yes.

3975. Do you remember, on the nomination day, going into the "Horse and Jockey Inn"?—Yes.

28.

3976. What part of the house did you go into?—Into the kitchen I believe it was called.

3977. I believe upstairs there was one of Forster's and Miall's committee-rooms?—Yes, I believe there was.

J. Petty.

*J. Peilly.*28 January
1869.

3978. Did Mr. Frank Willie come there to you?—There was a Mr. Willie when I went in.

3979. Did he ask you anything about voting?—Yes; he asked me who I was going to vote for, and I told him I had not told anybody yet, and I was not going to.

3980. What did he say to that?—I do not know that he said anything particular just then; there was another sat between him and me, and he asked him to allow him to come in his place; he did so, and he came and sat beside me.

3981. Then what happened?—He asked me if I would vote for Mr. Ripley.

3982. What did you say?—I said that I should not promise him.

3983. What did he say then?—He wanted to know why I would not promise my vote for Mr. Ripley; and I said that I had made up my mind not to promise anyone till the day of the election, and I should not tell him, nor anyone else, who I was going to vote for.

3984. Did he ask you whether you kept a pig?—He asked me if I kept a pig, and I said no.

3985. What did he ask you then?—He asked me if I kept any poultry.

3986. What did you say?—I said that I did.

3987. What did you say you kept?—He asked me if I had any to part with, and I said yes, I am not particular, anything of that sort I would part with if I got money for it.

3988. What did he say to that?—He said what had I to sell; and I said I had a game cock to sell, if he wanted it.

3989. Did he ask you what you wanted for it?—I would not set any price upon it.

3990. What did he say?—He asked me to go out of doors into the yard with him, and I did go. He asked me, when I got into the yard, if I would take 5*l.* for the cock on conditions, and I said, "Let me know the conditions"; I asked him what the condition was, and he said that I should plump for Mr. Ripley; and I said, "I shall not take it."

3991. What happened next?—He wanted to settle a price, if I would take it.

3992. What did you say?—I would not settle the price for some time.

3993. Did you ultimately do so?—I said, would he give me 10*l.* for it on that condition, and he said it was a deal of money.

3994. What happened next?—He said that this election was going to cost his father 500*l.*, and he said it was giving a great deal of money for a vote; I said "That is nothing to me."

3995. What happened next?—I said it was nothing to me; if he could not afford to give it me, I could afford to stop as I was. I wanted to leave him, and he bothered me some time in the yard, and said, "I just know now what you want; you want 7*l.*," and he said, "Here is a 5*l.* note and two sovereigns, take this." He said, "I am not particular about the cock; you can buy a cock for a shilling; that will do for me as well as that."

3996. Was anything said about having it back?—Yes; he said, "That if he bought this cock, he could sell it back," and I said, "What will you want for it back again," and he said, "I will take one shilling, it will be cheap at that." I said, "Yes, it will be cheap enough for me."

3997. I believe you refused to take it?—Yes, I did.

3998. You did, in fact, vote for Forster and Miall?—Yes, I did vote for Mr. Forster and Mr. Miall.

Cross-examined by Mr. Price.

3999. How long had you been there that evening?—About five minutes, I dare say.

4000. You found Willie there?—Yes, when I went in.

4001. What is he?—I believe he is a wool-stapler, or something of that sort.

4002. You believed all this about it costing his father 500*l.*, did you; this wild nonsense?—I believe that he promised me.

4003. Did you believe that it would cost his father 500*l.*?—How could I disbelieve him?

4004. You believed it then?—How could I disbelieve him?

4005. Did you believe it even when he said so?—I believe that he said it.

[The Witness withdrew.]

PATRICK MURPHY, sworn; Examined by Mr. Metcalfe.

P. Murphy.

4006. Do you live at 85, Gracechurch-street?—Yes.

4007. Are you a voter?—Yes.

4008. On the nomination day, did you see Mr. Peter Bains?—He came to my house.

4009. What is Peter Bains?—He is a shop-keeper and ale-seller.

4010. What did he want at your house?—He came in on the day of the show of hands, and he axed me if I was going up, and I said I thought I was; he threw down half a sovereign out of his pocket, and he made a motion to give it to me, but he handed it to my wife. He said, "Take this, if I give it to him he will be drinking with it," and he returned it to my wife.

4011. Did he say why he gave it you?—I was to go up to the show of hands and vote for Mr. Ripley.

4012. Did he say anything about beer?—He gave me two barrels of beer on the Saturday before that; me and another man rolled them out of his own cellar.

4013. What did he send them to you for?—He said it was to give a plumper to Mr. Ripley.

4014. What were you to do with the beer?—I sold it.

4015. Did he say whether he was going to send it?—Yes; he told me I should not be short of beer.

4016. Then he sent it in?—Yes.

4017. Did any further beer come in besides that?—Yes; the week after the election he gave me 16 gallons.

4018. When this beer came in, was your house open for Mr. Ripley's people?—It was open for Mr. Ripley's people, but none of them came in it; only till after the polling was over they came.

4019. He gave half a sovereign to your wife
on

on the nomination day; did he give you any money afterwards?—Yes.

4020. What was the next payment?—£. 3 10 s.

4021. Mr. Baron Martin.] How much did you get altogether?—A barrel of ale.

4022. Mr. Metcalfe.] That is three barrels of beer and 3*l.* 10*s.*; did you get any more afterwards?—There was no money after that.

4023. How much money did you get altogether?—The money I got altogether? I got 3*l.* 10*s.*, and a half-sovereign; I had got 8*s.* the week before the election.

4024. From whom?—It was from Mr. Binns, in his own house.

4025. After the election, did you get any more money?—Nothing; only the 3*l.* 10*s.*

4026. Did Tyas come to you at all?—Yes; and Mr. Brown came to take my house.

4027. Is Tyas a cabinet-maker?—For what I know.

4028. Was he chairman of the ward for Mr. Ripley?—Yes.

4029. And is Brown a bookseller?—Yes.

4030. What did they come for?—They came to take my house for a committee-room.

4031. When was that?—It would be about a fortnight or three weeks before the election.

4032. Was there any committee there?—Never.

4033. Were you paid for the use of the house?—Yes.

4034. How much were you paid?—Mr. Binns paid me 2*l.*; that was part of the 3*l.* 10*s.*

4035. You say that there was never any committee there?—No, nobody; no committee from the time they took the house till the day after the polling.

4036. Has it any license?—No, it has only a shop license; one room on a floor.

4037. Did you vote for Mr. Ripley, or whom did you vote for?—I voted for Mr. Forster and Mr. Miall.

Cross-examined by Mr. Price.

4038. Did you get your beer from Binns?—No, never.

4039. He never sold you any?—No, he could not sell me beer, as the license would not let him sell me beer.

4040. And he could not?—He did not; he gave me this beer to vote for Mr. Ripley.

4041. You told him you would vote for Mr. Ripley?—Yes.

PATRICK COLEMAN, sworn; Examined by Mr. Giffard.

4061. Do you live at the "Leys," in the Silsbridge-lane?—Yes.

4062. Were you at the "Prince of Wales" before the election?—Yes.

4063. When Mr. Ripley was there?—Yes.

4064. Who was in the chair?—Joseph Gibson.

4065. He is a butcher, is he not?—Yes.

4066. Was young Mr. Ripley there, as well as his father?—Yes.

4067. Did you afterwards go to the "Beckett's Arms," on another occasion, in Silsbridge-lane?—Yes.

4068. Was Mr. Ripley there?—I cannot say.

28.

4042. And you voted for Foster and Miall?—P. Murphy.
Yes.

4043. Who paid you the 3*l.* 10*s.*; Mr. Binns himself?—Yes. 28 January 1869.

4044. Did you give a receipt for it?—No, I did not; but he gave me one.

4045. Where is that receipt?—It is at home; when he paid me the 3*l.* 10*s.*, the other was an old debt. I paid back the 3*l.* 10*s.* for an old debt; due for four or five years. It was a debt for grocery since I had my first wife poorly.

4046. Did you go to Mr. Hargreaves' office to give an account of this payment?—I cannot tell.

4047. How many times have you been there?—Never, but twice.

4048. His receipt you say you have got; just have the goodness to send for it, and let me see it in the course of the day?—Yes, if it will do you any good, you can have a look at it.

4049. Did you go to Binns after the election; you and another man, to his house, and say that you were very sorry that you had told a lot of lies about him?—Never.

4050. Binns did not take you by the coat collar, and kick you out of the place?—No, he never took me by the coat collar and kicked me out of the place.

4051. Perhaps you had not a coat on?—I had a jacket on.

4052. Did you go there and say that you were sorry "We have told these lies about you"?—Never; I never laid my hand on the latch of his door.

4053. Did you go to the door?—Never, only as I walked past the door on the causeway; his house and mine are on one causeway.

4054. You never spoke to him?—Never; nor he to me.

4055. Do you know Mr. and Mrs. McTurke, who lived there?—No, I do not.

4056. Do you know Mrs. Metcalfe?—Yes, I do.

4057. Did you see her as you went by?—No, I did not.

4058. Mrs. Nudgley, do you know her?—Yes, I do.

Re-examined by Mr. Giffard.

4059. Do you see Mr. Binns here?—Yes.

4060. Is that the gentleman next to the policeman?—Yes.

[The Witness withdrew.]

4069. Did you see him, on any occasion, at the "Beckett's Arms"?—I cannot say that I did. P. Coleman.

4070. Who was chairman at the "Beckett's Arms"?—I cannot say.

4071. Did you get anything to drink at the "Beckett's Arms"?—Yes.

4072. Did you pay for it?—No.

4073. How many persons were there, when you were there, drinking?—It may happen a dozen downstairs.

4074. On the Saturday before the election, did you see Gibson?—Yes.

M

4075. What

P. Coleman. 4075. What did you say to him?—I axed him to put my name on the canvassing list.
 28 January 1869. 4076. What did Gibson say?—He said it would be all right.
 4077. Did he say anything more at that time?—No.
 4078. Did you go to the nomination?—Yes.
 4079. After the nomination, did you go to the “Bobbin Turners’ Arms”?—Yes.
 4080. Had you anything to drink there?—A few glasses of ale.
 4081. Did you pay for it?—No.
 4082. Did you see Michael Conran, Patrick Murray, and Michael Norton there?—Yes.
 4083. Are they voters?—Yes.
 4084. Were there other persons there?—Yes.
 4085. Drinking?—Yes.
 4086. Did you see anybody pay for anything?—No.
 4087. On the day of the polling, did you take Edward Quigley to Mr. Gibson at the “Washington Inn”?—Yes.
 4088. What did you say to Mr. Gibson?—I asked him to put his name on the canvassing list.
 4089. Quigley was a nephew of yours?—Yes, not a voter.
 4090. What did he say?—He said that he would make it all right.

Mr. Baron Martin.] What is the object of this evidence?

Mr. Mellor.] To show, my Lord, the treating that went on in the West Ward.

Mr. Baron Martin.] It seems to me to have no direct bearing upon the question: there has been no evidence hitherto of treating in the West Ward.

4091. Mr. Mellor.] Did you go to the “Bobbin Turners’ Arms” on the polling day?—Yes.

4092. Were many persons there?—Yes.

4093. And drinking was going on?—Yes.

Cross-examined by Mr. Price.

4094. Did you say that you saw Mr. Gibson on the nomination day?—I cannot say I did not say so on the nomination day.

4095. Have you never said so?—No, I have not.

4096. Have you made more than one statement about this matter?—I made first a statement, then I was overseen, and I went and corrected it.

4097. Were you overseen or overtaken, which?—I was overseen.

4098. You went and corrected it?—Yes, I went to correct one thing that I said.

4099. Were you at Dick Delaney’s beerhouse before you went to make the statement?—No, I was never in his beerhouse in my life.

[The Witness withdrew.]

WILLIAM POOL, sworn; Examined by Mr. Giffard.

W. Pool. 4100. ARE you a voter for the Bowling Ward?—Yes.
 4101. Were you a member of Mr. Ripley’s committee at the “Victoria Inn”?—Yes.
 4102. Did you get any money from anyone?—Yes, after the election.
 4103. Was that from Mr. Henry Wilkinson?—Yes.
 4104. Mr. Baron Martin.] How much did you get?—Six shillings.
 4105. Mr. Giffard.] What happened after that; did you return it to him again?—Yes.
 4106. How came that to pass?—I took my canvass book to him with another man, and he paid the other man 6 s.; he gave him his canvass book first, as this other man grumbled about his 6 s.; after that he picked it out that I was a voter and had votes.
 4107. He said that he found that you were a voter?—Yes.
 4108. Did he tell you to give him back the money?—He left word at the public-house.
 4109. What happened?—He sent to me at the public-house for me to give it back again.
 4110. Did he say what would happen then?—He said that I was in danger of imprisonment for taking it, if I did not return it. I had not all of it; I had 5 s. 6 d.; I had spent 6 d., and he said, “You must give me the 5 s. 6 d., and I will give it to my son, he can give it you again.”

4111. Did he do so?—Yes, he did.

4112. Did he tell you why it was given back again to his son, and that the son was to give it to you; what was that for?—He said because he thought I had earned it.

Cross-examined by Mr. Price.

4113. Had you in fact canvassed?—Yes, I was a canvasser.

4114. How long were you employed?—Not six weeks.

4115. Who was the other man that went with you?—He was not the man that was with me when we got the money. I canvassed with him.

4116. Was he a canvasser?—Yes.

4117. And he accompanied you, you say?—Yes.

4118. Then this man said that he found out you were a voter, and you were to give the money back again?—Yes.

[The Witness withdrew.]

WILLIAM HANDY, sworn; Examined by Mr. Metcalf.

W. Handy. 4119. Do you live at 142, Vincent-street?—Yes.
 4120. On the morning of the polling were you waiting at the poll-booth?—Close against it.
 4121. Did Gallagher come to you?—Yes.
 4122. What is his Christian name?—Patrick.

4123. What did he say to you?—He asked me—

4124. Had you on that morning promised to vote for Forster and Miall?—Yes.

4125. Were you waiting at the pollingplace?—Yes.

4126. At

4126. At a quarter past eight he came to you, and what did he say?—He asked me if I had got my name down as a canvasser.

4127. What else did he say?—I told him I had not; he said, if you come down I can get your name down now.

4128. Did he say what was the object or where he was to put it down?—At the "Washington Hotel."

4129. Did he say what would be the effect of putting your name down?—He said I would get a day's wages if I were to vote for their side.

4130. Did he say how much it was to be?—I understood at that time that it would be 6 s.

4131. What did you say?—I said I would.

4132. Did he then take you to the "Washington Hotel"?—Yes, we both went in together.

4133. Was there a committee sitting there?—Yes.

4134. Were any people that you knew there in the room?—Yes, Joseph Gibson only, and another man at the door, keeping the door.

4135. Was he taking part in the election; what was he?—He came and took my name down.

4136. Do you see Mr. Joseph Gibson there?—Yes, this is him (pointing him out).

4137. What did he say?—He asked me if I was a voter, and I said I was; he said, "Will you vote for Mr. Ripley?" I said, "Yes;" he said, "Will you give Mr. Ripley a plumper?" and I said I would; he said, "If you do not I shall see it in the list." That is all he said to me. Then he put my name down on a bit of paper, not into a book, and put it into his pocket.

4138. What did you do then?—I went and voted for Mr. Ripley.

4139. A plumper?—Yes.

4140. On the Friday night after the election did you go to the "Black Bull Inn"?—Yes.

4141. Whom did you see there?—I did not see any person that I knew, only Mr. Gibson. I called him out and told him I wanted paying, and he said my name was not there, and he told me to go to his house in a quarter of an hour.

4142. Did you go to his house?—Yes.

4143. Did you see Gibson there?—Yes, Mr. Gibson and his wife sat at the fire.

4144. What took place there?—She gave me 5 s., and I said, "Is this all?" and he said, "Give him 5 s. more; I put his name down for two days."

4145. Did she give you the 5 s.?—Yes; she gave me 5 s. more.

4146. Then you got 10 s.?—Yes.

4147. Did you do any work at all?—Not a bit.

4148. That was on the morning of the voting?—Yes; about 10 o'clock of the morning of polling.

4149. Had you been in the town at all up to the previous Saturday?—Not up to Saturday evening.

Cross-examined by Mr. Price.

4150. When you went to Mr. Gibson's house, did not Gallagher go with you?—Yes.

4151. Did not Gallagher tell Mr. Gibson that you were a non-voter?—No.

4152. You swear that?—Yes, I swear it; he did not tell him nor tell her.

28.

4153. Did Gallagher say so?—No; he did not. W. Handy.

4154. To anybody?—I never heard him.

4155. Were you present?—I was present at that time. 28 January 1869.

4156. Upon your oath, did not Gallagher tell Mrs. Gibson before she gave you the 5 s., that you were not a voter?—She did not; I did not hear him.

4157. Will you swear he did not?—Yes; I will swear that he did not; not in my hearing.

4158. Did Gallagher go in before you?—We both went in together.

4159. Were you together all the time?—Yes; not above five minutes.

4160. You heard everything that took place, and you swear that he never said so?—Not in my hearing.

4161. Did Gallagher put you down first on the list?—He did not put my name down at all.

4162. What are you?—A hawker.

4163. What do you hawk, besides your vote?—Pictures; I do not hawk my vote.

4164. What are you doing for a livelihood?—I am at the picture trade yet.

4165. What are you making?—Sometimes 10 s. a day, and sometimes more.

4166. How long is it since you made 10 s.?—It is not a fortnight since; 10 days since.

4167. Have you been to Mr. Hargreaves' office?—Yes.

4168. Very often?—No.

4169. How often?—It may be about three times; I went in yesterday to tell him that I was coming up if he wanted me.

4170. Have you had any money from him?—No.

4171. Have you sold any pictures to Mr. Hargreaves, or Mr. Arnold, or Mr. Mills?—No.

4172. None of them?—No.

4173. Do you swear that Mr. Gibson was present when you got this money from his wife?—Yes; as close as I am to this desk to the wife; he sat in a chair against the fire, and she was sitting close against him.

4174. Was his son present?—Yes.

4175. His son is here, and the wife is here; do you mean to say, on your oath, that Mr. Gibson was present when you got that money?—He was present when I got the money.

4176. Have you a brother?—Yes.

4177. Andrew; was he a very active supporter of Mr. Miall and Mr. Forster?—I suppose he was, but I do not know.

4178. Did you talk to him about this matter a good deal?—Never.

4179. Did he take you to Mr. Hargreaves?—No; he was along with me when I went.

4180. Did he tell you that you were to go?—No; when I saw a statement in the paper about it I went of my own accord.

4181. Have you told anybody that sooner than face this out, you would go out of Bradford and go to the north, to a man they called Paddy Helps?—Never anything of the kind.

[The Witness withdrew.]

Mr. Giffard stated that after the best consideration he had been able to give to the evidence in his brief, he thought it would be only multiplying the evidence by calling calling witnesses of the same character, and therefore this was the case for the Petitioners.

Mr. Price was heard on behalf of Mr. Ripley.

HENRY WILLIAM RIPLEY, Esq., sworn; Examined by Mr. Littler.

H. W.
Ripley, Esq.

4182. You are one of the sitting Members for the borough of Bradford, and you are the respondent in this petition?—Yes.

4183. You were, I believe, a candidate for the borough of Bradford at a previous election before that which took place in the last year?—Yes; in 1867, I offered myself for a short time as a candidate for the seat which had become vacant in consequence of the death of Mr. Wickham.

4184. On that occasion I believe you retired from the contest?—Yes.

4185. And you issued a circular, which my learned friend Mr. Giffard has referred to, on your retirement?—Yes, I issued a circular stating that in consequence of the strong feeling which was entertained by my friends that I could not succeed unless I instituted an organised system of canvassing, I should retire, because I felt that canvassing was not a desirable course to be adopted, and especially a system of paid canvassing such as was suggested at that time.

4186. And you have seen nothing, I believe, to alter your opinion since that time?—No, certainly not.

4187. What was the next thing that happened, and which came in order?—About the end of the month of July it was announced that Mr. Thompson had resigned his seat as Member for the borough, and immediately, the following day, I believe, a number of gentlemen waited upon me to ask me whether I was disposed to offer myself again as a candidate at the coming election. The result of that interview was, that a meeting was held within a day or two between myself and some of my friends to consider the question, and at that meeting I stated distinctly that I had no intention, had Mr. Thompson continued to sit as Member, to offer myself again for the borough, and that my objection then was this. I felt that a course of action would have to be adopted which I considered to be exceedingly objectionable, and in the event of my offering myself as a candidate for the borough, and being brought up by themselves, I should certainly make one or two conditions at any rate in connection with the matter; the first of those conditions was, that I should not be asked to canvass any man in the borough, and secondly, that there should be no paid canvassers whatever. I believe that the gentlemen who formed themselves sat once into my committee, will corroborate this statement, and from that time to the close of the election, as far as I know, I believed no paid canvassing existed in the borough on my behalf. So far as I was concerned, I never, during all that time, asked any single man for his vote.

4188. After you had issued your address, what steps did you take with regard to the expenses to be incurred in the election?—Immediately after issuing my address, the question arose with my committee as to who should be the legal agent for conducting the election; but the selection made was not mine, but that of my committee. My committee selected Mr. David Little as my agent for conducting the election, and as it appeared to me and to them also, that there were four months in prospect before the election could take place, I in conjunction with my committee, talked the matter carefully over with Mr. Little, and it ultimately ended in my appointing him. I said to him, "I shall make no conditions as to the amount of money you shall expend. I shall open for you a credit at bankers, and I shall rely upon you to conduct my election on my behalf legally, fairly, and honestly, spending the money which is necessary, but not spending unnecessarily nor unfairly one shilling in connection with my affairs or for this election. And so far as I am concerned, with the exception of 20*l.* which I gave to Mr. Little's clerk, before Mr. Little became my agent, I have never spent one shilling in the course of the election, except the money which has passed through Mr. Little's hands.

4189. I believe you have carried out that precaution so far that whenever you have hired a cab to take you to your own house, you have directed the cabman to apply to Mr. Little for payment of his fare?—I may say that for a period of four months I went, as a general rule, without any money in my pockets, and my practice was to give the cabman from time to time tickets with which he had to go to Mr. Little for the payment of the hire of the conveyances which I employed during the whole of the three or four months of the election.

4190. I believe that until the last fortnight you did not know what the election had cost you?—Not till within the last fortnight; that is to say, not until Mr. Little produced his accounts to me on the day on which he sent them in to the town clerk. I did not till then know what the election had cost.

4191. Have you, either directly or indirectly, in anyway sanctioned or countenanced the expenditure of one shilling for any improper or illegal purpose in connection with this election?—Far from it, so far as I am concerned; but I may say that a rumour reached me some three or four weeks before the election, that some paid canvassing was going on somewhere, but I could never hear where it was, and at three or four of the following public meetings I expressed myself very strongly on the subject, and I have no doubt that there are hundreds of parties who were present at those meetings who will bear me out that I said that if there was any man in the borough who expected to receive one shilling for canvassing, I hoped from that night he would cease to act on my behalf, in connection with me in any way whatever.

4192. I believe that the way in which you conducted your candidature was this: you went from ward to ward, and from public meeting to public meeting, and made yourself acquainted with the electors in that way, letting them see you and hear you?—Yes. The first step that was taken in connection with the election as to the public was, that school-rooms, as far as it was possible, were hired in the various wards in the borough, where I attended and met the electors, and afterwards, during the following two or three months, I went frequently, and ultimately ultimately from night to night, to these school-rooms. And again, so far as they could be attended, I went to the same extent also to the large rooms that were hired as committee-rooms, and which, I believe, were held in a number of public-houses in the borough.

4193. I believe at last that the toil was so severe that, I believe, you addressed 17 or 18 different meetings in one night?—Yes, that happened this way: One of my most ardent supporters in Little Horton ward was my indefatigable secretary, Mr. Simpson; he said that he should like to introduce me to the whole of the committees in his ward in one night, and thence arose a rumour that I had really spoken at 17 or 18 meetings in one night, and we did, in point of fact, visit those 17 or 18 committee-rooms during one evening, commencing at one point, and travelling round from one to another, staying, perhaps, a quarter of an hour here, and 20 minutes there.

4194. With the exception of the occasions when you went to those public-houses to address the meetings there, did you ever present yourself at any public-house in Bradford during the election?—Never, except at the “Victoria Hotel,” where I half lived, as I may say, during the time.

4195. As far as the mere public-houses are concerned, did you ever visit one of them except to address the electors by appointment with your committees?—I never did, during the whole period of the election.

4196. During the time that you were going round through those public-houses, did you ever see any system of drinking going on in the committee-rooms?—In the first month of the election I visited the wards only at the school-rooms, after that I went to Scotland for two or three weeks, and when I came back the committee-rooms at the public-houses were visited, and from that time to the close of the election, I from time to time went, in consequence of appointments made by the committees, to those committee-rooms, which were sometimes in public-houses, and sometimes in school-rooms, but I never, at any one of those visits, saw any drinking, or any refreshments of any kind whatever, at any place that I went to. On two or three different occasions I remember observing on a table where the committee had their papers, that there were some two or three, and perhaps there might have been half a dozen, half glasses of beer, but no jugs, nor anything else; and never, with the exception of those two or three occasions, did I see any refreshments, or any drinking of any kind whatever, going on during the whole of the time. Nor was there during the time I was there any beer, wine, or spirits, or anything brought into those committee-rooms.

4197. I believe that so strong was your objection to it, that you took particular care to keep watch upon it?—I should certainly have objected instantly if I had seen a shadow of anything that appeared to me to be drinking, or anything approaching to it; in fact, in nine cases out of ten, the rooms were so full of people that there was only just room for me to stand. The table was occupied, and very frequently, and the room for standing at one end was just barely enough for me and three or four of my friends to get into the room.

4198. Do you remember a man of the name of Coyne coming to see you at the “Victoria Hotel?”—I remember a young man.

4199. Will you be good enough to tell me about that; you were at the “Victoria Hotel?”—Yes, I was.

4200. When he came up, do you remember who was present besides yourself; was Mr. Little there?—Mr. Little said to me that two Irishmen wished for an interview with me, and in the course of a few minutes he introduced a man, whose name I should not have remembered if he had not come into the court again now; it is Ryan, I think, but I am not quite positive.

4201. I believe that Coyne says it was so, positively?—Yes.

4202. What happened at that interview; just be good enough to state?—Coyne said that he had come on the part of his fellow-countrymen to ascertain my views, so far as he could, so as to be able to judge whether he could give me support.

4203. Was he introduced to you as a leading Irishman, having influence among his countrymen?—No, not at the moment; I think that Mr. Little, as the man came in, said, “I fancy that one or two of these men are Fenians.” That was Mr. Little’s statement as he came into me.

4204. What then took place between you?—The conversation which took place was somewhat to this effect, although I cannot profess to give you the exact words, but in substance it was somewhat as follows: that he did not care very much about the general questions that were the topics of the day as affecting Ireland, but the questions which concerned him were questions affecting his particular views, and those of a large number of his fellow-countrymen in Bradford, affecting Fenianism, and, in point of fact, as he said—

4205. Did he say whether he was a Fenian or not?—Not in words; but he said that he was in favour of a separate Parliament in Ireland, and in favour of a dissolution of the Union. Upon both these questions I told him he could not expect for a moment that I should coincide with his views, and therefore so far as they were concerned he must not expect that I could act or co-operate with him in anyway whatever; my advice to him was to drop his own particular views, and those which his fellow-countrymen held in Bradford, and wait for a few years to see whether England was not disposed to do justice to Ireland in a different way from what she had been; I said that I hoped when we met again we should meet with views more in accordance with each other. With this general statement he expressed himself so satisfied that he said that he should give me his support during the coming election.

4206. He stated that distinctly, did he?—Yes, unquestionably; I may have seen him afterwards, but I do not recollect it.

4207. However, on that occasion he distinctly stated that he would support you?—Yes.

4208. Did he say that he would vote for you?—I never asked him, and I may say that I never asked any man in the whole borough whether he would vote for me.

4209. Have you ever seen that curious production of Malone’s and Sherlock’s?—I never saw it before it was in court yesterday, or at all events the day before.

4210. It was never issued in any way with your sanction, was it?—No, not to my knowledge;

H. W.
Ripley, Esq.
28 January
1869.

H. W. Ripley, Esq. knowledge; I never saw it before it was produced in Court the day before yesterday.

28 January 1869. 4211. Then am I to understand that in no way, either in sentiment or otherwise, did it receive your sanction or approbation?—Yes; I have never read it yet.

4212. Did your eldest son go with you from time to time during the election, Mr. Edward Ripley?—Yes, occasionally he did, and occasionally he went alone, with some other members of the committee.

4213. But as a rule he was with you, was he not?—Yes, but I think he was as frequently with the other members of the committee.

Cross-examined by Mr. Giffard.

4214. Will you tell me this; you have mentioned that after the arrangement which was made that you should stand, you opened a credit at your bankers?—Yes.

4215. I suppose that that must have been in some name?—Yes, it was in Mr. Little's name, in my agent's name.

4216. Will you give me the date of it, if you please?—I really cannot give you that, but it was very early in August.

4217. I suppose you have seen since that time when it was?—No, I really have not.

4218. Was there any limit to the credit that was given?—No.

4219. So that Mr. Little was to be entitled to draw on your bankers for any amount that he might think proper?—Yes.

4220. Although you did not know till a day or two ago the full amount of the expenses, I suppose you can tell me this; to what extent did Mr. Little draw upon you upon that credit down to the present time?—I really cannot tell you at this moment, but what I said to my banker was this: "When the account is closed, transfer it to my private account in one item;" and Mr. Little will produce the accounts; I find that 7,216*l.* 4*s.* 9*d.* is the amount given in this pass book.

4221. The money actually drawn?—Yes, and paid, I presume; but you must add to that 20*l.* which I gave to Mr. Holt.

4222. I do not trouble you about that; you do not know yourself, I suppose, the persons to whom these different sums have been paid?—I never saw the pass book until this moment.

4223. Did you never inquire, because you know that to most persons' minds a sum of between 7,000*l.* and 8,000*l.* seems a large sum; did you never inquire to whom those sums had been paid?—No, I did not, but I thought it was a very large sum when I heard of the amount.

4224. Did you intentionally abstain from making any inquiry?—No, I did not.

4225. You are a man of business, and I suppose that usually you would ask after an account for a large sum like that?—Well, I either trust a man or I do not trust him; if it is a matter which I put into another man's hands, I leave him to conduct it and complete it; if not, I look after the matter myself, thoroughly and fairly; this, however, was a matter over which I could have no control, because it was in Mr. Little's hands to conduct the election, therefore, I trusted to him to carry out my urgent instructions, honestly, fairly, and rightly, saying that he should expend nothing upon the election that was not proper, legal, and right; it was in his hands, and I could not alter the matter in any way whatever.

4226. I need hardly point out this, that you of course were familiar with the fact that a candidate at an election is the last person who is allowed to know of anything that has been done unlawfully; were you not aware of that?—You are very much mistaken if you think that from any point of view, of that kind, I abstained from inquiring; if there had been any suspicion of the kind, I would have watched the thing from day to day, so as to have known everything.

4227. You have had some experience of life, and former experience of an election, or an intended one, and do you not know that the familiar expedient, in the case of introducing corrupt practices, was to prevent a candidate from knowing anything about them?—No.

4228. Have you never heard of that before?—I do not know that I have.

4229. You, as I understand, gave instructions to Mr. Little to do everything that was lawful and proper, but you gave unlimited credit to your agent?—Yes, I gave instructions not only to Mr. Little, but 20 of my committee were present, who all of them heard me say so.

4230. Mr. Baron Martin.] You have stated that you bonâ fide intended the election to be conducted honestly and fairly?—Yes, unquestionably, my Lord, and I can produce 50 men to whom I said it when Mr. Little has been present.

4231. Mr. Giffard.] Who is Mr. Holt?—He is the gentleman who collects my rents, and Mr. Little has had him as his cashier in this election, I believe.

4232. Who is Mr. Mumford?—He is a solicitor.

Mr. Price.] He was one of the eight solicitors who were appointed by Mr. Little, at the eight different wards, a fortnight before the election, and he will be called.

4233. Mr. Giffard.] Will you be good enough to tell me now this: after the election was over you did not, as I understand, inquire for your account of details of the expenditure?—Yes, from time to time I asked how soon he would submit to me the entire expenditure.

4234. Were you aware that the accounts and the vouchers ought to have been rendered to the returning officer?—No, I was not aware of it; not of my own knowledge at all.

4235. Were you told so?—No, I do not know that I was.

4236. Was it a matter of discussion that you had not returned the vouchers, lest those who were petitioning against your seat should get information?—Certainly not, so far as I was concerned.

4237. You never heard that fact?—No, I never heard of that till yesterday, till you raised the question.

4238. Nor did you inquire about it?—No.

4239. I rather assume from your answers, that there was no other fund upon which Mr. Little, or any other person connected with the election, could draw, except this credit to which you have referred?—I thought that I had made that clear enough already, and that there had not been one shilling spent, so far as I was concerned, but that which had passed through Mr. Little's hands, and he says that it has all gone through that account at the banker's.

4240. You do not know anything else?—No.

4241. Mr. Baron Martin.] You do not know of any foreign fund that was used for the purpose of the election?—No, my Lord, I do not know of any, and I do not believe that there was any.

4242. Mr. Giffard.] So far as your knowledge and belief extend, you believe that the sum which has been mentioned, is all that you are to be called upon to pay for this election?—I do; I hope so, at any rate. I mean prior to the declaration of the poll, at any rate; I both hope and believe so.

4243. Who is Mr. Ingham, the name that has been mentioned from time to time?—He was secretary in the South Ward.

4244. Has he no relations of business, or friendship, or intimacy with you?—Yes; he is a clerk in a concern in which I happen to be one of the directors.

Re-examined by Mr. Price.

4245. Mr. Little is a member of the firm, in Bradford, of Taylor, Jeffery, and Little. Yes.

4246. They have been your private solicitors for years, have they not?—They have been so for a great many years.

4247. They have had the conduct always of your business?—Yes, of the greater part of it.

4248. And they have your entire confidence?—Most certainly.

4249. Mr. Little was a member of the firm who attended to the election business?—Yes, H. W. Ripley, Esq.

4250. Was it with any desire to shut your eyes to anything that you thought— 28 January 1869.

Mr. Baron Martin.] I suppose that this is in reference to the 43rd section of the Act, because I am of opinion, upon the evidence presented at the close of the Petitioner's case that there was no evidence upon that section at all to affect Mr. Ripley.

Mr. Price.] Very well, my Lord.

Mr. Giffard.] I thought it right, my Lord, to make the inquiry that I did; at the end of the case I will tell you what my view is upon the Act of Parliament.

Mr. Baron Martin.] No one can complain of anything you have done.

4251. Mr. Price.] Was there any idea in your mind, when you put the matter into Mr. Little's hands, that any money would be illegally spent?—My friends know me better than that, and that when I say a thing I mean it. I said in the presence of many of my friends, that so far as I was concerned, not a shilling should be spent illegally; I pressed that upon Mr. Little most earnestly at the commencement of the matter, and from time to time, I said, "Are you carrying out my instructions?" and he said, "I am, and I intend to do so to the end of the election."

MR. DAVID LITTLE, sworn; Examined by Mr. Waddy.

4252. You are, I believe, a member of the firm of Taylor, Jeffery, and Little, in this town?—Yes.

4253. For some years before the last election, you had acted, I believe, as private solicitor for Mr. Ripley?—Yes, in conjunction with my partners.

4254. On the 5th of August last, were you retained to act as his legal agent for this election?—I was applied to to do so.

4255. From that time, were you exclusively employed in the business of the election until the 17th of November?—Yes I was, day by day.

4256. I believe you devoted yourself entirely to that business?—Yes, day by day and night by night.

4257. Was the first thing that you did, to form a general committee?—Yes, that was the first thing.

4258. I believe that that included a large number of persons, and afterwards a central committee, a smaller one, was formed?—I believe that the first committee consisted of something like 1,600, and before that was completed we elected an executive committee of something between 30 and 40 gentlemen; I think that half a dozen names were added to it afterwards, and that was called the central committee.

4259. Was the town, then, for the purposes of your election organization, divided, according to the wards which it contained, into eight wards?—It was.

4260. And a committee was appointed for each ward?—Yes; a committee was appointed for each ward, and a chairman was appointed for each of the eight wards.

4261. Did you issue printed instructions to each of the ward chairmen and send to them copies of?—I did, and they are in that box on the table.

4262. I believe that there is the eighth rule in those instructions, which is, that the chairmen of the respective wards were the only persons that had any authority to incur any expenses?—Yes.

4263. In fact there were eight wards and eight chairmen?—Yes.

Mr. Giffard.] Just see whether they are the same; we need not prove the same thing twice over.

The Witness.] They have not been produced.

4264. Mr. Waddy.] Was Mr. J. C. Wilson the chairman of the Bowling Ward?—Yes.

4265. Was Mr. G. B. Hamblin, chairman of the South Ward?—No, it was Mr. S. P. Anderton.

4266. Was Mr. Joseph Hick chairman of the North Ward?—Yes.

4267. In Manningham Ward was the chairman Mr. Thomas Ambler?—Yes.

4268. In the West Ward was Mr. Armitage the chairman?—Yes.

4269. Was Mr. Alderman Scholefield the chairman of Little Horton Ward?—Yes.

4270. And Mr. Robertson, chairman of Great Horton Ward?—Yes.

4271. That gives us seven?—Yes; and then there was Mr. Alderman Dawson, of the East Ward.

4272. Those were the chairmen?—Yes.

M 4

4273. Now,

Mr.
D. Little.
—

Mr.
D. Little.
—
28 January
1869.

4273. Now, first, what is the population of the borough?—I do not know; but I think that at the last census it was 120,000.

4274. What is the population, on the average, of the different wards; are they tolerably evenly divided?—No; Little Horton Ward is the largest.

4275. That contains one-fourth of the whole borough, does it not?—Yes, as far as the borough registrar is concerned.

4276-7. You mean the voters?—Yes.

4278. Are the others tolerably equal in population?—No; Little Horton is the largest, and then there is the East and the West, and Bowling, and Manningham, and North Ward, and Great Horton Ward are comparatively small.

4279. What is the size of the borough from end to end?—I cannot tell you.

4280. I mean, how many miles?—I have not the remotest idea.

4281. Mr. Price.] It is 10 or 11 miles, is it not?—Do you mean the circumference?

4282. Yes?—I should think it was more than that.

4283. Mr Waddy.] It is about four miles across, I believe?—Yes, I think it is quite that, if not more.

4284. During the time of the election, were you in the habit of attending the aggregate meetings of the different wards?—Yes.

4285. I believe they were represented by persons from each ward?—Yes.

4286. I believe that the chairman of your executive committee was Mr. Samuel Storey?—Yes.

4287. Did you and he visit the wards in succession?—Yes, we did, night by night.

4288. Do you remember whether you, in company with Mr. Ripley, ever visited the wards also?—Yes, we did; we began, after the executive committee was organised, and we took the round of the eight wards; we attended the aggregate meetings, and public meetings were called by placards in the eight different wards; after that, Mr. Ripley went to Scotland, and he was away from Bradford for a fortnight or three weeks, and during that time Mr. Samuel Storey and I went round and visited the different wards and the sub-divisions of wards night by night.

4289. Can you say whether, on visiting the different committee rooms, those instructions which you have alluded to were posted up in any of them?—That I cannot say; no, I think it was not so, because many of the meetings were not held in committee rooms at all; we had school-rooms, and places like those, where we could meet a larger number of persons; I have seen them in the rooms in different places, but there were many printed circulars that were sent out to the eight different chairmen.

4290. During the whole of the time of the election, did you pay, as far as you know, all the expenses of the election yourself?—Every shilling that was spent came through the check-book at the bank.

4291. Mr. Giffard.] That is not the question my learned friend asked you?—I do not know of one single shilling, with the exception of the 20*l.* which has been alluded to; not one single farthing was spent except in that way.

4292. It all passed through your hands?—Yes.

4293. Mr. Waddy.] It came, not only through your hands, but through that account?—Yes; and you will find that the check book and the bank book agree; there is a discrepancy, I think, of only 1*s.* 8*d.*

4294. You do not believe that anybody paid, nor do you know of anybody paying for the election, one farthing that is not to be found in that book?—I never heard of one shilling being otherwise spent until I came here.

4295. Did Mr. Ripley, after the first eight meetings were held, leave Bradford for a time?—Yes.

4296. Before he did so, we have been told that an account was opened at the Bank?—No; that was after he came back. When he went away to Scotland first of all, after I had been asked to undertake the conduct of this election, he said that he would send me down a confidential land agent of his, that I might have him as my servant during the election; he said that he thought him a good man to employ as cashier.

4297. Do you mean a Mr. Holt?—Yes; and before Mr. Ripley went to Scotland he gave that clerk 20*l.* I have had no communication with Mr. Ripley about the expenses in any way; before he came back again, the clerk had spent that 20*l.*, and I gave him 20*l.* out of my pocket; he paid me back afterwards; and when Mr. Ripley came back from Scotland, he then said, "There will be some expenses, and I have arranged to open a credit for you with the Bradford Old Bank, and that is the account (pointing to the same).

4298. That land agent, I believe, was Mr. Holt, the gentleman who is here?—Yes.

4299. Did he, during the election, afterwards devote his time to the secretarial part of the election?—Yes, entirely so, up to the present time.

4300. Do you remember that about 10 days before the election applications were made from the different wards as to expenses, and for information?—Yes, about a fortnight before the election I had a great many applications made to me as to the expenses.

4301. Just be good enough to tell me all about it; what was the nature of those applications, and how they were dealt with?—I was applied to from the different wards as to what were legal and what were illegal expenses, and I gave them my opinion of what were illegal and what were legal expenses; and from a variety of suggestions that I had received from persons who were interesting themselves in the election, I became afraid that they were going to run into excess, so I suggested to Mr. Ripley and a few of his confidential friends that the thing was getting beyond my control, and that I should like to be allowed to employ a solicitor for each of the wards, and they consented that I should do so, and call in eight solicitors, and that I should direct the election wholly in connection with the secretary. I accordingly went to eight solicitors.

4302. To take it generally, eight solicitors were so appointed?—Yes.

4303. In Bowling Ward there was Mr. Mumford, was there not?—Yes.

4304. In South Ward, Mr. Harris?—Yes, but he only stayed for two or three days; then he wrote to say that he did not wish to conduct the election any longer, and I subsequently put Mr. Hutchinson in his place.

4305. In the East Ward there was Mr. Terry?—Yes.

4306. In

4306. In the North ward, Mr. Bury?—Yes.
 4307. In Manningham ward, Mr. Cross?—Yes.
 4308. In the West ward, Mr. Mossman?—Yes.
 4309. In Great Horton, Mr. Duckett, and in Little Horton, Mr. Watson?—Yes.
 4310. From the time of their appointment had those eight solicitors whom you have named the exclusive management in each ward, and the whole of the conduct of the election as to legal matters?—Entirely so, just as if each had been an independent constituency.
 4311. Were instructions given that each ward was to be managed as though it were an independent constituency?—Yes, I gave those directions to the parties myself.
 4312. With regard to the money; between the date of the appointment of those gentlemen and the close of the election, was money ever paid to them, or to any of them, by you?—No, not one shilling.
 4313. Then, if money was wanted for the expense of the ward, who applied to you for the money?—The chairman almost invariably, and some sent the secretary.
 4314. Under those circumstances, did you pay the chairman, and take vouchers for the amount?—I drew all the cheques, with one exception, in the name of my cashier, Mr. Holt, and he took the cheque to the bankers and got it cashed, and paid out the money under my directions. He generally applied to me if he thought it of any consequence.
 4315. After that Mr. Mumford paid the accounts connected with the Bowling ward?—Yes.
 4316. Is Mr. Ingham the same as Mr. Ingram?—It is Mr. Ingham; there is no Ingram.
 4317. I believe Mr. Ingham was a clerk, or who was he?—I ascertained after the election, for I never knew really who he was. I found that he was a clerk employed in a company in which Mr. Ripley is a partner, and he was the honorary secretary of the South ward. I had most of my communications directly with him.
 4318. Did he settle all the accounts in the South ward?—He did.
 4319. Were the accounts submitted to you?—Not all of them, but most of them were.
 4320. I believe that some of the accounts that were submitted to you from different parts of the borough you considered were exorbitant?—I did.
 4321. Did you refuse to pay those accounts?—Mr. Ingham's were the first accounts of the South ward that came under my notice. I told Mr. Ingham that he was to pay no accounts that had not my initials, and I altered the greater portion of them, and I put my initials upon such as were to be paid.
 4322. That is, with regard to the South ward, is it not?—Yes.
 4323. Now, then, as to the East ward, were the clerks and messengers in that ward paid by Mr. Terry, of Eastbrook House?—Yes, they were.
 4324. I believe that there have been refusals to pay their's also. Is that the letter that was sent to Mr. Terry (handing the same to Witness)?—The name of the ward I cannot say, and it is not addressed to anybody. I cannot say to whom I addressed it, but it is in my handwriting; a letter has been handed to me in my handwriting.
 4325. Mr. Giffard.] What did you say?—Shall I read you the letter?

4326. No; just be good enough to repeat your answer?—(The Witness repeated it).
 4327. Mr. Waddy.] Whenever there was any application made to you as to money, and you thought there was any doubt about it, did you take precautions as to that?—Yes, most certainly.
 4328. Did Mr. Bury pay all the accounts in the North-ward?—No, he paid the clerks and the messengers; but the tavern bills were paid partly by Mr. Benland Knight.
 4329. In the Manningham-ward, were the expenses paid by Mr. Brown?—Yes, most of them he paid; I think Mr. Brown paid them; I did not pay them.

Mr. Baron Martin. I cannot but feel that Mr. Price is desirous to give this evidence, but it really does not touch the real point of the case; however, I do not like to interfere, because no doubt Mr. Ripley and Mr. Little are desirous to give it, but it does not touch the case.

Mr. Price.] Your lordship has two duties to perform; the first is, to determine the issue between the petitioner and the respondent. Your lordship has also a very responsible function thrown upon you in certain events by the Act of Parliament.

Mr. Baron Martin.] Yes, and I have already intimated that this Act of Parliament under which I am sitting, creates two incompetencies; one is created by the 43rd Section, and the other is created by the 42nd, and it seemed to me that at the close of the case for the petitioner, there was no case against Mr. Ripley under the 43rd Section, but there is a case against him under the 42nd; that is, if he, not by himself, but by persons for whom he was responsible, was guilty of bribery; and secondly, if he was guilty of treating; those are the two matters which, as it seems to me there is evidence upon; the evidence now given by Mr. Little, has in reality, no bearing upon the point, although I do not interfere to prevent it.

4330. Mr. Waddy.] Did you, during the whole of the election, ever know anything at all about Mr. Sam Abel?—Yes; I saw him, I think, two days before the election.

4331. Was that the first time you had seen him?—Yes; that was the first time that I had ever seen him in my life that I know of.

4332. Under what circumstances was it that you did see him?—He merely came into the room; I never spoke to him.

4333. With regard to Ryan, did you know anything about him before the election?—Yes; I did.

4334. Just tell me when you first became aware that there was such a person?—Ryan was brought to the committee-room; the central committee-room; I think he came in with Kitchenman, and Kitchenman told me that he thought he could be of service to us.

4335. Mr. Baron Martin.] Are you now referring to Jeremiah Ryan?—Yes, I do not know of any other my lord; I then asked him in what way he proposed to serve us; and he told me that he hawked newspapers about, I think, or pamphlets, amongst his countrymen; he had some printed thing in his hand, and he said, "If I could afford to print this, I could not go and canvass vass for you, but if I could afford to print this, I think it would be an introduction, and I think that I might go to my countrymen and sell a few of them, and so introduce the question of the election. If I were to go directly, I should be in danger." I then said, "If you will get 20 s. worth, or 30 s. worth of them printed, and bring to me the printer's note, I will pay it." I thought it was something about the election, although I never looked at it, and I directed my cashier to give him 30 s. in payment of the printers note; after that he came again in a few days, and he wanted some more, but I objected to that; but I was prevailed upon, and he brought another bill, and I gave him 25 s. He then came again, and I said, "I do not believe that you will do any good, and I shall not give you another penny. He went away, and I did not see him again; I had no further communication with him until after the election, that I know of, and I do not think that I ever spoke to him again.

4336. The amounts that you gave him, as I understand, were in three sets of money?—No; in two.

4337. Was the whole of that money that you so paid, expended in printing?—He brought me the bills, and they are amongst the vouchers now, at least they were given to Mr. Holt, my cashier.

4338. Did you, at any time, directly, or indirectly, give him any further money whatever?—Never one shilling.

4339. Do you know Kitcheman?—Yes; I do.

4340. Did you, at any time during the election, give him any money?—Yes.

4341. Under what circumstances was that?—Kitcheman came to me a few days after I had refused to have anything to do with Ryan, and said that I had made a great mistake, for he was sure that Ryan could be of great service to Mr. Ripley amongst his countrymen, and he thought that I ought to have put him on as a paid canvasser. I told him that Mr. Ripley objected to that, and that I should not do anything of the sort; he then said, "Well, you will lose the election;" I said, "I cannot help that," and he went away, and said that he would have nothing more to do with it. I said, "Do what you like, I will not have any paid canvassers."

4342. How long was this before the election?—Perhaps it was a month or five weeks before the election, from my recollection. Then Mr. Behrens came in during the day, and Kitcheman I understood to have been an old servant of his. I told Mr. Behrens that I was afraid I had offended Mr. Kitcheman, and I told him the circumstances. Mr. Behrens then said: "Is there anything illegal in having paid canvassers?"—"No, nothing illegal, but I do not believe that they will be of any use." He said: "Well, I will go and see Kitcheman, and hear what he has to say." I said: "You had better go and make peace up for me." He had been a very active man, as far as I knew. Then Mr. Behrens came the following day, and said, "I really think there is something in what Kitcheman says; and if it is not illegal to pay canvassers, I would employ one or two of these fellows, and see what good comes of it." Kitcheman came to me the same day, and he said, "Have you seen Mr. Behrens?"—"Yes." I can get Ryan and another man that he named; I do not know whether it was Coyne or not. "I can get them for 25 s. or 30 s. a week." I then said: "You can do no good; but in regard to what you said as to Mr. Behrens, I have no objection to employ them." Then at the end of the week he brought in an account for, I think, four or five people that he had put on in the same way. Kitcheman brought in the account, although I had had nothing to do with those people. He brought in the account, and I paid him; I think it came to 7 l. or 10 l. A fortnight afterwards I went to Nottingham, and I was there over the Saturday and the Sunday, and it turned out that another account had been paid by my cashier, in my absence, to Kitcheman, representing some eight or nine of those men; but my attention was not drawn to that, and I did not hear a word about it till, probably, a week or so. After that he brought in another account, and I think there were some 10 or a dozen that he had employed, and the sum had increased. I then said: "I will pay it, but you must dismiss these men; I will not pay you another farthing." I gave him the money, and I never gave him anything else. The account that he sent in after the election I returned, and I said to him, "I told you that I would not pay you anything more for paid canvassers;" and I never paid him anything else.

4343. You say that you paid for those canvassers; was it for them and their services, at so much per day, utterly independent of their votes?—I did not know that they were voters, but we could not get, as it was represented, any Englishmen to go into either the East Ward and certain parts of the West Ward, and these canvassers, or these Irishmen, were to canvass that part of the borough.

Cross-examined by Mr. Giffard.

4344. You have spoken of a person whom you call your cashier; do you mean Mr. Holt?—Yes.

4345. That is to say, your cashier with reference to the purposes of the election?—Yes; I never saw him till he was sent down to me for the purposes of the election.

4346. What was the course of the business between you; did Mr. Holt come and ask you for what money he wanted, and did you give him it, or did he submit an account to you?—He generally brought the accounts to me.

4347. Have you got those accounts?—I have no doubt that they are amongst the accounts on the table; they are all on the table, but you have not asked for them.

4348. Do you know that it was your duty to return the vouchers?—To the returning officer?

4349. Yes?—Yes, according to my reading of the Act of Parliament.

4350. Why did you not do it?—Because my agent stated that he thought I should be exceedingly unwise to disclose those accounts until after the election. I do not mean to make any boast about it.

4351. Who is your agent?—Mr. Markham Spofforth; he was employed by me.

4352. In pursuance of that advice that the petitioner might not get the information which the Act of Parliament intended to be supplied? Yes; that was my only reason.

4353. When Mr. Holt presented you with an account of what moneys he wanted, did those accounts show for what the money was wanted? No; he would bring me accounts probably amounting to, say, 40 l. or 50 l. If it was 35 l.

or 40 £., he would ask me for a check for 50 £., and I gave it to him.

4354. I see that the cheques that were given to him were in round sums of 50 £., 50 £., 75 £., and so on?—Yes; that was the way in which I used to give them to him.

4355. Just give me one by way of example; take anyone you like; select by way of example the highest one in the week immediately before the election?—I think I had better hand you my cash book.

4356. No; I would rather have the account, if you will forgive me; I see here there is 100 £. on the 16th of November?—Yes; and you will see how that was disbursed, if you will look to the cash book.

4357. I want to see an account, one of them?—I do not suppose as to that, that there might have been an account on that day at all. There might have been applications made from the different wards, here is a whole host of them, and you may see them all (pointing to the same).

4358. Mr. Baron Martin.] Just take one out? Here is one of 7 s., I will give you the biggest in the batch.

4359. Mr. Giffard.] You stated that when Mr. Holt came to you with an account which approached nearly the sum, you gave him a cheque for a round sum?—Yes; he brought so many accounts to me on a piece of paper.

4360. On the 16th of November, I see that there is a sum of 100 £. given to him; that was the nomination day, I believe?—You will see constantly plenty of them paid to Mr. Alderman Schofield, the chairman of Little Horton Ward.

4361. I did not ask you that; I confine you to your own account?—He came and said, "Mr. Alderman Schofield wants so much money," and he came and said that, "Mr. So-and-so wanted so much money," and I said "How much will do?"

4362. I thought you said before that he gave you those accounts?—Yes; at times he did.

4363. Can you point out any difference in the items, by which you can tell me which of those cheques were paid on accounts rendered to you, and which were paid upon verbal requests?—I cannot do so unless you give me the cash book. I see that there is one item for 80 £. for stamps.

4364. Of course, I do not deny that there were some legitimate expenses?—Yes; there were no doubt of it. I said that I would give you a list that I have in this parcel, and this is the list (producing the same).

4365. Tell me, if you can, on what debts Mr. Holt brought you an account in return, for which you gave him a cheque, and on what dates he came to you with a verbal message, saying that Mr. So-and-so wanted some money, and did you send it?—I cannot answer that question.

4366. You have mentioned Mr. Alderman Schofield as having received this particular 100 £.—Yes; to the 21st of December, Mr. Holt had spent 50 £., and he applied to me, and I see that I gave him a cheque on that day.

4367. Was that in answer to a written account, or in answer to a verbal request?—No; I think that he would very likely bring a memorandum on a piece of paper like that.

4368. Did he do so?—I cannot tell you.

4369. Cannot you tell me whether he brought a written account, or a verbal request?—No; I cannot, the thing is impossible, it was not in existence, this part of it.

4370. Where did you keep the account?—I mean that the latter part of it, on that day, was not in existence; when he brought me this, this book was the book that he kept from the beginning.

4371. Mr. Holt kept that book, did he?—Yes, and he began with that book.

4372. Can you tell me now, with regard to any of the books or accounts before you, whether you are now unable to say when Mr. Holt came with a written account, which he wanted payment for, or when he came with a verbal message, requiring a lump sum of money?—I am quite unable to say.

4373. You cannot tell me that?—No, I cannot.

4374. Then I must ask you for the account-book again, as that will give you no information (the book was handed back to the Learned Counsel). I see that on the 3rd of December you gave Mr. Holt a cheque for 1,200 £.?—Yes.

4375. Did he give you any account for that?—Yes; at the time, certainly.

4376. Where is that?—I do not know. He would come with applications from the different wards, and say, "I want so much money, or so many bills."

4377. What did he actually do?—I cannot say, it is impossible for me to tell you; just give me the cash-book, and I will tell you what he did do.

4378. I do not want to know what he did, I will ask that of Mr. Holt, but I ask you what you did when he ask for such a sum as 1,200 £.; I want to know whether he gave you any written account?—He would bring me a handful of bills.

4379. Forgive me, you are an attorney, and I ask you whether he did on that occasion bring you a written account or not?—I have not the slightest doubt that he did.

4380. Where is that written account?—I do not know.

4381. When did you last see it?—I never saw it after that day; he would have a handful of bills.

4382. What became of that account?—I cannot answer that, I do not know.

4383. Where did you last see it?—I would see it in the private room in my office, where Mr. Holt had a seat.

4384. In whose hand did you last see it?—In Mr. Holt's hand.

4385. Did he take it away?—No, not out of his own room, he would take it out of my room into his own room.

4386. As I understand, you gave him a cheque for 1,200 £. on a written account. What became of that written account upon which you gave him a cheque for 1,200 £.?—Mr. Holt would take it away out of my own room into his own room.

4387. He did do that, did he?—Yes.

4388. Do you swear that he did?—Yes, I swear that he did.

4389. Have you asked for that back again?—I have never asked for it back again.

4390. You will swear that there was an account?—I will.

4391. Did you read it?—Yes.

4392. And you knew at the time what was in it?—I did.

4393. Just hand me that book again. I am not asking you about the contents of the book (the book was handed back to the Learned Counsel).

Mr.
D. Little.

28 January
1869.

Mr.
D. Little.
—
28 January
1869.

Was that one of the vouchers which, in pursuance of the advice of your agent, you kept back?—No; that account would simply be a list of the vouchers that I kept back by the advice of my agent.

4394. Is that 1,200*l.* part of the sum that you referred to, the 7,000 l. and odd which Mr. Ripley has paid?—Yes.

4395. Under which head shall I find it?—A variety of heads.

4396. Then you must know; did you make out that account for Mr. Ripley for the returning officer?—My cashier made it out.

4397. Who is that?—Mr. Holt.

4398. What was the object of submitting a written account to you?—He could not get a cheque unless he submitted a written account to me.

4399. Then you exercised a discretion as to whether you would give him a cheque for the amount in the account or not?—Yes.

4400. Did you ever refuse to give it to him?—I have given him a less sum than was applied for.

4401. Have you ever refused to give him the amount, that appeared by his account to be due?—Never.

4402. You never repudiated any accounts that he presented to you?—No; I might have altered them, I might say, “I will not pay that, take it out,” and I gave him a less sum.

4403. You said that to your cashier?—Yes; my cashier brought me bills that had been sent in, he would come with a handfull of amounts written down on paper; then I looked at the bills, and with regard to such of them as I would not pay, I would withdraw them out, and give him a cheque for the remainder.

4404. Can you tell me which of these accounts you did refuse before the election, or that you altered?—Yes, “Armstrong’s Hotel,” and that is the only one that I recollect at this moment.

4405. Just show me that, if you please; was there a committee of Mr. Ripley’s sitting at the “Armstrong Hotel?”—There was for a few days.

4406. Who was the chairman there?—Mr. Scofield.

4407. Was he the gentleman who wanted 100*l.*?—Yes.

4408. Who was the secretary there?—Mr. Simpson.

4409. How came you to refuse that amount?—Because they told me that it was an exorbitant sum, and it ought not to be paid.

4410. That was after the election, I suppose?—No, it was before.

4411. You have given me no date of it at all?—It was two months before, it was the first night that they opened Little Horton ward, and there was some misunderstanding, and they left the house; the account was sent in, and they said that I was not to pay it, and I did not pay it.

4412. You have said, that you personally knew Ryan?—Yes.

4413. When did you first become acquainted with him?—If you will give me that book, I dare say I can tell you.

4414. Do you mean that Ryan’s name will appear there?—There will be 25*s.* and 30*s.*, that were paid to him.

4415. Just look at that bill, it is one of the vouchers that you have been handing across the table, and do you see “1,000 Irish songs,” is that part of it?—No.

4416. Keep it in your hand for a moment; can you tell me who ordered those, or is that one of the accounts that you paid?—Yes.

4417. Who ordered them?—I do not know.

4418. Who can tell me that?—I should think the printer.

4419. So should I, but his name does not appear?—Yes, it does.

4420. Do you mean to say, that nobody but the printer can tell me for what you paid?—I have no doubt that somebody else can tell.

4421. Who can tell me?—Mr. Holt can, perhaps.

4422. Did you go to the committee room, at St. George’s Hall, in the middle of September?—I think we went there in August, if I recollect rightly.

4423. That might be, and you might have gone in September also?—We had them, I believe, up to some time in October.

4424. Do you remember the fact of the publication of some Irish national songs?—I do not remember anything about it; I never saw them that I recollect.

4425. Nor heard of them?—Not that I am aware of.

4426. The 1200 l. that I was asking you about, does not appear in that book at all?—What was the date of it.

4427. The 3rd December; it is given under the head of December the 1st, I see. I suppose that that is some mode of keeping the book, which prevented it from appearing under the 3rd as the check book does; that reminds me to ask you when this book was written?—From day to day.

4428. Then there certainly must be some mistake?—Mr. Holt will answer that question, I did not write it.

4429. A cheque could not have been entered, at least I suppose not, on the 1st of December for 1,200 l., which was not in existence till the 2nd of December?—That I cannot answer.

4430. You know nothing about it?—You will find the same cheque on the same date, in the banker’s pass book.

4431. On the 3rd it would be entered, and it might have been cashed at the bank the day after, but I do not see how it could have been entered the day before it was drawn?—I do not know.

4432. Will you have the goodness to look at that book, and tell me do you find entries of repayments or payments to Mr. Kitcheman, to the extent of between 100 l. and 200 l.—146 l. 18*s.* my learned friend tells me it is?—What is the date?

4433. The last payment is the 14th of November, 50 l. It begins with the 5th of October 12*s.* 6*d.*, 12*s.* 6*d.*, 9*l.* 15*s.* 6*d.*, 6*l.* 5*s.* 6*d.*, 3*l.* 15*s.* 9*d.*, and 9*l.* 12*s.*—Mr. Kitcheman got on November the 14th, 17 l. 10*s.*, 20 l. 17*s.* 5*d.*, and 18 l. 15*s.*

4434. On the 17th of November there are three entries of 9*l.* 15*s.*, 12 l. 5*s.*, and 11 l.—Yes.

4435. On the 14th of November there is entered, “Paid E. Kitcheman, 50 l. on account;” where is that account?—There is no 50*l.* here on account to Mr. Kitcheman on that date.

4436. I am told there is on November the 14th?—No, there were three sums paid to him.

Mr. Baron Martin. I do not want to interfere in the cross-examination, but it has no bearing upon the matter before the Court.

4437. Mr.

4437. Mr. Giffard.] After what his Lordship has said I will not pursue this further, but I will just call your attention to this, that you are in error?—I merely saw him in the committee-room. I saw 150 people besides him.

4438. I see you are in error there; on the 14th of November there is an entry of 50 l. I think to Mr. Kitcheman on account; do you find that written there?—I do.

4439. Where is that account?—I know that that account does exist, for I saw it to-day.

Mr. Price. It is in the refused accounts.

4440. Mr. Giffard.] Has Mr. Kitcheman's account been refused?—Yes; Mr. Kitcheman's account has been refused—it is 80 l. and something—he was paid 50 l.; that would be in the East Ward; the balance of it is disallowed; there is the account.

4441. Have you taken out the gross amount of the rejected accounts?—Yes, I have.

4442. What do they come to?—About 1,100 l. I think.

4443. Are those disputed accounts entered as part of the 7,000 l. odd?—They are not.

4444. Mr. Baron Martin.] They are independent of the 7,000 l.?—Yes, they are independent of the 7,000 l.

4445. Mr. Giffard.] Those are entirely disputed as I understand?—Altogether.

4446. Are there accounts upon which you have tendered a certain sum?—Yes.

4447. What do those amount to?—The accounts upon which tenders were made and accepted are in here. Those that were not are also in here, and the sum of 270 l. I paid to this suspense account at the bank.

4448. I ask you to give me the amount of those accounts upon which you have tendered the sum of 225 l.?—They are about 300 l.

4449. Those also do not appear in the accounts?—Only the sums that were tendered.

4450. As I understand the amount which appears in the account which you sent to the returning officer of what you have paid, where the parties have accepted in payment less than was actually demanded, is the sum that you have actually paid, and not the sum originally demanded?—Precisely so.

4451. Can you tell me what the sum originally demanded was?—I told you 1,100 l.

4452. I am not now speaking of the rejected accounts, but of those for which you had accepted the payment of a less sum in full satisfaction and discharge?—They are included in the accounts given to the returning officer; it was the best payment I could make, and I included them; it was the sum I paid to the suspense account.

4453. What was the sum paid to the suspense account?—£. 270; it is included in the 7,000 l.

4454. Those gross amounts which you have rendered to the returning officer are obtained from some detail?—Yes.

4455. Where is that detail?—It is here (handing some vouchers to the learned counsel).

4456. Is your own charge against Mr. Ripley included in this account at all?—I have no charge against Mr. Ripley.

4457. As I understand, you are not going to make him any charge for professional services?—Not any charge whatever.

4458. Under any circumstances, or at any time?—Under any circumstances, or without any mental reservation whatever.

4459. Do not you expect to be paid anything for your services as legal agent?—Not one farthing.

4460. Mr. Baron Martin.] They were gratuitous?—Yes.

4461. As a friend to the cause?—No, not to the cause, but to Mr. Ripley personally. I am not of Mr. Ripley's political creed; it was not to the cause, but to Mr. Ripley as a friend and a very good client.

4462. Mr. Giffard.] Does that apply to the other attorneys whom you appointed?—No; their accounts are all included in the account which I rendered to the returning officer.

4463. Mr. Baron Martin.] As I understand you, this 7,000 l. is exclusive of any charge for your services; you have made no professional charge?—Yes; that is so.

4464. What is your regular professional charge?—I was employed for about four months, perhaps not quite that; about three months say, and, if I had made a professional charge, I should have expected to have been paid something like five guineas a-day, because I was at it from nine in the morning till 12 at night.

4465. That would be about 500 guineas?—Something like that.

4466. Mr. Giffard.] Those accounts, as you have very handsomely given up your professional charge, do not include what would be charged for professional services for yourself?—They do not; and I should wish to state that, in 1859, we had a contested election on behalf of Mr. Harris, another good client, and we did not make one single farthing of charge, and never got sixpence.

4467. I am not going to dispute what you say?—I am not going to do so for you.

Re-examined by Mr. Price.

4468. With regard to sending in the accounts, because we know it is made an offence under the statute, and therefore I wish you to clear it up, did you really take Mr. Spofforth's advice as to what course you should pursue?—I did.

4469. I know my learned friend thinks highly of Mr. Spofforth; but, however, you took advice, because you read the statute and wished to be quite clear about the matter?—I did.

4470. Mr. Spofforth advised you whilst there was a petition pending?—Yes.

4471. He had never known a case, whilst a petition was pending, of returning vouchers?—He did say so.

4472. As to Abel, my Lord said something about him; I think all you say with regard to Abel is that you saw him two days before the election?—Yes, the first time I ever saw him in my life; he came into the committee-room.

Mr. Baron Martin.] That arose from an observation that it seemed to me that, as at present advised, the agency of Abel, Jeremiah Ryan, and Mr. Kitcheman had been established.

Mr. Price.] I am prepared to call all those solicitors who attended the different wards; but I do not understand my learned friend to attack them.

Mr. Baron Martin.] I expect that their evidence will be just the same as Mr. Little's. I am satisfied that Mr. Terry is a great deal too experienced a man, and a man who understands his business a great deal deal better than knowingly to do an illegal thing, which must of necessity defeat his client's object; and I believe that Mr. Little would not knowingly do the same thing either. It is utterly absurd to suppose that they would knowingly and wilfully do a thing that was illegal.

Mr. Price.] I will call Mr. Holt, if my learned friend wishes it.

Mr. Giffard.] I say, if Mr. Holt is not called, the probability is that I shall make some observations to your Lordship; but I must let my learned friend conduct his case in his own way.

Mr. JOSEPH HOLT, sworn; Examined by Mr. Price.

Mr. J. Holt.

4473. We understand you were employed by Mr. Little during the last election, to act as cashier?—I was lent to Mr. Little by Mr. Ripley.

4474. What were your duties?—My duties were to receive the accounts, check them and pay them after Mr. Little had examined them, and to do anything else in the committee-room which I was required for.

4475. What was your course of business when you went to Mr. Little for cheques?—When I went to Mr. Little for cheques I presented to him the accounts which required payment, and asked for a cheque for about the amount, sometimes more, sometimes less; it depended upon the balance that I might have in hand at the time.

4476. Therefore the cheques did not always exactly correspond with the exact accounts that you took him, because you might have a balance?—Never, except in one case.

4477. Did you, in every case, take to him an account made out by yourself, an abstract of what you received in the shape of bills?—No, only once or twice; I generally took the whole of the accounts in my hand; I took the bills themselves, and Mr. Little would put his initials "E. L." upon them as correct and sanctioning their payment.

Cross-examined by Mr. Giffard.

4478. Where is that account for 1,200 l. that you received on the 2nd of December?—The cheque that I received for 1,200 l. I have not the account of; it was a number of accounts which required paying; the printer's account and so on.

4479. Did you or did you not, bring an account of the items of which that 1,200 l. consisted to Mr. Little; did you show it to Mr. Little, and did you then take it away again?—I believe I showed the figures on paper.

4480. Figures on paper is very like an account; where is it?—I have not it.

4481. What has become of it?—I do not know; it was merely a memorandum.

4482. What did you do with it?—I do not know that I did anything with it; I do not recollect.

4483. Did you take it away?—No.

4484. Do you mean to swear that you did not take it away?—(The Witness hesitated.)

4485. What did you do with that account?—I do not know what I did with that account.

4486. Mr. Little has sworn that you took it away: have you heard him say so?—Yes, I heard him; I saw it last on the day when I presented the accounts to him.

4487. Have you never seen it since?—I believe not.

4488. Have you not the least notion what became of it?—I have not.

4489. How did you get this account?—It was merely a summary of accounts which I received from different people for amounts owing to them by Mr. Little.

4490. Where did you get the bills that you say you brought in?—The accounts were delivered sometimes to Mr. Little, and sometimes to myself.

4491. Mr. Little did not want you to bring to him accounts which had been delivered to himself; I want to know where you got the accounts which you brought to Mr. Little?—They were brought to me.

4492. By whom?—By parties who required payment of them.

4493. Where were you to be found in order that the parties might get payment?—At the central committee-room, and at Mr. Little's office.

4494. Then those accounts were accounts which you received while you were sitting at the central committee-room, and at Mr. Little's office?—Yes.

4495. Did you pay any moneys beforehand so as to put a person in funds, or only amounts actually incurred?—I paid to Mr. Scholefield of Little Horton ward money on account.

4496. Did you pay people or give people money to put them in pocket to pay current expenses before they had actually incurred them?—I gave them money on account of those expenses.

4497. For expenses they were to incur?—That they were to incur or had incurred.

4498. Did you take any receipts from them?—I did.

4499. Among other people, did you give Mr. Kitchenman any money?—Never, except the receipts which I have in these accounts.

4500. That does not give me any answer; did you give him any money in that way before he actually expended it?—Once.

4501. What money was that?—£. 50.

4502. When was that?—It was in October; the amount which you have mentioned was some time ago.

4503. Just look; I think you will find that that is the 14th of November; you kept the book; just look at the book yourself (handing the cash book to the Witness); what paper was it that Mr. Little gave you just now?—Mr. Little did not give me a paper.

4504. I beg your pardon, somebody said he did?—It was paid on the 14th of November; it was my mistake.

4505. What was it for?—On account of committee-room expenses, to pay the bills as attached to the account.

4506. You told me that you did give Mr. Kitchenman money in advance on that occasion?—Yes, I did.

4507. What was it for?—It was for committee-room expenses which are shown in that bill.

4508. An account of expenses which were to be be incurred after the receipt of the 50 l.?—Which had been incurred.

4509. Now take care; do you mean to swear that?—Mr. Kitcheman told me so; and he said he had not had time to make the account out, but he would bring it down.

4510. Then that account would show this?—That account would show this.

4511. Do you mean that exactly amounted to 50 l.?—No, I do not.

4512. What did it amount to?—It amounted to 80 l. and some odd pounds.

4513. What did you mean by telling me just now, that you did on that occasion give Mr. Kitcheman money in advance, and not expenses already incurred, when you now say that his account amounted to 80 l. and odd?—I must have made a mistake in that matter; the 50 l. was on account of that account which he had not rendered.

4514. How came you to make that mistake; you understood what I asked, did you not?—I wrongly expressed myself.

4515. Was that account of 80 l. rendered at that time?—No.

4516. He simply came and asked you for money, and you gave him money?—Yes; not without Mr. Little's permission.

4517. I am not asking about Mr. Little's permission at this moment; but he did not give you the account, but he asked for money and you gave him money?—Yes.

4518. When first did you see the account for 80 l.?—I do not recollect.

4519. About when?—I do not recollect at all.

4520. Not the least notion?—No.

4521. I see a large number of sums paid to you, and I find on the 16th November 100 l.; that cheque is to yourself personally; tell me what did you do with the money?—I could not tell you exactly what I did with the money.

4522. Your book does not show it either?—I debit myself with all the cheques I receive, and I give myself credit for all the payments.

4523. Show me how you have debited and credited yourself on the 16th of November, the nomination day?—I cannot show you from the book.

4524. Just show me the book; you see here on the 16th and the 17th, the nomination day, and the polling day, there is 215 l., have you any book which will show how you spent that money?—No, only the cash book.

4525. But this does not show it at all?—No; no book will show how the amount in money is expended upon each separate cheque.

4526. That is to say, on one side you enter the cheque, and on the other side you enter the gross sums?—Yes, the gross sum paid.

4527. So that there is no book by which I can ascertain how that money has been distributed?—No.

4528. Is that the only book you ever kept?—Yes, that is the only book I ever kept.

4529. Did it occur to you that if there was an inquiry about the sums expended, it would be quite impossible to disentangle one payment from the other?—It did not; I asked Mr. Little to tell me how to keep the accounts, and he said that the cash book would be quite sufficient.

4530. Did you pay any money to a man named Gibson, a butcher?—Yes, I did.

4531. What did you pay to him?—Either 25 l. or 30 l.

28.

4532. What for?—For various expenses, of which there is an account rendered.

4533. Where is the account?—If I had the sundry accounts I might see. This gives the amount (handing a set of vouchers to the learned Counsel).

4534. Mr. Baron Martin.] Mr. Kitcheman's accounts are pinned all together; are Gibson's in the same fashion?—Yes.

4535. Mr. Giffard.] If I am right, there is not any account of Gibson's at all. There is a statement of monies paid to Gibson, and very large sums, but I do not see any account of Gibson's there. Just look at it yourself (handing the vouchers back to the Witness)?—I do not see it.

4536. Mr. Baron Martin.] Have you any similar bundle of accounts to those of Mr. Kitcheman which are pinned together?—No.

4537. Mr. Giffard.] What became of Gibson's accounts?—Mr. Little instructed Mr. Mossman, junior, who was the solicitor of the West Ward, to make up his account for the receipt of money which he got from me, and here it is.

4538. You see that what I am at present asking is not the accounts that Mr. Mossman made up afterwards, but the accounts upon which you paid money to Gibson?—You mean the receipts.

4539. No, I mean the accounts; what was it for?—The accounts I never got; here are various sums and accounts.

4540. Do I understand you rightly to say that the accounts you never got?—Nothing but those.

4541. But these are made up afterwards?—Yes.

4542. Did you give Gibson the amount? You see the large sum of 30 l. in one instance; did you give him an amount of money to the extent of 30 l. without knowing what it was for?—He gave me a receipt for that money.

4543. Did you know what it was for?—It was for committee-room expenses, for messengers and clerks.

4544. Did that appear on any account?—No, it did not.

4545. So that Gibson said to you, "I want 30 l. for messengers, clerks, and committee-room expenses," and you paid it?—I paid it, but not without inquiry.

4546. Did you see Mr. Illingworth pay him 40 l. in the committee-room?—I did.

4547. Was any account given for that?—No.

4548. Did you yourself go and get money from the bank, and pay it over to Gibson, or see Mr. Illingworth pay it over to Gibson in the committee-room?—I paid the amount to Mr. Gibson and to Mr. Illingworth.

4549. Now, will you hand me this account book again (the same was handed back again to the learned Counsel). Just let me call your attention to this. Let us see if we understand each other upon the account: I see first, "Mr. Gibson's expenses as per list, 48 l."; where is that list?—It ought to be there.

4550. It ought to be there, but I am afraid it is not. "November 20. Cash to Mr. Gibson, 30 l."; that you paid without any account?—Yes.

4551. "November 21. To Mr. Illingworth, 15 l.;" did you pay that without any account?—Without any account.

4552. "14th. To Mr. Armitage, 25 l.;" did you pay that without any account?—Yes.

4553. "21st. To Mr. Mossman, 50 l.;" did you

Mr. J. Holt. pay that without any account?—Yes, without any account.

28 January 1869. 4554. Now, can you tell me, is that the account you refer to as Mr. Gibson's expenses (handing an account to the Witness)?—Yes, this is the document made by Mr. Mossman, and given to me.

4555. That was made afterwards, you know, for the purpose of making out his claim?—It was, but it was made by Mr. Mossman.

4556. You see, I want to know about what I am to take as "Mr. Gibson's expenses, as per list," that does not refer to this document, I presume, if it was made afterwards; am I to take it that you paid the 48 l. to Mr. Gibson for expenses without any document at all?—I paid 30 l. to Mr. Gibson.

4557. I am now upon the 48 l., did you pay that without any account at all?—Without any account; I took a receipt for it.

4558. Can you tell me what is the meaning of this—"Poole's lot: Mat Laggan, Patrick O'Donnell, John Haley," and so on; you do not know anything about Poole's lot?—I do not know anything about it.

4559. Mr. Baron Martin.] As I understand, Mr. Mossman was the attorney who managed this ward?—Yes.

4560. Mr. Giffard.] There is no entry, as far as I can see here, of that sum of 40 l. paid to Gibson by Mr. Illingworth in your presence; that does not appear in your account at all?—No.

4561. It would not appear in your account, because it was paid by Mr. Illingworth?—No.

4562. He seems to have had a large sum of money; what was Gibson; I know he was a butcher, but I mean with regard to this transaction?—Gibson took an active part in the West Ward.

4563. He took an active part in the West Ward, and that is why he got all that money?—Yes.

Re-examined by Mr. Price.

4564. Did Mr. Gibson manage one of those districts?—I could not say.

4565. About this 50 l. that Mr. Illingworth paid; where did he get the 50 l. from?—He got the 50 l. from me.

4566. And that would be entered in this book, somewhere or other, as part of some other sum?—If I paid him 50 l., it would be entered in that book, and I should have a receipt for it.

4568. My learned friend asked you whether there is any account given of the expenditure of that 100 l.; I see opposite to that on the day of the poll, "Paid Brown on account, 90 l.?"—Yes.

4569. Would that come out of the 100 l.?—No, it would not; you will see lower down that on the 17th I got a cheque for 90 l.

4570. Did you put this 100 l. into your own pocket, and walk away with it?—Not at all; if I did, there are accounts here which would not be paid.

4571. Was it spent, at all events?—It was spent.

4572. On Mr. Ripley's election?—Yes, on Mr. Ripley's election.

4573. And it appears somewhere here?—Yes, it appears somewhere here.

4574. You knew that Mr. Mossman and those other gentlemen were appointed from the different wards?—I did.

4575. If they sent you an account in by Gibson, or whoever they sent it by, did you consider that a sufficient authority to give a cheque for it?—Not without showing it to Mr. Little first.

4576. Even if Mr. Mossman sent you an account, you showed it to Mr. Little and got his initials, and then drew a cheque for it?—Yes.

4577. You did not trouble yourself, then, to look into the particular items of the account?—A rule, I checked the accounts.

[The Witness withdrew.]

Mr. EDWARD KITCHEMAN, sworn; Examined by Mr. Littler.

Mr. E. 4578. You are a stuff merchant in this town, are you not?—Yes.

Kitcheman. 4579. Have you lived in Bradford all your life?—Yes.

4580. You have taken a good deal of interest in political matters for some time in the East Ward, have you not?—Yes, I have.

4581. I believe that in August last you became a member of Mr. Ripley's committee for the East Ward?—Yes.

4582. You were chiefly connected with the East Ward, were you not, throughout the whole contest?—Yes.

4583. The central committee for the East Ward was at Eastbrook House, was it not?—Yes.

4584. In the first instance, there were 14 district committees?—Yes.

4585. At that time, the vice-chairmen at the central committee were the chairmen at the district committee?—Yes, of the central ward committee.

4586. And the ward was worked from the central ward committee?—Yes.

4587. Not from the central committee of the whole borough?—No.

4588. You were not attached as chairman to any of the subdivisions, were you?—No.

4589. Afterwards, there were some other committees opened of which the chairmen were not members of the Central Ward committee, were there not?—Yes, nearer the election there were.

4590. You were, in the earlier part of the contest, engaged about five nights a week, and subsequently you added another to it?—Yes.

4591. So that you were engaged nightly in promoting the election?—Yes.

4592. You engaged most of the rooms, did you not?—I sent round and told them I should want them very likely for Mr. Ripley.

4593. Was any arrangement made at that time as to the rents to be charged?—I went round afterwards; but, with one or two exceptions, I never asked the question what rent would be charged.

4594. You never made any specific arrangement as to what was to be charged?—Not for a single one at that time.

4595. Was anything said at that time to the landlords

Mr. E.
 Kitcheman.
 28 January
 1869.

landlords of any of the public-houses as to refreshments, in the first instance?—Not at all.

4596. Afterwards did you, from time to time, receive applications, such as I think we have produced one or two here, from the committee, asking for refreshments?—The chairman told me, times without number, that they wanted refreshments for the committee-men and canvassers, and for the men that were working.

4597. At this time none of the committee-men were paid as canvassers, were they?—None of them.

4598. Were they working men chiefly who were devoting, as far as you know, their time to the cause?—Almost all were working men.

4599. Were they chiefly working men?—Yes.

4600. Mr. Baron Martin.] By working men do you mean labouring men?—Yes.

4601. Mr. Little.] Did you know at the time what they were doing, or whether they were working or not in the evening for Mr. Ripley?—Yes; they had canvass books in all but the Irish districts, and there we could not get.

4602. So far as you knew at that time, were those men actually and honestly canvassing for Mr. Ripley?—Yes.

4603. You say that you received applications from the chairman from time to time?—Yes.

4604. Were those applications in writing?—No.

4605. They were verbal communications?—They were verbal communications.

4606. In consequence of those communications from the chairman, what did you do?—I spoke to Mr. Little, and asked him if it was legal that canvassers that were working night after night at the weekly meetings should have some refreshment.

4607. What answer did Mr. Little make to that?—He did not give me an answer at that time; he said he would look into the matter.

4608. Did he eventually tell you?—He eventually told me that it was quite legal for canvassers to have reasonable refreshments at the time of their meetings, when they were giving the result of their canvass; but the difficulty was how to have those refreshments without their being abused.

4609. Did you discuss the matter more than once with Mr. Little and with the principal members of the committee of your ward, as to how it should be done?—Yes, I did.

4610. While those discussions were going on, did you receive further applications from the chairman on the subject?—Yes, I did.

4611. What was the ultimate decision that you came to as to what was to be done?—That the only course left would be to put into the hands of each of the chairmen of the divisions the responsibility of seeing that nothing but reasonable refreshments come in for the committee that were canvassing, and that were working upon the election.

4612. Did you yourself communicate those instructions to the various chairmen of the sub-committees?—I did.

4613. How much of what you have already told us did you tell them?—I told them most of it. I told them that refreshments could be allowed to canvassers, but that they must either pay for them or give a note to the landlord for reasonable refreshments.

4614. Did you say anything to them about anybody else having refreshments besides canvassers?—No.

vassers?—No; I said it must be only in committee-rooms and committee meetings.

4615. In certain instances, you did not yourself know sufficient of the chairmen to trust them, did you?—I did not.

4616. In those instances what did you do?—I spoke to the landlord or landlady, and said that reasonable refreshments were allowed to committees through the chairman's orders; but I wished them to take care there was no excess gone to.

4617. So far as you know, was there any instance in your ward where such instructions were not given either to the chairman or to the landlord?—Not one.

4618. I believe that the chairman of your central ward committee was Mr. Alderman Mark Dawson?—He was.

4619. His health not being good, a good deal of work devolved on you?—Yes; he asked me to take his place when he was not able to come.

4620. I will take you to the expenses afterwards, but at present you did, up to the time of Mr. Terry's appointment, pay most of the matters which required cash payments in your ward, did you not?—Yes; all of them, I believe.

4621. In addition to the ward payments which you made, I will take you to the subject of some canvassers whom you employed; what was the first commencement of employing any paid canvassers; as I understand, for some time your canvassers were unpaid, were they not?—Yes, they were unpaid; we could not get any Englishmen to go and canvass in the lower districts of our ward.

4622. The lower districts are inhabited by the class of Irishmen of whom we have seen so many yesterday and the day before?—Yes.

4623. You say that you could not get any of your English volunteer canvassers to go amongst them?—No, we could not.

4624. And at that time you had very few, if any Irish, on any of your committees, had you?—No, not on any of our committees.

4625. Did you become acquainted with one Jeremiah Ryan?—Yes, I did.

4626. How?—I knew a young man they called Kane; I beg your pardon; Marshall Hanby first introduced me to Ryan.

4627. He was a member of your committee, was he?—No, he was a messenger.

4628. When you were introduced to Ryan, tell me what took place at your first interview?—He said that he thought it was too bad that Mr. Ripley could not have a meeting or go anywhere without being disturbed.

4629. Before that time, had Mr. Ripley tried to hold a meeting amongst the Irish?—Yes, he had.

4630. What had become of that meeting?—There was no good in it at all.

4631. Were the people who attended it chiefly English or Irish?—There were more English than Irish.

4632. There was a great disturbance, was there not?—Yes, a great disturbance.

4633. In fact, there was practically no meeting at all?—It was broken up entirely.

4634. Do you say that Ryan was introduced to you by Hanby, and that Ryan said it was a great shame that the meeting should be disturbed?—Yes.

4635. What further took place?—I said nothing further to him that night; that was all the conversation I had with him.

O

4636. Where

Mr. E.
Kitcheman.
—
1869.

4636. Where was the next conversation you had with him; when did you come to engage him; tell us all that took place upon the occasion when you engaged Jerry Ryan to assist you?—I took him to Mr. Little, in the first instance.

4637. When you took him to Mr. Little, what took place then?—I do not know, only I left him with Mr. Little.

4638. After that, when did you next see Ryan after taking him to Mr. Little?—I saw him in one of our committee-rooms, and I saw that he was knocking about among his countrymen, and advocating Mr. Ripley's claims, and trying, at any rate, to get the people to listen to him favourably.

4639. Did you know at that time whether he was a voter or not?—I did not.

4640. From what you saw in the ward, you saw that he was trying to assist Mr. Ripley's cause?—Yes.

4641. What took place between you and him?—He said something about some bills, some circulars, or some papers; I forget now the exact words he used about Mr. Little, and that Mr. Little did not encourage him as he ought to be encouraged. I then went to Mr. Little and told him that I had been into our ward trying to canvass the Irish part of the ward myself, and that I had just been made to walk off to a Catholic priest, and was it really dangerous, and that I should not attempt it myself again.

4642. You did not like it yourself?—I did not like it at all.

4643. And you suggested, I suppose, the employment of Ryan?—Yes, I did, with a few men to go among their own countrymen.

4644. What did Mr. Little say to that?—Oh, he said he had no faith in paid canvassers.

4645. And you pressed it on him again?—I left him then; I said I did not see a chance if each ward in the borough had to be neglected.

4646. You pressed it on him, and eventually he did assent to your employing them for a time, did he not?—Yes, he did.

4647. What did you propose to Mr. Little that they were to do?—I proposed that they should not have regular canvass books to go from house to house and canvass, but that they should be more as advocates, to go from place to place, and from ward to ward, to advocate Mr. Ripley's claims upon the Irish people, and try to get them to vote for him, and to give him a hearing, so that they could hear him and judge for themselves.

4648. That was what you said to Mr. Little when he assented to their being employed?—Yes.

4649. When you hired Ryan, what instructions did you give him as to what he was to do?—What I have just told you.

4650. Was there anything said in that conversation with Ryan about neutralising the Irish votes?—Not at all.

4651. Did Ryan submit to you certain names of persons who he proposed should be employed in like manner with himself?—He did.

4652. Did he say anything about them as to their position, or their power over their countryman, or anything of that kind?—Yes, he did.

4653. What did he say?—He said there were many of his countrymen that, from principle, were holding aloof from voting, and if those men would only work he could get them to vote for Mr. Ripley, or otherwise they would not vote at all.

4654. Do you know whose names he mentioned to you in the first instance?—Kane, I believe.

4655. Was there another man, called Lawler?—Yes; Kane and Lawler.

4656. And Shelley?—No, I engaged Shelley myself.

4657. What men did he originally mention to you?—He mentioned Kane, Lawler, Holy, Bowen, and Lamb.

4658. Did he mention Mr. Coyne amongst the influential men?—Not at that time; he mentioned Hilley. Those lived in different parts of the borough.

4659. Did you see those men at that time, or did you send him to see them?—I saw them; he introduced them to me.

4660. Where did you meet them; do you remember?—I am not sure of the place where we met at first. I think it was the "Junction."

4661. What did you say to those men whom he introduced to you, as to what you wanted them to do?—I told them, as I said before, that I wanted them to advocate Mr. Ripley's claims, and to try and get the people to give him a hearing, and that they should go from ward to ward and do their best with that object.

4662. Was anything said by you, or by Ryan in your presence, as to what they should be paid for so doing?—They said they should want some remuneration. No, they said to me they should want some expenses; and I said, "No, not that; I cannot do that; I will not do a single illegal or dishonourable action to get Mr. Ripley into the House of Commons," and I gave them a sovereign each as wages.

4663. Afterwards, on a subsequent occasion, did you employ more of those Irish canvassers?—Not till about a fortnight before the election; perhaps there may be another name. Yes, I employed Coyne afterwards.

4664. Where did you pick up that very sterling Coyne?—I was in Blake's with Ryan, and it was after the Irish meeting, and he asked Coyne if he knew who I was; he did not, and Ryan told him. He said it was a great shame about the Irish meeting, and he would assist to get up a new register, so that he could call by circular a large meeting.

4665. I suppose that was the occasion that he refers to, when he assisted you to go through the burgess list?—Yes.

4666. You did employ him?—Afterwards Ryan came to me and said that Coyne wanted to see me, to ask me a question or two about Ireland, and Mr. Ripley's opinion upon Ireland.

4667. He did come to you, did he?—Yes.

4668. And you took him up to Mr. Ripley at the "Victoria"?—Yes, I did; he could not see Mr. Ripley that night.

4669. However, he did see Mr. Ripley afterwards?—Yes.

4670. After he had seen Mr. Ripley, did he say anything about whether he would support Mr. Ripley or not?—Yes, he said he would, and that he was satisfied with him.

4671. Was anything said by you to Coyne after that about his acting as a paid canvasser for Mr. Ripley?—Yes.

4672. What took place then?—I said very well, if he was satisfied and he wanted engaging I would engage him, and he and Ryan should manage the whole borough, as far as the Irish electors went.

4673. What was your expenditure and account of of the Irish canvassers; was it for the East Ward alone?—No, it was not.

4674. For where was the expenditure on the Irish canvassers; for what part of the borough?—For the whole borough.

4675. Then tell me this; you employed this man Coyne; did you say how much he was to get?—He wanted 2*l.* for wages and 15*s.* for his personal expenses. He told me that Mr. Arnold had offered him 2*l.* 10*s.*, and as much expenses as he might go to, Mr. Arnold the Liberal.

4676. That was for the Liberal Association?—Yes, for Miall and Forster.

4677. What did you agree to give him?—I told him that I would give him 2*l.* 15*s.* a week as wages, but I would have nothing to do with expenses whatever.

4678. In engaging all those men, did you or did you not believe that they were going to devote themselves to working for Mr. Ripley?—Decidedly so; I did believe it.

4679. How many others did you subsequently engage?—Perhaps four or five.

4680. I suppose this is a list which you prepared (handing a paper to the Witness). I see Ryan, Lawler, Shelley, Holy, Bowen, Kelly, Coyne, Mahoney, Jones, and Kilfoyle?—I do not know Mahoney.

4681. Had you a man of the name of Jones?—Yes.

4682. And Kilfoyle?—Yes.

4683. Cligg?—Yes.

4684. Quigley?—Yes.

4685. Lamb?—Yes.

4686. Marshall Hanby?—He was a messenger.

4687. And Haley?—Yes.

4688. In addition to those there were one or two whom Ryan employed?—There were several in the last 10 days.

4689. Very well; we will ask Ryan about that; with regard to this list of those whom you employed, what was the total amount which you paid out?—About 94*l.*, as far as my memory serves me.

4690. Part of that you paid with your own hand, and partly by whom?—Through Ryan, but I gave Ryan the amount and told him who to give it to.

4691. You took the list of those charges to Mr. Little, did you not?—I did.

4692. What did he say?—He said, "You have got 94*l.* down; that is a large amount;" and he said he did not see that they were doing any good; he never believed in canvassers.

4693. What did you say?—I said I thought they were doing great good.

4694. Did you at that time or not believe that they had been out amongst their countrymen to induce them to give Mr. Ripley a hearing?—Yes, I did; and to get them to vote for him as well; to canvass for him, not with books.

4695. At that time had you said anything to him about neutralising the Irish votes?—No, not at all.

4696. Did you ever use such an expression?—Never.

4697. Did you ever say to anyone of those men that have been mentioned, that they were to go to work to try to get people not to vote against Mr. Ripley till the last week, and then to get them to vote for him?—No.

4698. Or anything to that effect?—Nothing to that effect.

4699. After Mr. Little had refused to pay any more, what did you do?—I called together the chairman, Mr. Dawson, Mr. Loogee, and Mr. Terry, the legal adviser, and we all four met, and I told them that Mr. Little had refused to give me any more money for the Irish canvassers; in fact, they were the only canvassers we had; and I said that as we were going to canvass the borough in the last fortnight on account of the recent municipal elections, it was necessary that we should have considerably more canvassers if we intended doing it in the time, as our previous canvass had never been worked up in the lower districts of the East Ward.

4700. I suppose from your political experience, especially in the Irish districts, you can tell my Lord roughly what is the number of Irish voters in the whole borough?—I have always understood them to be nearly 4,000.

4701. In your judgment at that time it was necessary to have more canvassers rather than to discharge them?—Yes; I felt sure of it.

4702. What did those three gentlemen say when you mentioned this?—They knew the result of the last canvass, and they said they would find me money if it was necessary, and they thought it was.

4703. I will now just take you through some of the things that have been said by the witnesses on the other side; you know William Bowen; do you remember Ryan introducing him to you?—Yes.

4704. Did Ryan tell you that he was one of the neutralising committee?—No.

4705. Did you say that Mr. Ripley would be as good as the other two, as far as his sympathy for their country was concerned?—Yes, I did say that.

4706. And if people would support him, that he would be better than Mr. Miall?—I did.

4707. Was anything said at that meeting about a neutralising committee?—Not at all.

4708. Did you ever tell Coyne when you gave him that sovereign, when Kelly and Holy and Ryan were there, that it was to keep the Irish from voting till the last week, and then they were to vote for Mr. Ripley?—I did no such thing.

[The following paper was handed to his Lordship by Mr. Price:—]

"Bradford Borough Election, 1868.

"We, the undersigned, assent to act as a committee for securing the election of Mr. Ripley as Member for Bradford neutralising the Irish votes:—

"M. A. Coyne, 5, Wild Boar-street. }
 "J. Ryan, 37, Loom-street. }
 "M. Lamb, 11, Hopper-street, Valley-road. x
 "J. L. Holy, 34, Bolling-street.
 "William Kelly, Temperance-street, 26.
 "William Bowen, 5, Paperhall-court.
 "J. Ryan, 37, Loom-street.
 "M. A. Coyne, 5, Wild Boar-street.
 "Thomas Lawler, 74, Captain-street.
 "Moss Quigley, 80, Long Croft-place."

Mr. Price.] It was upon that paper that I proposed to recal Coyne, and Coyne was not in the way, and it is upon that document that my learned friend is going to put a question.

4709. Mr. Littler.] I see here the name of William Bowen, 5, Paperhall-court; did you see him sign that?—Yes.

O 2

4710. Here

Mr. E.
 Kitcheman.
 —
 28 January
 1869.

Sic.

In pencil.

Mr. E.
Kitcheman.
—
1869.

4710. Here is the heading in print:—"We, the undersigned, assent to act as a committee for securing the election of Mr. Ripley as Member for Bradford." Then, in pencil, the word "securing" is scratched out, and in ink the rest of the sentence, and there is put in, in ink, "neutralising the Irish votes." At the time that Bowen signed that, in what condition was the heading of that document?—This was not scratched out.

4711. Is it true that when Bowen signed that document, Coyne suggested the alteration?—No.

4712. Is it true that the alteration was made before Bowen signed it?—No.

4713. In what condition was that paper when Coyne signed his name to it in pencil? First of all, is it his writing?—That is his writing. I saw him sign it.

4714. In what condition was this paper when Coyne signed it in pencil?—It was in print. No scratching out at all. He signed it in the morning.

4715. Do you know in whose handwriting that writing is—"Neutralising the Irish votes"?—It is Coyne's writing.

4716. Did you see him write it?—He passed it on to me just as he was finishing it. I had not noticed it before.

4717. Was the ink dry then?—No.

4718. When was it?—It was the night of the same day on which he had signed his name in pencil.

4719. Mr. Baron Martin.] What did you say to him?—I just answered him, and I said, "That is only half doing the work. It must be in connection with, and for Mr. Ripley;" but I did not think it was unimportant to say anything to any other people about it.

4720. Mr. Little.] Then he signed it again in ink, did he not?—Yes; he signed it again in ink? It was when he signed it again in ink, after all the others had signed it, that he scratched that out.

4721. You had no ink in the morning?—No; we had no ink in the morning.

4722. Then those men who signed in pencil were requested to sign in ink?—Yes, at night they were.

4723. You handed it to Coyne to sign in ink, and then he made that alteration?—Yes, he crossed that at the same time. I objected to it, and I said, "It is only half doing the work. I must have it for Mr. Ripley."

4724. Did he tell you whether he had been to one of Forster and Miall's committees that afternoon?—He did not.

4725. Now, I will take you to Michael Lamb. Where did you first see Michael Lamb?—At the "Hope and Anchor Inn," I believe.

4726. Did you ever ask him to go to his countrymen, and get them not to vote at all?—No.

4727. What did you ask him to do?—He asked me to be engaged to support Mr. Ripley—to advocate for him.

4728. What were his words, as near as you can remember?—He said, "I should like to be engaged to work for Mr. Ripley," or something to that effect. I cannot give you his exact words.

4729. What answer did you make to that?—I engaged him.

4730. Did you say anything to him about neutralising the Irish votes?—Not at all. He has always spoken in favour of Mr. Ripley.

4731. As what did you engage him?—As an advocate and canvasser, to go to all parts of the borough.

4732. To canvass for whom?—To canvass for Mr. Ripley among his countrymen.

4733. And to advocate Mr. Ripley's cause?—Yes.

4734. Now, I will take you to Coyne. When did you first meet Coyne?—It was about the 8th of October, I believe.

4735. Was it at the "Manor House," do you remember?—Yes, it was at the "Manor House," where we went through the register.

4736. Was it on the first occasion you saw him that you went through the register?—I had seen him at Blake's the day before.

4737. What did he say to you, or you say to him, at Blake's?—He said it was a disgraceful affair, the Irish meeting; that he was sure it was not Irishmen that had done it; and that Mr. Mahoney and Mr. Gillam were very much to blame in the matter, he thought, and that he should do his utmost; that he could have as much influence as Mr. Mahoney and Mr. Gillan in Bradford, and that he should do his utmost to get up an Irish meeting for Mr. Ripley.

4738. He mentioned Mr. Gillan at that time?—Yes; he mentioned Mr. Mahoney and Mr. Gillan.

4739. That was the same gentleman who was mentioned yesterday, or the day before, in the evidence?—Yes, 4740. What else occurred on that occasion, when you saw him at Blake's?—I said that Mr. Ripley spoke of having a meeting by circular just sent to the Irish people, and my difficulty was at getting at the names of the Irish people to send the circulars to. He said he would assist me to do that, and he arranged for the next afternoon to come and do it; which he did.

4741. Did he say anything about what was to be done with the register, when you met him?—He put a mark.

4742. Did he say, on the first occasion, what was to be done with the register, when he proposed that you should go through it?—That we were to extract the Irish voters.

4743. Did he say anything to you that he objected to Mr. Ripley's principles?—No, not at all.

4744. Did he ever say to you, "I object to Mr. Ripley, but I am anxious for fair play, and that the Irish should hear him"?—No.

4745. Or any such thing as that?—No; he said that Mr. Arnold and Mr. Walunk had a claim upon him, or he thought they had, because they had subscribed to Burke's Defence Fund; he had begged money from several of the Liberals.

4746. Burke was some man who was in trouble about Fenianism?—Yes.

4747. Did he say anything about what he would do with regard to Mr. Ripley's candidature?—No, not at that time; I did not say anything to him.

4748. You arranged to meet him the next day, and go through the register; will you state what was said, and what was done?—He went through it, and he asked for his wages for the afternoon; he could have earned as much as I paid him; I paid him 5s. He came without his dinner, and he asked for his dinner, and I paid 10s.

4749. That was for your dinner and his too, was it?—No, I did not have any dinner; Ryan had dinner with him.

4750. You

4750. You paid for their two dinners, and you gave him 5s. for his time?—I did.

4751. When you went through the register, did he point out all the Irishmen that he knew?—He marked them.

4752. Marked them himself?—Yes, he did.

4753. Was that the whole of the work he did that afternoon?—It was.

4754. In the evening you met him and Bowen, and Lamb and Ryan, did you not?—I do not know that I did; I do not remember it.

4755. Do you remember his ever saying to you that he would go in for neutrality, for what good would come of the Parliament of England for Ireland?—He said he did not believe in the English Government for Ireland at all.

4756. But did he say anything about going in for neutrality?—Not to me.

4757. Did he say anything about supporting anybody?—He said he would support the people's choice; that he considered the people's choice, but he did not say who that was.

4758. Did Coyne say at that meeting that he would not damage Mr. Miall?—I do not remember what meeting you allude to.

4759. I am speaking of the meeting when he asked what good would come of the Parliament of England?—No.

4760. Did he say he would not go in to damage Mr. Miall?—He did not.

4761. Do you remember his ever saying that?—No.

4762. As far as you know did he ever say it in your hearing?—Not to my knowledge; I am sure he did not.

4763. At that same meeting, did you hear Ryan say that he thought you would be dissatisfied with his neutralising the Irish votes?—No.

4764. Do you remember seeing Coyne a little while after, between one and two o'clock in the afternoon, I do not know what day, but between one and two o'clock in the afternoon, at the "Junction Inn"?—Yes.

4765. Was Ryan there?—Yes, Ryan and Coyne.

4766. Did you say to him that you would be very happy to get him on Mr. Ripley's side, though you had heard him speak for Mr. Miall?—No; he had been there to see Mr. Ripley.

4767. And he had told you that he would support Mr. Ridley?—Yes.

4768. Did you ever hear him speak for Mr. Miall?—No, never.

4769. Never in your life?—No.

4770. Then, it is not true that you ever said to him that you would be happy to get him on Mr. Ripley's side, though you had heard him speak for Mr. Miall?—No.

Mr. Baron Martin.] I am unwilling to interfere, but this is not material at all; it has no bearing upon the real issue.

Mr. Price.] Only in one way as to credit, that either Coyne is the witness of truth or he is not the witness of truth.

Mr. Baron Martin.] If you choose to ask a witness questions not bearing upon the issue, you must take his answer; you cannot go through the evidence of a person and get this witness to contradict him again and again, and again, upon what is not material.

Mr. Price.] A great deal of all this was given in examination in chief, not in cross-examination.

Mr. Baron Martin.] That may be, but it is not material; you can only contradict a witness upon what is material to the issue.

Mr. Littler.] I should venture to submit that this is material in this way: Coyne alleges that he was paid money to come over to us, and to go to work and vote against his conscience; and if we show that, on the contrary, he mentioned to us that he was desirous of helping us, that is material.

Mr. Baron Martin.] Surely that is not material, his voting against his conscience. It is only with the view of saving time that I interfere.

Mr. Littler.] I will just ask one contradiction for each of the other witnesses, and your Lordship will see what it amounts to.

4771. (To the Witness.) Will you just tell me this: did Coyne or any other of those canvassers ever tell you that they wanted the money which you were paying to them to spend amongst their countrymen?—No.

4772. Not one of them?—Not once: Lamb once said that it was expensive going about, and I told him I had nothing to do with it, I did not require it.

4773. So far as you know, and so far as any money that you expended, did you pay any sum except for services which were charged against Mr. Ripley?—Not any.

4774. So far as you know, had the services been rendered for the sums which you paid?—I believe they had; I met them night by night myself, and I thought the men were working hard.

4775. Did they show you a list of persons whom they pretended to have gone amongst?—Not many times written lists, but they told me night by night, and I paid them, and I said, "Now what do you say Bowen and Lamb?" and they told me, I thought, honestly what they had been doing.

4776. You really believed that they had been working amongst their countrymen and trying to get votes for Mr. Ripley?—Yes, I did.

4777. Did you pay them money for any purpose except for those services?—Not at all.

4778. With regard to the different public-houses, did you ever see any extensive drinking going on at any of them?—I never did.

4779. Did you ever yourself give or authorise the giving of any refreshment to influence a vote?—Never.

4780. Did you ever say anything to any of those paid canvassers about what they were to do, if they were voters, as to using their vote?—I told them that I did not want them to get into trouble; they must not vote at all if they were paid.

4781. Did you tell more than one of them that?—I cautioned everyone that I paid.

4782. Did you ever say to any of those men, "It is all right, I will see you right after the election," or anything of that kind?—Never to any of them.

4783. Do you remember ever being at the "Fire Brigade Inn" on a Sunday?—Yes.

4784. They said that you were exciting voters, were you?—No.

4785. What were you doing?—I looked in on a Sunday night during the election. I said I was not going to make a political speech, but I had understood that, in the municipal election, Salt and Read's men had gone about so that they would see what was going on; that was the day before the nomination.

Mr. E. Kitchenman.

28 January 1869.

Mr E. 4786. Had you anything to drink on that Kitchenman. night?—I had not.
 28 January 1869. 4787. Did you order anything for anybody else?—I never did order a glass of beer in the house in my life, except one downstairs which I paid for one night as I was going out.

4788. You had been about from time to time among the committees in the East Ward?—I had gone to every committee in the ward.

4789. Did you ever see anything like drunkenness going on there?—Never.

4790. There was one man says there were 20 or 30 half-gallons of ale brought up in one night;
 did you ever see anything which would lead you to believe that to be true?—No.

4791. How many men did you generally see in the committee-rooms when you went up?—
 Twenty and 25, 30 and 15.

4792. What would be about the average?—I should think we should average from 20 to 25 voters and non-voters.

4793. So far as you know, was any distinction made between voters and non-voters at the committees?—No; they all worked alike.

4794. So far as you know, was anyone admitted into the committee-rooms who was not a committeeman?—No, never.

4795. Did you give my instructions on that head to the messengers?—Yes, to every committee.

4796. And to the chairman?—Yes; the chairman gave instructions to the people themselves.

4797. And there was a messenger appointed for each committee to keep the door?—Yes, to keep the door.

4798. You have heard some evidence here, about 48 l. and 50 l. at the "Harp of Erin," and such places as that?—Yes.

4799. From what you saw, was there any such amount of money liability being incurred for drink?—No; nor no authority given for it.

4800. Did you ever in any way endeavour to influence any of those men who were paid to vote for Mr. Ripley?—I cautioned every man not to vote, though I knew they would vote for Mr. Ripley if I did not caution them; I cautioned them because I was afraid that they would get into trouble.

4801. You have seen those circular instructions at the committees?—Yes.

4802. They were freely circulated, were they not?—Yes.

4803. You had a large number sent to your central committee?—Yes, to the central ward committee.

4804. Did you cause them to be circulated?—
 Yes, I or the secretary did so.

4805. Did you see them in the district?—Yes,
 I saw them in the district.

4806. As far as you know, were they pretty general in the district committees?—I believe so.

4807. The money which you got from Mr.
 Little, as you say, was 94 l.?—About 94 l.

4808. In addition to that, you got 50 l. from
 Mr. Dawson?—Yes.

4809. And 50 l. from Mr. Loogee?—Yes, and 35 l. from Mr. Loogee.

4810. Did you pay that money either yourself to the canvassers, or to Ryan to pay to the canvassers, and to pay for his own services?—I paid part of it myself, and the other to Ryan to pay to the canvassers and for his own services.

4811. As far as your power extended over him, was it or was it not expended in paying canvassers' wages?—It was.

4812. Was one single sixpence either directly or indirectly spent for buying votes or for treating?—No.

4813. You yourself are really out of pocket by the election, are you not?—Yes.

Cross-examined by Mr. Giffard.

4814. I am sorry to hear that; will you give me the account; I should like to see it; have you got your account (a paper having been handed to the learned Counsel); is this your account?—
 Yes; I can tell if I look at them.

4815. Are those the only accounts you kept?—
 No; there are more than those.

4816. Where are they?—I gave in the accounts; those are the accounts that I paid myself, or told Mr. Ryan to give to the canvassers.

4817. Did you keep a book?—Yes.

4818. Where is that book?—It is here (producing a book, and handing the same to the learned Counsel).

4819. Before I look at it, will you tell me this; did you keep this book and make entries in it from day to day as payments were made, and as facts occurred?—I did not make entries in the book at all.

4820. Did you keep any book in the months of November and October last?—No; not always.

4821. When did you first keep a book?—That is a book that I kept for memorandums.

4822. When?—From, perhaps, September.

4823. Shall I find in this book an account of the different payments that you made to Ryan, for instance?—No, you will not.

4824. Then I do not think I will trouble you—

Mr. Baron Martin.] Here are the accounts; have you seen both sets of accounts Mr.
 Giffard (handing the accounts to the learned Counsel)?

Mr. Giffard.] I have seen both sets of accounts, I think, my Lord.

4825. Mr. Baron Martin (to the Witness).] How much money did you get in all?—I got about 110 l., and 94 l., I believe from Mr. Little; and he refused to pay me somewhere about 34 l.; in the other account I got 135 l., and I paid
 175 l.

4826. What you have stated here is, that you got 94 l. from Mr. Little, 50 l. from Mr. Dawson, and 50 l. and 35 l. from Mr. Loogee?—Yes; but I got that 94 l. for canvassers for the whole borough, independent of that for committee expenses, cabs, committee-rooms, postage, and other things; for all the expenses of the ward I got about 110 l.

4827. How much would it be altogether that you got?—It would be 204 l. from Mr. Little, and 135 l. for others.

4828. Mr. Giffard.] Did you keep any book at the time that you made the payments, either in October or November, showing the amount of the payments you made?—I did not.

4829. What is the meaning, in this book which you have given me, of the references, "57 b,"
 "61 a," and so on, "book 45," what does that mean?—It means that those are memorandums of canvassers that were canvassing those particular books; there were two or three cases where I took down the canvassers on one particular night.

4830. There

4830. There are no amounts, so far as I can see, entered in this book as paid at all?—There are two or three receipts for wages.

4831. Can you tell me, from any source, any account or any book that you possess, when you paid any sums of money to Ryan?—I paid him from week to week for his own services.

4832. Cannot you give me some idea of the payments you made to him for other purposes than his own services?—Yes, I can.

4833. Just tell me?—I know very well, on the 7th of November, I gave him something, I believe, like 35 l., as near as I can remember; and in the beginning of the following week I gave him 2 l. On Saturday, the 14th of November, I gave him something like 50 l. 10 s., besides his own wages.

4834. When next did you give him any money?—I did not give him any money till several days after the election.

4835. Mr. Baron Martin.] How much did you give him altogether?—I gave him 82 l. altogether.

4836. Mr. Giffard.] Has he given you any account of the expenditure of it?—Yes, he has; he told me the names, and he showed me the list.

4837. Has he given you a written account?—He has not given me a written account himself, but he has shown me how the money was expended.

4838. I want to know whether he had given you a written account of the expenditure of the money?—I have seen a written account of how he expended the money.

4839. Where is it?—I have not got it; he showed me it, and I gave it to him back.

4840. When did he show you that account?—He showed me that account about 10 days since, or about a week since.

4841. That gave an account, did it, of all?—It gave an account of all the money he had received, and all the money he had paid.

4842. Mr. Baron Martin.] I suppose this 82 l. that you gave him was out of the 339 l.?—Yes. I paid 40 l. more than what I got in that amount. I was 40 l. short.

4843. Mr. Giffard.] Then, the 339 l. is what you actually received?—Yes.

4844. And you have paid 40 l. more than that?—Yes.

4845. I am not certain that I understand where you received all that 339 l. from. I have got what you received from Mr. Little or Mr. Holt, but where did you receive the rest?—I received 50 l. from our chairman, Mr. Alderman Dawson, and 85 l. from Mr. Loogee; and I was 40 l. short in this.

4846. Mr. Baron Martin.] I have got it down as 135 l. from the other two gentlemen?—£. 135 was from the other gentlemen.

4847. Mr. Giffard.] Who were the others that you spoke of?—I said Mr. Alderman Mark Dawson, the chairman, and Mr. Loogee; no other.

4848. According to my arithmetic, it does not agree, but I will not waste time further about it. You mentioned a number of persons with whom you first discussed with Ryan about their acting as a committee, or something like a committee; and you mentioned, I think, Kane, Bowen, Kelley, Coyne, Lamb, Holy, and Lawler; was there also a man named Quigley?—Yes; I mentioned him.

4849. Did they first meet, do you know, at the "Junction" hotel, Leeds-road?—I believe they did.

28.

4850. Were you there that night?—Yes.

4851. I believe on that occasion Lawler and Quigley did not come?—Not the first night.

4852. On the 7th of November, did you give Ryan the sum of 20 l.?—I gave him more; it was 30 l. on the 7th, I believe.

4853. Whereabouts was it you gave him that money?—I gave him it at Blake's.

4854. Was there a man of the name of Hinnigan, and Horne (whose name appears on the list as Hoare); were those two men present at all?—I did not remember them.

4855. Did Ryan mention their names to you?—I never remember Hinnigan.

4856. Do you remember who the chairman at the "Shamrock" was?—I do not know the "Shamrock."

4857. You, as I understand, took the committee-rooms yourself?—Not in the other wards. I never went with one or two exceptions, out of my own ward, myself.

4858. I think you are very likely right that you did not go into that ward; do you remember about the middle of September, I think it was, a meeting about the Irish national songs; had you anything to do with that?—I had nothing to do with the Irish national songs.

4859. As I understand you, you had not known Ryan before at all?—I had seen him, but I did not know him by name. In municipal matters I had crossed him, but I did not have anything to do with him.

4860. You were, as I understand you, working as a volunteer, not expecting to be paid at all?—No, I did not expect to be paid.

4861. You were working as a volunteer for love of the cause, or for love of Mr. Ripley?—My working was because I did not want Mr. Miall to be a Member for Bradford.

4862. I mean for political reasons; I care not what they were; but not with any hope of payment yourself?—I never expected any.

4863. Have you demanded the 40 l. you were out of pocket?—I have not demanded the 40 l. I was out of pocket; and I spent another 34 l. besides. I did expect that I should get that; but Mr. Little refused it. The 40 l. I paid because the men came to more than what I had calculated; the money was gone that I got from Mr. Alderman Dawson and Mr. Loogee, and I paid it rather than break faith with the men; I did not expect that.

4864. As I understand, that 40 l. is not the sum which has been refused?—It has not been refused, because I have not asked for it.

4865. That is in addition?—Yes.

Re-examined by Mr. Price.

4866. The 40 l. account, did you send that in to Mr. Little?—I sent it in after the election to show him what I had spent in all ways.

4867. I mean, you have not kept it back from Mr. Little?—Oh, no.

4868. You did not cancel it; you sent it in?—Yes. Mr. Little wanted to know all what money I had spent, and I showed him it; but I never demanded it.

Mr. Baron Martin.] Here are those accounts; will you just take them and ask him are those correct.

(The accounts were handed to the learned Counsel.)

O 4.

4869. Mr.

Mr. E.
Kitchman.
28 January
1869.

Mr. E.
Kitchman.
—
28 January
1869.

4869. Mr. Price.] What became of the 40 l. account; you sent it in; what was done upon it?—I never claimed that.

4870. But you sent it in because Mr. Little wanted to know all you had spent?—I asked him to return me it when I showed him the account for 175 l.

4871. Did he return it to you?—Yes.

4872. Just tell me what that 40 l. was; you said you did not wish to break faith with the men?—I had received 135 l.; that Mr. Little had nothing to do with; that the chairman Mr. Dawson and Mr. Loogee provided me with. I had given an account of 175 l. to Mr. Little, showing how I had spent this money that I got from Mr. Dawson and Mr. Loogee, myself, and 40 l. over, which I had got. There are the accounts somewhere.

4873. You say that you paid the 40 l., and at present you are that sum of money out of pocket?—Yes.

4874. You did that, as I understand, because you pledged your faith, and you thought it right to keep it?—I durst not do any other after I pledged my faith with them, after I had said I would pay them.

4875. I am afraid not only are you out of pocket, but you have had something else done to you besides?—I have, indeed.

4876. You were laid up with the ill-usage you received?—Yes; I have not been very well ever since; I have had threatening letters, and the police watching the house, and many other things; I was laid in bed for a week together; I was set upon by a lot of those people.

4877. I want to know about this division of this expenditure, 204 l. and 135 l.; I do not know whether your Lordship has got it—

4878. Mr. Baron Martin.] He applied for money to Mr. Little, and Mr. Little declined to give it; he thought it was money that could be properly expended, and then Mr. Alderman Dawson and the other gentleman furnished him with funds; and, in addition to what they had furnished him with, he spent 40 l.?—That is so, my Lord.

* 4879. Mr. Price.] Out of that 204 l. got from Mr. Little, 110 l. was for committee-rooms?—Yes.

4880. Mr. Baron Martin.] Just look at the account you have got, you will find 110 l. marked upon the back of it; that is your own account; I suppose you will say that that account is a correct and true statement?—Yes, the account is correct.

4881. Mr. Price.] My learned friend forgot to ask you because we have had that virtuous man Coyne here, who returned 5 l. to the Infirmary; did he in point of fact get 8 l. 15 s.?—To the best of my knowledge I paid him for three weeks, and Ryan told me he did not do his duty, and I turned him away two or three weeks before the election.

4882. And he was dismissed there?—He was dismissed; he sent a list of names again demanding 3 l., which I refused to take.

4883. Mr. Baron Martin.] Just look at those two accounts, and tell me are those your accounts (the accounts were handed to the Witness)?—Yes, those are my accounts for canvassers and money received from Mr. Little; those are my accounts of the ward, expenses, postage, committee rooms, refreshment of committee.

4884. Are they correct?—Yes, they are up to the 7th; I paid no accounts after the 7th.

4885. Mr. Price.] What you have told us includes all you have paid with respect to the election?—I have not made another payment but what I have given an account of.

[The Witness withdrew.]

SAMUEL ABEL, sworn; Examined by Mr. Waddy.

Samuel Abel.

4886. ARE you the Landlord of the "Equity" inn, George-street?—Yes.

4887. Was there a committee held at your house for Mr. Ripley?—Yes.

4888. And during the time that it was held there, did you ever supply, or did you ever know of refreshments being supplied, to the voters there as such?—There was some refreshments supplied.

4889. Mr. Baron Martin.] Have you any book?—No.

4890. Mr. Waddy.] You sent in an account?—Yes, I sent in an account; you will see all my accounts; my wife made it out.

4891. Can you read?—No, I cannot read or write.

4892. Do you know your wife's writing?—Yes; those are my wife's writing; she is here, and she will prove it.

4893. Except what is down here, was any refreshment ever supplied during the time of the election to people at your house for the purpose of the committee?—Not to my knowledge at all; I told them not to supply any refreshments to any voters or anybody else during the election for the three days.

4894. Do you know the persons who formed that committee?—Yes.

4895. Do you know whether that committee consisted both of voters and non-voters?—Yes.

4896. Mr. J. G. Hutchinson, the solicitor, had charge of the ward in which your house is situated, had he not?—Yes.

4897. And did he warn you against supplying refreshments on the nomination and polling days?—Yes.

4898. To anybody?—To anybody.

4899. Are you able to say whether it is true that, on either the nomination or the polling day, any refreshment whatever was supplied by you or at your house?—There was none supplied by me.

4900. To the committee or anyone else without its being paid for by the people who had it?—No.

4901. Do you know a man of the name of James Burke?—Yes.

4902. Is it true that, about three weeks before the election, you gave James Burke 2 l.?—No.

4903. Is it true that you gave him 2 l. more in the course of the week?—Do you mean the week before the election?

4904. I will put it in this way; about three weeks before the election, did you give him 2 l.; and, in the course of the same week, did you then give him 2 l. more?—No.

4905. Do you remember a meeting of Irishmen in St. George's Hall?—Yes.

4906. Is it true that you gave to James Burke a sovereign to go there with some roughs to stand a little bother?—I gave him a sovereign. He said he could not go to his friends without having some money, and I gave him a sovereign. Thirty shillings I gave him. It is all down there in my accounts.

4907. Before that time had Burke said anything to you about his being a canvasser?—Yes.

4908. Just tell me all that had taken place with regard to his being a canvasser?—He was the secretary to the committee—at least, the vice-chairman—and he wrote down all the names that had the canvass books in a book of his own, and on the Saturday night before the election, I paid him according to his book. As they would not have Englishmen in the committee, they would have it an Irish committee.

4909. Mr. Baron Martin.] How much did you pay James Burke altogether, first and last?—You will see the accounts here.

4910. How much did you pay him altogether?—Can you tell us?—From first to last, about, happen, 30 l. altogether.

4911. Mr. Waddy.] How much have you paid this man James Burke?—I paid him 5 l. 10 s. from first to last.

4912. Is it true that while they were meeting there the people meeting there used to get as much refreshment as they wanted without paying for it?—They would get anything in reason.

4913. To whom was what you say was in reason supplied?—It was supplied in the committee-room.

4914. Do you know a person called Patrick Ryan?—Yes.

4915. Was he acting as a canvasser, or in any other way?—He was the chairman, and he were acting as canvasser as well. I will tell you how this committee was formed.

4916. From first to last, how much did you ever give to Patrick Ryan?—I gave him 2 l. on the Monday week before the election.

4917. How much more did you give him from first to last?—Altogether, he got 2 l. on the Wednesday, I believe, and 2 l. on the Saturday.

4918. When you gave him this money, on what account did you give it to him?—He said he could not go about to his friends without some expense. He said he had to go about the town as far as Shipley and Idle, and all round there to see them. There was a lot of voters round that way, and parties that he had to see, and he could not go without expense.

4919. I should have asked you this question: Did Burke pay the other people?—Not as I know of.

4920. When you gave him the first 2 l., did you tell him that he was to give it to such persons as he thought fit; that he should have plenty of money; and that he should be well paid for it after the election?—No, I did not say that. He was to go, not to give it; but to go and see, and use his influence about getting people to the election.

4921. Was this before, or after he had begun to canvass; did you give him any instructions what to do with this money?—No.

4922. What did you say he was to do with it?—He said he could not go about without money. I did not tell him what to do with it.

4923. How many of those canvassers were there at your house?—There was about 19 or 20, I believe in, at least.

4924. Do you know a man of the name of Brien O'Neill?—I have seen him. He lives in 28.

the same neighbourhood as me; but I know very little about him. Samuel Abel.

4925. Did you ever tell him to go and draw 10 s. in Thomas Brien's name?—No. 28 January 1869.

4926. Did you ever tell him that he was to say he was not a voter?—No.

4927. Do you know John Kilfoyle?—Yes.

4928. Is it true that John Kilfoyle, on the nomination day, breakfasted at your house without being charged for it?—No.

4929. Did he try to breakfast?—He could not breakfast; there was no breakfast made ready for more.

4930. Mr. Baron Martin.] He did not breakfast at your house on the polling day?—Not on the polling day, or on any other day.

4931. Mr. Waddy.] Did you, after the election, tell John Kilfoyle to go and draw two days' wages in the name of John Ginty?—No.

4932. Or on any other occasion?—No, on no other occasion.

4933. Did you tell him that he must give that name because he was a voter, and a voter could not draw money?—I never told him to draw money at all; they all knew very well that voters was not allowed to draw money; it was talked on 50 times; they knew very well that voters was not allowed to draw money at all.

4934. Did you hear that stated in the committee-room?—Yes, it was talked of 100 times.

4935. Did you ever tell him so himself?—Yes.

4936. Before the election?—Yes.

4937. Do you know what accounts you have rendered, or do you not?—This is my account that I have rendered.

4938. Do you know you have rendered another account as well?—No, I have not; it is up to the 14th.

4939. Were there any expenses afterwards, after the 14th?—There was no expenses at all; I told my wife she should not fill any more, or do anything during the election after the 14th.

4940. Your canvassing account you told me just now was 30 l.?—It is about 30 l.

4941. For canvassing alone during the whole election?—For canvassing.

4942. Here there is 11 l., can you explain that?—I was short of 11 l. in paying the canvassers the Saturday night before the election, and I went to Mr. Ingham, and he gave me 11 l., and I gave him credit for it.

4943. Where is the account for the 30 l.; have you delivered an account for the 30 l. to anybody?—Yes.

4944. Here is a receipt for 11 l.; is that what you mean when you say you gave him credit?—Yes, that is for 11 l.

4945. You gave that to Mr. Ingham?—Yes.

4946. To whom did you give the account for the 30 l.?—I brought the account into Mr. Little's office.

4947. Mr. Baron Martin.] From whom did you get the money?—I got the 11 l. from Mr. Ingham.

4948. From whom did you get the other money?—I have got no money since.

4949. Mr. Waddy.] Have you been paid more than 11 l.?—No.

4950. Mr. Baron Martin.] Then you paid the rest out of your own pocket?—Yes, and I have never applied for it.

4951. Mr. Waddy.] Have you not applied for anything beyond the 11 l.?—No.

Samuel Abel.

Cross-examined by Mr. Metcalfe.

28 January
1869.

4952. Have you paid all this money out of your own pocket?—Yes.

4953. And intend to do so?—I intended getting paid; but as I cannot I must lose it.

4954. Who did you expect to pay you?—Mr. Ingham.

4955. Did he promise to pay you?—No.

4956. Why did you expect that he should pay you?—I expected that he would pay me.

4957. Has he said that he would?—No.

4958. Why have you not sent in your account to him?—I made an account out about who I had paid and sent in.

4959. Where is that account?—It was sent in I am sure; I never got the money.

4960. Did you give it to Mr. Ingham?—I sent it in; the account is somewhere here.

4961. Shewing all that you paid?—Yes.

4962. Then you were advancing this money, if I understand you rightly, advancing 30*l.* out of your own pocket?—Yes.

4963. Had you monies in hand?—Yes.

4964. Did anybody tell you to pay this or that; who told you to pay them?—I told myself to pay them.

4965. Did you tell yourself to pay all those men; how many men did you pay altogether?—Either 19 or 20; they are all down in a list somewhere here.

4966. There are eight down in that list; but altogether there were 19 or 20?—Yes.

4967. Is that besides the 11*l.* that I see down there?—It includes the 11*l.*

4968. You said that there were no refreshments at all on the nomination day, on the polling day, at your house, I think?—Not that I know of.

4969. Were the refreshments taken to the cookshop opposite?—There is not a cookshop opposite.

4970. To a house opposite?—I do not know.

4971. Now, Mr. Abel come; were the refreshments taken on those two days to the house opposite?—No.

4972. Was not there meat and bread brought into your house and then taken to the house opposite for the people to have?—No.

4973. Nothing at all?—No.

4974. Did you stop the tap altogether on the polling day?—I was never in my house from half-past nine in the morning till nine o'clock the same night.

4975. You mean that you do not know what took place?—I know I ordered my misses not to fill anything during the three days, nor do anything.

4976. You went away to avoid seeing whether your misses did anything?—I did not go away to avoid it.

4977. But you say that you were out of your house?—I had other business. I was not on this committee, mind you; this was an Irish committee to itself, and I left them to manage the thing to themselves.

4978. You do not mean to say that you gave orders to starve the committee during those two days, do you?—About half-past nine o'clock they said they were starved out, and I said that a man had left about a quart of whisky, and they might have that; but I should not fill them anything that was for about 40 of them.

4979. You have not charged this whisky to the committee?—Not at all.

4980. Mr. Baron Martin.] What day was it that they said they were starved?—It was on the election day about half-past nine in the morning, and then I left and went away.

4981. Do you mean the polling day?—Yes, the polling day.

Re-examined by Mr. Price.

4982. You did not charge them for this drop of whisky?—No.

4983. Just let me understand, if I can; you have returned 11*l.* as paid to canvassers?—Yes.

Mr. Baron Martin.] In his accounts there are the sums of 11*l.*, 8*l.* 11*s.* 7*d.*, and 6*l.* 17*s.*; and I see they come to 26*l.* 8*s.* 7*d.*

Mr. Price.] The witness has now said, as I understand, that besides that 11*l.*, he has paid something more to canvassers, otherwise that account would be all right.

4984. (To the Witness). Is that so?—If you cannot find the account here, I have a copy of it at home, and I can send for it.

4985. Those men who you say were there on the polling day, and whom you saw take whisky which did not belong to you, but which somebody else had left; were they voters?—No, they were not voters.

4986. Were they committee-men?—They were committee-men; at least Burke had it. I gave it to Burke, and I said, "A man has left a quart of whisky, and you can have it if you are starved out."

4987. Were those men who had been employed on the nomination day to go and hold up their hands for Mr. Ripley, and that sort of thing?—I cannot tell that.

4988. Were they men whom you had seen at your place before?—They were men that I had seen there.

4989. Were they voters?—Not as I know of.

4990. Do you know whether they were Bradford men or not, or whether they came in from some other place?—I do not know whether they were Bradford men or not, or what they was. They was in the committee-room; they had it to manage themselves; they would not have Englishmen in.

4991. There was an Irish committee held in your house?—Yes.

4992. And they kept it all to themselves?—They kept it to themselves.

4993. Mr. Baron Martin.] Were those the men who got refreshments at your house?—Yes.

4994. Mr. Price.] Were they men who had been working there as a committee?—They had been working as a committee.

4995. How long?—About five weeks, altogether; four or five weeks.

4996. Those were the men who got this whisky on the polling day?—Yes.

4997. You knew them perfectly well?—Of course; I had seen them before. I did not know them all.

4998. How did you know that they were not voters then?—I did not know whether they was voters, or what they was. I never interfered with them.

4999. As far as you knew, they might or might not have been voters?—They might have been voters, or might not have been voters, for all I know.

5000. Mr. Baron Martin.] Here are receipts for for 26*l.* 8*s.* 7*d.*; did you get the money, or did your wife?—I got some of the money.

5001. How much did you get?—I got 11*l.*

5002. Nothing more?—No.

5003. Nor did your wife?—No.

5004. Here are two receipts settled; “Settled, Samuel Abel.” Are those your accounts?—Yes, those are mine. There is another account that is coming in about all the canvassers. There is 11*l.* here, but there is another, and I have a copy of it at home.

5005. Mr. Price.] Who appointed this Irish committee?—Ryan and Burke.

5006. Was that Jerry Ryan?—No, Patrick Ryan.

5007. Who appointed the canvassers whom you paid?—They picked their own canvassers.

5008. Who returned the names to you as canvassers?—Burke; he put them down in a little book.

5009. Are those the books that they had for canvassing (handing some books to the Witness)?—Yes, they were like those little books.

5010. These are the books themselves?—Yes.

5011. Mr. Baron Martin.] Were these books brought to you by those people?—They were brought to Burke.

5012. Do you see what those books are? Here is a list of voters, made out as living in certain streets; here is Bedford-street, and you will find whoever made it out gave the number of the voter, and you will find what is written down by some of them, “called several times, but could not see him;” somebody else “would not promise,” and so on; “call again,” “call again,” “will not promise;” those are the books which I suppose they gave to you?—No, to Mr. Burke; they were returned to Mr. Burke.

5013. Was that the man who was examined yesterday?—Yes.

5014. Mr. Price.] They returned their books to Burke, and Burke gave in their names to you as men who had been canvassing?—Yes.

5015. On Burke returning their names as men who had been canvassing, you gave Burke the money; that is, you handed the money over to Burke to distribute?—I paid the men as he called them out as had been canvassing; I put all the accounts in this manner; I paid the money, as he called them out to me.

5016. And you saw that they had those books?—Yes, they had the books; I put all confidence in this Burke.

5017. Do you know whether or not they did not subdivide again, and take the books with a fewer number of voters in than was put down there?—Yes, they divided it to make the work less, so as they could make more canvassers; they had so very little time to do the work in, that they divided the books to make the work less.

5018. How long were those men doing this work at your house?—There was some of them had been engaged five weeks; and there was a man called Bacon, and a man called Davit; old Mr. Davit.

5019. Davit was five weeks engaged?—Yes, he was five weeks.

5020. And he got 3*l.* 10*s.*?—Yes, he got 3*l.* 10*s.*; that was about 10*s.*, or 15*s.*, or 16*s.* a week.

5021. As far as you know, did Davit work during that time?—No, he was out on his other work.

5022. But did he canvass?—He canvassed all the time.

5023. I think that the other man whom you mention as being honest was James Bacon; was he five weeks at it?—Yes.

5024. And he got the same sum?—Yes, he got the same sum.

5025. The others I see, with that exception, I think, got sums about 1*l.*, most of them?—Yes.

Mr. Price.] If your Lordship wishes, I will put the account in to-morrow morning, and call Mrs. Abel.

5026. Mr. Baron Martin.] Burke is the man, as I understand, whom you put trust in?—Yes.

5062. Have

5062. Have you not had the 2*l.* back?—Never; I have never asked for it.

5063. I suppose you were glad to get rid of them?—Yes, I was.

5064. Had anything been done in the neighbourhood by any of them at any other house, that you knew of, at the time?—I do not know that anything had.

5065. Had you seen Ryan on the 9th November?—Yes, I saw him many a time.

5066. Do you remember when he was paid the first 2*l.*?—I cannot say; at the time my husband gave me the 2*l.* of course he told me to put it down; I did not keep an account, but my husband's account.

5067. Had anything occurred about that time?—Of course they wanted some money to go on with the business; they would not break their work without they had money.

5068. Did you see whether they had canvassing books?—They all had that got money; they used to go out either to canvass or something; they pretended to canvass.

5069. Do you remember Ryan and Burke coming again to your husband for more money?—Yes.

5070. After that; on the 14th?—Yes, I do.

5071. Did you see them paid then; and what did they say?—I did not see them paid, but I know that he had to go and get money to pay them.

5072. Did you hear them say anything about what they would do if they were not paid?—I heard a great noise; Ryan's wife was in the bar long enough, and of course expecting his wages.

5073. Was your husband out when they first came, do you remember?—I believe he was, but I cannot swear to it.

5074. Had your husband to get away from them at any time?—He had.

5075. When was that?—On that night.

5076. How did he get away?—To try to get some money.

4077. How did he get away?—Out of the house; I think he went out at the back door.

5078. And got out of the premises altogether?—Yes.

Mr. LOUIS INGHAM, sworn; Examined by Mr. Littler.

5091. You were Secretary to the South Ward for Mr. Ripley's committee?—I was Honorary Secretary.

5092. Do you remember on the 14th November Mr. Abel asking you for money to pay canvassers?—Yes.

5093. Did he say how much he wanted?—He did not say how much he wanted in the first instance.

5094. Did he afterwards tell you how much he wanted?—He did; 11*l.*

5095. Did he say anything about the canvassers at that time?—He said that he had engaged them, and if they were not paid that night, he said, he was afraid they would take his life.

5096. Did you refuse to give him any money?—Yes; I refused to give him money.

5097. Did he go away?—He went away.

5098. Did he come back again?—Yes.

5099. The second time when he came, what happened?—He told me that he durst not go home; he said that these men had threatened him, and he durst not go home without the money, but I refused to pay.

28.

5079. Why was that?—Because he could not pay them if he had not money.

5080. Mr. Baron Martin.] Had he got the money?—He got I think 11*l.* from Mr. Ingham, which we gave Ingham a receipt for.

5081. Mr. Price.] You say that you gave them nothing to eat on the polling day, and that you drew no ale for them on that day?—I do not know that there was any drawn for them at all.

Cross-examined by Mr. Giffard.

5082. Will you swear that there was not?—Of course; I think I can swear that there was not.

5083. But do you swear that there was not?—I do.

5084. Who attended to the drawing of the ale; you?—Yes, mostly.

5085. Who else was attending to it?—I was told not to give them either meat or drink on that day; I thought I must give them this money; the men could not do without something; I was never ordered to do it by any man; Ryan came and asked me for some money or some refreshments, and I told him that I could not make dinner for myself nor for them either, so I gave them 2*l.*

5086. You gave that out of your own pocket?—Yes.

5087. You did not send it in as any claim in any account?—I have never made any claim.

5088. Have you got any claim for refreshments supplied after the 9th?—Yes, I believe there is one on the 14th, 8*l.* and some odd; on the Saturday night we sent all in.

5089. Mr. Baron Martin.] I understand that these men came and you supplied them with beer and refreshments to some extent, with the exception of this day?—Yes; I was forbidden to do it on that day, and they all knew that I was told that.

5090. On other days had you supplied them with drink, as your husband stated yesterday?—Yes, I filled them the drink.

[The Witness withdrew.]

Mrs.
M. J. Abel.
29 January
1869.

5100. Did you afterwards give him some money?—Some of the men came down from Mr. Abel's and sent out for me; I went to them, and there was one of them—

5101. Who were they?—Richard Divett, Patrick Ryan the chairman, and James Burke the vice-chairman; and they said that they had worked and they would be paid, or they would go to Mr. Ripley himself; I said, "Go and tell Mr. Abel to come to me," and they went and sent him down to me at the "Junction" inn, and I said, "How much money will pay these men?" and he said, "11*l.*" I said, "You are afraid of them," and he said he durst not stop at his house unless those men were paid, and I gave him the 11*l.*; but I told him that on no account was he to pay it to a voter who had been canvassing, unless he told him distinctly that he was not to vote.

5102. Did you yourself go round from time to time through all the committee-rooms of the ward?—Yes, several times.

5103. Did you say anything to the chairmen of the different committees about voters who were paid?—Several times. The Friday night before the election we went round to all the wards, and gave instructions to the chairmen of the committees that on no account were refreshments to be had on the day of nomination or polling; and that no man who was employed who was a voter should vote if he was paid under any circumstances. Mr. Hutchinson accompanied me.

5104. Is he the gentleman who was the solicitor for that ward?—He was appointed solicitor for that ward after Mr. Harris.

5105. You and he went to every one of Mr. Ripley's committee-rooms in the ward?—We went to every one of Mr. Ripley's committee-rooms; to all the central committee-rooms in the ward, with the exception of two, which were visited the night before by Mr. Anderton and myself.

5106. Before the election you visited every one of them?—Yes, I did.

5107. Were you afterwards paying persons at the Queen's Hotel?—Yes, I was.

5108. Before you paid each man did you ask him any question?—I asked every man if he was a voter before I paid him, and if he said that he was a voter I refused instantly to pay him. Before I began to pay I said, "If there is any voter in the room he may as well go out at once, as he will not get any money." I repeated it twice during the night, and besides asking the question every man who came to me to be paid—

5109. You had a copy of the register by your side to refer to, had you not?—I had.

5110. Did you refer to it from time to time?—It was referred to several times. I had also Mr. Abel there to detect any man that came if he knew him to be a voter.

5111. Were you here when those men said they came in false names?—I was.

5112. Do you remember the men coming?—I remember Burke.

5113. He came and gave you a false name. Did he say whether he was a voter?—Burke did not give me a false name. I knew that he was a voter. Some men came who were stopped, who gave false names, and they were sent back again.

5114. Every man that you could detect you sent back?—Every man without exception.

5115. You went round through the ward to visit the committee-rooms, and see what they were doing?—I did.

5116. Did you go to pretty nearly every committee-room?—Nearly every room in the ward.

5117. How long did you usually stay at a time?—Perhaps a quarter of an hour or ten minutes.

5118. I suppose you saw refreshments at the different houses?—I did.

5119. Did you see any quantities?—Never.

5120. We have heard in some house in your ward of there being 20 and 30 half-gallon cans in a night?—I never saw a half-gallon can in one of Mr. Ripley's committee-rooms in our ward.

Mr. Baron Martin.] The Act of Parliament prohibits the thing absolutely. There is no moderation in it: the Act says that "no person shall give or pay any expense for meat, drink, entertainment, or provision." It does not say anything about moderation or excess.

Cross-examined by Mr. Giffard.

5121. Have you any accounts?—All my accounts are delivered in to Mr. Little.

5122. How much money did you expend yourself?—I cannot say.

5123. About how much?—Perhaps 4 l. or 5 l.

5124. Do you mean to say that that was all?—I mean that was all.

5125. All that passed through your hands—

5126. Mr. Baron Martin.] That is all you personally expended?—As to all the money that passed through my hands I should pay something like 500 l. or 600 l.

5127. Mr. Giffard.] Where did you get it all from?—From Mr. Holt.

5128. Every part of it?—With the exception of one 50 l.

5129. Who did you get that from?—Mr. Little.

5130. With the exception of those two sums did you receive money from anyone else?—No one.

5131. No one at all?—No.

5132. Did you get the money from Mr. Little in a cheque?—No; in gold.

5133. When did you get it?—I believe it was the Thursday night after the election.

5134. What was it for?—To pay messengers; those I was paying at the Queen's.

5135. Did you ever spend any money or pay any money in respect of the election, except that 400 l. or 500 l.?—No.

5136. Never?—Never.

5137. Of course when you had so spent such a sum as that you kept some account of your own, I suppose, for your own protection?—Certainly.

5138. Where is it?—The book is here.

5139. Just show it to me (it was handed to the learned counsel). Do you recognise it?—Yes.

5140. This is the book, is it?—Yes, but you are looking at the wrong end of the book; that is the result of the canvass.

5141. Who is H. J. Wadman?—The landlord of the "Junction" hotel, the central committee of the ward.

5142. There is money paid by him?—Yes.

5143. I see here an account from the 6th November to the 14th, in which there are refreshments for one week; at one inn, 1 l. 9 s. 6 d.; at the "Engineers," 1 l. 4 s.; at another public-house, 1 l. 7 s., and after the 9th November, they get higher refreshments; one week, "Gladstone Arms," 7 l. 0 s. 2½ d.; "Sun" inn, 7 s. 2½ d.; "Peel" inn, 13 s. 4 d.; at another inn, 2 l. 1 s.; "Butchers' Arms," 2 l. 2 s.; "York" tavern, 3 l. 7 s. 6 d.; "Cemetery" hotel, 4 l. 5 s.; "Plough" inn, 3 l. 10 s., and all for refreshments. The total appears to be, with cab fares, a very small amount, altogether making up a sum of 120 l. These payments which I see afterwards of a similar character, after November 23rd, and so on, I suppose, were paid after, but the expense was incurred before the election?—It was so.

5144. On November the 28th, those were refreshments incurred before the election?—Yes; they were refreshments in every instance incurred before the election.

5145. That account, I see, amounts to 77 l. 2 s.?—That was money paid during that week.

5146. Then I see from the 23rd November down to the 28th, there is another account of 160 l.?—

160 l.?—Yes; that includes the rent for the committee-rooms.

5147. But the rent is given separately, I think, in most instances?—It is, I believe, in most instances so given.

5148. Have you got a list of the people that you actually paid?—A list is here of the men I paid.

5149. Just let me have it (the same was handed to the learned counsel)?—Those are them.

5150. Have you any notion how much you paid to Mr. Abel?—Yes.

5151. How much did you pay him?—I paid him his accounts for refreshments, 6 l. 17 s., that was the amount, I believe, on the 14th November. I paid him again, 8 l. 10 s.; after that night, I paid him 11 l. for the canvassers, on the Saturday night; that was all I ever paid to Mr. Abel.

Re-examined by Mr. Price.

5152. Are those all payments for messengers and door-keepers?—They are.

5153. And not voters?—Not voters; not a single voter.

5154. How long a time is that spread over, the amounts that were read out by my learned friend?—They are spread over from August.

5155. Mr. Giffard.] It was not that that I read over?—From the beginning of the election to the end; I believe you started with the early accounts.

5156. There may be others, but I did not read them?—You started with Mr. Wadman's, at the beginning; it was in the beginning of the election in August.

5157. Mr. Price.] Some of those accounts are dated back as early as August; the fact is, that both sides began about that time?—Yes, they did.

Mr. Giffard.] There is no evidence to that effect.

Mr. Price.] This man gives evidence that it was so.

Mr. Baron Martin.] The question I have to inquire into is, whether the Act of Parliament has been contravened; that is the only question I have to inquire into, and it lies in the narrowest compass that a question can lie in.

5158. Mr. Price.] In the committee-rooms, did you see any but the committee-men and the messengers?—Never.

5159. Mr. Baron Martin.] When Mr. Ripley was there, was any drinking going on at Mr. Abel's?—Mr. Ripley attended two meetings at Abel's, and I attended the same meetings with him, and on both occasions there would be something like 200 or 300 people, and never a single glass of beer was in the room in which Mr. Ripley was during the time that we were there, only one single bottle of ginger-beer was brought into the place while I was there.

Mr. Giffard.] I shall not dispute that; that is part of my case.

The Witness.] And it was paid for.

[The Witness withdrew.]

JEREMIAH RYAN, sworn; Examined by Mr. Price.

5160. YOU are a voter in the East Ward?—Yes.

5161. Who introduced you to Mr. Kitchieman, at the last election?—Marshall Handy.

5162. Where?—At the Union Cross.

5163. Do you remember when that was?—It would be, I think, at the latter end of September, or the beginning of October, but I am not certain.

5164. What are you?—A labourer.

5165. What passed between you and Mr. Kitchieman; what used you to do among your countrymen at that time?—At that time among my countrymen, I used to sell Irish newspapers, and some pamphlets that I, like, was compiling myself into a book, and selling amongst them.

5166. You are the author of them?—You may call me what you like now.

5167. What passed between you and Mr. Kitchieman about the election?—He asked me if I was willing to be engaged like, to help the return of Mr. Ripley, and I said at that time that I had not made up my mind to bother at all with the election at that time, but Richard Kain came to me afterwards and he axed me in like manner to go to Mr. Kitchieman. I went to Mr. Kitchieman then with Kain, and I engaged with Mr. Kitchieman then to start like to help Mr. Ripley's return, because at this time there was no Irishman that dare go into the Irish neighbourhoods that spoke a word in favour of Mr. Ripley; so I engaged with Mr. Kitchieman then, and I went like and started to advocate Mr. Ripley's cause like amongst the Irish people, and it was a great hazard, because some of them were ready to knock me down for dare saying a word in his favour at all, so I began to feel it was too hot for me, selling of these newspapers and periodicals, and I had to give over; in fact, it became so hot that they would not buy for them for advocating Mr. Ripley's principles.

5168. And you so lost that trade?—Yes.

5169. Did you have an interview with Mr. Little?—Yes, and he at first made very little of it, but he eventually paid me like for 2,000 of those songs and pamphlets.

5170. Were they of your own composition?—Yes, he paid me like for those. I said it was the only way I had of going amongst them.

5171. Mr. Baron Martin.] What did he pay you for?—For 2,000 songs, that I might go amongst them like and sell them.

5172. Mr. Price.] When he gave you that money, did you give him any bill for it?—Yes.

5173. What bill was it?—It was the bill I had after having 1,000 printed.

5174. Was it the printer's bill?—Yes.

5175. He gave you money to pay it, did he?—Yes.

5176. Mr. Baron Martin.] What sort of songs were they; were they about Ireland or about Bradford?—They were about Ireland principally.

5177. Mr. Price.] Have you any of them with you?—No.

5178. Mr. Little did not buy the songs of you, did he?—No; he paid me for them so that they should be an introduction to go amongst the Irishmen.

Mr.
L. Ingham.
29 January
1869.

J. Ryan.

J. Ryan.

29 January
1869.

5179. Did you go amongst the Irish with those songs?—Yes.

5180. What did you do?—I sold some of them, and when they found out like that I was doing Mr. Ripley's work I dare not sell any more of them then; I had to give over.

5181. Was there anything about Mr. Ripley in those songs?—No; not a word.

5182. What did you do then?—I gave over then selling them, and I told Mr. Kitchieman then that there was other Irishmen I was well acquainted with, such as Bowen, Bland, Lawlor, and Kelly and Hooley, and that these men with their assistance I thought we could get a good many Irishmen in Bradford to support Mr. Ripley.

5183. How were you to get at them to do that?—I was well acquainted with them.

5184. But what were you to do?—We were to go amongst the Irish people advocating Mr. Ripley's principles, and Mr. Miall was after putting some questions before them, to Mr. Miall in the Temperance Hall, Southgate; and Mr. Miall did not suit Mr. Lamb's principles, and on this occasion he said that he would back any one against Mr. Miall; he would go against any one advocating any one's principles against Mr. Miall's; he put some Irish questions to him and he evaded his answers. This was the reason that Mr. Lamb started first to advocate Mr. Ripley's principles, as Mr. Miall did not suit him.

5185. What did you do with Lawlor, Lamb, Hooley, Kelly, and Quigley; did you form yourselves into a committee?—Yes.

5186. Where did you hold your meetings?—We held them at different places.

5187. At the "Cross Keys"?—No.

5188. Where did you hold them?—We met at the "Junction" and at the "Manor House." I cannot remember the places one after the other.

5189. Were committees opened at those houses?—No; we opened no committees, we could meet where we liked; we sometimes met in our own houses, for instance; we met in our own houses, Lamb, Hooley, Kelly, and me, many a time.

5190. Was Coyne at that time engaged with you?—Not at first.

5191. How soon afterwards was he engaged with you?—It would be perhaps a fortnight.

5192. What was he engaged as?—He was engaged as a person to go about advocating Mr. Ripley's principles.

5193. What was it that you were to do, or to say to the voters. What was Coyne to say?—He was to say that he believed that Mr. Ripley was a better man than Mr. Forster. Coyne was against Mr. Forster and I believe he was an advocate of Mr. Miall.

5194. He was to get the Irish voters to vote for Mr. Ripley and Mr. Miall?—Yes.

5195. How long was Coyne engaged in that way?—Perhaps about three weeks.

5196. What became of him then?—He produced a list of men like that he said that had promised, and he was going out of the town.

5197. Had he a book to put the names of the people in?—He asked me for a pocket-book, and I gave it to him; he wrote the name like in this book in his own, out of his own, not of mine, and said that he should demand 3*l.* on those. I looked over the names, and I saw some names that I thought were not right, and I mentioned one of them to him. He was a brother-in-law of my own, and he was put down in the wrong name, and the number of the house. I said, "Did he give you this name that is Hennessy;" and he said, "Yes, is not that his name?" I said, "No, his name is Shehan." I found that he was false, and I told Kitchieman of him. He did not receive the money, and he had no more to do with Coyne after that.

5198. It appeared to you that he was playing you false, and you turned him out?—Yes.

5199. In what capacity were Lamb and Brown employed?—They were in like manner going about every night to different places, even amongst Miall and Forster, where they met at different public-houses, where the committee-rooms were, and they there advocated the principles of Mr. Ripley. Lamb was one of the greatest advocates among the Irishmen in Bradford for Mr. Ripley, and at all the public meetings he spoke for him.

5200. Was Lamb a voter?—No.

5201. Was Bowen a voter?—Yes.

5202. Did you at any time hear Kitchieman say anything to Lamb and Bowen about expense?—Yes; when we were all engaged like, and was offered so much money, someone mentioned expense, and he said, "I will have nothing to do with expenses." Kitchieman said that, because he said "if one sixpence returns Mr. Ripley to Parliament I would not have that sixpence spent in an illegal way."

5203. Did he say that more than once to Lamb and Bowen?—Yes, he said it many times.

5204. Did you make a report to Kitchieman from time to time?—Not until the last fortnight.

5205. What did you receive yourself?—I received myself, I think, for my own wages, something about 29*l.*

5206. For how long a time do you calculate the 29*l.* for?—For seven or eight weeks, or something that way.

5207. Did you, when you went about, put persons on the committee, or on the canvassing list, or on any list?—No; I went about advocating Mr. Ripley's principles the same as the others.

5208. Is it true that when people came to you you said that it would be all right, and that they should be paid, or anything of that kind?—No. I never gave any man so much as sixpence for his vote.

5209. Did you promise them?—Never.

5210. Did you say anything as to what they should do if they were paid?—No. I told them distinctly that if any money was paid to any canvasser that that man should not vote. I told him so time after time.

5211. You did not vote, did you?—No; I was not going to vote, and therefore I would not wish them to vote.

5212. You have stated that you used to go about, did you go about in company with others, or generally by yourself?—We dare not go by ourselves; we went five or six into a house.

5213. Why was that?—Because if we got up to speak in an Irish company, if we were by ourselves, we would be killed; we had been threatened many times, and some of us had been beaten.

5214. Did Lamb and Bowen come down one night to your house, and did you hear of their having been down there kicking up a row, and asking for you?—Yes.

5215. And

5215. And of their going afterwards to Kitchieman for you?—Yes.

5216. Were you in at that time?—Yes; I was in on the night they came, but my wife would not let me speak to them, because two of my children were poorly at the time, and she did not wish them to be excited like.

5217. How much did you pay those men altogether; had you a list of them?—I generally used to put it down in pencil.

5218. How many had you under your charge as canvassers?—I paid 51 men; but out of those 51 I think there are 16 of them all voters, but there are six of them that I never knew were voters. Some of them had the same names.

5219. When you paid those men, what were they paid for?—They were paid for canvassing.

5220. Did they produce any books, or make any returns?—They used to come to the committee-room at night with books, but I had nothing to do with that. I met them from time to time canvassing. I met Corcoran, Luby, Young, and Cody one night in the street I live in. The four of them were together canvassing, and I asked them why the four went together, and Cody said, "If we went in twos there would be a gang about us, and they would beat us, and therefore it is better for the four to go together, because we can protect one another."

5221. Do you remember the time when there was a meeting to be held of the Irish at the Mechanics' Institute?—Yes.

5222. Mr. Ripley was to receive them there, was he not?—Yes.

5223. Was that meeting held, and was Mr. Ripley able to speak at it?—He was not allowed to speak.

5224. When you paid those men, or before, did you ever ask them anything about their votes?—As to any of them that I knew to be voters, I told them that if they were paid men they could not vote.

5225. You are certain, are you, that not one shilling of the money was spent for their votes?—Not one shilling was given for their votes.

5226. So far as you knew they were doing work?—So far as I knew I had seen them from time to time going about doing the work.

5227. You had, I believe, to go as far as Idle and Pudsey, and that part of the town?—Some of them went like a good distance out, perhaps a couple of miles, but some of those places were not in the borough; but there were voters who used to work at the stone quarries, and they went out to those places where they worked to ask those men to vote for Mr. Ripley.

5228. What were your own personal expenses and refreshments to 50 canvassers altogether?—The expenses for me and them like were about 7*l*.

5229. Mr. Baron Martin.] What were those expenses for?—For the week before the election. We wanted then to go like very much amongst the Irish that week, and we worked together; we went in and got our dinners.

5230. Was the 7*l*. spent for dinner?—Yes; during that week.

5231. Mr. Price.] From the 9th to a day or two before the polling, did you give anything to anyone?—No; up to Friday, from the 9th to the 13th, I gave no man so much as a glass of ale after that.

5232. To whom did you give those refreshments?—There was Murphy, and Hoare, and Cody.

28.

5233. Were the canvassers the men who were doing the work?—Yes.

5234. They were not strangers, whom you wanted to entice?—No; they were men I was well acquainted with, and they were working for Mr. Ripley.

5235. Did you spend any portion of this money, that you say was spent in that last week, upon persons for their votes?—Not a single penny of it.

5236. How much money did Lamb get from you altogether?—He got no money from me. Mr. Kitchieman merely gave me money one night to give like to him, and I gave a 5*l*. note to William Bowen, and he was to give 2*l*. 10*s*. of it to Lamb. Mr. Kitchieman had not time to see them, and he gave it to me to give to them; that was the only money I ever paid to them.

5237. All the other money that they received, they received from Kitchieman?—Yes.

5238. One night Kitchieman, not having time to do it himself, gave you a 5*l*. note to divide between them?—Yes.

5239. Is it true that one night you paid Lamb 30*s*. at the "Junction Inn"?—Yes; that was another night, when Kitchieman could not attend; he had a good many meetings to attend on that night, and he gave me this money to give to them.

5240. Thirty shillings?—Yes.

5241. On another occasion he gave you money besides the 5*l*. note?—Yes.

5242. Did you pay any money on any other occasion?—Not to my knowledge.

5243. Did you pay Bowen; and, if so, how much?—I paid him the same as Lamb.

5244. Was that when you paid Lamb the 30*s*.?—Yes.

5245. Was that for the same reason?—Yes.

5246. They said that their wages were to be doubled, that they were to be raised to 5*l*. a week, why was that?—The reason why they were to be raised to 5*l*. a week, they went to Mr. Michael Mahony's office.

5247. Who is he?—He is a wool merchant in this town; he was a great supporter of Miall and Forster, and they went to his office; Lamb, and Bowen, and Kelley.

5248. While they were canvassing for Mr. Ripley?—Yes. There was a man called James Dillon, who came to them and told them that if they went to Mr. Mahony they would get more money from him for canvassing for Miall and Forster than for canvassing for Mr. Ripley.

5249. Mr. Baron Martin.] Why were their wages raised; were they to do more work?—Because the work was getting heavier, and by the influence of those other parties trying to win them over to the other side; and therefore they would not do the work except they got the money for it.

5250. Mr. Price.] Did you agree with them that they were to give more of their time to it?—They worked both day and night for that week; I was paying them sometimes till three o'clock in the morning.

5251. Do you know John Hoard?—Yes.

5252. Is it true that you ever gave to him, at the "Oak Inn," where Patrick Darcy was chairman, outside the "Oak Inn," a sovereign, saying that he was to vote for Mr. Ripley?—I never knew him by name, and I never knew he was a voter. I knew him by the name of Murphy.

5253. Did you say you gave him a sovereign to vote for Mr. Ripley?—I never knew that he was a voter, and therefore I could not say so.

5254. Did you ever say that you gave him a sovereign to vote for Mr. Ripley?—Never.

5255. You knew him, as I understand you, by the name of Murphy?—Yes.

5256. On the register he appears under the name of Hoard?—Yes.

5257. But you knew him by no other name than that of Murphy?—No.

5258. Was Hoard put on as a canvasser?—Yes.

5259. Have you got his name down on any list in the name of Murphy; did you not furnish an account with the men's names in it: I see "John Hoard or Murphy"?—Yes. I merely put it down in pencil; that is, the men I paid, and you will find that they are all in that book just in pencil when I gave any money to anyone.

5260. "Murphy" I see; is that the name?—Yes.

5261. Mr. Baron Martin.] What did you give him?—The money I gave him for canvassing? I gave him 3*l.* 10*s.*

5262. How many Irish voters are there in Bradford?—I understand that there are between 3,000 and 4,000 Irish voters in Bradford.

5263. Mr. Price.] It has been stated that you had gone out of the way?—Yes.

5264. How was that?—There was Lamb, and Bowen, and Patrick Connor; and I met them at Blake's Vaults at the Exchange on Saturday. I think it would be the 28th November, and Connor said to me, "You are the general to return Mr. Ripley"; and he said, "We are the generals now to unseat him"; and he said, "You will be our private"; I said, "Perhaps the private might out-general the generals"; and Bowen said, "If we could only trust you we could make a good thing of it"; I said, "How is that"; he said, "Mr. Arnold wants to see you."

5265. Did you know Mr. Arnold?—I knew Mr. Arnold previously to the party taking the electioneering.

5266. Who was he?—He was the secretary for the Liberal Electoral Association, and I said "What for"? and he said, "I think you can give important evidence against Mr. Ripley, and I consider that if you do you can make it a good thing for yourself and for us." I said, "I will have nothing to do with it"; and I went and told Mr. Little about it; and then Lamb, and Bowen and me went to Leeds on the Sunday morning. I went to get more information out of them, and they told me the whole history about this unseating committee, as they called it, that was got up.

5267. Who was on this unseating committee?—There was Lamb, and Bowen and Connor. I only knew those three at that time, and I went with them to Leeds, and they told me, like the great subscribers to this fund, to unseat Mr. Ripley, the names of them; and amongst them was Mr. Sutcliffe, of the Valley Mills; and Lamb told me that he promised to set him up in business to the extent of 200*l.* if he could get men up to unseat Mr. Ripley.

5268. Lamb is in his employment, is he not?—No; but he lives on his property. I promised to go with them on the Monday to Mr. Arnold, and I went with them to Mr. Hargreaves' office on the Monday, and Mr. Hargreaves was talking with me before Mr. Arnold came in; and when he came in he then offered me 50*l.* like down, and 50*l.* after Mr. Ripley was unseated.

5269. Were Lamb and Bowen present when that money was offered to you?—Yes; they were present at the time. I said, "I shall have no less than 100*l.* down and 100*l.* after."

5270. Why did you say that?—When I saw that he was so liberal in offering 50*l.* at first and 50*l.* a-piece for Lamb and Bowen.

5271. Who else was there?—At this time there was Mr. Arnold, Mr. Hargreaves, and Mr. Mills.

5272. And you made a bargain, 100*l.* for you down and 100*l.* after the unseating of Mr. Ripley?—I proposed it and they agreed to it.

5273. Mr. Baron Martin.] Then it was a bargain?—I was to bring a written statement of it like, with what I wished to write out to them; and I can assure you that I did write out a good many lies. I thought that 100*l.* might be well paid for writing out a few good lies. I came home, and on the next day, when I wrote this statement out and I gave it to Bowen, he took it and went with me from my house, and if he had wished he could have given it to Mr. Hargreaves without my getting a penny, because I did not care for what I had put unto it. Before I went to Mr. Hargreaves's office I went and told Mr. Little about this 100*l.*, and he said, "Go and tell all you know, and get the 100*l.*" So I went, and Mr. Arnold came in, and he asked me had I my statement written out. Mr. Bowen said "Yes," and he went out. Then he brought in seemingly a bag of gold, and counted down eight 5*l.* notes to me in the presence of Bowen and Mr. Hargreaves, and 60*l.* in gold.

5274. Who else was there?—Mr. Hargreaves, Mr. Arnold, and Bowen; and when the money was put down, Mr. Mills came in just as I was counting the money like. At this time they clutched at the statement, and said there was great importance in it; that they were reading in it. Mr. Mills got it and read it while I was counting the money.

5275. Was it in the form of poetry or prose?—It was in the form of writing. I got this money, and then myself and Bowen came away.

5276. Did you get 100*l.*?—Yes, I got it in Mr. Hargreaves's office, and they told me then before I went away, that it was my duty to bring up men every day to give their statements there, and those men should be well paid for their trouble. I went to Mr. Little's office (myself and Bowen), and Mr. Little was not there. Bowen knew that I went and told Mr. Little about it, but Lamb did not. Mr. Little, I believe, was gone to London, or else I should have handed over the 100*l.* to him after I got it. I went home then, and then Bowen told Lamb, so that they got rather uneasy to see that I got 100*l.* and they had got nothing. Lamb, Bowen and Connor got others to come to make a great noise about my house, and I had to leave the place and sleep elsewhere. I thought it better to leave the town, and I went to Ireland. I have been there since.

5277. At whose expense?—At the expense of Mr. Hargreaves, Mr. Arnold, and Mr. Mills. I think I was justified in what I did.

5278. Where have you been staying in Ireland?—In the city of Cork.

5279. Is that your native place?—Yes.

5280. You have told us the gentlemen who were present when the money was paid; did you see anybody else about the office at the time, or at the door?—I will not say for that; I will not say what I do not know.

5281. Did

J. Ryan.

29 January
1869.

5281. Did a man called Ryan come to you and say that he had got any money, or did he get some from you; John Ryan?—Patrick Ryan and James Burke came to me on Saturday the 14th.

5282. Did you know Patrick Ryan?—I knew Patrick Ryan to be the chairman at the "Equity" inn of the Irish committee; that was at Sam Abel's house, and James Burke was also acting with me; they met me on Saturday the 14th, and they told me that Sam Abel had never given them a halfpenny, and I knew them at this time to have been for three or four weeks canvassing and knocking about; James Burke showed me the book of his canvass, and he told me that it was very hard to have been working so long for Mr. Ripley without getting anything, and Sam Abel would give them nothing; I thought that it was very hard for men with families to be so treated; Burke was a neighbour of mine, and I knew that he had a small family; I also knew Pat Ryan to have a large family, and I thought it very hard for them to work so long for nothing, and I gave them 2*l.* a-piece.

5283. They having told you that they had got nothing from Abel?—Yes.

Cross-examined by Mr. Giffard.

5284. Where have you been for the last three or four days?—I have been with Kitchieman.

5285. Where have you been?—At his house; at the "Victoria" hotel.

5286. You say that you told a pack of lies to Mr. Hargreaves in your statement, for which you were to get 100*l.*?—Yes.

5287. How much of this statement is lies: "On Friday September 11th, I first engaged with E. Kitchieman to neutralise the Irish vote"; is that true or false?—False.

5288. "I then received 2*l.*"; is that true or false?—False.

5289. "The same I divided between Thomas Lawler and Richard Kane"; is that true or false?—It is true; that is, about dividing the money between Kane and Lawler; but the date is false; there is a difference of a fortnight.

5290. "I then got 3*l.* a-week, and I was to form a committee to neutralise the Irish vote"; is that true or false?—That is false.

5291. Did you get 3*l.* per week?—Yes.

5292. Did you form a committee?—Yes; but not to neutralise the Irish vote.

5293. The only part of that passage that is false is the words, "to neutralise the Irish vote"?—Yes.

5294. Mr. Baron Martin.] Who suggested this word "neutralise"?—Coyne.

5295. Mr. Giffard.] Was he there when you wrote this statement?—No.

5296. Did you ever see Coyne from the time you dismissed him, to speak to him?—Yes.

5297. Where did you see him?—I saw him many a time through the town.

5298. But I mean, to speak to him?—I spoke to him the week before the election.

5299. Was that the last time you saw him before you wrote this statement?—Yes.

5300. Then Coyne could not have suggested the word "neutralise" in this statement?—I wrote it out because they thought it was very important evidence, by the directions of Lamb and Bowen.

5301. Then you say, "The following are the names of the committee: William Bone, 5 Paper Hall-court, voter; William Kelly, 26 Temperance-street, voter; Michael Coyne, 5 Wild Boar-street; Michael Lamb, Valley-road; Timothy Holy, Bolling-street; Thomas Lawlor, 74 Captains-street; Moses Quigly Long, Croft-place, voter"; is that true?—Yes.

5302. "This committee first met at the 'Junction' hotel, Leeds-road, on Tuesday October 6th"; is that true?—Not so far as the time that they met there all together for the first time.

5303. "They met at the 'Junction' hotel, Leeds road, on Tuesday October the 6th; Lawlor and Quigley did not attend"?—No; all the others were not there at the first time; we did not meet there for the first time.

5304. Did you hear Kitchieman examined yesterday?—Yes.

5305. Do you swear that those other men, with the exception of Quigley and Lawler, were not at the "Junction" hotel?—Yes, they were there, but it was not the first time that we met there, I tell you; it was the first time that Coyne wrote to neutralise the Irish votes.

5306. "On Tuesday, October 6th, Lawlor and Quigly did not attend this neutral committee-work secretly until Saturday, November 7th, when I received 20*l.* in Blake's Exchange Vaults; 10*l.* in gold and two in notes to pay men"; is that true?—I received 35*l.*

5307. "On Monday, 9th November, 15*l.*"; is that true?—I received no money on the Monday.

5308. The two together, would be 35*l.*?—Yes.

5309. Did you mean to tell a lie then?—I meant to tell lies then; I just wanted to spread the dates.

5310. When you wrote "20*l.*" instead of "35*l.*"; was that intended to be a lie or the truth?—A lie.

5311. What was the object of that lie?—I wanted to write down everything that came into my head.

5312. Did you in fact receive 35*l.*?—Yes.

5313. You wrote down that you received 20*l.* on one day, and 15*l.* on the other, and you put those into two different payments as a lie on purpose?—Yes.

5314. What was the use of telling that sort of lie?—I did not care what I was putting down at the time.

5315. "On Saturday, 14th November, 50*l.*"; is that true?—I received 55*l.* on Saturday.

5316. Did you receive 50*l.* on the 14th November?—Yes; I received 55*l.* on Saturday.

5317. "On Sunday, 15th November, 10*l.*"; is that true?—I received no money on any other days, but these days, on the 7th, the 12th, and 14th.

5318. Then there is added "William Hennigan, 12, Palladios-buildings, voter; John Horn Hoardon, the Burgess Roll, 15, Palladios-buildings"?—They were not added to the committee with Lamb Bowen and the others.

5319. Were they wanted to form a committee at the "Shamrock"?—They were engaged to go into the West Ward, to open the Irish committee.

5320. At the "Shamrock"?—Yes, and the other houses.

5321. Then that part of it is true?—Yes.

5322. You seem to have mixed up what was true with what was false?—Yes.

5323. Then you say, "To those two men I gave the West Ward to work; I gave Horn, 3*l.* 10*s.*"; is that true?—Yes.

J. Ryan. 5324. "To Hennington, 1 l."; is that true?—Yes.
 29 January 1869. 5325. "But Mr. Armitage said he would pay Hennigan, as he was chairman for the West Ward."; is that true?—No.
 5326. "Mr. Armitage said this to me in the presence of Hoard"?—He did not.
 5327. "To Patrick Ryan, of 70 Frederick-street, South Ward, I gave 2 l. a voter;" was Mr. Armitage chairman of the West Ward?—Yes.
 5328. You have explained to us several times why you told lies; will you just explain why you told the truth?—I put down everything that came into my mind at the time.

5329. But can you not explain to us why you told the truth?—Because there was no harm in telling the truth, but there was harm in telling lies. I put down the truth and the lies together, for the sake of getting the money. I told the truth, as there was no harm in it.

5330. Did you tell the truth by accident?—No.

5331. You really meant it?—Yes, as there was no harm in it.

[The Witness withdrew.]

Mr. MARK DAWSON, sworn; Examined by Mr. Waddy.

Mr. Dawson. 5332. You are a voter?—Yes.
 5333. And you took an active part, I believe, for Mr. Ripley at the last election?—Yes, I was chairman for the East Ward.
 5334. Have you been here during the trial of this petition?—Yes.

5335. Did you hear what was said about a sovereign, which was said to have been advanced by you to Conroy?—I was not in court at that time.

5336. Have you heard of it since?—Yes.

5337. Tell us what took place about that sovereign?—I was absent when the evidence was given, or I should have contradicted the statement, so far as it was stated that I gave this man a sovereign on the polling-day; on that day I was not personally at my office; I was at Eastbrook House from seven o'clock in the morning till three in the afternoon, except five minutes, when I went from Eastbrook House to the polling-booth to vote. I gave it next after Mr. Forster and another gentleman, and therefore to say that I gave him a sovereign on the following day, is untrue; it was a few days after the polling-day, which my clerk can prove, he was present in the office when I paid it.

5338. Did Conroy call upon you?—No; Crowther called upon me with three men, and said, that the canvassers had not been paid; some of them were hard up, and wanted money, and that if I would advance a sovereign on behalf of the candidates, it should be returned the following week when they were paid at Eastbrook House; that was the reason why I advanced that money.

5339. Had you known Crowther as a canvasser at your ward?—I had.

5340. Do you remember Mr. Kitcheman coming and getting that sum from you?—I can explain how it was got; he did not get it from me; I did not pay it to him as Mr. Kitcheman explained the other day; a meeting at Eastbrook House took place when he explained the position he was in with regard to the Irish voters, and that unless they received their wages they would strike, and he satisfied Mr. Terry that all was quite legal and correct, and Mr. Terry said that I might advance 50 l. I accordingly did so; I did not pay it as I had not 50 l. then, but I told my son to pay it, and he paid it to Mr. Kitcheman on the following morning.

5341. What was it paid for; how was it to be spent?—It was solely to be spent for canvassing, and nothing else.

Cross-examined by Mr. Giffard.

5342. Do you mean to say that Mr. Terry told you that you might lawfully, during the election, make payments on behalf of the candidate?—I tell you that Mr. Terry advised that I might make that payment.

5343. Mr. Terry told you that you might lawfully make payments on behalf of the candidate during the election?—I tell you this.

Mr. Baron Martin.] This evidence does not really touch the question.

Mr. Giffard.] I thought, my Lord, that I was bound, on behalf of Mr. Terry, to ask that question; it is as clear a contravention of the Act of Parliament as was ever committed.

[The Witness withdrew.]

Mr. Price stated that there were several gentlemen who had been chairmen of committees in the different wards, who were anxious, as supporters of Mr. Ripley, to stand before the people of Bradford in a proper light, but that he would not call them if his Lordship thought they should not be called.

Mr. Baron Martin.] I think that there ought to be some limit to the evidence; but there is a witness of the name of Gibson, a butcher, whom I think you ought to call.

JOSEPH GIBSON, sworn; Examined by Mr. Littler.

J. Gibson. 5344. You are a Butcher, residing in the West ward?—Yes.

5345. You were chairman of the fifth district?—Yes.

5346. At the "Beckett's Arms"?—Yes.

5347. You were there; I believe, for about 13 weeks?—Yes; 12 or 13.

5348. How many were there on the committee there; 20?—Yes; between 20 and 30.

5349. Do you include canvassers in that number?—Yes; canvassers and committee men.

5350. Mr. Baron Martin.] Voters and committee men?—Yes; they were mixed.

5351. Mr. Littler.] How many were canvassers?—Six or eight.

Mr. Baron Martin.] Just put in the document that was before me yesterday; his return.

Mr. Littler.] Very well, my Lord. (It was handed to the Witness.)

Witness.] I believe this is my book.

5352. As

5352. As regards all those men, is that a list of the persons whom you paid?—It is.

5353. For what did you pay them?—I paid them for services rendered, for messengers, canvassers, and a body guard for myself.

5354. Why was it that you required a body guard?—Because I got brutally insulted once or twice, and Mr. Ripley's solicitor was insulted with me; they were so well organized by having 12 months' drill, that it was very dangerous to move.

5355. Had they been canvassing and preparing during that time?—Yes.

5356. Was there any one of those men who did not do work for his money?—No; I cannot say that there is one here but what worked for his money.

5357. Did you ever see any of them do any work?—I saw them working, knocking about, going backwards and forwards to the committee room, and bringing messages, and taking voters to the poll, and such as that.

5358. Did you make any difference between the voters and the non-voters?—I told the voters that they must not have any refreshments. I left word that the non-voters must have it, but none but the workers; I gave very little to any.

5359. Did you say anything to those who had votes, and who were paid, about what they were to do on the polling-day?—Those that I engaged said that they were not voters, when they were engaged.

5360. Did you tell any of them anything about voting?—I told them, if there was a man engaged, that he must not vote.

5361. You had men, had you not, on the polling day, or had you any before?—Yes, I was obliged to have, as I had information given by Mr. Miall's supporters that there would be a riot if Mr. Miall was losing during the afternoon in the ward.

5362. Was that the reason that you hired more men?—Yes.

5363. Do you know whether there were special constables sworn in before the magistrates?—I believe so.

5364. Towards the afternoon was there any disturbance in the West Ward?—Yes; they armed themselves, the Miallites, with bludgeons, pokers, tongs, and all descriptions of implements, and they broke all my windows, stole my meat, and struck my wife.

5365. Did anything happen at "Beckett's Arms"?—Yes; but I removed from there to make room for the Irish committee.

5366. I mean on the day of the election, did anything happen there?—I believe they broke all their windows.

5367. And at the "Prince of Wales," what happened?—That was partly gutted, as well as all the windows in the place.

5368. And at "Bobbin Turner's Arms"?—That was a very nice picture for an artist.

5369. Do you know whether at any of those places the people demanded drink?—No, sir, I was not at any of them, excepting that day.

5370. I believe ultimately the Miallites got the best of it?—Yes, they were very strong.

Cross-examined by Mr. Giffard.

5371. Do you know Dennis Burns?—Yes.

5372. Did you offer him money for his vote?—Never in my life.

5373. You are sure of that, are you?—Yes.

5374. Do you know William Handy; is he a voter?—Yes, since the election; I never knew his name before.

28.

5375. Did you offer him money for his vote?—I never spoke to the man in my life.

5376. Did you not pay him money?—No.

5377. Look to your own list?—He is there; I put him down, and I know who paid him.

5378. Who paid him?—Mrs. Gibson.

5379. You did not pay this William Handy yourself?—No, nor engaged him.

5380. Who did engage him?—A man they call Gallagher, the captain of the non-electors.

5381. Were you present when Mrs. Gibson paid him?—No.

5382. Where did she get the money to pay him with?—She is always taking money in the shop.

5383. Then she paid it out of her own pocket?—She did.

5384. Did you get any money from Mr. Holt?—Yes.

5385. When did you get it?—The Friday night after the election.

5386. How much did you get?—£. 30.

5387. From Mr. Illingworth?—Yes, 15 l., and from Mr. Armitage, 3 l.

5388. £. 48 altogether?—Yes, in 13 weeks.

5389. Was that before you paid this man?—I got it before I did pay him.

5390. I ask you again, where did your wife get the money to pay this man?—My wife will stand up and tell you herself.

5391. But do you know where she got it from?—I do know that he was paid; but my business lies in the market; I was not at home.

5392. You say that you never spoke to William Handy?—Never in my life.

5393. Did Handy go to you at the "Black Bull"?—I have not been there many a year.

5394. Did he go to the "Bull's Head" and ask you for payment, and did you tell him to go and be paid by Mrs. Gibson?—I never did; I do not remember ever seeing Handy.

5395. Will you swear you did not say so?—Yes; there were hundreds there, but I do not remember them.

5396. Was Armitage paying at the "Bull's Head"?—No, I believe Mr. H. Illingworth was.

5397. You were there at the time that Mr. Illingworth was paying, were you not?—Yes, I was.

5398. Do you mean to say that Handy did not come and ask for payment, and that you did send him to your wife to be paid?—I never knew that he was engaged; he never came near me at all; I will swear that.

5399. How did you know the names of those men?—I did not know that they called him William Handy, till my wife told me; I had known by sight for years as a picture hawker.

5400. Did you know that he was engaged?—No.

5401. You never saw him working?—No.

5402. How did your wife know who was to be paid?—She set on many men during the riots to protect herself, shop, and property; I was not there at the time she engaged the men; but she did it.

5403. Those men whom you got 48 l. to pay, were they set on by you or by your wife?—The men that I set on I paid.

5404. Have you got a list of them?—You have it.

5405. And there I find the name of Handy?—I included it when my wife told me to do so.

Q 3

5406. When

J. Gibson.

29 January 1869.

J. Gibson.
29 January
1869.

5406. When did you write out the list, before or after the payment?—I believe I wrote it the last week or two after.

5407. How was your wife to know whom to pay?—My son put it down on a little bit of paper.

5408. Where is that bit of paper?—I do not know.

5409. Is this man, Gallagher, the captain of the non-electors?—Yes.

5410. Did you see him on the polling day?—I cannot say; there were so many hundreds and thousands.

5411. Were you at the "Washington" Hotel on that day?—Yes.

5412. Did you see Gallagher there?—I cannot say.

5413. Will you swear you did not?—I will not swear that I did not.

5414. Did you put Patrick Gallagher's name on the list?—I did; he was engaged by Mr. Poole, and I paid him.

5415. Do you remember Patrick Gallagher bringing up William Handy?—I do not.

5416. Will you swear that he did not bring him up?—To the best of my recollection I never saw Handy.

5417. Will you swear that Patrick Gallagher did not bring William Handy up, and then that you, at that time, put William Handy's name down on the list?—I will.

5418. You swear that that did not take place?—Yes.

5419. When did you see that list last?—I do not know; it is many weeks since I have delivered it in.

5420. Did you hand it to Mr. Little?—No; to Mr. Mossman.

5421. The solicitor for the district?—Yes, he is one of them.

5422. Is the list here?—The list that was originally made; I took it and copied it, and I took the other back, and that has been lost.

5423. When did you see it last?—Weeks ago. I have tried to find it, but could not.

5424. Who has that copy of it?—Mr. Mossman or his clerks; they had the original list to copy.

5425. Did they return it to you?—They did; but I have lost it since.

[The Witness withdrew.]

Mrs. MARY ANN GIBSON, sworn; Examined by Mr. Price.

Mrs. M. A. Gibson.

5426. YOUR husband has stated that you put some men down on a list?—I have put many on.

5427. Why?—My husband was not at home, and I took as much upon me as he did upon the whole.

5428. Who are the men that you put down?—I cannot just tell the names, but I never put Handy's down.

5429. Did Gallagher bring Handy to you?—He did.

5430. When he brought him to you, did he say that he was not a voter?—Yes; he came in one Saturday afternoon my husband was in the market, and Gallagher said, "This man has been working for two days;" and our little boy said, "He is a Miall man;" and so I said, "Well, I cannot pay you;" but Gallagher said that he had worked very hard, and he had got into a deal of trouble with supporting Mr. Ripley for two days, his brother, and all of them. I said, "Are you a voter?" and he said, "I am not a voter." I said to Gallagher, "Is he a voter?" and he said, "You hear what the man says, he says he is not." I said, "If he has worked two days, and you say he is not a voter, I will pay him two days' wages." My husband was not in the house, but my little boy was, and Gallagher. I paid him with 10 s. He said he had worked two days, which he has acknowledged since, here I suppose.

5431. Your husband said that he put on some men as a body guard?—Yes.

5432. Tell me who it was, and what was the necessity for having that body guard?—I heard a gentleman named Mr. Leech say that as sure as Mr. Miall lost we should have a riot, and I set a good many on, and I paid the money to do it. I never put it down to anybody's account. They were not voters.

5433. You paid them out of your own pocket?—Yes, many.

5434. Was that done because you required protection?—Yes. On the Monday they came on like roaring lions when they thought that Mr. Miall and Forster had the show of hands.

5435. Was there a great disturbance in several parts of the town?—Yes, there was at our place.

5436. Was damage done?—Yes, a great deal of damage was done.

5437. Were you in terror yourself?—Yes; they pulled the shutters down, and pulled the meat on the floor.

5438. Were you in terror?—I kept my spirits up pretty well. I went out to them with a butcher's cleaver.

Cross-examined by Mr. Giffard.

5439. Did you pay the 10 s. in two sums, first 5 s., and then another 5 s.?—I never did; I gave him 10 s. on the Saturday forenoon out of the money that I took in the butcher's shop.

5440. When was it that this conversation took place between Gallagher and you about this man Handy?—On the Saturday forenoon.

5441. Was that after the election?—It was after the election.

5442. I think you stated that your son said that Handy was a Miall man?—Yes, he did. I can send for him.

5443. When he said that he was a Miall man, did you ask him whether it was true?—Of course they began to talk, and he said that he was not.

5444. Did you ask him whether it was true?—He said, "I am not; I got into ill-will enough over that"; that is, his brother and all his friends.

5445. Then you gave him 10 s.?—I said that if he had worked hard two days I would pay him.

5446. And you paid him from some list?—No, not at all; it was from my own pocket; and I told my husband that I had paid him.

5447. You paid him for two days' work?—Yes.

5448. Why was he returned as only paid for one day's work?—I paid him 10 s. for two days' work; if it is only one day, I am robbed out of one day with him.

5449. Did you take a note at the time of how many many days' work you paid for?—My sen 'set set them down. I paid the man, but he never set that down.

5450. How much did you pay, do you suppose, altogether that you have not set down?—I cannot say; many five shillings; six or seven, perhaps.

5451. How came you to do that?—Because I took an interest in it.

Re-examined by Mr. Price.

5452. Is it true that when you paid Handy the money, that you gave him only 5 s., and he said, "Is that all?"—It is not true. I wanted to be called to refute the lie that has got into the papers.

5453. Is it true that your husband then said, "Give him 5 s. more?"—My husband was not in the house.

5454. Then it is not true?—No.

5455. Did your husband say, "I will put him down for two days?"—He was not in the house.

5456. Did you know or not as to these men that you took an interest in, that those were the persons who were employed as you believed?—Yes; many a one that I set down their names. I did not dare tell my husband all I had set down; I was afraid he would grumble at me.

5457. You paid money, and have never had any return of it?—Yes, many a one; but the witness told a falsehood in this box yesterday.

5458. Were those men voters that you paid this money to?—They were not voters; and Handy said, "I am not a voter." I said, "Gallagher, is he a voter?" and he said, "You have heard what the man says; he says that he is not a voter."

5459. And the others were not voters?—No; they were runabouts.

[The Witness withdrew.

Mr. GEORGE MOSSMAN, sworn; Examined by Mr. Littler.

5460. WHOSE handwriting are those accounts in (handing the same to the Witness)?—My clerk's.

5461. What were they copied from?—From a lot of papers, badly written papers, that Mr. Gibson sent to my office, or gave me.

5462. Can you tell me whether those are a correct copy of those papers; did you examine them?—Yes, I did; some part of them is in my handwriting.

5463. You examined them with the original, and that is a correct copy?—Yes.

Mr. Giffard stated that he had no question to ask the witness.

[The Witness withdrew.

Mr. FRANK WILLIE, sworn; Examined by Mr. Price.

5464. Do you live in Bradford?—No, but I am employed in business here.

5465. Did you hear Petty's evidence, which was given yesterday, about a transaction said to have taken place between you and him at the "Horse and Jockey" Inn?—I did not hear it.

5466. Were you at the "Horse and Jockey" Inn on the nomination day?—No.

Mr. Giffard stated that he did not wish to interfere, but that this witness was not the person referred to by Petty.

5467. Mr. Price.] Is there any other person of your name in Bradford who is a woolstapler?—There is none in the trade of the same name. I heard remarks made as to that many hundreds of times yesterday by gentlemen in the afternoon, and it is particularly annoying to me.

5468. Mr. Baron Martin.] You did not offer to buy a cock?—I was not in the "Horse and Jockey," and I never saw the man there, and never offered to buy a cock.

5469. (To Mr. Petty.) Is this the man you spoke of yesterday?—No, that is not the man.

5470. How do you know that the man you spoke of was called Willie?—The landlord called him Mr. Willie when I was in the house. I did not know the man at all. I asked the landlord after who he was, and he said he was Mr. Willie, from Birkenshaw, a top-maker.

5471. What was the name of the house?—The "Horse and Jockey."

5472. Mr. Price (to the Witness).] Are you a woolstapler?—Yes; but I was never in the "Horse and Jockey" in my life.

Cross-examined by Mr. Giffard.

5473. Have you any brothers?—Yes, several; five.

Re-examined by Mr. Price.

5474. Do they live in Bradford?—Yes.

5475. What are their names?—Charles and John, Henry—

5476. What trade are they in?—They are woolstaplers.

5477. Are they within reach?—Yes, they are; but I can answer for them that they were never in the "Horse and Jockey." It is very unpleasant for any of us to be mentioned in the manner that my name has been mentioned.

[The Witness withdrew.

Mr. FREDERICK WILLIAM GRANHAN, sworn; Examined by Mr. Price.

5478. You are Chief Constable of Bradford?—Yes.

5479. Previous to the last election, did the magistrates think it necessary to swear in special constables?—Yes, by my advice. I was apprehensive that there might be a disturbance, as party feeling seemed to run rather high.

5480. In what districts was that so?—There seemed seemed to be a general feeling all over the borough, but more especially in some districts.

5481. Were those districts where the Irish voters resided?—There was a great deal of it there.

5482. Mr. Baron Martin.] You thought it was necessary for the peace of the town to have a larger force?—Yes, to prevent a breach of the peace.

5483. Mr. Price.] Was it necessary that there should be an additional force?—I did think that that was necessary.

5484. There were riots in several parts of the town, I believe?—Yes; there were several disturbances amongst the Irishmen; breaking one another's committee-rooms.

5485. I believe that you were insulted, were you not?—Yes; I was knocked down.

5486. And was one of the special constables nearly killed?—One was in danger for some time.

5487. What district was that in?—In Sils-bridge-lane.

5488. That was at the largest ward?—Yes.

5489. Is that where the public-houses are within ten or a dozen yards from each other?—There are many of them in that district; beer-houses as well.

5490. During the months of October and November, and at the election, was there a greater amount of drunkenness in this town, so far as the returns are made out, than there was in the previous months?—I was asked for that return yesterday, and my clerk made it out, and I can vouch for it myself. I have been engaged here.

5491. What was your own experience in going through the town; was it what you might have expected at the time of an election, in the months of September, October, and November, as compared with what it was in the previous year?—If you like to take my evidence from the return, I have seen it. I have not made it out, but my clerk did. For the months of October and November you will find that there is a difference of about ten in November 1868. The number brought before the magistrates by summonses and warrants were 23 in that month.

The following Comparative Return of "Drunk and Disorderly Cases" was handed in:—

"1867. October, 24—November, 12.

1868. October, 20—November, 23."

Mr. Price was heard to open the case on behalf of the Petitioners.

THOMAS POOLE, sworn; Examined by Mr. Waddy.

5492. Do you live at 79, Hall-lane, Bowling?
—Yes.

5493. Were you formerly a policeman in the Bradford Police Force?—I was.

5494. Have you an uncle of the name of George Poole?—Yes.

5495. Was he a candidate for the last municipal election?—He was.

5496. Your uncle, I believe, was a supporter of Mr. Ripley?—He was.

5497. Did you take a part, both in the municipal election and in the Parliamentary election afterwards?—I did.

5498. You were a partisan of Mr. Ripley, I believe?—Yes.

5499. On the polling day, were you stationed as a clerk at No. 1 Booth for the West Ward, on the part of Mr. Ripley?—I was, as a detective, to detect personation at No. 1 Poll Booth of the West Ward.

5500. Before that, between the latter end of October and the polling day, which, I believe, was on the 17th of November, between those days did you visit several beerhouses in the West Ward where committees were held?—I did.

5501. We will begin with the “Labourers’ Arms”; is that a public-house kept by Michael Brannan?—It is a beerhouse.

5502. Was it a Forster and Miall house?—It was, up to the week previous to the election.

5503. Were there Forster and Miall’s bills in the window, and a committee sitting upstairs?—Yes.

5504. Did you go, towards the latter end of October, into that room?—I did, both upstairs and down.

5505. What did you see going into that room?—I seed different parties, voters and non-voters and all, going in.

5506. I do not know whether you can fix the day exactly?—I cannot fix the day exactly; it was in the last week of October.

5507. You say that voters and non-voters were going in; was there any check upon the persons that went in and out?—There was no check kept upon the persons that went in and out.

5508. Did you see any beer at all going into the room?—I did.

28.

5509. Just tell my Lord what you saw in that way?—I saw two half-gallons of beer in the room.

5510. In pitchers, or what?—In pitchers, and two man held each a half-gallon, totting it round to the company in the room.

5511. Pouring it into tot glasses?—Yes; they calls it buttling.

5512. Did you see the landlord there?—I did.

5513. Was that all the beer that you saw, the two half-gallon jugs?—No; I called for a glass of beer myself; I went to question him about some business, and he brought me a glass of beer, and I offered him the price of the beer, but he said, “Oh, no, it is all paid for.”

5514. Who said that?—Michael Brannan, the landlord of the “Labourers’ Arms.”

5515. Did you see any more beer brought in at that time except the two half-gallons you have told us of?—Yes, I did; several half-gallons were brought in.

5516. Did the company round the room pay for their beer when they got it?—No, they did not.

5517. Did you see anybody pay?—I seed one man pay.

5518. Did you see anybody pay but that one man?—No.

5519. Did you know him; had you ever seen him before?—I had not seen that person before; and then the next person I seed pay was a man of the name of Dracup, a clogger in Silsbridge-lane.

5520. Do you know whether Dracup took any part at all in the election?—He took a very active part in the election, both the municipal election and the borough election.

5521. On which side was he in the Parliamentary election?—He was upon the Miall and Forster side.

5522. In what way did he take an active part?—By going round and axing people to vote; treating them.

5523. Mr. Baron Martin.] Was this before the municipal election?—This was before the municipal election and after the municipal election.

5524. Mr. Waddy.] The last week in October?—Yes.

R

5525. You

T. Poole.

T. Poole.
29 January
1869.

5525. You said you saw this Dracup pay money; what was it he paid?—He paid 5s.

5526. Did he pay 5s., or did he pay a sovereign and get change, or a half-sovereign, or what?—He paid 5s. the first time, and the second time he paid a sovereign, and they had to send out to get change; they had not change in the house, and a little girl went out and got change, and brought it in, and they says, "Oh, no, never mind; let it all come in."

5527. Did he say that, or somebody else?—A gentleman of them said it; there was two of them said it; both parties said it, "Never mind, let it all come in."

5528. At the time that this gentleman, or both of them, said "Let it all come in," did you hear anything said about Forster and Miall?—Yes; he said, "You will all drink to Forster and Miall, and you will all vote for Forster and Miall."

5529. At this time, while you were having this beer yourself, and whilst this was going on, what was going on in the room; was it a public meeting, or were people simply sitting and drinking?—It was a public meeting.

5530. Were there books and papers on the table?—There was.

5531. Did you happen to observe who was sitting at the head of the table?—Yes.

5532. Who was it; do you know?—Dracup.

5533. Did anybody make a speech that night?—Not while I was in; I went out just as the speech was commencing.

5534. How do you know that the speech was just commencing; did you see anybody get up to speak?—They got on to their feet before I left the room.

5535. Who did?—A gentleman; I do not know who it was.

5536. Did you hear anything that was said?—He commenced, in opening the speech, by drinking the health of Forster and Miall, and hoped that they would all vote for Forster and Miall.

5537. Did that gentleman take his hat off, or do anything?—He took his hat off and waved it, and gave three cheers for Forster and Miall.

5538. Do you remember anything being said about showing hands?—He says, when he took his hat off, after the three cheers, he hoped they would all be there on the nomination day, and he said, "Hold both hands up when you get there, it will make it look like four;" this was the gentleman that I have not the pleasure of knowing his name.

5539. Where was this?—It was in the "Labourers' Arms."

5540. About how many people were there present at this time?—Between 30 and 40 people.

5541. As far as you could see, was the drinking confined to one or two, or was it general in the room?—It was general in the room, going round the room.

5542. Did you go after that, the same night, to the "Three Horseshoes"?—I did.

5543. In White Abbey-road?—I did.

5544. Was that in the last week in October?—Yes.

5545. What ward is that in?—That is in the West Ward.

5546. The same ward as the other you have been talking of?—Yes, the same ward as the other.

5547. Was that a Forster and Miall house, or a Ripley house?—A Forster and Miall house.

5548. Just tell us exactly what you saw there when you got there?—I seed beer going round there also; there was two gentlemen there that I did not know, and there was another gentleman there that I did.

5549. Did you see, in the "Three Horseshoes," either of the gentlemen that you had seen before at the other place that you told us of?—I did.

5550. Who was it?—He is a dark looking man; I do not know his name.

5551. Not Dracup?—No, it is not Dracup.

5552. While you were at this second place, did you see many persons, or only one or two persons drinking?—Many persons; upwards of 20 persons.

5553. How many of them were drinking?—They was all drinking.

5554. Can you tell me whether the "Three Horseshoes" has changed its name at all?—I believe it has changed its name to the "Shamrock" now.

5555. The "Rose and Shamrock," is it not?—It might be; I heard it had changed its name, but I have not been there since that time.

5556. When you were at this "Three Horseshoes" or "Shamrock," whichever you call it, was there any speechifying going on there?—There was a committee sitting there, and they expected a meeting being held there that night; they were saying, when I was in the place, that they expected a meeting being held there, and Lockwood Stephenson, the butcher, came into the room while I was there.

5557. Do you know whether Lockwood Stephenson took any part at all in the election for Miall and Forster?—He took an active part in both elections.

5558. Both the municipal and the other?—Yes, both the municipal and the borough.

5559. Did you see anybody pay for the liquor at the "Three Horseshoes"?—No, I did not.

5560. I do not know whether you got your glassfull there as well?—I got a glass there.

5561. Did you pay for it?—No, I did not.

5562. Was there any check at the "Three Horseshoes" on people going into or coming out of the room?—No, they could go in and get a glass of beer as they liked; it was there for them to drink.

5563. Were you asked any questions when you went in?—No, I was not.

5564. From that place did you go to the "Gladstone Arms"?—I did; I went to all the beershops round there.

5565. About how much did you see brought into that second place, the "Three Horseshoes"?—There was two half-gallons while I was there, and as I was coming out of the room they were just bringing in another two.

5566. In pitchers, or cans, or how?—In pitchers.

5567. And did you see, when it was brought into the room, who poured it out?—There was two men poured it out; one took hold of one pitcher, and another of another.

5568. And they poured it round to the company in the room?—Yes.

5569. You told us you went into the "Gladstone Arms"; was that a Forster and Miall house?—It was a Forster and Miall house.

5570. That is in Brick-lane, I believe?—Yes, in Brick-lane.

5571. Did you know any of the people that were there drinking, either by sight or by name?—I knew many of them by sight.

5572. At

5572. At both houses?—At all the houses that I visited.

5573. First of all, with regard to those which you have spoken of already, were the people that were drinking there voters or not?—Both voters and non-voters; there was both.

5574. Was there any check upon people going in and out of the “Gladstone Arms”?—No, none in the least.

5575. Was there a Forster and Miall committee there?—There was.

5576. How far was this “Gladstone Arms” from the “Three Horseshoes” which you had just left?—I should say a distance of 200 yards, or perhaps from 200 to 250 yards; I cannot exactly say to 20 yards.

5577. And how far was the “Three Horseshoes” from the first place that you went to?—A quarter of a mile.

5578. When you got into the “Gladstone Arms,” just tell us exactly what you saw going on there?—I seed drinking going on there.

5579. In the committee-room or elsewhere?—In the committee room; and there was drinking going on both upstairs and down in the “Gladstone Arms,” and no one paying for it that I could see.

5580. How much beer did you see in the committee-room at the “Gladstone Arms”?—Two and a half gallons at one end of the room, and half a gallon on the other end of the room.

5581. Were there any books or papers on the table?—There was books and papers on the table at the further end of the room.

5582. Did any conversation take place about Forster and Miall while you were present?—They was talking very strongly about Forster and Miall, and wishing all would vote for Forster and Miall and seek voters up. The municipal election was very little talked about.

5583. Did you see whether there were any placards up on the walls or any spread on the table?—There was placards both on the walls, in the windows, and outside the door on a board.

5584. Placards for the municipal election, or for the Parliamentary election, or both?—For the Parliamentary election.

5585. Forster and Miall’s?—Forster and Miall’s committee-room.

5586. In this place which you have told us of, will you tell us of your own knowledge whether there were voters or non-voters, or both?—There was both.

5587. And did you see both of those classes, both voters and non-voters drinking?—I did.

5588. And did you see anybody in the “Gladstone Arms” who had liquor at all?—No, it was beer.

5589. About how long were you in the “Gladstone Arms”?—From 10 minutes to a quarter of an hour.

5590. And about how long had you been in the other places, each of them?—About the same time; I did not stay long in a house.

5591. Did you have anything to drink in the “Gladstone Arms” yourself?—I did.

5592. Did you pay for anything there?—I was offering to pay, but they would not take the pay.

5593. Who did you offer it to?—I offered it to the landlord.

5594. What was his name?—I believe they call him Robinson; I believe Robinson is his name.

5595. Where did you offer it; in the room downstairs?—In the room where I was.

5596. Did you see any of the persons, who were in the room at either of those places that you have told us of, go away while you were there?—I did.

5597. Are you in a position to say whether those who went away paid or went away without paying?—I am not in a position to say that.

5598. You did not see them pay, at all events?—No.

5599. I should have asked you this; in addition to the beer that was used, was there anything besides beer being consumed?—At the “Gladstone Arms” there was cheese and bread, and there was beefsteaks on the table for anyone to help themselves to.

5600. The night following that, did you go to any of those houses?—I did.

5601. To which?—I went to three or four of them; I went to the “Gladstone Arms” for one, the “Labourers’ Arms” for another, and the “Three Horseshoes” I went to the other.

5602. That is the same three you have told us already?—The same three that I have told you of before.

5603. Did you go the same night you have been telling us of to any other besides those three?—I went to several houses that night, and I was passing through the houses till 11 o’clock.

5604. Going regularly round till 11?—Yes, going regularly round till 11.

5605. Just tell me the next house you went to?—I went to the “Wild Boar,” in Brick-lane, the next house.

5606. Did you go to any other Forster and Miall houses that night?—I went to the “Cross Keys,” and the bottom of Clayton-street, Thornton-road.

5607. When you got to the “Cross Keys,” was there a committee-room of Forster and Miall’s there?—There was beer going off.

5608. Was a committee room of Forster and Miall’s there?—A committee-room of Forster and Miall’s was held there.

5609. And bills in the window?—Yes, bills in the window, and outside the door as well.

5610. Was there beer going on or going off in the committee-room?—Half a gallon of beer was going round the room to the company.

5611. Did you get any of it?—I got a tot of beer out of it.

5612. Did you offer to pay for it?—No, I did not.

5613. Were you asked to pay for it?—I was not.

5614. Do you know who did pay for it?—No, I do not know who did pay for it.

5615. Was there any check upon people going into the room or out of it?—There was not.

5616. Did you see both voters and non-voters in the room?—I did.

5617. Did you go round on other nights in the same way?—I did.

5618. I will not take you through every night, but did you ever go, after the municipal election and before the Parliamentary election, to any of those houses?—I did.

5619. Just tell us any one night, after the municipal election mind, and before the Parliamentary, when you went round to pay any of those those houses?—The 6th day of November, I went round again.

5620. On that occasion what was the first house that you went to?—To Michael Brannan's, in Longcroft-place, the "Labourers' Arms."

5621. What time in the evening was it about, when you went there?—About a quarter past eight it would be when I got there.

5622. How long did you stay there?—I stayed from a quarter of an hour to 20 minutes there that night.

5623. Did you on that occasion see any refreshments in the room?—I did.

5624. Refreshments of what kind?—Cheese, and bread and beer.

5625. How many people were present?—Between 30 and 40 people; the room was full upstairs; it was a large room.

5626. Just tell us what was going on; was anything said about the election that night?—Yes, there was; they were proposing some men to go round to visit the Irish people in Vincent-street, Longcroft-place, Grenaire-place, Silsbridge-lane, to press upon them to vote for Forster and Miall.

5627. Can you tell us who was in the chair that night?—Dracup, the clogger.

5628. Is this near Silsbridge-lane?—Yes; it is a street leading off Silsbridge-lane.

5629. There are a good many Irish people there, I believe?—A good many round about that neighbourhood.

5630. When you were there that night, when they were proposing to those people as you say, was there any beer going on then?—There was.

5631. How much did you see brought into the room that night?—Several half-gallons there was brought in.

5632. At that time did you see whether the beer was ordered by the people who were in the room separately, or whether it came in apparently without being ordered?—It was ordered by a man whom I do not know his name; I know the gentleman myself; I had only seen him once or twice before that in the same houses, and he paid a sovereign for the beer, and he would not take back the change. He said, "Oh, no, never mind," he says, "Let it all come in;" he said, "They will vote for Forster and Miall; they are all Forster and Miall's friends."

5633. I think you said that you had seen him once before that?—Yes, I saw him once before that.

5634. Where was it that you saw him before?—I saw him at the same house before that.

5635. That night did you see anybody else pay but this one gentleman?—I did not; no one else.

5636. Have you ever seen that gentleman since?—I have seen him once or twice since.

5637. In whose company have you seen him?—I have seen him in Mr. Kell's company.

5638. Which Mr. Kell?—Alderman Kell, the magistrate.

5639. Mr. Robert Kell, is it not?—Yes, Mr. Robert Kell.

5640. What was Mr. Kell with regard to Forster's and Miall's matter, do you know?—He took a very active part in it; escorted Forster and Miall up and down, and went to meetings with them.

5641. Do you remember what Mr. Kell did at the hustings?—No, I was not up at the hustings.

5642. On that occasion did you get some of the beer yourself?—I got some.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] Mr. Alderman Kell was our vice-chairman. My learned friend need not trouble himself about him; he was a most important supporter.

5643. Mr. Waddy.] On that occasion did you get any of the beer?—I did.

5644. Did you pay for it yourself?—I did not.

5645. Were you asked to do so?—I was not.

5646. Do you know whether the men in the room at that time were both voters and non-voters?—There was both. Several voters whom I seed come and vote at the polling day.

5647. You told us, I believe, that you were inspecting clerk on the polling day, and you saw come to the poll some of those people whom you had seen in that committee-room?—Yes, I did; they came to the booth where I was checking of them, and to other booths also.

5648. Also people whom you had seen drinking?—Yes.

5649. Do you remember the Saturday week before the election; you had a communication, I believe, from Michael Brannan; you must not tell us what he said?—I had.

5650. Before that had you seen a Mr. Mahoney ever there?—I had.

5651. Where?—In several houses I had seen him.

5652. In that neighbourhood?—In that neighbourhood, and other neighbourhoods, too.

5653. Mr. Michael Mahoney?—Michael Mahoney.

5654. He is a woolstapler in Bradford, I believe?—I believe he is.

5655. Do you know whether he took an active part in the election on behalf of Forster and Miall?—He did, as far as I am aware; as far as my knowledge.

5656. Had you ever seen him in those public houses which you have spoken of?—Yes, I have.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] Mr. Michael Mahoney seconded Mr. Forster, and he was no doubt a very important and influential person in connection with Mr. Forster's cause.

5657. Mr. Waddy.] Had you ever seen Mr. Michael Mahoney paying for beer?—I had seen him pay for beer, and I had seen him order beer; at least I have heard him order beer.

5658. Had you ever seen that since the municipal election?—Yes, I had.

5659. Tell us the first time?—The first was in November.

5660. After the municipal election?—Yes, after the municipal election. The municipal election was on the 2nd day of November, on the Monday, and this was after the Monday.

5661. Where?—At Michael Brannan's.

5662. At the same place that you have told us of before?—Yes, the same place I have told you of before.

5663. About what time of the night would that be?—Between eight and nine o'clock.

5664. Do you remember how much he paid?—I cannot exactly say now what it was he paid, but it was gold that he paid, and he would not take the change back.

5665. At

5665. At the time, was anything said as to what this gold was being paid for?—To drink the health of Forster and Miall; and he wished them at the nomination day to get down to the field.

5666. With the beer that was paid for?—Yes, with the beer that was paid for.

5667. Have you ever, at any other time, seen Mr. Mahoney paying for liquor at those public-houses?—No.

5668. Only on that one occasion?—Only on that one occasion.

5669. Do you know the "Robin Hood"?—There is two "Robin Hoods."

5670. The "Robin Hood" beerhouse in the Silsbridge-lane?—Yes.

5671. Who is the landlord of it?—I forget the man's name, but he is set yonder in the gallery I see.

5672. Is it Robert Hanley?—Yes.

5673. Were you ever in that house before the Parliamentary election, and after the municipal election?—I was in one night, and I was in before the municipal election.

5674. At the time you were in there before the municipal election, were there any of Forster and Miall's bills up?—Yes, there was.

5675. In the room?—Yes, there was.

5676. And on the table?—Yes, there was.

5677. Did you hear anything said about Forster and Miall then?—They was praising Forster and Miall, and wishing them all to go and vote for Forster and Miall.

5678. At the time you were there?—Yes, at the time I was there; and the landlord said himself that if his vote would save Ripley, he would not give it.

5679. At that time did you see there any gentleman whom you have mentioned to-day?—Yes.

5680. Who?—I have seen Dracup, the clogger, there; Robert Hird, a shopkeeper in Silsbridge-lane.

5681. Was Robert Hird a Forster and Miall man?—He was.

5682. What was Dracup doing when you were there?—They was looking over those books and papers.

5683. And writing?—Yes.

5684. Did you happen to observe whether they had got the Parliamentary Register?—Yes, they had got the Parliamentary Register.

5685. Were they referring to it?—Yes, they was referring to it.

5686. This was just before the municipal election, as I understand you?—Yes, it was.

5687. At the time they were doing this, how many people were present?—I cannot exactly say; the room was crowded; I should say it would hold from 20 to 30 people.

5688. At that time did you know any of the people there; whether they were voters or not?—Yes, I knew many of them.

5689. Did you see whether any liquor was brought in there that night?—There was drink brought in; it was only a beerhouse.

5690. You saw beer brought in?—Yes.

5691. Did you see whether it was given to the company all round, or whether it belonged to certain persons?—It was given to the company all round; there was nobody barred from it.

5692. Did you have some?—No, I did not.

5693. Did you see anybody pay for it?—I did not.

5694. Did you see Mr. Drucup pay for any that night?—I had seen Mr. Dracup pay at several times.

5695. That night did you?—I did that night.

5696. How much did you see him pay, as far as you remember?—I cannot exactly say how much it was, but it was silver; I believe it was 5 s.

5697. I believe that Mr. Dracup said something about your being a Ripleyite, did he not?—He did.

5698. Then there was a disturbance?—Yes, then there was a disturbance, and I had to get out of the room.

5699. You bolted?—Yes, I did; and glad to get away from such a lot as there was there.

5700. This was before the municipal election; did you ever go to the same place, the "Robin Hood," after the municipal election, and before the Parliamentary election?—I looked in one night, but I did not stay.

5701. Is there a beerhouse somewhere there called the "Shamrock"?—Yes, there is.

5702. That is not the same as the one you have already spoken of, "The Three Horse Shoes"?—No.

5703. That is in the same ward?—Yes, in the same ward, the West Ward; it is in Silsbridge-lane.

5704. How far from the nearest of the public-houses that you have told us of already?—From 20 to 30 yards.

5705. Which is the nearest to it?—The "Robin Hood" is nearest to it; the "Robin Hood" is one side the road, and the "Shamrock" is the other; the street, I suppose, is only about 10 yards wide.

5706. Are they just opposite each other?—The same as this; one is there, and the other is here (describing the same).

5707. Were both of them Forster and Miall houses?—Yes, both of them; but the "Shamrock" turned over to Mr. Ripley the week previous to the election.

5708. At the time that you went to the "Shamrock," was it a Forster and Miall house?—It was.

5709. At the same time that it was a Forster and Miall house, was the other one that you have told us about, the "Robin Hood," also a Forster and Miall house?—It was.

5710. Was there any other Forster and Miall house near there in Silsbridge-lane?—There was.

5711. How many Forster and Miall houses were there in the Silsbridge-lane?—There were seven in Silsbridge-lane, one in Pool-alley, two in Longcross-place, and two in Vincent-street.

5712. What is the outside of all that circle?—I should say the most would be 400 yards from one to the other; that is, taking the farthest house and the nearest, from one house to the first house in Vincent-street, it would not be more than two yards.

5713. They are all within 400 yards?—Yes, they are all within 400 yards.

5714. Do you mean to say that all those seven houses were on at one time, or were they sometimes one on and sometimes another for Forster and Miall?—They was all Forster and Miall houses when I went round, except Michael Brannan's and Michael May's; that is the "Shamrock" and the "Labourers' Arms;" they turned over the week previous to the election.

5715. Before that time, whilst the "Shamrock" and the other, Michael Brannan's and Michael May's were Forster and Miall houses, were all the others Forster and Miall houses too at that time?—They was.

5716. It is the great centre for the Irish people, all about there, I believe?—Yes, it is the most notified place for them. The greatest part of them lives in that neighbourhood.

5717. Do you know who was Forster and Miall's chairman for that ward?—I do not, I am sure.

5718. Do you remember going to this "Shamrock" on the 6th of November?—I do.

5719. Did you see at the "Shamrock" any person whom you have mentioned to-day?—I did.

5720. Who was it?—I see'd Dracup there and Robert Hird; I seed both of them there.

5721. And what was Dracup doing when you got in?—He was speaking, making a speech to the people that was inside; there were both voters and non-voters in; the biggest part of them was voters that was in that night.

5722. While he was making his speech, did you see whether there was another man employed there in a different way?—There was.

5723. What was he doing?—He was employed; he went round with beer to the company that was in with a half-gallon jug in his hand.

5724. And did you see whether it was poured out to all the company indiscriminately?—It was poured round to the whole company; in fact I got a glass of it myself.

5725. Did you see whether anybody that night paid for beer?—Dracup paid.

5726. Did anybody else pay besides Dracup?—I did not see anyone else.

5727. Did you pay?—I did not.

5728. Did you see about how much Dracup paid?—I did not.

5729. Was there a man there of the name of Duffey?—There was.

5730. He was a glazier, I believe?—Yes.

5731. Do you know whether he was a Forster and Miall man or a Ripley man?—He was a Forster and Miall man.

5732. How do you know that?—By talking to him.

5733. Have you seen him at meetings?—I have.

5734. Did you also see a man called Noonan there, an oyster hawker?—Yes.

5735. Was he a Forster and Miall man?—He was.

5736. Did you see any gentleman there talking to Dracup whom you had seen at the "Labourers' Arms"?—Yes.

5737. Was that the person whom you have already mentioned to us before?—It is.

5738. Whose name you do not know?—Yes, it is.

5739. But whom you have seen with Mr. Kell?—I have.

5740. Did you see Mr. Dracup and this gentleman going about from his house?—They were going about from house to house in the West Ward.

5741. When you say from "house to house," do you mean private houses or public-houses?—From public-house to public-house belonging to Forster and Miall.

5742. From committee-room to committee-room?—Yes.

5743. Did you ever see Mr. Michael Mahoney at that house?—No, not that I am aware.

5744. Is there a place there called the "Plasterers' Arms"?—Yes.

5745. Is that another of the seven that you have mentioned?—It is another of the seven that I have mentioned.

5746. Do you remember going there before the municipal election?—I do.

5747. Was there a committee going on there at that time?—Yes, there was.

5748. For Forster and Miall?—Yes.

5749. Did you see Dracup there?—I did.

5750. When he was there, about how many persons should you think were present in the committee-room?—There would be upwards of 30 persons.

5751. Were they voters and non-voters?—They was; but more of them voters nor non-voters.

5752. Did you see any beer consumed there?—I did.

5753. And any other refreshments besides the beer?—Yes.

5754. What?—There was cheese and bread, and there was beef and bread.

5755. Who paid for it; did you see anybody pay?—No.

5756. Did you get anything to eat or drink?—I got something to drink; I got a glass of beer.

5757. Did you pay for it?—I did not.

5758. Did you offer to pay for it?—I did.

5759. Was the payment refused?—It was.

5760. To whom did you offer it?—To a woman; I do not know whether she was the landlady or not.

5761. Had she brought the beer in?—Yes.

5762. What did she say at the time?—She said it was paid for. She said, "You need not to pay, sir, there is plenty of beer going round."

5763. On that occasion did you see Dracup give the landlord something?—I did.

5764. And when Dracup gave the landlord something, what did he say at the same time?—He made a remark about my being in the room, and all.

5765. Was anything said at the time he gave the landlord something, about what he was giving him, or what it was for?—He said it was for the beer that came in, and he was to let the remainder come in.

5766. I believe Dracup found you out?—He did.

5767. Then you went away?—I did.

5768. On the week following did you go to the same place, the "Plasterers' Arms," on the Wednesday night?—I did.

5769. Was there a person called Lancaster there?—There was.

5770. What is he?—He is a shopkeeper in the Silsbridge-lane.

5771. Do you know whether he was a Forster and Miall man or a Ripley man?—A Forster and Miall man.

5772. Had you seen him canvassing?—I had seen him going about.

5773. Was Dracup there?—He was.

5774. About how many people were there there on that occasion?—There would be upwards of 30 persons that night.

5775. On that night were there any refreshments in the room?—There was.

5776. Of what kind?—There was beer and cheese and bread in the room.

5777. Mr. Baron Martin.] If I understand you, you, what took place was this: the beer was given round to everyone that was there, but it was paid for by a man in the room?—By one man.

5778. There was not an account kept of it?—No, there was not an account kept of it at that time.

5779. Mr. Waddy.] Was the payment always made by Dracup?—No, it was not always made by Dracup.

5780. Sometimes by Dracup?—Sometimes by Dracup, and by one, and by another; Lancaster has made payments, and Hird has made payments, and this gentleman that I have seen with Mr. Kell; I had seen him pay and all; and I have been into houses where they have kept a memorandum of it, and they have chalked it down.

5781. Where have you seen it, where there has been a memorandum kept of it?—I have seen it at Michael Brannan's; I have seen it at the "Robin Hood," and I have seen it at the "Brown Cow," Silsbridge-lane.

5782. We have not got to the "Brown Cow" yet; but just take Michael Brannan; have you seen beer consumed in the way that you have told us, and an account has been kept?—I have seen half-gallons going round the room, and they have a bit of chalk and they have chalked it down on a door, a cupboard door.

5783. When have you seen it chalked down?—I have seen it both before the municipal election, and since the municipal election; this was the week following the municipal election.

5784. Was it in Forster and Miall's committee-room?—It was.

5785. The same room that you have told us of before?—Yes.

5786. At the time you have seen it chalked down in that way, who drank the beer of which the account was kept in the way you have told us?—The company round drank the beer, both voters and non-voters.

5787. And do you know on any of those occasions, who ordered the beer that was so chalked up?—There was two or three parties ordered the beer; they said "Let the beer come in, they must have something to drink;" Dracup was one; he ordered the beer.

5788. What was going on in the room at the time this was being carried on?—They was talking about Miall and Forster and about the election and the show of hands.

5789. Have you ever seen the same thing take place at any other public-house where it has been chalked down?—Yes, I have.

5790. Just tell us another; has it taken place at any of those which you have mentioned to us already?—No; at the "Brown Cow;" it took place there.

5791. The "Brown Cow" is in the Silsbridge-lane, and it is kept by a man called Pat Haran?—Yes.

5792. Was it a Forster and Miall's committee-room?—Yes, it was.

5793. Had they bills in the window in the way you have described?—Yes.

5794. On what occasion have you ever been there and seen beer drunk and then chalked up?—The week previous to the municipal election on the Monday night, I did.

5795. Have you ever seen it since the municipal election?—I have not.

5796. With regard to this before the municipal election, was this room marked Forster and Miall, or for the municipal election only?—It was marked Forster and Miall; there was bills in the window, Forster and Miall's committee-room.

5797. At the time that the beer was being drunk, what was the subject of conversation?—All the talk was about Forster and Miall.

5798. Did you see at that time whether in that room there was one of the municipal registers?—I did not see one there.

5799. Who did you see in the room at that time?—I cannot recollect the name; there was a deal in the room that I knew; I knew nearly everyone of them, but I did not know them by name.

5800. Did you see Dracup there?—I have seen Dracup there for one, and I have seen Lancaster there.

5801. Did you ever see any other of those gentlemen whom you have mentioned?—I have seen Robert Hird there; and there is many others that I have seen there that I cannot recollect the names of.

5802. What were they doing while they were there, and while the beer was going round?—They was a talking and writing; some of them was writing and some of them was looking over some books, some small canvass books.

5803. Did you hear them talk about how the canvass going on?—I did not.

5804. Did you hear at this time when the beer was chalked up who ordered the beer then?—I believe it was Lancaster that ordered the beer; but I will not be certain.

5805. Do you know who paid for it?—There was no one paid for it, because it was chalked up.

5806. Do you know who drank it?—The company drank it round.

5807. Did you get some?—I did.

5808. Can you say whether there were both voters and non-voters there?—There was.

5809. Do you know a person called Robert Shaw?—I do know him.

5810. There are two, are there not?—Yes; there are two brothers of them.

5811. Luther Robert Shaw and Calvin Robert Shaw?—Yes.

5812. Did you ever see Luther Robert Shaw or Calvin Robert Shaw at any of those houses?—Yes, I have seen them; but I cannot exactly swear which of them it was, because they are so much alike you can scarcely tell one from the other.

5813. I believe they are twins, and they are very much like each other?—They are.

5814. However, you have seen one of those gentlemen, but you cannot swear which it was?—I cannot.

5815. On more occasions than one?—Yes, I have.

5816. At which of the public-houses?—Different public-houses, both in the Silsbridge-lane and other places besides; White Abbey for instance.

5817. Did those two gentlemen take any part in the election of Forster and Miall?—They took a part so far as this, of treating.

5818. Did you see them on the hustings?—They were Forster and Miall's party and took an active part.

5819. Tell me what it is you have seen them doing in public-houses with regard to any beer?—I have seen them paying for beer.

5820. When?—Before the municipal election and the week after the municipal election; at least the week during the municipal election; the first week in November.

5821. Do you know a person called Lockwood Stephenson?—I do.

5822. What is Mr. Lockwood Stephenson?—He is a butcher.

5823. Did he take any part in the election?—He did.

5824. Which side was he?—He was for Forster and Miall.

5825. Was he an active man?—He was.

5826. Do you know a person called Alfred Illingworth?—Yes.

5827. Is he Member for Knaresborough?—He is Member for Knaresborough now.

5828. Was he a strong partizan of Messrs. Forster and Miall?—He was, and at the municipal election also.

5829. Have you ever seen Lockwood Stephenson at any of those houses?—I have.

5830. While the drinking has been going on, or not?—Yes.

5831. Have you ever seen him pay?—I have heard Lockwood Stephenson order beer.

5832. What has become of the beer when it has come in?—It has been drunk in the company.

5833. In the committee-rooms?—In the committee-rooms; he says, "Let them have plenty of beer; let them go on with beer."

5834. Who were the company that were to have the beer?—They were both voters and non-voters in the committee-room, the committee and all; they was all there; the room was full.

5835. Have you ever seen Mr. Alfred Illingworth at the "Gladstone Arms"?—I have seen him there.

5836. Was there a committee going on at the time?—There was.

5837. Did you ever hear him give the landlord any orders?—Not that I am aware of.

5838. Did you ever hear him say anything to the landlord?—I heard him say to the landlord, "Let them have some beer," just as he was going out of the room.

5839. I believe that you did not see him pay for anything?—I did not.

5840. When about would that be, before or after the municipal election?—It was before the borough election.

5841. But was it before or after the municipal election?—It was the week during the municipal election; the first week in November.

5842. Was it after the day of the municipal election?—Yes, after the day of the municipal election and before the Parliamentary election; the municipal election was on the 2nd, on the Monday.

5843. When you were going into the room Mr. Alfred Illingworth was coming out, was he?—I was going in the door and I stood on one side when he came out of the door.

5844. After he had said this to the landlord, did you go into the room?—I did.

5845. And was some beer brought in?—There was beer brought in.

5846. Did you get your share of it?—I got a glass of it.

5847. Did you pay anything?—I did not.

5848. You were never asked for anything?—No.

5849. Was there any other refreshment going on besides this beer?—There was cheese and bread, and steaks brought in; I got some steak myself.

5850. Where was this?—At the "Gladstone Arms," Brick-lane; it was in the first week in November.

5851. Was it the same night that Mr. Illingworth was there?—The same night.

5852. You got some of the steaks?—I did.

5853. In addition to the public-houses that you have told us of, there is the "Britannia" beer-house; did you go to the "Britannia" beerhouse in the same way?—I was only once in the "Britannia."

5854. Was it a Forster and Miall committee-room?—It was.

5855. Did you see any ale brought in there?—I did.

5856. About how many persons were present then that were voters to your knowledge?—Near upon 20 persons, I should say.

5857. Was anything given to the voters besides the ale?—There was bread and cheese.

5858. About when was this?—It was before the municipal election.

5859. But at the time you are speaking of, when you were at the "Britannia," were Foster and Miall's bills up in the upper window?—They was.

5860. What were the people talking about there when you were there principally?—They was talking about the borough election.

5861. By that, do you mean the municipal election or the Parliamentary election?—The Parliamentary election.

5862. There is the "Cross Keys" beerhouse; is that in Thornton-road?—Yes.

5863. Is that one of the seven that you mentioned just now?—No, it is another neighbourhood altogether.

5864. Was that a committee-room for Forster and Miall?—It was.

5865. Have you been there?—I have.

5866. Before or after the municipal election?—Before the municipal election.

5867. And since?—And since also.

5868. Have you seen any refreshments consumed there?—I have seen beer brought in; that is all I have seen there.

5869. Who ordered the beer?—I do not know who ordered the beer; I cannot swear that.

5870. Who got it?—The company in the room got it. I did not see anyone pay for it.

5871. Did you get some?—I did.

5872. Did you pay?—I did not.

5873. Did you know the company present who they were, whether they were voters or not, any of them?—I knowed them, both voters and non-voters.

5874. In any of those houses that you have told us of, was there ever any check kept at the door?—No.

5875. Were you ever asked if you were a canvasser, or anything of that kind?—I never was.

5876. Then there is the "Black Horse"?—Yes.

5877. The "Black Horse," Poole-alley?—Yes, there was.

5878. Is that in the Silsbridge neighbourhood?—It is in the Silsbridge neighbourhood.

5879. Is that one of the seven names that you counted up just now?—It is one of the seven.

5880. Was

5880. Was that also a Forster and Miall house?—It was.

5881. Did you go in there?—I went in there.

5882. Have you been in there since the municipal election and before the Parliamentary election?—I have.

5883. And did you see any ale brought in there?—I did.

5884. Was it poured out to the company?—It was.

5885. Who appeared to be managing there that night?—It appeared to be under the management of Dracup.

5887. Tell us how you know that; what was paid?—I heard a voice say to the landlady, he says, "Let some beer come in, and," he says, "you will be paid for it after."

5888. Did you hear anything said about going down to the bill?—Yes.

5889. What was said about that?—It was to be put down to the bill, and it would all be paid for together.

5890. Who said that?—Dracup.

5891. Whom did he say this to?—He said it to the landlady.

Cross-examined by Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.

5892. What did you say you were?—A Labourer, by trade.

5893. There are so many kinds of labour; we know what you have been labouring at here, but what kind of labourer are you?—I am not particular to any situation.

5894. What do you do, do you know what you do?—Yes.

5895. What?—I work for Mr. Dobson, the auctioneer, at the present time.

5896. What as?—We have different kinds of business.

5897. Let us know what it is?—We have loan warrants to execute for one kind of thing.

5898. Do you mean by that that you are a sheriff's officer, or what?—Yes.

5899. That is what you you call being a labourer. I only want to know; you were a police officer, I believe?—I was a police officer.

5900. But now you are promoted into the higher position of a sheriff's officer?—Yes, if you call it a higher position.

5901. There is no harm in it, it is a highly honourable and nice employment. Just tell me this, when did you leave the police?—Twelve months last October.

5902. How came you to go?—I was dismissed from the police force.

5903. What for?—For getting beer.

5904. You mean getting drunk?—Yes, for getting drunk.

5905. Never mind, we do not mind plain English here. Just tell me who employed you about this work; I mean the work of spying about which was going on?—I had not been spying about.

5906. Yes, you were?—No, I had not; at the time I was going about, I was going about business, not spying about at all.

5907. Do you mean that you had business at all those public houses?—I had.

5908. What was the business?—Business for the municipal election.

5909. But this was after the municipal elections were over, you know?—Both before the municipal election and after the municipal election.

5910. It was about that business that you went to the publichouses?—It was about a relation's business that I went to the publichouses.

5911. We will come to the relation by and by; it was about the municipal election business was it?—It was.

5912. It was that that took you to the different publichouses before and after the municipal election?—It was.

5913. Your uncle was a candidate, was he not?—He was.

5914. He had been a counsellor?—Yes, he had.

5915. It was a very hard fight, and he was turned out?—It was a hard fight.

5916. And there was a good deal of beer going?—A good deal.

5917. On both sides?—No, I cannot say there was so much beer going upon his side, there was a little going upon his side, certainly; there was not the hundreds of pounds spent on his side that there was upon the other.

5918. You know, as an affectionate nephew, you are not the man to take away your uncle's character, and say he did not spend anything in beer?—There was not one-third as much spent upon beer upon his side that there was upon the other.

5919. He was turned out?—Yes, he was turned out through treating. No doubt, if he had gone on treating, ordering beer, and cheese, and bread, and sandwiches up and down, he would have got into the council.

5920. You mean that he did not pay enough?—He did not pay enough.

5921. Perhaps your relationship made you have something to do with it?—No.

5922. You do not think it had; were you paid for those operations?—I was paid from him.

5923. By him?—Yes.

5924. How much?—That is my business, that has nothing to do with you.

5925. It will be our business in a few minutes. How much?—

Mr. Baron Martin.] You may answer it or not, as you like.

5926. Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] Please yourself, if you like?—It is a family affair.

5927. I suppose it is by your uncle's desire that we have the pleasure of seeing you here?—No, it is not by his desire.

5928. Has he said nothing to you about it?—He has not.

5929. Do you mean to swear that?—Yes.

5930. Had you no conversation with him about it?—Not about coming here.

5931. Have you spoken to him about it?—I spoke to him yesterday.

5932. Have you ever spoken to him about your being a witness?—I have not. I do not think he knew of it, nor have I seed him this week.

5933. You think it will surprise him to see that you have been examined here?—No, he did not know I was here; I do not go to see him every day, and he does not come to see me.

S

5934. You

T. Peole.

29 January
1869.

T. Poole.
29 January
1869.

5934. You say you had seen Mr. Mahony pay for and order beer; now give me the time, and be cautious?—It was the week before the municipal election, and the week after the municipal election.

5935. Where?—In Silsbridge-lane.

5936. At what house?—At the "Labourer's Arms."

5937. How came you there?—I went there on business.

5938. What business?—On business about the municipal election.

5939. That was over you know?—Yes, we know it was over, but I can tell you what I went there for, I went there to tell him to bring in his bill.

5940. He was one of those that had gone round?—No, he was not one of those that had gone round; he was one where we had a committee-room at.

5941. And there was a bill there?—There was a bill there, a small bill.

5942. For treating?—For beer, and his committee-room.

5943. For treating?—Yes, for treating; this was the municipal election; nothing to do with the borough and Parliamentary election; I went to order him to bring in his bill.

5944. What time in the evening or day was it?—It was in the evening, I cannot exactly tell the time now.

5945. Just tell us exactly, what took place?—They was up stairs, and I went upstairs along with the landlord.

5946. And he knew who you were?—He knew who I was; I know people enough in that neighbourhood; I know the biggest part of them, and I know them to my sorrow in that neighbourhood, I can promise you.

5947. But you do know them?—Yes.

5948. And they know you?—Yes.

5949. They knew that you were the newpew of the disappointed candidate?—Yes, they do.

5950. And they knew I suppose, also that you were not a Miall man?—Some of them did, and some of them did not.

5951. I should think, Mr. Mahony knew it?—I do not suppose he did; I do not think the gentleman knows me.

5952. Do you think he saw you?—I do not think he did, he might have seen me.

5953. Are you quite sure you saw him?—Yes.

5954. Mr. Baron Martin.] Have you a deputation from the sheriff, or are you on honour?—On honour.

5955. Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] What did he say about beer on that occasion?—He told them to bring some beer; he said, "Bring some beer," and then, "Let them have some beer in."

5956. Where was he standing or sitting?—He was standing at that time in the room.

5957. What was the time, when you say you saw Mr. Illingworth there?—It was in November.

5958. What time in November?—The first week in November.

5959. Can you give me the day?—I cannot give you the day; I do not recollect the day.

5960. What was the public-house?—The "Gladstone Arms," Brick-lane.

5961. What was the time?—It was in the evening.

5962. What were you doing there?—I was going down to Bullock's in Brick-lane, the "Wild Boar."

5963. But what were you doing in the "Gladstone Arms"?—I thought, I would have a look in and see how business was going on amongst them, that is all.

5964. No other motive than that?—No other motive than that, not in the least.

5965. There it was you saw Mr. Illingworth?—Yes.

5966. Just tell me exactly what Mr. Illingworth said?—He told the landlord to let some beer come in.

5967. You are quite sure about that?—Quite sure.

5968. There is no mistake about it at all?—There cannot be any mistake about it.

Re-examined by Mr. Price.

5969. Who was the candidate against your uncle?—Holden and Lund, Angus Holden, and Joseph Lund.

5970. Angus Holden is a Forster and Miall man?—He is.

5971. He was a petitioner in the last case against Mr. Ripley?—He was.

5972. And he is the richish chap, is he not?—I suppose he is.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] I understood from your Lordship, that you intended the causes to be tried as Nisi Prius causes; I shall object.

Mr. Baron Martin.] It seems to me that this arises out of your cross-examination. It may be that this beer drinking, was municipal beer drinking, and not borough beer drinking; but I must hear the evidence.

5973. Mr. Price (to the Witness).] Did Angus Holden, spend a lot of money?—He did.

5974. How much, do you know at all?—I do not know how much; I have heard that it has cost him, between 700 l. and 800 l.

5975. Between 700 l. and 800 l., to be a town councillor?—Yes.

5976. Mr. Mahony was at this place; is Mr. Mahony a Burgess of that ward?—I do not know, I am sure.

5977. Is Mr. Illingworth, a person who votes for that ward?—I believe Mr. Illingworth, will vote for either Little, Horton Ward, or Man-ningham Ward.

5978. Not for this ward?—No, not that I am aware of.

5979. As far as you can judge, he was not there on municipal business?—Not as far as I am aware.

5980. He is a richish man?—Yes.

5981. And member for Knaresborough?—Yes, is a member for Knaresborough.

5982. Is he brother-in-law to Mr. Angus Holden?—He is.

The Witness withdrew.]

Mrs. ELIZABETH HILL, sworn; examined by Mr. Waddy.

5983. I BELIEVE you are the wife of John Hill, of the "Rose and Shamrock," White Abbey?—Yes.

5984. That used to be till lately called, the "Three Horse Shoes," I believe?—Yes.

5985. Before the Parliamentary Election was your house engaged for Forster and Miall?—Yes.

5986. Did it continue to be a Forster and Miall house up to the end?—Yes.

5987. I believe you have sent in a bill?—Yes.

5987.* Who engaged your rooms for Forster and Miall?—Mr. Stephenson.

5988. Is that Mr. Lockwood Stephenson, the butcher?—Yes.

5989. Was your room engaged for the municipal election, as well as for the Parliamentary?—Yes.

5990. When were you first told that the room was wanted for the Parliamentary election?—I am sure I cannot say.

5991. As nearly as you tell us, how soon as far as you can remember, about when were Forster and Miall's bills put up?—I think it would be in October.

5992. Do you remember Mr. Stephenson, giving you any orders about beer?—He said on Friday, before the Parliamentary election; my husband told him, that people kept coming in saying, "It was a very dry mess," and they wanted something to drink.

5993. Mr. Baron Martin.] Whom was he speaking of?—It was the company that was coming in, and we told Mr. Stephenson; he said well we was to do the best way we could with them, but if they wanted it, we was to give them a sup of beer, according to our own conscience.

5994. That meant a reasonable amount?—Yes.

5995. Mr. Waddy.] How long was your conscience to let you give them beer?—I think until the polling was over.

5996. Did you afterwards give beer to the people that came in and asked for it?—Not every one.

5997. But to some?—Yes.

5998. Do you know who they were?—I know some of them.

5999. Tell us exactly, how it was that you came to them beer; did they belong to the committee, or were they voters, or were they not voters, or who were they?—They was both.

6000. And did you keep an account of the beer that you supplied in this way, to those people?—Yes.

6001. Did you supply this beer always in the committee-room, or sometimes elsewhere?—Both in the committee-room, and in the tap-room.

6002. And did you ask for payment for this beer that you supplied in the committee-room, and tap-room, from the people to whom you supplied it?—Some paid it, and some did not; anyone that offered us the money—we took it.

6003. And if they did not offer you the money, what did you do then?—We put it down.

6004. On the polling day, did some provision come to your house?—Yes.

6005. What was it?—Ham sandwiches.

6006. Do you know who supplied them?—No, I do not.

6007. Who brought them?—I do not know his name; I should know him by sight, but I do not know his name.

6008. How many people were there in your house on the polling day, do you think?—There was a good deal; I cannot say how many.

6009. By that, do you mean 5 or 20, or 100?—There was about 100.

6010. And what became of the sandwiches?—They was given to all that was in that asked for them, as far as they went.

6011. To those 100 that you have been telling us of?—Yes.

6012. How many lots of sandwiches were sent?—I think there was two baskets.

6013. What was the size of the baskets?—I do not know; they would hold a hundred or two sandwiches, each basket.

6014. How many baskets came each time?—Only one at once.

6015. Where were those sandwiches taken to, into which room?—I am not sure whether they was taken into the tap-room or not; they was taken into the committee-room, and some was brought into the bar.

6016. You are sure they were in the committee-room, and they were in the bar, but not sure about them being in the tap-room?—No.

6017. And who had them; who ate them?—I do not know who ate them, but I was in the bar all the time.

6018. Did you see the people that came in; were they voters or not?—They was both voters and non-voters.

6019. You say you were in the bar; you told us a moment ago that some of them came into the bar; do you know who ate them?—I got some of them myself.

6020. Do you know what became of those that were brought into the bar; who ate them; were those eaten by voters or not?—There was none brought into the bar but to me.

6021. Did anybody go into the committee-room that day except the committee?—I do not know, I am sure.

6022. Did you send any beer out?—Yes.

6023. Where did you send beer out?—To Mr. Steel's.

6024. Who is Mr. Steel?—He is a tailor.

6025. Who ordered you to send it to Mr. Steel?—Mr. Stephenson and Mr. Deane.

6026. Who is Mr. Deane?—He lives in White Abbey.

6027. Was he a Forster and Miall man?—Yes.

6028. Can you tell me whether he had been on Forster's and Miall's committee at your house?—No, I am sure I cannot.

6029. Do you know how it came that the beer should be sent from you to Mr. Steel's?—When they came back from voting there was not room in our house, and then they went to Steel's.

6030. Who were they?—The voters.

6031. How do you know that they had come back from voting?—I asked Mrs. Steel, and she said she thought they had every one been and given their vote in when they came to our house, and there was not room in our house.

6032. Mr. Price.] Did you hear from Mr. Stephenson, or from Mr. Deane, anything at all about why those people were to go and get the sandwiches at Steel's?—No; that I did not.

Mrs. E. Hill.

Mr. Price.] Then I withdraw that.

6033. Mr. Waddy.] Were there any cards given to the voters at your house?—Yes.

6034. Like these (handing some papers to the Witness)?—Yes.

6035. Had you tickets like this?—I did not read them, but they were something like these.

6036. What ward is your house in?—The West Ward.

Mr. Price.] Now, my Lord, I call for the tickets issued to this lady in the West Ward.

Mr. Baron Martin.] How do you trace them back; the giving of them to this lady, Mrs. Hill, would take them away from my brother Ballantine's client? You must get them back again.

6037. Mr. Waddy (to the Witness).] You say you saw those tickets; who brought the tickets to your house?—I cannot tell you his name; I am not sure whether it was Mr. Stephenson or not; it was a dark-complexioned man.

6038. You do not remember whether it was Mr. Stephenson or not?—No.

6039. Look at those tickets for one moment; I do not mean voting tickets, but voters' tickets?—We had none like this.

6040. What tickets are you speaking of?—The voting cards.

6041. You saw those voting cards; what colour were those voting cards?—No; I only saw them as they lay upon the table.

Mr. Baron Martin.] You had better get Mr. Hill's account.

6042. Mr. Waddy (to the Witness).] Did you make out the account and take it to Mr. Lockwood Stephenson?—Yes.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] There it is; I admit it, and it is paid.

Mr. Price.] But that is not all; those receipts, in fact, show Hill's committee-room, but we are not proving that now; we are proving quite a different thing.

6043. Mr. Baron Martin (to the Witness).] Is that your handwriting?—No; nor is it my husband's.

6044. Is that your mark?—Yes.

6045. This bill has on it Elizabeth Hill's mark, and it is in this form: "Forster and Miall's Election Committee, John Hill, 'Rose and Shamrock,' Bradford; Received from the agent for election expenses of the above candidates, 4*l.* 10*s.*, being the rent of the committee-room, and 10*l.* 10*s.*, being the amount of refreshments supplied;" whose handwriting is that; is it your own?—No, my Lord; I believe it is Mr. Stephenson's.

6046. Is this other bill yours also?—Yes, my Lord.

6047. Mr. Waddy.] When you first made out the bill, who made it out for you?—It was Mr. Northrop's nephew, I think.

6048. Who is he?—He lives at the "Falcon Inn."

6049. Did you take that bill made out by Mr. Northrop's nephew, and show it to Mr. Lockwood Stephenson?—Yes.

6050. Did Mr. Lockwood Stephenson send you with that bill to Mr. Kemp?—Yes.

6051. Mr. Kemp, I believe, is the election agent who has signed these accounts; but did you hand that bill to Mr. Kemp?—Yes.

6052. Did he give it back to you?—Yes.

6053. What did he say when you gave it to him?—He said he could not pay me then, it was not right; it must be altered.

6054. Did he tell you what alteration was to be made?—No, he did not tell me what alteration was to be made; he said I was to give the note to Mr. Stephenson.

6055. Did he tell you the way it was to be altered?—No, I think he did not.

6056. Did you take it to Mr. Stephenson?—Yes.

6057. What did Mr. Stephenson do to it?—He gave me another note to take the next day.

6058. Mr. Baron Martin.] What did you do with the original one?—I left it with Mr. Stephenson.

Mr. Price.] Will you give us the original account, Mr. Serjeant Ballantine?

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] There is the original account (handing the same to the learned Council).

6059. Mr. Waddy (to the Witness).] Is that the one you are speaking of (handing the same to the Witness)?—Yes; I believe that that is the first one.

6060. That is the one which you took to Mr. Kemp?—I believe it is.

6061. Was there another besides that?—Yes.

6062. Mr. Baron Martin.] In your handwriting?—No.

6063. Mr. Waddy.] Was there another account besides that one?—Yes; there was the second one.

6064. How many accounts were there altogether presented by you to Mr. Kemp at any time?—Two.

Mr. Baron Martin.] Look at this Mr. Waddy, and see if this is not a mare's nest.

6065. (To the Witness).] In the first bill, did you put in both the charge for the room and for refreshments?—Yes, on the note that we took to Mr. Stephenson.

6066. And which bill Mr. Kemp objected to; and he wished the room and the refreshments to be separate?—Yes.

6067. Did you take this back to Mr. Stephenson to make it out separate?—Yes; they was separate at the first.

6068. Mr. Price.] In the first document which you sent in, was there a specific charge made for the room and a specific sum charged for refreshments?—I believe there was; but I will not swear on my oath that there was two sums at first; but I believe there was one for refreshments and another for the rooms.

Mr. Baron Martin.] That will not do even for secondary evidence.

6069. Mr. Price.] What was the amount for refreshments in the first instance?—Well, sir, it was 15*l.* altogether.

6070. What was the amount for refreshments in the first account that you sent in?—I think it would be 14*l.* 5*s.*

6071. How much for the room?—It was 2*s.* 6*d.* each night.

6072. Mr. Baron Martin.] Who is George P. Bowman?—I do not know him.

6073. Mr.

6073. Mr. Price.] Did you ever hear of such a man?—No.

6074. Do you know him at all?—I went down to the committee-room of Mr. Kemps, and I believe he said that we was to have a note settled by Mr. Bowman.

6075. Did he say why?—No he did not. "

6076. You say that you charged 2s. 6d. a night for the room; how many nights were they there?—They was there either eight or nine nights; that I am certain of; I do not know exactly how many.

6077. Then it would be eight or nine half-crowns, and you charged 15l. for refreshments?—And the committee-room; we put it down altogether when we gave the note to Mr. Stephenson.

6078. Were two separate charges made, one for the room, and one for refreshments?—They was made by Mr. Stephenson, but not by us.

6079. What was made by you in the first account that you sent in?—£. 15.

6080. In a lump sum?—Yes, 15l.; we gave it to Mr. Stephenson for 15l.

6081. How was that note worded; how was it made out?—It was made out at the committee-room.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] I object to that.

Mr. Baron Martin.] Then I must stop it; I have not the slightest doubt if you look at it that that is the note; you will find upon the back of it 1l. 5s. and 13l. 15s. No doubt the 1l. 5s. was for the room, and 13l. 15s. for refreshments.

6082. Mr. Price (to the Witness.) There is 1l. 5s. at the back and 13l. 15s., what is that?—That was 5s. for the day of the polling.

6083. What is the 1l. for?—There was nine meeting nights and there was nine half-crowns for them, and I think there was 5s. for the polling day.

6084. That is 1l. 5s.; then 13l. 15s. represents the bill for refreshments?—Yes.

6085. You signed a receipt; how came it that you put your mark to the receipt for 10l. 10s. for refreshments?—I took the note back to Mr. Stephenson from Mr. Kemp, and Mr. Stephenson had to make out the note again; and he made me a note, 4l. 10s. for committee-rooms and the polling day, and 10l. 10s. for refreshments.

6086. Mr. Baron Martin.] So that you got the money, you did not care how he made it up?—Of course, we wanted the money; that was all.

6087. Mr. Price.] Was any reason given to you for altering it in that form?—They thought it looked a deal, 13l. for refreshments.

6088. Had they made a bargain with you for the 2s. 6d. per night for the committee-room?—Yes.

6089. So that you just charged the bargain for the room which you had agreed to, and 5s. for the polling day, and the rest you put down for what had actually been consumed?—Yes.

6090. Was that a fair charge for all, according to your conscience, as it was put upon your conscience?—Yes.

6091. Was that a fair charge for what they had?—Yes.

Mr. Price.] I shall ask for the 4l. 10s. receipt (the same was handed to the learned Counsel).

6092. (To the Witness.) Did you ever think for a single moment of charging 4l. 10s. for the rent of the rooms till it was given to you in that way?—It was given to us so; I took it down to Mr. Kemp, and I gave him the note, and then he paid me 15l.

6093. What did Mr. Kemp say?—When I give him the note, he said, "I cannot pay you to day;" he said, "you must give this note back to Mr. Stephenson."

6094. Was that all he said about it?—He said it looked a deal, 15l.

6095. Did he say what for?—He looked at the note, and said it looked a great deal.

6096. I see it put down here, "refreshments for clerks on the day of the poll;" was that the way it was ever put down in any account that you rendered?—No.

6097. And what you charged for was the refreshments you have told us of?—Yes.

6098. That went on from the Friday night, according to your conscience?—Yes.

6099. When you said anything to him, was anything said by Mr. Kemp about discount?—No, he said he must come up to the "Rose and Shamrock" that night, and have some beer and cigars with us, and I gave him a shilling, and I said, "That will get you a cigar or two."

6100. How much did you price them at; 4d. a piece?—No, he might suit himself.

6101. He accepted it; he took the shilling?—Yes.

6102. Mr. Waddy.] Was there a person called Northrop, of the "Falcon Inn"?—Yes.

6103. Did he come with Mr. Stephenson at the time that the rooms were engaged?—The father, him that keeps the "Falcon Inn," came, but not Thomas Northrop himself.

6104. Have you got your book here?—No.

6105. Can you tell us the name of any person in your house at your bar during the days that you have told us of that were voters?—Yes, I know some of them.

6106. Who were they?—I do not know many by name, but I know them by seeing them.

6107. Do you know any of them by name?—Yes.

6108. Who was there?—Michael Murray was one.

6109. Do you know any other by name?—Tim. Haggarty and Joseph Greenwood; I do not remember any more.

6110. You told us that there were others that you knew; how did you know that they were voters?—Because they live about us.

6111. On the polling day, about the middle of the day did Mr. Lockwood Stephenson come to your place?—Yes.

6112. And did you say anything to him about the ale that was already gone?—Yes.

6113. Just tell us what you said to him?—I told him there was 10l. gone in already.

6114. Gone in where?—Into the tap-room and into the committee-room, and to Mr. Steel's.

6115. When you told him that did you ask him for any further instructions of any sort?—No; when I told him that, I said, had I to fill any more, or to leave off, and he said, "You can fill another gallon or two," and we did; and we filled many a one after then; and Mr. Dean ordered a few at night, when Mr. Stephenson had gone away.

6116. Before that did Mr. Stephenson give any reason why you were to go on filling the beer; beer; did he say how the election was going on, or anything of that kind?—He said we was losing.

6117. Mr. Baron Martin.] That was Forster and Miall were loosing?—Yes.

6118. Mr. Waddy.] Tell us all he said about that; what had their loosing got to do with it?—He said, "Well, if we was gaining the day we would have rather better spirit to order more beer."

6119. But he said that they were loosing?—Yes.

6120. You told us that at night Mr. Dean ordered some?—Yes, he came to the bar, and he says, "Let those lads have a gallon or two of beer in."

6121. Is that Silvester Deane?—Yes.

6122. Had you received any orders about Mr. Dean from anybody?—I told Mr. Stephenson if Mr. Deane had ordered some beer in, was I to fill any, and he said, "Well, you can fill a gallon or two as he has told you."

6123. And did you get contrary orders with regard to the beer; when was it stopped?—We stopped ourselves.

Cross-examined by Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.

6124. I want, If I can, to make this out; you say you cannot either read or write?—Not write.

6125. It is of no use to ask you if you know who put these figures upon the back?—I think Mr. Kemp put them down; I believe he did.

6126. Did you see him, do you mean?—No, I did not see him; he went out of the room where I was, and went into another room.

6127. Your impression is, that Mr. Kemp put them down; your original bill was for 15*l*.?—Yes.

6128. What did you make it out from?—We made it out for beer.

6129. Had you kept an account?—Yes.

6130. How much beer had you really supplied?—We reckoned the note, and it was altogether 15*l*.; we reckoned committee nights and all, and 5*s*. for the polling day.

6131. How long had they occupied your house? Well, they had occupied it for a few weeks.

6132. For three months, had they not?—I do not know; I do not think it was three months.

6133. Very nearly three months?—They came every other week, and they had eight or nine committee nights.

6134. Does this Bill include everything that was provided during the whole of that time?—The 15*l*. does.

6135. 15*l*. includes everything, for all of those weeks?—Yes; there was not beer went in all those weeks; there was no beer went in till the Friday before the polling day.

6136. What would have been your charge up to the Friday?—There was nine nights; that would be nine half-crowns.

6137. That would be all, would it?—Yes, and then there was the polling day; I will not say whether there was more nights or not, but I know there was no less than nine nights.

6138. You will not say there was not more?—No; I know there was no less.

6139. Just tell me this; Mr. Stephenson complained, did he not, of the amount charged?—No, he did not complain to us.

6140. But did he not say it was too much?—I never heard him say so.

6141. Did you not say, "The other people offered us 5*l*.?—That was for the rooms. On the Friday the Ripley party came and they said to us, if we would take Forster and Miall's papers out of the window, and put Mr. Ripley's in, they would give us 5*l*. for doing so. My husband said "No;" if they would give him half what Mr. Ripley was worth, he would not turn over; that Mr. Forster were his man, and he would vote for him if he could give a vote.

6142. Just recollect yourself; did he not complain that you had charged too much for refreshments?—No; he never did to me, and I never heard it. I do not remember if he did.

6143. Did your husband see him about it?—My husband saw him the same as I did. I do not know whether it was my husband or me that took the note to him; that is all I remember.

6144. You do not know whether your husband saw him about it?—I believe my husband took the note to Mr. Stephenson.

6145. Then all the conversation was with your husband, was it?—There was no conversation, only just taking the note and giving it to Mr. Stephenson.

6146. Mr. Baron Martin.] Had you any conversation with Mr. Stephenson yourself?—No, I had not.

6147. Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] Then you have been telling us what your husband told you?—My husband took the first note that we made out for 15*l*., and he gave it to Mr. Stephenson.

6148. But you do not know what took place between your husband and Mr. Stephenson about it except what your husband told you?—I never heard him say that Mr. Stephenson had grumbled.

6149. All you know is what your husband did tell you?—Mr. Stephenson gave me the notes himself to take to Mr. Kemp's office. I took them and I gave them to Mr. Kemp. Mr. Kemp said I must take them back to Mr. Stephenson, and he said something about their being signed by Mr. Bowman, and I took the notes to Mr. Stephenson. I told him what Mr. Kemp had said, that the notes would have to be altered.

6150. Then you yourself had no conversation with Mr. Stephenson in relation to changing the mode of the account?—I gave him this note, and he said, "Well, we can alter it." He said, "Yes, it looks a good bit, this 15*l*," he says, "and only half a crown for each night of the meetings."

6151. This was to you?—This was to me; it was not to my husband. I said he was to get the note ready for the day after. He said, Well, perhaps he would have it ready that night, and if he had he would come up to our house and give it to us. I am not sure; I believe he did come up that same night. I went down to Mr. Kemp's office the day after; in the forenoon. When I gave Mr. Kemp the note, he says, "Ah," and then he took the notes in and he gave me 15*l*., and when he had give me 15*l*., he says, "I think I shall come up to your house to-night, to the Rose and Shamrock, for some beer and cigars." I was going out, and I turned round and I said, "Sir, that will get you a cigar or two," and I gave him a shilling.

6152. Will you be good enough to look at that gentleman (pointing to Mr. Kemp); is that the gentleman to whom you allude?—No, it was not him; it was a thin gentleman. I asked for Mr. Kemp

Kemp when I went in and there was a thin young man came and he held out his hand for the note, and I gave it to him, and he signed the note; him that paid me did; and I did not know but what it was Mr. Kemp. I could tell the young man again if I were to see him.

6153. Mr. Baron Martin.] Did he have a cigar?—I do not know.

Re-examined by Mr. Price.

6154. How did you know him to be Mr. Kemp?—I did not know him to be Mr. Kemp, but I was told to go to Mr. Kemp's office. I knocked at the door and asked for Mr. Kemp, and he said come in. I went in; it was a little place, something like this, but there was a door, and like a lid on it. I leant against it in this way, and I said, "Is Mr. Kemp in?" and he said, "Yes," and he came forward and put his hand out. I did not know but what it was Mr. Kemp; it was him that took the note and it was him that paid me, but it was not that gentleman there.

6155. Then we will suppose it was Mr. Kemp's clerk?—I did not know but what it was Mr. Kemp.

6156. I only want to ask you one question; I think you and your husband had only been in occupation of this house for about three weeks?—At the first, when Mr. Stephenson came to engage the rooms, we had been in, I believe, about three or four weeks.

6157. How long was that before the election?—It was a few weeks before, but I am sure I cannot tell.

6158. Mr. Baron Martin.] Why did you change the name of the inn?—When we went into the house we had not it on our own bottom, but when we got it on our own bottom we changed the name.

6159. Your husband was a firm supporter of Forster and Miall; is there any pretence for saying that you charged for that which really was not supplied?—No, we did not; what went in we charged for it, and we have charged for nothing else.

MICHAEL FREEMAN, sworn; Examined by Mr. Price.

6160. Are you a voter for the borough of Bradford?—No.

6161. Were you a committee man?—Yes.

6162. Where did your committee meet?—At the "Bobbin Turners' Arms."

6163. Whose committee was it that was sitting there?—Mr. Ripley's committee.

6164. Did you attend at any other houses in that ward?—Yes, several.

6165. What other houses did you attend at?—At the "Brown Cow" and the "Black Horse."

6166. Whose is the "Brown Cow"?—Patrick Harrigan's.

6167. Whose committee was that?—Forster and Miall's; they were both Forster and Miall's.

6168. Mr. Waddy.] Were you at the "Brown Cow" before the municipal election?—Yes.

6169. And after?—Yes, and after.

6170. When were you there before the municipal election; how long before?—A week before; night after night.

6171. What are you?—I am a labourer.

6172. At the time that you were there, what was going on in the room?—There was one called Burke was making a speech.

6173. What was the speech about?—In favour of Forster and Miall.

6174. Did you see any drinking going on?—Yes, I did.

6175. How many people were there?—There was 30 or 40.

6176. Do you know of your own knowledge whether they were voters or non-voters?—Yes, I do; they were both.

6177. Was there any check upon the people that went into the room?—No, none at all.

6178. Did you see beer brought into the room?—Yes, and drunk in it.

6179. How much did you see brought in?—Half a gallon on every table that there was in the room.

6180. How many tables were there in the room?—Four.

6181. Was that brought in in pitchers?—Brought in in half-gallon pitchers, time after time, as fast as they were emptied.

28.

6182. And was it given to the people all round?—It was given to the people all round.

6183. Did you see anybody pay for what they had?—Yes, I did.

6184. Who paid?—I seed Calvin Robertshaw pay.

6185. Did you see what he paid?—I cannot swear to the coin that he paid it with.

6186. Did you see whether it was silver or gold?—I cannot swear; but I seed him give some money to the landlord for some beer.

6187. Did any one else pay for some beer?—Not that I seed.

6188. Mr. Baron Martin.] Did this Calvin Robertshaw treat you; is that what you mean?—Yes.

6189. Was this before or after the municipal election?—Before.

6190. Mr. Waddy.] Did you ever go to that public-house after the municipal election, and before the parliamentary one?—Yes, I did. I went regular to the house, night after night; not one night, not one night only.

6191. When you have been there, after the municipal election, was there drink going on?—Yes, there was night after night.

6192. How much?—Half-gallons going on the tables round.

6193. Who paid for it?—I cannot swear who paid for the beer; the beer came up, I did not pay for it myself, nor no other man that I seed.

6194. Did you offer to pay for it?—No; I did not.

6195. Did you hear anything said about payment to the landlord?—No; I did not.

6196. This was after the municipal election; were the people that were there, voters or non-voters at the time?—They were both voters and non-voters; I can swear to voters being in the room.

6197. Did you see whether there was any account kept; any marking up, or what was done with regard to the beer?—I did not see anything done at all to that effect.

6198. On how many occasions were you at the "Brown Cow" after the municipal election and before

Mrs.
E. Hill.

before the Parliamentary election, when beer was going?—I was on several occasions in the house altogether, before the municipal election and again after; I was on several occasions there.

6199. Have you been to the "Black Horse"?—Yes, I have.

6200. That we have heard was a Foster and Miall house?—Yes; it was a Forster and Miall house.

6201. Were you there after the municipal election?—Yes, I was.

6202. And before the other?—Yes; and before the other.

6203. At the time that you were there, did you go into the committee-room?—Yes, I did.

6204. Did you see any beer there?—Yes, I did.

6205. How was it brought?—It was brought by the landlord.

6206. Do you know his name?—Yes.

6207. What is it?—Jonathan Illingworth.

6208. Who paid for it?—I cannot swear; I did not see anybody pay for it; the beer came in and I drank part of it.

6209. How much beer was brought in on any night that you saw it?—Several half-gallons, and as fast as one pitcher was emptied it was filled again.

6210. And who drank it?—The company at large; by both voters and non-voters.

6211. Was there any check at all upon the people going into the room?—No check whatsoever.

6212. Were you asked whether you belonged to the committee, or anything of that kind?—No; I was not.

6213. Was it the committee-room?—It was the committee-room.

6214. Whilst you were there and whilst this beer was being drunk, what was going on in the room?—They was making speeches in favour of Forster and Miall.

6215. Who was making them?—The last night I was in the room there was a man called Burke speaking.

6216. Where does he live, do you know?—I believe he lives in Longcroft-place, if I am not mistaken.

6217. Have you ever heard anybody else in the "Black Horse" or the "Brown Cow" making speeches in favour of Forster and Miall?—Yes, I have.

6218. Who?—I cannot mention his name, he lived at the "Black Horse" at the time.

6219. Do you know the "Robin Hood"?—Yes, I do.

6220. Had you been to the "Robin Hood" before the municipal election?—Yes.

6221. Before the municipal election were there placards up for Forster and Miall?—Yes, there was.

6222. How long before the municipal election did you go in?—I have gone in ever since the landlord opened the house.

6223. Did you go into the committee-room upstairs?—Yes, I did.

6224. Is that committee-room upstairs or down?—It was upstairs.

6225. When you got there was any drink going on?—Yes, there was.

6226. What quantity?—Half a gallon at a time.

6227. Mr. Baron Martin.] One after another?—Yes.

6228. Mr. Waddy.] Who brought it in?—The landlord.

6229. How many people were there there?—40 or 50.

6230. Did you see anybody pay for it?—No, I did not.

6231. Did you get any of it yourself?—No, I did not, nor nobody else that I seed in the room.

6232. I do not think you heard my question; did you get any of it I say?—Yes, I did, and drank of it.

6233. Did you pay for it?—No, I did not.

6234. Did you see whether it was chalked up, or whether it was paid for then, or what?—I did not at the present time.

6235. During the time that you were there what was going on in the room, before the municipal election, I mean?—They were speaking in favour of Forster and Miall.

6236. After the municipal election, and before the Parliamentary election, were you there again?—Yes, I was.

6237. At the "Robin Hood" I mean?—Yes.

6238. How often were you there?—Several times; day after day I was there.

6239. How long used you to stay at the "Robin Hood" on an average, when you went?—I went and stayed about four hours one day, close on four hours as near as I can speak.

6240. Where were you all that time?—I was in the tap-room.

6241. During the time that you were there, did you get any beer to drink?—Yes; as much as ever my heart could take.

6242. Did you pay for it?—I did not.

6243. Were you asked to pay for it at all?—No, I was not.

6244. During that time, during the four hours, did you ever go into the committee-room?—This was in the forenoon that I was telling you about now.

6245. How long would that be before the Parliamentary election?—Perhaps a week, I would not say to a day or two; I cannot swear to a day or two; I am not a scholar and did not take anything down.

6246. At any time before the Parliamentary election did you ever go into the committee-room at that house?—Yes.

6247. Where was it, upstairs or down?—Upstairs.

6248. When you have been in the committee-room have you seen drink coming in?—I have seen several people, many scores that I know, and I have seen drink.

6249. Have you seen beer there?—Yes; several half gallons; I cannot swear to a half a gallon or two.

6250. Did you get any of it upstairs?—Yes, I did get some of it.

6251. Who were those people that were there that you knew?—I cannot mention their names, not all of their names; I could mention one.

6252. Were they voters or not?—They were voters and non-voters.

6253. Were they all partaking of liquor?—Yes, they were.

6254. Did any of them pay?—I did not see any of them pay.

6255. Did you see who did pay?—No, I did not;

not; not in the "Robin Hood," not that day, with the exception of one man.

6256. Who was that?—They called him Mortimer.

6257. What did he pay; was it for himself or for the rest, or how?—He paid for the company at large.

6258. Do you know who Mortimer is?—Yes, I do.

6259. Do you know whether he had anything to do with the election?—Yes, I do.

6260. What had he?—He took an active part in the return of Forster and Miall.

6261. About how long before the Parliamentary election was it, that this took place with Mortimer?—Perhaps four or five days.

6262. Was it before the municipal election or after?—It was before.

6263. When Mortimer paid for the company, did he give any reason for so?—Yes, he did.

6264. What did he say?—When I first went into the room, this was in the forenoon; I was going down the lane, and there was a young man told me there was a man paying for any quantity of drink.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] I object to this.

6265. Mr. Price.] Did Mortimer say anything when he paid for the beer?—When Mortimer was paying for the beer, he said, he thought that if there was a Ripley man in the house he would kick his guts out, and I made answer directly and said "Yes, Ripley for ever" and I stood up, but he did not do what he said.

6266. Mr. Baron Martin.] Had you a fight?—No, we did not fight, it did not come to a fight; I think he thought it better to withdraw.

6267. Mr. Waddy.] Do you know a public-house called the "Princess Alexandra"?—Yes, I do.

6268. Mr. Baron Martin.] You seem to know all the public-houses?—No; not all, my Lord.

6269. Mr. Waddy.] Is the "Princess Alexandra" in the same neighbourhood?—In Silsbridge-lane.

6270. Was that also a committee-house for Forster and Miall?—Yes, it was.

6271. Did you go there?—Yes, I did.

6272. When did you go there; was it before the municipal election?—Both before, and after.

6273. Did you see Forster and Miall bills put up in the house?—Yes.

6274. How often did you go to the "Princess Alexandra," between the time that the bills were put up, and the time of the election?—Time after time.

6275. Was the committee-room up-stairs or down?—It was up-stairs.

6276. When you went in there, did you go into the committee-room?—Yes, I did.

6277. Did you see any beer taken up there?—Yes, I did.

6278. How often?—As often as ever a pitcher was empty.

6279. Mr. Baron Martin.] Just the same as in the other houses?—Yes, just the same; I was drinking my share of it.

6280. Mr. Waddy.] Was this after the municipal election, as well as before?—After and before, both.

6281. Is there an inn, called "Fitzgerald's Inn"?—Yes, there is.

6282. Is that in the same neighbourhood?—Yes, I believe it is.

28.

6283. That is kept by James Ryan, I believe? M. Freeman.

—Yes; James Ryan, is the landlord.

6284. Did you go into that house?—Yes; I did. 29 January 1869.

6285. Once, or more than once?—More than once; several times.

6286. Was a committee-room for Forster and Miall there?—There was.

6287. Was the same state of things going on there?—The same.

6288. Did you get your beer there?—Yes.

6289. Without paying for it?—Yes; without paying for it.

6290. When you were there, whom did you see pay for any beer there?—James Lancaster.

6291. What is he?—I believe he is a hardware shopkeeper.

6292. Was he a Forster and Miall man?—Yes; he was.

6293. Do you know whether he took an active part in the election?—Yes; he has.

6294. When was it that night you saw Lancaster there?—I seed him in several places, both in the "Brown Cow," and the "Black Horse."

6295. I am talking about the "Fitzgerald's Inn"?—Yes; I seed him pay for beer there.

6296. When he paid for the beer, whom did he pay?—He paid the landlord.

6297. What did he say about it at the time?—He did not say anything; he put down the money, and the landlord received it, and gave him his change; he paid 2 s. for half a gallon of beer, and he gave him 1 s. 4 d. back, and he never said anything; and I drank my share of the beer.

6298. Did you ever see a person called Dracup at the "Fitzgerald Arms"?—Yes.

6299. When?—Several times.

6300. What have you seen him do?—I never seed him pay for any beer there; I seed him speaking there.

6301. Robert Hird; have you seen him at any of those places?—Yes, I have.

6302. Where?—I have seen him at the "Fitzgerald Inn;" but I never saw him pay for any beer there.

6303. Do you know Mr. Robertshaw?—Yes, I do.

6304. Which of them?—I think they call him Calvin; I can swear to the men if I see them both together, and I can swear to him, if I see him by himself; I think he is in the court; I think I seed him before I was called.

6305. Whichever of them it was, Calvin Robertshaw, or Luther, had you seen him at the "Fitzgerald Inn"?—Yes; I had.

6306. And what had you seen him do?—I have seen him knocking about the house and speaking; but I have never seed him pay for no ale at the "Fitzgerald;" I have seen him pay for ale at the "Brown Cow."

6307. At the time that you were at those different places can you say whether the company consisted of voters, or non-voters?—Of both.

6308. And did you know the people personally?—Yes, I did; I have lived with them all my life.

6309. Are you an Irishman?—Yes, I am.

6310. And were the people that were there, that you knew, your countrymen, many of them?—Yes they were, the whole of them; they were all Irishmen.

6311. Do you know Mr. Forster, when you see him?—Yes; I know him.

T

M. Freeman.
29 January
1869.

6312. Have you ever seen him in Silsbridge-lane?—Yes; I think I have.

6313. Whom did you see with Mr. Forster?—I seed Mr. Miall.

6314. Mr. Baron Martin.] Where did you see Mr. Forster?—I seed him coming up Silsbridge-lane one night; I seed him and Mr. Miall together, and several other gentlemen; I do not know their names.

6315. Mr. Waddy.] Just tell me the names of any gentlemen you have seen with Mr. Forster?—I have seen Alderman Kell.

6316. Who else?—I cannot remember.

6317. Any of those people whom you have been mentioning to us to-day?—Yes; I have seen Robertshaw and all that lot, but they did not come with him did not that lot; there was George Murphy, Robertshaw, Hird, Dracup, and that lot, and they led a number of Irishmen down to fetch him up into the lane.

6318. When?—The night that they was coming into Silsbridge-lane they came there; and then they led a number of Irishmen down in a body to fetch them up into Silsbridge-lane.

6319. Were Messrs. Forster and Miall going to those committee-rooms?—Yes, they were; I seed them both personally.

6320. Which have you seen them go into?—I see them go into every house that I went into; I seed them go into Fitzgeralds, and into the "Plasterers' Arms;" I seed them go into the "Brown Cow," and into several of the houses that I have mentioned.

6321. Did you go in with them?—No; I dared not go in.

6322. Do you remember Mr. Dracup coming to your brother's house, when you were there?—My brother-in-law's.

6323. What took place between Dracup and your brother-in-law?—He came several times, both he and George Murphy; they came canvassing.

6324. Your brother-in-law is a voter?—Yes, he is

Cross-examined by Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.

6325. Did you go into the rooms; you say Mr. Forster went into the rooms, and he addressed the Irish of the quarter there, did he not?—I did not go in with him; I will just explain that I dare not go in.

6326. You mentioned that one night you were there four hours, I think, at the "Brown Cow"?—Yes; I was.

6327. Was that before or after the municipal election?—Before.

6328. Mr. Baron Martin.] Was it day or night that you were there four hours?—It was at night.

Re-examined by Mr. Price.

6329. You had been at the "Brown Cow" for four hours, though not after the municipal election?—Yes, I was there before and after too.

6330. The longest sit you had there was before the municipal election?—Yes; it was.

6331. And then, afterwards, you had another sit there?—Yes; I had several sits.

6332. And as much as your heart could take on both occasions?—Yes.

[The Witness withdrew.]

Mr. Price (to Mr. Serjeant Ballantine).] Will you give us the bills of those houses I have named; the "Brown Cow," the "Plasterer's Arms, and "Fitzgeralds?"

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] It will be my duty to call almost every one of the landlords of those houses; I mention that, because it enables me to avoid any lengthened cross-examination.

Mr. Baron Martin.] I think that that is the better way of dealing with them.

[Adjourned to-morrow, at Ten o'clock.]

Saturday, 30th January 1869.

SAMUEL STOREY and THOMAS GARNETT - - - - Petitioners.

AND

WILLIAM EDWARD FORSTER - - - - Respondent.

WILLIAM FOX, sworn; Examined by Mr. Waddy.

6336. Did you find a number of people there?
—Yes.

6337. What time in the day was it when you got there?—Ten or 11 o’clock, I think, it was.

6338. Mr. Baron Martin.] In the morning or the evening?—In the morning.

6339. Mr. Waddy.] How many persons were present in the room?—It was quite full.

6340. Did you see any drinking going on?
Yes, I did.

6341. What did you see?—There was a pitcher full of beer in the room, and anyone that was in could drink.

6342. Did you, after that, see Mr. Lockwood Stephenson?—

6343. Mr. Baron Martin.] You did not pay anything for it?—I did not see anything paid.

6344. Did you see anybody pay anything for it?—No.

6345. Mr. Waddy.] Was that in the committee-room downstairs?—Yes.

6346. Did you go into the committee-room upstairs?—No.

6347. Did you see that day Mr. Lockwood Stephenson?—Yes, I did.

6348. Where did you see him?—At his own house.

6349. What time did you go there?—About nine o’clock, or that to half-past, in the morning.

6350. Had he before asked you to go there?
Yes.

6351. For what purpose?—For some little help that wanted during the day.

6352. What did you do in the morning at his house?—I cut up a few sandwiches.

6353. How many sandwiches did you cut up?
—I cut up a niceish piece of beef and a shoulder of bacon.

6354. Mr. Baron Martin.] You are a butcher?
—Yes.

6355. Mr. Waddy.] You cut up a shoulder of bacon, did you?—Yes.

6356. Did anyone help you to do that?—Yes.

6357. Who helped you?—His servant.

6358. After you had cut up the sandwiches, what became of them?—I took them partly to the “Horse Shoes,” and to Mr. Hill’s; twobaskets of sandwiches.

6359. Did you take sandwiches anywhere else besides those that went to Mr. Hill’s?—Yes.

6360. Where to?—To a private house just before you come to the “Horse Shoes,” Mr. Steale’s.

6361. Was there any committee going on there?—For anything I know there was.

6362. And committee-men sitting there?
Yes.

6363. Were there any bills about the house?
—I cannot say.

6364. Did you take some sandwiches anywhere else?—Yes.

6365. Where did you take them?—To Mr. Illingworth’s school-room.

6366. Did you see who had the sandwiches; who ate them at those places?—Not particular; no names particularly.

6367. Were they given to any persons in particular?—Anybody that was in the room, barring the school-room. I took in the basket and left it till it was emptied, and then called for it again.

6368. And took some more?—I went twice.

6369. To the school-room?—Yes.

6370. Illingworth’s school-room?—Yes.

6371. Do you know, of your own knowledge, whether the people there were voters or not?
—I cannot say.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine stated that he had no question to ask the witness.

[The Witness withdrew.]

JOHN HOLLEN, sworn; Examined by Mr. Price.

6372. You have very bad eyesight, I believe?
—I am a hawker.

6373. Do you live in Providence-street?
Yes.

6374. Are you a voter in the West Ward?
Yes.

6375. For whom did you vote at the last election?—For Mr. Forster and Mr. Miall.

6376. Were you employed by anyone to canvass?—No, I was not employed by anyone to canvass; my name was down for working.

W. Fox.

1869.

J. Hollen.

J. Hollen. 6377. Do you know Mr. Robershaw; did he put your name down?—No, he did not.
 6378. Who did?—A man called James Hart.
 6379. What for?—For working two days.
 6380. Canvassing?—Yes.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] He said "working," not canvassing.

6381. Mr. Price.] What work did you do?—I tried to get up voters.

6382. And you voted?—Yes.

6383. How much were you to get?—I expected to get about 5s. a day.

6384. How much did you get?—When they came to know that I was a voter, I got nothing.

6385. When did they come to know that you were a voter?—They came to know that I was a voter after the election was over.

6386. Then they gave you nothing?—No.

6387. Did you see Mr. Dracup at all?—Yes; all that day nearly; many a time during that day.

6388. Where did you see him?—I saw him at the "Robin Hood," and at the "Travellers' Rest."

6389. Were you employed at those two houses?—Yes.

6390. For how many weeks?—I was not employed at all only for two days. I visited those houses happen eight or nine weeks before the election came on.

6391. Were they Forster and Miall's houses?—Yes.

6392. When you visited them, what did you see going on in those houses?—I saw some Irish committee meeting nearly every night in the week, in one house or another.

6393. Were they drinking?—Yes, they had drink every night.

6394. Did you get any?—I paid for my own, and I see'd other men do the same.

6395. You paid for your own?—Yes.

6396. Was that always so when you were there?—Always so, only one night.

6397. What night was that?—The night that that Mr. Forster and Miall were on the lave, and after they went away Dracup came in.

6398. What did he do?—He fetched his family with him to enjoy themselves a bit. I played the violin, and he paid for a few gallons of ale that night.

6399. How much did he pay?—When he paid for them he had six or seven of his own family with him.

6400. His own children?—His children and his daughter's husband's that were with him, and two or three of his own daughters.

6401. Mr. Baron Martin.] Some young women?—Yes.

6402. Mr. Price.] Were any voters there, that you knew, that got drink?—There were voters, and they were paying for their own; he paid for those in my own company, and for his own children.

6403. Anybody else?—For anybody that liked to take a sup of it.

6404. Anybody that liked might have supped; that was what you saw; do you know Mr. Middleton, a druggist?—Yes.

6405. Did you see him at the "Robin Hood" at any time?—Yes; one night.

6406. Did he pay for anything?—He paid for one gallon of beer.

6407. Is the "Robin Hood" a Miall house?—Yes.

6408. Were there several people that came in?—Yes; there was not a deal there that night, but I saw him pay.

6409. Were they voters, or non-voters?—Both, I should say.

6410. Did they get drunk?—They supped out of this ale as far as it went; one gallon of beer.

6411. Did you hear him say anything?—No; I hear him say a song.

6412. Did you hear him say, "Drink on, lads; we will have Forster and Miall at the head of the poll"; and sing a song after that?—He did not say "Drink on, lads"; he said that Forster and Miall were at the head of the poll.

6413. Did he not say, "Drink on, lads"?—He did not.

6414. Never?—No.

6415. Were you with Mr. Dracup last night?—I never—

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine objected to Mr. Price cross-examining the Witness.

Mr. Price stated that he only wished to ask the Witness whether he had not made a certain statement.

Mr. Baron Martin.] Go on.

6416. Mr. Price.] He did not say "Drink on"?—No; he said, "We ought to have Forster and Miall at the head of the poll, and go to the poll sober."

6417. Do you know the chairman at the "Robin Hood," and did you see him pay for anything?—Yes; I saw him pay for one gallon of beer.

6418. Was that at the time when the committee was sitting there?—Yes.

6419. He was the chairman?—Yes; I paid for part myself the same night that he did.

6420. Who partook of that gallon which the chairman paid for?—He had two or three neighbours about him sitting.

6421. Were they voters?—I cannot say. I expect there would be both in the place.

6422. Were they committee men?—No.

6423. Are you sure of that?—The committee were left when he paid.

6424. What did he talk about?—About the election.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine stated that he had no question to put to the Witness.

The Witness withdrew.]

THOMAS DUFFY, sworn; Examined by Mr. Waudy.

T. Duffy. 6425. ARE you a Labourer, living in Vincent-street, Bradford?—Yes.

6426. You are not a voter, are you?—No.

6427. Do you remember some time before the late election that there was a committee-room of Mr. Miall and Mr. Forster at the "Robin Hood," and in the "Fitzgerald Arms"?—Yes; there was.

6428. Did you go to those houses at all before the election?—Yes.

6429. Do you remember when the municipal election took place?—Yes.

6430. Did

T. Duffy.
30 January
1869.

6430. Did you go to the "Robin Hood" between the municipal election, and the election of Mr. Forster and Miall afterwards?—Yes, I did.

6431. When you went there how many persons were there?—I cannot tell; a room-full sometimes; sometimes more, and sometimes less.

6432. When you were there, and when the room was full, did you see beer brought up?—Yes, I saw it brought up.

6433. How much did you see brought up?—I cannot tell you; it lasted half-an-hour supping it, when I was in.

6434. Did you get any yourself?—Yes, I did.

6435. Did you pay for what you got?—No, no pay was axed for.

6436. What words did you use?—I said, no pay was axed for.

6437. Do you know whether there were voters or non-voters there?—There were voters there.

6438. Did they all drink?—Yes, anybody might.

6439. Did you see anybody pay for this drink?—No, I did not.

6440. How often were you there when this kind of thing was going on?—I think twice at the "Robin Hood," as near as I can tell.

6441. The "Fitzgerald Arms," did you ever go there?—Yes, I have been there.

6442. About that time, I mean, did you go there?—Yes.

6443. Did you see drink going on there?—Yes.

6444. In the same way as at the "Robin Hood"?—Yes.

6445. Did you ever get anything there to drink?—Yes.

6446. Did you ever pay for any there?—Yes; I generally went in first at the beginning of the night, and got a pint, and paid for it; what drink came in when nobody paid for as I seed.

6447. Do you know the "Plasterers' Arms"?—Yes.

6448. Did you go to the "Plasterers' Arms" between the municipal election and the parliamentary election?—Yes; there was no meeting there; I went one day and I saw no beer but what I paid for myself.

6449. What time of the day was it; in the morning or the afternoon?—Something about the dinner hour.

6450. There was no committee-meeting?—No, I went in of my own accord; that was the only time.

6451. Do you know the "Traveller's Rest"?—Yes.

6452. Were you there between the municipal and parliamentary elections?—Yes, I was.

6453. When did you go there; what time?—After doing my day's work; at night.

6454. Was there a committee-meeting of Forster and Miall there?—Yes.

6455. Was anybody drinking beer there?—Yes.

6456. Did you get some?—Yes, I did.

6457. Did you pay for it?—No.

6458. Did you see anybody pay for it?—No, I did not.

6459. Were you asked whether you were a committee-man, or a canvasser?—No, I was not.

6460. Was there any check kept as to the people that came in and out?—No, there was none.

6461. Were there both voters and non-voters there?—Yes, there were.

6462. Do you remember whom you saw at the "Fitzgerald Arms"; did you see the principal man there?—I did not know the principal man.

6463. Who had the management of the place?—Nobody had the management, unless they took it upon themselves like there.

6464. Do you remember the landlady saying something about who would pay her for the ale; did you see Herd there?—Robert Herd, yes.

6465. Was anybody else there; did you see Dracup there?—I did see Dracup there.

6466. Did you see a man called Gillan there?—Yes, I did.

6467. Did you hear the landlady say anything to Herd, or Dracup, or Gillan in their presence as to who paid for the beer?—

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine objected to the question.

6468. Mr. Price.] Did you hear anything said by the landlady in the presence of Herd or Dracup about who paid for the beer?—Not in the presence of them.

6469. Do you remember a row taking place at Brennan's house; which house is that?—The "Labourers Arms."

6470. Do you remember some damage being done there?—No.

6471. Or at Nockton's house?—Yes; there was some done there, I think, and at the "Bobbin Turners Arms."

6472. Were you charged with having done that damage?—Yes.

6473. I believe you had the misfortune to be fined for it, had you not?—£. 6. 14 s.

6474. You were fined, you say?—Yes.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine objected to the question as being irrelevant.

Mr. Price submitted that his learned friend might ask whether the witness had paid any money.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine objected to his learned friend cross-examining the witness.

Mr. Price contended that it was no cross-examination, and that his learned friend wanted merely to get out a fact against Dracup.

6475. Mr. Waddy (to the Witness).] Did you actually pay any money?—No, I did not.

6476. They put you in prison, did they not?—At the police station.

6477. When you came out, who was waiting to take you away?—All that I knew there was Dracup.

Mr. Baron Martin.] This man is not a voter.

Mr. Waddy.] No, my Lord.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine stated that he had no question to put to the Witness.

[The Witness withdrew.

Mr. RICHARD SMITH, sworn; Examined by Mr. Price.

Mr.
R. Smith.
30 January
1869.

6478. ARE you a voter, living in Vincent-street in the West Ward?—Yes.

6479. Were you canvassed by anybody on behalf of the candidates at the last election?—Yes; Abraham Dracup and Michael Burns.

6480. For whom were you canvassed?—For Miall and Forster.

6481. When they canvassed you, did you see whether they put you down or had a book?—

They had a book; I did not take notice whether they put me down.

6482. Did they go about to other places?—Yes, Dracup did, but not Burns.

6483. In the same street?—Yes.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine stated that he had no question to put to the Witness.

[The Witness withdrew.]

DANIEL HOLLAND, sworn; Examined by Mr. Waddy.

D. Holland.

6484. ARE you a Hawker, living in Keighley-street?—Yes.

6485. Are you a voter in the West Ward?—Yes.

6486. Did you vote at the last election for Forster and Miall?—Yes.

6487. Do you remember a committee sitting at the "FitzGerald Arms" and "Robin Hood," at the "Travellers Rest," and the "Plasterers Arms" in Tilsbridge-lane?—Yes.

6488. Do you remember how long before the election they sat for Forster and Miall?—Yes.

6489. How long?—About nine weeks.

6490. Were you on the Committee at the "Travellers' Rest"?—Yes.

6491. Were you a canvasser?—Yes.

6492. Had you a book given you?—Yes.

6493. Were there any other voters canvassers?—Yes; I believe there was.

6494. Were all the voters that came there put on the committee?—Yes.

6495. Who first came to you and canvassed you to vote for Forster and Miall?—They call him "Marvel."

6496. Was anybody with him?—There was no one with him when he first came to me.

6497. Did he come again with somebody else?—He fetched me to the committee-room first.

6498. Whom did you see there?—I saw Dracup there, and Mr. Robertshaw, and Mr. Illingworth.

6499. Alfred Illingworth?—Yes; I believe so.

6500. Which of the Robertshaws was it, Luther or Calvin?—They call him Calvin Robertshaw.

6501. When you were at the committee-room, was anything said to you about being employed as a canvasser?—Marvel employed me, and he said that he would see that I got paid for it, if I would go and be a canvasser.

6502. Was that said in the committee-room?—Yes.

6503. Was any one else present when he said it?—There were happen 40 or 50 in, and sometimes less.

6504. Was either Mr. Robertshaw or Mr. Dracup there?—Yes, they was.

6505. One or both?—They were both there.

6506. Did you go sometimes from one of those houses to the other?—Yes, I did.

6507. And at all of those houses was there drink supplied; which was your principal committee-room; you were on a committee?—The "Labourers Arms."

6508. At the "Labourers Arms" was drink supplied; beer?—Some nights there was a gallon of ale come up by the landlord, and some nights there was none at all.

6509. Did you get your share of it when it did come up?—Yes, I got my share.

6510. Did you ever pay for it?—I paid for a pint or two sometimes when there were not many in, you know.

6511. Was it early in the evening, or late in the evening, when you paid?—Sometimes it was about half-past seven o'clock.

6512. Then what time did the committee meet there generally?—Eight o'clock.

6513. Who took the chair?—I saw different people taking it at times; I have seen Mr. Dracup sit in the chair once or twice, and I believe Mr. Robertshaw, 6514. After that did you ever pay for any beer that you had after Mr. Dracup and Mr. Robertshaw came to the house?—Yes; when they went away I had a pint or two after by myself.

6515. While Mr. Dracup and Mr. Robertshaw were at the house, did you pay for any beer that was brought up?—No, I did not.

6516. While they were at the house, was beer brought up into the room?—Yes, there was beer brought up into the room by the landlord.

6517. How much did he bring up?—Some nights there happen to be three gallons come up, and other nights about two, and so on.

6518. As to the beer, that was brought up in this way; did the company there drink it, or was it confined to one or two persons?—No, every one got it.

6519. Was it "tolled" round to the company?—Yes.

6520. Did you see any body pay for it?—No, I did not.

6521. Were you present at the "FitzGerald Inn" once when Messrs. Forster and Miall came there?—Yes, I was.

6522. And they spoke in the room, did they?—Yes.

6523. On that occasion, when Messrs Forster and Miall were there, can you tell me the names of some other persons that were there as well?—Yes; there was Mr. Illingworth, Mr. Kell, Mr. Robertshaw, and two or three other gentlemen.

6524. Was Mr. Dracup there then?—Yes, he was.

6525. Did you ever apply to any of those people to be paid for the canvassing?—I went to Marvel and asked him, "Was I going to be paid for canvassing?" and he said, "Well, you must wait till things are settled, and you will see whether we do not pay you"; I said, "I cannot afford to lose my time"; I have waited, but I have not got paid.

6526. Did he say what would happen when the election was settled?—He said that I should be paid.

6527. Mr.

6527. Mr. Baron Martin.] When the election was settled?—Yes.

6528. Mr. Waddy.] When was it that this conversation took place; was it before or after the election?—It was after.

6529. Have you applied to Herd for payment?—I have asked him once. I believe I asked him twice; did he think I should be paid, and he said that he did not know, but that I should be paid in time; he did not know much about it at present.

6530. Have you asked Mr. Dracup for payment?—No, I have not.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine stated that he had no question to put to the Witness.

[The Witness withdrew.

PETER BINNS, sworn; Examined by Mr. Price.

6531. Do you live at No. 47 Gracechurch-street, and are you a Beerhouse Keeper?—Yes.

6532. Do you know Sylvester Dean?—Yes.

6533. What is he?—He has been an agent for Messrs. Miall and Forster for the last six or seven months.

6534. What had he done in electioneering?—He used to come into our house of a night to see persons.

6535. What did he come to your house for?—To pay for the beer for the voters.

6536. Was your's a committee-house?—It was for Mr. Ripley; he wanted to persuade me to come over to their side, and I would not.

6537. Where did he pay for this beer?—Sylvey Dean used to pay for it.

6538. Who were the persons that got this beer that Sylvey Dean paid for?—Martin Haley, William Delaney, and James Hogan.

6539. Were they all Irishmen?—Yes.

6540. Were they voters?—Yes.

6541. Mr. Baron Martin.] And they got beer?—Yes.

6542. Mr. Price.] How many persons have you seen at a time, drinking there, pay for what they had if they did?—I never let more than four or five persons come into our house at any time.

6543. How often has Dean been to your house paying for beer in this way?—He might have been four or five times.

6544. Did he say anything about the election to those men?—Yes; he used to talk about it regularly; he tried to persuade me to come, and I said I would not come over for 100 l.

6545. Did he say anything to those other voters?—We talked amongst one another.

6546. When did he cease to come to your house?—About a month before the election; I sent him off.

6547. Why?—Because we got a faction about the election, and I told him that I would not have him there.

Cross-examined by Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.

6548. Were you examined upon Mr. Ripley's petition?—No; they never called me on that side.

6549. Were you called on the other side?—They called me on both sides.

6550. Are you the person that was mentioned by Patrick Murphy?—Yes.

6551. You are a shopkeeper and an ale-seller?—Yes.

6552. You heard Patrick Murphy say that you gave him 3 l. 10 s., did you not?—Yes; I did understand so.

6553. And two barrels of beer?—Yes; I heard him say so. I am the man that he made the charge against.

6554. You were not called, you say?—Never; because they dares not call me. They subpoenaed a person of the name of James Brown to come and swear against me; they thought that he was a witness on their side; he would have floored them, being on my side, but they never called him; if they had called him he would have been on my side, if he had got up, but they never called James Brown nor me.

6555. Mr. Price.] Was what Murphy said true, that you had paid him 3 l. 10 s., and gave him two barrels of beer?—No, not a word of that. I asked him for a receipt, but they never produced that receipt; they said that the receipt I gave him was five years old. I say there is nothing upon that receipt but what is more than four months old.

6556. What was the receipt?—It was a right receipt; he owed me better than 5 l.

JEREMIAH DONOGHUE, sworn; Examined by Mr. Waddy.

6557. ARE you a Striker, living in Vincent-street, Silsbridge-lane?—Yes.

6558. Mr. Baron Martin.] A Smith?—Yes.

6559. Mr. Waddy.] Were you a member of one of Forster and Miall's committees?—No, I was not; I was a canvasser.

6560. Who employed you?—I was employed by James Hart.

6561. Did you get a canvass-book?—I got two cards.

6562. Where did you get them from?—I got them at the "Robin Hood" door.

6563. Who gave them to you?—Mr. Crossley Haywood gave them to me.

6564. Did you see Mr. Dracup about your employment?—I have seen him on several occasions at the "Robin Hood."

6565. Did you go to the committee-room to report what you had been doing on your canvass?—The canvass cards were checked every half-hour on the day of the poll.

6566. Had you any card or book before the day of the poll?—No.

6567. When were you first employed by any body at the "Robin Hood," in connection with the election?—About three or four days before the election; before the polling.

6568. What were you employed to do before the the poll?—I was employed to canvass. I did not canvass anybody at that time.

6569. Were you employed to do any work on days before the poll?—No, not that I know of.

6570. Did you go to the committee-room?—Yes; I visited it on several occasions when there were meetings held there.

6571. That was at the “Robin Hood”?—Yes.

6572. When you were there did you see any beer brought up?—Yes.

6573. Did you get any of it?—I had got some of it.

6574. Did you pay for it?—No.

6575. Were you ever asked to pay for it?—No, I was not.

6576. On the occasions when this beer was being drunk, did everybody partake of it?—Yes; everybody in the room that had a mind got a share of it; it was “burled” round in a pitcher.

6577. Were there both voters and non-voters there?—Yes.

6578. Did you see anybody pay for it?—No.

6579. At the time that this was going on, what was being done in the room?—Speeches were made during the time sometimes; speeches in favour of Forster and Miall.

6580. How long before the election was it that you first began to attend the committee?—I had attended the Forster and Miall meetings in the “Robin Hood” soon after the municipal election.

6581. Did you attend them frequently after that?—I attended them some nights, and some nights I did not.

6582. Do you remember Forster and Miall coming to the “Robin Hood”?—Yes.

6583. And a meeting being held there?—Yes.

6584. And they spoke, did they?—Yes, they did.

6585. Can you tell me the names of any gentlemen who were there with them that night?—I did not know the names of any.

6586. Mr. Middleton and Mr. Lancaster?—Yes.

6587. Mr. Middleton is a druggist, is he not?—Yes.

6588. Did you see whether those gentlemen came with Mr. Forster and Mr. Miall?—I could not say whether they did or not.

6589. Was Dracup there that night?—I could not say.

6590. Or Herd?—I could not say that I saw either of them.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine stated that he had no question to ask the Witness.

[The Witness withdrew.]

MARTIN PURCELL, sworn; Examined by Mr. Price.

M. Purcell.

6591. ARE you a Cotton-spinner?—Yes.

6592. You are not a voter, I believe?—No.

6593. Were you at the “Robin Hood” beer-house on any occasion before the last election?—I was there on no occasion; I went the same as several others, I went to see the election going on.

6594. You were there?—Yes.

6595. What was going on while you were there?—I went to hear a man giving lectures.

6596. What about?—Mr. Forster and Mr. Miall.

6597. Where did you go?—I only attended two houses all the time I was there.

6598. I am talking of the “Robin Hood”; how often did you go there while those lectures were going on?—I attended there regularly.

6599. Every night?—I cannot say every night.

6600. For how long a time before the election did you attend there regularly?—I went there; I never had been accustomed to go anywhere else.

6601. Did you go there regularly at the time of the election?—Yes, I went there both before and after the election.

6602. What room did you go into?—Into all the rooms in the house.

6603. Do you know the room that was used as a committee-room?—I went up into the committee-room.

6604. Whom did you see there at any time in the committee-room?—The chairman was Mr. Crossley Haywood.

6605. Had you seen Mr. Robertshaw there?—Yes.

6606. Which of them was it?—I cannot tell one from the other.

6607. You had seen Mr. Robertshaw there?—Yes.

6608. Had you seen ale brought up into the room while you were there?—Yes; I had seen it brought up in the room; the same as every working man, I had to pay for it myself.

6609. For all that was taken?—Yes, I saw everyone in the house pay for his own ale, several times.

6610. Have you seen beer brought up when Mr. Haywood was in the chair?—Yes, I have.

6611. Was it paid for?—I cannot say; I never saw any man pay for it; I cannot mention any man's name that did pay for it.

6612. Did you partake of the beer yourself that was brought up?—Yes.

6613. Was it “toll’d” round to the company?—Yes.

6614. How much was there?—I cannot say.

6615. Was there a gallon or two?—There might be a gallon or two, there might be less, and there might be more; I cannot say what it was.

6616. Have you seen Dracup there?—Yes.

6617. Did you see him often?—I cannot say; I have seen him once or twice, I cannot say many times.

6618. Have you heard him order anything while he was there?—Yes, I heard him order one night after the election was over; he came in the night of the election, after it was over, there were a large room full of us young chaps, and he said, “Have you nought to sup,” he says, and I believe he ordered 3 s. or 4 s. worth.

6619. Had you seen him there before the election?—Yes.

6620. Had you heard him order up anything before the election?—Not that I can say.

6621. No

6621. No ale?—No.
 6622. Has it been brought up while he was there?—Yes.
 6623. What then?—Nothing.
 6624. Have you seen Marvel there?—I have seen Marvel, but not in the “Robin Hood”; it was at Thomas McDermott’s.
 6625. What house is that?—It is a beershop.
 6626. What is the name of it?—I cannot tell you, not fairly.
 6627. Is it called the “Labourers’ Arms”?—I think so.
 6628. Was there a committee-room of Forster and Miall there?—Yes, I know there was.
 6629. Had you seen Marvel sitting there in the chair?—I have been in the house when he was there, but—6630. Have you seen beer brought in whilst he was there with a “but”?—Yes.
 6631. Did you see Dracup take any part in the election?—No, I have not.
 6632. Did you go about yourself at all?—Yes.
 6633. But you never saw Mr. Dracup take any active part in it?—Not that I can say; I did not see Dracup knock about that day at all, the day of the election.

6634. Did you see Dracup at any time going about upon different committees, and taking an active part in the election?—I only saw him attending one house; I believe the house that he used to attend was the “Robin Hood.”
 6635. How often have you seen him there?—I cannot say; I had seen him before and after several times.
 6636. Had you seen him a dozen times before the election?—I cannot say a dozen times; I cannot swear to it.
 6637. Have you seen beer brought up while he has been there on every occasion?—I have seen beer come in.
 6638. Who ordered it?—I cannot say, but I have seen it come in.
 6639. But you heard nobody give the order, and saw nobody pay?—No, the same as I told you before.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine stated that he had no question to ask the Witness.

[The Witness withdrew.

CAROLINE RUSHWORTH, sworn; Examined by Mr. Waddy.

6640. ARE you the wife of William Rushworth of Bradford?—Yes.
 6641. Of White Abbey?—Yes.
 6642. On 17th of November, the polling day, did you know Dean?—Yes.
 6643. Sylvester Dean?—Yes.
 6644. Did you see him on the 17th of November?—Yes, I did.
 6645. What did you see him do?—I saw him take some drink into John Steele’s committee-house; beer.
 6646. Where did he take it from?—From the “Three Horse Shoes.”
 6647. Is that Mr. Hill’s house?—Yes, John Hill’s.

6648. Do you know how much he took?—I saw him take a pitcherful, something about ten, and an hour afterwards I saw him take another.
 6649. Mr. Baron Martin.] A gallon?—I do not know; I saw him take a pitcherful; I could not tell what it was; he only took some twice; I saw him twice.
 6650. Mr. Waddy.] Was Mr. Steele’s a Forster-and-Miall committee house?—Yes, it was.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine stated that he had no question to put to the Witness.

[The Witness withdrew.

GEORGE GRAYSON sworn; Examined by Mr. Waddy.

6651. Do you live in Hind-street, White Abbey, Bradford?—Yes.
 6652. On the Sunday before the election, the 15th November, did Sylvester Dean come to you at your house?—Yes.
 6653. Did he ask you to go somewhere?—He axed me to go with him to have a sup of beer.
 6654. Where to?—William Firth’s, “Fleece” Inn, White Abbey.
 6655. Was that a committee-room?—Yes.
 6656. For whom was it?—Mr. Forster and Mr. Miall.
 6657. When you got there, did he order anything?—Yes, he ordered some half-gills of ale, first one and then another; there was only one pitcher going that I seed there.
 6658. What did he do with it when it came in?—He “burled” it round to the company.
 6659. While this was going on, did he say anything to you?—No, nothing but “Drink on,” as the time was short; it was getting close to three o’clock fast.
 6660. Did he talk about the election at all?—No; I heard no election mentioned that day; they were all going on with the ale.

6661. How many people were there there?—It was crammed, it was full.
 6662. Were there both voters and non-voters there?—Yes, both sorts.
 6663. Before Mr. Dean took you to the “Fleece” Inn, did he ask you for anything as to the election?—He asked me for my vote.
 6664. Was anything said by him about your vote that day, as you were going to the “Fleece” Inn?—No, it was never mentioned.
 6665. I believe you voted for Mr. Ripley?—Yes.
 6666. After the election, did you see Mr. Dean?—Yes, I saw him after.
 6667. Did Dean say anything to you about the election then?—Yes; hs said that I had turned to Mr. Ripley, and he had a good mind to throw a pitcher in my face.
 6668. When you saw Mr. Dean, had he a book in his hand?—Yes.
 6669. What kind of book was it?—It was a canvass-book when he came to our house, and he asked me to vote.
 6670. When was that?—A few weeks before the election.

G. Grayson. Cross-examined by Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.
 30 January 1869. 6671. What are your principles?—I thought Mr. Ripley was the man for me, and I let him have my vote. I heard them spoken of on both sides, and I chose Mr. Ripley out of the job lot.

6672. That is an expressive term in Bradford, "a job lot," is it not?—Yes.

[The Witness withdrew.]

THOMAS CRAVEN, sworn; Examined by Mr. Price.

T. Craven. 6673. Do you live in Picton-street, Manningham?—Yes.

6674. Did you go to the "Three Horse Shoes," White Abbey, about the 14th of November last?—I did.

6675. That was a committee-room, was not it?—Yes.

6676. For Forster and Miall?—Yes.

6677. What time did you go there?—It would be between seven and eight o'clock in the evening.

6678. Where did you go; what part of the house?—It was in the tap-room.

6679. Were there any persons there besides you?—There would be 20, I should say, perhaps.

6680. Do you know whether they were voters or not?—There were both voters and non-voters.

6681. While you were there, what was going on?—They were fetching half-gallons in; they were bringing them in the beer and "burling" them round.

6682. How long did that continue while you were there?—I should say, perhaps, a quarter of an hour.

6683. How many gallons did you see consumed in that time?—Three jugs were brought in while I was there; they were "burling" it as fast as they could "burl" it.

6684. It was drunk as fast as it could be "burled"?—Yes.

6685. Who paid for it?—I did not see anyone pay for it.

6686. Did you get some?—I did not.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine stated that he had no question to ask the Witness.

[The Witness withdrew.]

MICHAEL MAYES, sworn; Examined by Mr. Waddy.

M. Mayes. 6687. What are you?—A beer-shop keeper.

6688. Were you engaged during last October for Mr. Ripley?—At first I was.

6689. How long was your house used as a committee-room for Mr. Ripley?—From Friday till Tuesday the 14th.

6690. In the first instance, for how long was it?—It was for a fortnight on first beginning, and it was occupied by them.

6691. After that I believe it was changed to Forster and Miall?—Yes, it was.

6692. How long was it used by Forster and Miall?—It was used at three meetings.

6693. For how long?—I cannot exactly say.

6694. Were they all in one week or in three weeks?—In three different weeks; there was two one week.

6695. Who engaged the room from you for Forster and Miall?—Mr. Dracup and Robert Herd.

6696. When they came to engage it, did you get a written or a printed agreement?—No, I did not.

6697. What was the agreement you made with Mr. Dracup for the room?—He said that he was giving 6 l. for rooms, and that he would give the same to me.

6698. Until when?—Until the election would be over.

6699. What did you say to that?—I said nothing to him any way; I told him that I did not like to put a neighbour against me, but Mr. Ripley had taken it from the beginning; I did not promise him my vote.

6700. Have you been paid for the rent of your room?—No, I was not.

6701. You have told us that they held three meetings at your house; when was the last of them, as near as you can remember?—It was about a fortnight before the election, but I cannot speak to the day.

6702. Before the election, I believe, you came round, and you were a Ripley committee-room again?—Yes, I was.

6703. When your room was a Forster and Miall room was beer supplied?—Yes, there was beer.

6704. Was it supplied to the company generally?—Yes, it was supplied to all hands.

6705. Who ordered the beer?—Abraham Dracup and Robert Herd.

6706. And they paid for it, you say?—Yes.

6707. What orders did they give you; first, as to Dracup; with regard to the beer, how was it to be distributed?—I brought two gallons up the first night they sat there.

6708. What did he say as to who was to have it?—He never mentioned anything of the sort; I just left it on the table.

6709. That was the first night; were two gallons there that were supplied the first night?—Yes.

6710. On the next night how much was supplied?—About the same quantity.

6711. Who had ordered that?—Abraham Dracup and Herd.

6712. Who paid for it?—They paid for it.

6713. On the third night, what was done; how much was here?—I cannot exactly say.

6714. Did you serve any of it round?—I left it on the table; I do not know; I did not take it down in writing, but I just brought it on the table the third night.

6715. How many people were there in the room?—There was a very large room full.

6716. Were there voters and non-voters there?—Yes, there were.

6717. Was there any check upon the people who went into the room or came out of it?—There was not that I was aware of.

6718. During the time that your house was a Forster and Miall house did either of them come to it?—Yes, they did once.

6719. Both together?—Yes, both together.

6720. Did you keep any account of the beer that was supplied?—I generally get a bit of chalk in the bar, and I chalked it down in the bar.

6721. Was

6721. Was this beer that was supplied chalked up?—Yes, it was.

6722. Do you mean that you chalked it up every night, or only on one occasion?—Just as the waiter brought it in; I did not fill it or bring it up; the misses filled it up.

6723. Who paid for it and chalked it up?—Middleton paid one night about 2 s.

6724. Who else was there?—Nobody else not that night. On the other night it was paid for by Dracup and Herd.

Cross-examined by Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.

6725. How much was paid?—They paid for about two gallons each night.

6726. What would that come to?—Sometimes it was what they call fourpenny ale, and sometimes it was the best ale.

6727. Your house was taken, was it not, for 12 weeks by Miall and Forster?—Very likely it was 12 weeks.

6728. And they were to pay you 6 l. for it, were they not?—Yes.

6729. And at the end of a fortnight you turned them out?—Yes.

6730. When did they take your house?—Poole had it taken first for about nearly a fortnight before I agreed to give them the room.

6731. When was that?—In October.

6732. But they were out by the end of October?—Yes.

6733. I believe you made a mild remonstrance to them that it was of no use having such dry people in your house?—Well, of course —

6734. That was so, was it not?—Yes, it was so in fact; I was not in the tap-room with them.

6735. I believe they have refused to pay you a single farthing?—Which party?

6736. Forster and Miall?—They gave me nothing.

Re-examined by Mr. Price.

6737. Before you turned them out were you threatened at all?—I was not.

[The Witness withdrew.]

Mrs. MERINDA MILNER, sworn; Examined by Mr. Price.

6738. ARE you the wife of Jesse Milner, fitter at the Bowling Iron Works?—Yes.

6739. Were you employed on the day of the election at the "Napoleon" inn?—Yes, I was.

6740. On the nomination day or the polling day?—On the nomination day.

6741. What were you doing there that day?—I was helping to cut the beef up.

6742. At what time did you go there in the morning?—About half-past nine.

6743. Had you been there the night before to cook?—No.

6744. Were you there the night before?—I went there, but I did not do very little.

6745. Did you see any cooking going on the night before?—Yes, a hind lift of beef.

6746. What part is that of the ox?—It was roasted before the fire.

6747. Is it a large joint?—Yes; I think it is about 50 pounds.

6748. How many of these "lifts" did you see cooked?—Only one.

6749. The next day you went to assist to cut it up?—Yes.

6750. Were there any hams?—One.

6751. Were there any stews cooked?—Yes, two stews.

6752. How was that all disposed of?—A cloth was laid on the table and they came in; perhaps sometimes nine came together.

6753. Before they went into the room where the spread was for them, did they show anything?—Yes, they showed a card.

6754. Could you see the colour of it?—Yes; it was a yellow one.

6755. Was that the Forster and Miall colour?—Yes.

6756. They showed this card?—Yes.

6757. To whom was it shown?—I did not know him, but his name was Smith.

6758. Where was he standing?—He was standing at the door.

6759. When they went in did you hear anything said by any of them?—I only heard who they voted for.

6760. For whom did they say they had voted?

—They said they had voted for Forster and Miall.

6761. Had they anything besides food; any drink?—Yes.

6762. I believe that all you have told us of was consumed, and then you had to set to work to cook beefsteaks?—Yes.

6763. How many do you think came altogether?—I cannot say.

6764. Mr. Baron Martin.] Did you understand that they had voted, and came there after they had voted?—Yes.

6765. Mr. Price.] How many do you think came altogether?—I cannot say for that.

6766. Thirty or forty?—Above that; I was kept again all the day.

6767. What had they to drink?—Some had coffee.

6768. Anything else?—Some had beer.

6769. Up to what hour on that day were those refreshments supplied to them?—It stopped at about half-past three.

6770. I believe you had Mr. Ripley's colours on?—I might have had.

6771. Blue?—Yes.

6772. And you were ordered to take them off, were you not?—Well, I did so.

6773. Had you to cook in a great hurry?—Yes.

6774. So great, I believe, that some of the steaks were cooked in the pomatum-pot?—Yes.

6775. Did they have cigars and bottles of ale?—Yes, they had.

6776. Mr. Thornton is the landlord, is he not?—Mr. Henry Thornton is.

6777. At about three o'clock did you hear any orders given?—No; I did not hear any, but some one came down and said that they were to stop a little, to see how they were going on.

6778. How what was going on?—To see how they were getting on at the polling.

6779. What was said afterwards?—They came down and a gentleman said that there was no more to be cooked.

6780. Why was that?—Because they were not winning the day, I expect.

6781. Did

M. Mayes.
30 January
1869.

Mrs.
M. Milner.

Mrs. 6781. Did you see one particular man with
M. Milner. Mr. Smith who made a disturbance because he did not get anything?—Yes; he was an Irishman, but I did not know him.

30 January 1869. 6782. What did he say to Smith?—They objected to him for coming, first because he had lost his card with getting in to vote, and he said that if he had known he would have voted for Mr.
 Ripley.

6783. What did Mr. Smith then do?—He ordered him forward to sit down.

6784. And he had refreshments, I suppose?—
 Yes, he had.

6785. Did you serve up any part of what was eaten and drank on that day?—I chalked it down on the cupboard door.

6786. Does Thornton the landlord keep books?—I believe he does.

6787. Have you seen books like account books?—No; I did not see him put it down in a book.

6788. When you have been there at other times have you seen whether he had his books to put those things down?—No, I have not.

6789. How did you put them down; how did you score them down?—Just as they sat down at the table.

6790. Mr. Baron Martin.] Had you been a barmaid at a public-house before you were married?—Yes.

6791. Mr. Price.] You scored them down by lots as they came in?—Yes.

6792. Nine or ten at a time?—Yes.

6793. How many lots came in?—I cannot say;
 perhaps above a score, I should think.

6794. Above a score of lots of ten?—Yes.

Mr. Price stated he must now ask for the Napoleon Account, K. 43.—(A copy of the Account was handed to Mr. Price.)

Mr. Price stated that it appeared to be an account for 15 l. 7 s. 10 d.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine stated that it would be seen there was one account that had been filed which contained a sum of six guineas for the committee-room in addition to the refreshments.

Mr. Price stated that the amount was 15 l. 7 s. 10 d. on the following day.

[The Witness withdrew.]

MARTHA SCHOFIELD, sworn; Examined by Mr. Waddy.

I. Schofield. 6795. ARE you the landlord of the "Engineer" inn, in Dudley Hill?—I am.

6796. Had Forster and Miall a committee-room at your house?—Yes.

6797. Who was chairman of that committee?
 —I am sure I don't know, I did not wait in the room.

6798. Who engaged the room?—Mr. Revel.

6799. Do you remember before the polling day
 Mr. Revel giving you any order about refreshments?—Yes.

6800. What did he say to you?—He told me to cook a hind lift of beef and two hams, but I only cooked one ham, because I could not get two.

6801. Mr. Baron Martin.] Is the hind lift the round?—The general talk, my Lord, in Yorkshire, is what they call a buttock of beef.

6802. Mr. Waddy.] I think you said something about hams?—One ham only; I could only get one.

6803. How many did he order?—Two were ordered, but I could only get one.

6804. Did you cook this hind lift of beef, and this one ham?—I did.

6805. When it was cooked how was it disposed of?—I put it into a room, and they took the men in; I did not know them, and I had nothing more to do with it.

6806. The room in your house?—Yes.

6807. Mr. Baron Martin.] The men went in to eat it?—Yes.

6808. Mr. Waddy.] Was it the room that they had been using as a committee-room, or another room?—It was another room.

6809. In addition to this, had they anything to drink?—Yes.

6810. What did they have to drink; who ordered it?—It was Richard Tankard.

6811. Had Mr. Tankard been at your house on the committee?—Yes; before.

6812. How much beer was sent in during the day?—I am sure I cannot say exactly.

6813. Mr. Baron Martin.] I suppose you sent in an account?—Yes; for the committee-room, and what they had had to eat and drink; it was a little over 11 l.

6814. Mr. Waddy.] Who paid you for that?—
 Mr. Roberts paid me.

6815. When?—Perhaps ten days after the election.

6816. Did you send in a bill?—Yes, I did, for he called for it.

Mr. Baron Martin.] You must put in the bill itself.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] My learned friend has called for it, but I do not know that I can put my hand on it, and I will allow my learned friend to give secondary evidence.

6817. Mr. Waddy (to the Witness).] In that bill was your charge for refreshments from 9 l.
 to 10 l.?—No.

6818. What was it?—The committee-rooms were 3 l. 10 s., and the other was for the refreshments.

6819. What was the whole amount of the bill?—I cannot say to a shilling or two, but it was a little over 11 l.

6820. Just look at that (handing a document to the Witness); is that it?—No.

6821. Did you see a thing like that (handing a paper to the Witness) when they took the committee-room from you?—No; I cannot say that I did.

6822. Do you remember whether there was a written engagement to take the house?—No; I cannot say so.

6823. Partly written and partly printed?—I do not remember it.

6824. Mr. Price.] She says that the charge
 was

was 3*l.* 10*s.*, and they gave a receipt for 4*l.* for the committee-room?—When they engaged the large room they paid me 1*l.*, and for any low room that they had during the election, it was to be 30*s.* for the whole of the time.

6825. That made 2*l.* 10*s.*?—They engaged the big room twice. The big room was to be 1*l.* a night, and they engaged it twice, making 2*l.*; and the low room, when they had that room once a week during the election, they were to pay me 30*s.* during the whole of the election for the whole time. (A receipt was handed in and read.)

Mrs. HANNAH McLAREN, sworn; Examined by Mr. Price.

6827. WERE you employed at the “Duke of Marlborough” public-house, in the South Ward, during the election day?—Yes.

6828. What time did you go there?—About seven o'clock in the morning.

6829. What were you employed to do?—I was cutting sandwiches, and preparing tea and coffee.

6830. From what time; from the time you first went in?—Yes.

6831. How long were you so employed?—I was there during the day; all the day.

6832. Who gave orders to you to give them them out?—Mr. Hill.

6833. Who is he?—The landlord of the house.

6834. Whom did you give them to; to the people who came there?—To the different parties who were voting that came in.

6835. How did you know that they were voting?—They came in from voting; I did not know who they were.

6836. Did they show you anything?—They said so as they came in.

6837. Where they admitted at once?—Yes.

6838. By the landlord?—Yes; and the parties who were there to receive them.

6839. Who were there?—Some of the committee; I did not know the names of them.

6840. Did you see them show any tickets?—Yes.

6841. What tickets did they show?—They produced tickets for their sandwiches; that was all that I saw.

6842. Did you see any of the tickets?—Yes.

6843. Did they have anything to drink?—Some of them had beer, and some of them had tea, whichever they preferred; several of them had beer.

6844. Did you see Mr. Firth?—Yes, I saw him.

6845. Did you see Mr. Smith, the overlooker for Mr. Garnett?—Yes; they were both there.

6846. Did they come in with others?—Yes, they came in and out with others.

6847. But some of those did come in for refreshments?—Yes.

6848. Did they go to the committee-room and get tickets?—They were up and down several times; but Mr. Firth or Mr. Smith, either of them, did not give me any tickets.

6849. Did you see them give tickets to those who came for refreshments?—Yes; they went upstairs with them, and came down with them. I did not see them personally give them tickets.

6850. When they came down, did you see them present tickets like that to them (handing a ticket to the Witness)?—Yes; I had some of them.

28.

Mr. Price.] I should very much like to see the bill, and it ought to have been returned.

6826. Mr. Baron Martin.] The bill appears to have been a little above 11*l.*?—Yes.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine stated that he had no question to put to the Witness.

[The Witness withdrew.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine stated that he recognised the tickets, and admitted that they were issued with the authority of his client.

Mr. Price stated, that if his learned friend had the tickets used at the house referred to, he should be glad to have the numbers.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine stated that he could not furnish his learned friend with the numbers just at the moment, but he would ascertain the actual numbers.

Mr. Baron Martin.] I understand that it is admitted as a fact, that tickets were given at these houses with which the persons got refreshments.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine stated that they had been issued to persons named on the tickets, but that it was confined to the South Ward, for reasons which he would presently explain to his Lordship.

Mr. Baron Martin (to Mr. Price).] You must take the admission, or examine the Witness, which you please.

Mr. Price.] I am examining the Witness, my Lord, but I do not know that it was confined to the South Ward.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine stated that as far as he knew, there had been no tickets, except in the South Ward.

6851. Mr. Price (to the Witness).] Did you hear any questions put to any of the people as to whether they had voted or not?—Yes.

6852. In answer to those questions, did any of them say whether they had voted, or whether they were going to vote?—I heard some of them say that they had voted.

6853. Did the others say anything?—I heard some of them say that they were going to vote.

6854. When they said, either the one or the other, where did they go?—They went upstairs into the committee-room.

6855. And then they came down, did they?—Yes.

6856. Where were the refreshments laid out; in another room?—The refreshments were put upstairs; some of them were brought into the shop, and they were supplied to them in the shop.

6857. What shop do you mean; the bar?—Yes. It is a printer's shop as well; a stationer's shop.

U 3

6858. What

M. Schofield.

30 January
1869.

Mrs. H
McLaren.

Mrs. H. McLaren. 6858. What did you get?—I got 3 s. the morning following.
 6859. And I suppose as much as you liked to eat?—Yes.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine stated that he had no question to ask the Witness.

6860. Mr. Price.] Can you give us any idea of how many were refreshed at that house during the day?—I could not tell you positively, but I cut up one hindliff of beef into sandwiches; I cut a great number, but I did not take notice how many.

TIMOTHY ALLEN, sworn; Examined by Mr. Waddy.

T. Allen. 6864. Do you live at No. 64, Daniel-street, in this borough?—Yes.

6865. Are you a voter?—Yes.

6866. Did you vote for Forster and Miall at the last election?—Yes.

6867. Were you on any committee?—No.

6868. Were you a canvasser?—No.

6869. Did you do any work whatever for the election?—None whatever.

6870. Do you remember being canvassed by two men?—Yes, but I do not know their names.

6871. When was that?—It was not above a week or so before the election day.

6872. After that, on the night before the election, did a man of the name of North see you?—Yes.

6873. What was Mr. North; was he a Forster and Miallite?—Yes, I think he said he was.

6874. And did he tell you to go to the "White Bear"?—Yes.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] You have not given us in the particulars the name of this Timothy Allen.

Mr. Price.] What I am proposing to show by this witness and the next, is, that those refreshment were not confined to the committee or the canvassers; I do not charge them with treating.

Mr. Baron Martin.] With regard to the evidence in this case, I believe I have spoken of committee-men, and I have read in the newspapers that Mr. Justice Willes and Mr. Justice Blackburn have spoken of committee-men, but certainly when I was speaking of committee-men, I had no idea of such a man as this witness being a committee-man; I mean a real committee-man; I do not mean a man in a very low rank in life, who is taken up into a room to be a committee-man; but my idea of a committee-man, when I have spoken of him, and as I have read in the newspapers what has been said by Mr. Justice Willes and Mr. Justice Blackburn, is, that he is no more a committee-man than a man who had been called in out of the streets; my idea of a committee-man is a real committee-man; a man in trust; a man in whom confidence is placed, and who is a person who may be presumed to have authority to act, but not such a man as this.

Mr. Price.] What I want to show is that those refreshments were not confined to committee-men and canvassers.

6861. Were there as many as 100 or more?—Yes, and more.

6862. How long did it go on?—It went on up to the close of the election.

6863. At 4 o'clock?—Yes.

[The Witness withdrew.]

Mr. Price (to Mr. Serjeant Ballantine).] Will you let me have the printer's bill; I should like to look at it.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] I suppose it is with the vouchers.

Mr. Baron Martin.] I dare say they were not; I expect there is no order for any particulars of that kind; did I make those orders for particulars; do you happen to have got them?

Mr. Price.] Mr. Justice Willes, I am told, made the order for particulars.

Mr. Baron Martin.] If there is any restriction in the order, of course you are bound by it; but if it is otherwise, you are quite free, and my own wish is to make the thing as free as possible.

Mr. Price.] I do not put this man forward as being treated for the purpose of influencing his vote.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] Then there is an end of my objection. The form of my learned friend's question rather indicated that there was something in relation to this individual either of treating or of bribery, and it was under that view that I took the objection.

Mr. Price.] I told my Lord that I put him forward not as showing that he was bought over to give his vote by treating, but that he was refreshed, and he was neither a committee-man nor a canvasser.

Mr. Baron Martin.] I will tell you how this matter stands. The 7th Rule was made by the Judges with reference to this: "When a Petitioner claims the seat for the unsuccessful candidate, and alleges that he had a majority of lawful votes, the party complaining of or defending the election or return shall, six days before the day appointed for trial, deliver to the Master, and also at the address, if any, given by the Petitioners and Respondent, as the case may be, a list of the voters intended to be objected to, and of the heads of objection to each such vote, and the Master shall allow inspection and office copies of such lists to all parties concerned, and no evidence shall be given against the validity of any vote, nor upon any head of objection not specified in the list, except by leave of the Court or Judge upon such terms as to amendment of the list, postponement of the inquiry, and payment of costs as may be ordered." That is confined to a Petitioner claiming the seat. It was then thought that inasmuch as there was this particular rule as to the case of a candidate claiming the seat, it was but reasonable to apply it to other cases which were not strictly within the rule.

That

That is how the thing arose at first. It was thought that particulars might be given, almost as a matter of course, to a very considerable extent. It was then suggested that some limitation had better be made upon it, for that it would give an opportunity of tampering with the persons whose names were mentioned in the particulars, and getting them out of the way, and that it might do more harm than good; the consequence was that there was a limitation put upon it, and we all agreed that we would wait and see what was the operation of the rule in the first five cases that we each had set down for hearing, and see whether it would work well or not. Of course, as far as you are restricted by the order of Mr. Justice Willes, I shall restrict you, but no further.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] I have; I withdraw all objections, my Lord.

Mr. Price.] I quite understand then that the simple question is whether he got refreshments, he being neither a committee-man nor a canvasser.

6875. Mr. Waddy (to the Witness).] Did you on the day of the election get two pieces of paper from somebody?—Yes.

LEVI ALDERSON, sworn; Examined by Mr. Price.

6885. ARE you a voter for the borough?—Yes.

6886. Did you vote?—Yes.

6887. Whom did you vote for?—Forster and Miall.

6888. Were you on a committee?—No.

6889. Or were you a canvasser at all?—No.

6890. Did you get any refreshments on the day of the poll?—I did.

6891. Where at?—At the “Farm House” Inn.

6892. Is that in the South Ward?—Yes.

6893. Who gave you that ticket?—I do not know his name.

6894. Did you get it at the “Farm House”?—I got it at the “Farm House.”

6895. Mr. Baron Martin.] Is that a public-house?—A beer-house, my Lord.

6896. Mr. Price.] Were there refreshments supplied at the “Farm House”?—Yes.

6897. You used the ticket, and got refreshment?—Yes.

6898. Did you see other voters there doing the same thing?—Yes.

6899. How long were you there?—I was in and out many times during the day.

6900. And were the voters getting refreshments there all the time you were there?—No, not all the time.

6901. Only once or twice?—I only saw them get once; each voter had one.

6902. Each man got a ticket, you mean?—Yes, each man got a ticket.

6876. Have you got one of them here?—Yes. (producing the same).

6877. Where did you get this?—At the “White Bear” in Bradford Moor.

6878. Was that a Forster and Miall committee-room?—I think it was; I cannot say for sure.

Mr. Avery.] One of those tickets is, “South Ward refreshment ticket for canvassers and messengers. Supply the bearer, T. Allen, with one sandwich, 6 d. Joseph Boothroyd, chairman. Nota Bene.—No payment made unless this voucher is produced.”

6879. Mr. Waddy.] You told me that you had two tickets; what did you do with the other one?—I got one glass of beer with it.

6880. Where did you get that beer?—At the “White Bear.”

6881. Then did you give that ticket up?—Yes.

6882. This one is for a sandwich; you did not get a sandwich, I presume?—No, I did not.

6883. Do you know who it was that gave you the beer?—I do not know the man’s name.

6884. And you do not know the name of the man who gave you the tickets, do you?—No.

[The Witness withdrew.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] I do not cross-examine the witness. L. Alderson.

Mr. Price.] This is the “Farm House” bundle of tickets (producing the same); there are about 400.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] I can state at once to my learned friend that we have a most accurate account of them; there were altogether 3,000 tickets printed. I will give your Lordship the details of them: 500 representing a cup of coffee; 1,500 representing a glass of ale; and 1,000 representing a sandwich. Out of those, my Lord, 1,200 were used; the remainder were not used, and they were only used in the South Ward.

Mr. Baron Martin.] Are you speaking now of the South Ward?

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] I am now speaking of the whole that were printed, and I may as well give your Lordship the tariff of the ticket; it was 6 d., 3 d., and 1½ d. If your Lordship will calculate it, in the event of your having a moments time, the amount altogether in value of the 3,000 will be 40 l., and about half were used; and they were only used in that ward, as far as I can learn.

Mr. Waddy.] I dare say my learned friend will agree that the South Ward contained 3,205 voters.

T. Allen.
30 January
1869.

SARAH HALLIDAY sworn; Examined by Mr. Waddy.

S. Halliday. 6903. ARE you the wife of Nathan Halliday, of the "Spinkwell" Inn?—Yes.
30 January 1869. 6904. Was that a Forster and Miall committee-room?—Yes.

6905. Which ward are you in?—The North Ward.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] I am afraid that I must object that this is not one of the houses that is given to us under the particulars; therefore, if my learned friend proposes to prove anything in that house I must take an objection.

Mr. Price.] We must just look at the Judge's order of particulars, for I am told that it does not bind us to mention the particular house. This is the Order of Mr. Justice Willes: "I do order that the Petitioner shall, three days before the day appointed for trial, leave with the Master, and also give the Respondent, or his agent, particulars in writing of all persons alleged to have been bribed, of all persons alleged to have been treated, and of all persons alleged to have been unduly influenced, and that no evidence shall be given by the Petitioners of any objection not specified in such particulars, except by leave of a Judge, upon such terms, if any, as to amendment, postponement, and payment of costs as may be ordered. And I further order that the Petitioners shall, within four days from this day, leave with the Master and give the Master particulars in writing of the nature of the corrupt or illegal practices charged."

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] There is nothing further; but your Lordship may as well learn the modus operandi. Their answer to that is, that you will see by the return we cannot give you the names of the persons, but we give you the names of the houses in which we say treating took place, if your Lordship will look at page 8.

Mr. Baron Martin.] It seems not to be within the order; it is a work of supererogation.

Mr. Price.] Quite so, my Lord.

6905*. Mr. Waddy (to the Witness).] How long did the committee of Forster and Miall meet at your house?—Fifteen weeks.

6906. They met, I believe, twice a week?—Fourteen weeks they met twice a week, and once beside; that made it 15. They once had a public meeting; they had 14 committee meetings and one public meeting.

6907. Did they use the same room each time?—No; the public meeting was in another room upstairs.

6908. On the polling day did you supply refreshments?—Yes.

6909. Do you about how many people were on the committee?—I do not know.

6910. About how many people used to attend during the 14 times you have told us?—Sometimes more and sometimes less; sometimes the room used to be full, and sometimes there were not many.

6911. On the polling day was breakfast ordered for anybody?—Yes, for 12.

6912. Who ordered it?—Joseph Willoughby, William Linley, and William Bocoock.

6913. Had those people been addressing the committee meetings?—Yes.

6914. Who hired your room from you; who was the person that made the engagement?—Mr. Fisher was one.

6915. Was anybody else with him?—Mr. Thornton Woolff, and there was another; I do not know his name.

6916. Did you ever go into the committee-room when the committee meetings were being held?—Not often.

6917. Did you sometimes?—Sometimes.

6918. Whom did you see sitting in the chair at the end of the table?—There was Frederick Bowers and William Bocoock.

6919. Is that the same Bocoock that you mentioned just now as having ordered the breakfast?—Yes.

6920. Who else have you seen sitting in the chair?—I do not know their names.

6921. Did you supply the 12 breakfasts?—Yes, there was 12 ordered, but there was 16 came; 12 sat down first and four afterwards.

6922. Do you know whether those people that had breakfast there, were voters or not?—There was some of them voters.

6923. Did you, afterwards, get paid for that breakfast?—Yes.

6924. Did you send in a bill to Forster and Miall?—Yes.

6925. Was the breakfast included in that?—Yes.

Mr. Price.] Will my learned friend give us the bill.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] I will give you a copy (handing the same to Mr. Price).

6926. Mr. Waddy (to the Witness).] Did you send in more bills than one?—Two.

6927. What was the amount of the first bill?—It was all drawn alike, both the second and the first bill.

6928. Four pounds fifteen shillings, is that the amount?—Yes, for the victuals during the day and the beer, but not for the room and all.

Mr. Avery.] This bill is as follows:—Forster and Miall's committee, to Nathan Halliday.

	£.	s.	d.
To 16 persons' breakfasts, at 2s.	1	12	—
To refreshments during the day	3	3	—
Total - - -	4	15	—

6929. Mr. Waddy.] How was it that there came to be two bills?—They said the first bill was not a right one.

6930. Who said that to you?—Thornton Woolff said it was not right, and he said he would not pay me without it was right.

6931. Who made out the first bill?—Joseph Crabtree.

6932. Mr. Baron Martin.] What was the objection to it at first?—Because there was cigars in it.

6933. Mr.

6933. Mr. Waddy.] Had cigars been smoked?—Yes.

6934. You made out a second bill without the cigars, then?—Yes.

6935. Mr. Baron Martin.] For the same amount?—Yes, for the same amount.

6936. Mr. Waddy.] Who made out the second bill; you do not write yourself, I believe?—No, I cannot.

6937. What became of the first bill, was it returned to you, or did they keep it?—No, they kept it.

Mr. Waddy.] Now, will my learned friend show us the first bill.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] Will you show us the notice.

Mr. Price.] I am told that we have given notice.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] Read the point in any notice applying to this bill.

6938. (To the Witness.) How much were the cigars, man?—I cannot tell, there was a box full at 2 d. each.

6939. Mr. Waddy.] In the first bill had you charged for the breakfast?—Yes.

6940. For how many?—For 16.

6941. In that first bill had you charged 4 l. 15 s. for the whole thing, breakfasts included?—No, not for the breakfasts.

6942. But you had included the breakfasts in the 4 l. 15 s.?—Yes.

6943. Then you altered that in the second bill, and you made out a special charge for the breakfasts?—Yes.

Mr. Avery.] The account is:—

	£.	s.	d.
"To 16 breakfasts - -	1	12	-
To refreshments during the day - - - -	3	3	-
	4	15	-
15 weeks' rent of room - -	1	17	6"

6944. Mr. Waddy.] Apart from the cigars, what refreshment was there during the day besides the breakfasts?—Steaks fried.

6945. Was there any beer?—Yes.

6946. How much?—I cannot tell how much, but I know how much it came to, but I cannot tell what came in.

6947. Who drew the beer?—Me.

6948. Were you drawing beer all day?—I was drawing as long as they stayed.

6949. And did they stay all day?—Till while the poll was over.

6950. Did you send the beer into the committee-room?—Yes.

6951. And do you know who had it?—No, I did not go in to see.

6952. How much beer do you think you drew during the day?—I cannot say how much.

6953. How much did you charge for the beer; what was the price of the beer alone; never mind the other things?—I cannot tell. All I can tell is, the victuals and the beer came to 4 l. 15 s.; that is all I can tell, and the cigars.

6954. Do you think you drew one barrel, or a good many barrels?—I do not know.

6955. Mr. Baron Martin.] What is a barrel of beer worth; such beer as they had?—At 1 s. a gallon, 18 gallons is 18 s., and 36 gallons is 36 s.

6956. That is what you pay, 1 s. a gallon?—Yes.

6957. Mr. Waddy.] How many barrels of beer did you tap for them that day?—We had two on the tap.

6958. How many more did you tap?—I do not say we tapped two more.

6959. How many more?—There was more in the cellar.

6960. Mr. Baron Martin.] You charged for all you drew, I suppose?—Yes, I wanted paying for all I drew.

6961. Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] I am told, my Lord, by Mr. Forster, that that is the Yorkshire for "getting all." I do not profess myself to have graduated in the Yorkshire language. (To the Witness.) Just tell me this, did you get all you asked?—Yes.

6962. Mr. Waddy.] Who had those refreshments, was it the same 16 that had the breakfast, or others?—No; others that came in during the day.

6963. How many of them?—I cannot tell how many there was came in. I did not take no notice; I had summut else to do.

6964. Were they voters or non-voters, do you know that?—Some of them were voters, and some not.

6965. Do you know James Ainsworth?—Yes.

6966. Was James Ainsworth there that day?—Yes.

6967. Had he breakfast?—No.

6968. Had he dinner there?—Yes.

6969. Do you know how it was he came to you there; was he on the committee?—I never seed him on the committee.

6970. Do you know how it was he came to have dinner there?—I do not know, without it was I suppose because he was going to vote for them.

6971. Do you know whether he had voted when he had dinner?—No, I do not.

6972. Did you hear anything said about his voting?—I heard him say that he would not vote with an empty belly.

6973. When he had said that did he fill his belly?—Yes, for anything I know.

6974. But did you serve him?—No, my sister did, but I seed him get it.

Cross-examined by Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.

6975. I will only ask you one question; what politics are you, Ripley or Miall and Foster?—My husband is a Ripley man.

6976. And he voted for him?—Yes; he never went into the Miall committee.

[The Witness withdrew.

JOSEPH CRABTREE, sworn; Examined by Mr. Price.

6977. ARE you the son of the landlord of the "Wild Boar"?—Yes.

6978. Are you the person who made out for Mrs. Halliday, the last Witness, one of her bills?—I did.

28.

6979. Just tell us, as near as you can recollect, how you made out the bill which you made out for her?—Mrs. Halliday came down to our house on the Thursday night after the election, that was the 19th. Her husband and her cannot write, neither of them. She says, "Would I make a note out for her." I said, "I had no objections;" "What are the particulars of the note?" "Well," she says, "there was 17 weeks' rent, at half-a-crown a week, that is 1*l.* 17*s.* 6*d.*" I says, "What else?" "Well," she says, "on the day of the election there was 4*l.* 15*s.*"; I says, "What was that for?" she says, "It was for eating, ale, tobacco and cigars, for the committee-men." So I wrote it down to that effect, and I said, "Is that right?" and she says, "Yes," and she told me that she took the note—

6980. I did not ask that; do you know James Ainsworth?—Yes.

6981. He is a voter, is he not?—Yes.

6982. Did you see him at all about his vote, or hear him canvassed?—No, I never canvassed him, but Hezekiah Bridges and Charles Sharp waited on him.

6983. Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] Were you present?—No.

6984. Mr. Price.] Did you canvass John Clayton?—Yes.

6985. Whom did he promise to vote for?—John Clayton promised me for Ripley.

6986. Mr. Baron Martin.] You were a canvasser for Mr. Ripley, then?—Yes.

6987. Mr. Price.] You canvassed John Clayton; how did he vote?—He voted for Messrs. Forster and Miall.

[The Witness withdrew.

DAVID MITCHELL, sworn; Examined by Mr. Waddy.

D. Mitchell. 6988. ARE you a Machine Comber, living at 369, Bolton-road?—Yes.

6989. Are you a voter?—Yes.

6990. And were you on Forster and Miall's committee?—Yes.

6991. At the "Spinkwell Inn"?—Yes.

6992. Did you go to committee meetings on the night before the election?—Yes.

6993. Did you get your glass of ale when you went?—Yes, I got a glass of ale.

6994. Did you ever pay for any ale there?—I paid for myself sometimes.

6995. Did you always?—No, not always.

6996. Do you know who it was that did pay for it?—No, I do not; a man, perhaps, would come and look round, and pay upon five or six; he would put money down for a glass a-piece for those committee-men, and they brought the beer in, and took the money up.

6997. And you did not know who it was?—No, I did not;—it was not always one; sometimes it was one, and sometimes another of them.

6998. Was there a place called the "Prospect Inn"?—Yes.

6999. Was that a committee-room of Forster and Miall?—Yes.

7000. And the "Canal Tavern" also?—Yes.

7001. Were you a committee-man at either the "Prospect Inn" or the "Canal Tavern"?—No, I do not know that I was; I only had my name down at the "Spinkwell Inn," that I know of.

7002. When you were at the "Prospect Inn" and the "Canal Tavern," did you get beer there?—Yes, I got a glass.

7003. Did you pay for it?—No.

7004. Do you know who did?—No, I do not know who did; some one came in and paid for four or five glasses, as many as there was of us; I do not know who they were.

7005. Do you know a man called Henry Smith?—Yes.

7006. Was he a canvasser?—No, I cannot say he was; I do not know.

7007. Did he come to your committee-room at the "Spinkwell Inn"?—Yes, he looked in sometimes.

7008. He was a man that worked at Rowse's machine shops, I think?—Yes, he do.

7009. On the polling day did you go at seven o'clock in the morning to Halliday's?—Yes; I went to my work first, and there was no work, so I went right from there to Halliday's, to go down along with the rest to give my vote.

7010. Before you voted did you have breakfast at Halliday's?—Yes; I got two cups of coffee, and a bit of beef and cake.

7011. After you had got your breakfast did you go to the "Fox and Goose"?—I went past there; I did not call in; I went past the door.

7012. Was the "Fox and Goose" the central committee-room for that district?—Yes; I understood it was.

7013. Did you do any work during that day for the election?—I went down to see about a man coming to vote, but I did not get to see him; some one went into the mill and asked for him, and he said he could not come with me.

7014. You went to look after one voter?—Yes, him and two or three more.

7015. Was that all the work you did that day for the election?—Yes, it was.

7016. Did you pay for your breakfast in the morning yourself?—No, I did not.

7017. Did you see anybody else pay for it?—No, I did not; nor I did not hear no one order it.

7018. It was ready set there when you got in?—Yes, it was; I was going to come out and get my own breakfast in my own house.

[The Witness withdrew.

ELIZABETH AMIEL, sworn; Examined by Mr. Price.

E. Amiel. 7019. WERE you the barmaid at the "Royal Hotel"?—Yes.

7020. Are you now?—Yes.

7021. Were you there on the day of the election, employed as barmaid?—Yes.

7022. Was that a committee-house of Forster and Miall?—Yes.

7023. What time in the morning was the house opened, and the committee come there?—About seven o'clock.

7024. How many came at first?—I cannot say.

7025. As near as you can say, were there 20 or 30 there?—Perhaps about 20.

7026. Did they have breakfast there?—No.

7027. Did they have any refreshments during the day there?—They had.

7028. What had they?—Sandwiches, beer, and coffee.

7029. By whom had they been ordered?—I believe by Mr. Cannon.

7030. How

7030. How many did he order for, do you know?—For 70 or 80.

7031. Do you know whether they were persons who were voters, or not?—I do not.

7032. Was that a house where they presented tickets?—Yes.

7033. And did you make up the accounts from the tickets?—I did not make up the accounts.

7034. Who made them up?—Mrs. Fox's son-in-law.

7035. And what did Cannon do to it; did he sign it, do you know?—I do not know.

7036. Mr. Baron Martin.] You merely were the barmaid, and you supplied the things; you did not make up the accounts?—No, my Lord.

Mr. Price.] Now I ask my learned friend to produce the accounts from the "Royal Hotel."

Cross-examined by Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.

7037. I believe the central committee sat at your house, did they not; or a committee sat at your house?—Yes.

7038. Did you hear Mrs. Fox tell them that they were not worth keeping; that they drank nothing?—She did not tell them, but she has said so; they spent nothing till the day of the election.

Re-examined by Mr. Price.

7039. They spent nothing till the day of the election, I suppose, and then there was beer?—Yes, but not much.

Mr. Price.] The bill of the "Royal Hotel" amounts to 3*l*. 15*s*. for refreshments on that day; 23 cups of coffee, and 131 glasses of beer on the morning of the poll, besides 100 sandwiches.

[The Witness withdrew.

EDWARD NOON, sworn; Examined by Mr. Waddy.

7040. ARE you an oyster dealer, living in Pickard's-court?—Yes.

7041. On the morning of the polling day, or about the middle of the day, did you meet two gentlemen called Smith?—Yes.

7042. Are they manufacturers in Thornton-road?—Yes.

7043. Did you go into the "Fitzgerald Arms" beer-house with them?—Yes.

7044. Did you go into the committee-room?—I did not go into the committee-room with them.

7045. Where did you go into?—I just stood by the bar side.

7046. And did you get some ale?—I had two glasses of beer.

7047. Did you pay for it?—No.

7048. Do you know who paid for it?—I cannot say; but the landlady said she would fill it. I expect it was understood so that they paid for it; I had two glasses on it.

7049. While you were there were those two gentlemen still with you that came with you there?—They was still in the house.

7050. Did they ask you to do anything?—They never asked me to do nothing; they asked me to ride in a trap, and go and vote; that is what they said to me; and I said "No," I would go a shorter way, and I would go Change-street way.

7051. Whom did they ask you to vote for?—Well, the cry was for Mr. Edward Miall and Mr. Forster.

7052. Did either of those gentlemen say whom you were to vote for?—No, but the other parties with them axed me to go with them in the trap and to vote for Forster and Miall.

7053. Was there a trap standing at the door?—There was two.

7054. Did you go into any room at any time that day at that hotel?—No; once I left I did not go a second time that day.

7055. Were you in any rooms at all?—I was not in no rooms at all; but just as I stood by the counter side.

7056. Was there ale on the counter?—Yes, there was ale, or I could not get none of it.

7057. Were other people drinking there?—Yes, many of them; but I could not tell who they was.

7058. Did you see any other persons eating or drinking there?—No, I cannot say that I did.

7059. Do you know a man called Handy Clasby?—Yes, I know Handy Clasby.

7060. He was there?—Yes, he was there at the present time I was there; but he was not eating nothing.

7061. Was he drinking?—I dare say he was a drinking at the counter side.

7062. Do you know the Odd Fellows' Hall, in Thornton-road?—Yes, well.

7063. Was it a Forster and Miall committee-room?—Yes.

7064. Did you go into that committee-room before the election?—Yes, many a time.

7065. When you were there was drinking going on?—They was sitting down as usual; I did not see any extra drinking, but there was drinking.

7066. And smoking?—Yes.

7067. Did you get anything to drink?—No, I got no beer. There was a gentleman there who was accustomed to buy oysters from me, and he always gave me a glass of whiskey.

7068. What was his name?—I do not know his name.

7069. Before the election were you at Hanley's house, the "Robin Hood"?—Yes.

7070. And was there any beer supplied there?—Yes, I seed plenty of beer.

7071. Did you go into the room upstairs?—Yes, I went upstairs.

7072. Was there any speaking going on?—There was plenty of speaking going on and cheering.

7073. And was there ale being drunk there?—Yes; I could see that there was plenty; I drank none of it.

7074. What was the speaking about?—I could not really tell.

7075. Was it about the election?—Yes, it was about the election, for Mr. Forster and Miall.

Mr. Baron Martin.] This has been proved over and over again; and, as I understand, my brother Ballantine does not dispute it.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] I admit it, my Lord.

Mr. Baron Martin.] He disputes the effect of it, but not the facts.

Mr. Price.] I wish to show to your Lordship that this treating was not restricted to the Irish merely, but was in every ward.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] We have sent our bills and vouchers in; and whether it was legal or illegal is a matter for your Lordship to decide, but my learned friend is now only proving our bills.

The Court adjourned for a short time.

ROBERT HALTON, sworn; Examined by Mr. Price.

R. Halton.

7076. You keep the "Bricklayers' Arms"?—Yes.

7077. Your house was on both sides?—Yes, it was.

7078. You were a neutral whilst it was a house for Forster and Miall; had you any bill against Forster and Miall's committee?—Yes, I had.

7079. How much was it?—One pound two shillings and sixpence.

7080. How often did they meet there?—They met there one night a full company; the other nights the committee men kept coming one after another, and one or two, and they looked at the books and such like that night and the next night or two besides.

7081. You charged 1 l. 2 s. 6 d.; what did you charge that for?—I charged it because there was damage to a decanter, and it was for ale and tobacco and the rooms.

7082. Were you paid anything?—I was paid 1 l.; I went down to get paid it all, and they made a bit of ifs and afs; I wanted the money, that is what I wanted, and they made ifs and afs, and said, "No, it was not right;" nothing was right for them; and so I met one of the committee-men again; he was John Haley, and he says, "I will go down with you;" and he comes back, and he goes down with me, and he was just the same and made neither one thing nor t'other of them. He meets me the next day, and tells me that I shall be paid. "Give me till night, and I will see that thou art paid, but," he says, "I cannot get the whole; Thursday I shall have to go to Allerton for to get it, not before Thursday;" and he says it was not worth while to go to Allerton on purpose. He goes on Thursday, and meets this man a-going into the warehouse; I did not ask the man's name; if I had he would not have told me.

7083. Who was this man who said about Allerton?—John Haley.

7084. Was he a Forster and Miall man?—Yes, he was.

7085. He was a committee-man?—Yes, he was a committee-man.

7086. He petitioned against Mr. Ripley?—Yes; so then he goes on Thursday and meets this man, and he says, "Oh, John, I know what you want, but," he says, "I have no change, nobbut a sovereign." He says, "I have no change but a sovereign;" and John said, "Well, give me that sovereign and then you can get the rest after." He brings me this sovereign right straight, and gives me this sovereign, and he says, "I will have a glass of the best ale;" and I said, "Well, John, whenever thou gets t'other brass thou can stick to it."

Cross-examined by Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.

7087. When was this that you got this sovereign?—Let us see; it was nine days after the election.

7088. After which election?—After the borough election.

7089. Which do you mean, the municipal election or the other?—No, I mean the late borough election; it was nine days after the borough election.

7090. Can you tell me who it was who paid you that money?—John Haley.

7091. Tell me when you provided those things for which you were paid?—I cannot tell you what was the time, because I never took no particular notice.

7092. It was long before the 2nd of November?—Yes, it was long before the election day; but if I might take the liberty it was after the election day that I got paid.

7093. I agree with his Lordship, that you are perfectly to be relied upon; the provisions were supplied?—There was no provisions in that.

7094. Then the beer and tobacco?—Beer and baccy was all.

7095. When you applied, were you told that it was Mr. Salt's affair?—No, I was not; because Salt's affair paid me every halfpenny; because when they came in I said I would not trust none of them upon it.

Re-examined by Mr. Price.

7096. This John Haly who you said might stick to the half-crown if he got it, does he live at 46, Sun-street?—He lives at Sun-street, but I am sure I cannot remember the number.

[The Witness withdrew.]

Mr. Price.] Then I must ask for John Haley's return to the Forster and Miall committee of this bill. I want to show that this is not, as I understand, a thing which has been returned as amongst the vouchers prepared for the election auditor.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] We have returned 1 l. 5 s. for the use of the rooms; Haley's room is not the "Bricklayers' Arms"; that is quite another place. We have no other.

Mr. Price.] No doubt Forster and Miall had a committee there, and that purports to be for the hire of the rooms. Now, I call for the bill for the refreshments.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] There is none.

Mr. Baron Martin.] I think it is likely enough that it is an independent concern.

Mr. Price.] Then, my Lord, I must ask Halton whether he made any charge for the rooms. I understood him to say that he made no charge for the rooms at all.

Mr. Baron Martin.] He said that the bill was for ale, tobacco, and the rooms.

ROBERT PEEL, sworn; Examined by Mr. Waddy.

7097. ARE you the landlord of the "Great Northern" hotel?—Yes.

7098. It was formerly called, I believe, the "Old Farm House" inn?—Yes.

7099. Had you a Forster and Miall committee room at your house?—Yes, I had.

7100. Had they a committee every Wednesday night?—They had a committee every Wednesday night, and a general meeting on the Thursday night.

7101. Who were the persons who had the management of those committee meetings; who was in the chair?—The chairmn was called Phillips, and the secretary was called Taylor.

7102. Did Mr. Joseph Boothroyd attend those meetings?—Occasionally.

7103. Was your's the central house for the ward?—It was the largest meeting in that ward; but the central meeting was at the "Golden Lion."

7104. Do you know whether Mr. Boothroyd was chairman at the "Golden Lion"?—I do not; I never was there.

7105. On the day before the polling, did Mr. Taylor, whom you have mentioned, come to you and give an order for refreshments?—On the Saturday night before the polling, a little before 11.

7106. What ward are you in?—The south ward.

7107. Will you be good enough to tell us exactly what took place between you and Taylor with regard to those refreshments that were supplied on the polling day?—On the Saturday night I was ill in bed with rheumatics; but he came a little before 11 o'clock to consult my wife about refreshments.

7108. Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] Did you hear this?—No; I was in bed with rheumatics.

7109. Mr. Waddy.] Tell us what you and he said?—On the Monday morning he came to me and said he had been to order refreshments on the Saturday night, and I was to provide for 400 people.

7110. Mr. Baron Martin.] Who said that?—Mr. Taylor, the secretary of the committee, came to my house; it was on the Monday morning; he came to order refreshments for 400, and he told my wife, on the Saturday night, he would see she was paid.

7111. Mr. Waddy.] Confine yourself to the conversation between yourself and Taylor on Monday?—He came and gave back the order to me; he wanted us to provide refreshments for 60. My wife was out then buying the refreshments, and I said I could not give my answer till she came in, because I did not know what she had bought. He then went away, and directly he had gone my wife came in.

7112. Were there three men on the committee acting there; William Robinson, Noble, and Mitchell?—Yes.

7113. Were they committee-men and voters?—Mitchell was a voter, and I believe he was a committee-man as well; he used to attend the meeting on Thursday evening.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] We admit all this; my learned friend need not labour this.

7114. Mr. Waddy (to the Witness).] Had you 28.

any conversation with them with regard to the 60?—Yes.

7115. And what took place?—They said that 60 was not enough for their ward, and they went down to Mr. Boothroyd to see him about the refreshments, and Mr. Boothroyd sent word back by them to say—

7116. You must not tell us that; but you saw them after they had seen Mr. Boothroyd?—Yes; they said Mr. Boothroyd told them to tell my wife that whatever she had bought she was to cook, and he would see she was paid for it.

7117. How much was actually cooked?—A hind-lift of beef and two hams.

7118. And how many persons were there to partake of that?—We delivered out with tickets better than 120. I cannot say exact to one.

7119. Were the tickets like that (handing a ticket to the Witness)?—Yes.

7120. Do you know anything at all about whether the persons that had those things were voters or not?—I do not.

7121. Did you hear anything at all about their voting while they were in the house getting refreshments?—They came for refreshments. I was in the bar, and I did not bother myself much with them. I delivered the refreshments to them. I took the tickets and delivered them the refreshments.

7122. Who was it that engaged your room?—A man of the name of Laycock.

7123. When it was first of all engaged, did you see that (handing a paper to the Witness)?—Yes; that is for the committee-room down stairs.

Mr. Avery.] This is "Bradford" borough election, 1868, September 28th, 1868, 'Farm House' inn, of Mr. Robert Peel, Wakefield-road, is engaged as paid committee-room from this date, namely, September 1st, until the election, for the sum of 2 l., John Henry Wade, agent for election expenses. (signed) Thomas Lund, secretary."

7124. Mr. Waddy.] When those people got refreshments, how was the thing done; was there somebody in the room to issue tickets, or where were the tickets produced?—They were produced in the committee-room.

7125. What was the amount of your bill for that day alone?—10 l.

7126. The bill was 20 l. upon the whole, and 10 l. was for refreshments?—Yes; 10 l. was for refreshments, 8 l. for the large room, and 2 l. for the committee-room.

Cross-examined by Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.

7127. You got paid 20 l., did you?—I took 17 l. I could not come to an arrangement with them about the large room. They promised to see me paid for the large room, and I was at them several times before the election took place, so that I might have no bother with them afterwards; because there was nothing spent in the house, excepting once there was a bottle of ale took up into the large room. There was 160 people there and not a penny spent.

7128. I believe that you represented that to Mr. Wade as a great grievance, did you not?—I had a deal of bother to get my money. I had been to great expense in gas and cleaning up the rooms, rooms, and such as that, and I wanted some recompense for my labour and expense myself. There was no encouragement whatever, not in reference to the house.

R. Peel.

7129. You could not get anything?—I got 17 l.

7130. You got 17 l.: that is 10 l. for what you actually supplied, and I believe he gave you something extra for the room?—There was 2 l. for the committee-room.

7131. Two pounds was the agreed sum and 5 l. was extra?—2 l. was the agreed sum for the committee-room, and 5 l. for the large room.

7132. Mr. Baron Martin.] As I understand, you put this forward on the ground that those people who came to your house did not consume as much as you expected they would?—No, they did not, my Lord.

7133. Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] I believe you told them that you could not understand it at all; they did not drink anything?—I did not understand it. I said if I had known they would have done as they did, I would have turned them out of the house long before the election.

Re-examined by Mr. Price.

7134. They did not drink, and then at the end they refused to pay?—That was it.

7135. It was a handsome lot; how far is your house from the Royal?—Perhaps 50 or 60 yards; I cannot tell to 10 yards.

[The Witness withdrew.

JOHN MITCHELL, sworn; Examined by Mr. Price.

J. Mitchell.

7136. Do you live at 74, Frederick-street?—Yes.

7137. Were you one of Foster and Miall's canvassers?—Yes.

7138. Do you keep a store opposite the "Great Northern" hotel?—I am a tripe dealer, wholesale and retail, and a pensioner from Her Majesty's service.

7139. Do you feed upon your own tripe?—Upon the tripe broth.

7140. Were you on any committee?—I was on Foster and Miall's committee.

7141. Where?—At the "Farm House" inn.

7142. How many were your brother committee-men?—Somewhere about 60 strong, or 70.

7143. If they were all as big as you, you must have had a biggish room, I suppose?—I don't know; I have had hard work to get up here, I can tell you.

7144. Did you hear that there were 60 men, and that breakfast was ordered for 400?—Yes, but we contradicted that.

7145. How low did they get it down at last?—Sixty, Mr. Taylor ordered afterwards.

7146. And were there 60 there?—There was between 60 and 70, and then there was the messengers and non-voters to assist us.

7147. In eating, do you mean?—No, on the polling day.

7148. But the 60 for whom breakfast was ordered, were voters?—Committee-men.

7149. They were voters?—Not for voters; for committee-men, and messengers, and non-voters; that was our proper orders to go by from the central committee. Mr. Boothroyd gave them the order.

7150. How many of the 60 were voters?—There might have been about 50 that were committee men.

Cross-examined by Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.

7151. Do you remember the morning of the election?—Yes, very well.

7152. Where were you at about 9 o'clock?—I was in the passage of the "Farm House" inn.

7153. Was a visit paid you at the "Farm House" inn, by anybody?—Yes, by about 50 or 60 men. I believe they was all Irish.

7154. You did not often have a visit of so many at a time?—No, we had not.

7155. What did they want?—It being the central committee room of the south ward, they flew to there, because they had been refused refreshments at other places.

7156. When they came there, what did they want?—They thought that I was a very conspicuous man, and they thought I was the landlord.

7157. From your appearance they thought that you must have been a publican?—Yes, and I told them I was not. They wanted some ale and something to eat, and I told them there was nothing allowed whatever, excepting to committee men, and messengers, and non-voters.

7158. How did they like that information; what did they say or do then?—There was a crowd outside, and the tap-room was full; and there was not a pint of ale on the tap-room table nor yet a glass; and then they said they would be damned if they would not go where there was plenty, and we was a damned ugly lot, and a dry lot.

7159. Was any place mentioned?—Yes, they mentioned Sam Abel's; they would go down to Sam Abel's, and they would get plenty there. They had nearly all Foster and Miall's cards in their hands, from what I could see, and they continued that all the day, coming by sections merely to get drink and something to eat; but there was no person got anything to eat there, except he was a committee-man, a messenger, or a non-voter.

7160. Mr. Baron Martin.] No person at all?—No. I was there, and I seed the chairman very particular. When a man went up for a ticket the chairman looked at the man's name in the book to see if he was a committee-man, or a messenger, or a non-voter; and he was very strict.

7161. Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] What then; if they found that he was a messenger or if they believed that he was a messenger, were there some refreshments given?—There was a ticket given him for coffee. If he chose coffee he could get a ticket for coffee, and a ticket for a sandwich.

7162. I believe that sometimes three tickets were issued to one person?—The three tickets would be a cup of coffee, or a glass of ale, if he chose, during the day, and a sandwich. I got nothing but a cup of coffee and a sandwich all the day. That is all that ever I got for canvassing two months and working very hard for Mr. Forster.

7163. Mr. Baron Martin.] That was all you got for the whole election?—Yes, for canvassing or being on the committee. I employed a man in my business. I gave him 6 s. a week, and meat, washing and lodging, to assist me in my business, while I was canvassing for Mr. Forster; and I would do the same again.

7164. Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] You never got anything except that?—I never got nothing.

7165. Mr. Baron Martin.] Am I to understand you that all those pains were taken at this house not to give any refreshment or ticket for refreshment to voters?—Yes, it was a very strict order; a very strict order from the committee.

7166. Was it carried out?—Yes; it was carried out thoroughly. There was not a more respectable committee sat nowhere. I have been on a great deal of committees, but we was respectable, and we held it up very respectable, and we kept to our colours.

7167. Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] And you would not give anything?—We never gave nothing. Mr. Boothroyd used to visit us at nights; sometimes twice a week, and sometimes once a week; and it was his last words out of his mouth to be very particular to keep our hands clean, and likewise the chairman and all. The chairman every night when we parted, gave us that order, that we was to keep our hands clean whatever we did.

7168. You say you canvassed actively for two months?—Yes.

7169. As far as you were concerned did you literally obey those orders?—I did; and if anybody asked me for anything I told him that my orders was that we was not to give nothing. I went to the chairman somewhere about 12 o'clock; we had a great number there at 12, besides what we had at nine, on the polling-day, and I went to Mr. Phillips and I said "Mr. Phillips it is a great pity to see all these men going away; there is a lot yonder wants some ale and wants something to eat or to drink, and they are going away." He says, "It is no matter Mitchell, obey orders strictly, not to give anything, let them go."

7170. I may take it that you have been an active supporter of Mr. Forster, and have known him for a great number of years?—A great number of years; I was bred and born in Bradford, and I have been 22 years a soldier in Her Majesty's service.

7171. You can tell us this: Mr. Forster had been member on two former occasions?—Yes, he had; and I always supported him as a candidate.

7172. I dare say you can tell me this: I believe that Mr. Forster's election was never in any doubt for a single moment?—Never; never in the world. He was always highly honoured by all parties.

7173. I mean during the day of the polling?—No, we have not the least doubt. We canvassed nearly 200 above Mr. Ripley in our canvass books in the South ward.

7174. I presume that the real difficulty in the case was Mr. Miall?—Yes, it was; they was all Miall men, when we went the night before, that was the Monday night, our orders was from the chairman to visit all our men that we had canvassed to see if they was firm to their word, and they was so on the Monday night, but it turned all over at about 9 or 10 o'clock on the polling morning. They wanted something for refreshments, something to eat, and they could not get it. Ours was the central committee-room for the south ward, and we lost them by not giving them something to eat and drink. They went in and bundled right down 50 men at once to Ripley. The tap-room was full, and it was crowded all outside, but we lost the whole of them because one of them said "Damn them for a dry lot; they are a hungry lot; have nothing to eat or drink; let us go where there is plenty." There was one occasion when there was three Irishmen came, but we did not know where they came from that bid for our room 10 l. for the last fortnight to turn over the other side. The landlord was good enough; he was a stranger in the town; he had only come a month previous to that; but he would not do nothing of the kind; he stuck true to us though he was a stranger to us. He was only just got into the house, but he stuck true to us though we spent nothing. Nobody called there at night except me and Robinson, and I used to get a bottle of cider. I have been a teetotaller four years, and I was ashamed to go out of the house without spending something. They all used to walk straight out as they came in. I never seed a glass of ale on that there committee table during all the time I was there.

7175. Did you see Mr. Forster at all during the progress of the election?—Many a time.

7176. Did you learn from him what his wishes were upon the subject?—Yes.

Mr. Price.] I do not implicate Mr. Forster.

Mr. Baron Martin.] As far as this man's evidence goes, and as far as this "Farm-house" is concerned, the evidence is, in truth, one way.

7177. Mr. Serjeant Ballantine (to the Witness).] Do you know Mr. Mumford at all?—Yes.

7178. Is he in court?—Yes; he is there (pointing to Mr. Mumford).

7179. Just tell me whether you have had any interview with this person?—He sent for me to the "Farm House", and he said, "Have you been on the committee, Mitchell," he says, "at this house?" I says, "Yes, I have." He says, "You was on Miall and Forster's committee." I says, "Yes." He says, "Are you not very partial," he says, "to Mr. Miall and Forster?" I said, "Yes, I am very partial who I am working for?" "Well," he says, "now during the time when you had committee meetings here, did you not used to come down and blow on?" "Blow on, sir," I said; "what do you mean?" He says, "Getting plenty of ale, and so on." I said, "No; there was never nothing of the kind."

7180. Did you see him afterwards?—No; I never seed him afterwards.

7181. Did he say anything about Wakefield to you?—No; he said he should subpoena me to say I got refreshments, and I said, "I have only had one sandwich and a cup of coffee. That was all as ever I had;" and he said he would subpoena me, and make me attend the court.

7182. That was all that passed?—That was all that passed.

7183. Was there nothing said about Wakefield gaol?—No, there was nothing said about Wakefield gaol.

J. Mitchell.

J. Mitchell.

30 January
1869.

Re-examined by Mr. Price.

7184. Then he did not offer you 100 l. for your evidence?—He offered me nothing? If he had, I should have taken it.

7185. Are you a Bradford man?—Yes; bred and born.

7186. You are a man putting yourself forward as a man of truth. Do you mean to say to the people in this big court, that if you had been offered money for your evidence, you would have taken it?—Not to turn over. I did take 5s. off of him when he gave me the subpoena.

7187. With the subpoena?—Yes.

7188. But do you mean to say, that if he had offered you money you would have taken it?—I should have taken it.

7189. What for?—That depends upon what he gave it me for. If he had offered it me deliberately—or you either, if you was to meet me, I would take money from you.

7190. I should be extremely sorry to meet you either deliberately or undeliberately; but, tell me this: those 60 were on your committee?—Rather better, I believe.

7191. Fifty were voters, you say?—Fifty were voters, or nearly about 50.

7192. Fifty ate and drank at Mr. Forster's expense on the morning of the poll?—There was more than 50.

7193. But, voters I mean?—They was committee men.

7194. Voters?—There was no voter, except he was on the committee.

7195. But they were committee men that were voters?—Yes; I said so before. I said he was obliged to be on the committee to get a sandwich. He could not get it without a ticket, and the ticket was a check for it.

7196. Therefore, to get refreshments at Mr. Forster's expense, you were obliged to go through the sham of being put down upon the committee?—No, it was a fact, not sham. There was no sham; nothing about it. We did it straight forward.

7197. What did you do for it?—I worked very hard for two months.

7198. Tell me what voters you got?—Am I to answer that, my Lord?

7199. Mr. Baron Martin.] Answer it if you like?—I have no occasion to answer to all the voters.

7200. Mr. Price.] You say that there were only 60 got breakfast, but you ordered for 400?—No, I did not order for 400. I got the order, and there was only 60 ordered for afterwards.

Mr. Baron Martin.] The landlord stated that he had been called upon to provide, on Saturday, breakfast for 400; but that, upon the following Monday morning, one of the persons connected with the election came and said that it was only for 60; but the landlord's wife had gone out to purchase provisions, and I suppose he objected, and said that after the order had been given, it was too late to stop it.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] The truth being, that there were 400 tickets issued, and they were not aware that three would go to each man.

7201. Mr. Price (to the Witness).] Did you go to Mr. Boothroyd and say that it was absurd to talk of 60: that there would be four times 60 wanted?—Not four times 60. I told Mr. Boothroyd that it was hardly sufficient to order for 60 of us, because there was messengers employed, and non-voters to assist us. That is what I told Mr. Boothroyd.

7202. Mr. Price (through the Court).] Where was this other committee? How near to you was the next committee?—About 50 yards, at the "Royal."

7203. What was the name of that committee?—The Royal.

7204. Do you know or not how many were on the committee at the "Royal"?—I do not.

7205. Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] Was it in another street and in another district?—It was the same street, but above.

[The Witness withdrew.]

CHRISTOPHER WALBANK, sworn; Examined by Mr. Waddy.

C. Walbank.

7206. Do you live at 22, Montgomery-street?—Yes.

7207. Were you at the "Mowbray Arms," in Manningham Ward with Mr. Wetherall once before the election?—On the day of the election.

7208. Was there beer being supplied at the time you were there to people in the house?—Yes.

7209. Was it a Forster and Miall house?—Yes.

7210. Did you go into the committee-room?—No.

7211. Did you get any beer?—No.

7212. Where were you?—In the front room on the left hand side of the door.

7213. How many people did you see?—There was only I and Wetherall at the time when we went in.

7214. Do you remember anybody coming in and ordering some beer while you were there?—Yes.

7215. Did he pay for it?—No.

7216. How came it that he did not pay for it?

—He called for a glass of beer, and the landlord brought it. He says, "Put this down to Forster and Miall committee." He said it was all right; and the man sat and supped his beer, and then he walked out.

7217. Did you drink any beer there at all?—No.

7218. Had you liquor of any sort?—Yes.

7219. What was it?—Whiskey.

7220. Did you pay for it?—Yes.

7221. When did you pay for it at the time?—At the time I got it.

7222. After that, did another person come into the room and make a speech?—I do not remember any speech-making.

7223. Do you remember his telling anybody in the room to do something?—They came in with the Miall party; it would be four o'clock then.

7224. When they came in, do you remember somebody standing up and telling them all to do something?—I cannot recollect.

7225. Filling their glasses; do you remember anything anything about filling glasses?—They filled us three glasses of whiskey.

7226. Who did?—The landlord; he brought the three glasses of whiskey in. There was I and Wetherall, and another party came in that Wetherall knew, but I did not know him. We all three got a glass of whiskey each, and the landlord said it was to be put down to Forster and Miall's committee. My friend Wetherall says, "Yes," and he walked out; and in about 10 minutes or a quarter of an hour he came back, and he said, "Now, gentlemen, you are not Forster and Miall's men, and you must pay for this whiskey." I said, "Well, we did not ask you for the whiskey; you brought it in." And he said, "Was it to be put down to Forster and Miall's committee?" And my friend said, "Yes;" and he put it down. He came in, as I told you, when Miall's party had given him the notice that he was not Forster and Miall's men; he came back, and says, "Now, gentlemen, you must pay for this whiskey." So I stood a minute or two, and I said, "We did not ask you for the whiskey;" but at all events I paid him for three glasses of whiskey.

7227. Did you see a man called John Cooke, there?—I do not know the name.

[The Witness withdrew.]

JOHN RAYNER, sworn; Examined by Mr. Price.

7228. Do you live at No. 796, Little Horton-lane?—Yes.

7229. Is that in little Horton Ward?—Yes.

7230. Are you a voter?—Yes.

7231. Were you canvassed by any party?—Yes.

7232. What was the party that canvassed you first?—Crosland.

7233. Who did he canvass you for?—For Miall and Forster.

7234. How did you vote?—For Ripley and Forster.

7235. On the morning of the polling day, did any of your friends call upon you at your house?—Yes, there was two.

7236. Barrowclough; was he one?—Yes.

7237. And Joseph Naylor?—Yes.

7238. What time did they call?—I cannot state positively.

7239. About seven?—Seven o'clock, perhaps.

7240. Where did you go with them?—To the "New House at Home."

7241. Was that a Miall and Forster house?—Yes.

7242. What did you do when you got to the "New House at Home"?—Had a little breakfast.

7243. Did you pay for it?—No.

7244. Did you see other people having breakfast?—There was another man besides me, but it was over when I got there.

7245. What was over?—The table was full of mucky pots.

7246. Did it look as if people had been breakfasting?—It looked as if there had been a lot of men getting their breakfast.

7247. What did you see on the table; did you see any food lying about?—There was some plates with some ham or beef, and some bread.

7248. There was another man getting breakfast, you say?—Yes, there was another man getting breakfast at the same time as me, but I did not know him; I did not notice him.

7249. When you went away did you see any men about the door?—Yes, there was a great many.

7250. Did you know whether they were voters or not?—They mostly went down the road, you know, to the polling booth.

7251. You saw them walking down the road to the polling booth?—Yes.

7252. Did you go down to vote yourself?—Yes.

7253. With the lot?—I should be 30 or 40 yards in front of the people going down at the same time as me.

7254. Did you vote then, or not till later in the day?—In the afternoon.

7255. Why did not you vote at once?—Because I could not get in.

7256. Were you asked to pay anything for your breakfast?—No.

7257. Did you hear anybody asked to pay anything for their breakfast?—No.

7258. You were not a committee-man?—No.

7259. Nor a canvasser?—No.

Cross-examined by Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.

7260. Did you vote for Mr. Ripley, or the other?—Ripley and Forster.

7261. Did you mean to vote in that way from the beginning?—When I was first before the election they thought I was a Miall and Forster man.

7262. You did not vote for Miall and Forster?—I did not mean to vote so; I said, if my mind did not alter, I should vote for Miall and Forster; but if any man suited me better I should change my mind.

7263. And you did change?—Yes.

7264. Barrowclough took you in here?—Yes.

7265. Who was the person that took you into the place where they had been breakfasting?—Barrowclough and Naylor; they came for me.

Re-examined by Mr. Price.

7266. Were Barrowclough and Naylor, Forster and Miall men?—Not as far as I know; I do not know who they voted for.

7267. Had you seen them at all during the election taking any part in the election, or canvassing, or anything of that kind?—No; I cannot say.

[The Witness withdrew.]

RICHARD STANDRING, sworn; Examined by Mr. Waddy.

7268. Do you know a public-house called the "New House at Home"?—I do.

7269. Where is that?—In Little Horton-lane.

28.

7270. At the time of the election was that a Forster and Miall committee-room?—I believe it was.

R. Standring

- R. Standring.* 7271. Did you go into that house before the election, about a week before the election?—I did.
- 30 January 1869. 7272. Did you see the landlord, Mr. Charles Hillam?—I did.
7273. And did you call for some beer?—I called for a glass of beer.
7274. Tell my Lord exactly what took place about it?—I went and called for a glass of beer, and I tendered the payment for the glass of beer; the landlord says, "No, you can have another if you want one, or two"; he said, "Who are you going to vote for?" and I said, "That is no business of yours, sir."
7275. Were there other people there?—There were several people in the house.
7276. Were they drinking?—They were drinking.
7277. Did any of them pay?—I never saw any beer paid for at time I was in there.
7278. How long were you there?—About five or ten minutes.
7279. Did you pay yourself?—No; I tendered payment, and he said he would not have it; it was paid for.
7280. Do you know who paid for it then?—I do not.
7281. You say that the landlord asked you about your vote; did anybody else there ask you about your vote?—No; only the landlord asked me who I was going to vote for, and I said that was no business of his.
- Cross-examined by Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.
7282. Then they gave you a glass of ale, did they?—I got the glass of beer before.
- [The Witness withdrew.]

ESTHER BRANNAN, sworn; Examined by Mr. Price.

- E. Brannan.* 7283. ARE you the wife of Michael Brannan, who keeps the "Labourers' Arms" in Silsbridge-lane?—Yes.
7284. Was your husband's room taken by anybody for a committee-room?—Yes.
7285. How long before the election?—About eight or nine weeks.
7286. Who by?—By Mr. Dracup and Mr. Robert Hird.
7287. On behalf of what candidates?—For Forster and Miall.
7288. Used Dracup to attend the committee meetings every night they had a meeting?—Yes.
7289. What was done about drinking when the committee met there?—There was a drop of beer sent upstairs to the committee-room.
7290. Every night?—Every night of the committee meetings.
7291. Who paid for it?—I cannot say; I know the names of three men that paid. I do not know who paid upstairs.
7292. Did Mr. Dracup ever pay you?—Yes, he did.
7293. How often?—He paid me the last week he was there 2s. 6d. for beer.
7294. Who were the others that paid, do you know?—Robert Hird and James Lancaster.
7295. Those were all you knew that paid?—That is all I knew that paid.
7296. How many used to meet on an average on committee nights; but, first of all, how did Hird and Lancaster and Dracup pay you?—Lancaster paid for two or three glasses in the bar for two or three women, and Hird paid for half-a-gallon or two upstairs.
7297. Did they pay on more than one occasion?—They paid as they got the beer.
7298. Who did?—Those men, and they paid upstairs according as they got the beer upstairs.
7299. Who paid it?—I cannot tell you who paid upstairs.
7300. How many men used to attend on the average?—There was also a room full every time they met.
7301. How many would that room hold?—It is a large room.
7302. Fifty or 60;—Yes, more than that.
7303. One hundred?—Yes, very near upon 100.
7304. All committee-men?—There was all sorts. There was other parties besides; the neighbours used to come in sometimes.
7305. How many used to be there of committee-men?—I am sure I cannot tell.
7306. Fifty or 60 on committee nights?—I cannot tell you how many committee-men.
7307. There were certain nights when the committee met, and they had a room for themselves, had they not?—They had the one room for the committee and other parties; they all were in the one room.
7308. Were there so many as 100 there?—Yes.
7309. And they had been up all the night?—They paid for beer every night they had been there.
7310. Mr. Baron Martin.] Am I to understand you that all the beer was paid for at the time; that you had no credit?—No, we had no credit? they paid for it as they got it.
7311. Then you had no bill at all?—No.
7312. Mr. Price.] How long did the committee stay there?—Perhaps two or three hours of a night.
7313. Had you been up and served the ale yourself?—I had not; I had always been down in the bar.
7314. Who received the money for it generally?—My husband received most, and all that I received was from those three men that paid in the bar.
7315. How much had they paid you at a time?—Dracup paid me 2s. 6d. for beer; James Lancaster paid for a few glasses for the women, and Robert Hird paid for one-half gallon or two upstairs; they gave the money to me, and I sent it upstairs.
7316. Mr. Baron Martin.] You had no bill at all; I am to understand that what they had was paid for at the time?—Yes.
- [The Witness withdrew.]

GEORGE INMAN, sworn; Examined by Mr. Waddy.

7317. Do you know a place called the "New Inn," in the Otley-road?—Yes I do; I live close by it.

7318. I believe it was once a Ripley's committee-room?—It was.

7319. After that it became a Forster and Miall committee-room?—Yes, both.

7320. Do you know a man of the name of George Brown?—Yes.

7321. Was he a Ripleyite or a Forster and Miallite?—A Forster and Miallite.

7322. Have you seen George Brown in the committee-room at this place, the "New Inn," Otley-road?—I have seen him in the tap-room; not in the committee-room.

7323. Did you see him there on the night of the nomination-day?—I saw him there two or three nights; I cannot exactly say what night; I did not take very particular notice; I did not expect being called upon to give an account of it.

7324. What did you see him do?—I see him coming and getting a glass of beer two or three nights. Then afterwards he went out to the bar as we come in.

7325. Was there a Forster and Miall committee-room there?—Yes, there was.

7326. Did you see the bills up outside the house?—There was bills up in the window.

7327. Do you remember a man of the name of Peacock coming to the "New Inn" when you were here?—I do.

7328. Do you recollect a conversation between Peacock and the landlord of the inn about hiring it for Forster?—I will remember it.

7329. Were you present when the room was hired for Forster and Miall?—I was present when they came about it.

7330. Who came about it?—There was Mr. Alfred Peacock, Samuel Tetley, and three or four more; there would be six or seven of them about it.

7331. Tell us what took place?—They gets a quart of ale when they came in; then they called for a second quart of ale, and when the second quart of ale came in Alfred Peacock said —

7332. Tell my Lord exactly what took place at the time the room was hired after the necessary preliminaries?—When the second quart of ale comes in Alfred Peacock says, "Thompson, have you promised your vote?" The landlord says, "Not exactly." Peacock says, "If you have not, we want a committee-room here." So Thompson says to him, "Well," he says, "My house is at liberty for all parties, and they are welcome to all."

7333. What took place about the room upstairs and the room down?—I cannot exactly say what took place about the room upstairs and the room down, but I said to Peacock that it was not altogether right them coming there when we had taken the house first for Ripley's committee.

7334. Mr. Baron Martin.] You were a Ripley man?—Yes.

7335. Mr. Waddy.] The Ripley room was upstairs, was it not?—We was sometimes upstairs and sometimes down; after that we took the room upstairs altogether; the landlord promised we should have a room upstairs to ourselves.

7336. What became of the room downstairs?—They had a back room downstairs.

28.

7337. Mr. Baron Martin.] Then there were two committee-rooms in the house?—Yes, there was.

7338. Mr. Waddy.] How long did the Forster and Miall's party continue in the house?—Perhaps three weeks about; they came once or twice a-week.

7339. Did they continue to have that room up to the time of the election?—No, they did not; they broke off about the time of Salt and Read, and Storey and Brazier."

7340. That is the municipal election?—Yes; it would be perhaps a week after that.

7341. Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] Was this a Salt affair or a municipal affair?—They wanted to take it for Forster and Miall.

7342. Mr. Waddy.] Had you during the time this was going on seen George Brown paying for anything there?—As I told you before, I seed him come in and get a glass of ale, and he went out to the bar and then beer came in in half gallon jugs.

7343. What was done with the beer that came in in half-gallon jugs?—It was drunk by the company.

7344. And did you get any of it?—I cannot say that ever I did.

7345. Did you see anybody who had it pay for it?—I know parties that did not get it.

7346. Did you see anybody pay for it at all?—No, I did not.

7347. When was it; the last time I mean?—I cannot say exactly.

7348. As near as you remember?—Some day or two before the election.

7349. Which election?—The borough election.

7350. After the municipal election?—Yes, a long while after the municipal election.

7351. Did you hear any particular name given to the beer?—I heard a party of the name of James Peacock say it was Miall beer; it was not Ripley beer.

Cross-examined by Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.

7352. Brown was the secretary of Salt and Read's committee?—Not there.

7353. What was he secretary to?—Not at the "New Inn."

7354. Was he general secretary, to your knowledge, of Salt and Read?—I do not know who was the general secretary.

7355. Do you know that he acted for Salt and Read?—I have heard he did, but I have not heard where at; I have heard that he took a certain part for Salt and Read, but where at I do not know, nor what part he did take.

7356. It became a Ripley house after the municipal election?—It was a Ripley house from the first to the end, one part of it, and then Miall and Forster for the other.

7357. But the Liberals went out after the municipal election, did they not?—No, they kept it on till the borough election, and after.

7358. But you just said that they went out after the municipal election?—I said the Miall and Forster lot went out after the municipal election.

7359. That is what I say, the Miall and Forster party went out after the municipal election?—

G. Inman. tion?—I understood that you was asking me about Ripley.

30 January
1869.

Re-examined by Mr. Price.

7360. During the time whilst the municipal election was going on it was a Forster and Miall house?—It was a Forster and Miall house, and a Ripley's and Storey's and Braziers.

7361. Who were they?—They was putting up for the town council.

7362. They were in opposition to Salt and Read?—They was.

7363. You had a jolly time of it; there were two parties in your house in the municipal and two parties in the borough election?—So there was at every public-house, in our ward, however.

7364. At every public-house in your ward there were all those four lots going on at the same time, were there?—Yes, there were.

7365. Mr. Baron Martin.] Do you mean that there were two committee-rooms in every house?—One committee-room was occupied one night for Ripley, and the other night for Storey and Brazier; Salt and Read had it occasionally along with Miall and Forster; one lot one night and another another.

7366. Mr. Price.] Were the same men who were on the committee for municipal purposes who belonged to one party or the other the same men who were the committee for the borough election?—They was.

7367. There never was such a time known in Bradford, I should think?—I never seed such a time.

[The Witness withdrew.

JOHN COCKCROFT, sworn; Examined by Mr. Price.

J. Cockcroft. 7368. You keep the "Airdale" Hotel, do you not?—Yes.

7369. That is in the east ward?—Yes.

7370. Was your house a Forster and Miall house, the head quarters?—Yes; it was the central house for the east ward.

7371. Did you vote yourself?—No, I did not.

7372. How long was your house, before the election, hired for Forster and Miall?—On the 18th of August they took the rooms.

7373. Had you a municipal party at your house as well?—Yes, I had.

7374. Was that the same party who came for Forster and Miall?—Partly, not all.

7375. A part of them were the same?—Yes.

7376. Who were you paid by; were you paid at the central committee-room?—Yes.

7377. Had you anything going on at the municipal election in the way of entertainment?—In what sense; I do not know what you mean.

7378. Eating and drinking?—Yes, we had.

7379. What were they, breakfasts or suppers, or what, that they had?—They were dinners; there was no breakfast provided, but dinners, teas, and suppers.

7380. Who partook of them?—I really cannot say.

7381. But were they committee men?—I am speaking of the municipal election.

7382. So am I speaking of the municipal election; were they the same men who were Forster and Miall's committee men?—Partly, not all of them.

7383. Who paid for all that?—Mr. George Brown, the secretary, paid me.

7384. Mr. Baron Martin.] Are you now speaking of the municipal or the borough election?—The municipal election, my Lord.

7385. Mr. Price.] Who is George Brown; was he a Forster and Miall man?—Yes.

7386. Did he belong to the committee?—I do not know whether he did or no.

7387. Where did you go to see him to get the money?—He paid me in my own house.

7388. Used he to attend the committee at your house?—For Salt and Read he did.

7389. And for Forster and Miall?—I will not say for Forster and Miall.

7390. Were you paid anything by a man of the name of Hood?—Yes, I was.

7391. Who was Hood?—I do not know; he is a manufacturer, or something of that sort.

7392. Was he a Forster and Miall man?—Yes he was.

7393. What did he pay for?—He paid for a supper.

7394. Were nearly all that were there for whom he paid you, or pretty nearly all, on Forster and Miall's committee?—I cannot say; I did not see them sit down at all.

7395. Nearly all?—I cannot say.

7396. Did you see them about the room at the time?—I cannot say; I never went into the room while they were sitting down at the table.

7397. Did Forster and Miall's committee keep your house up to the day of the election?—Yes; on the 18th I got paid.

7398. On the day of the election did you receive any orders about refreshments?—I did.

7399. Who from?—I got a verbal order from the chairman of the ward.

7400. Who is the chairman?—Joshua Pollard, the stuff merchant.

7401. Is that the gentleman who is called Captain Pollard?—No.

7402. Was he a Forster and Miall man?—Yes; Joshua Pollard was his name.

7403. He gave you an order for what?—He gave me a verbal order for refreshments to be supplied the next day to the polling clerks in his districts.

7404. Only to the poll clerks?—Yes; it was a verbal order.

7405. Whom did you provide for?—I cannot say in the aggregate; I had an order.

7406. I do not care about the aggregate, but about how many; what was your bill?—I think I provided for 80 or 100.

7407. They were not all poll clerks that that would be for?—They had to have two meals each; there was 40 of them on the order, poll clerks, and messengers, and what not.

7408. I want to know what the notes were; were there 40 poll clerks for that ward do you say?—That is as I understand the order.

7409. They told you they wanted refreshments for 40 poll clerks in that ward; how many polling places were there in the ward?—I do not know; I sent to two or three places.

7410. Mr. Baron Martin.] How much was your bill?—Our bill was 17*l.* 2*s.* 11*d.*, of which I had 1*l.* 5*s.*

7411. Mr. Price.] What was the 17*l.* for?—For refreshments.

4712. Did

7412. Did not the members of Messrs. Forster and Miall's committee partake of those refreshments?—Only very few.

7413. How many were on the committee altogether?—I cannot tell you that.

7414. As near as you can tell?—I cannot say. Sometimes there might be a dozen come to the committee-room, and sometimes more.

7415. How many was the largest number you have seen as being members of the committee?—There might be 20 or 24; there would not be more.

7416. In what rank of life were those half-dozen or so committee-men who came and breakfasted; were they working men, labourers, or gentlemen, like Mr. Pollard?—There was not no labourers whatever; nothing of that class at all.

7417. Were they labouring men?—No, I think not.

7418. What were they?—I believe Mr. Hood was one. I believe there was a Mr. Whalley one.

7419. What were the others?—I really cannot say; it is so long since that I do not remember who did partake of breakfast, but I know those two men did.

7420. Mr. Baron Martin.] What day was the breakfast?—The morning of the polling.

7421. Mr. Price.] Who were the others that partook of it; 17 l. is a largish sum; how many did you have to breakfast?—Thirty; but there was about 20 of them drivers of vehicles.

7422. Were they to drive the voters up?—I did not know their purpose. I expected that that was what they were employed for; they were all strangers to me.

7423. Did you get a written order?—Eventually I did.

7424. Where is it?—In my pocket.

7425. Let us have a look at it?—Here it is (handing the same to the learned counsel).

7426. "Bradford borough election; Messrs. Forster and Miall committee, Bradford, 1868. 50 a meal to night or to-morrow; 45 on night duty; one at 11; one meal at 3.21, at the booths; 40 drivers and clerks, two meals each; 30 poll clerks, two meals each; and 12 paid canvassers?—Yes, that is the bill.

7427. Were there hired conveyances to take the people up to the poll; did those drivers wear livery?—I cannot tell you that.

7428. You say drivers; do you mean to say that they were gentlemen's servants, or were they the ordinary cabmen of Bradford?—They appeared to be gentlemen's private conveyances.

7429. I am asking you about those drivers, whether they were Bradford men; tell me whether those were ordinary cab-drivers, or whether they looked like gentlemen's servants?—They looked like gentlemen's servants.

7430. In livery?—No, there was none in livery to my recollection.

7431. You mean to represent that there were 30 gentlemen's conveyances there?—I cannot say how many there were.

7432. Did the conveyances put up at your house?—No, they did not; they all met there in the morning, and they were told off to the different stations.

7433. Who told them off?—I really cannot say what the name of the man was just now.

7434. Were they private conveyances?—Yes.

7435. Will you swear that?—Yes.

7436. All of them?—Yes, all of them.

7437. None of them cabs?—Not to my recollection.

7438. How long did the refreshment go on at your house during that day?—It continued up to five o'clock at night; but I had very few in the house; I merely had to send out what was on this bill; to send it out to the polling booths and different places.

7439. Did you send out any suppers the night before?—No, I did not.

7440. I think you have told me that the municipal people were in your house for some time?—Yes.

7441. Was there what was called the Liberal Electoral Association at your house?—Yes.

7442. For how many months?—As near as I recollect they took the house in June, the Liberal Electoral Association did.

7443. They were, in fact, known to be the Liberal gentlemen who continued to bring out Mr. Miall?—Yes, I believe it was for that purpose.

7444. They were afterwards active supporters of Forster and Miall?—Yes, part of them.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine] That is so, no doubt. I have nothing to ask the Witness.

[The Witness withdrew.]

Mr. HENRY WEBSTER BLACKBURN, sworn; Examined by Mr. Waddy.

7445. I BELIEVE you are an Accountant in this town?—I am.

7446. Have you been instructed this morning to take the returns as they have been delivered in, and make some calculations?—Yes, I have.

7447. Mr. Baron Martin.] Have you had Messrs. Forster and Miall's returns put into your hands?—Yes.

7448. Mr. Waddy.] Have you counted the number of the committee-rooms that are down there?—Yes, I have.

7449. How many are there?—157 altogether.

7450. How many of them were held at public-houses?—129.

7451. Have you counted up the number of separate payments that there are for clerks and messengers?—There are 594 separate payments.

7452. Have you had put into your hand some refreshment tickets?—Yes, I have had two bundles.

7453. Have you counted the number of those tickets altogether?—I have not counted all of them; not the number of them.

7454. You must give us that afterwards; but in the meantime, have you collated them with the register of voters in the South Ward?—I have.

7455. And how many of them do you find bearing the name of voters in the South Ward?—82 of them.

7456. And have those voters who are so registered voted for Forster and Miall?—They have.

7457. Have you also taken the amount given in this account for refreshments?—Yes.

7458. Mr. Baron Martin.] How much was it over the whole election?—Over the whole election it was 247 l. 14s. 6d.

Mr. H. W.
Blackburn.

30 January
1869.

Mr. Waddy.] It was agreed between Mr. Serjeant Ballantine and myself that those receipts were for refreshments on the polling day.

Mr. Baron Martin.] Mr. Serjeant Ballantine stated what he said was the result of the refreshment tickets, but Mr. Blackburn is speaking of the entire election.

Witness.] I understand those papers to mean refreshments over the whole election.

Mr. Waddy.] Will you look at the vouchers, because no vouchers for refreshments are put in, except the vouchers for refreshments on the polling day.

Mr. Pope.] It is not so.

Mr. Waddy. Then I am mistaken; but I think, my Lord, I may ask Mr. Blackburn to look at them.

7459. (To the Witness.) Assuming for the moment that those are for refreshments on the polling day, have you calculated the average of how many persons were refreshed according to those tickets?—Taking the average refreshment at 1s. each man, it would be 4,924.

7460. Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] I do not understand your proposition?—I am asked by Mr. Waddy what number of persons would that represent; assuming 1s. each man, there would be 4,924 men.

7461. Mr. Waddy.] Just look at those receipts (handing the same to the Witness), and see whether it is the fact that you find anything there for the polling booths?—The document put into my hand is a copy from the original vouchers, and 233*l.* 19*s.* 7*d.* appears to have been expended on that day.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] We are entirely agreed upon that.

7462. Mr. Waddy.] How many voters received refreshments from those tickets?—Seventy-two voters received refreshments from those tickets.

7463. Have the kindness to count for us the entire number of those tickets?—564 tickets.

7464. From where?—From two houses, the "Farm House" and the "Royal."

7465. Have you examined how many voters there were amongst the clerks and messengers?

—There are 97 either voters or parties of the same name.

7466. In the same ward?—Yes, the same names and addresses, and in the same ward.

Cross-examined by Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.

7467. Are you aware that some of the tickets represent 1½*d.*, and some of them 3*d.*, and others of them 6*d.*?—They are for coffee, ale, and sandwiches; that is the description of them.

7468. It does not matter what they were for; but are you aware that they were three different prices?—Yes; they are marked so.

7469. How have you dealt with them in your calculation?—Those only apply to two houses.

7470. How have you dealt with them?—I have not taken those in detail.

7471. Not in any way whatever?—No; that is, I have not taken those and ascertained what was paid to each individual.

7472. Mr. Baron Martin.] How do you get at the 233*l.* 19*s.* 7*d.*?—I get it from their own accounts, from the vouchers.

7473. You did not take that from the ticket?—No, my Lord.

7474. Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] How many public-houses did you say there were?—One hundred and twenty-nine public-houses.

7475. Have you ascertained that out of those, 62 only served refreshment?—I have not counted them in that shape, but I can very quickly do so.

7476. I will not trouble you, I only wish to call my Lord's attention to that.

Mr. Baron Martin.] You will, I suppose, have evidence upon this matter?

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] Yes, my Lord.

Mr. Baron Martin.] As far as you have gone Mr. Blackburn, has given his evidence very fairly, and you will probably ascertain whether his statement is correct.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] Substantially it is correct, no doubt.

After examining the documents, the Witness stated that he had ascertained that only 52 public-houses supplied refreshments.

[The Witness withdrew.]

ANN LONG, sworn; Examined by Mr. Price.

Ann Long.

7477. ARE you the landlady of the "Cross Keys"?—Yes.

7478. Was your house taken as a committee-room for anybody?—Yes.

7479. Who for?—For Forster and Miall.

7480. How long did they have your rooms?—I think 11 weeks; it was taken in August.

7481. How often used the committee to meet there?—For some time they had it twice a week, and for some time three and four times a week.

7482. Did you have also a committee for the municipal election at your house?—Yes, I had.

7483. Were they pretty nearly the same people as attended the other committee?—Some of them was.

7484. Had Mr. Salt used to come there?—I think he was there once, but I cannot swear.

7485. Was there a supper given after the municipal election?—Yes.

7486. A thanksgiving supper?—I do not know what they called it.

7487. Who paid for that supper?—Mr. Daniel Tracey paid me; he was the chairman.

7488. Who is Daniel Tracey?—He was the chairman at my house.

7489. Chairman for whom?—Mr. Miall.

7490. On the polling day had you any breakfast prepared?—Yes.

7491. How many did you have breakfast prepared for?—I dare say 66, as far as I can remember.

7492. What did you provide for them?—I had a round of beef, and a leg of mutton, and part of another round of beef.

7493. Pork pies?—I had some veal pies and mutton pies.

7494. What did you find for drink for them?—They would not have no tea nor coffee; I gave them some ale with their breakfast.

7495. Who were those people who breakfasted?—I do not know; I was ordered to get it ready for a lot of canvassers, and the committee, and a lot lot of men who was out that night; and I was ordered to get it ready by half-past five o'clock in the morning.

7496. Mr. Baron Martin.] Did you get paid?—Yes, I did.

7497. How much did you get?—I got something short of 13*l*.

7498. Mr. Price.] You charged 13*l*?—But I have drawn it in twice; on the 11th of October I drew 2*l*., and the other I have drawn upon the second day, I believe after the borough election.

7499. Do you know a man called Sinaeon Laycock?—Yes.

7500. Did he take an active part in the election?—Yes; at the municipal election, he did.

7501. Just let me know what was your bill for the municipal election; was it 16*l*.?—It was more than that.

7502. Was it 20*l*.?—No, it was not 20*l*.; it was 19*l*. and something.

7503. What was that given in; was it drink and refreshments?—Refreshments and breakfasts.

7504. I should like to look at Mrs. Long's bill; you said you sent in a bill for 13*l*., as I understand?—No, I did not; a man made it out for me; a man of the name of Wayland, and Mr. Bingham said it was not right.

7505. How much was it made out for?—It was made out for 13*l*.

7506. Who is Mr. Bingham?—I do not know, only they call him Bingham; he said it was not correct. He said he thought it was rather too much; so I said, "Well," I said, "you can pay what ever you think is right." Then he made it out to come to something short of 11*l*., and 2*l*. I got before. I got 13*l*., all but something short; some coppers short.

7507. I find a receipt of the 20th of November for 3*l*. 7*s*. for the use of committee-room; when this was made out, how much did you send in in your bill for refreshments?—I do not know how much I sent in for refreshments; he made it out altogether. I took it myself; I kept no book.

7508. There is another receipt, which is a receipt for 2*l*. for rent of room?—Yes.

7509. Mr. Baron Martin.] That is what you told us of before, the 2*l*. on account?—Yes, my Lord; I drew first 2*l*. on the 11th of October.

7510. Mr. Price.] Was there any bargain originally made as to what you were to let your room for?—Yes; for half-a-crown a night, as many nights as they took it.

7511. How many nights did you make up that they had your room?—For the first two months I think they had it two nights a week.

7512. That will be 5*s*. a week?—Yes.

7513. For how many weeks do you think they had it two nights a week?—I cannot recollect. I think I got paid up to that time; when I got the 2*l*., I think I was paid all but one night.

7514. When you had got your 2*l*., had you got all that you thought you were entitled to for the rent of the room?—Yes, all but one night.

7515. If you had had 2*l*. 2*s*. 6*d*., you would have been all right?—Yes.

7516. Instead of that, they have given you 5*l*. 7*s*.?—Yes.

7517. Mr. Baron Martin.] Were you overpaid for your room?—No; they took it the last week for eight days at 4*s*. a-day for the last week.

7518. Mr. Price.] Then I understand when you got your 2*l*., which you had received on account, you considered that you were then paid all that you could demand for rent?—All but one night.

7519. When did you get the 2*l*.?—I got it on the 11th of October, as far as I can remember.

7520. What had you to charge against that for the rent of the room after that time?—I do not know; I left that to themselves. I did not keep an account of it, but I left it to themselves how many nights they had been. I did not put it down.

7521. Mr. Bingham made out the account for you?—Yes.

Mr. Price.] I should like to ask for Mr. Bingham's account; the original account.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] I have not got it.

7522. Mr. Baron Martin.] Is it your own house?—Yes, my Lord, I am a widow with three children.

7523. Mr. Price.] You did not keep any books; how did you keep an account of the refreshments, so as to make out any account at all?—I put it down on a slate.

7524. Did Mr. Bingham copy it from the slate?—No, he did not.

7525. How did Mr. Bingham make it out?—I got another man to make it out, of the name of Wayland, and I told him as far as I could what it came to; it was for refreshments and my trouble.

7526. How much did you make out to; how much for refreshments, and what you call your trouble?—I cannot recollect what it was.

7527. How much out of the 13*l*. as near as you can remember; as much as 10*l*.?—No, it was not.

7528. How much?—I cannot recollect; I cannot, indeed.

Cross-examined by Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.

7529. I have not quite understood this; you received 2*l*., that was on account of the room?—Yes, I received 2*l*. on account of the room.

7530. Did they use your room subsequently?—They had it any night they liked to come.

7531. How many nights do you suppose they had it?—For the first two months, I think, they only had it two nights a week, and then for the last week, every day.

7532. And every evening?—Yes.

7533. I believe you rather complained that they were not such over good customers?—There was no ale going off, they were not spending money. I thought they had not spent enough.

7534. I suppose that is why you charged under the name of your trouble?—Of course, I had a deal of trouble cooking, and I were up all night the night before, and the day before getting the breakfast ready. I was up nearly all the night getting it ready.

7535. At all events you were up the whole night?—I was up part of the night.

7536. I dare say you did not think you had been much overpaid?—I was satisfied with what I had got.

[The Witness withdrew.

BENJAMIN CLOUGH, sworn; Examined by Mr. Waddy.

B. Clough.
30 January
1869.

7537. Do you live in Bolton Road, in the East Ward?—I live in the North Ward, now. I did live in the East Ward.

7538. Do you know a place called Rearden's beerhouse?—Yes.

7539. Was that a committee-room of Forster and Miall?—Yes.

7540. Where is that?—In the Bolton Road.

7541. Do you remember a short time before the municipal election a deputation coming to address the people there?—Yes.

7542. That was a deputation on behalf of Salt and Read, I believe?—Yes, it was.

7543. They were candidates for the municipal election for that ward?—Yes.

7544. Do you remember who composed that deputation?—Mr. Bingham, Mr. Councillor Haley, and Mr. Snowden.

7545. Did they make speeches?—Mr. Haley and Mr. Snowden did; Mr. Bingham was made chairman.

7546. What were they talking about; was it about Mr. Salt?—The conversation was, proposing Mr. Salt and Mr. Read to be the fit and proper candidates for the municipal election, and along with that they got into conversation about Miall and Forster being friends of Mr. Snowden's; they said they should like them to be made Members of Parliament, as well.

7547. Do you remember anything about achieving a victory?—Yes; Mr. Haley said he thought as they had achieved a victory in the East Ward, in the municipal election, no doubt he would achieve the same glorious victory for the borough.

7548. Do you mean the borough election; for the whole borough?—For the borough election; Forster and Miall, of course.

7549. During the whole time this conversation was going on, was any drinking going on in the room?—Yes, there was.

7550. Who brought the beer in?—The landlord brought the beer in and another man, I do not know who he is.

7551. Do you know who ordered the drink?—I cannot say who ordered it in the first instance. I never heard any orders except from Mr. Snowden. He said, "I cannot talk when I am dry," and the consequence was they took the can down again.

7552. The consequence was they took the can down and they filled it again?—Yes.

7553. What sort of a can was it?—It would hold three gallons, I dare say.

7554. Was it brought up full?—I would not say, but I expect it was; I saw it poured out in glasses all round the table.

7555. Was it totted round?—No, not totted round. Every man had a glass a piece, and they were half-pint glasses.

7556. After this was over, did you go down stairs when Mr. Bingham, Mr. Faley, and Mr. Snowden went down stairs. Did you go down stairs about the same time?—I did, I followed them down stairs.

7557. Did you see them go to the landlord?—I saw them go to the bar, to the landlord, to Mr. Rearden.

7558. What took place then?—They asked him what there was to pay, and he said 14 s., or just about that amount. I would not be particular to a copper or two, and I heard them pay it.

7559. Do you know what they did after that?—They went away to some more meetings. The "Cross Keys" was the next, I believe.

7560. Mr. Baron Martin.] What was the name of this house?—The "Dublin" hotel.

[The Witness withdrew.]

MR. GEORGE POOLE, sworn; Examined by Mr. Price.

Mr. G Poole. 7561. You are an Auctioneer in Bradford?—Yes.

7562. Do you know Mr. Dracup?—Yes.

7563. What position in life is he in?—He is a tradesman in the clogging trade.

7564. A master tradesman?—Yes.

7565. A man in very good business?—Yes.

7566. Not a labouring man, or anything of that kind?—No, he is a master.

7567. He has a shop, has he not, and he resides on his own property?—Yes.

7568. In Silsbridge Lane?—Yes.

7569. Tell me what position Mr. Hird is in?—He is a shopkeeper in a very good position too; he lives in part of his own premises, and lets the remainder.

7570. Mr. Middleton, who is he?—He is a shopkeeper; a druggist in Westgate.

7571. The two Mr. Robertshaw's; do you know one of them, or both of them?—I cannot tell the one from the other.

7572. But they are respectable people?—Yes, they are manufacturers.

7573. And Lockwood Stephenson, is he a man in a good position?—He is a master butcher.

7574. Mr. Lancaster; do you know him?—He is also a shopkeeper in Silsbridge Lane.

7575. And Mr. Mortimer, the same?—Yes.

[The Witness withdrew.]

WILLIAM HENRY WRIGHT, sworn; Examined by Mr. Waddy.

W. H.
Wright.

7576. WERE you the landlord of the "Edinburgh Hotel," Caledonian-street, Bowling?—Yes.

7577. Was your house a Ripley house?—Yes.

7578. Do you know a man of the name of George Pearson?—Yes.

7579. What is he?—A brick and tile maker.

7580. Are his works near your house?—Not far off, perhaps 150 or 200 yards.

7581. Is he an employer of labour?—Yes.

7582. Do you know who he employs; have you seen them?—Part.

7583. Was he chairman of the Forster and Miall committee in the Bowling Ward?—Yes.

7584. Do you remember one night, when Mr. Ripley's committee had been sitting there, his coming to your house when it was over nearly?—No; that committee sat, but two men that belonged to it had been at a meeting at another place.

7585. When he came in the committee was not sitting, was it?—Not at that time.

7586. When he came in, were there any persons in the tap-room?—The person that came in came forward into the bar.

7587. Answer my question; when he came in, were there any persons in the tap-room?—Yes, there was.

7588. Do you know whether those persons, or any of them, were voters?—Part was voters, and part not.

7589. Did he order anything?—He ordered two half-gallons of beer.

7590. What did he tell you to do with it?—My man took it into the tap-room; he took the first in.

7591. Did you hear, when the ale was taken in, Pearson saying anything to the company?—At the bar I heard them hurraing and spinning their hats.

7592. Did you hear what they were hurraing about; what form did their hurrahs take?—It was Forster and Miall.

7593. Did he come into your house, before the election, on more occasions than one?—Yes.

7594. Mr. Baron Martin.] Who paid for this beer, did he pay for it himself?—He paid it me; he paid me at the bar window.

7595. Mr. Waddy.] Before the election did he come into your house more than once, or how often?—He used to come regularly before the election started, he came to pass away his time; he had been there many times as a customer before the election, and paid for glasses before the election for men.

7596. Mr. Baron Martin.] I suppose that is a thing common enough in Bradford?—I do not know.

7597. Mr. Waddy.] Has he done it since the election?—I do not know that I have seen him at the house since.

7598. Had you, at the time he came, any Ripley cards in your window?—Yes.

7599. He knew that you were a Ripley, then?—Yes.

7600. When he came, did you hear him canvass the people at all?—I have heard what others said.

7601. But did you hear him say anything?—No.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine stated that he had no question to put to the Witness.

[The Witness withdrew.]

MATTHEW DUCKWORTH, sworn; Examined by Mr. Waddy.

7602. Do you live at Bowling, and are you a stonemason?—Yes.

7603. Were you in the bar of the public-house of the last witness, William Wright, when Pearson came in?—Yes.

Mr. Baron Martin.] Subject to what my brother Balantine may say, it seems to me to have been proved that on several occasions persons who were supporters of Forster and Miall went into public-houses, paid for beer there, and treated the people who were there; that appears to me to have been proved, and it is useless to go on repeating it.

Mr. Price stated that his learned friend had given him to understand that no tickets had been used in any other ward but the South Ward, and he wished to call a witness to show that tickets had been used in another ward.

[The Witness withdrew.

Mrs. HARRIET HESSE, sworn; Examined by Mr. Waddy.

7604. ARE you the wife of Mr. Thomas Hesse, of Stott Hill?—Yes.

7605. Do you know John McCann's, the "Forester's Arms"?—Yes.

7606. On the polling day of the borough election, did you go to the "Forester's Arms" and help to cut up a quantity of provisions?—Yes.

7607. How much was there?—There was a ham, two lumps of beef, and two legs of mutton.

7608. Did you see how that was disposed of?—It was disposed of to men; I did not know whether they were canvassers, or what they were; it was given out by tickets.

7609. Mr. Baron Martin.] The men brought a ticket?—Yes.

7610. Mr. Waddy.] Did you see where they got the tickets from?—From the next room; it was given out by a gentleman, written out by a gentleman.

7611. How many tickets were given to each person?—Five tickets.

7612. Do you know what was the value of the tickets; how much you were to give for each ticket?—Sixpence each.

7613. Was that a Forster and Miall house?—Yes.

7614. Mr. Baron Martin.] Six pennyworth of meat was given for those tickets?—It was given out in sandwiches, and they were to be 4*d.*, and a cup of tea, or a cup of coffee, or a glass of beer was to be 2*d.*, making 6*d.*

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine stated that substantially it was so.

7615. Mr. Waddy (to the Witness).] Each person got five tickets?—Yes; each person got five tickets; it was of the value of 2*s.* 6*d.*

7616. Do you know what Ward the "Forester's Arms" is in?—The East Ward.

7617. Was that a Forster and Miall house?—Yes.

7618. Did you see a gentleman of the name of William Irving there?—There was a gentleman of that name there.

7619. Did you hear him give orders?—Yes.

7620. What orders did he give?—Mrs. McCann came to me about seven in the morning, and said there was to be a breakfast, and they were to have sandwiches and beer, but she said they were to have no tea or coffee; when we were cutting up the sandwiches Mr. Irving came in and said, "I will tell you what they are doing at other houses; they are making sandwiches, and serving tea, charging 4*d.* each; giving a cup of tea, or a cup of coffee, or a glass of beer for 2*d.*, to make up the 6*d.*; every one is allowed sixpennyworth;" and these things were only to be given to the men who produced the tickets.

Cross-examined by Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.

7621. This was on the day of polling?—Yes.

Mr. Baron Martin.] I think it has been proved that on the polling-day tickets were given, as the witness has stated.

Mr. Price stated that he had an account before him from Forster and Miall's election committee, 3*l.* 9*s.*, for refreshments; John Hunt, of the "Rose and Crown," and that it was initialled at the back, or signed "E. C. Pollard;" that it was certified by him, and there was a receipt apparently for refreshments, 3*l.* 9*s.*; another from John Hurst for 3*l.* 9*s.*, and another for 4*l.* 15*s.* for the North Ward, signed by William Mossman.

HENRY COOKE, sworn; Examined by Mr. Waddy.

7622. Do you live at 37, Crowther-street, and were you a messenger for Forster and Miall at the election?—Yes.

7623. Were you stationed at their central committee-room?—Yes.

7624. There was, I believe, a telegraph room there, was there not?—Yes.

7625. And there was a room into which the reports were brought up?—Yes.

7626. Who were in the room to which the reports were brought?—A great many of the gentlemen were in all day.

7627. Tell us the names of some of those that you saw come in and out during the day?—There was Mr. Kemp there, and Mr. Salt.

7628. Mr. Titus Salt?—Yes, junior; and Mr. Forster, Mr. Brown, Mr. Miall, Mr. Kemp, Mr. Kell, and a number of other gentleman; I really cannot say further.

7629. Who was in the telegraph room?—

H. Cooke.
February
1869.

There were three clerks there working the telegraph.

7630. Did you see anybody there besides the gentlemen whose names you have mentioned?—There was a number of others; one clerk was checking off the returns.

7631. Did you see Mr. Dracup there?—I do not know him.

7632. Do you know Mr. Lockwood Stephenson?—No; he was not on the central committee.

7633. Did you see a book in use at the central committee-room, consisting of foils and counterfoils, on which contracts were written out?—Yes; part of the time I did; the engagement of the rooms.

7634. That is what I mean?—Yes.

7635. A contract was written on part of it, which was torn out, and a minute made on the piece that was left in the book?—No; it was the engagement of the room written in it, and nothing torn out.

7636. Were the messengers engaged in that way also—

7637. Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] I understood him to say that the engagements were entered in a book?—Yes; it was not a printed book.

7638. Mr. Waddy.] Did you see a book that was partly printed, and out of which counterfoils were torn?—Yes.

7639. Was it used in connection with the hire of the committee-rooms?—Yes; when the room was engaged one of them was engaged to it, but a part of the rooms got it; not all of them; some of them neglected to come for them.

7640. And it was intended to give them?—Yes.

Mr. Price requested that the book might be produced.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine stated that if the book was in existence it should be produced; that he had only received notice 10 minutes ago.

7641. Mr. Waddy (to the Witness).] Do you know Charles Lund?—Yes.

7642. And Benjamin Reed?—Yes.

7643. And James Cole?—Yes.

7644. Were they on the committee?—Yes.

7645. And Michael Mahoney?—Yes.

7646. And John Cooke?—Yes.

7647. Do you know the Messrs. Robertshaw?—Yes; Calvin and Luther.

7648. Were they on the committee?—Yes.

7649. Did they come in and out?—Yes.

7650. Do you know whether Messrs. Robertshaw had charge of the West Ward?—Luther had; no, Calvin, I think it was.

7651. Which was it?—I can tell them when I see them both together.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine stated that he had no question to put to the witness.

[The Witness withdrew.

Mr. Price stated with regard to the Bill just referred to, and supposed to be missing, in addition to the signature of Mr. Irving, as chairman, he wished to prove the contents of the document itself; that he was told there were 95 refreshments on it at 6d. each, making 2*l.* 5*s.*

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine stated that he thought his learned friend was right.

SUSANNAH HASTE, sworn; Examined by Mr. Waddy.

S. Haste.

7652. ARE you the wife of John Haste, of 48, Duncan-street?—Yes.

7653. What is he?—A joiner.

7654. Was he a voter?—No, sir, they axed him who he meant to give his vote to.

7655. Who asked him?—Mr. Whitehead and Mahoney.

7656. When did they come to your husband's house; you say that Whitehead came with another?—Yes.

7657. How long before the election?—Two or three weeks.

7658. Where was your husband?—He sat on the bedside.

7659. How was that?—He was badly, and had been eight weeks.

7660. Tell us what passed; were you present?—Yes; Mr. Whitehead and Mr. Mahoney came in, and axed my husband how he was, and my husband said he was very poorly. Mr. Whitehead answered, and said, "I have heard so." "Yes," my husband said, "I have been very bad indeed;" and so Mr. Whitehead and Mr. Mahoney said, "Who does he intend to vote for?" and he said that he had not made up his mind to vote for either side; he was very poorly; and Mr. Whitehead said, "Well, you may give it to Mr. Forster and Mr. Miall;" and my husband said that he had not made his mind up, as he was very poorly; he was not in good circumstances to give his vote for neither side, and Mr. Whitehead went out, and he put his hand in his pocket and said, "Give the bairns that penny;" when Mr. Whitehead was going down the steps—

7661. Did that mean your children?—Yes.

7662. What did he give you?—I did not ever look at it; but when Mr. Whitehead was going down he gave it me and said, "Give the bairns that penny." When Mr. Whitehead was going down the steps Mahoney said, "What has he given you?" and when I looked at it it was half-a-crown.

7663. What did you say?—I thanked him, and he bid us good night.

7664. Did you say that it was half-a-crown?—Yes, Mahoney saw it was so; but I did not see it when he put it into my hand.

7665. Did you say anything about the vote to Mr. Whitehead who you should give the vote for?—No; I cannot say that I did.

7666. Whom did your husband vote for?—He voted for Mr. Ripley.

7667. Is the man you called Mahoney sometimes called Martin?—I do not know; he generally goes by the name of Mahoney.

7668. Did you see Mahoney after your husband had voted?—Yes.

7669. Did he say anything to your husband about how he had voted after the election?—I cannot say.

7670. Did he say anything to you about your husband's vote?—I cannot say that he did.

7671. Did

7671. Did he use any threat?—No; I cannot say that he did.

7672. Was anything said?—Not in my presence; I cannot say any more; I came to state what I heard, and what took place.

7673. Was anything said to you; not to your husband, but to you, by Mahoney?—Mahoney never said nought to me in my presence.

7674. I mean after the election?—No.

7675. After the voting was over?—I never saw him till the other day.

7676. What did he say the other day?—He said that Mr. Whitehead had given us that for charity because my husband was poorly.

7677. Did he say nothing about a vote?—No; he never said nothing to me.

Cross-examined by Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.

S. Haste.

1 February 1869.

7678. How many bairns have you?—Three.

7679. Young ones?—Yes, one is very young.

7680. Mr. Baron Martin.] Was your husband very ill?—He was very poorly; he had been eight weeks very poorly at the time when they came.

7681. And out of work?—Yes.

7682. Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] You were really almost in a starving state?—We were in very poor circumstances.

7683. I believe your husband voted for Mr. Ripley?—Yes.

Mr. Baron Martin.] She said so before.

JOSHUA SPENCER, sworn; Examined by Mr. Waddy.

7684. I BELIEVE you are a Nail-maker, in Sun-street?—Yes.

7685. And a voter?—Yes.

7686. You are a voter?—Yes.

7687. Which way did you vote?—For Mr. Ripley.

7688. Do you know a person called Bennett?—Yes.

7689. Is he a public-house keeper?—I do not know his business; I am not aware that he is.

7690. Do you know whether before the municipal election he was taking any part in that or not?—Yes.

7691. Did you go to Bennett and ask to be employed as a canvasser in the municipal election?—Yes.

7692. In consequence of what was said to you, did you go to a place in Wellington-street?—Yes.

7693. Did you see Mr. Irving there?—Yes.

7694. Was a brother of yours with you, named Abraham?—Yes.

7695. And a man named William Jones?—Yes.

7696. Did you apply to Mr. Irving to be employed to work for Mr. Reid and Mr. Salt?—Yes.

7697. They were candidates at the municipal election for that ward, were they not?—Yes.

7698. What passed between you and Mr. Irving; what did he say to you before he engaged you?—He asked me if I would engage, on condition that I would vote for Mr. Forster and Miall, and I said, "No." I said, "If that is to be the condition, I am of no use to you, and I beg leave to retire;" and I left the house at once.

7699. You left your brother and Mr. Jones behind you, when you left the house, did you not?—Yes.

7700. In a short time afterwards, did they follow you up?—Yes.

7701. Did Mr. Irving come with you?—Yes.

7702. Did you go to the "Airedale Inn" together?—Yes; Mr. Irving asked us to follow him up to the "Airedale Inn."

7703. That was a Forster and Miall room, I believe.

28.

when you got there?—He expected to see a person of the name of Simeon Laycock.

7705. When you got there, I believe that Simeon Laycock was not there?—No.

7706. Did Mr. Irving then order anything for you?—He ordered us a quart of beer.

7707. Did he give you anything besides?—He called me into the bar, and said that Simeon was not there; that we must see him again that night, when Simeon would be there, and he put a shilling into my hand.

7708. Who did that?—Mr. Irving.

7709. Did he tell you where you were to go to that night?—He told us that we were to meet at the "Airedale," and we were to go there.

7710. Did he say who was going to attend that meeting?—He said that Messrs. Reid and Salt were going to it.

7711. I believe that you went to the meeting that night, and after that you went to the "Oak Inn"? I went to a meeting at the "Plasterers' Arms;" I was not in time for the meeting at the "Airedale Inn;" and from the "Plasterers' Arms" I went to the "Oak Inn."

7712. When you got there, I believe some one was singing an election song?—After the municipal business was over, they were singing a song.

7713. Was the chorus of the song, "Ripley, go home"?—Yes.

7714. And you sang, "Miall, go home"?—Yes.

7715. When you were doing that, did Laycock come to you and say anything?—When the song was finished he sat in front of me, and he said, "I cannot engage you; I have been taking notice of you, and of the song."

Cross-examined by Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.

7716. What are you?—A nail-maker.

7717. When were you asked to come here?—I was subpoenaed.

7718. How long ago was that?—The week before last.

7719. When was it that you received notice to come here?—It was about the middle of the week previous to the municipal election.

'ABRAHAM SPENCER, sworn; Examined by Mr. Price.

- A. Spencer.*
1 February 1869.
7720. Do you live at Clayton-street, and are you a Mason?—Yes.
7721. And a brother of the last witness, Joshua?—Yes.
7722. Were you with your brother at Dan Barton's shop, when Mr. Irving was there; before the municipal election?—Yes.
7723. Did you ask Mr. Irving anything?—No; I did not ask him anything.
7724. Was anything said about employing you?—My brother asked him.
7725. Were you asked?—No.
7726. You heard what passed between your brother and Mr. Irving; did you see Irving give him anything?—No.
7727. Did you see anything given to your brother by Irving?—No.
7728. Nothing at all?—No.
7729. Did you hear him ask anything about his vote?—Yes; I heard him ask for his vote for Forster and Miall, and he said, "No."
7730. Was he told what would be done for him if he did vote for them?—I do not know.
7731. Did you go afterwards, and what do you remember as to what passed?—He only said he asked him for a job, and Mr. Irving said he should give him a job if he would vote for Forster and Miall.
7732. What job?—Canvassing for Mr. Reid and Mr. Salt.
7733. Are you a voter?—Yes.
7734. Your brother went away, did he not, before you?—Yes.
7735. Did you say anything to Mr. Irving about getting a job?—He asked me who I would vote for; if I would vote for Forster and Miall, and I said I was not particular which I did before.
7736. What were you to do for them?—To vote.
7737. Tell us what else he said?—We walked out then; Mr. Irving went with us out, and told us to follow him up to the "Airedale."
7738. Did you get engaged at all?—Yes.
7739. Who engaged you?—Mr. Irving.
7740. When did he engage you?—He engaged me on the Saturday before the municipal election.
7741. What did he engage you as?—To deliver up the voting papers.
7742. For whom?—For Mr. Reid and Mr. Salt.
7743. For anything else?—No; that was all.
7744. Was anything said about your vote at the Borough election?—Yes; he asked me who I would vote for, and I said I did not know who I should vote for; I had not made up my mind altogether.
7745. What did you get a day for delivering the voting papers for Salt and Reid?—Six shillings.
7746. Did you get anything for expenses?—No.
7747. How long did you get the 6 s.?—Two days I think I was engaged.
7748. After the municipal election, did you go anywhere to a supper?—Yes.
7749. Where was that?—In the "North Tavern."
7750. You had a supper there?—Yes.
7751. What was it given in honour of?—For Salt and Reid.
7752. Was Mr. Irving present at that supper?—Yes.
7753. Were any speeches made?—No.
7754. None?—No.
7755. Was anything said about the Borough election?—They only said that they hoped they would be as lucky in the Borough election as they had been in the municipal election.
7756. Mr. Irving said that, did he?—Yes.
7757. Was there any cheering?—Yes; plenty of cheering and singing, and amusing themselves all the time.
7758. How many were there at supper?—I do not know exactly.
7759. Were there nearly 20 or 30?—Twenty perhaps.
7760. Did you pay anything?—No.
7761. Did you see anybody pay?—No.
- Mr. Serjeant Ballantine stated that he had no question to put to the Witness.
- [The Witness withdrew.]

JOHN MILTHORPE, sworn; Examined by Mr. Price.

- J. Milthorpe.*
7762. Do you live at Scotch-terrace, Woodhouse, near Leeds.
7763. Are you a voter for Bradford?—Yes.
7764. On the Sunday before the election, did anyone come over to you, to Leeds?—Yes.
7765. Who was it?—Joseph Horsfall.
7766. What did he say to you when you saw him?—I was seeing him at our house, and I asked him what his business was in Leeds; he said, "Well, you have a vote for the house you have left in Jowett-street."
7767. Was that a house that you had in Bradford, before you moved to Leeds?—Yes. He said, "Who are you in favour of?" and I said, "I do not think I shall bother by going; I do not think I shall be playing on Tuesday; but," I said, "it will be a bit of an out if I go;" I said, "If I am not playing you have no occasion to expect me;" he said, "If you will come, there will be your railway expenses," and I said, "You must depend upon me when you see me."
7768. Did you go?—Yes.
7769. Did you get anything for going?—I got 2s. 6d., after I voted, from Mr. Joseph Horsfall.
7770. Did you go anywhere with him to get anything besides the 2s. 6d.?—He asked me if I would have anything to eat, and I said "I was not hungry." He said, "You can come and have a little bit to eat with me, if you please," and he took me into the "Slingsby Arms," in Jowett-street, and we had one little bit out of a leg of mutton, but it was done then; there was a pie baking in the oven, and we got a little bit of that, meat and potatoes.
7771. Did

7771. Did you pay anything for that?—No.

7772. Did you get anything besides the 2s. 6d.?—No, I did not.

7773. You got no other money?—No, only the 2s. 6d.

7774. Mr. Baron Martin.] What was your railway fare?—Two shillings, third class; the second class is 2s. 6d.

7775. Which did you pay?—I paid 2s.

7776. You came third class?—Yes.

7777. Mr. Price.] When Mr. Horsfall asked you about your vote, did he say what he was doing with regard to Mr. Foster and Miall.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine objected to the question.

Mr. Baron Martin.] When was this said to you?

Mr. Price.] It was on the same day, my Lord.

Mr. Baron Martin.] On the day he had voted, or on the Sunday?

Mr. Price.] On the Sunday.

7778. Mr. Baron Martin (to the Witness).] Tell us what he said on the Sunday, as to who he was canvassing for?—He asked me who I was in favour of, and I said, "I am in favour of Mr. Forster and Mr. Miall"; and he said, "Those are the men I am canvassing for."

7779. Mr. Price.] Do you know where Joseph Horsfall lives?—He lives in Jowett-street, a door below where I occupied before.

7780. Mr. Baron Martin.] He had been a neighbour of yours?—Yes.

7781. Mr. Price.] What is he?—I believe he is a warp dresser.

7782. Do you know where he works?—No.

7783. Did he go with you to vote?—Yes, he did.

7784. What was your number in Jowett-street, when you lived in Bradford?—No. 48.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine stated that he had no question to put to the Witness.

[The Witness withdrew.

DOROTHY DINLEY, sworn; Examined by Mr. Waddy.

7785. Do you live at Upper Green, in this borough?—Yes.

7786. Do you know Isaac Hanson, a voter?—Yes.

7787. Did you go to his house on the polling day?—Yes.

7788. Was Jane Scholefield lodging in the same house with her daughter?—Yes.

7789. When you got there, was Isaac Hanson in bed?—Yes.

7790. What time in the day was that?—As near as I can say, about a quarter to seven in the morning.

7791. Did you tell Isaac Hanson to get up?—Yes; I asked him to get up and go and plump for Mr. Ripley.

7792. What did he say to that?—He said, "Not yet; I think it is rather too soon."

7793. Go on; what else did he say?—He said, "I shall have to be sold up to day." I said, "I hope not." I said, "I hope the neighbours will never see it; I never like to see any one distressed."

7794. What was he going to sell; what for?—He had no money to pay his rent; the landlord had been twice, and he had to lock the door and keep out of the house, because he had not got the rent.

7795. After this, did you go and come back again?—I went into my own house, and came back again.

7796. Was James Hanson there when you came back?—Isaac was; he was still in bed.

7797. Did you see a man of the name of James Hanson there?—No, I did not.

7798. Did you see two men there who were canvassers?—I went back to my own house.

7799. Just tell me what occurred?—I went back to my house. I came again, and there was no one there. When I went home, Mrs. Schelefield opened the door, and I went back to my house. I came again, and then there was John Hanson at the door; the other two or three I cannot tell who they were. Besides John Hanson I never took particular notice; as to Hanson, I tapped him on the back; he was a Miall man, and I said, "Just you go with him."

7800. Is John Hanson any relative of Isaac Hanson?—Yes; Isaac Hanson is John Hanson's uncle. I went to my own house then, and some one said, "Are you not going to come on; see how they are carrying on." I went on, and many of us went on. Isaac Hanson said that he had not had anything to eat for two or three days, and I gave him a bit of bread and meat. I do not dispute but that he had not had any.

7801. Go on?—I had given him something to eat before that day.

7802. Did you afterwards see him with any money?—He had something in his hand; it was in the afternoon; he came in, and he had some money in his hand. I cannot say what number it was. He said, "I have got this for my vote." Old Ikey said he had got 2*l*. for his vote.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine stated that he had no question to put to the Witness.

[The Witness withdrew.

Mr. Price stated that this was his case.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine was heard to address the Court on behalf of the respondent.

Mr. Price stated that he wished now to hand in a plan which had been taken from the borough map (and the correctness of which he could prove), to show where the West Ward was, and that the red dots indicated the public-houses of Forster and Miall.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine stated that he was quite willing to admit it.—(The same was handed in.)

Mr. Price stated that this was his case.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine was heard to address the Court on behalf of Mr. Forster.

Mr.

J.
Milnthorpe.
1 February
1869.

D. Dinley.

Mr. JOHN HENRY WADE, sworn; Examined by Mr. Serjeant Sargood.

Mr. J. H. Wade. 7803. You are a member of the firm of Rawson, George, and Wade?—I am.
 1 February 1869. 7804. Which is a very old-established firm of solicitors in this town?—Yes.

7805. You have been, I believe, for many years election agents both for the borough of Bradford and the part of the county in which it is situated?—We have.

7806. Were you and Mr. George appointed agents for Mr. Forster and Mr. Miall at the last election?—We were.

7807. I believe you personally attended to it?—Entirely; Mr. George did scarcely anything.

7808. I presume, from what we have heard, that the contest was a very closely contested one?—Very much so.

7809. Unusually so, was it not?—Very much so; a very large number indeed of votes were polled.

7810. How long did it last; how many weeks was it going on?—It lasted from the 3rd August to the 17th November.

7811. For about 15 weeks?—Yes.

7812. Can you give me the date at which the coalition between Mr. Forster and Mr. Miall took place?—It was on the 1st August.

7813. Do you know anything of your own knowledge, as a townsman, as to the solicitation to Mr. Miall to take part in the contest?—A requisition was presented to him on the 1st August, which was said to contain 7,500 signatures.

7814. I believe that a great many people had been engaged in canvassing for that requisition?—I believe about 700.

7815. The coalition having been decided upon, what was done with a view to the formation of a general committee?—A meeting was held of gentlemen who took a prominent part in politics on the Liberal side. That meeting was held on the 3rd August, and a resolution was passed that they should form themselves into a committee for promoting the return of those gentlemen. Also that subscriptions should be entered into for the purpose of defraying the expenses of the contest. They then adjourned to the next day for the purpose of then appointing an executive committee.

7816. I believe that the chairman of that general committee was Mr. Titus Salt; was he not?—He was chairman of the general committee, the senior Mr. Salt.

7817. Was the business practically entrusted to what was called the executive committee, which divided itself into various branches?—Yes, it was, and the general committee never met again.

7818. And you had the whole management of the matter under your own personal eye from the beginning to the end of the contest?—I had.

7819. Had you, during its progress, any reason to believe that there was any bribery or treating going on in any of the Wards, so far as you personally knew?—

Mr. Price stated that he had not, in his opening, charged Mr. Wade with personal bribery, nor had he said that Mr. Forster had been in any way personally implicated in any way whatever.

Witness. I had no reason to believe it, nor to suspect it for one moment, and I know nothing of anything that was illegal. Our daily efforts were directed to promote a pure election, and daily reports were brought to us from the other side as to what was being done.

7820. Mr. Baron Martin.] I understand you to say that your endeavour was that it should be a pure election?—Entirely so, my Lord.

7821. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] I suppose that, practically, the distribution of the committees was that there was an executive committee?—Yes.

7822. And a finance committee?—Yes.

7823. And a committee for arranging the public meetings?—Yes.

7824. And a committee to take charge of the printing, stationery, and so forth?—Yes, but not so much in the Central Ward; the Central Ward committee was intended to—7825. I believe you had a canvassing committee?—Certainly; there was a canvass committee.

7826. Was the seventh committee that you had, a general purposes committee?—Yes.

7827. Were they practically, in the aggregate, the committees which had the work to do?—Yes.

7828. I believe that the general committee were really never called together?—No.

7829. I believe that you at a very early period had some instructions sent out to all the committees?—Yes, we had.

7830. I believe you have a copy of those instructions on a piece of paper?—Yes (the same was handed in).

7831. No. 1 is a direction, I believe, as to Mr. Forster and Mr. Miall's committee-rooms; that if engaged at a beer-house it was desirable that the room should be engaged for a fixed sum, and that no other expenditure should be required or expected in the house?—Yes, that was the first one.

7832. The 4th was, "To employ volunteer canvassers whenever it was practicable, and no paid canvassers were to be employed without the sanction of the Central Ward committee; and they were to keep a list of the persons to whom canvass books were entrusted"?—Yes.

7833. No. 6 was this: "You will specially note the extracts from the statutes as to bribery and treating, and undue influence, and election expenses, which are provided for your information"?—Yes.

7834. "You must have one or more of the sheets containing those extracts always publicly exhibited in the several committee-rooms;" and I believe you had those printed and circulated for that purpose?—That was so.

7835. Then as to the 7th, you stated the law to be that there were to be "no hired carriages" to convey the voters to the poll?—Yes.

7836. And the 10th was that "Neither the candidates nor the central committee will be responsible for any expenditure incurred for any purpose without the consent of the central committee"?—Yes, in every case they were printed, and signed by one of the election agents himself.

7837. As a voucher?—Just so.

7838. Then No. 12 was—

Mr.

Mr. Price stated that he was willing to admit all this, and that his Lordship should have a copy handed to him.

Mr. Serjeant Sargood stated that he would select a few that he wished his Lordship to hear.

7839. Then No. 12 was, "In case of any doubt or difficulty they were to consult the Central Ward"?—Yes.

7840. They were 16 in number?—Yes.

7841. As the election advanced did you send further printed instructions, marked B, which were 15 in number?—Yes.

7842. I will just refer to two of them. No. 6 is in these terms, "You will remember that no person who, within six months before the election, has been employed for reward as an agent, or canvasser or clerk, or messenger, or in any other like employ, can vote"?—Yes.

7843. Then in No. 11 you reiterate that "no money can be paid for the conveyance of voters to the poll, and there will be no hired carriages for that purpose"?—Yes, that is so.

7844. I believe that your arrangements for obtaining information as to the returns on the polling day were necessarily rather elaborate?—They were very elaborate indeed.

7845. How many districts were there in which voting went on?—There were 45 polling booths.

7846. Will you just explain first what was required to be done on the polling day, in regard to getting your information to and from the committees, and the polling booths?—The election was conducted on the principle of each ward being a separate election, so that we had eight separate elections being carried on at the same time, one for each ward, and there was a perfect organisation in each ward for the purpose of receiving, transmitting and dealing with the returns as they were received every half hour from the polling booths. As the returns were received, duplicates of them were sent to the central committee, and they were divided accordingly to an artificial arrangement that had been devised with great care, so that in every district they knew within a few moments after the return had come in, who were the voters in that district who had polled, and that necessitated the employment of an immense number of clerks; and as these matters were worked with extreme efficiency, the consequence was that we were generally half an hour in advance of the other side in regard to our returns.

Mr. Price stated that he was quite willing to admit all this.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine stated that he was obliged to his learned friend, but that he was desirous of proving it.

7847. Mr. Serjeant Sargood (to the Witness).] Go on, if you please?—Besides those we had a system of telegraph wires which had been laid down throughout the borough to some extent, to save the employment of messengers; that was the first time the experiment had been tried, and as we dare not trust to them we had in addition to the ordinary staff, a staff of telegraph clerks at each end, lest the telegraph should break down.

7848. Did you issue to the ward committees, in reference to the polling day, special instructions in addition to the two papers that have already been put in?—Yes.

7849. It is a very long letter, but it refers to 28.

three subjects, the last of which is "Refreshments on the nomination day"?—Yes.

7850. I will read that part of it only; the instructions run thus: "The law absolutely prohibits the giving of refreshments to voters either before or after polling, and a breach of this law may not only be productive of penal consequences to the parties immediately concerned that might invalidate the election; this, however, does not prevent necessary refreshment being provided for clerks and messengers, or even for committee men or canvassers, although voters, while engaged on the actual work of the election, provided such refreshments be given to them simply to sustain their energies while at work, and without any reference to their voting. The central committee request that you will take into your consideration the best mode of acting in this matter, so as to meet the necessity of the case, and hope you will see that, on the one hand, a sufficient supply of good suitable refreshments is provided for the actual workers in your ward, and on the other that no opportunity is given for breaking the law by giving refreshment to voters, either to get them to poll, or to reward them for having polled.

"At the request of the agents of all the candidates, the Town Clerk is issuing some statements as to the laws in force to prevent bribery, treating, intimidation, personation, &c., and of these a sufficient number will be sent to you to supply every committee-room in your ward. Please do all you can to get them properly exhibited and rigidly enforced.

"Messrs. Forster and Miall's central committee look forward with very great confidence to the triumphant return of their candidates, and they are the more anxious on that account that the election shall be so conducted as not to leave a single loophole for their opponents to challenge the result." So far as you were able to judge, did you believe that that was a proper statement of the existing state of the law, you being the agent?—I did.

7851. Whether it was right or wrong, that was your personal view of the matter?—Yes, it was.

7852. And these instructions were given on your authority?—Yes, they were.

7853. Were there any carriages employed?—None whatever.

Mr. Price stated that he should like to have a copy of the instructions.

The Witness.] This was a private letter that was sent to the chairman of each ward.

7854. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] I believe there was a very large contribution of private conveyances by various gentlemen?—Yes.

7855. Mr. Price.] Do you know this of your own knowledge?—Yes, I do.

Mr. Price stated that he had just been informed that an arrangement of the kind referred to by the Witness had been made, and that it was faithfully carried out on both sides, and therefore he should say no more.

7856. Mr. Serjeant Sargood (to the Witness).] That was so, was it not?—Yes, it was.

7857. I believe that the question of providing refreshments really was a subject that occupied a good deal of anxious attention on your own part

Mr.
J. H. Ward

Mr.

part, and that of many gentlemen of the committee?—The first question that we considered about refreshments was how to provide for those who would be necessarily shut up in the polling-booths from half-past seven in the morning till after four o'clock in the afternoon; there were something like 150 of them; we had three in each booth, and also some extra ones.

7858. Mr. Baron Martin.] I suppose you would call them poll-clerks?—Poll agents and check clerks.

7859. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] I suppose that poll-clerks are those who are officially employed in taking the votes?—Yes; I may say in regard to that that I mentioned the matter in the presence of Mr. Little, the solicitor for Mr. Ripley, and to the town clerk, who was acting in carrying out the directions of the returning officer. We ascertained that he was going to provide refreshments for the officials in the booths, those he employed there; and he very kindly expressed his willingness to provide refreshments for our clerks, and others who were employed in the booths, and proposed afterwards to apportion the expense between us, and he did so.

7860. I believe, as a fact, whether they got food or not, it was utterly impossible for them to leave the work they were engaged, except for a minute at a time?—Yes, it was utterly impossible; there were 500 voters at each booth, and several to a minute.

7861. In the 45 booths, besides the number of persons that were engaged in them, there were in addition, I believe, a great many other persons who were occupied by you on the day of the election; what were they doing?—In every ward there was an office opened to which the returns were sent, and those returns had to be dissected, and sent to a number of sub-committees, and in order that this might be done expeditiously there was a row of clerks engaged, ten or a dozen clerks in each room, who passed the paper from one to the other, and each of them dissected it, and took from it that which related to every particular division. Then these returns were made up, and were sent to the sub-districts in order to tell who had voted, and that they might know whom to fetch to the poll. There was a very great deal of work to do in connection with the duplicates; there was something like 100 persons on the register who had a qualification in other districts, and that circumstance made this a more difficult election to conduct than if there had been eight different elections, and the duplicate voters had to be, as fast as they could be, transmitted to other districts, so that precautions might be taken that they did not vote a second time.

7862. You required, in consequence of that, a larger number of messengers and runners?—Yes, we required an enormous number.

7863. As well as the clerks who were occupied in manipulating the papers as they were brought in?—Yes.

7864. How many do you suppose were so employed?—My calculation was this, but first I may say that at the request of some of the principal inhabitants, the Mayor had arranged that it should be a general holiday, and we had a considerable number of volunteer workers; we had an abundance of workers, and I think that little short of 2,000 were employed on the polling day.

7865. I believe that the bulk of them were volunteers?—Yes, they were.

7866. I believe I may say that your canvassers before the election were all volunteers?—Yes, I believe so, without exception, as far as I know.

7867. Mr. Baron Martin.] The canvassers were all volunteers, were they?—Yes.

7868. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] With regard to the arrangement for the refreshments, actually in the polling-booths, for the polling-clerks, I believe you and Mr. Little conferred together?—I have already described that that was arranged with the returning officer, and we afterwards repaid him what he had expended.

7869. Having to provide for all those people, I think in the south ward you made some arrangements about tickets?—Yes. The chairman of the south ward committee spoke to me about the difficulty of providing refreshments for the people there, and he stated that he thought it was desirable there should be some check upon the persons getting refreshments, and also upon the people who provided them, and he asked me if I thought there was any objection to having some tickets printed, to be used there. I gave some consideration to the matter, and I afterwards sanctioned the use of the tickets.

7870. Were the tickets used elsewhere than in the south ward, as far as you can remember?—Some were provided for one of the other wards, but they were not used.

7871. I suppose I may take it from you that whatever number of tickets were used, they did not necessarily represent one person to each ticket?—Certainly not; I believe that five or six tickets were issued for each one.

7872. The tickets rather indicated the thing that was supplied, than the person to whom it was supplied?—Yes.

Mr. Price.] Each ticket is made out in a particular man's name.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] No, the same name is on four or five of them.

7873. Mr. Serjeant Sargood (to the Witness).] In what manner were these tickets distributed?—That I cannot tell you from personal knowledge.

7874. To whom were they delivered for the purpose of distribution?—To the chairman of the ward.

7875. Mr. Boothroyd, I believe, was chairman of the South Ward?—Yes.

7876. I may ask you this, what was the object of using tickets at all in that ward?—I have already stated that it was for two purposes; one of those purposes was in order that no person might get refreshments but those who might be working and deserving them; and the next was, that they might be a check on the innkeepers, so that they might not charge us for more than had been supplied; those were the only reasons.

7877. Can you tell me whether the tickets that had been used for this purpose were invariably filled in with the name of the party who was entitled to use them?—Yes, invariably for those who were employed.

7878. As I understand you, it was your bonâ fide endeavour to restrict the expenditure to legal expenditure?—Yes.

7879. And, as far as you know, that was carried out?—Yes.

7880. The account of the election expenses is what what you have sent in, as one of the authorised agents?—Yes.

7881. So far as you know, do you believe that that is an honest return of all the expenditure?—Certainly.

7882. Is there any present claim that is kept back, or behind, in any way; I ask you that unreservedly?—I am not aware of any.

7883. Do you believe that there are any such claims?—I do not.

7884. The aggregate expense we have got down at the sum of 3,397*l.* and a few shillings, and with regard to that, I believe that a good deal of it was defrayed by public subscriptions?—Yes, a very large proportion.

7885. How much did Mr. Miall pay in figures?—£.500.

7886. How much did Mr. Forster pay towards the expenses?—He gave me two cheques for 500*l.* each, and I returned him 200*l.*

7887. Then he practically paid 800*l.*?—That was all that he had paid; that is all that has been paid through me.

7888. Is that all that you believe he will ever be called upon to pay?—It is.

7889. Do you know the number of the voters on the register?—Nominally, it is upwards of 21,000.

7890. Do you know how many of those polled?—Upwards of 18,000. I can give you our own calculation, taking off the double entries, and so on. Nominally, on the register, there are 21,518, and our calculation was that, if every man had polled, the number would have been a little short of 20,000. But we calculated that at least 5 per cent. would be ill or away, or unable to vote. We thought that 19,000 was the extreme number that, by any possibility, could vote.

7891. Can you tell me, of your own knowledge or calculation, the number who actually voted?—I believe it was 18,200 who actually polled.

7892. Mr. Baron Martin.] That would be the extreme number of voters who would actually go to the poll?—Who actually did poll, my Lord.

7893. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] Can you tell me this, as to the coalition, was Mr. Miall invited to join Mr. Forster, or was Mr. Forster invited to join Mr. Miall?—Mr. Forster was invited to join Mr. Miall.

7894. Was there any doubt about Mr. Forster's election, so far as you know, from the first?—None, in my mind. He had been twice returned without a contest, and there were only three candidates for the constituency. I never doubted for a moment that he was perfectly safe.

7895. After the election was over, what was the first information you had as regarded any petition against anybody?—I was spoken to by a number of persons, as to a petition against Mr. Ripley, but I came to the conclusion that I would not act in the matter of that petition.

7896. Having so decided, was your decision made known, and did you mention it?—I think it was pretty generally known, for in fact it was referred to in the papers.

7897. After that, had you a communication with Mr. Little on the subject?—Yes, Mr. Little called on me.

28.

Mr. Price stated that, as a matter of evidence, he must protest against any question being put as to what Mr. Little said.

7899. Mr. Baron Martin (to the Witness).] Has Mr. Little anything to do with this petition?—Yes, my Lord, he presented the petition.

Mr. Price stated that he would withdraw what he had said, for he had made a mistake.

7900. Mr. Serjeant Sargood (to the Witness).] What did Mr. Little say?—Mr. Little stated that he had heard a rumour that there would be a petition against Mr. Ripley, and he said that if there was a petition, there should be a petition against Mr. Forster.

Mr. Price stated that he must still object to what Mr. Little had said.

Mr. Baron Martin.] I must be guided by what the witness swears.

The Witness.] The solicitors were Baxter, Rose, and Norton.

Mr. Price stated that, at the present moment it appeared to him that what Mr. Little may have said or done was not matter for his Lordship.

7901. Mr. Baron Martin.] You have said that Mr. Little presented that petition; how do you know that he did?—Mr. Little told me that he was going to present a petition, and he afterwards admitted that he had done so; he said that he was not going to continue it, but to hand it to Mr. Mumford. Mr. Little said, that if there was a petition against Mr. Ripley, there should be one against Mr. Forster. I told him that I should not act in the matter, and he said, "I cannot help that."

7902. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] At any rate you had nothing to do with it, and we all know that there was a petition against Mr. Ripley?—Yes, there was.

7903. And now there is another against Mr. Forster?—Yes.

7904. Can you tell me which was the first and which was the second, from your own observation?

Mr. Price stated that he would admit that the petition against Mr. Ripley was the first.

Cross-examined by Mr. Price.

7905. You understand electioneering, I think, as well as any man in Bradford?—I think I do.

7906. Has Mr. Forster ever stood a contest?—No; he was twice returned without a contest. I should say three times without a contest.

7907. The last was, of course, a matter of form?—The last was when Mr. Forster accepted office under the Government.

7908. It was on the 3rd August, you say, that what you call the borough election began?—Yes.

7909. Had there been in this town an Electoral Liberal Association at work for some time before the election?—Yes.

7910. That you know?—Yes.

7911. Whose object had been to bring forward

A A 2

a second

Mr.
J. H. W.

1869.

Mr. H. Wade. a second candidate with Mr. Forster?—That was something; they took it up, but the association was in existence for other purposes; to attend to the registers, and so on.

February 1869. 7912. The purpose that they did take up, they took up pretty sharply, and it was to return another candidate with Mr. Forster?—Yes.

7913. Did they hold meetings from time to time and canvass?—I never was at any of their meetings, but I have no doubt they did.

7914. You did not belong to the Association?—I did not.

7915. A requisition you say was got up, and a very large one?—Yes; I believe it had 7,500 signatures.

7916. And 700 persons were employed to get up that?—Yes; so I believe.

7917. Were any of the members of the Electoral Liberal Association active members of Mr. Forster and Miall's committee?—Yes.

7918. And a leading member may, I take it, was Mr. Titus Salt, junior?—Yes.

7919. I may take it that he was about as enthusiastic a supporter of Mr. Forster and Mr. Miall as anyone?—I will not say that quite.

7920. But he was a very enthusiastic supporter?—Yes.

7921. And Mr. Angus Holden?—Yes.

7922. And Mr. Kell?—Yes.

7923. Did all those gentlemen contribute to the subscription that you spoke of?—I have no doubt they did, but I will look; I have the list here.

7924. They are all very rich men, are they not?—Yes.

7925. Did Mr. Illingworth subscribe?—I have no doubt he did.

7926. He is a very rich man, is he not?—Yes.

7927. There was a very large expenditure at the municipal election, was there not?—That I do not know, but I believe there was.

7928. The largest ever known?—I should think so, in some of the wards.

7929. Particularly were Mr. Salt and Mr. Reed were the candidates?—Yes.

7930. Was beer flowing?—I do not know; I never saw it.

7931. Where Mr. Angus Holden was a candidate?—I should think not there; I was a Burgess of that ward, and I voted for them, and I saw no beer.

7932. Was there a good deal of money spent there?—I think not a great deal.

7933. Was it not generally known that the municipal election on the last occasion had cost a great deal more money than on any other that they ever had?—To take the whole borough, I do not know that it did, but in certain wards, or in one ward, I should say that it did.

7934. We have had a great deal of discussion about the East, the West, and the South Wards?—Yes.

7935. In those wards is it not notorious that the expenditure for municipal purposes was larger than ever was known?—No.

7936. In which was it so?—In the East Ward, I believe it was.

7937. Mr. Salt and Mr. Reed were the candidates there?—On one side they were.

7938. I understood you to say that a fixed sum was always put down for rooms?—Yes.

7939. Were not those 700 persons who got up the requisition entertained at what they call a knife and fork tea at St. George's Hall?—I was not at any such meeting, but I think I have some recollection of their being there.

7940. Do you know who paid for that?—No; I do not.

7941. Is it paid for at this time?—I have not the slightest idea.

7942. The requisition to Mr. Miall, I suppose, was very much like a canvass of the town?—Very much so.

7943. You have said that instructions were issued, and that a fixed sum was to be paid for the rooms; was that done in all cases?—I do not know as to that; I only can say that our instructions were, that were it was possible to do it, it was to be done; and my impression is, that in a very great majority of cases it was done.

7944. Were they entered in a book?—Yes, I believe so.

7945. Who has that book?—Mr. Kemp will have it; he attended to the engagements for the rooms.

5946. Then there would appear, in most of the instances, the sum to be charged for the rooms?—Yes; I should think so; I do not know that I ever saw the book; Mr. Kemp kept it.

7947. You spoke about your arrangements on the polling day being elaborate, I take it for granted that they were also elaborate if the election was to be well done on the other side?—I do not think that their arrangements were so good as ours, but that may be my own vanity.

7948. The telegrams were a great expense, were they not?—No; I do not say that.

7949. How much did you pay for them?—Nothing at all.

7950. Is there no item down for them?—Not the least.

7951. Did you lay down the telegraph wires?—No; there were some telegraph agents, who wished an experiment to be tried, and they said that they would do it for nothing; all the expense that we were at was to refresh the clerks only.

7952. What is the meaning then of "telegrams and telegram expenses, 10*l.* 6*s.*"?—If you will look at the details you will see.

7953. Where are the details of the telegrams?—At page 45 of our sheets; those were telegrams that were used early in the election for other purposes.

7954. On the 14th there is "for telegraph wires?"—I was not aware that that was charged; how much is it?—Four shillings and twopence.

7955. Never mind that; you stated that it had been done for nothing?—It was so by the telegraph wires.

7956. Then there is for men watching, 1*l.* 10*s.*"?—Yes, we were afraid that would be broken.

7957. Then "United Kingdom telegrams on the polling day 1*l.* 1*s.*"?—That was for telegrams to other places; we were asked to telegraph to Brookes's club.

7958. Why to Brookes's club?—To send them the state of the poll from time to time; they asked us to do it; they wished to know it, and we agreed to let them know.

7959. Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] Did you telegraph to the Reform Club also; I think we did.

7960. Mr. Price.] Just tell me this; there is a sum of 3,997*l.*, which is given as your expenditure; when do you first date the commencement of that?—From the coalition, on the 1st of August.

7961. How much do you make out was spent between between the 1st of August, when the coalition took place, and the polling day?—That amount.

7962. Mr. Baron Martin.] Do you mean altogether?—I cannot tell you that.

7963. Mr. Price.] But I should like to know?—It is impossible to tell you that; It would be a week's work to make that out.

7964. I must have the order book, if you please.

Mr. Baron Martin (to Mr. Serjeant Sargood).] You must give Mr. Price the order-book.

Mr. Serjeant Sargood (to Mr. Price).] If you mean the contract for the rooms you shall have it.

7965. Mr. Price.] I understand from you that further instructions were issued as the thing went on?—Yes.

7966. And that amongst other things you gave what I believe was a very accurate description of the law?—Yes.

Mr. Baron Martin.] I do not wish to interfere, and I suppose my brother Ballantine does not mean to do so, but when a book is produced on the other side it ought not to be handed to the attorney but to the counsel.

7967. Mr. Price.] I understand you to have issued that in which you gave your deliberate opinion that the law prohibits giving refreshments to voters?—It does.

7968. Either before or after the polling?—Yes, to voters as such; I make a distinction.

7969. Then there may be, I suppose, a voter who is not "such"?—Yes.

7971. Mr. Baron Martin.] You say that your idea was that the prohibition in the 4th Section of the Act of Parliament related to the giving of meat and drink for the purpose of influencing the free mind of the voter?—Yes, that was it, and I read the words as meaning that to be the immediate cause of giving it.

7972. That is to say, meaning something direct?—Yes; otherwise the refreshment I spoke of as given through the means of the returning officer would have been illegal with the others, because many of the persons who received it were voters.

7973. Mr. Price.] Was this opinion of yours with reference to the 4th Section or the 23rd Section as an absolute prohibition?—The 23rd Section is not an absolute prohibition of refreshment to voters.

7974. Had your opinion reference to the 4th Section or to the 23rd Section?—To both.

7975. Your idea was that they might have reasonable refreshments?—No, I should not say that; my impression was this—

7976. To sustain their energies in the performance of their duties?—I thought the distinction was this, when it was necessary for the course of the election, and in order to the progress of the work of the election, irrespectively of the person's mind who received it, that refreshment should be given to him, it might be so given to him not to reward him for his vote, but merely to prevent him from breaking his time by going home.

7977. And not to meet such a case as when a man said he could not vote on an empty belly?—No.

7978. That would be influencing a person to vote?—Yes.

7979. If that were so, will you be good enough to tell me why these tickets were not given to each Ward?—Because the South Ward only asked for them; we let each Ward work out their own machinery, and in the South Ward they said that they thought this would be a convenient way of doing it; I said, "Very well, I see no harm in it." The West Ward made the same suggestion, and they had some tickets printed, but we came to the conclusion that possibly they might be abused or misconstrued, and we did not use them.

7980. I see that these were all deliberately filled up with person's names?—Yes.

7981. And each person had a ticket?—Yes; each person who got them do you mean?

7982. I mean that each person had a ticket who asked for it?—What do you mean by "person"?

7983. If you will look at them you will see that they are supplied to persons in different names, that that was the course of business?—Yes.

7984. We have heard that a great number of men had breakfasts; where are the breakfast tickets?—I believe that the breakfasts consisted—

7985. Never mind that; where are the breakfast tickets?—There are not any; but the breakfast consisted of a couple of sandwiches and a glass of beer; there were no breakfasts.

7986. But they did get breakfasts, did they not?—No.

7987. Then these do not represent the breakfast tickets?—I believe they do in the South Ward.

7988. Were they to have breakfast and a lunch?—That was a matter of detail for the committee; my instructions were that they should have sufficient refreshments to sustain them for their work, but as to the detail of it is impossible for me to speak.

7989. In going to the poll, do you mean?—No, in taking other voters to the poll. This was to the workers, to those who were working for us.

7990. You entrusted of course to the discretion of the chairmen of the Wards as to whether they gave these tickets; did you have committeemen on the committees that were voters, and a great number?—Yes, no doubt.

7991. You trusted to the discretion of the Chairman and the conscience of the voter, whether he got up another man, or merely went himself to the poll?—I do not understand you.

A A 3

The

Mr.
J. H. Wade.
1 February
1869.

Mr. J. H. Wade. The discretion that I entrusted to them is embodied in this letter, and nothing else.

1 February 1869. 7993. Do you mean that they were to exercise a discretion as to whether the men were really working, or whether they walked up to the poll and voted?—I did not intend that any one who walked up to the poll should have it. There were only eight copies of this letter made, and they were sent to the eight gentlemen who were the chairmen of the wards, and who were thoroughly entrusted with the matter.

7994. You trusted to their discretion that they would see that the tickets were not given except to persons who actually worked for you?—I did.

7995. There were no paid canvassers?—No, I am not aware of any.

7996. You paid none?—I am not aware of it; but I must say as to that, that I have not paid every 5s. that has been paid; Mr. Kemp has paid them.

7997. You stated that there were no paid canvassers whatever, and I believe my Lord took it down?—Yes; and that is what I believe.

7998. Do you mean to stick to that?—It is my belief.

7999. If there were ninety-two canvassers at one public-house put down as paid, that is entirely unknown to you?—It is, and I not believe that it exists.

8000. Now about the poll clerks; do you say that after the arrangement which was made for the poll clerks to receive refreshments at the expense of the several candidates, and after that arrangement had been made with the town clerk, there was any necessity to give the poll clerks refreshments?—We are speaking of two different classes; the town clerk was to provide for those who were at work in the polling booth.

8001. Were these not what are called poll clerks?—Yes; but I call the others poll clerks.

8002. Are not what are called poll clerks men who are employed in the polling booths?—I think that is a more correct interpretation.

8003. Is there any other interpretation?—I think there is; I think that a clerk in a committee-room who receives the result of the poll is not very incorrectly called a poll clerk.

8004. How much did the public subscription amount to altogether?—There is a list of them, and perhaps Mr. Kemp will find them.

8005. Give it me in round numbers?—I do not know, except that Mr. Miall paid 500*l.*, Mr. Forster 800*l.* and the rest was raised by subscription; I did not collect any subscriptions.

8006. Were both the Mr. Robertshaw's very active?—Yes, they were active.

8007. There was a sum of about 2,159*l.* subscribed, I see?—Yes.

8008. There are two Mr. Robertshaw's, are there not, who are very much alike?—Yes.

8009. Do you know one from another?—Not always.

8010. There are also, I believe, two Mr. Illingworth's, who are very much like each other?—I do not think so; but they are both in court.

8011. Are they like each other?—No; I do not think so; but they are brothers.

8012. At night time might not a stranger very well take the one for the other?—He might in the dark, I should think.

8013. Can you give me any list of the committees in the wards?—No.

8014. None at all?—No.

8015. You never inquired?—No; I can tell you the chairman of each ward.

8016. Have you got that written out?—No.

8017. I understand you are not aware of any ticket having been used in the east wards?—I am not aware of it, but when a reference was made this morning to tickets, I think what was meant was something just as a check. The secretary in the ward wrote out on a slip of paper something which served as a sort of check.

8018. I suppose that cards were issued to the supporters of Messrs. Miall and Forster?—Yes; voting cards.

8019. Were they yellow cards?—Yes.

8020. Mr. Ripley's cards were white, were they not?—Yes; I may say as to the cards that there was a misconception as to the evidence arising from that. Each messenger always had a card given to him, which was a yellow or an orange card, and refreshments were supplied to some of them on producing that as a voucher. The messengers had a card, signed by some authorised agent, which enabled him to receive the poll returns at the booth, and in order that they might not get into the wrong hands, when they went in for the returns, they were asked to produce their cards, to show who they were.

8021. In addition to the chairman of the ward having a certain discretion, were the district chairmen also entrusted with a discretion as to certain matters?—Not to my knowledge.

8022. Were there district chairmen?—I believe there were.

8023. I suppose they would be the persons to sit at the public-houses?—When the meetings were held there; but there is a misconception as to the use of the committee-rooms at public-houses. The fact is, that meetings were held only at some of those houses once a fortnight, but a house being a committee-room merely meant that a meeting was held there on a fixed evening once a fortnight; by public advertisements a meeting was announced.

8024. I understood you to say that you thought getting up the requisition was a very effectual canvass of the town; that was so, was it?—It was so.

8025. Was that done by paid canvassers?—I believe that some were paid, but as to that, I have no certain knowledge; I believe that some were paid.

8026. Mr. Baron Martin.] I understand that you were not concerned in that?—No, my Lord, not at all; I was not concerned in the election at all until the coalition took place between Mr. Forster and Mr. Miall; I had always acted for Mr. Forster, and when the coalition took place—

8027. Mr. Price.] The result of that canvass, which was the result of paid canvassing, was that which brought about a coalition between Mr. Forster and Mr. Miall?—I believe it was; I believe that it showed Mr. Forster that he had got so decidedly the views of the town that he thought it his duty to call upon Mr. Miall.

8028. Mr. Baron Martin.] I understand you to say that with this canvass Mr. Forster had nothing to do, and that it was merely to show Mr. Miall what amount of votes he could get. That was the object of the canvass, and Mr. Forster had nothing to do with it?—Nothing.

8029. Mr. Price.] That was the result of a paid paid canvass?—I think only to a small extent; my impression is, that there were some paid canvassers.

8030. The expense of that canvass, as well as the expense incurred, whatever it was, as to the entertainment at Saint George's Hall, is not brought into this account?—Certainly not.

8031. Or any expense connected with the Liberal Association, which had been getting up this requisition to Mr. Miall?—No.

8032. Nor any of the expenses incurred about the municipal election?—No.

8033. How many poll-clerks had you?—What do you mean by poll-clerks?"

8034. Mr. Baron Martin.] By poll-clerks I presume you mean persons, whether they were at a polling-booth or not, concerned in making calculations of the polling?—Yes, that is my view of a poll-clerk.

8035. You were called upon to form an opinion upon the meaning of the 4th section of the 17 & 18 of Victoria, cap. 102, and I understand the conclusion you came to was, that it did not distinctly prohibit refreshments being given on account of persons who were actually doing work?—Yes.

8036. That was your conclusion?—Yes.

8037. Am I to understand that you honestly acted upon that in the directions that you gave about this election?—Certainly.

[The Witness withdrew.

Mr. ALFRED BLYTHE KEMP, sworn; Examined by Mr. Pope.

8038. YOU, I believe, were the agent employed at the last election, and through whose hands all the payments were made?—Yes, with the exception of two or three items at the first.

8039. I believe your duties commenced on the 12th of October, and the last payment and the balancing of your account was about the 30th of November?—Later than that.

8040. Let me ask you this generally; were all the payments which you made from time to time entered in your cash-book in the regular way?—Yes.

8041. And are they all there?—They are all there.

8042. Are all the payments which you made filed, with all the vouchers, in the accounts handed to the returning officer?—Yes.

8043. Have there been any claims made, or are there any claims outstanding other than those included in that return?—No.

8044. Just let me briefly ask you to tell me what the real figures are, as disclosed by that return; for instance, we were told by Mr. Blackburn that there were 97 who appeared to have been paid, who were voters, or, as he said, persons of similar name; have you carefully examined the list. But before I asked you that question, he gave me the figures of 594 persons employed, according to those returns, who were paid; I believe that is an error?—Yes.

8045. There are 594 entries, but they represent 495 people, I believe?—Four hundred and ninety-five.

8046. Mr. Baron Martin.] Four hundred and ninety-five people were employed in the election?—Yes.

8047. Mr. Pope.] They were employed and paid?—Yes.

8048. That is in addition, of course, to the volunteer force, whatever that might have been?—Yes, and to the legal agents.

8049. We were told that in the list there were 97 voters; is that true?—No.

8050. Are there any voters, and, if so, how many?—On one of the analysis which Mr. Blackburn made, I can only find one voter.

8051. Do you know how he got there?—I believe he hit upon it.

28.

8052. Do you know how he became paid?—He gave in a false name.

8053. Mr. Price.] Do you know that of your own knowledge?—Yes, I am speaking from my own knowledge.

8054. What is the name which he gave?—Bramin, the witness who came forward at the first trial.

8055. Mr. Pope.] What name was he paid under?—He was paid under the name of Bramin, and gave the address as No. 1, Wapping-street, whereas the correct name was Bamin, No. 27, Wapping-street.

8056. You say that that is the only voter that you have been able to discover in the list given by Mr. Blackburn?—Yes.

8057. Then the 96 which he gave were not voters at all?—No.

8058. In fact, some of them were boys?—Some of them were boys and some dead men.

8059. Were the dead on the register, or were they actually dead?—Yes, they were actually dead.

8060. You say that that is according to Mr. Blackburn's list?—Yes.

8061. Let us have the whole of the facts; have you searched the list for yourself?—Yes.

8062. Do you find any more in that one list, after investigation?—No.

8063. With regard to the public-houses, will you just look at that list, and tell me whether that is an accurate list of the number of committees held, of the houses, and the whole particulars with reference to it (handing a list to the Witness)?—Yes.

8064. That shows 127 committee-rooms in public-houses, of which 62 furnished refreshments?—Yes.

8065. Do you know whether in those 127 houses meetings were held every night, or only occasionally?—Very occasionally in some of the houses.

8066. They appear as committee-rooms; but the meetings were only held occasionally there?—Only occasionally, and very small sums were paid for some of them.

Cross-examined by Mr. Price.

8067. Let me understand how you test the fact. It is a fact, is it not, that there are 96 names amongst your paid canvassers whose identical names appear on the register?—You may in such a case —

8068. Do answer my question; is it the fact that 96 names are paid canvassers?—

Mr. Baron Martin.] I understood that there were no paid canvassers; you had better ask him whether there were any. The evidence that I have got hitherto is, that there were no paid canvassers.

8069. Mr. Price.] Perhaps I am wrong in calling them canvassers; they were 96 persons who had refreshment. Is it true that there were 96 persons who had refreshment whose names are identical with 96 people on the register?—I should think so; but that is from Mr. Blackburn's account.

8070. And in that ward alone?—In what ward?

8071. The South Ward; Mr. Blackburn was alluding to the ward in which the tickets were taken?—No, he was not, indeed; he speaks of every ward in the borough.

Mr. Blackburn's report was read.

Mr. Baron Martin.] There were 97 voters, clerks and messengers, judging from their names and addresses.

8072. Mr. Price.] No; Mr. Blackburn's evidence is, that there were 72 voters who received refreshments from those tickets, that is in the South Ward, and that you can only find one voter who was paid. Do you mean by paid, paid as a clerk or messenger?—Yes.

8073. Did you pass all the accounts?—I paid all the accounts.

8074. In the Bowling Ward, if you have got it there, will you turn to it?—Yes.

8075. "Day of polling, refreshments per tickets—breakfast for seven, 4s. 8d.; one gallon of ale, 1s. 8d.; rum, 10d.; tobacco, 2s. 11d.; and ale, 1l."?—What are you referring to?

8076. The Bowling Ward, the day of polling?—But where?

8077. At the "Napoleon"?—I have only the amounts here; the voucher was filed in the cause.

8078. I suppose you had the particulars?—Yes.

8079. Have you returned them?—Yes.

8080. I have asked for this and I cannot get it from you; but I will ask you, upon your recollection, did you pass such items as this as being, according to what Mr. Wade tells us, refreshment for work done; brandy, gin, port wine, bottled beer, cigars, and tobacco?—I paid such items if they are down in that account.

8081. You knew of Mr. Wade's careful instructions, and the construction of the Act that he put upon it, that what was necessary to sustain the energies of those who had worked was to be passed; did you know that under those instructions there was an absolute prohibition, and did you know that Mr. Wade's view was, that refreshments ought only to be given to sustain energy?—Yes.

8082. And did you after that pass brandy, ale, and gin?—

Mr. Baron Martin.] This bill is Forster and Miall's committee: "To four weeks' use of room and use of small upstairs' room on the polling day, 5s.; breakfast for seven, 4s. 9d.; rum, tobacco, brandy, gin, port wine, and bottled beer, 4s. 10d.; the brandy amounting to 1s. 4d., the gin to 3d., and the port wine to 3d."

8083. Mr. Price.] The ale comes to 1l., bottled beer 7s. 6d., cigars 7s., and refreshments 12l. 13s. 2d.; what do you understand to be refreshments, &c., &c., &c., as distinct from bottled beer, brandy, gin, port wine, gallons of ale, rum, tobacco, and tobacco?—They might be sandwiches, and they might be other things.

8084. They might be ham sandwiches, might not they?—Yes.

8085. Then the meaning of all those &c.'s you cannot give us an idea of?—No.

8086. Is it a fact that to a great number of the bills that were returned no particulars are given at all, but merely a lump sum?—Yes.

8087. Received the sum of so-and-so for refreshments?—Yes.

8088. Do you know that in the great majority of cases that is so?—I do not say the great majority of cases, but in a great number of cases it is so.

8089. That is put on a printed form, such as we have seen?—Yes.

8090. Although you have the details furnished you from the houses themselves?—There are no details but what are filed.

8091. How are those sums made out, those lump sums; do you mean to say that you paid them without the landlord furnishing you with a detailed account?—I must explain the mode of dealing with the accounts; the chairman of the district, or the secretary, was empowered to certify the accounts for refreshments, and when those accounts had been so certified, then the people came to me for payment.

8092. The

8092. Then, when you were satisfied, when you saw the certificate of the chairman, you required no details?—Except in instances where the amounts appeared to me large, then I inquired into them.

8093. Where are the certificates of the chairmen of those accounts?—All the certificates that we had are filed; there may be the orders to pay.

8094. Is that the case with regard to all?—Yes, with regard to all.

8095. Here is the bill; look at it. Here is a bill of John Hunt, of the "Rose and Crown," Longcroft-place; I see on this bill he gives you in dinner for eight men, 2 s. a man; refreshments all day, 2 l. 13 s.; total, 3 l. 9 s.; and I see at the back of this there is refreshments, 16 s., in pencil. E. C. Pollard, never authorised to do any more. Does that mean to represent Mr. Pollard, who was chairman of that district, or the secretary, the person we heard you say in whose certificate you trusted to, was of opinion that this man had spent more than he was authorised?—It appeared so at first until inquiry was made.

8096. You eventually paid him the whole demand?—Yes, when we found that it was correct.

8097. Perhaps his Lordship will allow me to recall Mr. Wade; I understood Mr. Wade to say that all the committee-rooms were hired on a form like this (handing a form to the Witness)?—No, not at all.

8098. (To Mr. Wade). This begins at 101; what is up to 101?—I do not know anything about that; Mr. Kemp knows more than I do.

8099. (To Mr. Kemp). Those bills are 101; where is 101, or I will take it in this way: have you got a single bill that will show the hiring of a single room in the West Ward?—No; I believe there are no engagements of the West Ward in this bill.

8100. Is every other ward there but the West Ward?—I believe not; I can tell you in a moment by looking through this book.

8101. My learned friend has looked through the book and tells me it is so, but you cannot tell me whether that is so or not; all that you have are here, I suppose?—All the engagements that were made on that form are here.

8102. Mr. Baron Martin.] What is your business; are you an accountant?—I am an agent at Bradford.

8103. Mr. Price.] I should like to know why should you not pursue the same course in the West Ward as in the other wards; as in the Manningham Ward, for instance?—All throughout that ward the chairman and secretary of the ward made their own engagements, and they did not return them in that form to the central committee.

8104. Did they make any return?—No.

8105. Then it was left entirely to the end of the election?—It was left entirely to the end of the election; they had their bills under their own control and made their own arrangements.

8106. Although you had insisted, I conclude, upon a different proceeding with regard to the other wards?—There was no insisting about it.

8107. I mean you had made it expressly for that, and not for all the other wards?—Only partially; there are a great many engagements for other wards that are not in that form.

8108. Who was the chairman of the West Ward?—At first, Alderman West, the present mayor, was chairman.

8109. He was the chairman at first; who succeeded him when he was made returning officer?—Mr. Brown.

8110. Who was the secretary?—Mr. Akam.

8111. Do you know the "Foresters' Arms"?—Yes.

8112. Was Mr. Whalley the secretary?—Yes.

8113. And Mr. Irving the chairman there?—Yes.

8114. Did you pass that account containing 95 refreshment tickets?—Yes.

8115. What does that mean?—I asked an explanation of Mr. Whalley, and he said he had written short notes to the landlords, saying, "Supply so-and-so with refreshments;" but there were no tickets used.

8116. Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] What is the name of the landlord?—John McCan.

8117. Mr. Price.] Was the bill paid in that form?—Yes, after inquiry.

8118. What was the amount of the bill?—£.2. 5 s.

[The Witness withdrew.

EDWARD WEST, Esq., made a solemn affirmation; and was Examined by Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.

8119. YOU are now Mayor of Bradford?—Yes, I am.

8120. At the time of this election you had not attained that dignity?—I had not.

8121. I perceive that your name is to the bills in the West Ward and the East Ward?—Yes.

8122. I believe I may take it that another gentleman did your duty, a Mr. Beaumont?—Another gentleman did it from the very first; I was out of health, and I could not attend.

8123. You have had nothing whatever to do with that ward?—I had nothing whatever to do with that ward.

The Right Honourable WILLIAM EDWARD FORSTER, M.P., sworn; Examined by Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.

8124. ARE you the present Member for the borough of Bradford?—Yes.

8125. When were you first elected, I mean the original election?—In 1861, upon the resignation of Mr. Salt.

28.

8127. I believe you are a manufacturer carrying on an extensive business in this borough?—My works, at least the works of the firm of which I am a partner, are 10 miles from this borough, but we have a warehouse in which we sell pieces, the pieces that we make.

8128. So that you may be called a local man?—Yes; and I am a burgess of the borough also.

ight Hon. 8129. Had you been at all acquainted with Mr. Miall before the present contest?—I met him, I think, once at Mr. Cobden's funeral, and I saw him once for a minute or two at a committee upon education, I think it was; otherwise I never saw him until the day on which I thought it my duty to coalesce with him.

8130. I believe you are no party in any way to the canvass of the Liberal electors pursued by Mr. Miall?—None whatever; it was while I was in Parliament, and very busy in Parliament.

8131. I believe, in passing the Act, among other things, under which my Lord is sitting?—Yes.

8132. Then, there was no personal connection between you and Mr. Miall; but the numbers of Liberal electors in his favour were such that you felt bound to join with him?—I may explain that, when I was first asked by a deputation of Mr. Miall's friends to coalesce with him, it was before my late colleague, Mr. Thompson, had signified his intention not to stand; and, also, I was convinced by that deputation that the majority of what I considered the Liberal part of the borough were in favour of Mr. Miall. I said that I thought I could not rightly coalesce with him, in opposition to the colleague who had been voting with me during the last session. I therefore refused to do so. Immediately after that, to my surprise, and I believe to the surprise of everyone in the borough, Mr. Thompson declared that he would not stand again. I then thought that the objection which stood against my coalescing with Mr. Miall was removed; and, quite irrespective of any consequences to myself, I thought it my duty to coalesce with him.

8133. I believe that, so far as your own position in the borough went, that certainly did not effect it beneficially?—No, it did not; but I should be misleading my Lord if I said that I thought that it really endangered my seat; I thought my seat safe from the beginning.

8134. I believe that the solicitor who has been called had been your solicitor on former occasions?—His partner, Mr. George, was my agent, and it was the same thing.

8135. But Mr. Wade was active in the matter, while Mr. George had nothing whatever to do with it?—Yes; I believe that it was a necessary formality, that both Mr. Miall and myself should appoint a gentleman as an agent, and I think I made a form of appointing Mr. George, and I think Mr. Miall appointed Mr. Wade.

8136. Mr. Wade was the gentleman who really did all the business?—It was understood so.

8137. I suppose that it was a matter of some anxiety to you to know what was the legal course at an election, with regard to some provisions of the different Acts?—Yes, it was so. Very soon after my coalescence I went abroad, and remained abroad till the beginning of October; when I got back I found the town in a ferment of agitation, and what seemed to me to be a very severe contest, which, although I was nominally engaged in, was to my belief, and I think to the belief of every other person in the borough, a contest really between Mr. Miall and Mr. Ripley. I did not at first ask my friends whether they were conducting it with every effort for purity, because I felt that I should have insulted them by doing so; but I thought it my duty to ascertain, to the best of my ability, that not only did they wish to do it, but that they were taking measures to secure that it was conducted so.

8138. I believe that you sent for some of your friends?—Two or three times; several times, I believe, I spoke to Mr. Wade, who I knew was as anxious as myself, merely to satisfy myself that he was taking the practicable steps that were desirable. But I may mention, that a few days before the election, when I saw how very hot the contest was, I especially requested him to call the two vice-chairmen, I may say the two active managers of the election (Mr. Titus Salt, the chairman's health not allowing him to have much to do with it), Mr. Brown, and Mr. Kell, to meet me at Mr. Wade's office.

8139. And they did so, I believe?—Yes, they did so; and I may say that I have no reason to suppose that anything had been done, or would be done; but I thought that it was not enough for me to express a wish that purity should be preserved, but that I must be sure that steps were taken to preserve it; and I said to Mr. Wade, "Not only do I wish it on public grounds, but it would be a cruel shame" (I think that was the word I used), "if I should be in any way endangered, when without my coalition with Mr. Miall I could not have been endangered, because I should have had probably no committee at all, certainly only a few gentlemen, and I should have thrown myself generally on the constituency, and I believe there would have been no necessity for that active organisation out of which alone danger could arise."

8140. And did you explain your views to those gentlemen in the presence of Mr. Wade?—They said what I knew very well, that they were as anxious as I was; I fully believed them. I believed them then and I believe them now. I may say that Mr. Wade then read to me (I think he had done so before) the first instructions that he had issued, and I think he told me that he was going to repeat them. I said, "These are all very good for you and me; they give extracts from the law, but," I said, "we may have to deal with persons who will not perfectly understand the letter of the law, and I am afraid." (I made use of this expression) "you must turn it into English so that they can thoroughly understand it." I allude to the first instruction, in which he repeated sentence after sentence from the Act of Parliament, and I said, "You must send round a letter telling them, in practical common sense words, what are the sort of things that they must do."

8141. And that resulted, I suppose, in the further instructions?—Yes. While they were talking over that, I heard one of them make use of the word refreshment, which rather alarmed me, and I turned round and said, "I do not know what that means," and they then explained it to me. I think Mr. Wade himself explained it; and he said that it would be impossible on the day of the polling to get through the work, unless the people had something to eat and to drink. I said, "I suppose you mean it for workers only?" and I came away from the room with the full conviction that it was the intention of Mr. Wade, and of my vice-chairman, that it should be confined to workers, and that it was his belief and their belief that the law justified them in the refreshments.

8142. Mr. Baron Martin.] You were satisfied that the refreshment was intended for workers only, and in your judgment the law authorised it?—Yes; I did not pretend to interpret the law, except I could just recollect that the word corruptly ruptly had turned up in the debates on the Reform Bill, and also on the Bribery Bill, and I clearly understood that it meant what I may call the popular English interpretation, but, of course, that is for the lawyers rather than for me.

8143. Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] Then all you come to do there, is to make Acts of Parliament which the people cannot understand?—It is our fault very often, I fear. -

8144. Mr. Baron Martin.] It is obvious that what I said casually, is the same view that Mr. Forster has, that this clause in the Act really was framed for a Committee of the House of Commons?—Quite so.

8145. Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] We have heard the result of the election; and I suppose you knew from time to time how the polling was going on?—Yes. I should just like to mention, as it has been a matter that has been mooted, the practical reason upon which I grounded my firm belief that my own seat was safe. Very soon after my return from the Continent, I saw the canvass book; in fact, I took care to see the canvass book day after day. From the very first I was very considerably ahead of my colleague in the contest, Mr. Miall. I paid no attention to the numbers that were given in the canvass-book for Mr. Ripley, because I felt that I could not depend upon what my opponent canvassers said; but I did depend upon the reports that were made by canvassers who I knew were very much the same persons who had canvassed for the requisition for Mr. Miall; and when those books showed me from the beginning, and day after day, myself largely ahead of Mr. Miall, I knew that I was safe, and I may say that, with the exception of one day or two, in which in the ward of Great Horton, I was two behind Mr. Miall, there was never a time in which I was not ahead of him in each of the wards. I may also say that I grounded my belief that my seat was safe upon the knowledge that no one was really opposing me, that the only opposition that was taken to me in the course of the contest, was upon two grounds; first, that of coalition with Mr. Miall; and, secondly, that on meeting a few persons representing themselves to be Fenians, or having Fenian sympathies, but whom, by the evidence before this Court, I find to have been agents of Mr. Kitcheman, they made some objection to me.

8146. We have heard what was the result of the poll, and we have heard the particulars of these petitions; I will just ask you this: Do you know of one single halfpenny being spent at the election in an improper mode?—I do not.

8147. And is there anything whatever behind of any character or class, to the best of your knowledge?—Most certainly not; and I may say this, that from the first moment that I heard of the possibility of a petition against Mr. Ripley, I thought it was possible that it might be followed by a petition against myself, and I really have been spending all the time that I could spare in trying to discover whether there had been anything done which ought not to have been done; and I may say that I have not discovered it.

Cross-examined by Mr. Price.

8148. It is not an uncommon thing for the candidate to be the last person to discover it?—Not an uncommon thing; but I should think it an uncommon thing for any candidate who had taken such pains to find out as I have.

8149. It is a fact, is it not, that there was an immensely large increase to the constituency by the New Reform Bill?—From somewhere about 5,000 to 19,960 possible voters.

8150. There were 14,000 new voters who had never expressed any political opinion so far as voting was concerned?—No; they had expressed very great agreement with me upon political questions.

8151. Pardon me, I did not say that they had not, but I merely said, to get the fact, that there were 14,000 who, as far as voting was concerned, had not had an opportunity before of expressing their opinion?—Yes.

8152. And Mr. Miall had very carefully canvassed them before you determined to coalesce?—He himself had not canvassed. There had been this requisition.

8153. You and Mr. Ripley were on very good terms?—We were on the terms of acquaintance of two gentlemen living in the same town and working together.

8154. There are mutual friends of both of you?—Yes, a great many.

8155. They voted nearly to a man, did not they?—No; a great number of gentlemen who expressed great willingness to support me before have since expressed regret that my coalition with Mr. Miall prevented their voting for me, and did not vote for me; I believe, if you ask me the question, there probably were 2,000 or 3,000 voters who, under the circumstances, would have voted for me, but did not.

8156. Mr. Ripley was at the head of the poll up to the middle of the day, I believe?—I think not till the middle of the day; I think not at 12; I think it was before 12 that I headed him; there were differences between his returns and our returns.

8157. Do not you know, or have you had a sufficient analysis of the poll-book to know, that after that hour Mr. Ripley's friends, finding that Mr. Miall had no chance of success, gave you their split votes, having up to that time, as you say, plumped for Mr. Ripley, but after that time, when Mr. Miall was, as you say, dead beaten, Mr. Ripley's friends then, I would not say to a man, because that cannot be said, but Mr. Ripley's friends very generally split with you?—No, I have not that knowledge. I know that several of Mr. Ripley's friends did split with me; and I knew that, under any circumstances, they would; I know also, that a short time before the election a circular was sent round by Mr. Ripley's committee requesting them not to vote for me; but I know that a very great number of them quite disregarded that circular.

[The Witness withdrew.]

Right Hon.
W. E.
Forster,
M. P.
1 Februar
1869.

Mr. ROBERT KELL, sworn; Examined by Mr. Serjeant Sargood.

R. Kell.
February
1869.

8158. WHAT are you?—A Merchant in Bradford.

8159. I think you were vice-chairman, were you not, of Forster and Miall's committee?—One of the vice-chairmen, Mr. Brown being the other.

8160. What part did you take in the conduct of affairs as vice-chairman?—I attended a great many meetings of the various selected committees in the Central Ward committee-room in the borough; I attended a great many political meetings to advocate the claims of Mr. Forster and Mr. Miall, doing a great deal of stump oratory.

8161. Did you attend any of the meetings in that important locality called Silsbridge-lane, do you remember?—Yes, I was in the West Ward, I think, upon four separate occasions. Upon the first occasion I walked with Mr. Mahoney from my club to the "Gladstone Arms," where a meeting was to be held; a public meeting which was called by placard in the large upper room of the "Gladstone Arms." A good deal has been said about beer in that ward; I should like to go into detail. We arrived at the "Gladstone Arms" too soon for the meeting, a quarter of an hour too soon, perhaps; did not go up into the large room above, but sat down by ourselves in a small room on the left-hand side, the bar side of the house. I called for a glass of beer, and paid 2 d. for it; Mr. Mahoney called for a glass of beer, and paid 2 d. for it, and two or three other gentlemen came in, and most of them called for a glass of beer, and paid 2 d. for it; then we went into the large room upstairs, and held a meeting, and went from that place to another inn, which, I think, is called the "Britannia;" a smaller room, in which one of the gentlemen present said he counted 115 persons.

8162. Before we get to the "Britannia," in the upper room where the meeting was held, was there any treating, or anything of the sort, to your knowledge?—No; there was no beer whatever in that room; the room is surrounded by a bench against the wall, and that bench was pretty well filled, and the rest of the whole space was vacant, with the exception of a small table in front of a little dais, on which we stood; a great number of the meeting came up the staircase with us, or following us, and filled the room entirely.

8163. Was there no beer?—No sign of any beer; we went then to a small inn, which is called, I think, the "Britannia," into an upper room; there were, perhaps, 30 or 40 persons in the room when we went into it, and the room filled up till it was like the Black Hole of Calcutta for heat and unpleasantness. When we went there, there were 30 or 40 persons sitting or standing as well as they could, and there were about five glasses with something in them before the men here and there; about four or five or six glasses, but no general drinking; they were evidently waiting till the speakers came to form the meeting; there were no cans, no pitchers, no anything.

8164. From there did you visit any other place?—Not that night; after speaking I returned into the town.

8165. Those district committees were not held daily, I believe?—No; in many committee-rooms meetings were held, and they were called Forster and Miall's committee-rooms, and our yellow or orange bills were kept constantly in the windows;

it was called a Forster and Miall house. In some of those rooms a meeting was held once a fortnight, in other rooms once a week, and sometimes twice a week, and perhaps in most of them they got to be more frequent as the election approached, and you will find that in almost every ward, bills were printed in which a committee meeting was held, say in the "Black Horse" on Monday night, in the "Brown Cow" on Tuesday night, in the "Labourers' Arms" on Wednesday night, and so on throughout.

8166. This is the sort of bill: "Travellers' Rest," Tuesday, 29th September; "Fitzgerald" Inn, Friday, 2nd October; "Robin Hood" Inn, Tuesday, 6th; "Brown Cow" Inn, Friday, 9th, and so forth?—Yes.

8167. About twice a week varying the rooms?—Yes; I am anxious to put in that evidence to meet the allegation that those public-houses were kept open for Forster and Miall's meeting.

8168. Mr. Baron Martin.] You mean that as showing that any person might go in and drink there when the meeting was not being held?—Yes.

8169. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] There was no kind of meeting of the committee de die in diem?—No.

8170. But a meeting was publicly announced on a certain evening?—Yes; as you read the bill, Forster and Miall's committee-room was there permanently, but all other nights the room was used for any other purpose that the landlord applied it to.

8171. On ordinary meetings of the canvassers did they take there beer or whatever they wanted?—No doubt; I spoke of having been in the West Ward four times; I think I said that Mr. Mahoney was with me on that night, and with the exception of 2 d. which I paid for a glass of beer, and 2 d. which Mr. Mahoney paid for a glass of beer, no beer was paid for by anybody, and no beer was drunk; I was, as I said, four times in the West Ward; twice was at a large room not in a public-house at all, but a room in Northgate which holds perhaps 600 or 700 people; Mr. Mahoney was with me there, and Mr. Miall was with us upon one occasion; I forget now whether it was one of the nights when Mr. Miall was with us, but there was no drinking and no anything; it was not a public-house; it was a large room nearly as large as this court.

8172. While you were with Mr. Mahoney in any public-house did he, to your knowledge or in your presence, ever treat anybody?—Never; he paid 2 d. for one glass of beer at the "Gladstone Arms."

8173. It is stated that he did that when you were with him?—That is not so; the second time I was there was with Mr. Mahoney, and the third time I was there with Mr. Mahoney in company with Messrs. Miall and Forster; on that evening we visited nine houses, almost always the large upper room where a public meeting was held; not a committee meeting; those rooms were all filled as full as they could hold, and I suppose that Messrs. Forster and Miall addressed that night nearly 2000 people in those different rooms; there was no drinking in any of them, nor any sign of any drinking; there was no room for drinking, the tables had been cleared out, or if they had not, they were sat upon or stood upon by the audience; that makes the four occasions upon upon which I remember to have been in the West Ward.

8174. To your knowledge, both there and elsewhere, was there always a guarded abstinence from anything of the sort?—I never saw any drinking of any sort; I do not remember ever seeing, except as I speak of on that evening, any beer upon a table at all, in either a jug or a pitcher or a can, and I went about a great deal; I went to transact business it is true, or else to hold public meetings, and not to the small district committee meetings.

Cross-examined by Mr. Price.

Mr. R. Kell.

1 February
1869.

8175. I understand from you that when you went down it was like the announcements one sees in the playbills; you were the great stump orator of the borough, and the people were sufficiently delighted to hear you without caring for drink in the least while you were there?—Very likely.

8176. The tables were taken away and you jumped upon a chair or a platform. You were the star of the evening, in fact?—Not exactly; I spoke a great deal.

[The Witness withdrew.]

ALFRED ILLINGWORTH, Esq., M.P., sworn; Examined by Mr. Pope.

8177. You are the Member of Parliament for Knaresborough?—Yes.

8178. And were you interested in the election of Messrs. Forster and Miall?—As much as any man in the borough.

8179. I will just ask you this: were you ever at the "Gladstone Arms," and did you say to the landlord, "Let them have plenty of beer in"?—In every particular it is an unmitigated lie.

Cross-examined by Mr. Price.

[The Witness withdrew.]

8180. That is strong language, and I will accept it; it being language that you have learned at Knaresborough, I presume?—I was never there in my life. That is the only explanation that I should like to make. Mr. Price speaks of the qualification for Knaresborough, but I should say that there is only one Yorkshire borough, and that is Sheffield, where a smart price was offered, but it was not accepted there.

A.

Illingworth,
Esq., M.P.

Mr. HENRY ILLINGWORTH, sworn; Examined by Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.

8181. ARE you the brother of the last witness?—I am.

8182. Have you heard what was imputed to your brother?—Yes.

8183. Are you the person who is guilty of it?—No, I am not.

8184. Mr. Baron Martin.] Were you at the "Gladstone Arms"?—I have been there several times, but never once did I order a glass of beer, or speak to the landlord to order any beer, in there in my life.

Cross-examined by Mr. Price.

Mr. H.
Illingworth.

8185. You had been there several times during the election?—Yes.

8186. And took an active part?—Yes, I may say I did; I should think I had been there three or four times.

8187. Mr. Baron Martin.] You never ordered anything?—Never.

[The Witness withdrew.]

MR. GEORGE BEAUMONT, sworn; Examined by Mr. Serjeant Sargood.

8188. YOU were also a vice-chairman of the general committee, I think?—I was.

8189. And did you take an active part and do work as chairman?—I did.

8190. Did you see the instructions that were sent to the various wards?—I did.

8191. As far as you were able to say, were they acted upon with great care?—They were.

8192. Did you see the printed notices that were sent round with the extracts from the statutes as to the law upon bribery, treating, and so forth?—I did.

8193. Were they publicly exhibited in the rooms?—To the best of my knowledge, they were in every room.

8194. Were your committees, committees that were actually working in the matter, or were people put upon them as a mere sham?—They were very hard-working committees.

8195. Had you books, and card and voters' books, and so forth?—We had.

8196. And did you use them?—We used them.

8197. Do you know of any paid canvassers?—Not in our ward.

28.

8198. Of course, I can only ask you as to your own ward?—There were not any in our ward.

8199. What time of day was the work usually done by the committees?—Almost invariably at night.

8200. I believe most of you were gentlemen occupied in business during the day?—Yes.

8201. Was yours the second largest ward in the borough?—It was.

8202. How many voters have you in it; do you know?—About 3,300; I do not know the exact number.

8203. Then yours was a very large ward, and you had to work in it in subdivided portions, I suppose?—Yes.

8204. Do you know how many people were employed on the polling day in doing work in and out of doors?—I do not; it was a very large number in the different districts; we had seven districts in our ward.

8205. I believe you had drivers of carriages, and messengers, and so on, all hard at work?—We had.

B B 3

8206. You

Mr. G.
Beaumont.

Mr. G. Beaumont. 8206. You are aware the refreshments were provided on that day?—Yes.
 — 8207. To your knowledge, were they confined to those people who were at work?—To my knowledge, they were.
 February 1869.

Cross-examined by Mr. Price.

8208. You did not carve the ham, I take that for granted?—No.

8209. Or draw the beer?—No.

8210. You say that all those printed instructions were hung up; had you a great number of working men upon your committees?—We had.

8211. Irish?—Not many Irish on the committee; we had Irish meetings, but there were not so many Irish on the committees.

8212. But you had Irish?—Yes, we had Irish.

8213. Whether they could all read or write you do not know?—I do not.

8214. I am afraid that the experience which we have had would tell you that there are a good many voters in Bradford that could neither do one nor the other?—Yes.

8215. Have you got a list of the committees that you can give me?—We have no lists of the committees.

8216. Did you not make the list out?—We had an executive ward committee.

8217. I should like to see it; I should like to know whether you had any list of what were called those district committees?—No, I have not.

8218. How many committees had you in Silsbridge-lane altogether?—We had only one in Silsbridge-lane.

8219. What did you take so many public-houses for?—Those were taken long before the election for the purpose of holding meetings.

8220. You held a meeting once a week?—I cannot tell you exactly how often; once a fortnight I should think it would be.

8221. Do you mean that this number of public-houses were taken in Silsbridge-lane for the purpose of holding meetings?—Yes, and for the polling day.

8222. Why should not one do for you; why did you want to take two within 20 yards of one another?—There are 750 voters I believe in that district, and on the polling day it was our opinion that it would be best to divide the districts.

8223. I am speaking of long before the polling day; what was the occasion for your having this large number of committee-rooms, which you say were taken long before the election, in Silsbridge-lane, within 20 yards of one another?—To hold meetings, not merely for the purpose of our arrangements on the polling day.

8224. I see that there are a nest of eight, all in that small circle (describing the same) on a map, and do you mean to say that it was absolutely necessary to take those for the purpose of holding meetings; and for the polling day?—They were the most convenient houses that we could get for the purpose.

8225. What was the largest meeting that you have held?—There was no large meeting there.

8226. What meetings did you hold at those places?—The weekly meetings for the canvassers.

8227. Might not one have done?—One might have done, certainly.

8228. Had you been put down at each of those houses as committee-men?—I cannot answer that question.

8229. Who can answer it for me?—Mr. Robertshaw was the chairman within that district.

8230. Do you mean to say that you really do not know?—I do not know how many there were.

8231. But were there, or were there not, committees formed of voters of the class you have told us in each of those houses?—No, I believe not; to the best of my belief they were not.

8232. They were called committee-houses, which was after all a sham; they were not committee-houses, although they were called committee-houses?—They were called Forster and Miall's committee-rooms.

8233. And to the best of your belief, at a great number of them no committees were ever held?—No, there was not a room there but what committees were held at it.

8234. I asked you just now, were there district committees formed in each of those houses?—I believe not at each of those houses; the way the thing was worked was this. There were six or seven; I am not quite sure how many, and placards were printed, and meetings were held alternately, which would come round about once every 10 days or two weeks at each house.

8235. Why could not they always be held at the same house?—They might have always been held at the same house, but it was more convenient as we did hold them.

8236. Did you one night go round with Messrs. Forster and Miall to as many as 13 of those houses?—I do not know; no, it is not 13; I really cannot tell you the number, but my impression is that it was some eight or nine.

8237. Eight or nine you went to; do you know whether they were going to others after you had left them in the same district?—They started at one end, and went round the district.

8238. You went to eight or nine, and they had not finished all their round?—Yes, they had.

8239. Had they been to any others before you joined them?—Not that I am aware of.

[The Witness withdrew.]

The Right Honourable WILLIAM EDWARD FORSTER, M.P., re-called; further Examined by Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.

Right Hon. W. E. Forster, M. P. 8240. You have heard the question in relation to the number of public-houses; have you got a memorandum of every one you went to?—Yes, I have.

8241. How many did you go to?—Mr. Miall and myself went to nine public-houses in what is called the Irish quarter in one evening, and I can give the reason why we did so; we did not do it in any other quarter; I may say that between my return from the Continent and the day of nomination, I attended 36 meetings; six were in St. Georges Hall, 15 were in school-rooms, and 15 were in public-houses; and the reason that we went in the Irish quarter to so many was, that I was told that there was very great discussion amongst the Irish themselves, and they were intending to promise to vote for Mr. Miall and himself; but there were many reasons reasons given to them why they should not, and we were told that they preferred meeting us in a comparatively small room, when they could ask us questions more easily than they could in large rooms, and the result was that on that evening very important questions were asked me by men representing themselves to be Fenians, who I understand now were paid agents of Mr. Kitchenman.

[The Witness withdrew.]

Right Hon.
W. E.
Forster,
M. P.

1 February
1869.

Mr. JOSHUA POLLARD, sworn; Examined by Mr. Pope.

8242. ARE you a Commission Merchant at Bradford?—Yes.

8243. And you, I believe, were during this election chairman of the East Ward?—Yes.

8244. That is the ward in which reference has been made to several public-houses?—It is.

8245. Let me ask you this question generally, before asking you specially with regard to any of them; was an express arrangement made with the public-houses as to the hire of their rooms?—There was.

8246. Tell us what the arrangement made was?—The arrangement made was that they should be used for places of meeting in order that members of the committee might go in there and out there without being compelled to drink for the good of the house, as they called it.

8247.—Was it an express resolution that they should not be expected to drink for the good of the house?—It was.

8248. And on that account was an additional price paid for the rooms?—Later on it was.

8249. The "Airedale Inn" has been mentioned in the East Ward as being one of the houses in question; throughout the East Ward, were those committee rooms or houses kept open every day, or were they used for meetings at intervals as in the case of the West Ward?—None of them were kept open every day, but just like Mr. Beaumont has said in the West Ward, meetings were held very occasionally, sometimes once a week, and an adjournment to another place at another time, but still never more than once a week.

8250. Mr. Baron Martin.] There was no permanent occupation of those houses?—No.

8251. It was merely for the privilege of going there when you thought fit?—That is all.

8252. Mr. Pope.] As chairman of the ward were you in the habit of constantly going round to those various meetings?—Several times; I went frequently.

8253. Had you ever seen anything like drinking or treating going on when you have visited those committee rooms?—I can not only say no, but in many of them I have never seen drink astir at all, I have not seen the shadow of it.

8254. Towards the end of the time I believe some of those public-houses left you and went to the other side?—They did.

8255. Was it in consequence of that, and to prevent them complaining that you did not drink enough, that the prices were raised and more paid for the use of the rooms?—It was so.

8256. I understand you that you went round to those various committee rooms in your own Ward?—I did frequently.

8257. You were aware of the instruction that had been issued by Mr. Wade?—I was; I have a copy of them in my pocket now.

8258. Did you take pains to ascertain that your subordinates in the various committees were as far as possible carrying out those instructions?—I specially directed my attention to that fact.

8259. Had you any reason to believe that substantially they were carried out?—I believe they were.

8260. With reference to the polling day, I believe your case may be taken as a sample of others. For the polling day I believe you yourself provided an empty house for the use of some of those who were engaged in bringing up voters?—Yes; for the purpose of checking the returns, and sending them to their districts as well.

8261. And did you yourself at your own expense provide something like ten or a dozen clerks to assist in that work?—I did.

8262. They were not paid by the committee at all?—Not one of them.

8263. In that case were those some of the people to whom refreshments were furnished upon the polling day?—They were.

8264. The refreshments were sent to this private house and they took them there instead of going home?—They did.

8265. I do not know that it is very material, but I believe there were very few voters amongst those clerks that you employed?—Only two.

8266. As far as you know with reference to the refreshments supplied on the polling day, was it supplied to people of that character in your ward?—So far as the East Ward was concerned it was; it was supplied to persons who were not voters but who were checkers.

8267. Did you specially direct your attention as chairman of that ward, to see that those instructions were carried out?—I did.

8268. To check anything like an abuse of them, as far as possible?—I did.

Mr. Price stated that he would not cross-examine the Witness.

[The Witness withdrew.]

Mr. WILLIAM HENRY WOOD, sworn; Examined by Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.

8269. WERE you the Secretary of the South Ward Committee-rooms of Messrs Forster and Miall?—I was.

8270. Mr. Boothroyd was chairman of the ward, was he not?—Yes.

8271. Were you present at the different houses that were used from time to time as committee-rooms?—Yes; we had a central committee-room at the "Golden Lion," and our ward was divided into five districts previous to the election; as the election approached we had one very large district, and we divided it all into two for the "Royal Hotel" and the "Farm House."

8272. As far as you know, and within your observation, were any refreshments, or treating of any kind, going on with the voters?—None whatever; we had a room where no beer or any thing else was in; we did our business as business

Mr.
W.H. Wood.

ness men would, and if men liked to stay after and get drink on their own account they did so, but I never saw anything paid for, or anything taken during business.

8273. Of course you could not prevent men stopping at a public-house if they chose to stop and pay for their drink?—No; and I have seen 40 or 50 men together, but not more than two or three, or four, stay out of the lot, and if they did stay it is their own choice of course.

8274. As far as you could effect it, did you prevent anything like a supply of any refreshments?—We did. I will explain to you about those tickets which have been so much spoken of. Previous to the elections we asked questions from the central committee-room what we should do about refreshments for the polling day. Hitherto, up to that time, we had never supplied refreshments of any kind whatever, either eating or drinking. We got instructions from Mr. Wade; he sent one to me as well as to Mr. Boothroyd, and we discussed those instructions on the Saturday night previous to the election. We had a very long discussion, and two of our committee asked if the publicans might supply what was required for the men, but we stated, "No, we will put a check upon the expenditure, in the first place, on the accounts of the publicans; and in the next case we would avoid bribery or treating, and each man should take a ticket." We then consulted, and I asked the different secretaries of divisions (there would be six divisions), how many men they would have in each division that would require refreshments. Most of them were volunteers, in fact all volunteers, but non-voters. They then told me that perhaps they would require some 50, 60, or 70. I then multiplied that by four; that was for the beers, for we had decided, as you will see by the minute-book, that not more than four beers were to be supplied to each man who worked actually on the day. You will find the words actually entered on our minute, that they were to have not more than two sandwiches, and those who were teetotallers and who preferred coffee—and we have many teetotallers in our district (I am one myself)—were to have had only two cups of coffee instead of four beers. That amount would not extend beyond 1s. 6d. for a man for a day, and that was to be for his work entirely. We then came to the conclusion that we should require some 1,200 or 1,500 tickets, which would be in excess of what we required, and many of those tickets were not used; and one of our chairmen showed me a large bundle on Saturday morning which he had not used; and with regard to the expenditure I may add, that when the bills were sent in they were all checked by the district secretaries, in the first place, and secondly, they put their initials on the bills, and they then came to me for me to sign my name before going in into Mr. Kemp. There was only one exception when they disputed it, which was in the case of the "Farm House;" that man had got 8 l. for the room, and it should have been 40 s.; he had charged because he made a little alteration in having a large room for our meetings. He had charged an extravagant sum, 8 l., making it 10 l. for the rooms, and he had asked 10 l. for refreshments, and I told him it was unreasonable for the others had only been about 3 l. Therefore I disputed his account, and I said it was not signed by the district secretary, and therefore he must go back to him. He went backwards and forwards to the chairman, the secretary and others, and at last I believe there was some arrangement made with him, and he compromised it to 17 l.

8275. That was not authorised by you?—Not at all.

8276. As far as you know, was anything given at all to any voter, with the view of influencing his vote, or for any other purpose?—None whatever; our motives were the purest and best at that time that can possibly be.

Mr. Price stated that he had no question to ask the Witness.

8277. Mr. Baron Martin.] Am I to understand that nothing that was given in the way of meat or drink was given to any person except those whom you believed to be workmen in your cause?—None.

8278. None was given to any voter with the view of influencing his vote?—None whatever. We charged the district secretaries, and the chairman, who were all present at our executive ward meeting, that Saturday night, "On no account give a ticket to a man before he voted, or afterwards." Those tickets were for the men who had been working during the day; they got refreshments at Messrs. Forster and Miall's expense; I got coffee and a sandwich, and was not bribed, nor were any of those men who got tickets.

MR. JOSEPH BOOTHROYD, sworn; Examined by Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.

Mr. J.
Boothroyd.

8279. I BELIEVE you were a warm supporter of Messrs. Forster and Miall?—I was.

8280. Were you the chairman of the committee of which the gentleman who has just gone down was secretary?—Yes; the South Ward committee.

8281. As far as you know, were any refreshments whatever given to voters, in relation to to their votes, in your ward?—Not any that I either saw or heard of.

8282. And did you do all that you possibly could to prevent it?—I did.

8283. Both by orders, and also by supervision?

—More by orders at the central committee than by supervision.

8284. Had you any reason to suppose that there was any refreshment given in that way to voters?—I had none.

8285. We have heard of those tickets being issued, and the last witness has given us an account of them, so I will not trouble you with them. Were those the orders that you received, and to the fullest extent of your powers were they the orders that you acted upon?—Yes, they were; and they were acted upon.

Mr. GEORGE COLE, sworn; Examined by Mr. Serjeant Sargood.

8286. WERE you secretary to the Forster and Miall committee, in Bowling Ward?—I was.

8287. Was it part of your duty to communicate with the landlord of the "Napoleon Inn" as to refreshments?—Yes, it was.

8288. Did you get your instructions from the central committee?—I did.

8289. Had you the custody of any of the tickets?—No, I had not.

8290. Who had the furnishing of the tickets?—The sub-secretary.

8291. Did you superintend their distribution?—I did.

8292. To whom were they given?—They were given to the canvassers, and those who had charge of the different districts. I have a sample before me (producing the same).

8293. Mr. Baron Martin.] They were given to persons who were in actual work, as I understand you?—Yes.

8294. Mr. Serjeant Sargood.] I mean the refreshment tickets, not the cards?—Those cards entitled the holders to refreshments in our ward.

8295. Instead of paper tickets?—Yes; and also messengers, cards entitled persons to refreshment.

8296. Did the messengers have cards to show that they were persons employed?—Yes.

8927. And the parties that were going about had the other sort of cards?—Yes.

8298. Did you give instructions to the "Napoleon" man who he was to give refreshments to?—No, we had a gentleman specially appointed to distribute refreshments, and returns were furnished to this gentleman, whose name was Smith, and all who got refreshments had to apply to him.

8299. Did you give him particular instructions as to who was to be allowed to partake of them?—Yes, I did.

8300. So far as you know and believe, did anyone get any who was not actually at work that day?—In reading the newspaper the other day I saw that a man had given evidence that an Irishman came there and got a sandwich; I made inquiry about that, and I found that there was a drunken man forced his way into the room, and Mr. Smith was not able to keep him out; Mr. Smith called for the help of the landlord, and the landlord put him out. With that exception, I know of none other.

Mr. Price stated that he had no question to ask the Witness.

[The Witness withdrew.

Mr. JOHN COOKE, sworn; Examined by Mr. Pope.

8301. YOU were chairman of the Manningham Ward, I think?—I was the acting chairman.

8302. As far as committee-rooms were concerned, were they, as we have heard in other cases, rooms at which occasional meetings were held?—They were rooms at which meetings were very frequently held.

8303. Were the houses open excepting for that purpose; were they open for drinking at all?—Our committee-rooms were not public-houses; our central committee-room was a school-room called the Carlisle Road School.

8304. When you had committee-rooms in public-houses were those rooms engaged for the purposes of the committee, or were the houses kept open for the purpose of drinking?—Simply for the purposes of the committee.

8305. You were aware of the instructions that were given from the central committee with reference to refreshments on the polling-day?—Yes.

8306. So far as you were able, as chairman of the ward, did you take such means that were possible to ensure attention to those directions?—Most certainly.

8307. And, as far as you knew, they were attend to throughout the ward?—Thoroughly.

8308. Do you know of any instances in which other than workers got refreshments, or were they substantially all workers that had refreshments upon the polling-day?—Our refreshments were very small; they were not required amongst us, and of what were given, nothing was given, to my knowledge, to voters, except as workers.

Cross-examined by Mr. Price.

8309. Let me understand; those public-houses were taken as committee-rooms?—Yes, the few we had.

8310. And bills were stuck up, "This is Messrs. Forster and Miall's committee-room"?—Yes.

8311. Then the committee used to meet periodically there, once a week, or something like that?—Once a week and once a fortnight.

8312. And during the rest of the time, of course those were houses to which, very naturally, the supporters of one side or the other could go and discuss politics?—We were not in the habit of doing so.

8313. I do not suppose that you did; but is it not so, that those being known, by bills being stuck up as Forster and Miall committee-rooms, or Ripley's, if you like, when they were not absolutely used as committee-rooms, the political partisans of each party would go and meet there, and talk the thing over?—Not to my knowledge; we simply used them as committee-rooms.

[The Witness withdrew.

Mr. CALVIN ROBERTSHAW, sworn; Examined by Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.

8314. ARE you a Stuff Manufacturer, at Allerton?—Yes.

8315. And I believe that you are a voter for the borough of Bradford, and were one of the supporters of Messrs. Miall and Forster?—Yes.

28.

8316. Were you chairman of one of the districts; I think it is the Silsbridge-lane district?—Yes.

8317. How many houses would come under your supervision?—I cannot tell how many houses; but I think there were about 700 voters.

C C

8318. Did

Mr. G. Col
1 February
1869.

Mr.
J. Cooke.

Mr. C.
Robertshaw.

Mr. C. 8318. Did you go at different times to different Robertshaw. houses?—Yes, I did.

8319. To your knowledge, was there any February drinking or treating of any kind going on?—Not 1869. to my knowledge, there was not.

8320. You had had your instructions, and, as far as you could carry them out, did you do so?
—I did my best to do so.

8321. Do you know a person of the name of Thomas Poole?—No.

8322. Did you hear a person of that name swear that he had seen you paying for beer for the company?—Yes, I did.

8323. Was that true?—No.

8324. Did you hear a person of the name of Michael Freeman say that he had seen you paying for beer in the "Brown Cow"?—Yes.

8325. Is there a word of truth in that?—Not a word.

Cross-examined by Mr. Price.

8326. You never paid for any beer during the whole of the election?—No, only for myself.

8327. Never anywhere?—Never anywhere.

8328. Not a farthing?—It is nonsense coming down to a couple of glasses.

8329. You know there might have been a couple of glasses; we had it that Mr. Michael Mahoney spent twopence, but you never spent any at all?—No, not that I am aware of.

8330. Not that you are aware of?—I never did, if that will do for you.

8331. Do you mean that you never spent any money in drink at all during the election exclusive of what you paid for yourself?—I mean to say that I never did, only for myself.

8332. During the whole of the election, either the municipal or the borough?—Well, I do not know for the municipal; I will tell you all I know about the municipal, if you like.

8333. How much at the municipal?—The only ale that I can remember paying for was two gallons of ale during the municipal election.

8334. Are you the gentleman who found the sea-side residence, at Morecambe, for Jowett?—
No, I am not.

8335. Was it Luther, then?—He will answer for that.

8336. Did you find the money for a man named Jowett to go with another to the seaside?—I never found him with a halfpenny.

8337. Never paid anything for him?—Never paid anything for him.

8338. Never heard of it?—I never paid him a halfpenny.

8339. Never heard of the transaction at all?—
I did hear of it; I know all about it.

8340. Mr. Baron Martin.] If I understand you, you do not recollect paying for any beer for any voter, or any person to drink, during the election?—No.

8341. But, if you did, did you make any charge for it, as against the committee?—No never.

8342. You did it merely out of your own pocket?—If I did it went out of my own pocket;
if it was for a glass of ale or anything of that sort.

8343. Mr. Price.] I may take it that you were one of the active supporters of Messrs. Forster and Miall?—Yes.

[The Witness withdrew.]

GEORGE ROBINSON, sworn; Examined by Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.

Robinson. 8344. ARE you the landlord of the "Gladstone Arms"?—Yes; the "Gladstone Hotel" is its right name.

8345. Did you let any room to Forster and Miall for the election?—Yes.

8346. How long did they have the room?—
The first meeting they had was on the 21st of August, I believe.

8347. How much was your charge for the room altogether?—We agreed for 2s. 6d. a night.

8348. You made that charge?—Yes; they agreed to give me that, and I agreed to take it.

8349. And you have been paid that?—Yes.

8350. Do you remember the day of the election?—Yes.

8351. Did you serve some sandwiches on that day?—No.

8352. Did you serve anything?—Yes.

8353. What did you serve?—I served meat and bread and some beer to men that were sent down to the committee-room, that were working there.

8354. Were they men whom you considered and believed to be working men?—Yes.

8355. Let me ask you what were your instructions in relation to persons whom you were to give anything to?—I got instructions from Mr.
Lobley, the chairman, that I was to let those men have it that he sent down, should he come himself with them, or another man with them, and not anybody else.

8355.* You obeyed those instructions, did you?—Yes.

8356. Mr. Baron Martin.] As far as you know, no refreshment was given to anybody but people who were actually at work?—No.

8357. Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] A man of the name of Poole has been examined; did you hear him?—I have read his evidence in the paper, else I did not hear him.

8358. Did any such person offer to pay, and did you refuse to take the money?—Not that I am aware of; I do not know the man, so I cannot say anything about it; but I never refused money of anybody that came in and called for a glass of beer.

8359. Did you ever refuse money of anybody from whom you could get it?—No.

Cross-examined by Mr. Price.

8360. You say that the first meeting that was held for Forster and Miall was on the 21st of August?—To the best of my knowledge it was.

8361. What would be your charge for that?—
2s. 6d.

8362. When did they meet again?—I cannot enumerate all the meetings they had, but I can tell you the number.

8363. How many did they have in October?—
They had 10 committee meetings and one public meeting altogether.

8364. How many in September?—I cannot say; I have not got them in my mind.

8365. Have you made a return of them?—
Yes.

8366. Did

8366. Did you make out an account?—Yes, I made out an account.

8367. Let me look at the account that was made out for the hire of rooms; how many men were in and out of your house that day when you served refreshments according to Mr. Lobley's orders?—I cannot say how many there was; I know there was a good deal of people in and out, but I believe there was about 38 stationed at our house.

8368. Committeemen?—Committeemen, messengers, and what not.

8369. Voters and non-voters?—I do not know whether they were voters or not; I did not know the parties, all of them.

8370. Then you gave refreshments indiscriminately?—No.

8371. You gave them, but whether they were voters or not voters you did not know?—I gave what was sent down to me for something.

8372. But you did not know whether they were voters or not?—I did not know whether they were voters or not.

8373. You say that you cannot tell me how many meetings there were in September; how many were there in October?—I cannot tell what the time was that the meetings were held.

8374. How many do you think were held in your house?—I can tell the number altogether; there were 10 committee meetings and two public meetings.

8375. Was that all?—Yes.

8376. From the 21st of August until after the election?—From the 21st of August till the day of the election.

8377. Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.] Lobley, I think, is the name of the person upon whose orders you acted?—Yes.

8378. Mr. Price.] I should like to see the bill that you sent in?—I think I have got a copy of it in my pocket; only the other was a lump sum and this is more in detail (handing the bill to the learned Counsel).

8379. This is a return of 10 committee meetings, from August the 21st to November 17th, 1*l*. 5*s*.: in September, preparing room for committee and platform outside for public meeting, 7*s*. 6*d*.; preparing platform inside and room for public meetings, 5*s*.; refreshments for committee on the day of election, 17*s*. 6*d*.; did you send a copy of that to the central committee-room?—I sent it, but it was in a lump sum.

8380. How was it charged in one sum?—I cannot say exactly how it was worded at present; I did not make it out myself, my son made it out; I did not take much notice how it was worded. The "Gladstone Hotel" is the real name of it; I believe it has generally gone by the name of the "Gladstone Arms" by mistake.

8381. You like the term hotel better?—It happens to be the right name. (The bill which was sent to the committee was handed to Mr. Price.)

8382. You sent it in, you say, as a lump sum originally?—Yes, I believe it was so; it was made out by my son.

8383. When did you make out this?—My son has made it out; he said he wanted it that way, and he told me it was a lump sum, that he sent it in before; I did not look at the note he sent to the committee.

8384. I see you put down here, and your son has taken it, I suppose, from your books, "Refreshments for committee, on the day of election, 17*s*. 6*d*."?—Yes, he put down 17*s*. 6*d*., I did not keep any books on the day of the election.

8385.—Where does that appear; how would your son get those figures?—I believe he got them from his memory. I do not say that this is exactly correct. We have not got any book. We put down on a slate the amount that they would have for refreshment, and when the note was made out they were rubbed out again.

8386. When you sent it in, you sent it in merely for the committee rooms?—We sent it in to the committee in a lump sum, as I understood him to say; I never saw the note that he sent to the committee; Mr. Lobley came for it, I believe, and he went upstairs and my son made it out; I do not know that ever I saw it.

8387. Do you know your son's handwriting; is that it (handing the bill to the Witness)?—Yes; I believe it is.

8388. You do not know when he made it out; it is dated November 20th?—That would be the day that he made it out on.

8389.—How can you account for the fact that there is nothing charged for refreshments in that bill at all; that it is all put down for use of rooms?—I do not know how he has worded it.

8390. Can you account for that at all?—No, I cannot; I told him what the amount had been for everything when he went to make it out, whether it was for the rent of the rooms, the expense of the platforms, or what not; and I told him what the expense of the refreshments was, and he made it out as a lump sum, as I understood him to say. I believe I never saw that bill before.

8391. "Use of rooms for committees, 3*l*."?—No; not the rent of the rooms, that was not 3*l*. it was 3*l*. altogether.

Mr. Baron Martin.] The Witness gives a very reasonable explanation, he told you that it was for the use of the rooms, and the use of those platforms, and for refreshments.

Witness.] Yes, my Lord, that was it.

8392. You did not yourself see what your son put down?—No, I never saw it.

8393. Mr. Price.] You told him that something was owing for refreshments, and he put it down all under the head of rooms?—Yes.

8394. Out of 3*l*., 17*s*. 6*d*. was for refreshments?—There is not 3*l*. 17*s*. 6*d*., but the 3*l*. is the sum altogether, there is 17*s*. 6*d*. for refreshments.

8395. The account in detail is, "To 10 committee meetings, from August 21st to November 17th, 1*l*. 5*s*.; September 2nd, preparing room for committee and platform outside for public meeting, 7*s*. 6*d*.; October 15th, preparing platform inside and room for public meeting, 5*s*.; forms borrowed for committee and public meetings, 5*s*.; Refreshments for committee on the day of the election, 17*s*. 6*d*.; Total 3*l*."?—Yes.

8396. The bill was for 3*l*.?—Yes.

[The Witness withdrew.]

G. Robinson.

1 February 1869.

MR. WILLIAM LOBLEY, sworn; Examined by Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.

Mr. W. Loble. 8397. Are you in Victoria-street, a printer?—Yes.

February, 1869. 8398. And were you chairman of the West Ward?—I was.

8399. There were meetings held at different houses, I believe, in that ward?—There were.

8400. Were you in the habit of attending them or going occasionally to them?—I may state that from the commencement till about the second week, I will not be particular to the date in August, because we had some preliminary meetings before we fairly commenced, to form ourselves into a committee, I attended every meeting and presided till the 23rd of October, I think it would be, and I was present at every meeting.

8401. Was there any treating going on?—Never.

8402.—Is that true which the last witness has said, that at the “Gladstone” hotel those persons who had upon the polling day any refreshments were persons whom you indicated?—Yes; I had 38 stationed with me at the “Gladstone” hotel.

8403. They were persons who were actually engaged in work the whole day?—They were all under my personal superintendence.

8404. Was there any other person to your knowledge served with any drink at all?—Not one that I did not know could get into the room. I sent two secretaries occasionally down with them; they never went unless the secretary went with them.

8405. Mr. Baron Martin.] You were careful as to the persons that they were workers only who got refreshments?—I was.

Cross-examined by Mr. Price.

8406. Did any of those 38 go and vote?—Yes.

8407. How many?—I cannot say how many.

8408. Yes, come, all of them?—No; I cannot say that they were all voters.

8409. Will you say that they were not all voters?—I will swear that they were not all voters.

8410. How many of them were not?—I cannot say the number that were not.

8411. Will you swear that there were more than three or four that were not?—I cannot say; we had 112 altogether.

8412. One hundred and twelve what?—We had 112 committeemen altogether.

8413. At this one house?—No.

8414. Where at?—They were separated into various houses.

8415. Then there were various houses kept open for committees, were there?—Yes.

8416. How long for?—We commenced, I think, with five in the second week in August, which was continued until October.

8417. Then those houses were kept, five of them, open as committee-rooms from August till October?—Only those where we held our meetings twice a week, on Tuesdays and Fridays, and therefore it was always over a fortnight before we got back again to the same place.

8418. Were they kept open?—They were not kept open; they were at our service at so much per night when we required them.

8419. Mr. Baron Martin.] You say that you merely purchased or agreed for the opportunity of going to those rooms when it was convenient for you?—Yes, that is so, my Lord.

8420. Mr. Price.] You had the privilege if you had liked, having taken those houses as the committee-houses of Forster and Miall, of going there and using them whenever you chose for committee purposes?—Yes; but we had to pay 2 s. 6 d. per night when we wanted them, and in some cases 5 s.

8421. Had you any contract with those houses, or were they to be paid at so much per night?—We had a contract this way, that for every night that we required the use of the room, and we used always to have the large room upstairs, for committee purposes we should pay in some cases 2 s. 6 d. per night, but I think in two cases, the “Devonshire Arms” being an hotel and the “Britannia,” we should pay them 5 s. per night as their rooms were much larger.

8422. When they sent in their account did they send in an account in detail showing so many nights?—I have not seen the accounts since they were collected; it is some distance of time now from the election, and I merely speak from memory, but the accounts were collected by persons whom I had under me, and I then forwarded them to the ward chairman; he signed the accounts, and they were forwarded to the agents of Messrs. Forster and Miall.

8423. When the accounts were sent in to you, did they show in detail how many nights you had had the rooms?—I cannot say that they did.

8424. Were they sent in as simply a lump sum?—As far as I remember some were and some were not; I will not be positive on that point.

8425. Were they all sent in at a uniform sum?—No, they were not.

8426. Are you sure of that?—I am quite sure of it.

8427. Were those 112 men all voters?—They were not.

8428. How many of them were not?—I cannot speak now, but I might say that 20 at least would not be voters.

8429. Do you mean that when voters applied to be put upon the committee they were not put upon the committee?—They were not; we required a person's name to be proposed by a person present at the meeting; then the names were put by the chairman to the meeting; if the meeting sanctioned the names being added, then we put down the names; that is the way we added the name to the committee.

[The Witness withdrew.]

LEVI ALDERSON, recalled; further Examined by Mr. Pope.

Alderson. 8430. You gave evidence the other day for the Petitioners, I believe?—Yes.

8431. You told my learned friend, Mr. Price, that you were a voter, not on the committee, and not a canvasser, but that you received some refreshment. Without asking you any question, is there any explanation, or any statement which you wish to make in addition to that?—Yes, I went went the night before the election to the Farm House.

8432. Were you, in fact, a worker in bringing folks up to the poll?—Yes, I was.

Cross-examined by Mr. Price.

8433. You were a worker?—Yes.

8434. You were sworn the other day?—Yes.

8435. And you know what an oath means?—Yes.

8436. Did you swear the other day that you were on no committee?—Yes.

8437. Were you on any committee?—I am not aware that I was on any committee.

8438. Were you a canvasser?—No.

8439. Did you get refreshments?—I got one cup of coffee and one sandwich.

8440. And were other voters getting refreshments at the same time?—There was one besides myself got the same.

8441. Mr. Pope.] On the polling day?—Yes.

8442. Mr. Price.] You have been asked by my learned friend whether you were a worker, and you say you were; will you be good enough to tell us what work you did?—I was working assisting a canvasser of the name of John Noble, helping to get up voters on the polling day.

8443. What voters did you go with Noble to see; I should like to know the name of any one?—We did not get one.

8444. Who did you go to look for?—I do not know; there was a man—

8445. That you call working; you did not know what you were going to work for, but you walked down the street with Noble?—We went to the men that had been canvassed, but there was none of them at home, they were all off.

8446. Tell me the name of any one that you called upon?—I cannot just now.

8447. It was said that you desired to make an explanation; to whom did you express the desire to make an explanation, since you were here on Saturday?—To nobody.

8448. How did my learned friend on the other side know that you wanted to make an explanation?—I cannot say for that.

8449. How did you happen to come here to-day; was it out of your own head that you came?—Yes, I have been two or three days here; I was here on Friday and on Saturday.

8450. Did you come here to-day without letting them know on the other side that you wished to make an explanation?—Yes.

8451. It is quite hap-hazard that you came?—I intended to come here to-day.

8452. Did you tell anybody on the other side that you intended to come?—I did not.

8453. Are you not rather surprised to find yourself in the witness-box again?—Rather; I did not expect being called upon a second time, I am sure.

[The Witness withdrew.

Mr. LOCKWOOD STEVENSON, sworn; Examined by Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.

8454. You are a Butcher?—Yes.

8455. I just want to ask you, were you the person who obtained the bill from Mrs. Hill?—Yes; I was.

8456. Do you remember how it was charged when you got it?—Yes; I do.

8457. Did you suggest any alteration?—I mentioned it to the secretary and the ward chairman, and they stated that the amount was excessive for beer. I then objected to it very much, and it was agreed, considering the time we had been there, and the trouble we had given them, that we ought to allow them something more than what they had put down according to the first agreement for the charges for rooms; the amount I considered myself was more than one-half above what we have had for refreshment.

8458. Was the alteration then made by your suggestion?—Yes; it was.

8459. I suppose you did not consult Mr. Wade, or anybody else of that kind, about it?—No; I never had any communication with Mr. Wade.

8460. That is the fact, and that is how it was?—Yes.

8461. Did you know of anything being supplied there, or was anything supplied there by your orders, with a view to treat anybody?—No; not at all.

Cross-examined by Mr. Price.

8462. What were you at this place?—I was one of the vice-chairmen.

8463. Whose are those figures in pencil at the back of this account (handing an account to the Witness)?—I do not know.

8464. They were not made by you?—No.

8465. Were you in communication with Mr. Kemp about it?—No; I was not.

28.

8466. Never at all?—No.

8467. Is not that Mr. Kemp's handwriting at the back?—I think that is my handwriting (pointing out the same).

8468. Are the figures yours?—No.

8469. Why did you put Mr. Kemp's name at the back?—Perhaps merely to direct the party who had to get it; I was told to send the account to Mr. Kemp.

8470. That is the way in which it was divided. There had been 1 l. 5 s. for rooms?—That was the original account brought to me.

8471. £. 1. 5 s. for rooms, and 13 l. 15 s. for refreshments?—Yes.

8472. What did you engage the room at when you took it?—Two-and-sixpence a night.

8473. How many nights were you there?—Nine or 10 nights.

8474. The exact time that she charged?—Yes.

8475. What did you do that gave her a great deal of trouble beyond holding your committee meetings there?—It was our central committee-room.

8476. You intended it to be so, and you told her so?—No, it was the general charge throughout; half-a-crown a night; and seeing that we had made the most use of that room, and the largest company met there.

8477. Had you been there more nights than at any other committee-room?—It was a larger room and a larger house.

8478. Did you ever tell her before the election was over, that you had given her more trouble, and that you would give her more for the rooms than 2 s. 6 d. a night?—No; only a week before they began to complain to me.

8479. Who began to complain?—Both of them complained about it being a poor affair; a dry job. In fact, we had met there for a length of time, and had spent very little. It is one of the poorest of districts; our voters throughout were very poor labouring men. Many a time I have seen when they have come to a meeting they wanted refreshments.

8480. They were committee-men, were they not?—Those were committee-men; I had complaints made several times both by Mr. Hill and Mrs. Hill, and when we have been there the complaint was generally clamouring by the poor people, as they generally were, that there was so much treating going on round about, and nothing for them; I mentioned this to the secretary in my own district, and, I believe, to Mr. Beaumont, though I cannot say for certain; but I talked to the secretary that we had, and I said, "Now pressure is put on in the neighbourhood by the opposite party," for we had been turned out of one place because we were so dry, and we were obliged to take a cottage house. They outbid us with money because we would not give what they wanted; they had 13*l.* for the opposite place, within a very small distance, and I foresaw that we should lose ground; we were losing them like sheep, because they were giving way, and I could not get orders; I told them over and over again that they could not order anything. However, on the Friday evening I went up, and I was again told of it by some of our committee-men and by Mr. Hill; I said, "Well, you have common sense both of you; you must give them a few gallons of beer, I cannot always be with you; it is my market day to-morrow, and you must use your own discretion."

8481. So that you were losing them like sheep, and it was a dry life, and you wanted to turn it into a wet one?—No.

8482. Mr. Baron Martin.] You did not give them any beer, as I understand?—No.

8483. Mr. Price.] You told them that they were to give beer according to their discretion?—I left it to Mrs. Hill; I thought that a few gallons of beer would not make much difference to us, and that the parties, I suppose, were the customers who were coming to the house, both voters and non-voters; I do not know what they were; I cannot say about that.

8484. The persons who you say you were losing like sheep, were they voters?—The cry was general throughout the neighbourhood.

8485. Whom did you mean that you were losing like sheep?—Parties that had promised us, but that were giving way; this was the one cry with our canvassers from the different streets, telling us of this when they met us.

Re-examined by Mr. Serjeant Ballantine.

8416. Did you order, or justify anybody to order, a single drop of beer to induce a person to vote, or to abstain from voting?—No.

[The Witness withdrew.

Mr. Serjeant Ballantine stated that this concluded the case on behalf of the Respondent, and was heard to address his Lordship in summing up the case.
